Numerous pilot whales pick lousy place to die

WELLFLEET — Sixty-five pilot whales stranded themselves on Lieutenant Island Tuesday night, and about half were dead by sunrise yesterday morning, lying beached and breathless on the marsh.

The rest were dying, some thrashing in small holes of water, some groaning with heaving sides, some motionless in the grass except for blowholes that opened and closed for air. There was blood puddled around the tails of a few of the black mammals.

"These animals are all going to die," said Robert Prescott, director of the Audubon Society's wildlife sanctuary in Wellfleet Bay."They're been up and out of the water too long."

The pilot whales, males, females and young, some of them 20 feet long, stranded about 4 p.m. Tuesday in the marsh on the south side of Lieutenant Island.

One small whale was rescued and taken to the New England Aquarium in Boston, but it died in a pool there at 2 a.m. Wednesday, an aquarium spokeswoman said.

"Unfortunately, they picked a godawful place (to strand themselves)," Prescott said.

The high tide at midnight Tuesday only dampened some of the animals and none of them were able to float free.

Our senior citizens want service satisfaction

BOSTON — Armed with resolutions to protect Social Security and bills for tax relief for the elderly, 200 "silver haired" mock legislators came to the Statehouse yesterday in a show of what one called "senior power."

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Diane Kadzis
Copy Editor	Richard Nangle
Layout Technician	Brad Eden
Photo Technician	Drew Ogier
Composition	Lauri Neely, Stuart Sadjak
	Jenny Winslow, Andrea Repass
	Becky Robins, Jamie Katz, Will Hopkins

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $25 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

Digest

by the Associated Press

It is the third annual Silver Haired Legislature in which men and women, all 60 years or older, represent districts across the state in a mock state legislature. Before the session ends Friday, they will mold the priorities of the elderly and present them to the real legislators for enactment.

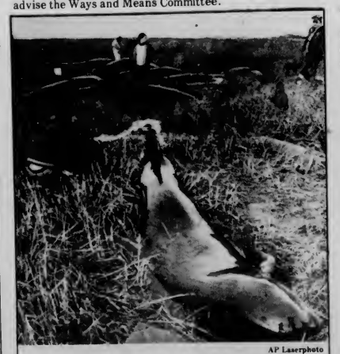
"It's senior power," said Sister Dorilda Flynn, 71, of Anna Maria College in Paxton and a nun for 50 years, as the group waited for the welcoming session at the Holiday Inn.

"It's a very powerful lobbying group for seniors, that's what it is," explained Bernard A. Torri, 64, of Wellesley.

"The new senior is an entirely different breed of person," added Ann V. Trumble, 71, a Greenfield great-grandmother. "They are expecting a whole lot more. They're not content playing bingo..."

The group will debate in full session Friday.

"When you see them get hot into debate, you know there's no such thing as senility," said Edward Lubin, 70, a senior aide for the Department of Elder Affairs who will advise the Ways and Means Committee.



AP Laserphoto

In an effort to keep one of 65 beached whales alive, a rescue worker splashes water on the animal amidst the sea grass of a Cape Cod salt marsh in Wellfleet. None of the whales, which drifted ashore Monday, are expected to survive.

Marathoners, Sox fans may lose a monument

BOSTON — For years it was a beacon to Boston's nightlife, a 60-foot-square splash of red, white and blue neon. Now the city's landmark commission must decide if Boston's Citgo sign — the last surviving bit of "public neon art" — should be spared the wrecking ball.

The Boston Landmarks Commission issued a cease and desist order Tuesday, halting plans to dismantle the sign, which has been part of the city's skyline since the 1940s.

The sign's 10 miles of neon were last illuminated in 1979. It was turned off on the order of the state as a symbol of energy conservation. Cities Services Corp. ordered the demolition, citing the $25,000 to $50,000 cost to refurbish the sign.

The sign is the last survivor of six similar Citgo displays that once graced other American cities, including Chicago and Milwaukee.

Judy McDonough of the city's landmark commission said the panel has set a Jan. 11 hearing on the sign after receiving a petition from local residents who want to save the sign.

She said it was the first time the commission has been asked to save a sign.

"We've gotten a number of calls about it, including one from a marathon runner who said we couldn't take it down," she said. "He said that when you see it at a distance, you know you can finish the marathon."

International publisher to buy Boston Herald

BOSTON (AP) — International publisher Rupert Murdoch has agreed to buy the ailing Boston Herald American if the newspaper's unions agree to cost-cutting concessions by a reported Dec. 3 deadline, negotiators said yesterday.

The Hearst Corp., owner of the Herald American and a combatant in Boston's rugged newspaper wars for nearly 80 years, reportedly told employees it will quit publishing the paper by Dec. 3.

The deadline apparently left a little over two weeks for the unions and Murdoch to reach agreement.

"We have come to this city to try to preserve this newspaper and to try to preserve as many jobs as we can," said Bob Page, vice president of Murdoch's News America Publishing in announcing a "memorandum of understanding."

Page said bargaining with the 11 unions at the 250,000-circulation morning tabloid would "take place in privacy," and gave no other details.

Photo by Hans A. Helgeson

An Amherst squirrel pauses from its fall task of gathering a winter supply of nuts to catch a glimpse of an observer.

Students favor Cage fee if it is reduced by half

By MARK J. WELCH
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts students oppose the proposed $20 fee increase for the Curry-Hicks Cage renovation by an almost two-to-one margin, but students would support a $10 fee for the same purpose, according to preliminary results of a survey done by the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA).

Sixty percent of the students contacted said they would oppose renovations to the Cage, which houses UMass basketball games, if it meant a $20 per student fee increase while 33 percent said they would favor that proposal. If the fee increase were only $10, 57 percent of the students would favor the renovations, with 36 percent opposed. Students who have been on campus longer showed more opposition to both proposals.

Members of the SCERA Rents and Fees Team and the Undergraduate Student Senate phoned 354 students randomly selected from the UMass Student Directory. Of those contacted, slightly more than half said they were aware of the renovation proposal before the survey call. Persons who were familiar with the proposal were more likely to support both fee increases.

Eric Nitzsche, who compiled the survey results, announced the preliminary findings to the Student Senate Rents and Fees Committee Tuesday night, but said the question regarding the $10 fee increase may have been misinterpreted by students.

"I think people said yes to $10 because it seems a better option than a $20 fee," Nitzsche said. The $20 question was asked first, he said, and students might have supported the $10 proposal just because it seemed better than a $20 fee.

Another question on the survey indicates most UMass students do not feel "the status of our basketball team reflects the status of our University." 67 percent disagreed or strongly disagreed with that statement, while 25 percent agreed or strongly agreed. Nitzsche noted that Continued on page 17

Dukakis pledges Ward Commission report implementation

By RICHARD NANGLE
Collegian Staff

A 10 point anti-corruption program to be implemented by the incoming Dukakis administration includes plans which would in the future eliminate building problems which have reached epidemic proportions at the University of Massachusetts and across the Commonwealth.

Part of the 10 point plan, said Nick Burbank of the Dukakis Committee Issues Department, includes " complete enforcement and implementation of Ward Commission reforms which the King administration was slow to do."

The plan also includes strengthening the subpeona power of the inspector general and the reestablishment of the state office of investigation. Currently subpoenas must be approved by the federal inspector general's office in Washington D.C., according to the state inspector general's office.

In a January, 1981 Boston Globe story, U.S. Attorney Edward F. Harrington said the inspector general's office was "impotent." He called the legislation affecting the office a "sham." Before the office can issue a subpeona, the inspector general must obtain permission from six of eight public officials who comprise the Inspector General's Council, the story said.

The inspector general supervises state and county construction projects and makes sure specifications are lived up to.

According to former UMass Building Authority vice-chair Evan Johnston, Ward Commission proposals must be enacted in order to eliminate the problems which have plagued UMass buildings over the last 14 years. The most severe problems have affected the Campus Center, Campus Garage and North Village.

Johnston said about 80 percent of the beams in the garage are in bad shape. In all, there are some 460 faulty beams.

"Somebody was deliberately cheating us on it," he said.

Cracks have continually appeared in the garage since it was constructed. Most of the cracks have been repaired with epoxy, but the specifications recommended by a consulting firm in 1980 were not adhered to, Johnston said.

Provisions for repairing the garage were submitted by Loomis & Loomis Structural Engineers of Windsor, CT. According to Johnston, the top floor of the structure is the most flagrant example of specifications being ignored.

The firm recommended that a damaged slab at the base of the sixth floor stairwell in the northeast corner of the garage be replaced in its entirety. This was not done however, and efforts to hold the concrete slab together with an asphalt substance have failed.

In some areas on the same floor, the six inch beams which comprise the floor have deteriorated excessively due to water damage. No effort has been made to repair the damage and most of the overall repairwork on the floor has been labeled "cosmetic patchwork" by Johnston.

"I've used that word before and they don't like it," he said.

Johnston said he believes there was not sufficient supervision during the time in which the garage was repaired. He blames that on the lack of power held by the inspector general.

In 1978, Raymond Loomis said the garage was in danger of collapsing, but according to Johnston, nothing was immediately done to rectify the problem. Johnston said it is important to remember that if the garage were closed, Campus Center operations would be effectively paralyzed.

Leaks in the Campus Center roof have been a constant problem since the structure was designed, Johnston said.

"As the only on-campus member (of the building authority) it was kind of embarrassing to see my name on the plaque and see sheets catching water (in the concourse)," he said.

According to the Ward Commission report, issued in December, 1980, a toilet in a North Village apartment fell through a rotted floor when a resident sat on it. Most of North Village was built in such a shabby way that it deteriorated rapidly, Johnston said.

Other problems in North Village include roof leaks, condensation problems and inadequate ventilation in the apartments, in the attic space and in the crawl space underneath the building. The build-up of moisture caused deterioration of painted surfaces, rotting of floors and damage to carpets and ceilings.

At least 98 percent of the corruption dealt with by the Ward Commission can not be taken to court since the incidents have passed their statutes of limitations which were either five or six years, depending on the individual problems.

Carribbean economy's roots began with Columbus landing

By BILL THOMAS
Collegian Staff

In order to understand the economic problems of the Carribbean, the situation must be viewed in an historical, political and global context, said Professor Michael P. Witter, chairman of the department of economics at the University of the West Idies in Kingston, Jamaica.

In a lecture given to about 50 people Tuesday night at the University of Massachusetts Witter said, "The integration of the Carribbean economy within the world was a very bloody process."

"The roots of the Carribbean economy reach back no further than Columbus when he was discovered lost in search of India on the beaches of the Carribbean. During this (colonial) period Carribbean societies were destroyed by coming into contact with Spanish colonialism. So in historical times the Carribbean economy is a very recent phenomenon," Witter said.

The development of the contemporary political economy of the Carribbean, although originating in that region's colonial history, is rooted in a social development process based upon the theory known as "industrialization by invitation," said Witter.

Partly as a result of this theory, Witter said, "There was a massive expansion of foreign investment in the Carribbean as the U.S. became more involved in the world economy."

"It is well documented that this growth with unequal income distribution expressed itself with increasing polarization of the classes. What you got," he said, "was a society in which the ruling class does not rule and the working class does not work."

Witter drew two economic models on the blackboard during the lecture; one representing the economic relationship between Carribbean nations and the U.S. and the other illustrating the economic relationship of the Soviet Union and Cuba.

Referring to his native country, Witter said because Jamaica has a "peripheral" economy dependent upon exports to its "center", the U.S., Jamaica therefore is heavily dependent upon imported technology and very sensitive to fluctuations in the world market.

Of the Cuban economy, Witter said: "Only if an economy has a capital goods sector is there any chance of a country developing any indigenous technology. The Cuban economy within a matter of two generations have become the leading developers of harvesters for sugar cane. I do not believe that the Jamaican people are naturally less intelligent than the Cubans. The Cuban accumulation is planned as part of a global accumulation process but it is an accumulation process that allows the economy to be relatively autonomous."

Witter said the large Carribbean populations in New York, Miami and British cities moved there when foreign capital flowing into the Carribbean displaced the peasant population.

"They bought the land from the peasant very often for the price of a ticket on the boat going to England or the U.S.," he said.

Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

Joe Valadas (left) and Ed Zaganiacz undertake a road and sidewalk reconstruction project around the University Health Services yesterday as an iron jaw oversees their work.

Newslines . . .

Interview with labor leader on WMUA today

An interview with labor leader and peace activist Carl Chiaretto of Pittsfield will be broadcast at 6 p.m. today on WMUA, 91.1 FM. The interview will be aired during Focus, a weekly public affairs show hosted by Ken Mosakowski and produced by Vickie Bates.

Major scheduling mistake red rectified in time

In the spring, 1983 schedule book which was distributed this week, one history course was listed as not fulfilling the University "C" core requirement when it actually does. History 384, "History of Boston, 1630 to 1880," will satisfy a "C" core requirement, according to the University Scheduling Office.

Get one credit for MassPIRG recycling project

MassPIRG's recycling group and project are offering one credit to those interested in working on the recycling of computer and office paper in the administrative and classroom buildings. Contact Leah at MassPIRG, 423b Student Union at 5-0199 or Michael at the Recycling Project, 306 Student Union at 5-0618 by 2 p.m. Friday for pre-registration.

Labor historian to speak tomorrow in CC

Marshall Rachleff, a labor historian at Housatonic Community College, will speak on "Radical Union Women Activists" from 2 to 4 p.m. tomorrow at the Campus Center room 171. For further information or child care, call 545-2884.

Duke Ellington Committee/ UPC & UMass Arts Council present

CLOUDS

of Contemporary Jazz featuring Clyde Criner with Joe Ford John Blake of McCoy Tyner Group

Omar Hakim Victor Bailey of Weather Report

Akua Dixon Gail Dixon of Max Roach Quartet

tix - $6.00 Students $7.00 Gen. Pub. Available at URU, Faces

all Ticketron outlets Sun. Nov. 21 S.U.B.

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
Rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays, Saturdays 1-4

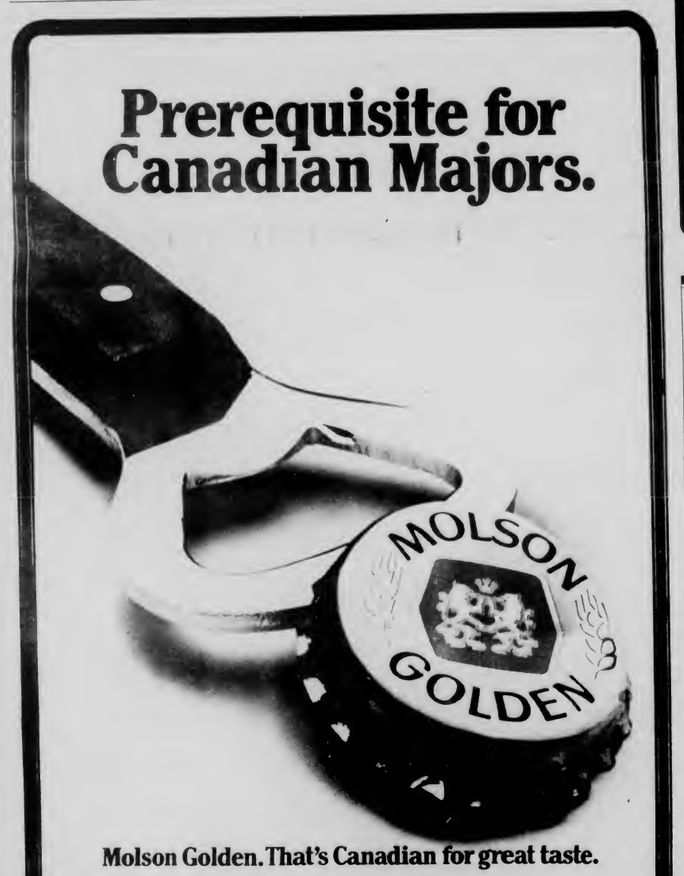
If you thought you had to attend Northeastern for coop, come to a

Slide Presentation on Cooperative Education

A New UMass Option
CFNR majors:
Thurs. Nov. 18, Campus Center
Room 169 12 noon
Room 917 4 p.m.
SBA majors:
Friday, Nov. 19, SBA
Room 120 11 a.m.
Room 120 1:30 p.m.

Office for Cooperative Education
Room 110 Thompson Hall
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, Massachusetts 01003
(413) 545-2579

Prerequisite for Canadian Majors.



Molson Golden. That's Canadian for great taste.

The finest ale brewed and bottled in Canada. Imported by Martlet Importing Co., Inc., Great Neck, N.Y. © 1982.

For a free education in the international language of beer, just send a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope to: Molson Golden Guide to Beer, 888 Seventh Ave., Box M, New York, NY 10106.

Are you wondering about when to get an MBA? Talk to us.

M[illegible]

800/847-2082 800/252-6326

CORNELL UNIVERSITY GRADUATE SCHOOL OF BUSINESS & PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION

Gay & Lesbian Awareness Day
Fri. Nov. 19
Info table in Campus Center
Workshop Schedule 10 -11:30
"Straight Talk About Lesbians"
"Women Loving Women"
CC Rm 169
"Pink Triangles" Rm 165
1:00 - 2:30
Bisexuality - CC Rm 163
"Coming Out on Campus"
CC 173
Womens Self Defense - CC 163
Male Sexual Health - CC 173
Luncheon 11:30 & 1:30 at TOC

Battered veterans receive memorial

By KEN LUNDBERG
Collegian Staff

WASHINGTON - "When I came home and got off the plane, I kissed my mother and got a big hug from my girlfriend. Then we walked out of the airport and a woman came up to me and asked if I had been in Vietnam and when I told her I was she spit in my face and called me a baby killer."

Like Chris Bachman, 32, of Lexington, Kentucky who got this kind of homecoming after serving with U.S. forces for two years in Southeast Asia, millions of other soldiers return to what they incorrectly assumed would be a gracious public. In the decade that followed, these vets simply could not adjust having to live their lives within a wake of ambivalence and scorn that resulted from America's most unpopular and truly political war.

But last week, Bachman and thousands of other vets managed to scrape together what cash and time they could spare to make the trip to Washington D.C. for the dedication of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and most importantly get a "welcome home" that had been denied them for years.

As vets from all over the country converged in the nation's capital there were tearful reunions everywhere giving the impression the airlift out of Saigon was just yesterday. On the streets, in hotels and at the sight of D.C.'s newest monument, men clad in resurrected combat fatigues wandered about hugging each other energetically, sharing war vignettes and crying for their lost friends who couldn't be there to join them.

At the Sheraton Washington, located on the outskirts of the city where army vets were accomodated at a discount rate for the four-day holiday (as was the case in many hotels throughout the city), Bachman sat with his long-time friend David Miller and talked solemnly about the belated salute they were getting and the post-war plight they have lived and dealt with together.

"We came back home and the Americans treated us like shit, they really did," Bachman said, sipping from the last beer of a six-pack he bought at the package store across from the hotel.

Bachman, who served with the 101st Airborne Division from 1969 to 1969 and was one of the few men to survive the "Hamburger Hill" massacre in the II Corps area of South Vietnam, agreed with his friend Miller that if it were not for the mutual support they've provided for each other they could never have made it in a society that often didn't accept them. Both men have been active with the Vets Center in Lexington where Miller is a group counselor.

"I call this... dude, two, three o'clock in the morning and we rap," Bachman said.

"That's what human beings are for, man," Miller replied. "I'm just basic, that's all ... just basic. The time you spent, man, you're a warrior. You paid your dues."

"I'm just a poor son of a bitch from Kentucky," Bachman said. "I didn't come here to party. I didn't come here to see my friend's name on a slab. I don't really know why... you just can't explain it."

"My best buddy died in my arms, man, and when I went up there to the monument today I was hoping I wouldn't see his name there," Bachman said.

And so it was like this with other vets throughout the week-long National Salute to Vietnam Veterans.

Even children of vets were racing in and out of private reunion parties, marching alongside their dads in parades and placing flowers or flags at the base of the Veterans Memorial.

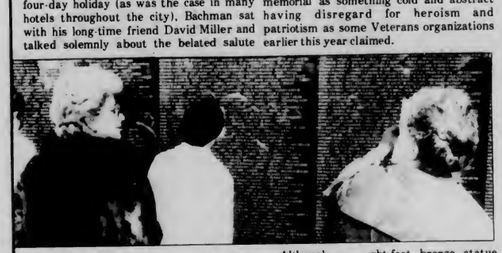
On a second-floor corridor at the Sheraton Washington two young girls weaved in and out of beer-swilling vets at the 101st Airborne party, wearing sweatshirts which read on the front "WE CAN TAKE IT" and on the back "OUR DAD SERVED IN VIETNAM"

As the week progressed, though, and especially by the time the controversial memorial was officially dedicated Saturday, more and more vets showed up at the polished granite monument and spent the entire day walking about looking for more familiar names on the reflecting black wall.

The monument itself, which in the end most of the vets and other visitors seemed to find appropriate despite some who have objected to its design, is built into a grassy knoll in the gardens between the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument. There are 57,939 names of those killed or missing in action inscribed on the granite panels.

Well into the dark and increasing cold weather of the weekend following Veteran's Day, people continued revisiting the memorial bringing flowers or anything else of personal value they could leave below the innumerable names of those they remembered. Some vets left military decorations they pulled from their uniforms and others left articles of clothing like a pair of cowboy boots, having travelled nearly penniless from as far as northern Canada concerned only with reaching Washington on time.

The monument, which has been almost as fiercely controversial as the Vietnam War itself, proved to be something that wasn't just a "black ditch" which is sunken into the ground symbolizing dishonor. Nor did the public, especially the vets, view the memorial as something cold and abstract having disregard for heroism and patriotism as some Veterans organizations earlier this year claimed.



Although a eight-foot bronze statue depicting three seemly frightened and lost soldiers and a flagpole will be added to the memorial, they will be located to the side or behind the V-shaped walkway in front of the outstretched granite walls. These additions will increase the memorial's visibility from the street since without some sign, the structure isn't visible at all. So there will be nothing drained of its quiet and reflective power.

Maya Yang Lin, the Yale architecture student who last year had the winning blueprint of 1,421 entries in a nationwide competition to find a design for the memorial, summed up the eloquence of the design by saying: "It isn't depressing, it isn't a ditch or black hole, it isn't insulting. It's a strange, primitive, moving, exhalting reflection and contemplation. It's a space to be in — an outdoor chapel or sacred place like Delphi — not an object to admire."

Two days before most of the vets had arrived to view the memorial, Mike White of the "Vietnow" organization in Rockford, Ill., said, "That thing's a black hole in the ground. It was the worst slap in the face I've ever seen — no units, no dates, no infantry numbers. I've got a lot of friends on that marble. The weather's perfect right now I tell ya, a cold chill on the back. I'm ready to go home tonight.

But he didn't.

Nearly a week later, as U.S. Park Service Police were moving spotlights in place at the memorial hours after the dedication ceremonies were completed, most of the crowd had long left the cold and muddy area except for Mike White, his knees grass-stained and mud soakened from kneeling for hours before a name.

Collegian photos by Ken Lundberg

The dedication of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial last week drew thousands of vets and mourners to Washington D.C. to view and remember those killed and missing in action whose names are inscribed on the shining granite of the peace-evoking structure.

Some veterans upset with memorial process

By PAUL BASKEN
Collegian Staff

The multiplex of feelings associated with our Vietnam veterans which this weekend's events in Washington again attracted to the nation's cursory attention, continues to produce strong, yet still tempered, sentiment at the University of Massachusetts.

"Dealing with Vietnam is a process, and both as an individual and as a nation, that process is going to take some time," said Dr. Anthony Melchionda of the University Health Services, a physician who served in 1970 and 1971 in Army evacuation hospitals in Vietnam.

Although afflicted with myeloma, a cancer he believes may be a result of Agent Orange exposure, he recognizes the uniqueness of the conflict in which he was involved.

Not having won the war, a lack of societal support, having "devastated poor people" in the process, and having fought against a national liberation movement are reasons Melchoinda said he sees as contributing to continued lack of public recognition for the sacrifices he and his colleagues made.

"Our government made a big mistake" in the Vietnam War, as in any other war," he said, but it and the nation's previous wars "are not the same thing, and they cannot be handled in the same way."

Although Melchionda said that in waiting for the memorial, "ten years is a drop in the bucket," UMass students who also served in the armed forces, although not Vietnam veterans, expressed dissatisfaction with the nation's tardiness in displaying understanding.

"I thought it was bullshit," said Michael Crowley, former president of the UMass Veteran Students' Organization (VSO). "The government should have built one [a monument] a long time ago."

Crowley said he knew of no student veterans who felt appreciated by the memorial's construction or who cared to attend this past weekend's ceremony in the capital, and that in fact the VSO, having been composed of "a pretty apathetic bunch," disbanded last semester.

Michael Love, a UMass junior who said he is contacting student veterans in an effort to revive the VSO, agreed reaction to the monument was "not really positive."

"I don't think it was a proper memorial," Love said. "A black memorial like that really heightens the feeling" that the war was an improper cause.

Love said the veterans "are not looking to be called heroes," but only lamented that they "never had a welcoming home ceremony."

Shop Downtown

Amherst

Need Cash?
Buying Class Rings
Highest Prices Paid
Also: Gold & Silver—Coins & Jewelry
Member Amherst Chamber of Commerce
DANIEL SMITH
25 North Pleasant Street
Amherst Mon - Sat 10 - 5:30 tel. 256-0710

CARROLL TRAVEL
LOW FARES OF THE WEEK:
West Palm Beach or Sarasota Florida from Hartford $99.00 one way
Wash DC
NYC
Philadelphia
Long Island
from Hartford $49.00/1 way
Above fares subject to availability & certain restrictions
Located on Cowles Lane 256-8931 off No. Pleasant St.

adventure travel
549-1256
Reserve Holiday Flights Now save up to 50%
Upper Level
233 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst Carriage Shops

PETAL PUSHERS
NOW APPEARING flowers, plants, fruit, vegetables, baked goods & gifts
BEST PRICES IN TOWN
Open Air Cart at 549-5841 We deliver Main & Pleasant

SALADS SUBMARINES SYRIANS
the sub
11 A.M. TO 2 A.M. / 7 DAYS
33 E. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST / 549-5160
Friends and neighbors lend us your ears (and your stomach)!

The SUB would like to offer you a coupon special! Buy any two subs and get a third* absolutely FREE! This coupon is good from now thru Dec. 24, 1982, on Sunday - Wednesday between the hours of 3 p.m. and 6 p.m.
We hope to see you soon and don't forget to bring a friend.
FREE 1 FREE sub with a purchase of any two whole subs when purchased along with this coupon. coupon good till December 24, 1982 any Sun. - Wed. 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. FREE
*Free sub is of equal or less value than most expensive sub purchased

TIME OUT

Free Popcorn
COME JOIN THE CROWD AND HAVE SOME FUN
Two TV's
Amherst's Biggest Little Bar
37 N. Pleasant St, Amherst MA

WE'RE CLEARING OUT SOME GATORS
Regularly $25.00

1 for $19.50
2 for $36.00
For a limited time we are offering a select group of the world famous 100% cotton IZOD LACOSTE® sport shirt at close out prices. Regularly $25.00 buy one for $19.50 or two for only $36.00.
Available in sizes small - XX large.
Colors and quantities limited.
House of Walsh, Inc.
32 Main Street
Amherst, Massachusetts
Daily 9:00 to [illegible]

FALL SALE
20% off
All Sweaters & Jackets
20% - 30% Off selected Fall
Blouses, Skirts, Dresses
20% Off Chinese Shoes selected styles
20% Off
Ricepaper Windowshades
30% Off Selected Jewelry
Mon - Sat 10 am - 6 pm
MERCANTILE
AMHERST CARRIAGE SHOPS

Collegian photo by Drew Ogier
A PVTA windshield offers a driver's eye view of North Pleasant Street's afternoon activity.

'Zionism is not racism' is message of Israel travelling resource center

By RITA MURPHY
Collegian Staff

Zionism is proud and it is not going to be defamed by anyone anymore, said a member of the Israel Scene Caravan, a traveling resource center about Israel and Zionism, which finished up yesterday its two day visit to the University of Massachusetts.

Steve Leibowitz, assisatnt director of Israel's Government Press Office, defined Zionism as being the "national liberation movement of the Jewish people. Its goal is to re-establish the Jewish state in the Jewish homeland."

Zionism, he said, has been wrongly linked with racism. "Zionism is far from racist. In Israel, minorities are equally treated."

"Educational programs like ours offer a method of counteracting these anti-zionists groups," he said. "Zionism is very much misunderstood, particularly on this campus."

"We are bringing a touch of what makes Israel tick to the people on this campus," Leibowitz said. "Too much of the normalcy and goodness of life in Israel gets lost behind the political headlines and rhetoric. We aim to demonstrate that Israel and the U.S. have many values and interests in common." Leibowitz said Zionism is closely linked with the western style of democracy.

"The western democracy is the best form of government that exists in the world today. Zionism is close behind," he said.

Leibowitz said the Caravan is trying to show students that Israel offers a lifestyle similar to that found in the United States.

"In Israel there is a free press, there is freedom of speech and of religion. We are a free country," he said.

Unlike the U.S., Israel does not have high employment. Israel does not have ghettos and poverty, he said.

"We are a prospering country. We have high inflation, but are still managing to prosper. Not many countries can say that," he said.

The Zionist Caravan is a group of former American Jews who have moved to Israel. The group is in the middle of a 60-day tour that will bring the caravan to 36 communities in the United States and Canada, Leibowitz said.

The group has been visiting all the campuses in the Five-College area showing slides and handing out literature about the benefits of living in Israel.

Leibowitz said he hopes to raise awareness of Zionism on the campuses.

"If we can accomplish that then we have accomplished quite a bit. Even if we only influence a dozen students, we have accomplished what we set out to do," he said.

★alcohol

Continued from page 1

In other matters, Jim Murphy announced his office will be sending out letters to faculty members requesting their assistance in boycotting the Text Book Annex. Murphy's office proposes to set up a store to sell textbooks so that students will be provided with an alternative to the Text Book Annex.

"We're in the process of kidnapping a department in the Text Book Annex, for instance the whole economic section of the Annex. We want to sell a certain department's books."

Murphy said the Text Book Annex is reaping a huge profit and not using this money to run an efficient business. The Board of Governors also has been working extensively on this issue, Murphy said.

THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN
BAGELS LOX KNISHES DELI SALADS CHEESE CAKE DELI SHOWCASES PASTRIES CHEESE PICKLES ASSORTED BEVERAGES
In the Amherst CARRIAGE SHOPS
OPEN 9AM
549-6314

SALE!
• Ladies Crew $18.
• Men's Acrylic Sweaters $9.95
• "Blue Rock" Sweaters $26. (Reg. $40.00)
• Turtlenecks $7.95
• Mittens $5.95
• LEVI'S (denim) $18.95
Saturday Clothes
(behind Silverscape) 286 N. Pleasant
9:30 - 6 Mon-Sat Fri till 9 pm

TONITE
Scarlett O'Hara

$1.25 Free T-shirts
16 oz Big One all nite
POOR RICHARD'S A STEP UP

Write your Christmas Cards early this year.
A.J. HASTINGS
Newsdealer and Stationer
45 S. Pleasant St., Amherst

creswell gallery
15 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst
upstairs over N'Hamp Coop Bank
next to Lodestone & Gladbags
Tues. thru Fri.
11 to 2 & 4 to 6
Sat. 11 to 3
or by appointment
black art, posters
cards & prints
african & third world artifacts
256-8000

NIKE SPECIAL
Leather Cortez
Red or Blue Stripe

ONLY $36.90
Mathews SHOE STORE
The Village Common, Amherst

OUR WEEKLY SPECIALS
WEDNESDAY • THURSDAY • FRIDAY • SATURDAY
DINNER for TWO
Chicken Teriaki
Choice Top Sirloin
Denver style bar-b-que ribs
9.95
Served with tossed salad, potato or rice pilaf, rolls & butter, and a glass of rose, burgundy or chablis wine
Dinner 4:30-9:30
THE PUB
15 East Pleasant St.
AMHERST

Be A Star ★

Become a star reporter for the Collegian. New England's largest daily college newspaper! We need people to write news and women's affairs. Great experience for any students interested in journalism or communications. Come by the Collegian anytime and ask for an editor. It's easy and it's fun. Everyone's welcome.
The Collegian
113 Campus Ctr.
545-3500

Pay raises may need voter approval

BOSTON — Citizens for Limited Taxation, the group responsible for getting Proposition 2½ on the statute books, is planning a petition drive to get the legislative pay issue on the 1984 state election ballot, CLT Director Barbara Anderson said yesterday.

Whether the drive will seek repeal of the recently enacted pay bill or a new law reducing the increases depends on legal issues currently being researched, Ms. Anderson said.

The Legislature included the raises in a bill that also hikes judicial salaries, and judges' wages, according to some involved in the recent pay debate, are protected from referendums by the state constitution. It is believed this prohibition might protect the raises for legislators and statewide officeholders provided under the bill signed into law by lame-duck Gov. Edward J. King last week.

"The concern for us is that if they get away with it, they could tie in any controversial bill with a judicial pay bill" and avoid referendums, Ms. Anderson said. "It's conceivable they could tie in a nickel pay raise for judges with any bill. It's a long-term concern for us."

Ms. Anderson's group, which was the driving force behind the property tax limiting Proposition 2½ law enacted by voters in 1980, also participated in the successful 1980 referendum repealing legislative raises that were enacted in 1979.

Ms. Anderson said she is working in concert with two maverick legislators, Reps. Royall Switzler, R-Wellesley, and Bruce Wetherbee, D-Pepperell, and there are two possible courses of action.

Spring right-to-die case continues

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — A judge dismissed yesterday four nurses' aides as defendants and threw out most allegations against four nurses accused of violating Earle Spring's right to privacy as his family fought to let him die.

Spring, 78, died April 6, 1980, as his family asked the state Supreme Judicial Court to end medical treatment that had kept him alive 14 months after he was ruled incompetent.

His widow, Blanche, 78, filed an $80 million civil lawsuit against nurses and staff of the Holyoke Geriatric and Convalescent Center, where he died. She accused them of violating Spring's privacy and causing her distress by questioning him and telling newspapers he wanted to live or letting outsiders question him to make similar statements.

But Judge John Murphy, acting on motions in the two-week-old trial before a jury would receive the case for deliberations, ruled yesterday that four nurses aides should be dropped as defendants because the fact that they signed a letter saying Spring didn't want to die did not violate his privacy.

81.2%
In a recent survey of UMass undergrads, 81.2 percent said they read the Collegian regularly, and half of those said they read it every day. That's more than three times the UMass readers of any other area paper! New England's largest college daily is number one at home, too.
The Collegian
#1 at UMass

You're What?

The way people react when you tell them you're pregnant isn't important. The way you feel about it is. So if you're pregnant and not so sure you want to be, talk to us. Our counselors are specially trained to help you make the decision that's right for you. Call 738-6210. Preterm. The most experienced reproductive health care center in the Northeast.

preterm
A licensed non-profit health care facility.
1842 Beacon Street, Brookline, MA 02146

Northampton Days

feast & folly restaurant
SPECIALIZING IN CHICKEN, FISH, & VEGETARIAN ENTREES / $3.25 - $6.95
DINNER IS SERVED FROM 5-10
111 PLEASANT ST. NORTHAMPTON - 586-8387
BYOB CLOSED TUES.

AUTO GLASS Installed WHILE-U-WAIT
Mobile or Drive-In Service
Auto Glass Specialists INC.
open Mon-Fri 8-5 Sat 9-2
297 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-8388

THE COPY CENTER
FINE OFFSET PRINTING & COPYING
You'll like what we can do for your image
32 Pleasant Street (across from Pleasant St Theater) Northampton 584-0117
Open 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. daily

GOOD THINGS FOR YOU NATURALLY

Cotton Knit Tops
Locally dyed to match our cotton gauze clothing in beautiful Purple, Rust, Fuchsia, Royal Blue, Black, Green, White, Turquoise, and Yellow. Made of closely knit cotton that is pre-shrunk, machine washable and dryable

Turtleneck $10.00

Scoop-neck $9.50 LONG SLEEVE

Crew-neck $9.50 LONG SLEEVE $8.50 SHORT SLEEVE

Natural Fiber Clothing & Bedding
NEXT TO YOU IT'S THE BEST

A WORKER'S COOPERATIVE
Good things Collective INC
52 Main St. Northampton • 586-5403

PARTY DRESSES
by Janet Russo
100% cotton velveteen in magenta and iris.
Chona
CHONA CONTEMPORARY FASHION THORNES MARKET NORTHAMPTON OPEN THURS & FRI NIGHTS 'TIL 9:00

Northampton Days are every Thursday in the Collegian

NOVEMBER 24. . .

at 4:00 p.m. is the extended deadline date for the UMass Arts Council 2nd funding period.

umass Arts council

Please make sure all proposals are received at 125 Herter Hall by this date.

Also: Residencies, Students: if you have any Grant proposals please submit them at this time.

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Has Senate forgotten us?

(Editors Note — This is the first in a four part series which will examine problems within the Student Government Association. It was written by Dave McCarthy with assistance from Craig Sherwood and Rodman R. Snelling.)

To some, the Undergraduate Student Senate represents a hope for students to gain control over their education. But from my experience as a student and a Senator, Student Government is a body doing a fine job of guarding the interests of all constituencies but one: that of the average undergraduate.

Dave McCarthy

This series will detail how the Student Government at the University has grown out of touch with the students whose interests it claims to represent. Over the course of days, I will present a plan to return student government to the students whose present $96 mandatory fee makes up the approximately $1.7 million SGA budget.

To understand the schism that has developed between students and their government, one must understand two things. First is the fiscal independence of the senate. Second is the mindset which pervades the fourth floor of the Student Union.

Prior to 1974, student activities were funded through the Campus Center Trust Fund, with an amount decided upon by the administration. As of 1974, according to Joel Weissman, director of the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) and a founding member of the Revolutionary Student Brigade, the Senate has been funded by a mandatory student activities tax on each students' fee bill, which was approved by the Trustees. Since students must pay this fee, the ultimate veto over its use is denied. Thus, no matter how unrepresentative or irresponsible the Senate's actions are, their fiscal independence is assured.

To demonstrate the ambivalence of the Senate towards the views of the average undergraduate, a question is put forth: If the essential services (Transit, Distinguished Visitors Program, Union Program Council, Index, Legal Services, Area Governments, Academic Affairs, University Judiciary, WMUA, Student Activities Office, Stabilization and Capital Equipment) were funded from a source outside the Student Activities Fee, how many students would pay a voluntary reduced tax to support the remainder of the budget consisting of 1) activist groups like the Radical Student Union at $1665, 2) support groups like Afrik-Am at $18,896.19, and 3) Senate activities like the busing of 23 student "leaders" to the Progressive Network Conference in Detroit at $712 or the salaries of four student government officers and six committee chairs totaling $26,052? If the fears of MassPIRG about letting people 'think before they pay' are any indication, the Undergraduate Student Senate would have to run massive bake sales to make ends meet. Accountability, an idea whose time has come, is an uncomfortable prospect for student leaders.

Another difference between students and the SGA hierarchy concerns the role student government should play on this campus. Budget expenditures clearly indicate that the practical concerns of students like classroom overcrowding, teaching assistants outnumbering professors, and job prospects do not seem to be shared by our representatives. Senate leaders would rather use our money to fight noble causes in an utterly ineffectual manner. In so doing, these politicians do a disservice not only to the student body, but to the very causes they profess to support.

An example of ineffectual spending on noble causes is programming designed to enlighten undergraduates on racism, sexism, and anti-semitism. Time after time, this type of programming has not reached or affected the students who need it most.

The structural and attitude problems described above need not exist. The men and women to whom we have entrusted our money are, for the most part, hardworking and dedicated. But unfortunately, their energies are misdirected. While the goal of "exposing and combatting human oppression in all its forms" (from SGA mission statement) is laudable, quixotic dreams must be tempered by the more immediate concerns of student life and education.

Tomorrow — Where does your Activities Fee go?

Registration act discriminates

Recently, Congress enacted a bill which prohibited the distribution of any financial aid to college students who choose not to register for the draft. The law itself is unworkable, and can be criticized in many different ways. Below, some of the main problems with the law are examined.

This law discriminates between those who can afford school without federal aid (loan, grant or work-study), making no effort to punish them, and those (most of us) who need aid to go to school. It does not discern which are "sincere' resistors and which are not. There are no provisions for point of view of conscience.

Jon Braine

This law brings in many other agencies under the military. First, with the restarting of registration, the Post Office was brought in. Then the Social Security Administration; then the Internal Revenue Service. Now they are bringing the Federal Department of Education and every Financial Aid Office in the country, and perhaps all banks giving loans, into enforcing compliance with the Military Selective Service Act.

This law should be unconstitutional because men are assumed guilty until proven innocent. Dave apparently thinks that those men who haven't registered shouldn't get financial aid. There is already a harsh penalty of five years in prison and/or $10,000 fine for not registering for the draft. If you are convicted of not registering you will probably not be in school at all but in jail. If you have not been convicted of not registering then you should not be denied aid on those grounds.

The law that gives federal financial aid is Title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965. The office for the General Council for Education Department has said that to enforce this law "some sort of elaborate tape system would be required. The Education Department does not now have tapes of Title IV recipients, and it is doubtful that they could be produced — certainly not on a timely basis." Further proof of how unworkable and error-ridden this law will be is contained in a letter written by Secretary of Education Terence Bell to Office of Management and Budget Director David Stockman. Bell wrote "The regulatory and enforcement role that would be created by this provision for the Education Department is far beyond any of our current activities and would impose considerable burdens on institutions of higher learning and members of the public. We are deeply concerned that the burdens imposed would far outweigh the benefits gained." Due to the bureaucracy involved, anyone cold be denied aid whether they were supposed to register or not.

In addition to problems on the Department of Education side, even Selective Service does not have a single list of all those who have registered. The many lists that they do have are loaded with mistakes confusing men's ages, or confusing men and women (the computer can't tell if the list is wrong), or confusing fictitious from real people. Since all cross-checking will have to be done by computer, quite a few of the huge number of mistakes will be denying women financial aid, as well as older men or men who did register. Even before the mikstakes are made, it will be harder (at least for men) to get loans from banks. Rep. Simon (Il) said banks "are reluctant right now to make student loans because we are making it more and more complicated. You complicate it futher with this, and if you think bankers in this Nation are going to make student loans as widely as they do now, you are living in a dream world." So this law will not only increase the paperwork involved for everyone, not only make a fantastic amount of mistakes, but actually reduce the amount of loans given through the banks to students or would-be students

If anyone is wondering why they haven't heard of this law before, it is because it made zero media attention. It slipped by quietly as section 1113 of the Defense Department Authorizations Act. Even the Financial Aid Office was not told.

Jon Braine is a UMass Student

Letters

The many facets of Black Homecoming

To the Editor:

I am pleased to see the Collegian devote so much space to the "Homecoming letters". The issues brought forth are certainly deserving of attention.

The tragedy, and the "moral of the story" of this public exchange lies outside of the validity of the opinions and in the nature of their expression. Though I agree with most of the objections to Mr. Bacich's line of reasoning, their effectiveness was as self-defeating as Mr. Bacich's initial letter because they assumed a similar hateful tone. If you wish to see the roots of racism, look no futher than these letters.

The destructive conflict among races is the same as that among individuals. It is the failure to respect others as we would have them respect us. By maliciously labeling another as ignorant, as Mr. Bacich and his respondents do, is to label that person as inferior, and is to set the basis for a slave master-relationship, be it between members of a race, sex or age, and be it subtle, or as open as slavery. It is then that we find justification for treating others worse than we would have them treat us.

How do we expect to remedy the broad societal problem of racism if we cannot communicate respectfully as individuals?

Steve Geiger
Amherst

To the Editor:

I am writing in reference to the reaction by Chris Bacich concerning his opinion of Black Homecoming.

Black people, along with Whites, Indians, Latin Americans and Asians, are an essential part of the UMass student body. Together, a diverse atmosphere is created. It is important to me that I am a part of this diverse group here at UMass. However, once in awhile it's nice to just step back and remember what else you are. During Black Homecoming Week black students have the opportunity to do just this while comemorating the contributions that Black people have made to society. During this week there were events that everyone, not just Black students, could enjoy and participate in.

It's too bad that one can get the impression that Black Homecoming was intended to segregate. I don't feel that it was meant to segregate but rather to give Black people the opportunity to say, "I am Black and I have something to offer this University."

Ronald Homer
Mackimmie, S.W.

Letters Policy

All letters must be signed and include the writer's address and telephone number, which will not be published. Please type double spaced at 67 characters per line. Due to space limitations and the volume of mail, we regret we are unable to acknowledge unpublished letters. All letters are subject to editing for clarity and length.

Watch for the 2 big issues of the

Collegian

Holiday Shopper

TV SALE

19" Motel COLOR PORTABLES

— EXCELLENT PRICES —

Selling at. . .

HOWARD JOHNSON MOTOR LODGE

401 Russell St., Rte. 9, Hadley

Sunday, Nov. 21, 10 am to 2 pm

Sale Held by R.B.M. Sales Corp — No Phone Calls

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

Start off the Holiday Season at The Fine Arts Center

Springfield Symphony Orchestra

Sunday, November 21 8:00 PM with Jonathan Shames

On Sale Now

CONNIE STEVENS starring in I'm Getting My Act Together And Taking It On The Road

November 30 - December 1 8:00 p.m. On Sale Now

Friday, December 3 8:00 p.m. On Sale Nov. 12

PRIMAVERA STRING QUARTET

MC, VISA-CHARGE YOUR TICKETS TODAY

Telephone reservations Noon-4:00 p.m. M-F 545-2511

Fine Arts Center Concert Hall

20% OFF ENTIRE INVENTORY

during our Million Dollar Markdown Sale!

You're in for some super savings during our million dollar markdown sale! We've taken 20% off every item in the store, and that means fantastic values for the whole family. Save on dress, casual and athletic styles with many famous names to choose from. Save on handbags, legwear and accessories. Nothing's excluded in our million dollar markdown sale event!

LAST 3 DAYS!

Representative styles only

Tagway Shoes

Famous brand footwear for Less

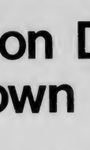
Hampshire Mall

Holyoke Mall at Ingleside

The Salvation Army

Christmas is love, hope and caring

At The Salvation Army Christmas means "sharing."



Give to The Salvation Army so others may have a happy holiday

WINNER OF 4 ACADEMY AWARDS!

INCLUDING BEST SONG

20th Century-Fox presents BUTCH CASSIDY AND THE SUNDANCE KID

PANAVISION® COLOR by DE LUXE®

GP

Fri. Nov. 19th Eng. East Aud 7, 9, 11 pm

Black Affairs

Clouds: A contemporary black music show to highlight the area's entertainment

By GUS MARTINS
Collegian Staff

The last time the musical group "Clouds" featuring Clyde Criner performed at the University, they did so in a traditional Black Classical, or jazz, setting.

While the show featured a wide array of New York's finest talent, the lineup that keyboardist/composer Criner has assembled for Sunday night's performance at the Student Union Ballroom is incredible. Members of Weather Report, McCoy Tyner's band, and Max Roach's band respectively are slated to be in an all-star lineup whose average age is in the mid-20's.

And while last year's group played in an acoustic setting, Sunday night's show is going to be a contemporary music festival with enough electricity flowing to support an underdeveloped village of a remote region.

Criner, 29, an Amherst resident who has put this all together, is very excited about the show and said, "This is a very unique opportunity for people to see the direction that contemporary black music is taking."

"All the musicians in this group agree that the music we're playing is not just jazz, but contemporary Black music," adds Criner. "It encompasses gospel, jazz, 20th century classical, funk, and rock."

What is real interesting about Sunday night's performance is that by an indirect musical lineage, the players are extensions of three of the biggest schools of jazz in Miles Davis, John Coltrane, and Charlie Parker.

"Omar Hakim and Victor Bailey of Weather Report are extensions of Miles Davis' school of music because their leader, Joe Zawinul, played as a part of Miles' band in the 60's," explains Criner.

Photo by A. Georgens

Gayle Dixon — violin — featured with Clouds at SUB, Sunday Nov. 21st. Experience with Max Roach, Rahsaan Roland Kirk, Buster Williams.

"Joe Ford and John Blake of McCoy Tyner's band are extensions of the John Coltrane school of music, because of Tyner's connection with Trane, while Akua and Gail Dixon of Max Roach's band are extensions of Charlie Parker's school of music," Criner adds.

Criner is so happy about the players joining him on Sunday that he gleamed when asked to talk about them. Prior to then, he spoke about the material they will play Sunday night.

Photo by A. Georgens

Clyde Criner — keyboardist/composer with Clouds. Featured keyboardist with Chico Freeman, Harvey Mason, Alphonso Johnson. Clouds perform Sunday, Nov. 21st at 8 p.m. at the UMass SUB.

"These new songs I've written are all new compositions written in symphonic form, using themes and variations. From a classical concept I've written a piece for piano and violin," Criner said.

"I'm also making sure that each player is featured, and we'll be doing things that sound like Grover Washington to Parliament. There's definitely a concept and continuity to the show and maybe that's where we get away from a standard jazz format," Criner said.

"Among our players, Gail and Akua Dixon represent two of the finest strings players in New York City, and they've currently been recording with Max Roach's Double Quartet. Gail currently is doing "Dreamgirls," and Akua's credits are about five pages long," Criner said.

"Victor Bailey at age 22 is an unusually gifted bass player," Criner said. "He's currently the bassist for Weather Report and anyone who's followed them knows that he has some tough names in Alfonso Johnson, and Miroslav Vitous, two former Weather Report bassists, to follow."

"The bottom line on Bailey is that he's a monster, a funky cat, and he can sing too," Criner said.

"Omar Hakim at 23 is an extraordinary drummer who's worked with George Benson, Patti Labelle, Roy Ayers, and is featured on the latest David Sanborn album entitled, 'As We Speak,'" Criner said.

"The word in New York City on Hakim is that he can 'funk to death.' Most experts agree that together these two individuals have combined to give Weather Report the funkiest sound they've ever had."

"Joe Ford is perhaps the most underrated sax player in the business," Criner adds. "He's a seven year veteran of McCoy Tyner's band and can play anything from Coltrane to Grover, he's an outstanding player.

"John Blake represents to one what improvisation on violin shall and will be," Criner said. "He's a veteran of Grover Washington's group and his influence there has been most notable."

Criner himself has been a busy man this past year or so. Presently he can be heard on Chico Freeman's latest release, "Tradition in Transition." Criner is featured on piano and even composed one of the album's numbers.

More importantly he has just finished a recording master of his own which predates the making of an album. Warner Brothers, Polygram, and Arista record companies have all contacted Criner about the recordings.

During the taping sessions Criner worked with drummers Jack Dejonnette and Ronnie Burrage, saxophonist Joe Ford, cellist Akua Dixon, and bassist Marcus Miller, perhaps the most sought after young bassist in the business.

Criner's excitement about the show Sunday night has remained high in spite of some problems pertaining to the business aspect of things.

"I'm excited about the performance and Sunday night will be a sneak preview of the music that I've recorded for my first album," Criner said.

"The way this concert has been arranged conceptionally is meant to be an experience, a unique experience."

Let it be added that this may be the start of something new musically, and you saw it first, right here at UMass.

Announcements

On November 27, John Brown Anti-Klan Committee is demonstrating to stop the klan in Washington D.C. The Ku Klux Klan has announced plans to march and rally on the capital for the first time since the 1920's. The Klan march on Washington in the 1920's was in response to masses of Black people fighting against the colonial genocide of the U.S. government, and for self-determination of the Black nation under the leadership of Marcus Garvey. In 1982, the Confederation of Klans has called for this rally in response to the advances of the continuing struggle of Black people within U.S. borders for human rights and self-determination.

The Confederation was formed at a meeting on Labor Day Weekend of this year. It represents the consolidation of eight klan factions in the U.S. and Canada under the leadership of Don Black, CIA agent and leader of the attempted CIA coup of Dominica. The Confederation had originally announced plans to march on Washington D.C. on November 6, coinciding with Black Solidarity Day. Instead, a rally of 25 klan was held in support of the police, in a secluded wooded area in Maryland, protected by approximately 250 police.

In exposing the unity between the klan and the state, and in building an army to protect the Black nation from white supremacist terror, and to build for protracted struggle for liberation, New Afrikan Freedom Fighters have made it clear that the struggle against the klan is a struggle against U.S. imperialism.

The John Brown Anti-Klan Contingent will be demonstrating in solidarity with the New Afrikan Independence Movement, in support of the Black nation's rights to self-defense, self-determination, land and independence as the only strategy to defeat the klan. We urge all progressive people to join us in Washington on Saturday, November 27, to fight the klan and the consolidation of white supremacy. For more information, contact the John Brown Anti-Klan Committee at 584-4569.

The fall 1982 season of the Third World Theater Series closes with an original production of "HOMELAND" a domestic comedy about South Africa and the United States, co-authored by Steve Friedman and Selaelo Maredi.

"HOMELAND" and its main character Bob Kennelworth take you from Johannesburg, South Africa to Greenwich, Connecticut. The story centers around Kennelworth, a white South African businessman, en route to the U.S.A. for a business conference at General Motors. On his journey across the ocean Bob takes along his immediate family and his faithful Black maid. The Kennelworths stay with another white family, the Sloans, also associated with General Motors. The Sloans coincidentally employ a Black household worker. The ensuing comedy/drama revolves around the similarities and differences between the two families and the two Black women.

"HOMELAND", co-written by a white American, Steve Friedman, and a Black South African, Selaelo Maredi skillfully combines comedy and drama to attach the issue of racism deeply rooted in the United States and South Africa. "HOMELAND" approaches the very sensitive issue of racism without digressing into a political tract. The authors use of characters from everyday life allows the audience to identfy and therefore be drawn closer to the center of the issues.

"HOMELAND" has attracted actors from the 5-College area and various community theaters in the valley. "HOMELAND" will be presented under the direction of Roberta Uno Thelwell.

When: November 18, 19, 20 and December 2, 3, 4.

All performances will begin at 8:00 p.m.

Where: At Hampden Theater, Southwest at the University of Massachusetts at A. st

Tickets: $2 for students
$3 for general public available at TIX, FAC, and Hampden Theater the evening of the performance.

Coming Soon! Coming Soon! Coming Soon! Coming Soon!

the other voice

The Arts Magazine of the University of Massachusetts

Coming Soon! Coming Soon! Coming Soon! Coming Soon!

A Thanksgiving Greeting card takes you home for the holiday.

AMERICAN GREETINGS
...for that special person

Located in the Campus Center

UNIVERSITY STORE

Need Academic Counselling?
It's about that time in the semester again to be making major decisions.
Call "TIPS", at 545-1540, and ask for TAPES~

#1020 Changing your Major
#1009 Credit Loads
#1031 Graduation Requirements
#1027 Incompletes
#1032 Pass-Fail Option
#1033 The Repeat Option
#1012 Auditing Courses

IDB TIPS
a Service of the Dean of Students Office

Arts

live wire
By Phil Plante

By PHILLIP PLANTE
Collegian Staff

Bluesman Johnny Copeland will appear tonight at Hanger One in Hadley. Copeland's soulful style resembles the upbeat, jazzy sound of Gatemouth Brown, who appeared at the Rusty Nail last year. Distinctively swinging and danceable, Copeland's music is becoming one of the most popular and successful of contemporary blues, and his new album is getting good reviews.

Also tonite: RCA recording artists Steel Breeze will be at the Rusty Nail; the Hot Acoustics will play cover tunes at the Blue Wall; classical harpist Vanessa Ploumis will appear at The Iron Horse; drink specials and The Cardiac Kids are offered at The Wok.

Zion Initiation and valley eternals Loose Caboose will provide the music at The Reggae Dance Party at Hangar One. And to complete the effect, Carribbean food (Yvonne's) will be available.

Also on Friday: Berlin Airlift, one of the most controversial bands in UMass history will make another appearance at the Blue Wall. Judge for yourself, do they really sound like Reo Speedwagon and Styx? In addition, Justin is at the Nail; Jazz string artists, Pro-Bo, are at the Iron Horse; The Asparagus Valley Contemporary Music Ensemble will perform in Buckley Recital Hall at Amherst College; and The University Symphony Band, directed by Peter Tanner, will appear at The Fine Arts Center.

Take note: One of the best movies ever made on the life of The legendary Buddy Holly, The Buddy Holly Story, opens Thursday night at the Pleasant Street Theatre. This film does well in depicting the prejudice and social pressures rock and roll encountered in its formative years. Starting Thursday The Buddy Holly Story plays at 7 and 9 p.m. at the Little Theatre on Pleasant Street in Northampton.

Gil Scott-Heron's album Reflections is in many ways the black contemporary music for the eighties. Scott-Heron articulates his perspectives in long, instrumentally backed raps that touch on all aspects of life today under the Reagan administration. Scott-Heron, and the talented musicians that accompany him, play a kind of smooth, classy, contemporary sound that borrows from traditional jazz as well as today's funk. Scott-Heron's performance at The Rusty Nail Saturday Night will be a rare opportunity for valleyites.

On Saturday Night: The 2nd annual "Battle of the Bands" is featured at The Blue Wall. This UPC production is free of charge. The Valley Big Band, a 16 piece swing and jazz orchestra, will be featured at The Wok. Rodney Hardesty and Alexander Farkas will perform in Buckley Recital Hall at Amherst College, and Peter Bellamy will appear at the Iron Horse in Northampton.

Sunday Morning, saxophonist Marion Brown will give a free solo performance in the Berkshire Dining Commons of all places. Mr. Brown, who teaches a course called "African Music and African Life" here at UMass, is recognized as not only one of the leading developers of the avante-garde in jazz music but also for playing some of the finest traditional music as well. Mr. Brown has played with Archie Shepp, John Coltrane, and Ornette Coleman. The performance starts at 11:00 and admission is a meal ticket.

Composer-performer Clyde Criner will perform Sunday night in The Student Union Ballroom with one of the most impressive lineups of contemporary and traditional jazz musicians to be found anywhere. Musicians from Weather Report, and McCoy Tyner's group are just some of the personnel that comprise Clouds. The performance begins at 8:00 p.m. and costs $6 for UMass students and $7 for the general public. Tickets are available at Union Records, Faces, and all Ticketron outlets. Clouds is sponsored by the Duke Ellington Committee, UPC, and the Arts Council.

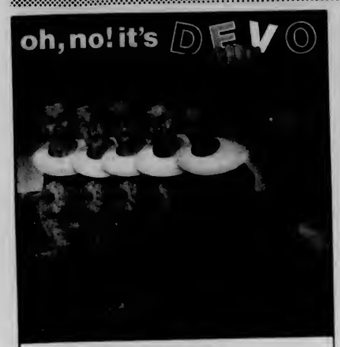
Also Sunday night: "Who'll Stop the Rain," a benefit concert to support acid rain research in the Valley, is on the bill at Hangar One and includes: John Coster and The Medicine Band, Mitch Chakour, Roger Salloom, Al Schackman, the David Wertman Sun Ensemble with Lynn Meryl, Jeff Pevar, and Abby Strauss. The show starts at 7 p.m. and tickets are $4 in advance, and $5 at the door.

An album release party featuring Tony Vacca and Tim Moran will take place at 8:30 p.m. at the Hangar. Tickets are available at TIX NOW and cost $2. Jean Redpath will perform in Buckley Recital Hall at Amherst College.

In the semi not so distant future...Koko Taylor and her Blues Machine at Hangar One, the awesome Archie Shepp Quartet at The Iron Horse, and The Motels at the Calvin Theatre in Northampton for shows at 7 and 10 p.m. Tickets are $9.50 and are available at Main St., Faces, the Music Store, and the Calvin Theatre.

Take Note: Sarah Vaughan's performance scheduled for Saturday, December 11 at the Fine Arts Center has been cancelled. In its place, the Fine Arts Center has scheduled The Big Six of Jazz II, featuring performances by Max Roach, Billy Taylor, Clark Terry, Richard Davis, Jimmy Heath, and John Hendricks. Tickets are on sale now at the FAC box office.

Arts



Oh no! It's Devo (Warner Bros)
Devo

By PHIL PLANTE
Collegian Staff

Since that first time you gawked in wonder and disbelief at the sight of Devo on Saturday Night Live, you've probably either: 1. grown to appreciate their fun and profound yet ugly music; 2. like "Whip-it" because they play it at Poor Dick's; or 3. think they're commercial ripoffs and you don't care. After many transitions involving plastic radiation suits, flower pots, and now "spud ring collars," Devo seems to have settled down to making a record nearly everyone can like.

Oh, no! It's Devo, like "Freedom of Choice" and "The New Traditionalists" continues the idea of poking fun at society by being its most ridiculous part. Most songs on the album give at least lip service to Devo's on-going commitment to expose the evils of consumer society and mass culture. From "Patterns":

patterns multiplying re-direct our view endless variations make it all seem new

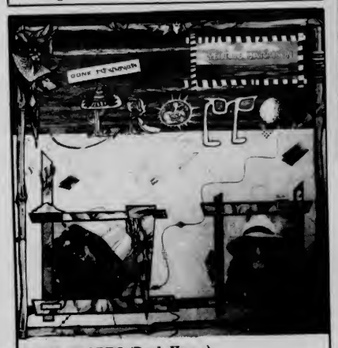
Ironically Oh no! It's Devo seems so closely "patterned" with The New Traditionalists and Freedom of Choice, that the band seems to have lost one of its most appealing qualities — unpredictability.

One of the album's other problems is a guitar-less and over-synthesized sound. The wild compelling laboratory, special-effect sound of Devo's Are We Not Men? and Duty Now for the Future seems to be a thing of the past as the slick Kraftwerkish (and sometimes boring) sound of the new Devo takes over. We'll just have to see what they do next — again.



GONE TROPPO (Dark Horse)
George Harrison

I was all excited. I was going to tell you to run out, buy the new George Harrison album, and throw a Hawaiian party. I mean, the B-52's could never get away with an album this tacky, but nobody expects anything from George anyway. So what does he have to lose? The first side of this album is the ultimate Pacific Island experience. It's all there; humor, palm trees, the whole bit.

But he blew it. The rest of the album is garbage. Maybe it's supposes to be a compilation of songs that were rejected from his last few albums. The only tune of any real value is the theme from Time Bandits on the second side. I suggest that you wait until the album reaches the cut-out bin before you buy it though. That way you'll only be paying for the first side.

WORDS FROM THE FRONT (Warner Bros.)
Tom Verlaine

By PHIL PLANTE
Collegian Staff

The music of Tom Verlaine is a study in subtlety. Verlaine, who grew-up listening to jazz, has developed an ability of reworking simple guitar melodies to produce amazingly intricate and hypnotic music.

While many of today's rock-pop musicians have used guitars as weapons, sledgehammers, noise makers, or victims of chainsaw sacrifices, Verlaine, in Words From the Front and other work with his former band Television, has helped bring back the guitar as a musical instrument. "Present Arrived," and "Clear it Away" demonstrate the artistic coolness with which Verlaine approaches his playing.

Though Words From the Front, like most of Verlaine's music, has an undeniably rock and roll sound, Verlaine's playing has a jazz-like expressionistic quality. Melodic or temporal restrictions become lost in the midst of a Verlaine solo. A simple melody expands, is turned insideout, backwards, repeated, improvised upon while staying within a consistant framework.

Verlaine's poetic ambitions, as they express themselves in the lyrics of Words From the Front, are somewhat less than profound, however:

Now Darling I must say A'dieu
I'll send a postcard from Waterloo
I always thought you'd like the view.

Nevertheless, the music which has influenced the likes of Echo and the Bunnymen, U2, and The Teardrop Explodes, speaks for itself.

Sound Advice

1999 (Warner Bros.)
Prince

By DAVID CHEVAN
Collegian Correspondent

Side one of this double album opens with a technological voice of doom booming out to the listener, "Don't worry I won't hurt you, I only want you to have some fun." Then the orchestrated chords of Prince's new single, "1999," swirl into the mix. The album, 1999, is a pop commentary on the current state of affairs, both personal and international. Prince's convinced that the solution to our problems is simply to party in the midst of imminent destruction. "Mommy, why does everybody have a bomb?," another song suggests. "Let's pretend we're married and go all night," says still another in a mix which depicts Prince in various states of lovemaking. Prince takes the tired theme of "We're all gonna die some day," and explores it beyond the restrictions of good times/bad times.

Lyrically, this album is going to offend a lot of people. In nearly every song, Prince graphically describes his desire totake advantage of every boy or girl he can ever get to bed. However, this stuff should all be taken as mere male heroic posturing. When Prince is not boasting of his sexual prowness, he confesses to an impotence of frightening extreme, especially when in one tense moment he cries out to a group of soldiers: "Will you all fight for the right to be free?" But don't get me wrong, this is not an album for intellectuals, this is the party album of the year.

Prince writes all the songs and plays all the instruments on 1999. It is surprising how good all four sides of this album are, not one song can be considered filler or a throwaway.

When a song is stretched out for as long as ten minutes, its so Prince can lay down some perverted rap deep in the mix. In fact, Prince may have taken his perversions a bit too far on one of his songs; "Lady Cab Driver." About halfway through the song, the singer begins to rape the cabdriver saying: "This is for me not being as handsome as my brother, this is for women who wear designer jeans, this is for the politicians who are sticking it to me. . ." I don't find Prince's other raps at all as foul as this one, and, in fact, most are quite funny. One, "All the Critics Love U in New York," is a number which knocks folks like me, critics, who are trying to tell you what you should and should not like.

Despite the aforesaid flaws, this is Prince's best album yet. Though I doubt he will ever become a household name, 1999 at this moment, is my top contender for best album of the year. It's fun, it's intelligent, it's dirty, how can you hate it?

MIGHTY RHYTHM (Flying Fish)
Mandingo Griot Society

By PHIL PLANTE
Collegian Staff

The power and beauty of African music has always managed to find its way into the Western popular mainstream, indirectly from Afro-American music and-more directly from the reggae rhythms of Jamaica.

Now, through the Music of the Mandingo Griot Society, African music as it is sometimes played in the "High-life" nightclubs across the continent, is making it's way to American record store shelves.

To pidgeon-hole Mighty Rhythm into any muisical genre would be a mistake. The leader of the Mandingo Griot Society, Jali Foday Musa Suso, is an artist of extraordinary ability. Born and raised in Gambia, Africa Suso's primary instrument is the Kora, a twenty-one string harp played by the Mandingo Griots. The kora has a lively delicate sound which does a good job at complimenting the powerful rhythms of the ensemble's drums, congas and rhythm guitars.

Many of the album's tracks are almost educational, with notes on the album cover explaining the cultural functions of the songs. Other tracks exhibit some of the most infectiously happy and danceable stuff available today, including some amazing guitar solos on "Festival on Crazy Street." No matter what you're into this album has something to offer, and who knows, you might learn something in the process.

BACK ON THE CHAIN GANG (Sire)
The Pretenders

By MARTIN ROTHBARD
Collegian Correspondent

Mourning the recent loss of lead guitarist, Jim "Honeyman" Scott, the Pretenders have released a new single dedicated to him.

The Pretenders have had their share of hardships in 1982. In addition to Scott's death, bass guitarist Pete Farndon has quit the band. "Back On The Chain Gang," represents, perhaps, an attempt to keep the band together.

Lead singer, Chrissie Hynde wrote the single in which she cries "those were the happiest days of my life," in reference to the period when Scott was still alive. Hynde's vocals are clearly typical of the bands' earlier work and the song manages to carry a not-so-mournful up-beat tune.

With help from Billy Bremmer and Tony Butler, filling in with their guitarists, the Prentenders are able to recreate their familiar sound. As of now, it is unknown if Bremmer and Butler are to become permanent members of the band. Nonetheless, let's hope that the Pretenders really are "back on the chain." Perhaps we'll be hearing more from them soon.

SUPER SALE on HP34C

only $69.95

(this is not a misprint)

Save almost 50% off our regular low price of 134.95

Save $80.00 off list price 150.00

Advanced programming power for flexible problem-solving.

The HP-34C offers computer-strength "solve" and "integrate" in a handheld calculator. Designed for scientific students and professionals who need the flexibility and power of advanced programming.

- "Solve" key finds real roots of equations
- "Integrate" key finds definite integrals
- 210 program lines
- Continuous Memory saves programs and data

HP 34C

Limited quantities available no rainchecks

HP-34C Advanced Programmable Scientific ....

Located in the Campus Center

Open M-F 9-5 Sat 11-4

UNIVERSITY STORE

The Marines PLC Air Program guarantees flight school after basic training. And if you qualify, we can put you in the air before college graduation with free civilian flying lessons. Contact your Marine representative, or call collect (203) 244-2168/2169

The Few. The Proud. The Marines.

See Captain Sparks

Campus Center Nov. 22nd & 23rd 10 am - 2 pm

Final Weekend!

Musical Theatre Magic!

"Sugar" "Pippin" "J.C. Superstar" "Godspell"

UMASS MUSIC THEATRE GUILD

presents

SEESAW

Written by Michael Bennett ('A Chorus Line', 'Dream Girls')

TONITE, FRIDAY, SATURDAY 8 PM

Bowker Auditorium, Stockbridge Hall

Tix: $3. Students, $4. General Public Call 545-0783

the great american smokeout

American Cancer Society

Think you can quit smoking for one day? We bet you can. Join the Great American Smokeout on November 18th at the Campus Center Concourse.

UHS
SHAB
Cancer Society

Recycle this Collegian

Looking for an Academic Alternative?

Call "TIPS" at 545-1540 and ask for TAPES~

*1011 BDIC (Bach. Degree in Indiv. Conc.)
*1029 Five College Courses
*1030 Office of Internships
*1038 Study Abroad
*1310 National Student Exchange Prog.
*1036 Stockbridge School of Agriculture
*1040 University Without Walls

IDB TIPS

a Service of the Dean of Students Office

EVEN STRAIGHT A'S CAN'T HELP IF YOU FLUNK TUITION.

Today, the toughest thing about going to college is finding the money to pay for it.

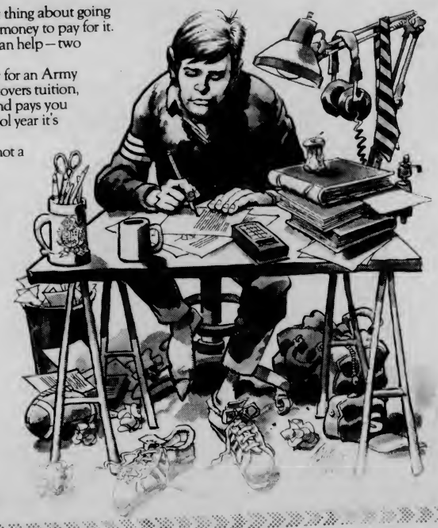
But Army ROTC can help—two ways!

First, you can apply for an Army ROTC scholarship. It covers tuition, books, and supplies, and pays you up to $1,000 each school year it's in effect.

But even if you're not a scholarship recipient, ROTC can still help with financial assistance—up to $1,000 a year for your last two years in the program.

For more information, contact your Professor of Military Science.

ARMY ROTC. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.



Hypercurricula

"Hypercurricula," a listing of events held at the University of Massachusetts and surrounding area, is published daily in the Collegian. Events are listed only on the day they are taking place. Announcements must be submitted on "Hypercurricula" forms available in the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center, and returned to the office by 3 p.m. the Friday before the event. All submissions should be written in a similar style as they appear in the paper.

"Hypercurricula" notices not submitted on the standard form and not submitted by the Friday before the week the event will take place will not be run. Due to space limitations, the Collegian cannot guarantee printing of all "Hypercurricula" notices. Priority will be given to UMass organizations.

THIRD WORLD WOMEN IN LIBERATION STRUGGLES — This week's film, Women Under Siege, reports on the struggle of Palestinian women. Discussion with Raghideh Woumis and Fatima Ziadan to follow film. Noon, 903 Campus Center.

STUDY ABROAD IN HAIFA — A meeting with a representative from Haifa University and Prof. Shmuel Bolozky will be held for students interested in the new exchange program with Haifa. 3 p.m., Third Floor Lounge, Herter.

JEWISH FEMINIST ORGANIZATION — New members welcome. Help plan events/speakers/films with other interested Jewish women. Call Debbie 549-6015 or Janet 549-1005 for more info. 4 p.m., 811 Campus Center.

JEWISH FEMINIST ORGANIZATION — A video of Letty Lottin Pogrebin speaking on anti-semitism in the feminist movement and sexism in Judaism will be shown 4 p.m., Suffolk Room, Student Union.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS MEETING — General public is urged to attend to provide input into discussions concerning the Textbook Annex profits, installation of ACC computer terminal room and the satellite disc project. 6 p.m., 917 Campus Center.

FRENCH CLUB POTLUCK SUPPER — Potluck supper for the club. All welcome. Bring a dish. Sign up on third floor bulletin board. Herter Hall. 6:30 p.m., third floor lounge, Herter.

SPECTRUM MEETING — Does Spectrum magazine need a focus? If so, what then will it be? Help to resolve this important question. Please join us. Mandatory attendance for members. 7 p.m., Spectrum Office, Campus Center.

WSYL-98 FM GENERAL STATION MEETING — The Sylvan Residential Area radio station will be having a general station meeting 7 p.m. Cashin recreation room.

"STUDY ABROAD — WHAT ARE THE OPTIONS?" — Lily von Klemperer, a noted authority on study abroad will speak and answer questions. 7:30 p.m., Franklin Patterson Hall, Hampshire College.

C.E.Q. FREE FILM — "The Flooding River" — a film about river ecology and how people can mess it up. To be followed by discussion and an informal C.E.Q. meeting. Everyone welcome. 7:30 p.m., 306 Student Union.

★fee

Continued from page 3

some students may have been considering the 7-20 record the basketball team held last year, rather than the general concept intended by the question.

The survey was done to assess student concerns about the proposal to fund the Curry-Hicks Cage renovations through a student fee, according to Mitch Gaslin, chair of the SCERA Rents and Fees Committee. The $20 fee was first proposed by UMass President David C. Knapp in a July 22 memo.

In an October interview, Knapp said student fee-based funding of the Cage renovations is "the only way we can find for prompt action." State funding or private donations, Knapp said, could take 5 to 10 years.

Knapp said at that time he had no plans to survey students' opinions about the proposal, following the results of a referendum run by the Student Government Association in which 70 percent of students voting opposed the $20 renovations fee.

Neither that referendum nor the SCERA survey were done in conjunction with the UMass administration, Gaslin said.

The proposed Cage renovations would involve replacing the existing dirt floor with a concrete-based floor and synthetic surface. Also included would be new locker rooms, storage areas, toilet facilities and telescoping bleachers seating 3,800.

Gaslin said seating would be increased only by about 160 seats while H.J. Littlefield, director of planning for the University, said seating could be increased as much as 600 if the design permits. Design plans are now being developed and should be completed in the spring, Littlefield [illegible] through a [illegible] to be [illegible] the UMass [illegible] ority, which would then [illegible] actual renovation. [illegible] harge the fee to all undergraduates.

Peoples Gay Alliance presents
Lesbian/Gay Dance
9 pm - 2 am
Friday, November 19, 1982
$2.00
10th floor Campus Center

"Pilot pens! You have to hold onto them with two hands."
–Rodney Dangerfield

"Get your claws off my Pilot pen. I don't get no respect!"

People have a hunger for my Pilot Fineliner because they're always fishing for a fine point pen that writes through carbons. And Pilot charges only 79¢ for it.

People get their hands on it and forget it's my pen. So I don't get no respect! I don't make out any better with my Pilot Razor Point. It writes whup-cream smooth with an extra fine line, its metal collar helps keep the point from going squish - so people love it. For only 89¢ they should buy their own pen - and show some respect for my property.

PILOT
fine point marker pens
People take to a Pilot like it's their own

Tonight at
THE PUB
15 E. Pleasant St.
AMHERST

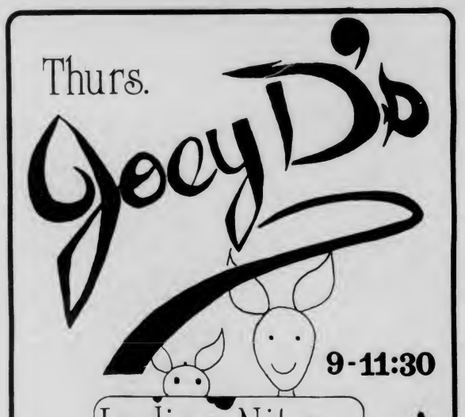
Canadian
O'Keefe Ale
$1.00
12 oz. BOTTLES
O'Keefe is here. It tastes better than beer.

A Free Bottle
O'Keefe Ale
TO THE FIRST 100 PEOPLE
STARTING AT 9:00

AND...
T-SHIRTS
PRIZES

ROCK NIGHT
– with –
Al Stoner
9 til 1
Rock & Roll
no Cover

Thurs.
Joey D's



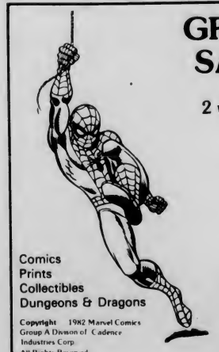
9-11:30
Ladies Nite.
60¢
Drinks for all the ladies.
No Cover.
Delaxed Dress Code

YOUR BSN IS WORTH AN OFFICER'S COMMISSION IN THE ARMY.

Your BSN means you're a professional. In the Army, it also means you're an officer. You start as a full-fledged member of our medical team. Write: Army Nurse Opportunities, P.O. Box 7713, Burbank, CA 91510.

ARMY NURSE CORPS.
BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

GRAND OPENING
SALE-A-BRATION
Sat. Nov. 20-Sat. Dec. 4
2 weeks of Madness & Bargains
-Meet Spider-Man in Person
Sat. Nov. 20
-Meet Bob Layton, Marvel Comics' Iron Man & Hercules Artist
Sat. Dec. 4
Free Marvel Guide to Collecting Comics with this ad
6 new comics for the price of 5
20% off all back issues in stock



Comics
Prints
Collectibles
Dungeons & Dragons

Copyright 1982 Marvel Comics Group A Division of Cadence Industries Corp. All Rights Reserved

Moondance
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, Mass.
413-586-8775

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

The UMass Zone By Mark Rollins

Under The Influence By M. Joyce

Bushwa by Tom Cushwa

Bloom County By Berke Breathed

D.C. MENU

LUNCH
California Quiche
Hot Corned Beef on Rye

DINNER
Roast Turkey/Dressing
Gravy, Cranberrry Sauce
Ham and Cheese
Florentine
Fruit Plate with Pumpkin Bread

BASICS LUNCH
Flat Bread Sandwich
Tuna Noodle Casserole

BASICS DINNER
Cheese Spinach Strudel
Roast Turkey/Dressing,
Gravy, Cranberry Sauce

WANTED:

The Collegian, in conjunction with the Union Video Center, will soon be launching a daily half-hour news program to be aired over the cable TV system in the Campus Center and Student Union Building. We need a coordinator to write, rewrite and edit wire copy and Collegian staff reports which will then be read over the cable TV. Low pay, but great opportunity to help create a new UMass student service. Some experience in writing and television work is helpful. Bring us your ideas. Apply to Ed Levine in the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, by Friday, Nov. 19. The Collegian and UVC are equal opportunity employers.

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1 1957 Nobelist in literature
6 Former TV host
10 "—— lone cowhand..."
13 Dark color
14 Certain look
15 Winter's blanket
16 Certain trophies
18 Cousin of etc.
19 C'est a ——
20 Plant of the lily family
21 Parts of a creed
23 Russian plain
25 Broadway personage
26 Sailing
28 Time of the day
31 British county
34 Piece of jewelry
36 Confess (with "up")
37 Large receptacle
38 Search for 39 Ollie's partner
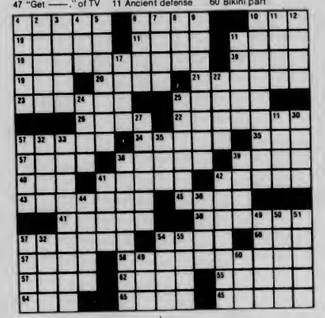
40 Fleur de ——
41 New Hampshire city
42 Seed part
43 Birds of the diamond?
45 Tunnel sound
47 "Get ——," of TV
48 Extremely enthusiastic
52 One of the seasons?
54 In that regard
56 Homme de —— (lawyer): Fr.
57 Formerly, formerly
58 Canary, for one
61 Eve's grandson
62 International org.
63 Irregular
64 Bon ——
65 Small fishing boat of Britain
66 Charges

DOWN
1 Battery units
2 Approximately
3 Entertainment form
4 Prefix for cycle or form
5 Boundary between two nerve fibers
6 Little, in Seville
7 Chill
8 One of the Dolomites
9 Form of healing
10 Decorator's field
11 Ancient defense
12 Leatherwork tools
15 Mister, in Monterrey
17 Kind of club
22 Lab vessel
24 Leave standing idle
25 Busy ——
27 Unmoving
29 Go after a fly
30 Sicilian resort
31 Historic French town
32 Mod musical
33 Demands forcefully
35 Charged particle
38 Ibsen character
39 Vassal's land
41 Subversive group
42 Pitcher
44 Forgets
46 Roman statesman
49 British female novelist
50 Old language
51 Mariner's concerns
52 Athletic event
53 Tuscany river
54 Choir member
55 Traffic sign
59 Attention
60 Bikini part



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

M	O	N	E	S		C	A	B	S		S	A	I	D
A	L	I	V	E		A	R	A			P	D	O	E
S	L	E	E	T		R	O	L	E		P	O	E	T
C	A	N	N	O	N	B	A	L	L		P	R	A	Y
			N	E	O		A	L	A		I
P	R	E	S	I	D	E	N	T	I	A	L
R	E	C	K	O	N	S		T	R	O	O	P	I	N
O	N	C	E							N		I	C	E
W	E	E	D	O	L	L	Y		G	R	A	I	N	E	D
			A	R	I	E			R	A	N	G	E	R	S
B	A	N	A	N	A				A	S	T
A	R	A	B			G	R	E	Y	H	O	U	N	D	S
S	A	I	L			C	O	D	E			I	N	L	E	T
I	S	L	E			O	N	E	S			N	E	R	A
L	E	S	S			D	E	N	T	I	E	R

Weather

Today's weather
Variable cloudiness today and a few degrees warmer with highs in the upper 50s. Cloudy tonight with a chance of rain developing.

WMUA 91.1 FM

6-9am	Concepto Latino
9-noon	The Steve Diamond Show
12-3pm	Trip to What Next with Ed Berk
3-5:30pm	DR
5:30-6pm	Newswatch with Nick deRuiter and Brian Murphy
6-7pm	Focus — Ken Mosakowski
7-10pm	Women's Media Project
10-2am	Kari Njiiri — Pan Afrique
2-6	More Music

CABLE/VIDEO

Thursday Nov. 18
The Archieves Go On

10:30 - 11:30	Sun Ra
11:30 - 12:45	Third World Theater Series
12:45 - 1:30	Max Roach Quartet
1:30 - 2:00	Francis through the Looking Glass

EARTHFOODS MENU

Soy bean Stroganoff
Green Salad
Split pea Soup
Carob Brownies

Writing/Rhetoric Requirement

Undergraduates who have not taken a first level 'B' core course and have not been exempted should pre-register for English 190A for this spring. Anyone who has not taken the prerequisite Writing Program Placement Test should take it during counselling week:

November 16 8:00 p.m. Mahar 108
November 17 8:00 p.m. Bartlett 65
November 18 8:00 p.m. Hasbrouck 20

Upperclassmen needing a second level 'B' core course should pre-register for English 152. Freshmen who do not complete level I and upperclassmen who do not complete level II this year may find it necessary to take an equivalent course at another institution, at their own expense.

VALUABLE COUPONS

BREAKFAST SPECIAL — Reg. $2.55 With This Coupon C
2 EGGS, 2 PANCAKES, 2 STRIPS BACON, 2 LINKS SAUSAGE
2 For $3.25
Please present coupon when ordering. Coupon Expires Nov. 22, 1982
SERVED ALL DAY ANYTIME

DELI-MELT — Reg. $2.85 With this coupon C
Oversized 6 oz. Chopped Beef With Sauteed Onions, Melted Zesty Cheddar Cheese On Grilled Pumpernickel Served with French Fries
2 For $4.49
Please present coupon when ordering. Coupon Expires Nov. 22, 1982
SERVED 11 A.M.-10 P.M.

FISH DINNER — Reg. $3.25 With This Coupon C
Our Famous Batter-Dipped Fillets English Style — Served with French Fries, or Baked Potato, Cole Slaw, Roll & Butter
2 For $4.95
Please present coupon when ordering. Coupon Expires Nov. 22, 1982
SERVED 11 A.M.-10 P.M.

Source Coffee to Go Discounts 2.5 p.m. 20% All other times 15% Drinks not apply to specials

James H. McManus eating place
CAMPUS SHOPPING PLAZA
RTE. 9, HADLEY, 256-6889
STOP & SHOP

HOURS: OPEN 24 HOURS In & Sat. Sun. thru Thurs. 7 a.m. 3 p.m.

NEED HELP WITH YOUR STUDENT LOAN?

If you've attended college on a Guaranteed Student Loan or a National Direct Student Loan made after October 1, 1975, consider spending a couple of years in the Army.

If you train for certain specialties, the government will release you from 1/3 of your indebtedness (or $1,500, whichever is greater) for each year of active duty.

Obviously, a three-year enlistment cancels 100% of your debt. But if you sign up for the Army's exclusive two-year enlistment option, we'll still cancel 2/3 of your debt.

Plus, you may be eligible for generous educational incentives.

To find out how to serve your country and get out of debt, call the number below.

In Northampton call 584-2157

In other areas consult the Yellow Pages under "Recruiting"

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Chancellor's Lecture Series

Paul E. Cade

"What Electrons Are Really Doing in Molecules: A Pedestrian View"

Thursday, November 18, 1982 at 8 p.m.
Campus Center Auditorium
University of Massachusetts at Amherst

FALL GRADS

INDEX (yearbook) PORTRAITS
SAVE 60%
on Sitting Fee
Now Only $2.00

LAST DAYS - SO HURRY

C.C. 178
Wed. 1 - 8, Thurs. 9 - 5
Fri. 9 - 5
or call 5-2874

The unfortunate season of Normand Leveille

By GEORGE MARTINS
Collegian Staff

It is Sunday night, October 24th. I head out towards the library in an attempt to salvage a lost weekend, but wait; how can I go studying without finding out how the Bruins did last night.

I turn on the local Springfield station. The sports report is just coming on. Finally, after all the boxing and local high school football results are given, the talk turns to hockey.

My face saddens, and I throw my notebook across the room. I have lost control of my emotions, and it's not because the Bruins have lost.

It is now Thursday, November 18. Normand Leveille is still unconscious and in poor condition in a Vancouver hospital as the result of a brain hemorrhage that he suffered during a game on Saturday October 23rd, against the Vancouver Canucks.

Normand Leveille is 19 years old. He is younger than I am. He had only been on the sports scene in Boston for one year, yet the impact of this tragedy has hit me harder than any of the other numerous Boston sports tragedies.

Normand Leveille was just beginning to live his life, he was ready to take the hockey world by storm, he had potential greatness. This makes one put sports in perspective. No mere win or loss can ever have as great an emotional impact as a tragedy of this nature.

"Why Normie, there are all those weirdos out there, Normie never hurt anyone," said Boston captain Wayne Cashman.

Norm Leveille came to the Boston Bruins at the start of last season. He was an 18 year old just out of Quebec junior hockey. He didn't know one word of English.

Assistant coach Jean Ratelle became Normand's second father. Normand was dealing with a situation that many people took for granted, including myself.

I'd find myself screaming when he'd make a great rush down ice and shoot the puck five feet over the net. But I wasn't thinking. I was simply doing what all sports fans do, I was depersonalizing the athelete. I was putting the athelete on a pedestal, a gladiator without personality or normal human traits. A semi-godlike individual who exists solely to glorify or hate.

Normand Leveile was an 18 year old hockey player playing in a foreign country in which he couldn't speak the language. I put myself in his position and I begin to understand.

Normand Leveille was climbing his obstacles. He had returned this year, after a knee operation last season, in perfect condition. He had taken a course in English over the summer and was able to conduct interviews. He also was able to fraternise with his teamates, something that he couldn't do last season. He had become part of the Boston Bruins family.

I look to the past. It is last season. An early game in Quebec. The Bruins are up 2-1 late in the first period. They want to establish a two goal lead so they can go into their checking game. Leveille breaks down the right wing and collects a pass from Barry Pederson. He beats one defenseman then faces veteran Moose Dupont at the blue line. He cuts toward center ice then slashes back along the boards. Dupont tries to line him up for a body check but before he makes his move, Norm is past him and bearing in on the goalie. A forehand shot to the far corner easily beats the Quebec goalie and Boston has their two goal lead.

It is this season, October 16. Edmonton's big all-star defenseman Paul Coffey sees Normand breaking through center ice. Coffey lines Normand up for a vicious open ice check. Result? Norm skates away with the puck. Coffey goes sprawling to the ice.

The week before Boston beat Vancouver 2-1 at the Garden. Normand Leveille scored both Boston goals and afterwards conducted his first postgame interview without an interpreter.

Norm Leveille gave me many fond memories. He endeared himself to me and all Bruins fans with his aggressive style of play. He always gave 110 percent. There is no justice here.

Norm Leveille will never play hockey again but he will always be remembered. He exemplified the spirit that is the Boston Bruins.

★ Cavanaugh

Continued from page 24

ratification votes next Tuesday, after they have played their first poststrike games Sunday.

"That's how stupid it is. You've got to play a game and then vote on it. The players are going to get a check, they'll like it," he said.

NEW POLITICS
MASS FAIR SHARE
a statewide citizen's action organization

Has full and part time positions available to do fundraising, outreach, and to develop a citizen's lobby that can shape and influence the political and economic decisions in this state.
Hours are 2-10 pm; pay $175-225/week
call 586-8713
will train, college credits available
11 am - 1 pm Mon-Fri

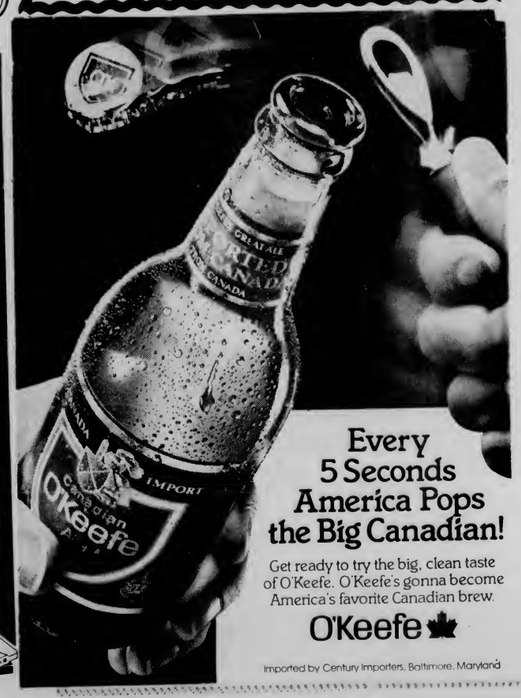
THE HOT DOG KING Frankies FAMILY RESTAURANTS

Weekend Special
Saturday & Sunday

50¢ for any Foot Long Hot Dogs
50¢ for any Hamburg (2½ oz.)
also Tacos, Potato Skins, Grinders, Seafood

430 Russell St., (Rte. 9)
Hadley, Mass. 256-0856
Open 11-11 Weekdays and 11-12 Weekends

BLUE WALL
CAMPUS CENTER AT UMASS
FRI. NOV. 19th
BERLIN AIRLIFT
Meet them at UNION RECORDS, Friday at 4:30pm
See them LIVE Friday Night!



Every 5 Seconds America Pops the Big Canadian!

Get ready to try the big, clean taste of O'Keefe. O'Keefe's gonna become America's favorite Canadian brew.

O'Keefe

Imported by Century Importers, Baltimore, Maryland

We're Still Celebrating With A
3rd BIG WEEK OF
GRAND REOPENING
SPECIALS
FOR THANKSGIVING
AT OUR NORTHAMPTON
Food Emporium

WE CHALLENGE YOU TO CHECK OUR TURKEY PRICES
We Will Have Your Favorite Bird... Fresh, Frozen, Butterball, Land O Lakes and More!
"We will not be knowingly undersold."

Sale starts
Monday, Nov. 15 thru
Saturday, Nov. 20, 1982 in Northampton, Southampton and Hadley

Not More Than 30% Fat, Approx. 3-lb Pkg.
Fresh Ground Beef
99¢ lb

5-Pound Bag, Fresh
Idaho Baking Potatoes
78¢

USDA Choice Beef Loin Shelled
New York Sirloin Steak
USDA CHOICE
1.79 lb

☐SAVE 70¢, All Natural, All Flavors
Breyers Ice Cream
1.79 Half Gallon

☐SAVE 90¢, Half Gallon
Hood Egg Nog
1.69

☐SAVE 60¢, Strictly Fresh
2½ Dozen Small Eggs
99¢

☐SAVE 30¢, All Varieties, 18½ oz Pkg
Betty Crocker Cake Mix
59¢

☐SAVE 30¢, All Flavors, Quart Btls.
Cott Mixers
2 For 79¢

☐SAVE 60¢, Big 'Y'
Orange Juice
Half Gallon Carton
79¢

☐SAVE 40¢, 5-Pound Bag
Gold Medal Flour
Regular or Unbleached
68¢

☐SAVE 50¢, Big 'Y' Regular or Ripple
"Pounder" Potato Chips
NEW! Full Pound Bag
99¢

☐SAVE $1.89, 12-Pak Cans
Green Giant Vegetables
12 oz Niblets Corn, 16 oz Peas, Corn or Green Beans
3.99 Per 12-Pak

☐SAVE 58¢, 25-Ft. Roll
Reynolds Wrap
Aluminum Foil
2 For $1

☐SAVE 40¢, Quart Jar
Cains Mayonnaise
1.29

☐SAVE 22¢, Cream of Mushroom, 10¾ oz.
Campbell's Soup
3 For 89¢

Kodak Film
110-24, 126-24 or 135-24
2.29

☐SAVE 70¢, Quart Jar
Vlasic Pickles
Sweet Mixed
99¢

☐SAVE 14¢, Ocean Spray 16 oz Can Cranberry Sauce
Whole or Jellied
49¢

PLUS THE ADDED VALUE OF THESE BIG 'Y' EXTRA SAVING SPECIALS!

NEW IMPROVED
Savings Certificates™
ONLY AT BIG 'Y'

10% OFF
Selected Pre-Priced
Bakery Items
CHECK IT OUT AT BIG 'Y'

Gift Certificates
Available In Any Denomination
BIG 'Y' HAS HOLIDAY SPIRIT!

Fresh Fruit Baskets
Available in a variety of Sizes and Shapes. Visit your local Big 'Y' for full details and descriptions and Check Out Our FRESH VEGETABLE PLATTERS

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday - Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10 % • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?

Rackadisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

AUTO FOR SALE

1973 Camero - very good mechanical condition. Needs some body work. $1000. Phone 413-773-3233 or 253-3497.

1973 Merc Montego want to sell ASAP BO 549-4672

1974 Pinto Runabout, standard, 4 cyl., mechanically excellent (72M miles) $820/BO Bob 546-4021

BELLYDANCING!!

Bellydancing for all occasions. Parties, socials, "Bellygrams" etc. Call Thereza 253-7822

BROWNIEGRAMS

Three flavors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

CHRISTMAS MONEY!

Bring your baseball cards from home! We buy baseball cards and comic books (Marvel & Richie Rich only; must have covers) Call 253-2515

DELTA UPSILON

UNIVERSITY MEN - Come and see for yourself the benefits of fraternity living in an exciting - house. Find out if you belong in this active social environment. Tonight 9:00-11:00 P.M. 778 N. Pleasant St. (four houses past Grad Tower) Call 549-0862 for rides, info.

DRYCLEANING

Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Way. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ENTERTAINMENT

For the best professional DJ with a superior sound system at the cheapest rate call Peter 546-7504

Professional DJs for less $99 Special! Dorms, Greeks, Formals. Paul 549-4405

POLODROID DJ's - Music for the sound mind - Lights, Sound, Price - we beat everybody Pat or John 253-2957

FOR RENT

Sensory Isolation Tank Available For Rental: 3 floats $35, 1 $15 413-737-6676

One bedrom available in two bedroom Southwood townhouse. Available Jan. 1 253-3497

Two bedroom apartment, Shutesbury. 256-6293 after six

3 bedroom apt., Gilreath manor. $550/mo. starting January 549-1377

STOWE SKICONDO avail. January/February fully furnished, TV, wood stove, $350/300 private rooms 256-8017

Rolling Green: 2 bdrms in 4 bdrm apt avail. Jan 1. Rent incl. all utilities on bus rte. Call anytime 256-8261

FOR SALE

GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972

Frye Boots size 7 546-6092 Bari

Futon bedframes, maple and oak. Reasonable. 527-2141

Two tickets for sold-out Liza Minnelli Concert on Nov. 27 at Worcester Centrum call 6-5387 evenings

Dremel Jewelry/Hobby Kit - drill, control pedal, attachments with jewelry accessories, stones, silver call Barb 549-0505

Good For silberg tickets Dec 1 Hartford call 549-5921

Nordica Ski Boots mens size 9½ originally $130 asking $80. 3 seasons new. 6-8744

Black leather jacket and vest size 40 BO Paul 6-5878

FOUND

Calico Cat (white, black & orange). Near Student Union, 11/7. Call Paul at 546-9805

A women's jacket has been turned in to the UMass Arts Council. Found on the 4th floor of Herter. Call 5-0202

A certain sum of money on November 15. If yours, tell me sum, denomination of bill(s), and where lost. Box 1166, Hampshire College

Found: Bicycle spiral chain for locking bike Lost last week by woman bikerider? Mike 549-0477

GABRIEL AT ORPHEUM

Quality cassette recordings of entire 11/12 concert for info call Mike 546-8095

GAY ALLIANCE

Notice! The Counselling Collective is moving soon! To 106 CC Same phone (545-2645)! Same hours!

HELP WANTED

Needed part time worker, driver license, no selling. 247-5801

Distribution opportunities Texas Instruments - home computer - ground floor multi level marketing - money making opportunities - no risk, no inventory investments. Demonstration Tues 11/23 7:30 CC Rm 911 call Grace or Paul after 5 665-2494

HONESTY WAS APPRECIATED

Whoever found my Sony Walkman and turned it in to Grad Research Library - a million thanks!

LEGAL ASSISTANT INTERNSHIPS

The Legal Services Office has eight positions available for full-time legal assistant interns for Spring 1983 semester. Up to 15 credits may be received from academic departments. Aid attorneys at LSO with client interviewing, investigations, legal research, negotiations, giving advice and referrals, preparation of court forms, attendance at court hearings, and participation in administrative hearings and federal litigation. Maintain continuing caseload under attorney supervision. For advice on arranging an internship and credit, contact Office of Internships, Curry Hicks Building. For further information, contact LSO, 922 Campus Center. Applications due Friday, November 19, at Office of Internships. Writing sample required

LESBIAN AND GAY

Are you Gay? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2645 or drop in SU406F

LOST

MINOLTA POCKET INSTAMATIC CAMERA Saturday nite october 31 at 56 Townehouse. PICTURES and CAMERA have great sentimental value. Please call 549-1215 no questions asked. Greatly appreciated! REWARD!!!!!

Gold name bracelet at the Pub 11/10. Very important. Large reward. Susan 6-7385

Black Binder containing COINS manual and notes. If found please call Mitch 256-6712

Flute silver reward $75 call Korky 253-3484 till midnight

Annie female tiger cat with white paws. Frequently roams campus. Last seen 11/6. Muchly missed. 549-6495

PERSONALS

Former Demolay - If you are at UMass contact Bill at 546-6853 possibility of forming a chapter or priory

To Pamela Ann ich lieben dich

Yo Lebeth! Hoppin yo birfday is a "bad" one yo da bes roomate in de University of Massachusetts (situated in Amherst) yo roommate with de L.W.A.

Movie - Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid - Friday Nov. 19, Engineering East Auditorium - 7, 9, 11 p.m. - $1.50

Bobby - I'll be yours forever! All my Love, Lisa.

Lisa! Happy 18th Birthday!! Love MB

Lesbian/Gay Dance Fri Nov 19 9-2 10th floor CC $2 admission call the PGA at 5-0154 for more info

Killington Ski Trip December 4 limited vacancy for info call Mike 6-6372 by Friday

Jacqueline Bisset loves him, so will you! Deep prodeucer Stan Waterman Nov 22, 8:00 pm, SUB

Sharks, whales and the deep blue world filmed by Stan Waterman. Come see Nov. 22, 8:00 p.m., SUB

Irmit - You're totally boogey! The Boys

People's Gay Alliance and Lesbian Union speaker's bureau training session on 22 Nov. for info call 5-0154

N-- Sorry about all the quarters spent & time wasted. Thanx for still loving me even tho' I have fleas? -- Oreo

Paul, here's the public apology (Ha,ha)
Jenny

FFA Hayride, Friday 11/19, $2.50 per person. Meet at Stockbridge Hall at 7:00 p.m.

PRESTONE

Happy B-Day. I didn't forget. Adios mi Amigo. Love Jasper.

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Dissertations, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

RELIGION

St. Jude - Oh Holy St. Jude, apostle and martyr, Great in virtue and rich in wisdom, near kinsman of Jesus Christ, Faithful intercessor of all who invoke your special Patronage in time of need, to you I have recourse from the depth of my heart and humbly beg to whom God has given such great Power to come to my assistance. Help me in my present urgent petition. In return I promise to make your name known and cause you to be invoked. Say 3 Our Fathers, 3 Hail marys and Glorias. This novena must be said on 9 consecutive days. This has not been known to fail.

RIDE WANTED

Rids needed to Maryland, DC, or Virginia Thanksgiving time. Please! Claudia 546-7240

Ride needed to northern Florida after finals. Call Diane ASAP 546-5506

To Syracuse for Thanksgiving will share expenses call Karen 6-9252

ROOM WANTED

Single room and/or willing to share a room for Jan & Spring semester. Must be close to campus & on bus route. Preferably Townehouse or Brandywine. Call 549-5990 Mike keep trying

2 female students looking for room(s) in house for spring semester plus. Bus route. Non smokers. Lynn or Caro 545-0162

ROOMMATE WANTED

Belchertown coop house. Two rooms $90.00 tel 323-6835

2 nonsmoking femeles wanted to share 1 bedroom in Puffton Village. Starting Jan. 1 549-4450

Roommate needed to share a room in two Bedroom Townehouse apartment for Spring Semester Call 549-5985

SERVICES

Writing assistence. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729

Need help with typing fast service provided: Dissertations, etc. Double-spaced $1.75 per page Call 323-4054

BIRTH CHART READINGS learn astrology through your sign - planet positions at birth. Contact Julie at 253-7813 with your exact time of birth.

Visa, Mastercard. No credit check. No gimmicks. Legal. Send SASE for information. Box 866, Greenfield, MA 01302

STOLEN

Navy blue flight jacket w/Trial Court patch on lower right hand pocket, key chain w/name PALANI please return or if seen call 6-5745 reward

Tan corduroy CB jacket and bookbag Reward Bob Collins 549-2775

SUGARBUSH VT

Beautiful ski house needs roommates during intersession. Ski to and from the mountain. First come, first serve. Call Al 253-9409

TO SUBLET

Spring semester, a double bedroom in 6 bedroom house, living room, dining room, laundry and kitchen facilities; close to campus, on bus route. 110 +, Call Gail or Maggie 549-5586

Room available for spring semester beginning Jan 1 in four bedroom house-apartment on centrally located Linciln Ave. Easy-going household. Modern conveniences. Rent includes heat. For more information call Diane at 549-6925 or at the Collegian news department 545-3500

TO THE GIRL WITH THE SENSITIVE ELBOWS

Sat night was fun. Let's do it again sometime. By the way, how's your memory?

TRAVEL

Drive my car to Florida. I'll pay for gas call Betsy 545-0046

WANTED

COMPUTER! Need CRT & phone adapter for spring sem. 546-7149, Tim, late evenings

Acoustic Guitarist to write music for original poetry call Mike 253-2439

WANTED TO BUY

Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for an apartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093

Looking for an apartment in North Amherst starting January 1. Patricia 549-1414 evenings

Room or apartment wanted for two females on bus route for spring semester call 546-9689 anytime

Grad student looking for apartment to share or room to rent starting Jan 1 call 546-8175 anytime

Two people looking for apartment starting Jan and spring semester call Angel after 5:00 PM 549-1307 or 546-1463

1 female looking for own room in apt in Amherst vicinity starting Jan call 253-2496

3 girls seek 2 or 3 bedroom apt in Amherst vicinity call 549-6850

WOMEN NEEDED

Women needed to participate in a study on premenstrual mood changes at UMass call 545-1559, M-F, 9-5, Nov 15-24

the rusty nail Inn presents

Thurs. Nov. 18
RCA Recording Artist
STEEL BREEZE
with their #1 single
"You Don't Want me Anymore"
(one night only)

Fri. Nov. 19th
JUSTIN

Sat. Nov. 20
Gil Scott Herron

Rt. 47, Sunderland, MA 665-4937

You must be 18 to enter.

Sports

MORE SPORTS ON PAGE 21

Shortened season result of NFL strike

By RUSS WHINNEM
Collegian Correspondent

The cry has gone out. The boys are back to play some ball. With a tentative agreement signed yesterday between Jack Donlan's owners and Ed Garvey's players which calls for a nine game season, the N.F.L. is scheduled to start playing Sunday.

Of course, there is still the question of exactly how much interest is left in finishing the season. Oh sure, it'll be something to flip on the tube during Sunday afternoons and get a pool up for on Monday nights, but let's face it, the excitement has dwindled.

It's hoop season now and while the N.F.L. would normally be holding interest with the battle for the playoff berths around this time of year, now they'll be practically starting from scratch.

Good thing they decided not to extend the season past January, as was earlier thought. Not too many people, fans or players, would have wanted that.

This might have explained some of the edginess on the part of five teams to accept an owners proposal last week. Green Bay superstar John Jefferson, for one, had already that there would be no way he'd be playing football during the icey Wisconsin winter months.

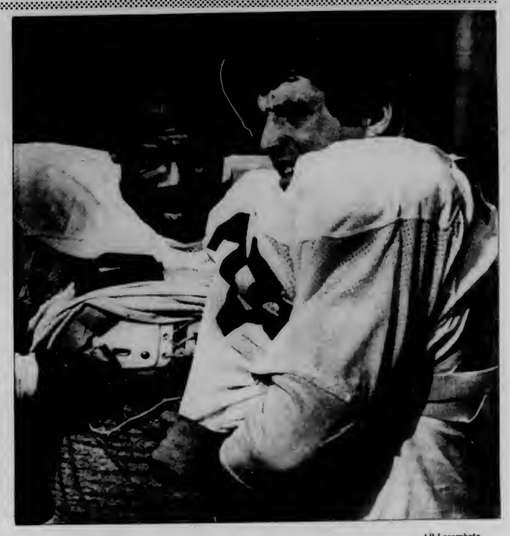
The latest gem from the mouth of union president Gene Upshaw came last week when Upshaw said that players were free to their opinions about the strike.

Just before the strike had begun, long ago, big Gene had responded to Denver quarterback Craig Morton's criticisms of the players demands by saying that Morton's remarks would only serve as incentive when he faced the QB on the playing field.

That's mighty democratic, don't you think?

The final kick in the pants for the N.F.L. would be if players actually began jumping to the newly formed United States Football League. You know that the U.S.F.L. is just drooling over that possibility.

Tampa Bay QB Doug Williams had been reportedly ready to make the jump when his current contract runs out in February. Ah, but it won't happen you say. Not with the settlement being reached. Don't be too surprised though. If some players feel the settlement won't stick and another strike is possible, maybe next year, they might test U.S.F.L. waters.



AP Laserphoto

Patriots' Robert Weathers, left, and Mark van Eeghen prepare for practice yesterday in preparation for Sunday's game with the Browns.

Pats QB blasts settlement

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — New England quarterback Matt Cavanaugh lashed out yesterday at the tentative agreement to end the National Football League players' strike, saying the players got "absolutely nothing."

He claimed that the contract "stinks," the NFL Players' Association "crumbled," and the 57-day strike was a waste of time. But he predicted the agreement would be approved by a majority of the league's players.

"I'm sure it will pass. It got this far," the Patriots quarterback said. "I'll vote no, whatever good that's going to do. I'm sure we'll get a lot of no votes on this team, but I think the thing's over with."

Cavanaugh also criticized plans for the Patriots and other teams to take their

Continued on page 21

Men's Basket ball: The men in the backcourt

Russell leads the group

By JIM FLOYD
Collegian Staff

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a five part series previewing the men's basketball team.

Fast and lunky are two words that come to mind immediately when getting ready to talk about the various backcourt dues that the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team has to offer on the hardwood this season.

Returning to the Minutemen for his second year of UMass hoop is Donald Russell. The 6'1" Mt. Vernon, New York native set a freshman scoring record last year as he led the team in scoring with a 16.4 points per game average.

On top of leading the squad in point production, Russell also led UMass in assists, minutes played and free throw percentage. He was selected as the Most Valuable Player of the Providence InBank Classic and to the All-Rookie Team of the Eastern 8.

"Donald is a game player," said head coach Tom McLaughlin. "He wants to win so much. I don't think he'll score as much this year though, he won't have to because the players around him have gotten better."

Even so, look for Russell to be the floor leader again this year. He likes to have the ball in his hands when the game is on the line and, just as importantly, so does the team.

Exactly who will be joining Russell in a starting backcourt role is still up in the air, mainly due to the consistent playing of several other players.

The new guard in town may be A.J. Wynder. Wynder is quick enough to blast by just about anyone on the court and has exceptional ballhandling skills. According to McLaughlin, he is also a very good student of the game.

"A.J. has been just great to coach because he's eager to learn and he has natural ability," said McLaughlin. "He can jump and shoot and run and has great quickness. He's gonna be good."

What will probably be the question on Wynder is his youth. If he should come along the way Russell came along last year, then the UMass racehorses will be very hard to catch.

Before Wynder decides what he's going to do in a starting role, he'll have to contend with an improved veteran from last year, sophomore guard Ron Young.

Young started in 20 games last year and finished the season with a 5.9 points per game contest. This figure is a misleading one though because Young, who is a very good outside shooter, had his troubles finding the range during games last year. A year under his belt could produce a more composed Ron Young and a more composed Ron Young could produce more points.

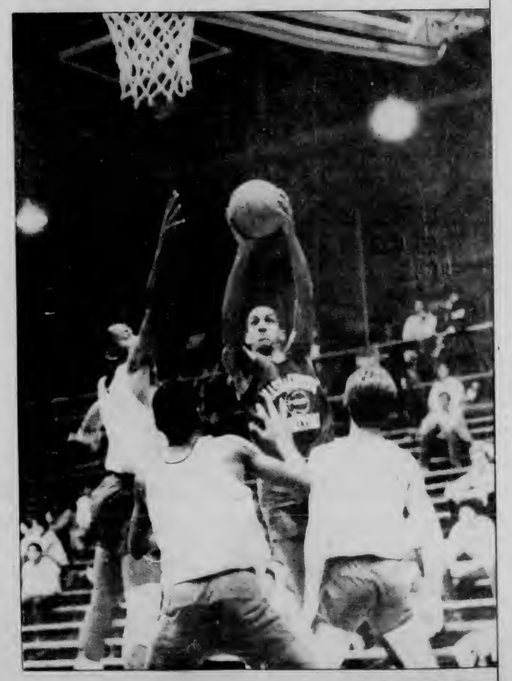
On top of his shooting ability, Young is also the best defensive guard on the team, according to McLaughlin.

Another returning player who bears watching is junior Craig Smith. Smith is actually more of a swingman than a guard because, although he is 6'4" he is the best leaper on the team. Smith is another athlete who, with an extra year under his belt, will be looked upon to play with more confidence and, should he get more than a step on his man while driving to the basket watch out. He has the natural jumping ability that make him a walking highlight film.

Freshman Darrly Carter, who by now is probably tired of having the press remind everyone that he is New York Knicks player Reggie Carter's brother, has, according to McLaughlin, been playing extremely well and should see a lot of action.

The lone senior on the team is Ron Washington. Washington, who captained the squad in his sophomore year, will predominantly play a substitute role as will sophomore Hal Shaw, the lone walk on the team.

Along with an added amount of speed, the backcourt will also enjoy what has become the new key word for Minuteman basketball, depth.



Collegian photo by Peter Marks

A.J. Wynder drives for two in last night's inter-squad scrimmage at the Cage. Ron Young (reaching for the ball) defends on the play .

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian

Volume CXII, Issue 52 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Friday, November 19, 1982

Collegian photo by Jim Powers

Kevin Eldracher, a Walpole resident visiting the University of Massachusetts, shoots a basketball through a tunnel of posts and into a rim at the courts of the Southwest Residential College.

Owners to close the store as Gnomon talks failed

By DAVE LINTON
Collegian Staff

The owners of the Gnomon Copy store on North Pleasant Street in Amherst have decided to move to a franchise outside of the town after negotiations failed Tuesday, leaving both sides in the dispute blaming one another.

The Gnomon Copy store will remain open as John Sytek, vice-president of the Gnomon Copy store chain, takes over its ownership, Catherine Iannacchino, co-owner of the store said yesterday.

Iannacchino and Roland Wetherbee bought the Amherst franchise Aug. 13 in the midst of labor problems which had been ongoing with the corporation for the past year. The striking employees demanded she accept "a package deal" that Iannacchino said left her with no choice but to declare an impasse and end negotiations.

Mary-Erin Crook, a striking employee, said the owners of the store refused to negotiate after only "30 seconds" into the meeting. She said the owners did not want to reach a settlement because they did not ask any questions about the proposal the strikers had.

Innacchino said she and her husband, Wetherbee, are still looking "very hard" for another Gnomon Copy franchise in another location. She said she would be willing to manage the Amherst store for Sytek until she finds another store.

Tobi Saisa, a striking employee, said the strikers will file more charges with the National Labor Relations Board in addition to the charges that were filed Nov. 10. He said the strikers are charging the owners with failing to negotiate and discrimination against union employees.

"We're going to contact the corporation and demand that they negotiate immediately. If Gnomon doesn't negotiate immediately, we will picket other stores," Saisa said. He said the strikers will put up leaflets at other Gnomon stores, none of which are unionized.

"We'll get supporters in other communities," he said.

"From the moment the franchise was sold, they had no intention of reaching an agreement. The whole past three months has been a ploy to bust the union," Saisa said. "Their philosophical commitment to union busting is much stronger than their commitment to make money."

"It's not possible that someone could put themselves in bankruptcy deliberately," Iannacchino said.

Iannacchino said she has lost $15,000 in the month of October and the whole affair has left her very hurt.

"It's not a great way to start your first business," she said.

The employees went on strike Sept. 8 after owners refused to give them a 50 cent per hour wage increase. The striking employees demanded the wage increase because they said they had not had a raise in 20 months. The owners of the store said they could not negotiate immediately because they had to "get their feet wet" and because Wetherbee's father died in late August.

After the employees went on strike, the owners of the store hired new employees to keep the store open. The corporation had been subsidizing the business lost because of the boycott with work sent from other Gnomon Copy stores. However, the store last week began closing four hours earlier.

Negotiations never reached any major agreements during the nine negotiation sessions in the past three months. A major stumbling block was a plan by the owners to base wages on employee productivity and the union's efforts to modify the plan.

Faculty Senate approves plan to reign in stray dogs

By RITA MURPHY
Collegian Staff

Responding to a concern expressed by the University of Massachusetts community, the UMass Faculty Senate yesterday approved a leash policy for controlling pets on campus.

The policy, designed to be consistent with the town of Amherst's leash law, requires "that dogs must be on a leash or otherwise within the control of owners at all times when they are on campus."

Barking dogs causing a public nuisance will be removed from the campus as a result of the policy.

Robert Levin, chairperson of the council submitting the proposal, said in the past when there has been a problem with dogs on campus, the University has had to call the Amherst Town Hall and ask for the dog officer to come to campus. Because of the frequency of these calls, Levin said a leash policy was needed.

According to the policy, any dogs "killing or maiming animals will be brought to the animal/dog pound."

"A while ago, a flock of University sheep were attacked. Seven were maimed and one died," Levin said.

Jack Tager, a senator from the History department, said the problem of dogs on campus has reached the classrooms. "I have to deal with dogs in my classrooms. I have had to step over them. They have left unpleasant things on the floor. I would just like to have dogs eliminated from classrooms," he said.

Levin said the policy will create a way for faculty members to be able to call the University to pick up dogs in their classrooms.

The policy also calls for the appointment of a dog officer under the supervision of the University Public Safety Department who will enforce the regulations outlined in the policy.

The final part of the policy calls for the "University administration to distribute the leash policy and other regulations concerning pets to the entire University community each semester."

Collegian photo by Drew Ogier

A dog prowls his usual habitat on the steps of the Campus Center.

World and national news

AP Laserphoto

The National Conference of Catholic Bishops meets in Washington yesterday to discuss their stance on arms control and hear calls for a nuclear freeze endorsement. The bishops expressed support for a condemnation of nuclear warfare and aspects of U.S. strategic policy relating to it, but tabled to a future meeting final adoption of a position paper on the subject.

Nuclear war condemned by bishops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite late appeals from the White House, Roman Catholic bishops voiced strong support yesterday for a sweeping condemnation of nuclear warfare, including an assault on key aspects of U.S. strategic policy. That pointed the nation's largest Christian body to the forefront of the anti-nuclear movement.

However, the National Conference of Catholic Bishops deferred final adoption of the document, a prospective teaching letter, until further refinements are made at a special meeting next May.

The upsurge of support came at a pivotal closing session of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops in the face of overt White House opposition. A procession of speakers took the floor to back the gist of the document.

Archbishop John R. Roach of St. Paul-Minneapolis, the conference president, said the mood of the bishops showed "general endorsement of the direction" taken in the draft pastoral letter.

Asked at a news conference if objections dispatched to the meeting by President Reagan and top administration officials would influence further modifications to be made in the document, he said:

"They will be taken very seriously, although we were aware of much of the material and had received it before."

However, Roach said the administration's complaint that the bishops' document ignored Reagan's overtures to negotiate nuclear arms reductions seemed a "valid point" and added:

"Perhaps our document would be enriched somewhat if it referred to such efforts by this administration and previous administrations."

However, he said he saw no inclination to drop the document's call for a nuclear freeze, criticized by the White House as damaging the U.S. negotating position.

"I reject the idea that a freeze would undermine administration efforts," Roach said.

GOP leaders see doubtful future for Reagan tax plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican congressional leaders informed President Reagan yesterday that he simply does not have the votes to advance the last phase of his income tax cut to January.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker and House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel delivered that message — along with some other unpleasant news — in their first conference with the president since the Nov. 2 election.

"Well, I just said we don't have the votes," Michel told reporters outside the White House after the 45-minute meeting. "It wouldn't be an easy task to get done."

Reagan is considering asking Congress to push up the date of the tax cut — the third installment of his 25-percent income tax reduction over three years — as a way to stimulate the economy.

Under that proposal the 5 percent cut in tax rates due Jan. 1, 1984, and the second 10 percent reduction in the amount of tax withheld from worker paychecks, due next July 1, would instead take effect Jan. 1, 1983. The net effect would be a 15 percent cut in tax rates in 1983, rather than 10 percent, and the full reduction would be felt in paychecks at the start of the year.

That change also would increase a looming record deficit, already projected at upwards of $170 billion, by about $15 billion, and the Republican leaders said they feared it would have the effect of increasing interest rates as well.

The leaders also predicted it would be difficult to make further cuts in non-defense spending, despite Reagan's assertion in New Orleans on Tuesday that that is precisely where he intended to cut.

"I think we've cut just about as much as we can cut," Baker said. "We've wrung a lot out of the non-defense side. Now we are going to have to take a look at the defense side."

He said several billion dollars could be shaved from defense spending because of the drop in inflation over the past year, but added it would be dangerous to make "massive cuts" in the defense budget.

Baker said he believed Reagan would propose that the lame-duck session of Congress pass a jobs program to repair highways and bridges financed by a five-cent-a-gallon increase in gasoline taxes.

Dukakis vows no cuts in human services area

BOSTON — Gov.-Elect Michael S. Dukakis yesterday attacked the "devastating impact of "Reaganomics" on human services and promised to try not to balance the state budget at the cost of those programs.

Dukakis had angered advocates when he ordered welfare cuts during a financial crisis in his first administration.

Dukakis told the Massachusetts Council of Human Service Providers he doesn't believe the state faces a financial crisis similar to 1975.

"I will do my very best," he said, "not to try to balance the state budget at the expense of important human service programs."

Dukakis endorsed as sensible its platform for improving the human service system, including the state paying its bills on time to creating a human service advisory council to the governor.

"The devastating impact of Reaganomics make it more important than ever that our state government be sensitive to human needs," he told an audience that council officials estimated at 600.

Fresh from a trip to Washington, he said there is a changed mood there, and he predicted, "Reaganomics is, if not dead, dying."

Local professor urges Congress to alter law

WASHINGTON — The chair recognizes Indiana's senior senator, the gentleman from New York.

According to Amherst College historian Henry Steele Commager, the Constitution should be altered so that could happen. "Every congressman," he told Congress yesterday, "should represent the whole people of the United States, not just particular segments."

And that, he said, means senators and perhaps representatives should be allowed to serve from states other than those in which they live.

Commager's idea was advanced in written testimony to the Joint Economic Committee, which is hearing proposals for streamlining the government.

The Constitution requires that both senators and representatives be inhabitants of the states in which they are chosen.

Commager said the reason is that "in an era where distances were immense, travel onerous, and information inadequate, it was well that the congressman should reside in the district which elected him."

But "That logic is no longer valid," he said.

Digest

by the Associated Press

Effects of alcohol seen in new light by students

WORCESTER — The drinks were on the house at Assumption College as students recited tongue-twisters, walked a white line and caught tennis balls to demonstrate the effects of too much alcohol.

The experiment was "a way of teaching students about alcoholic consumption without preaching at them," Brother Robert Francis Beaulac, director of the Roman Catholic college's infirmary, said yesterday.

Nearly 80 people jammed the college's pub Wednesday night to watch 14 college juniors drink and be tested.

The students were divided into two groups. Half consumed one drink an hour, or about as much as a normal person can have and remain fairly sober. The rest drank as much as they wanted.

Every hour, the drinkers were tested by State Police Cpl. William W. Mann, who measured the alcohol level in their blood.

The drinkers also completed six other tests hourly: walking a white line with their hands held at shoulder level, reading tongue-twisters over a public-address system, catching a tennis ball on cue, remembering a four digit number and reciting it backwards, testing handwriting by writing "Without a doubt I can definitely drink and drive" and making a trip through a computer-game simulation of night driving.

Educator has option for public school financing

WEST BOYLSTON — Conceding his ideas sound "a little wacky," an MIT professor suggested yesterday that public schools tap their alumni for donations, cut classes to four days a week and put teachers to work educating adults to raise money lost to revenue cuts.

"Why shouldn't you do what all other institutions do to raise money over and above tuition?," Lawrence E. Susskind, director of Project Impact, told educators at the Citizen Resource Center here. "Just as colleges have the Joe Smith Athletic Center, so could high schools."

He suggested school systems form non-profit organizations to collect tax-deductible contributions.

AP Laserphoto

Students at St. Luke's Episcopal School in Memphis, Tenn. yesterday released 200 helium-filled balloons in observance of the American Cancer Society's sixth annual "Great American Smokeout" campaign. Attached to each balloon was a pledge card encouraging smokers to kick their cigarette habits.

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Paul A. Basken
Copy Editor	Bill Wall
Layout Technician	Brad Eden
Assistant Photo Technician	Jim Powers
Graphics Technician	Sam Levitt
Composition	Laura Shanahan, Susanne Erickson, Donna Maurice, Donna Estabrooks, Sue Koczela, Karen Fredey, Marge Hochman, Scott Stockwell, Adrianne Dufour, Lynn Eisenberg, Terri Cooper, Gail Tanzer

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $25 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

Collegian photo by Peter Marks

Crystallized frost on a windshield and a cup of hot cofee are testimony to a cold morning yesterday in Amherst, and a forewarning of days to soon follow it.

Attorney denies trust violations

By MARK J. WELCH
Collegian Staff

The attorney for the University of Massachusetts Building Authority yesterday denied any illegal actions by that agency following charges made the previous evening by the president of the Student Government Association (SGA) that the Authority is in violation of its trust agreements.

The failure of the Authority to issue certificates of completion and repay unused bond money was not illegal, Morris Goldings, attorney for the Building Authority, said.

Jim Murphy, president of the SGA and student member of the UMass Board of Trustees, said Wednesday that because the buildings were completed, the trust agreements require that certificates of completion be filed and all unused bond money be used to repurchase bonds to avoid unnecessary interest payments.

Goldings said that legally the "construction phase" has not yet ended, because the University could request the funds for building projects relating to the dorms and dining halls funded by the Authority. For example, he said, some of the funds were used to repair defective roofs in Southwest.

However, Goldings said the University has now decided not to request the funds and thus he is investigating procedures to begin repayment of excess bonds. He said he spoke with the First National Bank of Boston on that topic yesterday morning.

"In my opinion, there is no illegality," Goldings stressed. However, he conceded there have been disagreements over accounting methods used by the Building Authority and Housing Services in past years. That system, which included loans between various dorm "projects," was changed this past summer and all loans were eliminated.

"One can have an honest differences of opinions over accounting practices," Goldings said, "without those practices being illegal."

Alcohol abuse report receives approval of Faculty Senate

By RITA MURPHY
Collegian Staff

Recognizing a need to deal with the problems of alcohol use and abuse, the University of Massachusetts Faculty Senate yesterday approved a special report on alcohol abuse submitted by the UMass Health Council.

According to the report, "Instances of aggravated assault, protective custody of students by campus police and local highway deaths involving students under the influence of alcohol are with us throughout the academic year." Because of this increase in alcohol abuse on campus and the need to address the problem, an Ad Hoc Committee of the Faculty Senate was established in fall of 1981.

The report submitted by the committee lists seven proposals the council feels will help solve the problems that result from alcohol abuse on campus.

The report calls on the University to "establish a clearly articulated campus policy that alcohol abuse constitutes unacceptable behavior and is not socially tolerable."

The second recommendation in the report calls on the vice-chancellor for student affairs to create a task force to address the issue of alcohol abuse on campus.

The task force would address the need for enforcing alcohol regulations in residential halls. It would also, according to the report, look at "the need to strengthen the existing disciplinary system, including protective custody and disciplinary action, especially for repeated offenders."

It was this part of the report the Undergraduate Student Senate requested be deleted during its meeting Wednesday night.

Student Government Association President Jim Murphy said sections one and two of the report posed "a threat to students' privacy and constitutional rights."

"Alcohol abuse is not a simple student problem," Murphy said. "Section two looks at the problem of alcohol abuse with a crime and punishment attitude instead of looking at it as a physical and social ill."

Robert Levin, a member of the Ad Hoc Committee, responded to Murphy's claim the council overlooked the problem of alcohol abuse as being not just a student problem, saying, "The Health Council is keenly aware that alcohol abuse is a campus wide as well as a society problem."

The report, he said, is designed "to protect the student body as a whole."

After the senate approved the report, Murphy said, "I'm appalled they didn't listen to what I was saying. It (the decision) reveals a paternalist and moralistic attitude."

"They weren't willing to address the real issue of alcohol abuse. (The Senate) certainly lost a lot of my respect," Murphy said.

The report also recommends that the Campus Center Food Services establish and operate coffee houses to provide non-alcoholic entertainment on weekends.

Academically, the report urges courses that address abnormal behavior to make alcohol abuse a part of their curricula.

Finally, it requests the faculty to try to recognize alcohol-related problems in counseling and advising.

BOG continues its advocacy for new CC computer center

By DAVID SUMMERSBY
Collegian Staff

The Campus Center Board of Governors (BOG) last night again stressed the importance of installing a computer terminal center in the building for the benefit of all students.

"The Campus Center is for students and there is a real student need for more computer space on campus," BOG Vice Chairperson Mike Reilly said. "This would be an important step in helping students because it is currently hard to get on computers especially for undergraduates."

Jim Keller, space allocations coordinator, said people have been known to wait in line until 4 or 5 a.m. for a chance to use a computer to do their homework.

If the proposal is approved by the Campus Center administration, all University students would have access to the terminals in the center from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m.

"There is no reason why there can't be computers in the Campus Center," Reilly said.

Under the plan submitted by the board, there would be ten new terminals installed initially, which will be provided and paid for by the Electrical and Computer Engineering (ECE) Department. The ECE Department recently received a budget increase of $200,000 to accommodate the increased demand for computer and information science (COINS) courses.

The only other fee to be involved in the operation of the center will be a $20 per month telephone service charge to be paid by the Campus Center building operations.

However, Keller said he did not think this would present too much of a problem, since "a Campus Center terminal room would draw a surprisingly large number of students and in the long run will benefit the revenue generating areas of the Campus Center."

Several places in the Campus Center have been proposed to house the terminals, but Keller said the most likely location is Room 178, which has several advantages.

"Four years ago this room was used as a computer center temporarily," Keller said, " so all the electrical outlets and phone adapters are already there."

Keller also said Room 178 is currently one of the least used rooms in the Campus Center, so it would not take away very much from people who often use the rooms, such as for conferences and conventions.

"All the details of center have been worked out," Keller said. "The only problem is whether they will give us the space or not."

In other business, to help alleviate the Christmas rush, the BOG is making available six additional table spaces in the Student Union Building.

Jeremiah Quill, building operations coordinator for the BOG, said the space will be allocated through the regular scheduling process, with priorities for tables as follows: 1. Student groups; 2. Entertainment, particularly GPC events and "teasers" for scheduled programs; 3. Vendor-

Collegian photo by Jim Powers

Junior Diana Martinez emerges from a cloud of steam emanating from an underground vent near the Student Union Building.

Week of events planned for Arab international solidarity

By HANNAH HOSOM
Collegian Staff

The Organization of Arab Students (OAS) will be preparing for International Solidarity Day with a week of political and cultural events beginning at 7 tonight with a movie on the invasion of Lebanon.

"These events are part of the efforts of the OAS to reach out," said Fatima Mohammad, a member of the group.

The series will continue on Monday at 7 p.m. with a panel discussion featuring speakers on Palestinian solidarity from Central America, Lebanon, Palestine and South Africa, and will be held in the Campus Center Auditorium. The Al-Watan Group will perform at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Union Ballroom as the final event.

"This is a cultural event also," Mohammad said. "The series is mainly to get support. A lot of people are misinformed."

The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) is considered to be a terrorist group when "in reality," it is a recognized political entity, an OAS member said.

On Nov. 29, a national demonstration will be held in New York City focusing on recent events in the Middle East. The day has been declared an International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People by the United Nations. The OAS said it is trying to provide transportation for anyone who is interested in going.

"Last year there was a demonstration in New York City which about 5,000 people attended. This year's demonstration is important because of the recent invasion of Lebanon. It is also the same week a Palestinian delegation from the PLO will address the U.N.," Mohammad said.

Hillel used clothing drive to help persecuted Black Ethiopian Jews

By MATTHEW BERMAN
Collegian Correspondent

As part of a continuing effort to educate the public about the persecution of black Ethiopian Jews, Hillel at the University of Massachusetts is organizing a used clothing drive to aid those who succeed in immigrating to Israel.

The piles of Levis, corduroys, sweaters, and sneakers collected in the Hillel office so far are destined for the few Ethiopian Jews who make it to Israel free, but penniless. The clothing and the cost of shipping them to Israel have been donated by Hillel and the general community, and are destined for a central relief agency in Israel.

Donations for this shipment must be dropped off at the Hillel office in the Student Union Building by Nov. 30.

According to a Hillel press release, although the Ethiopian Jews are forbidden to leave their villages, about 1,400 Jews have managed to escape to Israel since 1977. Another 3,000 Jews are estimated to have died trying.

These black Jews are called "Falashas," which means "strangers" in their language, and claim descent from the ancient Jewish tribes.

"Ethiopia is the second poorest nation in the world and the Falashas are the poorest of the poor there," said Amy Sweet, organizer of the clothing drive.

"What we're trying to do is raise people's consciousness that these people exist," Sweet said. "It isn't a stagnant situation. The threat to these people is immediate. The few of them who do make it to Israel are penniless. They have nothing. This clothing drive is for them."

STUDENT
ART COMPETITION
"Sports Across the Years at UMass/Amherst"

Open to UMass/Amherst students, both individually and with groups. Minimum stipend of $1,000. Deadline for entering: February 25, 1983.

Detailed flyers available at General Physical Education Office in Boyden, Herter 125 and other art areas, and 817 Campus Center. Individualized consultations for prospective entrants.

Sponsored by University Food Services and University Arts Council, with the cooperation of Athletic Department and University Archives

CHINESE KITCHEN
興旺樓
FAST FOOD RESTAURANT
Luncheon Specials $1.19 Every Day
Take Out Orders
150 King St.
Northampton, Mass.
Please call (413) 586-8220 586-8221
OPEN HOURS
SUNDAY 12 NOON to 10:00 P.M.
MON thru THURS. 11:30 A.M. to 10:00 P.M.
FRI & SAT. 11:30 A.M. to 12:00 MIDNITE
HOLIDAYS 12 NOON to 10:00 P.M.

UNE
Medical School
Tampico, Mexico
Q. What Makes A Quality Medical School?
A. 1. Fine Faculty
2. Good Facilities
3. Quality Student Body
4. Supervised Clerkship Programs for Qualified 3rd and 4th Year Students
Noreste offers a 4-year program has small classes, is W.H.O. listed
University of the North East Admissions
120 East 41 St. NY. NY 10017
(212) 594-6589
683-6566

CLOUDS
A Contemporary Black Musical Performance
CLYDE CRINER with
Akua Dixon · Gail Dixon · John Blake · Joe Ford · Victor Bailey · Omar Hakim
Sunday, November 21, 1982 8:00PM
Student Union Ballroom, UMass, Amherst

TICKETS $6.00 Students $7.00 General Public
Available at Union Records Unlimited For the Record (Faces) and all Ticketron outlets

ANDY'S PIZZA RESTAURANT
Beer & Wine
"Best Pizza in Town"

Wednesday Special
2 FOR 1 Spaghetti Dinners
also Friday - $2.50 pitchers
Miller, Miller Light
Sunday - 2 complete dinners
all for $5.95
Tuesday - Happy Hour 8 - 10
FREE Small Pizza
w/first pitcher of beer
Open 11-2 am (pizzas, grinders, salads)
Dinners from 11-10
Located at 175 University Drive (next to Stadium Liquors)
256-8147
Take Out Service

UMass students, faculty oppose admissions policy plan

By AMY JENNESS
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts Department of Education is considering a plan which would change the admissions policy for students entering college directly from high school. The procedure would be more heavily based on Standard Achievement Test (SAT) scores and class rank, said Dr. Claire Van Ummersen of the department's Academic Affairs office.

Students and faculty at the University of Massachusetts have said they are opposed to the plan because it would hurt minorities and poor people who generally do not score well on the SATs since they, in general, graduate from high schools which may not be as good as their peers.

Since 1970 the median SAT score for incoming fall freshmen at UMass has decreased by 79 points. In 1970, the median score for the combined math and English tests was 537 points. In 1981, the score was 458 points, according to figures published by the Office of Planning and Budget at UMass.

Van Ummersen said the proposed plan for the university would be a combined minimal score of 750 or 800 points on the SAT (of a possible 1,600 points). Also, the plan would take into account class rank during the applicant's senior year in high school.

"The plan is only in the talking stages at this point," Van Ummersen said. "Nothing is being done at this time to change admissions policy. A committee of a few people is drawing up a plan to present to the 30 or so presidents of Massachusetts state colleges."

SGA president Jim Murphy said he thought the plan was being considered by the Department of Education because enrollments were declining.

"Because of the post-baby boom, enrollments are going down in colleges," Murphy said. "By making it harder to get in the University, people would have to go to other state schools and they (the overall state college system) wouldn't lose money."

Grace Craig, chairperson of the Human Services and Applied Behavioral division of the School of Education, said the tests are discriminatory against minority students and students who speak English as their second language.

"We in this department are painfully aware that minority students are clearly discriminated against in some of these measures," Craig said. "If you are speaking English as a second language, you probably won t do well on the English section of the test. Just because you don't do well doesn't mean you can't do college level work. The SATs are not the one and only indicator of student ability."

The suggestion for the Univerity, Van Ummersen said, was to give two options. The first option was to require a minimum combined score of 800 points on the SAT scores and consider the weighted class rank. The weighted class rank is based on the student's rank their senior year of high school and any specialized courses like advanced placement courses or honor courses, she said.

The second option would be for students to get a combined SAT score of 750 points or better and be in the upper third of their graduating class. In addition, Van Ummersen said, the College Board, which puts out the SAT tests, places a standard error measurement on each test. Van Ummersen said this year's standard error measurement was plus or minus 30 points.

"So, if a requirement of 750 points is needed, a student who gets a combined score of 720 points can be admitted," Van Ummersen said. "You figure 200 points is automatically added to both sections of the test (math and English). So there are 400 points already."

Collegian photo by Drew Ogier
The windows of the Physical Plant building reflect the last rays of the day's sun as it settles behind the Hadley hills.

Awareness day sponsored by PGA today for a gay pride celebration

By CRIS SCHUSTER
Collegian Staff

If the Kinsey Report is correct and if the University of Massachusetts accurately reflects the population in the United States, then 10 percent of the population on campus is gay.

To show pride in themselves and the things they have accomplished on campus in the last 10 years, the People's Gay Alliance (PGA) is sponsoring Gay and Lesbian Awareness Day today at UMass.

"Lesbians and gays are on this campus. We're neighbors. We're your friends," said Kevin George, treasurer of the PGA. "The fact is we're not gay people. We are people who are gay. Gay is not the adjective that defines our own lives."

Purple balloons will be passed out on the Campus Center Concourse today to show support for gay people.

"The balloons say 'yes, we are aware of the struggle of gay people going on campus'," George said. "They are for people who are celebrating. We have a holiday of our own."

Beverly Davis, president of the PGA, said the purpose of Gay and Lesbian Awareness Day is "to show pride, be happy and have lots of fun."

"It's a party for us," she said. "We're trying not to do it (the day) in an aggressive way."

"The day is real important. People don't realize there are gays and lesbians all over campus. They don't realize it because it's invisible," she said.

Events planned for today include the slide show "Woman Loving Woman," and the film Pink Triangle in the morning, and several workshops in the afternoon.

"It's so hard for people to live in a society with a heterosexual mind-set and not assume everyone they meet is straight," Davis said.

"Many straight people think bisexuality is being kind of screwed up," George said. The workshop will help people deal with their own sexuality, he said.

The UMass campus is better than a lot of other places in terms of awareness, George said. By having the Gay and Lesbian Day the PGA hopes to "bring out the fact that we (gays) exist on campus and as an organization we exist on campus," he said.

Also planned are workshops on "Women's Self-defense," "Men's Sexual Health," and "Coming Out." All events are open to everyone.

This Weekend
Matthew Bak
Accommodations available for parties up to 100
...an elegant gift...Gift Certificates in any denomination

Plumbley's off the common
Amherst Center • 253-9586

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
Rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays, Saturdays 1-4

Birthday Boy:
I got you a real present. Copies of Cliffs Notes to match every novel you have to read. I figure that the Cliffs Notes will help you review faster so we'll have more time to celebrate. Cliffs Notes now. Good times later. Happy day!
Practical

愛城中國飯店
Amherst Chinese Foods
Best Manderin Food
62-64 Main St.
Amherst
Closed Wednesdays
WE DO NOT USE MSG OR ARTIFICIAL COLOR
We use FRESH Vegetables from Our Own Farm
BEER & WINE LICENSE
SUNDAY BRUNCH
ALL YOU CAN EAT
$5.95
253-7636

SALE 20% SAVINGS on all
Shoes & Handbags*
Thurs. - Sat.
*(Boots excluded)

the SHOE BIN
187 n. pleasant st., amherst, ma.

Professor learns first-hand of nutrition problems in Nigeria

By BECKY THATCHER
Collegian Correspondent

In Nigeria, the number of deaths of children before the age of one year is more than 10 times as great as that in the United States.

Professor Peter L. Pellet of the University of Massachusetts' department of food science and nutrition recently returned from a trip to Nigeria where he said he offered suggestions to improve the diet of Nigerian children.

Pellet, whose specialty is in child nutrition, said the problem is with the food being fed to children from age four months to two years.

These children are in a transition stage up until four months, during which time their growth has been close to normal, Pellet said. But, he said, when breastfeeding declines, the babies start to starve.

As a consultant to the home and village weanings foods project of the Harvard-MIT International Food and Nutrition program, Pellett visited the Universities of Lagos, Ibadan and Ife. The project was supported by a grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Agency for International Development.

Attempting to find answers to some of the problems of malnutrition, Pellett said he visited homes and clinics. In conjunction with university staff, he investigated feeding practices and weighed infants.

Pellett said some children weighed 12 pounds at the age of one year, instead of the normal 22 pounds. The problem, he said, lies in the inadequate weaning foods. The Nigerian infants are weaned on a very diluted solution of corn and water called "pap," which is white and creamy and very low in protein and calories, he said. Pap fills the stomachs of the children, but the lack of protein causes a serious disease called "kwashiorkor," Pellett said.

Pap is so low in protein, Pellett said, that a child would have to eat two pounds a day in order to satisfy his protein requirements. The size of an infant's stomach prevents him from getting enough nutrition. In comparison, he said one quarter of a pound of U.S. food supplies the necessary protein.

Pellett provided medical staff and nutrition professionals with information on how to mix locally grown products like corn and beans in certain proportions that would supply adequate protein to the children.

"The cost of the protein in standard imported baby food mixtures is ten times as much as the protein in local available products," he said.

Malnutrition, Pellett said, also has to do with sanitation and disease, because if a child is ill from an infection, he does not eat regardless of what is prepared for him.

Pellett said that even though the crisis of world hunger seems unsolvable, it is worth the effort to do whatever we can to try to ease the suffering.

SOME COLLEGE COURSES ARE MORE EXCITING THAN OTHERS.

How many college courses teach you how to shoot the rapids? Or rappel a cliff? Or find your way out of a forest with nothing but a map and compass to guide you?

At least one does—Army ROTC.

And you could find yourself doing any one of a number of exciting adventure training activities like these in the Army ROTC program.

Activities that develop your stamina. And your self-confidence.

But adventure training isn't the only way you develop. You'll also learn the basics of leadership and management by attending ROTC classes, along with the subjects in your major.

And you'll be excited about two other benefits Army ROTC offers. Financial assistance. Up to $1,000 a year for your last two years of Army ROTC. And the opportunity to graduate with both a degree and a commission in today's Army—including the Army Reserve and Army National Guard.

ARMY ROTC. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Contact
James C. Mahoney
545-2321/2322

UMass Greeks to raise funds for disabled

By JONATHAN PERRY
Collegian Correspondent

Fraternities and sororities from the University of Massachusetts will be handing out lollipops to help the mentally retarded and disabled tomorrow.

The UMass fraternities and sororities will be joining 16 other schools from across the state in "College Fraternity and Sorority Day," in an effort to raise funds for the handicapped citizens of Massachusetts.

Fraternity brothers and sorority sisters will be canvassing the state, handing out lollipops in exchange for donations to go to the Shriver Center for Mental Retardation.

Tomorrow has been declared "College Fraternity and Sorority Volunteer Day" by Gov. Edward J. King to commemorate the first time event.

Participants in the program include students from Northeastern University and Babson College, along with 15 other campuses. Of these, UMass is the largest, with 350 of the 2,000 volunteers coming from its campus.

Mark Bice, Greek Affairs public relations intern at UMass, said most of the funds collected will go to research into the causes of mental retardation and care for the disabled.

"Colleges across Massachusetts will be collecting money for the Shriver Center for mental retardation, with the purpose of helping fund research for new knowledge about retardation causes, and also insuring quality care for the handicapped," Bice said.

Bice said the drive has also received a substantial amount of recognition by the media.

Bice also added that the drive would "hopefully make the public more aware of the Shriver Center."

The drive will begin at 8:15 a.m. tomorrow.

Collegian photo by Drew Ogier

Shadows elongated by an autumn sun are reflected in the rear view mirror of a van waiting for the end of a recent football game at Alumni Stadium.

Feminism re-emerging in Spain says founder of Feminist Party

By ANNE McCRORY
Collegian Staff

Growing feminism in Spain has only recently lead to the reversal of policies established under the country's former leader, General Francisco Franco, a leading feminist and lawyer in Spain said yesterday at Amherst College.

Lidia Falcon, author and founder of the Feminist Party of Spain, discussed in the lecture "Feminism in Spain" the recent changes in the Spanish laws and life.

Feminism was crushed under the 40 year fascist regime of Franco, Falcon said. The Roman Catholic Church, playing a large role in society at that time, abolished abortion, divorce and contraceptives. Support against these measures was minimal until after Franco's death, she said.

While abortion remains an option only for rape victims and endangered mothers, laws calling for the imprisonment of contraception users, doctors and pharmacists in Spain were repealed in 1977, she said. Divorce was not made legal until 1981.

"The role of women in society as child bearers and sex objects has not changed since the Middle Ages," she said. Women work two-thirds of the world's labor hours, primarily in the clothing and textile industries, for 10 percent of the world's income. Time spent bearing and caring for children is not included in this total, she said.

"It's slave labor — without any salary or vacation," she said.

"I was raised with three women (during the Spanish Civil War) and this taught me two things: that women do not need men to survive, and that they are treated as second class citizens," she said.

Feminist activism gave rise to the Feminist Party. The party, legal now for just over a year, seeks to aid women in legal, political, psychological and family planning matters, she said.

Falcon has been imprisoned twice for her feminist activities. Her second sentence, beginning in 1974 for suspected terrorist involvement, lasted a year and a half and gave rise to her book In Hell — To Be a Woman in the Prisons of Spain. The text, written on tissue paper and smuggled out to her children, was compiled and published after her release, she said.

Newsline . . .

El Salvador group to present film

The Western Massachusetts Latin American Solidarity Committee is presenting the movie "Jesus: A Peasant of El Salvador" at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in the Campus Center Auditorium. There is a $2 admission charge, and tickets are being sold at Globe Bookstore in Northampton and Lots for Littles and Food for Thought in Amherst. Child care will be provided.

UMASS SKI CLUB PRESENTS

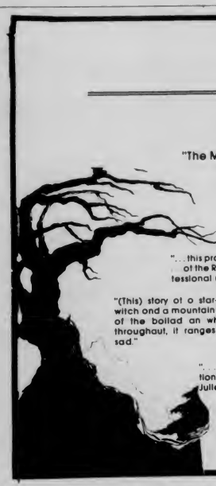
THE GREAT SKI SNATCH

$500,000
WORTH OF TOP NAME
WINTER CLOTHING
&
SKI EQUIPMENT
PRICES THIS LOW SHOULD BE OUTLAWED

NOV 17 - 20
W T F S
HIGH NOON TIL 10PM
TIL 5PM
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM UMASS. AMHERST

LAST CHANCE
TODAY & TOMORROW

THE RAND THEATER
Presents
"The Maxwell Anderson Award Winner"
DARK OF THE MOON



"... this production is typical of the fine entertainment at the Rand. Consistently presented in a totally professional manner."
Daily Collegian

"(This) story of a star-crossed romance between a witch and a mountain girl takes on all the rich flavors of the ballad on which it is based. Entertaining throughout, it ranges from funny to frightening to sad."
Springfield Morning Union

"... the University of Massachusetts Theater production ... captivates and entertains. It is the Romeo and Juliet of the Smoky Mountains."
Daily Hampshire Gazette

Reservations: 545-3511

3 Little Rocks $1.25
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Sunday 1:00 til -

Sunday Football Back
Best Deal in Town
All you can eat,

Rock Drafts 50¢
sandwich smorgy $1.00

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

BIG SIX
OF
JAZZ II
WITH
Billy Taylor, Max Roach,
Slide Hampton, Richard Davis,
Jimmy Heath, John Hendricks
A benefit concert for the Fletcher Henderson Memorial Scholarship Fund
Saturday, December 11 8:00 p.m.
ON SALE NOVEMBER 19
MC, VISA-CHARGE YOUR TICKETS TODAY
Telephone reservations Noon-4:00 p.m. M-F
545-2511
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall

SONY® THE ONE AND ONLY
TC-FX44 STEREO CASSETTE DECK WITH DOLBY "C" $189
STR-VX22 AM/FM STEREO RECEIVER WITH NEW "DIRECT ACCESS" TUNING $215
PS-LX2 SEMI-AUTOMATIC DIRECT-DRIVE TURNTABLE $119
TX-FX66 STEREO CASSETTE DECK TWO-MOTOR DOLBY "C" WITH REAL TIME COUNTER $285
Sound & Music Good Advice Honest Price
90-92 King Street (Rte. 5), Northampton, 584-9547
Mon.-Wed. 10-6, Thurs., Fri. 10-9, Sat. 10-5

TV SALE
19" Motel COLOR PORTABLES
— EXCELLENT PRICES —
Selling at. . .
HOWARD JOHNSON MOTOR LODGE
401 Russell St., Rte. 9, Hadley
Sunday, Nov. 21, 10 am to 2 pm
Sale Held by R.B.M. Sales Corp
No Phone Calls

Joey D's
Fri.&Sat.
75¢
Well Drinks.
9-11
Jeans Accepted.
$1 Cover.

A Peasant of El Salvador
Written by Peter Gould
Staged and performed by
Peter Gould and Stephen Stearns
The music is by Carlos Mejia Godoy of Nicaragua, the late Victor Jara of Chile and two exiled Chilean groups, Inti-Illimani and Quilapayun.
The Setting: a village in El Salvador, 1975 through present.
SUNDAY
NOV. 21
campus center
aud. 7:30p.m.
$2.00
Childcare Provided
ADVANCE TICKETS AVAILABLE AT FOOD FOR THOUGHT BOOKS AMHERST GLOBE BOOKSTORE NORTHAMPTON sponsored by WESTERN MASS LATIN AMERICAN SOLIDARITY COMMITTEE AND FRIENDS

"The Best Chinese Food"
家酒園南湖
Hunan Garden Restaurant
MANDARIN SZECHUEN CUISINE
Luncheon Specials Take-Out Service
Every Mon.-Thurs. from 5-8 & Sunday from 11:30 - 3
For only$5.25 per person
Chicken Fried Noodles
Sweet & Sour Chicken
Pan Fried Rice
Chinese Barbecued Pork
Hot & Sour Soup
Chicken Fingers
Pan Fried Ravioli
Beef with Green Pepper
Sun.-Thurs. 11:30 a.m.-10:00 p.m.
Fri. & Sat. 11:30 a.m.-11:00 p.m.
10 Belchertown Rd., at Route 9, Amherst
256-0251 256-0252

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Bored and broke is a bad way to be

Mary Beth Hebert

It's started again. Almost every day I hunt through my pockets to find the naughty nickel or devious dime that has somehow managed to slip out of my grasp. Occasionally, my labors come to fruition and I end up with not only enough dimes to finally do my laundry, but every once in a while I'm lucky enough to find a quarter. Pennies don't count for anything.

Think. September was two short months ago. Everyone was coming back to school rich from their summer jobs. Money flowed freely. People would buy you drinks. You'd buy them drinks. Life was just one free-spending, free-for-all party. Now ask someone if they want to grab a cup of coffee. You're bound to hear, "Gee, I'd really like to but I'm broke." And you can't even say, "Don't worry about it, I'll treat," because you're broke too.

Remember moving and trying to decide how to decorate? You and your roommates went out and bought that hand-dyed Indian tapestry. Everyone decided to wait a bit before you bought the rest of the decorations. Now, a few months later, you've been reduced to snatching the promotional posters that various organizations put up around campus and hoping that none of your company notices the "Please Don't Remove" note scribbled in black magic marker across the bottom.

How about going grocery shopping? The first few times you came home with bags full of stuff you thought sounded good or at least looked interesting. Now you have to eat that stuff. Sam's Instant Dehydrated Taco Mix. Ms. McDonald's Chicken Lasagna for Seven. And have you noticed how much time you spend in the generic section of the store as compared to the rest of it? Others go home on the weekend (if they can afford it) and raid the cupboards. Mom's always surprised to see how much they eat. Thank God she doesn't have a metal detector next to the door to scan the weekend parasite and his luggage.

Entertainment. What's that? You borrow a few cents from all of your neighbors so you can go to a $1.50 movie on campus. The people from Cable TV are compiling a list of the most original excuses as to why the bill hasn't been paid and the most feverent pleas for service not to be discontinued. Some students are starting to have record switching parties because everyone is sick and tired of their old albums but no one has the money to go out and get new ones. People are getting cranky as they don't have the bucks to keep them semi-conscious on drugs or alcohol. Sex is still free; unless you catch a social disease. Then it will cost you. So much for sex 'n drugs 'n rock and roll.

Let's face it. Right around now, life sucks. The sun sets around 4:30. The weather is getting colder by the day. (I won't even mention the heat bills) All those courses you were thrilled with at the begining of the semester are now tortoruous blocks of time scheduled in your day. Everyone is too busy, but they're all too bored, too. Add to the cake, the start of the holiday season and all the perils that contains and life certainly does seem to be sort of a bummer. With all of this, there looks like there's nothing to look forward to. Nothing that is — except next summer.

Mary Beth Hebert is a Collegian Columnist

Letters

Gay awareness day positive

To the Editor:

Today is a day of celebration and pride for the lesbian and gay community of UMass. The People's Gay Alliance will be giving out lavender balloons to all who will carry them as a show of support and love for gay and lesbian friends, co-workers, roommates, professors and especially for those who are yet afraid to be proud to be gay or lesbian.

In the past, Gay and Lesbian Awareness Day has been marked on this campus with the distribution of armbands. The symbolism attached to armbands suggests many things, among them anger and mourning. While it is true that the lesbian and gay community has reason to be angry for the discrimination they face from society, and it is true that there is much sadness over the repression of gay and lesbian culture, not to mention outright physical violence against lesbians and gay men, today is not a day for fighting or mourning. Today is an affirmation of lesbian and gay unity and pride, a celebration of solidarity and strength. Balloons have been chosen as a symbol for these reasons: balloons are cheerful and happy and flying high, they are assertive without being aggressive and everyone loves them. Balloons are a perfect expression of celebration.

Balloons are also noticeable and thus they are an excellent symbol of the fact that gay men and lesbians are everywhere; they comprise at least 10 percent of the UMass community. Take this opportunity to affirm the existence of gay men and lesbians in a positive and celebratory manner, and to show solidarity and support for the day-to-day struggles which lesbians and gay men face.

Lavender, the combination of pink and blue, has long been the traditional color of lesbian and gay pride. Lavender does not have a traditional gender-connected history, and for this reason lavender has been adopted by the gay community as a symbolic color.

Gay and Lesbian Awareness Day is not only a day of celebration, it is a day of education as well. There will be films, slideshows, workshops and social events occurring all day in the Campus Center, and there is a table on the Concourse where information is available.

Your support is greatly appreciated, not only by the lesbians and gay men who are celebrating today but especially by those who are afraid to "come out." Your symbolic gesture will help to make it that much easier for all gay men and lesbians to be truly proud of who they are.

Beverly Davis
Orchard Hill

Last place in a photo finish

To the Editor:

Wow! I was so impressed when I looked at the November 16 edition of the Collegian! Why, the front page picture of Cashin Dormitory certainly was what I would call hard news. I'd like to take this moment to commend the Collegian staff and everyone involved with this fine paper for keeping us so informed with the status of the architectural structures at the university. I know I could look at those pictures of the Fine Arts Center all day long! And gosh! Look at how the sun makes those angular shadows! Gee, you guys certainly earn your pay and I must say, you guys put up with an awful lot of flack, but I can honestly say that I would pay double what I pay everyday to read your publication. Thank You so much.

Gary Trahan
Southwest

Editors Note: The Collegian encourages all students to come down to Campus Center 113 and help out with ideas, suggestions, assistance, etc.

Where does our money go?

Editor's note: This is the second in a four-part series.

Dave McCarthy

In the late '70's, money from the Student Activities fee paid for Student Senate Speaker Brian DeLima's personal calls to Hawaii. Last year, the activities fee paid for ads in the Collegian advocating a referendum that the Senate had taken no position on.

These examples, while not the norm, are symptomatic of the misdirection of student money.

Student money is presently being spent on over sixty groups or services, that can be broken into two categories. One category is essential services. These are services that are funded every year because of either a Trustee mandate, a contract, or because of use by the entire University community (Transit, DVP, UPC, Index, Legal Services, Area Government, Academic Affairs, University Judiciary, WMUA, and Student Activities Office). The other category consists of associations or services designed to deal with specific issues or groups.

The total funding for the above mentioned essential services amounts to $1,048,984 or approximately 66 percent of the total fiscal 1983 SGA budget. The problem with the Senate having fiscal control over these groups is: 1) there is a lack of general student input in the funding process and; 2)the Senate has often threatened cuts in essential services to sway student opinion in support of fee increases as evidenced by the wording in several referendum questions.

The remaining $600+ thousand is put up for grabs by the Senate Budgets Committee. This is where the smaller, but more vocal interest groups are able to put together coalitions for their collective benefit. Much like America's Senior Citizens, Third World and activist groups have built very effective lobbying and voting efforts, enabling them to gain a lions share of the remaining appropriations. Minus essential services, that share amounts to 29 percent of the monies for which non-governmental groups contend.

Members of the Senate Budgets Committee are appointed by a Nominating Sub-committee of the Senate, whose appointment procedures are more mysterious than that of the Soviet Politburo. Consequently, the budget reflects the concerns of vocal interest groups as opposed to the undergraduates at large.

Why do we even bring these facts to your attention? Simply because each undergraduate pays a mandatory fee of $96 which is used to fund the services, programs and groups we have been speaking of.

What sort of control do we, the general student population have over our monies? The answer, unfortunately, is almost none. History has shown that the Student Senate is more concerned with having an ever-increasing budget than with the economic pressures faced by students. This is clearly demonstrated by the fact that except for a period when the Trustees mandated a freeze on the SATF, in order to force the Senate to liquidate a deficit of $139,749, the tax has risen regularly from $55.50 in 1976, to $96 this year. In fact, last year the student body twice voted down fee increases. Yet the Senate voted to raise the fee by $12, and that increase is reflected on this year's fee bill.

We now come to what are perhaps the most important questions to be addressed in this series: What can be done to bring the Student Government back in line with the needs and wants of its constituents? Secondly, what can be done so that the student body can gain ultimate control over the spending of their Student Activities Tax dollars?

As we have shown, there appears to be little chance of the undergraduate population gaining control over its money under the current SGA budget process. In the next two parts of this series, we will outline a plan that we feel will give student government back to the students.

Dave McCarthy is a UMass student

Letters Policy

All letters must be signed and include the writer's address and telephone number, which will not be published. Please type double spaced at 67 characters per line. Due to space limitations and the volume of mail, we regret we are unable to acknowledge unpublished letters. All letters are subject to editing for clarity and length.

FOUR SEASONS

Labatts ..... case $9.99
Michelob ..... regular or light case $9.99
Miller ..... btls. ..... case $8.99

Vodka, Boris Gudanoff .... 1.75 .... $7.99
Rum, Castillo ..... 1.75 L. $9.99

Almaden Table Wines ..... 1.5 ..... $3.99
Sebastiani Table Wines .... 1.5 L. $4.49
Great Western Extra Dry "Champagne" ..... 750 ml. $6.49
THANKSGIVING SPECIAL
Chateau Beychevell '77 ..... $10.99
Rancho Yerba Bueno ..... burgundy & rose 4 L. $6.99

Kegs — Free Delivery

Open 10 AM to 11 PM
in front of the Malls
Wines/Liquors
rte. 9, hadley, ma. / 584-8174

amc THEATRES
$2.00 matinee & twilite show — REDUCED PRICES FOR STUDENTS WITH AMC CARD

amc HAMPSHIRE 4 — 584-7550 — HAMPSHIRE MALL

The ultimate in sight and sound. Now re-recorded in new digital stereo. Walt Disney FANTASIA
Fri at (4:45 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:30
Sat at (1:00, 2:15 & 4:45 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:30
Sun at (1:00, 2:15 & 4:45 @ $2.00) 8:00
G

The Most Fun You'll Ever Have BEING SCARED! CREEP SHOW
Fri at (5:00 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sat at (2:45 & 5:00 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sun at (2:45 & 5:00 @ $2.00) 8:15
R

The Last Unicorn
Fri at 7:00
Sat at (1:00 & 3:00 @ $2.00) 7:00
Sun at (1:00 & 3:00 @ $2.00) 7:00
G

he's fighting for his life. SYLVESTER STALLONE FIRST BLOOD
Fri at (5:15 @ $2.00) 8:45, 10:30
Sat at (1:00 & 5:15 @ $2.00) 8:45, 10:30
Sun at (1:00 & 5:15 @ $2.00) 8:45
R

AN OFFICER AND A GENTLEMAN
Fri at (5:00 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sat at (5:00 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sun at (5:00 @ $2.00) 8:30
R

amc MOUNTAIN FARMS 4 — 584-9153 — MOUNTAIN FARMS MALL

Outrageously Spectacular! JOHN CLEESE SEAN CONNERY TIME BANDITS
Fri at (4:30 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:55
Sat at (1:45 & 4:30 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:55
Sun at (12:45 & 3:30 @ $2.00) 6:00, 8:30
PG

He is afraid. He is totally alone. E.T. THE EXTRA-TERRESTRIAL
Fri at (5:00 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:55
Sat at (2:00 & 5:00 @ $2.00) 7:30, 10:15
Sun at (1:00 & 4:00 @ $2.00) 6:00, 8:45
PG

THE SAGA CONTINUES THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK
Fri at (4:30 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:45
Sat at (1:45 & 4:30 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:45
Sun at (12:45 & 3:30 @ $2.00) 6:00, 8:30
PG

A Musical Storybook Fantasy Come To Life. HEIDI'S SONG
Fri at (4:45 @ $2.00) 7:00, 9:00
Sat at (2:15 & 4:45 @ $2.00) 7:00, 9:00
Sun at (1:15 & 3:45 @ $2.00) 6:15, 8:15
G

MIDNIGHT MOVIE MADNESS
EVERY FRIDAY & SATURDAY 12:15 AM — ALL SEATS $3.00
amc HAMPSHIRE 4 — 584-7550

THE ROCKY HORROR PICTURE SHOW
50¢ off to anyone in costume
R

CREEP SHOW
Come as your favorite "Creep" and get 50¢ off admission
R

RICHARD PRYOR LIVE ON THE SUNSET STRIP
R

THE EXORCIST
R

SALE!
ONE DAY ONLY...
SATURDAY, NOV. 20

HATS, GLOVES, SOCKS & SCARVES

save 20%

Thermal Tops & Bottoms
... All Sizes and Colors!

FACES
A Store-full of Ideas
Downtown Amherst / Open 10-6, Mon.-Sat.

FALL GRADS

INDEX (yearbook)
PORTRAITS
SAVE 60%
on Sitting Fee
Now Only $2.00

LAST DAYS -
SO HURRY

C.C. 178
Wed. 1 - 8, Thurs. 9 - 5
Fri. 9 - 5
or call 5-2874

Arts

Special Beat Service Photo by Tom Kudla

Ranking Roger, of the English Beat, during one of the more frenzied moments of the band's performance Tuesday night.

trailers

By Andy Gordon

Okay, you know I'm hurting for information when my lead story is Robby Benson's new movie. But for you Robby fans, get psyched for Running Brave, in which Benson plays a Sioux Indian. He stars as Billy Mills, the Indian who became an Olympic Gold Medalist in 1964. The film is being financed entirely by Ermineskin Indians and will co-star Pat Hingle and Claudia Cron.

Jimmy Cagney, who made a middling comeback to motion pictures in last year's Ragtime, will play Mickey Rooney's father in Flesh and Blood, which Rooney himself wrote. No schedule has yet been set, but if you saw Ragtime you know that they'd better start filming this one quick.

Kiss Me Goodbye is being filmed now by director Robert Mulligan. Sally Field stars as a woman who is preparing to marry for the second time, but her late, deceased husband keeps appearing. Kind of a Hollywood, role-reversed Rebecca. Jeff Bridges plays the groom and James Caan will play the dead, first husband. Also starring in what promises to be an intriguing pseudo-supernatural thriller are Paul Dooley and Claire Trevor. The film will open next summer.

Steve Martin, now busy filming Neil Simon's The Lonely Guy, will star as an eminent brain surgeon in The Man with Two Brains. The film also stars Kathleen Turner and David Warner, as his wife and colleague, respectively. In the film Martin, get this, falls in love with a female brain kept alive in a fish tank. He must choose between finding a body for the brain or putting his own brain in the tank with hers.

Robert Ludlum's best selling thriller, The Osterman Weekend, will be turned into a movie by Sam "Blood-and-Guts-all-over-the-screen" Peckinpah. Rutger Hauer will top-line the film.

Hold onto your hats, great acting fans, Pia Zadora will come blazing across neighborhood screens everywhere this coming September in The Lonely Lady (no relation to The Lonely Guy). Pia plays an innocent young girl who becomes a struggling writer married to a domineering husband. "Frustrated at every turn by power and personal tragedy, her life is a roller-coaster ride through the high and low life of the glittering world of motion pictures." Dynamite stuff.

Local Best Bet: Lots of good flicks around for the weekend. Hands down, the picture to see is My Dinner with Andre, with plays evenings at 7 and 9 at the Calvin theater in Northampton. Tickets are only $1.50. Then there's also two Marx Brothers classics, A Day at the Races and A Night at the Opera, at the Amherst Cinema; The Maltese Falcon and 2001, A Space Odyssey (odd double-feature) at the Academy of Music and The Last Unicorn (a kiddie movie, I grant you; but a good one) at the Hampshire 4. Also at the Hampshire 4 is Fantasia, Walt Disney's classic.

TRAILERS Trivia: What? Last week's question was too tough? No one knew that Jonathan E was the lead character of Rollerball, Riff Randall was from Rock and Roll High School, Frankie the Thumper was a character in Paradise Alley and (here's the tough one) Joe Cujocko was in Crimson Kimono. Here's an easy one: A movie poster to the first person to identify to me all following characters: Alan Swann, Sam Spade, Jody Verill, Jake La Motta. Name the films.

Wallace Shawn and Andre Gregory discuss philosophy in My Dinner with Andre, this week's best bet.

The Beat goes on

ENGLISH BEAT
Tuesday, November 16
Campus Center Auditorium

By ELAINE SENAY
Collegian Staff

It's hard to say who had a better time at the English Beat concert Tuesday night; the English Beat or the audience. One thing's for sure, the Campus Center Auditorium will never again be associated in my mind with boring movies and hard seats.

The Bangos, a four member all-girl band from Los Angeles, opened the show. Their playing was fair, and remotely reminiscent of the Go-Go's, but by the end of the set they faded out leaving the audience even more restless for the English Beat to get on stage.

With a flourish of old Hollywoodesque swing and the sparkle of tiny lights, the English Beat took the stage. Lead vocalist, Ranking Roger, after having wormed into the audience to boogie to the Bangos, was keyed up and ready to play.

The English Beat opened up the show with a few of their early songs like "Doors Of Your Heart" and "All Out To Get You." But soon they began tearing through songs from their latest album, Special Beat Service.

It was good to see the Beat perform live versions of their songs and make them sound even better than they do on record. Songs like "I Confess" and "Jeanette" were much more energetic when performed live. Dave Wakling, who was on vocals for both songs, gave them a rough edge that made them exciting and more urgent.

Meanwhile, Ranking Roger was running around during most of the songs, whipping up the front rows to a dance frenzy. He launched into a fiery version of "Spar Wid Me" which had the entire audience clapping and stomping on the floor.

Towards the middle of their set, the Beat dived into some of their early hits. "Tears Of A Clown," a cover of the Smokey Robinson classic, was played in perfect Beat style with all the energy the band could muster. Saxaphonist Wesley Magoogan played clear riffs all evening, but he seemed to really come alive during his solos.

By this time, Dave Wakling announced that the barriers in front of the stage were going to be removed so that the audience could have more room to dance. The audience roared their approval, though they honored Wakling's request that no one try to climb onstage.

After the barriers were removed, the concert seemed to take-off properly. Both the audience and the English Beat seemed to be enjoying themselves even more. Dave Wakling was especially pleased at the audience's reaction. He beamed a smile throughout the rest of the show and seemed overjoyed at how much the audience was enjoying the concert.

The English Beat played an even mixture of old and new material during the rest of the show. "Ranking Full Stop" was well-received and everyone seemed to respond to Ranking Roger's call for even more dancing and clapping. His directions seemed to filter down into the crowd naturally; soon the crowd needed no further prompting.

The English Beat came back for two encores one of which included the classic crowd favorite "Twist and Crawl." Though the audience was sweltering in almost 90 degree body heat, they danced with same energy as before. Everyone seemed more than satisfied with their evening of dancing stomping, clapping and shouting with the English Beat.

Paul Kanter and the gang are having their problems.

The Starship crash-lands

WINDS OF CHANGE (GRUNT)
Jefferson Starship

By DAVID CHEVAN
Collegian Correspondent

Ever wonder who started the trend of corporate rock, that modern phenomenon which makes every band on the market sound like one another. Well, I think I've finally exposed the culprit. Once upon a time, in 1967, a band released an album called Surrealistic Pillow. The album made the band very famous. Ever since that time the band has worked hard to tighten its sound, its harmonies and its arrangements in an attempt to recapture that magic sound, and fame of that first LP. Once in a while, they succeeded. Then, in the 70's the band had the good sense to change its name. They hoped people would think they were not the same group who put out Surrealistic Pillow, but something more modern, a flashy, "with-it" band for "now" people. They wrote songs about riding tigers, believing in miracles, and red octopi. Soon everyone knew this was the most "with-it" band on the block.

Since the day of the name change, the Jefferson Starship has always had good album sales, which probably is the justification behind their latest effort, Winds of Change. There is no way a new Starship album will not sell well, this just does not happen.

Guess what? Technically, this album is perfect. There are no missed notes, no faulty rhythms, no out of tune harmonies, or bad chords on the entire album. But for all its polish and perfection, this band lacks any soul whatsoever. There is not one song on the entire album with the power or impact of anything ever recorded by the Jefferson Airplane, or even early Starship. Songs like, "I Came Back from the Jaws of the Dragon" are not worthy of the vinyl they are printed on. What a corporate album. It is as though the people who market this stuff were trying to play some sort of sick prank on the buying public. If you absolutely must own a Starship album, there are several good ones from the early seventies, before they had perfected the polymer sound. Even the new REO Speedwagon outclasses this drivel.

RSO Workshops:
Mon. Nov. 22
at 4:30 in rm 911 CC
Tues. Nov. 30
at 5:30 in rm 416 SU
Wed. Dec. 1
at 4:30 in rm 811 CC
Mon. Dec. 7
at 5:30 in rm 803 CC
All RSOs requesting funding must attend!

THE RAND THEATER
FINE ARTS CENTER
Presents
THE SMASH OFF-BROADWAY HIT
VANITIES
TOMORROW at 8 pm
Reservations: 545-3511
In repertory with DARK OF THE MOON
"unnervingly funny . . . fast moving . . . stinging dialogue"
Newsweek

Deli Garden
...an Bologna • Olive ...
...er Loaf • Hard ...
...oa Salami • ...
...peroni • Grande Pepp...
...mestic Canned Ham • Imp... • Beer Bologna • Mother ...
...nks • Baked Virginia Ham • Beer Bologna • Pizza Loaf • Live...
...wurst • Tavern Loaf • Regular Bologna • Veal Loaf • Italian Lo...
...rtadella • N. E. Luncheon Sausage • Veal Loaf • Italian Lo...
...oked Salami • Lebanon Bologna • Thuringer • Pepperoni •
...ast Choice Beef • Pastrami • Corned Beef • All Beef Franks
...st Turkey Breast • Weaver Chicken Roll • American Chees...
...Domestic Swiss Cheese • Im... • ...peroni • P...
...rovolone Cheese • Dar... • ...ddar C...
...Muenster Cheese • Jarlsb... • ...Chee...
...alapeno Cheese • ...
...ic Canned Ham • ...
...Virginia Ha... • ...
...• Regul... • ...Beer Fran...
CARRY OUT BY THE POUND... PHONE AHEAD & WE'LL BE READY WHEN YOU ARE! DELI HOTLINE: 545-3948
the hatch
GROUND FLOOR/STUDENT UNION

Peoples Gay Alliance presents
Lesbian/Gay Dance
9 pm - 2 am
Friday, November 19, 1982
$2.00
10th floor Campus Center
Music by Mahogany of BMCP
Equipment: Audio Promedia
Lighting: Bob Dwellwy

La Cuchina
WEEKEND SPECIAL !!!
Spaghetti Dinner
includes: small salad and garlic bread...
only $1.99
Saturday & Sunday
5:00 pm-11:00 pm
the hatch
GROUND FLOOR/STUDENT UNION

With the passage of the Bottle Bill C&C LIQUORS would like to introduce you to RETURNABLE BOTTLES
10% Off
All Returnable Beer Bottles
(By the case only)
Rolling Rock-12 oz. Miller-12 oz. Pabst-16 oz. Black Label-16 oz. Lite-12 oz. Piels Light-16 oz. Ballentine Ale 16 oz. Schmidt's-16 oz. Knickerbocker Natural 16 oz. Schaefer-16 oz. Pabst-12 oz. Utica Club-16 oz. Budweiser & Light 12 oz.
C&C LIQUORS
61 MAIN ST., AMHERST 253-3091
(Across the street from Plumbley's)
FREE DELIVERY — ($15.00 Minimum)

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
Try the Arts Today
Springfield Symphony Orchestra
Sunday, November 21 8:00 p.m. with Jonathan Shames
On Sale Now
CONNIE STEVENS
starring in
I'm Getting My Act Together And Taking It On The Road
November 30 - December 1 8:00 p.m.
On Sale Now
Friday, December 3 8:00 p.m. On Sale Now
PRIMAVERA STRING QUARTET
Lotte Goslar's
PANTOMIME CIRCUS
Thursday, December 9 8:00 p.m.
On Sale November 18
MC, VISA-CHARGE YOUR TICKETS TODAY
Telephone reservations Noon-4:00 p.m. M-F
545-2511
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall

Hypercurricula...

"Hypercurricula," a listing of events held at the University of Massachusetts and surrounding area, is published daily in the Collegian. Events are listed only on the day they are taking place. Announcements must be submitted on "Hypercurricula" forms available in the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center, and returned to the office by 3 p.m. the Friday before the event. All submissions should be written in a similar style as they appear in the paper.

"Hypercurricula" notices not submitted on the standard form and not submitted by the Friday before the week the event will take place will not be run. Due to space limitations, the Collegian cannot guarantee printing of all "Hypercurricula" notices. Priority will be given to UMass organizations.

STUDIO ARTS CENTERS IN FLORENCE — The director of Studio Arts Centers International, Florence, Italy will talk about the SACI liberal arts based art history, Italian and studio art program with interested students. 10:30 a.m., International Programs Office, 239 Whitmore.

SHABBAT SERVICES — Shabbat is a chance to be part of an expressive community, recall experiences of the week, and receive and give lots of good energy. 7 p.m., Dukes Room, Student Union.

7 DAYS IN NOVEMBER — A documentary account of the student uprisings at Athens' University — Nov. 1973, against the military Junta, leading to its subsequent fall and the victory of democratic forces in Greece. 7 p.m., 904-08 Campus Center.

THE GRAPES OF WRATH — This classic film portrays America during the Depression. It is one of the best films that Henry Fonda made. Don't miss this moving human drama. Free. 8 p.m. 163 Campus Center.

FREE CONCERT: UNIVERSITY SYMPHONY BAND AND UNIVERSITY PERCUSSION ENSEMBLE — The 75-member Band, conducted by Malcolm W. Rowell, Jr., will perform a varied program of original band compositions. The Percussion Ensemble, directed by Peter Tanner, will appear as guests on the program. 8 p.m., Fine Arts Center Concert Hall.

NEED A RIDE TO CHURCH? The "CHURCH BUS" leaves from Grayson parking lot at 9:30, stops at Cashin dorm, and then NOPE at 9:35 a.m. for the Amherst churches. Coffee and donuts served in Grayson Main Lounge from 9-9:30 a.m. Sunday, Nov. 21.

MOMENTS FROM OPERETTA — A light-hearted performance of selections from such well known operettas as Show Boat, Student Prince, and Mlle. Modiste. The University Chorale will join the Opera Workshop Troupe for part of the program. Admission is free. 3 p.m., Bezanson Recital Hall, Sunday, Nov. 21..

AMHERST AREA NEW TESTAMENT CHURCH — Weekly Sunday service. All welcome to come for an exciting time of worship and teaching from God's Word. See CC daily schedule for room number. Sponsored by New Testament Fellowship. 3:30 p.m., CC, Sunday, Nov. 21.

RADICAL STUDENT UNION MEETING — The RSU will be discussing anti-racism week, a Thanksgiving dinner, etc. New people especially welcome. 7 p.m., 911-15 CC, Sunday, Nov. 21.

HOUSE CHURCH — A student group engaged in mutual ministry, Bible study, personal sharing and encounter, and a simple closing Communion which reflects the spirit of the group. 7 9 p.m. 428 Student Union, Sunday, Nov. 21.

DELANO'S
NOVEMBER HAPPY HOUR SPECIAL
2 for 1
St. Pauli Girl
plus our original twofers and hors d'oevres
7 days 7 nights
4-6 pm 10 - midnight
Proper ID a MUST
57 N. Pleasant St.
253-5141

Gay & Lesbian Awareness Day
Fri. Nov. 19
Info table in Campus Center
Workshop Schedule 10 -11:30
"Straight Talk About Lesbians"
"Women Loving Women" CC Rm 169
"Pink Triangles" Rm 165
1:00 - 2:30
Bisexuality - CC Rm 163
"Coming Out on Campus" CC 173
Womens Self Defense - CC 163
Male Sexual Health - CC 173
Luncheon 11:30 & 1:30 at TOC

ROGERS and BROOKS
711 Main St. Amherst SUN 8 - 6
Tel. 253-5387 Paul Korvek Manager Open Mon - Sat 8 til 9
Triangle St. Main St. Police Station Rogers & Brooks So. East
SAVE $4.00 WITH THESE VALUE COUPONS BELOW PLUS GREAT EVERYDAY SPECIALS
College is In, Exams are Near, When Exams are Near, WE WANT BEER

Kronenbourg $3.29 6 pak 12 oz bottles	St. Pauli Girl $3.39 6 pak 12 oz bottles	Donelli Lambrusco & Bianco $3.99 1.5 L
Miller $2.19 6 pak 12 oz bottles	Michelob & Light $2.49 6 pak 12 oz bottles	Old Milwaukee & Light $3.29 12 pak 12 oz cans

SAVE 50¢ OFF 1 lb or more any HAMBURG good thru 12/18/82	SAVE 50¢ OFF 1 lb or more any brand BACON good thru 12/18/82
SAVE 50¢ OFF 1 lb or more any brand HOT DOGS good thru 12/18/82	SAVE 50¢ OFF 1 lb or more sliced Land O' Lakes CHEESE good thru 12/18/82
SAVE 50¢ OFF 1 lb or more sliced BOLOGNA good thru 12/18/82	SAVE 50¢ OFF 1 lb or more lean CUBE STEAKS good thru 12/18/82
SAVE 50¢ OFF 1 lb or more sliced cooked or imported HAM good thru 12/18/82	SAVE 50¢ OFF 1 whole or cut-up PERDUE CHICKEN good thru 12/18/82

THE HOT DOG KING
Frankies
FAMILY RESTAURANTS

Weekend Special
Saturday & Sunday

50¢ for any Foot Long Hot Dogs
50¢ for any Hamburg (2½ oz.)

also Tacos, Potato Skins, Grinders, Seafood

430 Russell St., (Rte. 9)
Hadley, Mass. 256-0858
Open 11-11 Weekdays and 11-12 Weekends

GRAND OPENING
SALE-A-BRATION
Sat. Nov. 20-Sat. Dec. 4
2 weeks of Madness & Bargains
-Meet Spider-Man in Person
Sat. Nov. 20
-Meet Bob Layton, Marvel Comics' Iron Man & Hercules Artist
Sat. Dec. 4
Free Marvel Guide to Collecting Comics with this ad
6 new comics for the price of 5
20% off all back issues in stock

Comics
Prints
Collectibles
Dungeons & Dragons

Copyright 1982 Marvel Comics Group A Division of Cadence Industries Corp. All Rights Reserved.

Moondance
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, Mass.
413-586-8775

FRIDAY MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE HAPPY HOUR

Mike's Smorgy is back!
"All you can eat for $1.00"
Still the best happy hour in town
three 7 oz Rolling Rocks $1.25
Bar drinks - 95¢
4:00 - 7:00

Writing/Rhetoric Requirement

Undergraduates who have not taken a first level 'B' core course and have not been exempted should pre-register for English 190A for this spring. Anyone who has not taken the prerequisite Writing Program Placement Test should take it during counselling week:

November 16 8:00 p.m. Mahar 108
November 17 8:00 p.m. Bartlett 65
November 18 8:00 p.m. Hasbrouck 20

Upperclassmen needing a second level 'B' core course should pre-register for English 152. Freshmen who do not complete level I and upperclassmen who do not complete level II this year may find it necessary to take an equivalent course at another institution, at their own expense.

NEED HELP WITH YOUR STUDENT LOAN?

If you've attended college on a Guaranteed Student Loan or a National Direct Student Loan made after October 1, 1975, consider spending a couple of years in the Army.

If you train for certain specialties, the government will release you from 1/3 of your indebtedness (or $1,500, whichever is greater) for each year of active duty.

Obviously, a three-year enlistment cancels 100% of your debt. But if you sign up for the Army's exclusive two-year enlistment option, we'll still cancel 2/3 of your debt.

Plus, you may be eligible for generous educational incentives.

To find out how to serve your country and get out of debt, call the number below.

In Northampton call 584-2157

In other areas consult the Yellow Pages under "Recruiting"

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

WARHOL'S DRACULA

TONIGHT
NOV. 19

C.C. AUD
5 - $1.00
7,9,11 - $1.50

Sponsored By UMass Parachute Club

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

The UMass Zone By Mark Rollins

Under The Influence By M. Joyce

Bushwa by Tom Cushwa

Bloom County By Berke Breathed

D.C. MENU

LUNCH
Torpedo Grinder
Tuna Noodle Casserole

DINNER
Salisbury Steak/ Mushroom Sauce
French Fried Onion Rings
Baked Cod with Lemon Slice

BASICS LUNCH
Flat Bread Sandwich
Tuna Noodle Casserole

BASICS DINNER
Tomato Torte, Baked Cod with Lemon Slice

WANTED:

The Collegian, in conjunction with the Union Video Center, will soon be launching a daily half-hour news program to be aired over the cable TV system in the Campus Center and Student Union Building. We need a coordinator to write, rewrite and edit wire copy and Collegian staff reports which will then be read over the cable TV. Low pay, but great opportunity to help create a new UMass student service. Some experience in writing and television work is helpful. Bring us your ideas. Apply to Ed Levine in the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, by Friday, Nov. 19. The Collegian and UVC are equal opportunity employers.

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1 Shrubby mint
5 Distributed
10 Yarn mop
14 "Evangeline," for one
15 Musical
16 Facility
17 Against
18 Johnny's "bailiwick"?
20 Gets off the Amtrak
22 Collection of maps
23 Courts
24 —— avail
26 Pharmaceutical necessity
28 Compensated
32 Playwright Edward 33 John Paul
34 Place of storage
35 Campus in Dallas
36 Aboard a sloop
39 Jet ——
40 Four years, e.g.
42 Exceeded 55 mph
43 Weapon for Galahad
45 Large ships
47 Marks of a printer
48 Hardy lass
49 Fashion magazine publisher of yore
50 Main artery
53 Pieces of furniture
56 Actress Claire's "bailiwick"?
59 Pasternak heroine
60 Marathon
61 Ralph —— Emerson
62 Dye source
63 Red and black
64 Architectural piers
65 Best of Hollywood

DOWN
1 Mining nail
2 Top-drawer
3 "Bailiwick" of oil man Paul and his family?
4 Realm of the East
5 Make up one's mind
6 Dale of the West
7 Makes public
8 Officers: Abbr.
9 Philosopher Tse
10 Geometrical figures
11 Bemoan
12 Sleuth's dog
13 Rulers of Tunis, once
19 Nickname for a family member
21 Where Van Gogh painted
24 Lukewarm
25 Old Welsh name, "well-born one"
26 Lasagna
27 Lewis's Gantry
28 Romeo and Juliet, for example
29 Bailiwick of Walter Elias
30 Put into office
31 Loves too well
33 Woodwinds
37 Sale sign
38 Showy blooms
41 Appropriate words
44 Small spaces
46 Joint
47 Some residences, for short
49 Famed name in Israel
50 Dugout
51 Pearl Buck character
52 Roll's accompaniment
53 Early Indo-European 54 O'Casey country
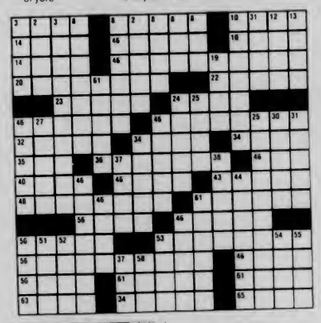
55 La senora's parlor
57 Fed. group of 1939
58 Fleming



CAMUS PAAR IMA
EBONY OGLE SNOW
LOVINGCUPS EIAL
UU ADDETENTS
SITEPIPS ACTOR
ASEA SUNNISE
SMIRETIARADOWN
TANK PROBE FRAN
LIS KEENE TESTA
ORIOLES ECHO
SMART ARDENT
MAINE ASTOL OIL
ERST YELLOWBIRD
ENOS NATO EROSIE
TON TROW RAITES

Weather

Today and tonight, cloudy with fog and some drizzle along the coast and partly cloudy well inland. Highs today 45 to 55. Lows tonight 35 to 45. Partly sunny tomorrow, highs 50 to 55.

WMUA 91.1 FM

6-9am	Wake-up
9-noon	Concepto Latino
12-3pm	The Rhythm Section with Carl Lowman
3-5:30pm	Jim McDee
5:30-6pm	Newswatch with Michelle Murray and Larry Mestel
6-7pm	Athena's Web — Don Cerow
7-10pm	T.K. Til Ten
10-2am	Vickie Bates the Radical Dub Faction
2-6	Party Music with a Mystery DJ (We're Talkin' New Rock)

CABLE/VIDEO

10:30 - 11:15	Third World Theater Series
11:15 - 12:15	Wendelin Glatzel, his residency and the Master Class
12:15 - 1:00	Oscar Brown — Solo's and Duo's
1:00 - 2:00	Marion Brown

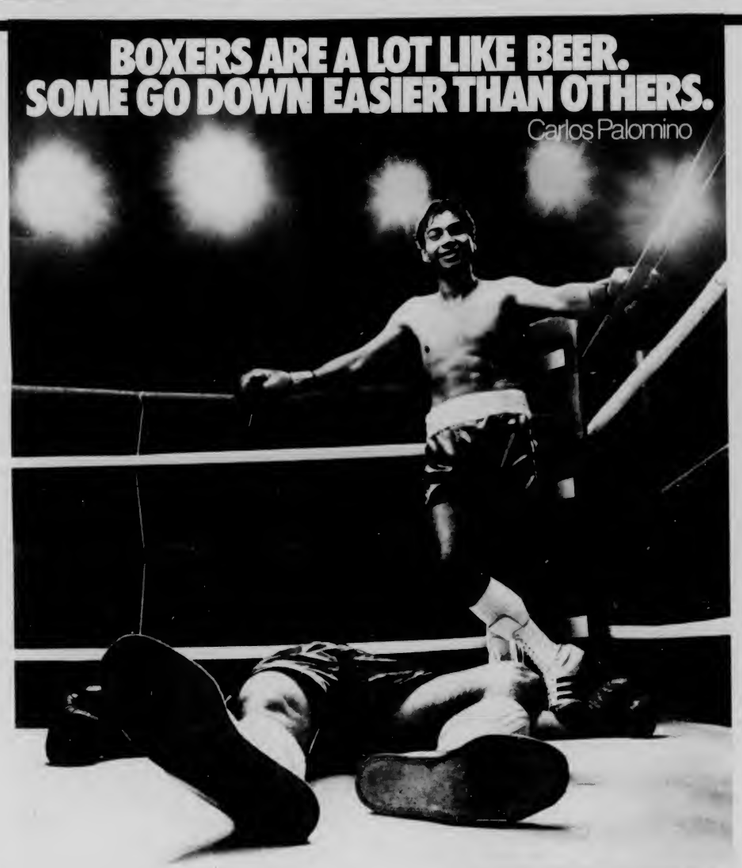
EARTHFOODS MENU

Mushroom Veggie
Barley Stew
Green Salad
Cream of Tomato Soup
Carrot Cake

the Hungry U Restaurant
55 University Drive
Amherst, MA
Fine Food and Drink at affordable prices
Congratulations on your victory over UNH!
Relax at the U
Friday afternoons - 2:00 - 5:30
Free Peanuts
Free Pizza
50¢ Drafts
99¢ Bar Drinks
$1.50 Orgasms

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Labatts beer or ale.....$2.99/6 pk
Miller 12 oz NR bottles.....$8.99/case
Busch 12 oz cans.....$8.49/case
Old Milwaukee 12 oz cans.....$3.55/12 pk
Liebfraumilch.....$1.99/750 ml
Folonari Soave.....$3.99/1.5 L
Vodka or Gin 80°.....$5.45/1 L
MANY MORE IN STORE SPECIALS

BOXERS ARE A LOT LIKE BEER.
SOME GO DOWN EASIER THAN OTHERS.
Carlos Palomino



EVERYTHING YOU AWAYS WANTED IN A BEER. AND LESS.
© 1982 Miller Brewing Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

Lifesaver:
Thanks for bringing me those wonderful Cliffs Notes. They really helped me understand what I read, and they gave me a great review. You and Cliffs Notes are Number 1 in my book! Whaddya say we head out to Walden's Pond for a Thoreau-ly good time?
Breathing Easy

Yellow 10-speed:
Remember the stoplight? You asked where I got that Cliffs Notes in my basket. Hope the bookstore had the one you needed. They're a great way to save time when you review. Maybe even some extra time to get better acquainted.
Brown 3-speed

AMHERST CINEMA
Fri & Sat
Day at the Races 7:00
Night at the Opera 9:00
Sun - Tues
Fearless Vampire Killers 7:15
Night of the Hunter 9:00
Downtown Amherst
253-5426

WINNER OF 4 ACADEMY AWARDS!
INCLUDING BEST SONG

20th CENTURY FOX PRESENTS
BUTCH CASSIDY AND THE SUNDANCE KID
PANAVISION® COLOR by DE LUXE®
Fri. Nov. 19th
Eng. East Aud
7, 9, 11 pm
$1.50

Sports

Men's volleyball will hold an organizational meeting on Sunday at 11 a.m. For more info. call Kirk Peters at 6-4518.

Women's hoop team opens season Sunday at home

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

The young University of Massachusetts women's basketball team will open their 1982-83 season with a two game homestand starting with Sunday's game with Siena College at the Cage. The Minutewomen starting lineup is not set yet, but four freshman will probably start.

After Sunday's Siena game, UMass hosts Holy Cross on Tuesday.

The probable starters will be junior Wendy Ward at the point guard, freshman Barbara Hebel at the shooting guard, frosh Rebecca Kucks and Karen Damminger at the forward positions, and freshman Jerrie Bernier at center.

Coach Mary Ann Ozdarski's hoopsters face a Siena team that went 21-9 last year and feature Mary Gaudreau, an outstanding shooting guard. Gaudreau averaged 18 points a game for the division II squad.

To be effective and in the game, UMass will have to slow this speedster down. Ozdarski is confident that her team can do it.

"I am very pleased with the teams progress and their intensity in their overall team play," said Ozdarski. "They are excited for Sunday."

Ozdarski will also look for four key elements that she feels that the Minutewomen must be successful at to play well and win. UMass will have to get their transition game going, control the boards, and play team offense and defense.

With Ward the only starting veteran on the floor, the four frosh will have to grow up very quickly. Ward will have to establish command of the Minutewomen offense, which she ran very well last season.

UMass will also have to control the boards. Last season, inability and inconsistency here hurt UM throughout the season. Damminger at 5'11" and Bernier at 5'10" will be the big Minutewomen out on the court.

Ozdarski will also have 6'2" Kelly Collins on the bench ready to grab some rebounds. Veterans Marlene Susienka, Jennifer Todd and Patty Maguire will also be able to come in and add vital experience to the UMass lineup.

Siena game time is Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Cage. UMass is looking to make it a win.

Swimmers hope to stay hot

By BOB BROCK
Collegian Staff

It will be a battle of unbeaten teams as the University of Massachusetts women's varsity swimming team takes to the road to meet the University of Connecticut tomorrow at 1:00 p.m. in Storrs. Both squads come into the meet with identical 2-0 records.

The Minutewomen have opened their 1982-83 season in impressive fashion as they have scored decisive wins over the University of Vermont, 102-46 and Smith College, 85-64. The easy UMass victories has surprised third year head coach Valerie Turtle somewhat.

"Against Vermont I was surprised a little bit, I really thought that they would be a lot stronger," she said. Turtle also added that the UMass freshmen swimmers really made a big contribution to the rout.

"Our freshmen were simply better than theirs," Turtle stated.

Against Smith College last Saturday it was a different story. The UM swimmers were anticipating a fairly close meet from their area rivals and they were ready for them.

"We were really up for that meet," Turtle said. "From the opening event we never let up." Turtle did admit though that the Smith women were hurt by injuries to key swimmers and it could have played a role in the decisive 21-point UMass win.

With those two wins now in the books, the UM swimmers are looking ahead to tomorrow's meet with the powerful Lady Huskies. The UConn squad is also 2-0 but they have just come off a big win over a powerful, scholarship-filled swim team from the University of New Hampshire. UConn's other victory came over Northeastern.

If past history has anything to do with it, the edge would have to go to the Lady Huskies. The UConn swimmers have beaten UMass easily the last two years, winning 79-52 and 75-55 last year. Turtle thinks that things could change this time around.

"They have lost some strength this year and we are ahead of them in some events," Turtle said. UConn, according to Turtle, has weakened in the spring freestyle events and both of their relays have registered slower times than those of the UM swimmers. She does admit though that UConn is strong in other events, notably the backstroke, butterfly and breastroke.

To win the meet, Turtle feels her swimmers must jump right out on top. And that means winning the opening event, the 200 yard medley relay.

Turtle says that her swimmers will go all out for the win and she feels that this meet could be one of their toughest all season long.

Jerry Gordon a success story

By JIM FLOYD
Collegian Staff

When Jerry Gordon first came to the University of Massachusetts he was a load. I mean, Jerry used to get winded going from his dorm room in Sylvan down to NOPE and that's downhill.

Jerry didn't try out for the football team as a first semester freshman. After all, he hadn't been recruited by any large schools except for such powerhouses as Tufts and Colby (that's division three, kids.)

But, when Jerry's second semester rolled around, a friend and teammate from his high school days as an unheralded defensive tackle and offensive guard at Randolph High School, Jim Barbati, talked Jerry into going to spring tryouts.

"Turns out," said the UMass' captain for the past two seasons, "he didn't make the team and I did."

What Jerry did in the semesters that followed should be written down and recorded for others to read in the future.

This nobody took what could be politely called an obese ("I was a mess") body and worked and worked and worked until he became not just a member of the football team but a starter, a second-team All-Yankee Conference selection and captain.

And through it all, captain Jerry Gordon stayed the nice amiable guy that he was when he was Jerry Gordon, out of shape nobody.

And, the story doesn't end there because when the season ran into trouble early and the team underwent several major shakeups, Jerry gave up his offensive guard spot, a spot that he knew well and was comfortable with, and became a defensive tackle.

"I just wanted to help out the team," Jerry said. "I'm not a good tackle but I'm not a bad one either. I just do whatever coach Reid (defensive coach Jim Reid) tells me to do. I'm just glad we're winning again."

In order to fully appreciate what Jerry did, you have to remember that playing the final two Yankee Conference games as a defensive tackle could cost him another all-star selection at guard.

"I would like to be All-Yankee Conference but it's not that important to me. I just do whatever's best for the team," he said.

A team player, a self-made man and a really nice guy but, unfortunately, a senior. Jerry Gordon will be missed very much.

Put this one in your scrapbook Jerry. Wink.

Dinner for Two Enjoy
any two entrees with salad bar and a complimentary n/a beverage
12.95
Every Friday

TOP of the CAMPUS
RESTAURANT & LOUNGE
11th Floor • Campus Center • UMass

BLUE WALL
CAMPUS CENTER AT UMASS
FRI. 19th
BERLIN AIRLIFT
HAPPY HOUR
1 3-6 p.m.
w/ Cliff Meyers
with special guests
The SEX EXECS
$3.00 cover
on HANDSHAKE RECORDS & TAPES at Union Records
SAT. 20th
HAPPY HOUR
4-7 p.m. w/ Cliff Meyers
FREE
The 2nd Annual BATTLE OF THE BANDS
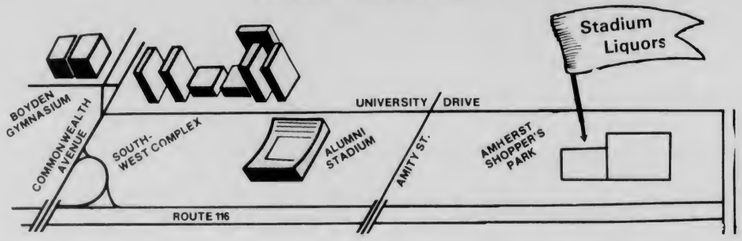
sponsored by U.P.C. w/ M.C. Terry Slagle

STADIUM LIQUORS
U. Mass. Amherst

10 a.m. til 11 p.m.

Kegs • Beer • Wine • Soda • Ice

University Drive, Amherst, Mass.
Just past UMass Stadium, from SW dorms



O'Keefe 12 pk btls.	$5.25
Lowenbrau case.	$9.95
Rolling Rock 12 pack cans.	$4.00
Michelob & Michelob Light bottles.	$9.75 case
Miller 12 pack btls.	$4.50
Blue Nun 1.5.	$7.50
Gallo 1.5.	$3.99
Christian Bros. Chateau LaSalle 1.5.	$5.75
Chenin Blanc 1.5.	$6.95
Almaden 3 liter.	$6.95
Sebastiani 3 liters.	$5.95
Martini & Rossi Asti Spumante 750 ml.	$8.25
Barcardi 1.75.	$13.55
Canadian Club 750 ml.	$8.50
Harvey's Bristol Creme 750 ml.	$8.25

Catch Our Weekly Specials

not responsible for typographical errors

253-5595
not responsible for typographical errors

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10% • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?

Rackadisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

AUDIO

Jensen 30 spkrs $125 Technics rcvr 30 w/ch $85 new Advent util. spkrs $120 all in exc. cond. 6-4504

AUTO FOR SALE

1973 Camero - very good mechanical condition. Needs some body work. $1000. Phone 413-773-3233 or 253-3497.

1974 Pinto Runabout, standard, 4 cyl., mechanically excellent (72M miles) $820/BO Bob 546-4021

Great Cruisemobile here. 1973 Cadillac Coupe de Ville, 60k, PS, PB, AC, 6 way power seats, leather int., 472cc 4bbl. Many rebuilt parts, 10 mpg, $700. Call 549-4497

BELLYDANCING!!

Bellydancing for all occesions. Parties, socials, "Bellygrams" etc. Call Thereza 253-7822

BROWNIEGRAMS

Three flevors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

DRYCLEANING

Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Way. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ENTERTAINMENT

Professional DJs for less $99 Special! Dorms, Greeks, Formals. Paul 549-4405

POLODROID DJ's - Music for the sound mind - Lights, Sound, Price - we beat everybody Pat or John 253-2957

FOR RENT

One bedrom available in two bedroom Southwood townhouse. Available Jan. 1 253-3497

Two bedroom apartment, Shutesbury. 256-6293 after six

3 bedroom apt., Gilreath manor. $550/mo. starting January 549-1377

STOWE SKICONDO avail. January/February fully furnished, TV, wood stove, $350/300 private rooms 256-8017

FOR SALE

GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972

Frye Boots size 7 546-6092 Bari

Dremel Jewelry/Hobby Kit - drill, control pedal, attachments with jewelry accessories, stones, silver call Barb 549-0505

Apple II Plus Computer 64k with language card, printer card, disk-drive, green display C.R.T. $1190 Call Gary 546-6719

Furniture comfortable couch 20$ tall dresser 10$ 253-3859

Who Tickets 16th row Dec 11 546-6977

FOUND

A certain sum of money on November 15. If yours, tell me sum, denomination of bill(s), and where lost. Box 1166, Hampshire College

Found: Bicycle spiral chain for locking bike Lost last week by woman bikerider? Mike 549-0477

Brown monkey, white stomach, answers to the name of Mongo, to claim contact through your own ad

GABRIEL AT ORPHEUM

Quality cassette recordings of entire 11/12 concert for info call Mike 546-8095

GAY ALLIANCE

Noticel The Counselling Collective is moving soon! To 106 CC Same phone (545-2645)! Same hours!

GREEK AREA

Thanksgiving Bash Friday night at 8:00 50¢ drafts music by Rackadisc be thankful your Greek be there!

HELP WANTED

Needed part time worker, driver license, no selling. 247-5801

Distribution opportunities Texas Instruments - home computer - ground floor multi level marketing - money making opportunities - no risk, no inventory investments. Demonstration Tues 11/23 7:30 CC Rm 911 call Grace or Paul after 5 665-2494

Sales Reps Wanted: Need extra cash? Self-motivated? Want to set your own hours? Be your own boss. Become a sales representative for ARK Student Bedding, Inc. Income potential is up to you. Must have own phone. For further information write: ARK Student Bedding, Inc. PO Box 534 Wenham, Massachusetts 01984

HONESTY WAS APPRECIATED

Whoever found my Sony Walkman and turned it in to Grad Research Library - a million thanks!

LEGAL ASSISTANT INTERNSHIPS

The Legal Services Office has eight positions available for full-time legal assistant interns for Spring 1983 semester. Up to 15 credits may be received from academic departments. Aid attorneys at LSO with client interviewing, investigations, legal research, negotiations, giving advice and referrals, preparation of court forms, attendance at court hearings, and participation in administrative hearings and federal litigation. Maintain continuing caseload under attorney supervision. For advice on arranging an internship and credit, contact Office of Internships, Curry Hicks Building. For further information, contact LSO, 922 Campus Center. Applications due Friday, November 19, at Office of Internships. Writing sample required

LESBIAN AND GAY

Are you Gay? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2645 or drop in SU406F

LOST

Gold name bracelet at the Pub 11/10. Very important. Large reward. Susan 6-7385

Anatomy book in Morrill reward call Noel 546-6274

Brown wallet IDs UMass & MA license 584-2635 William Scott

Class Ring: Teaneck High School 1982 Lost the weekend of October 30th No questions, Reward. Ken 546-6690

Ladies gold watch with broken band. Between Old Chapel and Frabklin. Great sentimental value call Kate 546-6657

Lost Tuesday - black notebook with gold corners important notes and photographs inside reward 253-7629

REWARD $75 lost flute. Call 253-3484

PERSONALS

Former Demolay - If you are at UMass contact Bill at 546-6853 possibility of forming a chapter or priory

Movie - Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid - Friday Nov. 19, Engineering East Auditorium - 7, 9, 11 p.m. - $1.50

Cheryl Happy Birthday to the best Sis and friend a girl could have I love you Janice.

Billy-Oh Nooo! Only one more Day! I love you Beevo! XXOO Miss Elly

Rikyle, you sexy womenizer! The nightmare is real. Watch out Freshmen!! The Untarnished Duo.

Larry and Neil: Nov 20 Happy Birthday! School is great with both of you up here. We'll have a great celebration! We love you Kim and Lisa.

To Demo Drouges. My deepest apologies for Saturday night Love Hot Stuff.

Marion Janel!! Now you can give Annes I.D. back Have a Happy 20th Jimbo.

Hear Women in the Medie Sunday 6:30 to 7:30 P.M. on WMUA.

Pledges of AXO Thanks for your awesome effort we love you the sisters of AXO

Gery-Happy Birthday to the man who has all my Love. Love Loretta.

Tim If you can't get----at U.Mass on a Friday night you can't get----. Boozer.

Kevin, I hope I can make your Birthday half as wonderful as you made mine. I love Sam but I love you more. Let's make 22 your best year yet. Love Always Lisa.

Derren Happy 20th Party Party! S&E.

Go UMMB Thanks for the experience, your English Contingent!

Cerole, Happy 18th Catch you on the rebound (SAT.) Love, Julie.

Neil - Since I met you, my life will never be the same, Happy Birthday...Sharon.

The Smith Bros....ET says eat me...Happy Birthday... Love TSS.

Carole - Wanted to wish you a very happy 18th - cause friends across the hall do that ya know! Kim & Lisa.

To K. Henneberg: Speak not of what you know not, or we will tell of what you cannot. The Dorketts.

Lisa! Happy 18th Birthday!! Love MB

Lesbian/Gay Dance Fri Nov 19 9-2 10th floor CC $2 admission call the PGA at 5-0154 for more info

Jacqueline Bisset loves him, so will you! Deep prodeucer Stan Waterman Nov 22, 8:00 pm, SUB

Sherks, whales and the deep blue world filmed by Stan Waterman. Come see Nov. 22, 8:00 p.m., SUB

People's Gay Alliance and Lesbian Union speaker's bureau training session on 22 Nov. for info call 5-0154

Who tickets available call 256-0271

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Dissertations, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to Maryland, DC, or Virginie Thanksgiving time. Please! Claudia 546-7240

Ride needed to northern Floride after finals. Call Diane ASAP 546-5506

To Syracuse for Thanksgiving will share expenses call Karen 6-9252

Ride Desperately needed for Tues Nov 23 Anytime. Will Pay. Call Robin 546-5474.

RIDERS WANTED

I need stimulating company for trip to California (preferably having big shween and I'm especially attracted to boogie faces) If you can help me out, I'll adore you forever...that would be so easy to do! XOXOXX.

ROOM WANTED

Single room and/or willing to share a room for Jan & Spring semester. Must be close to campus & on bus route. Preferably Townehouse or Brandywine. Call 549-5990 Mike keep trying

ROOMMATE WANTED

Belchertown coop house. Two rooms $90.00 tel 323-6835

Female wanted to share a room in Brittany Manor apt Starting Jan 1st call 253-7360.

Female Roommate One bedroom townhouse Southwood for Jan 1 155 + util after 9:30 P.M. 256-6053

2 nonsmoking females wanted to share 1 bedroom in Puffton Village. Starting Jan. 1 549-4450

Roommate needed to share a room in two Bedroom Townehouse apartment for Spring Semester Call 549-5985

SERVICES

Writing assistance. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729

Need help with typing fast service provided: Dissertations, etc. Double-spaced $1.75 per page Call 323-4054

BIRTH CHART READINGS learn astrology through your sign - planet positions at birth. Contact Julie at 253-7813 with your exact time of birth.

Visa, Mastercard. No credit check. No gimmicks. Legal. Send SASE for information. Box 866, Greenfield, MA 01302

STOLEN

Navy blue flight jacket w/Trial Court patch on lower right hand pocket, key chain w/name PALANI please return or if seen call 6-5745 reward

Tan corduroy CB jacket and bookbag Reward Bob Collins 549-2775

SUGARBUSH VT

Beautiful ski house needs roommates during intersession. Ski to and from the mountain. First come, first serve. Call Al 253-9409

CAROLYN OBSTFELD

Congratulations on your first job with the Love Boat Cruise Lines. I hope it works out. I will look for you in the Newman Center. Thanksgiving?

TO SUBLET

Spring semester, a double bedroom in 6 bedroom house, living room, dining room, laundry and kitchen facilities; close to campus, on bus route. 110 + , Call Gail or Maggie 549-5586

WANTED

Acoustic Guiterist to write music for original poetry call Mike 253-2439

WANTED TO BUY

Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for an apartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093

Looking for an apartment in North Amherst starting January 1. Patricia 549-1414 evenings

Room or apartment wanted for two females on bus route for spring semester call 546-9689 anytime

Grad student looking for apartment to share or room to rent starting Jan 1 call 546-8175 anytime

Two people looking for apartment starting Jan and spring semester call Angel after 5:00 PM 549-1307 or 546-1463

1 female looking for own room in apt in Amherst vicinity starting Jan call 253-2496

3 girls seek 2 or 3 bedroom apt in Amherst vicinity call 549-6850

WANTED TO SUBLET

Sublet for Intersession in Northhampton area 2 bedroom apt. call 546-9666

The rusty nail presents

Fri. Nov. 19th JUSTIN

Sat. Nov. 20th GIL SCOTT HERRON

Rt. 47, Sunderland, MA 665-4937

You must be 18 to enter.

Sports

MORE SPORTS ON PAGE 17

Last chance at Alumni Stadium

Final game of season, last hurrah for seniors

By KEVIN DELUCA
Collegian Staff

Call it the Farewell Bowl this Saturday as the University of Massachusetts Minutemen take on American International College at Alumni Stadium in the season's last game.

Of course, the object of any game is to win and to that end the Minutemen will be fielding possibly their strongest team all year; a unit responsible for last week's 27-0 shellacking of New Hampshire.

However, the main story of the afternoon will be the fact that this game will mark the end of the college careers of several UMass stars. All of these players will leave with the satisfaction of having helped UMass to their fifth Yankee Conference championship in the last six years.

On defense, the seniors are linebackers John Debs and Dean Pecevich and end Joe Graham. Minutemen fans are more familiar with Pecevich as a quarterback, where he provided many thrilling moments.

Two other offensive players making their curtain call on the defensive side of the field are tri-captains Jerry Gordon and Tom Murray, formerly a left guard and fullback respectively, and now a left tackle and a middle guard. (The other captain, cornerback Dwayne Lopes, is still out with an injury.)

On offense, the tackles, Tony Pasquale and Wilbur Jackson, and right guard, Scott LaFond, will be seeing their last action in Minuteman uniforms. The man they have blocked for is also ending his illustrious career here.

Garry Pearson will leave UMass with most every school record a running back could want, including most yards in a season and a career, as he has carved himself a niche as one of New England's most prolific runners in recent memory.

Also playing in his last game is Bob Ross, a member of that distinct breed of football players, the place kicker. Ross has been a very pleasant surprise, hitting on 18 of 21 extra-points and seven of eight field goals.

Senior Ron Mangarelli, UMass' leading receiver this year, will miss tomorrow's game due to a knee injury suffered last week.

The team that these players will be facing is largely unknown though AIC is also located in Western Massachusetts.

AIC, like UMass, is a hot team, having won their last three games. They run a Wing-T offense, directed by an experienced senior quarterback, Rod Pena. The biggest cogs in their offensive machine are the two behemoths at the tackles, 270-pound Ken Pallotta and 250-pound Pat Halpin.

The UMass defense, led by linebacker Craig Lesinski, should have its hands full trying to duplicate last week's shutout.

The AIC defense will certainly have its hands full trying to stop UMass' recently potent offense. The addition of freshman quarterback Jim Simeone has certainly sparked the Minutemen; changing them from a one-dimensional running team into a multi-faceted offense that combines the shotgun arm of Simeone with the spectacular consistency of Pearson's running.

All in all, it should be a fairly exciting game, despite the fact that AIC is a Division II team while UMass is in Division I-AA.

"There is no doubt that UMass will be the finest team we will have played this year. We're obviously impressed with their running game in Pearson and now Jenkins. They have shown offensive improvement since they switched to Simeone at quarterback. We are looking forward to playing a I-AA team with as fine a football tradition as UMass," said AIC coach Bob Burke.

"AIC is very, very big and they have fine speed in the skill positions. Although they are a Division II school, they have fine football players who can play the game. This game should have tremendous interest in Western Massachusetts," commented UMass coach Bob Pickett.

The Minutemen always play well at home and deserve a large turnout for this Saturday's season-concluding game. Also, show up to bid your favorite player, whoever he is, farewell. Show them that you appreciate the effort they have put out over the past few years.

Game time is 1:00 p.m.

Collegian photo by Michael Margolis

Not all defenders have flipped over the Minutemen this year but this UConn Husky liked Bob Simeone's catch.

Men's basketball: The countdown is at two

Opening game's on Sunday

By JIM FLOYD
Collegian Staff

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the final segment of the men's basketball preview.

Yes, Virginia, the University of Massachusetts does have a real basketball team this year.

Real, of course, means that all the ingredients for a legitimate team are now working out in the Curry Hicks Cage on a daily basis. It does not mean that when the team is molded together that it will take the nation by storm and win every contest that it plays in.

But, real does say that the team should be in every game and be able to compete on a division one level again.

Real is exciting and that's what the Cage should be Sunday night when the Minutemen open their 1982-83 season when they host the Venezuelan National Team in what is obviously a non-league game.

The Venezuelan team is, as are most European national teams, loaded with height, sporting such altitudinal numbers as 6'10", 6'9", 6'7" and 6'8".

"European teams always play better in front of a large crowd," said coach Tom McLaughlin. "When they get in here and see the crowd they're gonna get excited and play well."

McLaughlin has a better idea of how the team plays in a game situation after Wednesday night's Red-White scrimmage, in which the Red squad won an 85-61 decision in front of about 125 basketball diehards.

The game saw several key Minutemen make their presence felt throughout the course of the 50 minute game (two 20 minute periods around one 10 minute period).

"Bobby Braun impressed me because he played extremely well," said McLaughlin of the 6'6" sophomore's 12 of 21 shooting from the field and five offensive rebounds.

Also playing very well on Wednesday were freshman Darryl Carter and sophomore Donald Russell, who turned in his usual outstanding performance.

Sunday night will be another chance for UMass hoop fans to see everyone play as McLaughlin plans on getting everyone in in an effort to see how each individual plays and what combinations work best as he tries to prepare for a very tough Atlantic Ten league schedule.

"I'm not concerned with a win or a loss in this game," said McLaughlin. "I want to see who can contribute and who can play."

"I'm more worried about the word team, trying to find the right chemistry. That's when you find a good team. It's the chemistry," said McLaughlin.

The Minutemen will be using a man-to-man defense, something that they didn't do too often last year. McLaughlin feels that he didn't have the depth last year to employ a man-to-man, but that this year is a different situation.

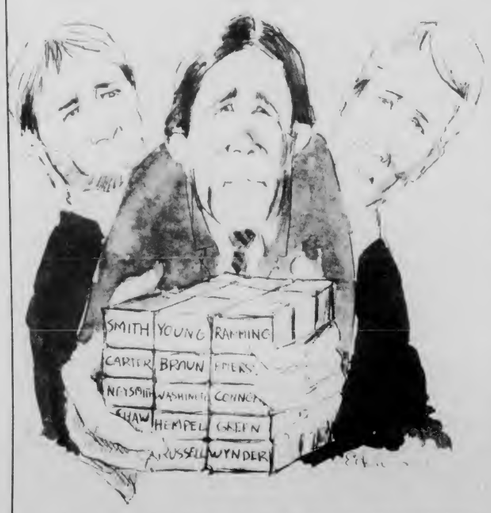
"This year we can match up physically," he said.

Added to this game will also be the presence of freshman Tom Emerson, who missed Wednesday's scrimmage due to a conflicting exam.

McLaughlin is looking to start up the 40 Minute Gang again this season and will be holding an organizational meeting tonight at 6:30 p.m. following varsity practice. Anyone interested should be at the meeting.

McLaughlin apparently has something new in store for the fans this year for the pregame warmups but did not want to comment on it ahead of time.

Game time on Sunday is 7:30 p.m. and the limit on people is 4200, better go early.



"I think I may have it right. Have you found those directions yet?"

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian

Volume CXII, Issue 53 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Monday, November 22, 1982

Administrator to leave UMass citing discrimination as reason

By JIM FINKLE
Collegian Staff

Citing racial discrimination as her reason for leaving, a top administrator at the University of Massachusetts will be taking a one-year professional leave of absence, after which she will seek employment elsewhere.

Beginning January 15, 1983, Marie Reid, assistant chancellor and director of the Office of Planning and Budget, said she is taking a leave of absence to complete doctoral studies at the UMass School of Education, in the area of higher education administration.

Reid will continue to receive her annual salary of $52,500 while on leave.

She said she plans to look for another job during that time.

"I have a five year contract if I choose to come back, but I hope I would not have to choose to come back," Reid said.

UMass Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey said last night he hopes Reid will return after her leave.

"I expect that she will return to the administration of the campus and I hope she will return," Duffey said.

Reid, the only black woman in a top administration position at UMass, said the UMass administration has discriminated against blacks in the hiring process.

"The administration, or somebody, has systematically removed all the top black administrators," Reid said.

Reid said she first considered leaving UMass after her position was changed by Duffey to Associate Vice-Chancellor for Administration and Finance.

This change removed her final authority over the budget, giving that authority to Acting Vice-Chancellor for Administration and Finance John L. DeNyse.

Earlier this month, Duffey issued a memo, returning her position to Assistant Chancellor and Director of the Office of Planning and Budget. According to the memo, DeNyse still has final authority over the budget.

Last week, Reid and Duffey reached an agreement that included her taking the leave of absence as well as Reid's signing a five-year contract with the University.

Reid said yesterday she is pleased with the arrangement.

"Everything I requested I received, so I was pleased with the arrangement," she said.

Reid said, however, she feels her presence is no longer wanted at the University.

"It has been an unfortunate situation for myself, Dr. Duffey and the campus," Reid said.

"It has left questions in my mind, and I think in other people's minds, about the future of minorities and women in the upper administration of the Amherst campus."

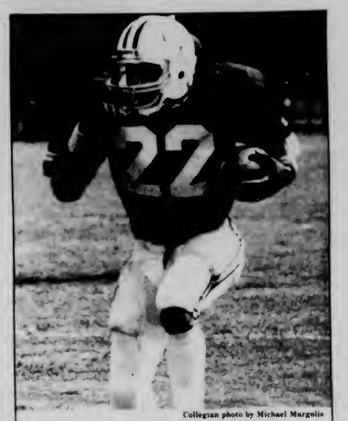
Duffey declined to comment on Reid's accusations of racial discrimination.

Reid said the change in her position, which she referred to as a "demotion," was made because of her strong position in support of appointing Art Jackson, who is also black, to the position of Director of Financial Aid at UMass.

She said other administrators at UMass resented her because she was a black woman.

"A lot of people here felt I had too much power," she said.

Last month Duffey said he made the staff change, prompting Reid to consider leaving UMass, to reduce the number of administrators reporting directly to the chancellor and make the structure of the UMass administration consistent with that of other universities.



Collegian photo by Michael Margolis

University of Massachusets tailback Garry Pearson, who concluded his UMass football career Saturday by smashing two UMass and two New England records. The Minutemen beat American International College 29-13. See story page 12.

Provost debating sabbatical for work on Vietnam book

By JIM FINKLE
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Provost and Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs Loren Baritz may take a sabbatical to pursue work on his writing.

According to sources in the UMass administration, Baritz will take a sabbatical for either one or two semesters to finish working on a book about the Vietnam War.

Baritz served as acting chancellor last year, after former Chancellor Henry Koffler left UMass for the University of Arizona. He was also one of the three finalists in the search that eventually selected Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey.

Baritz declined to comment on whether he would take the time off.

"Nothing definite has been decided," Baritz said.

Duffey said Friday that Baritz has discussed the book with him.

"He is writing now and wants to spend more time," Duffey said.

Duffey declined to comment on whether Baritz had other reasons for taking the sabbatical.

If Baritz does go on sabbatical, it is not exactly clear who would serve as acting provost and vice chancellor of academic affairs in his absence.

The most likely candidates for that position are Harry T. Allan, dean of the School of Business, David Bischoff, acting deputy provost and dean of the School of Physical Education, and Johnetta Cole, the current associate provost.

Allan was acting provost while Baritz served as acting chancellor when Koffler left UMass.

Bishoff was appointed to the position of acting deputy provost on Nov. 1 by Baritz to replace former Deputy Provost Robert Sleigh — now a fellow at the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton University.

According to Bishoff, he is currently "doing whatever the provost asks me to do."

He said he aids the provost in special projects, including preparation for the budget and student recruitment.

Bishoff also served as associate provost from 1971 to 1978.

The current associate provost, Johnetta Cole, has been given the responsibility of heading up the Faculty Senate's ad hoc committee on General Education.

That committee has been charged with the responsibility of evaluating and making recommendations for changes in general education at UMass. Cole is also a professor in the anthropology department at UMass.

High technology moves to the Valley

Editor's Note: This is the first of a two part series concerning high technology in the Pioneer Valley.

By ELLEN M. RYDER
Collegian Corresondent

Computers, microcomputers, robotics--the essence of the future has invaded the present. From the ever-increasing "Silicon Valley" in the West to the famed Route 128 area in the East, America is becoming a computerized nation. The Boston area is teeming with technology and the spillover is heading west.

Its projected first stop — the Pioneer Valley. Like the Boston area, the Pioneer Valley is an academic center. High technology companies have their pick of the most qualified graduates for employment, from specialized fields of study.

Is there a relationship between the insurge of computer companies and the rise of computer science at the University of Massachusetts.

"Absolutely," said Thomas Manwell, marketing director for Intelligence Software Systems (ISS) of Amherst. Manwell agreed that schools like UMass will be heavily tapped by newly-formed computer companies as the industry expands.

"There is an increasing number of high technology companies (in this area)," Manwell said. "I don't know if the growth will be as big (as it was) in Boston, but it's certainly headed in that direction."

Proximity to universities that are becoming more technologically-oriented definitely affects the potential locations of new companies, said Manwell.

ISS is a relatively young company. It was founded three years ago by Professor Allen Hanson and Professor Ed Reizman, of the Computer and Information Science department at UMass. ISS, which started out making commercial software, now produces graphics software and plans to make visual image processing software.

"We are not interviewing in the normal sense," Manwell said, "People hear of us and seek us out. Hiring entirely depends on how fast we can sell our products."

Peggy Shennon, a computer instructor for Garrett Lockheed, a software company in South Deerfield, said there is a symbiotic relationship between universities and high technology industries.

"In Boston — a lot of it is the schools in the area — Boston University, MIT, Harvard, etc. People affiliated with schools like these often get companies started," Shennon said.

Many people at Garrett Lockheed are somehow connected with UMass, Shennon said.

"Some of the programmers are either professors or students at the University," she said.

Steve Gross, manager of operations at Amherst Associates, an Amherst software company, agreed that local colleges and universities will be prime targets for hiring. A 1975 graduate of the University of Massachusetts, Gross said that a significant number of employees at Amherst Associates are also UMass graduates.

The COINS department at UMass is well-rated among computer companies. Manwell noted the high quality of the program.

"I would say about seven to ten 10 people here at ISS have spent some [illegible] UMass," he said. The COINS program and others like it enable employers to hire purely computer science majors, and very highly qualified ones, he said. Employers agree that graduates with degrees in computer science have an edge in hiring.

The COINS program, which has risen steadily in recent years, is projected to expand even further.

COINS professor Alan Hanson said that he believes there is a good chance the program will grow substantially.

"It will grow, depending upon the resources we have, the market's demand for people and the university's plans," said Hanson.

Photo by David Deuber

Rick Southwick, a recent UMass graduate, works on one of the computers at Intelligent Software Systems at Amherst.

Digest

by the Associated Press

Soviet leaders meet today to fill Party Politburo seats

MOSCOW — The new Soviet leadership, acting swiftly after the death of Leonid I. Brezhnev, is expected in the next few days to name a new president, fill vacancies in the ruling Communist Party Politburo and set out the plan for next year's economy.

Yuri V. Andropov, 68, already named to succeed Brezhnev as the party's general secretary, is widely believed poised to assume the largely ceremonial presidency, consolidating his hold on power.

Other leading candidates for the job of head of state are thought to be Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, 73, and Brezhnev protege Konstantin U. Chernenko, 71.

Brezhnev took control of the party immediately after ousting Nikita S. Khrushchev in 1964, but he did not become president until 1977 when he took that job from Nikolai V. Podgorny.

MX decision to be revealed before arms control speech

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's announcement of a basing plan for the blockbuster MX missile is certain to launch a new round of military and political arguments that already have stretched on nearly a decade.

Reagan, scheduled to reveal his long-awaited decision today, is expected to endorse an Air Force plan know as "dense pack," which calls for clustering 100 missiles close together in super-hardened silos.

Returning to the White House after a weekend at Camp David, Reagan confirmed he had reached a decision on the basing mode but told reporters he would not disclose it until today.

U.S. envoy accused Israel of responsibility in massacre

JERUSALEM — Special U.S. envoy Morris Draper angrily accused Israel of responsibility for the Beirut massacre immediately after the killings were known, an Israeli Foreign Ministry official testified yesterday.

Bruce Kashdan, the ministry's liason in Beirut, said he received a telephone call from Draper demanding the atrocity be stopped. He also said Draper's call "was the first we heard something concrete about the massacre."

Kashdan testified before a three-member Israeli judicial panel probing Israel's possible involvement in the Sept. 16-18 mass killings of Palestinians by Christian militiamen in west Beirut's Sabra and Chatilla refugee camps.

Mayor White investigated according to Globe report

BOSTON — Federal investigators have paid night calls on city workers, reviewed city contracts and looked into an aborted birthday party for Mayor Kevin White's wife as part of a broad probe centering on the four-term mayor, The Boston Sunday Globe reported.

The newspaper said FBI and IRS agents have threatened some Boston city employees with tax audits if they don't cooperate in the investigation into a 1981 birthday party White had planned for his wife.

The Globe also said a state Ethics Commission probe of the party found that money contributed by city workers to the party may have gone through a laundering operation.

Bank records subpoenaed by the commission found cash deposits that were identical in amounts to checks some city workers wrote to the birthday party committee, the newspaper said.

City officials refuse request for beds for war casualties

NEW YORK — City officials have refused a Defense Department request to pledge hospital beds for war casualties, believing it would give the false impression that nuclear conflict is survivable.

The Defense Department had asked hospitals around the country to formally allocate beds to the care of Americans injured in a conventional, or non-nuclear, overseas war.

Some of the hospitals believe there is no way to assure that a conventional war would not turn into a nuclear one.

A pledge of beds "will be interpreted as evidence that a nuclear war is somehow survivable or at least 'medically treatable,'" said Stanley Brezenhoff, president of the agency.

A Thanksgiving Greeting card takes you home for the holiday.

AMERICAN GREETINGS
...for that special person
Located in the Campus Center

UNIVERSITY STORE

Need Academic Counselling?

It's about that time in the semester again to be making major decisions.

Call "TIPS", at 545-1540, and ask for TAPES~

#1020 Changing your Major
#1009 Credit Loads
#1031 Graduation Requirements
#1027 Incompletes
#1032 Pass-Fail Option
#1033 The Repeat Option
#1012 Auditing Courses

IDB TIPS
a Service of the Dean of Students Office

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Scott Hersey
Copy Editor — Hannah Hosom
Layout Technician — Stephen Anderson
Assistant Photo Editor — Bradford Hammer
Composition — James Shanahan, Nancy Gallo, Kathy Wells, Janet Buch, Laura Shanahan, Sam Levitt, Will Hopkins, Terri Cooper, Scott Stockwell, Adrianne Dufour, Gail Tanzer, Laurie Frank

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $25 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

Dastardly Dans

Mon - Thurs
$3.00 Cover
FREE DRAFT
9 - closing
50¢ Highballs
50¢ Domestic Beers
Pool Table - Pinball - Video Games
POOL TOURNAMENT TONIGHT

Textbook Annex alternative planned by student leaders

By DAVID SUMMERSBY
Collegian Staff

Due to a markup in prices over the last three years, the University of Massachusetts Textbook Annex is currently taking in $300,000 a year in profits, and several student groups on campus are outraged.

"Students are getting ripped off," said Ron Keefe,chair of the Campus Center Board of Governors. "We want them to lower prices and give students rebates," he said.

In an effort to force the administration to come to terms with students' demands, the Undergraduate Student Senate has unveiled a plan to take business away from the Textbook Annex.

Last week, Jim Murphy, SGA President, said that this office sent out letters to all the faculty members in the economics department to ask them if they would order all their books for next semester from the Reading Remedy Bookstore in Amherst, instead of the Annex.

"The Textbook Annex is reaping a huge profit and not using it to run an efficient business," Murphy said. "We want them to lower the prices and manage the operation more efficiently."

"We are asking the economics department to boycott the Annex and order their books elsewhere," Murphy said. "We targeted the economics department because it is a related field to many majors and there are a lot of big introductory courses and lots of books," he said.

Kenny Abert, assistant to Murphy, said that if a specific professor from another department also wanted to buy their books off campus they could order their books from the Remedy Bookstore too.

"We can only start with Economics, but we want to increase the number of departments involved every semester until they have to lower the prices," he said.

"If all went well," said Kenny Abert, assistant to Murphy, "the Reading Remedy would come on campus for the first five days of the spring semester and sell the economics books out of the Campus Center."

"After that, students would have to go to the Remedy in Amherst to get the books," he said.

Employees of the Remedy and students will sell the books and Abert said that the Remedy is looking to establish full-time relationships with as many professors as possible.

The Reading Remedy will buy their books from the same publisher wholesale as the Annex does, but they will operate the whole event on a break even process and not make profits.

"They could use the advertising and we could use the help," said Murphy about the deal. "This will hopefully make a dent in the Annex profits so the administration will begin to look at our demands seriously."

As part of the Campus Center, the Annex has been taking its profits and funneling it into certain other operations that are financially unsuccessful, namely the Food Services Department, said Keefe. "This is just another hidden fee," said Keefe. "As well as paying for a book, students are paying money to fund losing operations."

"We are not here to pay for their mistakes," Murphy added.

"Why does the Top of the Campus Restaurant and Lounge lose money every year," Abert said.

Keefe said that if people start to leave the Annex it will really hurt them because they have a fixed overhead to run the operation.

He also said that the whole plan is dependent on the support of the facilty.

"It rests on the faculty and it rests on our ability that the alternative we set up will provide the same services for students and teachers as before."

Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

Whoever dumped this trash outside of Whitmore didn't pay much attention to the sign on the barrel.

Voice shortens publication to 'get paper rolling again'

By CRIS SCHUSTER
Collegian Staff

After serious discussion and debate among members of the Valley Women's Voice, the decision to cut down the publication from 16 pages to four was determined a better solution than shutting down the paper altogether.

An "emergency community meeting" was held yesterday to decide whether the Voice had enough support in the community to continue its publication.

"Extreme burnout" and "lack of staff" were among the reasons the meeting was called.

"We're in the position of asking the community to bail us out," said Dale LaBonte, a University of Massachusetts women's studies major and one of the seven core members of the Voice staff.

LaBonte said at the start of the meeting there was a possible chance of closing the paper down.

The Valley Women's Voice, a student-controlled monthly paper at UMass, has been in existence since 1979. In the three-year span, "it was apparent the number of people working on the Voice were becoming fewer and fewer," LaBonte said.

"For a long time, there's been a problem with the paper. There's been a lot of community interest and concern, but there's always been a lack of information and communication between the Voice and the community," she said.

In June, the Voice was cut-off from funding by the Student Senate and became a student-controlled organization. Since the cut-off of funds, the Voice has had many severe financial problems, LaBonte said.

At present, the Voice's revenue has been generated by advertising. "We've been paying someone to get advertising," LaBonte said. "What's becoming obvious is that it hasn't worked."

"Even if we got enough people to get the paper rolling again, we can't get it funded," she said. "We need people who have expertise to volunteer."

Campus vandalization of Arab, Israeli posters continued

Poster vandalization 'perpetuates hostility'

By AMY JENNESS
Collegian Staff

Several posters, put up around the University of Massachusetts to advertise Solidarity Week for Lebanese and Palestinian People, were vandalized this past weekend.

The 11 by 14 inch posters, which depicted a dead dove lying on a Star of David and listed events for Solidarity Week, were torn down or covered with pamphlets criticizing their content, said Abdullah Tamini, a member of the organization of Arab Students.

The flyers had been either stapled across the posters or on the top of them. One shows a picture of Iranian leader, the Ayatollah Khomeni and Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The flyer says "Do you remember the Hostage Crisis?"

The second flyer, stapled to the top of the Solidarity posters, asks if the symbol of the Star of David and the Dove perpetuates hostility toward people who support the present Israeli government.

"These don't announce anything but hostility," said Timimi. "It diverts the issue of Palistinian Solidarity Week."

Tamini said he puts around 200 posters up a day only to find 50 posters remaining the next morning. Of those 50 posters, Tamini said 90 percent of them had flyers on them.

"This is not the actions of one individual. These are the actions of an organized group of people," said Tamini.

Sherri Klienman, a University of Massachusetts student and member of Hillel — a Jewish organization — said she is aware certain individuals tear down posters, but said Hillel does not approve of the actions.

"We do not condone it. It doesn't prove anything. It's just a poster war," said Kleinman.

Tamimi said he is aware a Jewish poster announcing an event has been defaced with swastikas recently.

"We (the OAS) condemned the same action," said Tamimi. "The people who put up the swastikas on their posters are as disgusting as the people who put these things on our posters."

The Solidarity Week is sponsored by The Organization of Arab Students, the Office of Third World Affairs, the Northampton Committee of Central America, and the Palestine Solidarity Committee.

Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

The poster proclaiming "Jewish Dignity," which was vandalized this weekend.

Jewish dignity poster torn down Saturday

By PAUL BELVAL
Collegian Staff

A portion of a plywood poster advocating "Jewish Dignity" was torn down Saturday night from the Campus Center garage at the University of Massachusetts in a series of anti-Jewish and anti-Israeli vandalism plaguing the school.

In the past two months, posters put up by Hillel — a UMass Jewish organization — and other Jewish groups have been ripped down or covered with swastikas and other anti-Semitic slurs.

Howard Glantz, a member of Students Against Political Distortion — a group associated with Hillel — said the poster couldn't have been ripped down by the wind because of the way it was secured.

Glantz said he believes the organization of Arab Students (OAS), who themselves had posters vandalized over the weekend, were responsible for the poster being torn down.

"I know people who have seen the OAS leader, Abdullah Tamini, ripping down our posters and putting up theirs. The leader of the OAS has been seen ripping down our posters," he said.

Tamini denied any responsibility for the vandalism and accused Glantz of "trying to distort the issue."

Nassar Hassu, another member of the OAS, said his group had nothing to do with any of the acts of vandalism.

"The OAS does not involve itself in this kind of action," Hassu said. "The OAS has nothing to do with this. He (Glantz) is just doing this to create a charged atmosphere."

Glantz also denied that his group had any part of the vandalism of the posters advertising Solidarity Week for Lebanese and Palestinian People — posters which depicted a dead dove lying on a Star of David.

"I never heard of my group tearing down their posters," he said. "I think they're a disgusting thing to be putting up on our walls. If they're being ripped down, I would chalk it up to a general campus disgust with the posters."

Hassu denied the posters were offensive at all.

"They signify how peace is being undermined by the Israelis," he said.

Hypercurricula

"Hypercurricula," a listing of events held at the University of Massachusetts and surrounding area, is published daily in the Collegian. Events are listed only on the day they are taking place. Announcements must be submitted on "Hypercurricula" forms available in the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center, and returned to the office by 3 p.m. the Friday before the event. All submissions should be written in a similar style as they appear in the paper.

"Hypercurricula" notices not submitted on the standard form and not submitted by the Friday before the week the event will take place will not be run. Due to space limitations, the Collegian cannot guarantee printing of all "Hypercurricula" notices. Priority will be given to UMass organizations.

UMASS DARTS CLUB — Organizational meeting for all students interested in playing darts. 3 p.m., 805 Campus Center.

ETA SIGMA PHI CLASSICAL LECTURE SERIES — Professor D. Grose will give a slide-lecture on "Glass in the Agustan Age." Refreshments will follow the lecture. 4 p.m. 205 Herter.

UMASS HUNGER TASK FORCE MEETING — Potluck and FAST wrap-up — ideas for future projects, Fasts, etc. 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., 428 Student Union.

PRE-MED CLUB MEETING — Surprise! We have money! Let's plan fun ways to spend it! New members welcome. 5:30 p.m., 801 Campus Center.

UMASS PEACEMAKERS MEETING — Planning for civil defense celebration now in progress, 6 to 8 p.m., 903 Campus Center.

ANTI-RACISM TEAM — Please join us to eradicate racism. 6:30 p.m., 177 Campus Center.

FINAL PLANNING MEETING FOR JEWISH NURSING HOME — Come help plan for Hillel's trip to a Jewish Nursing Home in Springfield Schedules for Tuesday November 30. This is the final planning meeting. 7 p.m., Hillel office, 302 Student Union Building.

OUTING CLUB MEETING — Slide show: Jack Donovan - Trekking Through Nepal. Also trip announcements and business meeting. 7 p.m., 168 Campus Center.

UMASS PIB PEOPLE INTERESTED IN THE BIBLE — All are invited to join us in an informal gathering to study about the teaching and life of Jesus Christ as described in the New Testament. 7 p.m., 178 Campus Center.

THE STAN WATERMAN SHOW — Presented by the Wildlife Society and D.V.P., featuring the renowned underwater cinematographer with his choice films of the ocean and its magnificent creatures. 8 p.m., Student Union Ballroom.

THE CONNECTION BETWEEN RACISM AND ANTI-SEMITISM — A talk by Larry Zakim of the B'nai Brith Anti-Defamation League. 8 p.m., 917 Campus Center.

Looking to past important for future according to UMass history professor

by BECKY THATCHER
Collegian Correspondent

The need for a new global philosophy, and a campaign for conservation to save human life was advocated by University of Massachusetts history professor Stephen B. Oates in a speech on Saturday.

"We live in an increasingly centralized world whose problems and activities are corporate, community and complex," Oates said.

Professor Oates is a biographer who has just finished Let the Trumpet Sound, a noted biography of Martin Luther King. He also received a Umass Distinguished Teacher award and the Faculty Fellowship in 1981.

Oates denied the popular American myth of "rugged individuality" and used examples from American history to show that Americans always were, and will continue to be, interdependent.

Oates then explained the importance of understanding history by saying, "We need desperately to look at the past with a sense of realism...we desperately need to know our common world and national history."

"The problems that beset us today cannot be understood and solved unless they are viewed in world context," he said.

He explained that due to jet travel and instantaneous communication, the world has become very small.

"If we are to survive in such a tiny planet, a shrinking planet — increasingly so — then perhaps we really do need a new set of attitudes and values. We can no longer...live by the reckless attitude of damn the tomorrows and full speed ahead," he said.

Oates said scientists have been telling us for years how we are raiding the earth's resources at an incredible rate.

"The depletion of our raw materials is so appalling that it could mean disaster for this generation, let alone any future generation," he said.

Oates referred to the native Americans — the Indians — as a group of people from whom we can learn when it comes to conserving what we have left, and developing a new set of attitudes.

"They are a group of people who developed an attitude toward the earth as a living creature, the mother of all of us, who gave us all life," he said.

Oates said that there are a number of theologians who say that we must resuscitate this ancient concept of the world that gives us life, for of course if the world dies, we all die.

"We are caught up in a profound historical crisis in the last quarter of our war-torn century, a crisis about not whether popular government will survive or human rights will survive, but whether the human race will survive," he said.

Oates concluded his speech quoting Abraham Lincoln, "The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present."

MASSACHUSETTS MINUTEMAN

40 1982-83 BASKETBALL 40

FREE 1982-83 UMass Basketball Calendar
Full Size Wall Calendar 19"x25"

With any purchase of UMass Imprinted Clothing
*Limited quantity available 1 per customer

*Calendars located in the Clothing Department

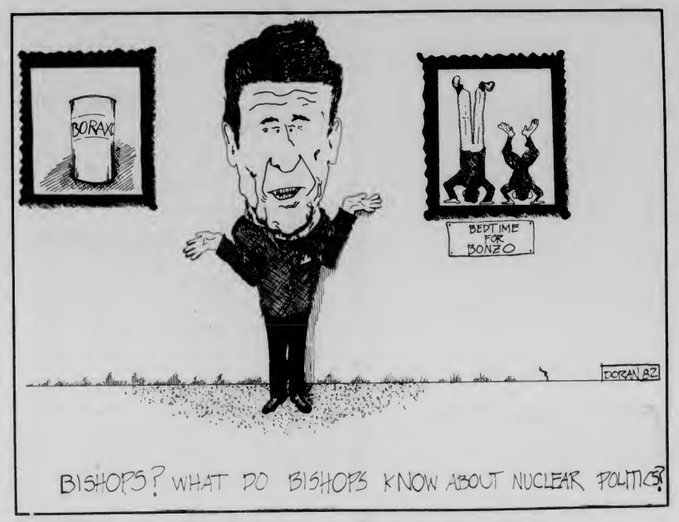
Compliments of: UNIVERSITY STORE

Headquarters For all your UMass Insigna Sportswear

40 MINUTE GANG

BLUE WALL
CAMPUS CENTER AT UMASS
MON. NOV. 22nd
Bud Night At The Fights
PRIZE FIGHTING FILMS
Promotional Giveaways
Free Popcorn * No Admissions
with M.C. PAUL MANTON

EDITORIAL/OPINION



Reach out and touch someone

Christopher Frick

It's 5:30, dinnertime, and half way around the world a man lies in the streets starving. 5:45 and the lines in the dining commons are long and noisy, while in major cities across the country the souplines are lengthening in quiet hopelessness. 6:00 looking at the meat on the plate that the lady is handing over the counter and a woman in El Salvador wails over the body of her dead son. 6:15 and everybody is at the table and talking of their days while a woman is raped in her own apartment. 6:30 it's time for seconds while the growing Ku Klux Klan prepares to burn another symbol of human love. 6:45 feeling full and satisfied and missiles are waiting, just waiting. 7:00 walking back to the dorm and somebody's grandmother is cold, hungry, and ill without the money for heat, food or medical care. 7:15 and it's time for some beers while our government agents are preparing to bust and beat people who have organized because their people's rights have been denied or made a mockery for 200 years. 7:30 and it's gonna be a good party tonight and that really cool couple will be hitching home later to be picked up by three drunken children trying to be men. They will beat the husband. For fear of breeding violence he will not lift a finger. He will ask his assailent why he is so violent and his jaw will be broken in a mindless reply. It was a good party.

The above account, most of which is real, (was designed to) demonstrates the simultaneity of security and hell for the purpose of examining the alienation and desensitization of the individual in our society.

Alienation and desensitization is related to the competiveness of a society. It is a defense and a tool. For the individual it is a defense from the pain of our world and a tool to remain an individual. The problem is, it is also a problem.

The problem began when we became individuals and found it lonely. the problem got worse when we began to emmulate the "rugged individual" as a hero, and got tough, and found it lonely. Still to worsen the problem were the advertisers who found out that individuals feel lonely and that it is possible to sell lonely people items under the pretense that they will have more friends and sleep with members of the opposite sex more often. We took the next sadly inevitable step and bought the items. We bought toothpaste that will clear our teeth till they glow in the dark, we bought fast cars to catch fast members of the opposite sex, we bought huge stereos so that we wouldn't have to listen to the fast members of the opposite sex once we caught them, we bought the idea that these items will make us better individuals. To have something better we had to compete. Compete we do, and will all the items we bought we don't have to feel anything for ourselves, or for the person who is starving. With the stereo on we don't have to hear the woman in El Salvador. With our teeth glowing we can't see past our mouths to where the woman is being raped, or why. Still, however, we buy.

We buy more heroes to emmulate. We buy their masks. We buy their booze (in more than one way) and we pay. We pay by no longer having an identity because everyone else is our hero. We pay in not being able to feel our own tears through our masks. We pay the liquor bills of our heroes. We pay by not treating the problems we don't want to hear feel or in any other way sense, except when they effect us. Those problems make children drink and make them like the men they bought. Those problems make the children beat another man, and worst of all, enjoy it. We've bought the problems, but we bought one other thing; an opportunity to get an education. Right now we as a large body of people who are learning can start to stop this alienation and desensitization. We can utilize the resources of this university, the professors, the fellow students, and the numbers to begin to solve the problems of the grandmother, the husband and rape victims, one of whom could even be related to you.

We've bought a lot, but we bought the most important thing. We bought the potential. Yea, it was a good party.

Christopher Frick is a UMass student.

Letters

University Placement Service break-in can't be justified

To the Editor:

This letter is addressed to the person or persons who took it upon themselves to sneak into Hampshire House and steal student files. The files contained the resumes of students who requested an interview with the National Security Agency. The files also contained the comments and evaluation of students by the recruiter.

We the staff of UPS encourage free speech on the part of groups opposed to the recruitment by certain agencies on our campus. Your position when shared with classmates may help some of them make decisions as to which agencies they wish to interview with. But once they have made a free decision to talk with a recuiter, they should be afforded the same degree of freedom that you are allowed to exercise.

You accomplish very little towards bringing converts into your camp by exhibiting such irresponsible behavior. You are probably of the same persuasion as those who opposed the Watergate break-ins. But when those law-breaking tactics serve your purposes it suddenly becomes justifiable behiavior.

Arthur L. Hilson
University Placement Service

We need columnists!

Drop by with a piece,
Room 113
Campus Center

A new fee distribution

Editor's note: This is the third part of a four part series

Dave McCarthy

The key to bringing student government back to students is control over the distribution of the $96 activities fee. For any plan concerning increased student empowerment to be successful, it must guarantee that the funding of essential services be continued, while at the same time, allowing the students to decide at what level.

A major step in accomplishing this goal is the creation of separate fees for essential services. By removing essential services from the activities tax, three things would happen. First, the Senate would be prevented from threatening cuts in services that everyone uses like the transit, as a way to increase the activities tax as a whole. Second, each student's fee bill would finally reflect what is already happening in the budget process. For instance, groups like UPC, DVP, or the area governments already get a fixed amount of money per student each year. In addition, organizations such as the Student Activities Office, and Legal Services are routinely funded at or near requested levels because of their service and availability to the entire University community. Itemizing these fees for all practical purposes, just states the obvious. Third, by subjecting any increase in the essential fees to a binding campus referendum, students gain the ultimate veto over increases in the portion of the SATF that goes to essential services.

Listed are the six new fee categories, and how they would be overseen.

1. Area Government Fee

The area governments who are presently given $8.40 per head, would have their funding increased to $12.00 per head locked in for three years. The rationale for this increase will be explained in tomorrow's segment. Any further increase after three years would have to be passed by a binding referendum of the students.

2. Media/Communications Fee

This group would include WMUA, Index, Nummo News, Spectrum, Drum, and Black Mass Communications Project. The fee would be allocated by a board made up of a representative from each group, plus an interested faculty/administration member to lend continuity.

Any increase in the Media Fee would be subject to a binding campus referendum.

3. Transit Fee (Covering UMass and five college bus service)

This fee, while still set by contract, would be overseen by a board of users, supporters and technical experts from the entire community. The reason for line itemming this fee concerns its rising cost. On the bill, students would be able to see how much of their money is being spent on transit, and decide through binding referendum, whether maintaining the present level of service is worth the ever increasing cost.

4. Legal and Judicial Fee

This fee would be used to fund the University Judiciary, Legal Services, and the SGA Attorney General's Office. Itemizing this fee will shelter our judicial system from pressure or interference by any group they might investigate. The fee would be set by a board, similar to that governing the Media Fee, with increases approved by the student body through binding referendum.

5. Student Activities Office Fee

In order to effectively carry out its responsibility of accounting for purchases, and monitoring RSO accounts, funding for the Student Activities Office must be itemized on each student's bill to keep the office invulnerable to Senate politics, while remaining open to continuous scrutiny by the undergraduates as a whole. The SAO fee would be set up and controlled by a governing board made up of one appointment from the Senate, one appointment from each of the individual area governments, plus appropriate administrative representation.

6. Arts and Culture Fee

This fee would presently cover the Distinguished Visitors Program and Union Program Council (both of whom are getting a fixed amount per head already). In the future, this fee could also fund artistic endeavors without having to demonstrate that art is more important than child care or weekend bus service. Again, this fee would be overseen by a users board made up of interested parties and representatives from the affected groups.

While a case can be made for the inclusion of other groups, those are the six categories that we feel should be removed from the SATF and turned into separate fees. The initial fees can be set by averaging the budget appropriations of the affected groups for the last three years.

Tomorrow, we will show how control over the distribution of the remaining 10 percent of the student activities fee can be returned to the general student population, and how the area governments can adapt to its new autonomy to meet the needs of its constituents.

Dave McCarthy is a UMass student.

Looking for an Academic Alternative?

Call "TIPS" at 545-1540 and ask for TAPES-

*1011 BDIC (Bach. Degree in Indiv. Conc.)
*1029 Five College Courses
*1030 Office of Internships
*1038 Study Abroad
*1310 National Student Exchange Prog.
*1036 Stockbridge School of Agriculture
*1040 University Without Walls

IDB TIPS

a Service of the Dean of Students Office

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
Rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays, Saturdays 1-4

AMHERST CINEMA
Monday and Tuesday
Fearless Vampire Killers 7:15
Night of the Hunter 9:00
Wed. thru Sat.
Reds 7:00
Downtown Amherst
253-5428

The 1761 Old Mill
RESTAURANT & VILLAGE SHOPS
Reserve Now for Thanksgiving
Serving Continuously
MONDAY thru FRIDAY — 11 AM to 10 PM
SAT., SUN., & HOLIDAYS — 8 AM to 10 PM
SUNDAY BRUNCH — 11 AM to 2 PM
617-874-5941
RTE 2A, WESTMINSTER, MASS., Just off Rte. 2
Owners — The Foster Family

Need Cash?
Member Amherst Chamber of Commerce
Buying Class Rings
Highest Prices Paid
Also: Gold & Silver—Coins & Jewelry
DANIEL SMITH
25 North Pleasant Street
Amherst Mon - Sat 10 - 5:30 tel. 256-0710

IS THIS YOUR LUCKY DAY?

CALL JEANE DIXON'S HOROSCOPES-BY-PHONE:

You never know what might happen today. But you can always ask the stars. Jeane Dixon's latest one-minute forecast is just a phone call away – 24 hours a day. It's always fun to call, and if you check the rate chart, you'll find out when you can call for practically nothing. And who knows. That one call might just make your day.

Aries (March 22-April 20) . . . 1-212-976-5050
Taurus (April 21-May 21) . . . 1-212-976-5151
Gemini (May 22-June 21) . . . 1-212-976-5252
Cancer (June 22-July 23) . . . 1-212-976-5353
Leo (July 24-Aug. 23) . . . 1-212-976-5454
Virgo (Aug. 24-Sept. 23) . . . 1-212-976-5656
Libra (Sept. 24-Oct. 23) . . . 1-212-976-5757
Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) . . . 1-212-976-5858
Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) 1-212-976-5959
Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 20) . . 1-212-976-6060
Aquarius (Jan. 21-Feb. 19) . . 1-212-976-6161
Pisces (Feb. 20-March 21) . . . 1-212-976-6262

	1st Min.	Extra Min.
Monday-Friday 8 am-5 pm	58¢	39¢	These rates apply on calls you dial yourself, no operator involved, from the Amherst-Northampton area. Tax not included.
Sunday-Friday 5 pm-11 pm	34¢	24¢
Sunday-Friday 11 pm-8 am	23¢	16¢
All Day Saturday	23¢	16¢
Sunday 8 am-5 pm	23¢	16¢

℠ service mark of Horoscopes By Phone, Inc.

New England Telephone

RSO Workshops:
Mon. Nov. 22
at 4:30 in rm 911 CC
Tues. Nov. 30
at 5:30 in rm 416 SU
Wed. Dec. 1
at 4:30 in rm 811 CC
Mon. Dec. 7
at 5:30 in rm 803 CC
All RSOs requesting funding must attend!

Governor's Program Council Presents
FREE!
KILLER COMEDY NIGHT!
TUESDAY, NOV. 23
at the BLUEWALL with Boston's
★★ COMEDY ALL STARS ★★
★★ D.J. HANARD ★★
★★ BOBBY GOLDTHWAIT ★★
★★ DON GAVIN ★★
Plus The Fabulous WIREHEADS with guest comic Kevin Brown
Hosted by M.C. Terry Slagel
FREE!

Arts

Swinging Texas blues

JOHNNY COPELAND
Thursday, November 18
Hangar One

By PHILLIP PLANTE
Collegian Staff

For whatever reason, the crowd at Hangar One Thursday night was a small one. Too bad; the Johnny Copeland Blues Band gave an impressive performance, demonstrating a swinging Texas blues style that bring in influences from Motown and rhythm and blues.

Like Gatemouth Brown, another Texan who played the Rusty Nail last year, Copeland's blues style is markedly different from the heavy emotional sound of Chicago and Delta blues. Commenting on the differences in style, Copeland said, "We didn't have the listening material you have today. We didn't have any records, just jukeboxes that we'd hear whenever we went into town. Blues singers didn't really have any way of listening to each other. Everybody in different places was playing the same thing in a different way. The Delta (blues singers) was kind of laid back and the Texas players would swing it and use a lot of horns."

Unlike some blues horn sections which sometimes seem out of place and uncoordinated, Copeland's three horn players chimed-in in appropriate ways that went well with his upbeat rhythmic style. Tunes like "Rockin' Pnemonia," had an almost James Brownish excitement and atmosphere to them, due in part to Copeland's physical and vocal resemblance to him.

Roomfull of Blues, the opening act that night, played with a lot of one might call "laid back enthusiasm." Though certain individuals in Roomfull stand-out in their own way, a certain personality lacks in their music. Most of their tunes were rehashed blues or early rock tunes that sounded rehashed. The obligatory gestures to arouse excitement in the crowd, such as playing the saxophone on the dance floor merely produced tolerating smiles if not yawns of boredom. It would have been nice if they could have finished earlier instead of forcing Copeland to go on at 12:20 and thereby shorten his set.

Johnny Copeland played Thursday night at Hangar One

Music, for Christ's sake

By PETER WISSOKER
Collegian Staff

The true new-wave has hit. It's the wave of the Lord. Music that speaks of love and Jesus instead of drugs and the devil, music that thanks God for all the good things he has done for us, his humble servants. Two of the biggies of the Christian modern music wave washed-up on shore here in Northampton to perform for a very receptive audience Thursday night.

Phil Keaggy made it big as a guitarist in the rock world before he discovered Christ. In the Seventies, he was a much sought-after studio musician with many admirers reportedly including the late Jimi Hendrix.

Keaggy's style is a cross between Steve Howe and Al Dimeola. The more interesting things he played were a couple of slow jams. His guitar had that slow whining sound that makes each note sound like a half second excerpt from an ambulance's siren. The fast tunes he played were standard pop fare, fast and accurate, but nothing new.

Shelia Walsh, a Christian from England, was Keaggy's special guest. Her set shrank quickly from Lene Lovich shriek rock to that annoying Olivia Newton John "Hey look I can sing rock and roll too" sound.

Walsh's set, however, was definitely the most entertaining part of the show. Backed by Keaggy and his band she pulled all the stops. Smoke screens, dry ice, explosions like wow, KISS man. Of course, like any self respecting twenty-two year old, I thought it was funny as hell. After giving a short talk about how her mission was to reach people at the fringes of the church and those who have not yet found the Lord, Walsh stood with the lights flashing and the smoke rising and gave us her impression of a lost adolescent.

A modern teenager lost in a world without love, without God. The song "Fear of Silence," is bound to be a smash. With all the visual excitement and heavy drum beating the auditorium of hell confused me. Was this supposed to evoke pity in the hearts of these good Christians or contempt?

Musically, the show was pretty good. As a rock concert, the show was ok, but the people there wanted to make sure that I wrote this story conveying the connection the show has with love of Christ. So to be quite honest, I was disappointed by the show. Love for the Lord is what makes gospel singers fly into a frenzy that allows them to do those incredible things. Neither Keaggy nor Shelia Walsh showed any kind of religious fervor at all.

Distinguished Visitors Program and The Wildlife Society proudly present
The Stan Waterman Show
Featuring the Emmy award winning deepsea cinematographer and his films of the ocean with its most exciting inhabitants
Monday, November 22 at 8:00 p.m.
Student Union Ballroom FREE

GRAND OPENING SALE-A-BRATION
Sat. Nov. 20-Sat. Dec. 4
2 weeks of Madness & Bargains
- Meet Bob Layton, Marvel Comics' Iron Man & Hercules Artist
Sat. Dec. 4
Free Marvel Guide to Collecting Comics with this ad
6 new comics for the price of 5
20% off all back issues in stock
Comics
Prints
Collectibles
Dungeons & Dragons
Moondance
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, Mass.
413-586-8775
Copyright 1982 Marvel Comics Group A Division of Cadence Industries Corp. All Rights Reserved

TIME OUT
Free Popcorn
IT's BACK
Two TV's
Monday Night Football
Come on down and see the game at
Amherst's Biggest Little Bar
37 N. Pleasant Amherst

Double Manufacturers Coupons in Hadley-Amherst
See Store for Details

All stores open Tues. and Wed. 'til 12 Midnight 24 hour stores closed Wed. at Midnight, open Fri. 7 am

Beef Bottom Round Roast USDA CHOICE 1.69 lb
or Boneless Beef Chuck Roast "Great Beef" Up to 5 lbs
Fresh Lean Ground Beef 3 lb pkg. or more lb 1.59

Rump Roast Beef Round lb 1.89
Beef Top Round Roast Up to 5 lbs lb 1.89
Beef Eye Round Roast lb 2.39
Beef Rib Roast Large End 4th-7th Ribs (at 3 Ribs 2.59 lb) lb 1.99
Shoulder London Broil Beef Chuck lb 1.99
Boneless Blade Steak Beef Chuck lb 2.29
Beef Bottom Round Steak lb 1.99
Beef Top Round Steak lb 2.29

Shoulder Lamb Chops Fresh American Grown 1.89 lb

Fresh American Grown Rib Lamb Chops lb 3.29
Fresh Loin Lamb Chops American Grown lb 3.79
Boneless Veal Roast Plume De Veau lb 2.49
Veal Cubes For Cacciatore or Sausage & Pepper lb 2.69

Save a dollar on the turkey of your choice!
Shop our great holiday circular! Copies in store.

C D26 $1.00 off On the purchase of any whole Fresh or Frozen Turkey
With this coupon & a $10 purchase. Limit 1 per customer. Good thru Nov 27, 1982. 182 STOP & SHOP

It's time to STOP & SHOP

Bacon 1 lb Pkg 1.59 Sun Glory Sliced
Chicken Leg Quarters with Back 8-9 lo package 'White Gem' lb 39¢
Chicken Breast Split With Back 5-6 lb package 'White Gem' lb 99¢
Boneless & Skinless Chicken Breast 2.29 lb 'White Gem'
Colonial Smoked Pork Shoulder Picnic water added 89¢ lb
Rath Sausage Meat 89¢ 1 lb roll Frozen
Countryfine Breakfast Sausage 1.59 lb Just pan fry and serve
Fresh Oysters 1.89 Opened 8oz can
Fresh Schrod Haddock Fillets 2.89 lb
Chocolate Eclairs 1.39 Pkg of 5 Stop & Shop Brand
Aim Toothpaste Aim—r 1.29 Reg. or Mint 8.2 oz

U.S. Grade A Turkeys Frozen 10-13 lbs 18-22 lbs lb 59¢
Fresh U.S. Grade A Turkeys 10-13 lbs 18-22 lbs lb 79¢
Swift Butterball Turkeys 10-13 lbs 18-22 lbs Frozen lb 89¢
Roasting Chicken or Perdue Oven Stuffer 'White Gem' 5-7 pounds lb 69¢ produce Pick and choose what's perfect for you.

Grapes Red Emperor • Juicy and flavorful. Pick a bunch for snacks and one for a fancy fruit bowl. lb 69¢
Tangerines or Tangelos Fresh from Florida lb 49¢
Mushrooms 4 Quart Basket Wonderful as a garnish, in gravies, sliced raw in salads! 4.59
Anjou Pears Great in salads, desserts or as is. Pick your own 2 lbs $1
Yams or Sweet Potatoes Pick your own 4 lbs $1
White Boiling Onions Mild flavor, serve with cream sauce lb 49¢
Fresh Cider Gallon Container 2.35 Half Gallon Container 1.19

Pillsbury Flour All Purpose 5 pound bag 79¢
Canada Dry Mixers Ginger Ale, Club Soda Tonic or Diet Ginger Ale Plus Dep 32 oz btl 2 for 99¢
Cranberry Juice Stop & Shop 48 ounce bottle 1.29
Green Beans Cut or French Style Stop & Shop 15½ ounce can 3 for $1
Cranberry Sauce Jellied Stop & Shop 16oz can 2 for 89¢
Whole Kernel Corn or Cream Style Stop & Shop 16oz can 2 for 79¢
Hood Orange Juice from concentrate Half Gallon container 1.29
Coronet Print Napkins Floral 1 ply 160 Napkin package 69¢
Poly Bag Vegetables Assorted varieties Stop & Shop 20 oz bag 89¢

C Stop & Shop Coupon D19 Save $1.00 On a pound or more purchase of Land O Lakes American Cheese
Stop & Shop Grocery Coupon D4 Save 50¢ C Stop & Shop On Any 1 Pkg. Durkee Extract or Spices
Stop & Shop Grocery Coupon D18 Chock full O' Nuts Coffee C All Method Grind 1 lb can 1.79
C Stop & Shop Coupon D6 Mrs. Smiths Apple Pie 26 oz pkg 99¢
C Stop & Shop Coupon D17 All Natural Ice Cream Asst. Flavors Half Gallon 1.49

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

The UMass Zone By Mark Rollins

Under The Influence By M. Joyce

Bushwa by Tom Cushwa

10 Things That Make My Heart Beat Faster . . .

1 Any time I enter a church—any church, anywhere
2 The beauty of all things after a good rain
3 A roaring fire, good conversation, and the music of David Rose to make it perfect
4 The loyalty of my friends
5 The thrill of watching each individual talent develop in each of my three children
6 The really wonderful gift my mother has of always being able to do the right thing at the right time
7 The five minutes before the curtain goes up for one of my daughter's recitals or one of my own performances
8 The thrill of meeting someone I've admired for a long time
9 Any little thing my children might do for me to show me that they love me
10 Getting laid

Bloom County By Berke Breathed

D.C. MENU

LUNCH
Risotto Italiano, Grilled Cheese Sandwich

BASICS LUNCH
Grilled Cheese on Sprouted Wheat, Creamed Vegetable Croquettes with Sauce

DINNER
Baked Chicken/Supreme Sauce, Cranberry Sauce, Baked Ham/Raisin Sauce

BASICS DINNER
Mixed Bean Casserole, Baked Chicken/Supreme Sauce, Cranberry Sauce

Reporters Needed

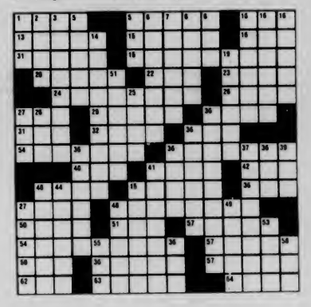
The Collegian needs reporters to cover campus and area news and women's affairs. All interested students are welcome to come and work for the Collegian, the area's largest daily college newspaper. No experience is needed and we provide training. Great experience for journalism or communications majors or anyone interested in the media. Stop by the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, anytime during the day and ask for an editor.

CROSSWORD

Edited by Margaret Farrar and Trude Jaffe
©1982 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

ACROSS
1 Pueblo
5 Word with land or sea
10 Pull along
13 Short for a great ape
15 Wilkes—
16 Language experts' assoc.
17 Zoo favorite
18 Jason's crew
20 Hideaways
22 Bernie or Blue
23 Word with cloth or curtain
24 Captive bird
26 Moistens
27 Actor's reminder
29 Verbal contraction
30 Supernatural servant
31 "—— pig's eye!"
32 Opening time
33 Word with up or down
34 Stayed with
36 Petulant persons
40 Composer Kahn
41 Somewhat, in music
42 Dine
43 Actor Andrews
45 Flies high
46 Seek private information
47 Arnaz
48 Place for heroes' souls
50 Near or far
51 Here, in France
52 Thomas Moore's "—— Rookh"
54 Orange ——, former independent South African country
57 Squirrel furs
59 German article
60 Crowns
61 Besmirch
62 Soak
63 On the ball
64 "—— and the Man"

DOWN
1 Spring
2 Type of quiz
3 Cure-alls
4 Site of Patna and Poona
5 D.C. agency
6 Light rifle
7 Whiteness
8 Antler point
9 Poet's evening
10 Bacall
11 City area
12 Breathes like some runners
14 Rabelaisian king
19 Putting two and two together
21 Succession of games
25 Furnish, as a hand
27 PFC, once
28 Numerical prefix
30 Natives of Split and Skopje
33 Of religious rites
35 Kindle
36 Pair saver, in a way
37 Relative of a trellis
38 Capek play
39 Agent
41 More considerate
43 Honey
44 Approval
45 Pouchlike
47 Put off
48 Full of life
49 Camel of the Andes
53 Ancient Syria
55 Watering spot
56 Superlative suffix
58 Near grads



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

S	A	G	E		D	E	A	L	T		S	W	A	B
P	O	E	M		E	V	I	T	A		E	A	S	E
A	N	T	I		C	A	R	S	O	N	C	I	T	Y
D	E	T	R	A	I	N	S		A	I	L	A	S
				Y	A	R	D	S		T	O	O	L	S
P	E	S	T	L	E		R	E	W	A	R	D	E	D
A	L	B	E	E		P	O	P	E		S	I	L	O
S	M	U	G		S	A	I	L	I	N	G		S	E	T
T	E	E	M		S	P	E	D		C	A	N	C	E
A	R	G	O	S	I	E	S		C	A	R	E	T	S
			T	E	S	S		G	O	O	D	E	Y
A	O	R	T	A		C	O	N	S	O	L	E	S
B	L	O	O	M	F	I	E	L	D		I	A	R	A
R	A	C	E		W	A	L	D	O		A	N	I	L
I	N	K	S		A	N	T	A	S		E	D	N	A

Weather

Foggy with periods of drizzle and rain. Highs in the 50s.

WMUA 91.1 FM

6-9	Ken Johnston — Jazz
9-12	Mystery DJ
12-3	Mahogony
3-5:30	Merritt Anthony
5:30-6	Newswatch
6-7	Peoples' Perspectives
7-10	Concepto Latino
10-2	Mystery DJ
2-6	Nightclub with Evan Abramowitz

CABLE/VIDEO

More Political Video

10:30 - 11:15 Senate Watch — The Weekly Student Senate Meeting
11:15 - 12:15 Tip O'Neil & Friends — Talking at the SUB
12:15 - 2:00 John Dean & Bob Woodward — their talk last week at the FAC

Arriving Just in Time for Thanksgiving Break

Youths & Childrens Imprinted Sportswear

Great Gift Idea

Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE

A CORNUCOPIA of Gifts for Thanksgiving

UMass Imprinted Sportswear
Caps
Scarfs
T-Shirts - Mittens
Sweaters - Shorts
Jogging Suits Childrenswear
Hooded Sweat Shirts

Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE

THIS WEEKS SPECIAL

2.72 J & J Baby Shampoo 16 oz & 4 oz Bonus

1.76 Reg. $2.71 Rev Flex Shampoo 16 oz Normal Oily X-Body Dry Rev. Flex Conditioner 16 oz Normal Dry X-Body Oily

2.52 12 oz Flex Care

1.44 reg 2.20 Mennen 2.5 oz Reg, Herb Spice, Lime Musk

71¢ Basis Soap Twin Pk

1.02 Vaseline Jelly 3¾ oz Reg 1.65

Colgate Winter-fresh Gel — Colgate Gel or Reg 6.4 oz 1.33

All sale items also available the Mini Store located in the Student Union

UNIVERSITY STORE
Located in the Campus Center Open M-F 9-5 Sat. 11-4

SUPER SALE on HP38C

only $69.95
(this is not a misprint)
Save almost 50% off our regular low price of 134.95
Save $80.00 of list price 150.00

Advanced financial calculations are its business.

HP 38C

The HP-38C is an ideal tool for real estate agents, financial analysts, accountants, bankers, managers and business students.

- Advanced financial functions including discounted cash flow analysis
- Amortization schedules
- 99 program lines for handling repetitive calculations
- Continuous Memory saves programs and data

If you need to perform advanced financial computations quickly and accurately, you need the HP-38C.
HP-38C Advanced Financial Programmable

Limited Quantities Available

No Raincheck

Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE
Open M-W 9-5

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday - Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10% • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?

Rockadisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

AUDIO

Jensan 30 spkrs $125 Technics rcvr 30 w/ch $85 new Advent util. spkrs $120 all in exc. cond. 6-4504

AUTO FOR SALE

1974 Pinto Runabout, standard, 4 cyl., mechanically excellent (72M miles) $820/BO Bob 546-4021

Great Cruisemobile here. 1973 Cadillac Coupe de Ville, 60k, PS, PB, AC, 6 way power seats, leather int., 472cc 4bbl. Many rebuilt parts, 10 mpg, $700. Call 549-4497

BROWNIEGRAMS

Three flavors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

BUNNY

Happy 1 year flopfoot! ILY & need you forever - after all, I'm just a little bunny! Love, HHB

CATE

The Course and Teacher Evaluation Guides have arrived! Pick one up in the Campus center and use it for next semester's course selection. CATE is a publication of the Academic Affairs Committee, Student Government Association.

DRYCLEANING

Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Way. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

FOR RENT

One badrom available in two bedroom Southwood townhouse. Available Jan. 1 253-3497

Two bedroom apartment, Shutesbury. 256-6293 after six

Two bedroom apt. near Southwest walking distance to Campus available Jan 1 549-5175

FOR SALE

GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972

Dremel Jewelry/Hobby Kit - drill, control pedal, attachments with jewelry accessories, stones, silver call Barb 549-0505

Apple II Plus Computer 64k with language card, printer card, disk-drive, green display C.R.T. $1190 Call Gary 546-6719

Who Tickets 16th row Dec 11 546-6977

Mens fur-lined leather jacket, handmade wedding gown, fiberfill sleeping bag, 586-9040

FOUND

A certain sum of money on November 15. If yours, tell me sum, denomination of bill(s), and where lost. Box 1166, Hampshire College

GABRIEL AT ORPHEUM

Quality cassette recordings of entire 11/12 concert for info call Mike 546-8095

GAY ALLIANCE

Notice! The Counselling Collective is moving soon! To 106 CC Same phone (545-2645)! Same hours!

HELP WANTED

Coordinator for production of the Course and Teacher Evaluation Guide. Part-time through school year. Full-time summer committment required. Third World and women students are encouraged to apply. Apply 420 S.U.B. Academic Affairs. Deadline 11/24/82

Nationwide inventory service needs for busy 6 weeks after Christmas. Must work weekends, nights. Averge 25 hours weekly $4.75 per hour. Must have phone, transportation and apply at Student Employment Office by December 1st.

Women and Men who support the American Labor Movement--Fight Union Busting Corporations! Informational Picketing Weekdays and Saturdays, 4.00/hr call 7 P.M.-9 P.M. 665-7149

Distribution opportunities Texas Instruments - home computer - ground floor multi level marketing - money making oportunities - no risk, no inventory investments. Demonstration Tues 11/23 7:30 CC Rm 911 call Grace or Paul after 5 665-2494

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons: Rock and Roll Lead. Beginners accepted. Reasonable rates. John Cosimini 256-0180

INTERSESSION RENTALS

Delta Chi has furnished rooms for intersession. Located next to S.W. dorms. Laundry, kitchen and parking available. Call Dave 549-0482 or Larry 549-1151

JAY BRIGHTMAN

Happy Birthday and congratulations on the interview. One out of 60 isn't bad. We'll loan you some wood putty for the big day. Love, hugs and kisses from the entire Graphics Dept. of the Sharon Advocate.

LESBIAN AND GAY

Are you Gay? is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2645 or drop in SU406F

LOST

Yellow leather wallet taken at Casiac 11/17. Please return. No questions asked. Sentimental value. Reward. 6-5802.

Brown wallet IDs UMass & MA license 584-2635 William Scott

Class Ring: Taeneck High School 1982 Lost the weekend of October 30th No questions, Reward. Ken 546-6690

Ladies gold watch with broken band. Between Old Chapel and Frabklin. Great sentimental value call Kate 546-6657

REWARD $75 lost flute. Call 253-3484

PERSONALS

To Demo Drougas. My deepest apologies for Saturday night Love Hot Stuff.

NY Artist Jim O'Connar and friends will be performing today from 11-2 in front of the Hatch. A great opportunity to hear good music.

To Lee we found your pair of black laced edible undies in the lounge.
Thanks for the munchies!
Love the boys from 23rd floor Kennedy.

Gratzky - Have a happy turkey day, with love and quackers from a happy duck. You too Faigsky, Love Mom.

Kosh: Happy Big 21 B-day We think it is time! Love Jamie & Isis

To the Crisco Kid Happy 22nd B-day! Love "Shirl" The Other Woman!

Lesbian/Gay Dance Fri Nov 19 9-2 10th floor CC $2 admission call the PGA at 5-0154 for more info

People's Gay Alliance and Lesbian Union speaker's bureau training session on 22 Nov. for info call 5-0154

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Dissertations, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

Ride Desperately needed for Tues Nov 23 Anytime. Will Pay. Call Robin 546-5474.

Ride Needed to Amherst and back to Boston one night weekly. Will pay, 617-423-3077 call mornings.

Ride needed to Philadelphia or Delaware vicinity for Thanksgiving. Chris 546-5739

Ride needed, Ithaca or Syracusa, Wed Nov 24. Share driving, expenses. Call Kathy 6-4987. Keep trying.

ROOM WANTED

Females looking for a room or whole 2 bedroom apt in Brittany Manor for spring semester. Please call 549-5586. Keep trying.

Fun and energetic female and her very friendly dog looking for apartment in Cliffside or room in house on bus route call 549-2808.

Single room and/or willing to share a room for Jan & Spring semester. Must be close to campus & on bus route. Preferably Townehouse or Brandywine. Call 549-5990 Mike keep trying

ROOMMATE WANTED

Belchertown coop house. Two rooms $90.00 tel 323-6835

Female wanted to share a room in Brittany Manor apt Starting Jan 1st call 253-7360.

Female Roommate One bedroom townhouse Southwood for Jan 1 155+ util after 9:30 P.M. 256-6053

Person(s) wanted for Jan 1 spring optional $150, includes heat. 256-0185

2 Roommates wantad to share large bedroom in Puffton Village $96.00 each includes heat available Jan 1 call 549-1703.

TO SUBLET

Spring semester, one bedroom in 6 bedroom house, living room, dining room, laundry and kitchen facilities; close to campus, on bus route. 150+, Call Paul after 6 pm 549-5586

2 bedroom apt on busline in Dec or Jan 325 month 665-7193

Furnished apartment on bus rt call now! 665-4793

SERVICES

Writing assistence. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729

Need help with typing fast service provided: Dissertations, etc. Double-spaced $1.75 per page Call 323-4054

BIRTH CHART READINGS learn astrology through your sign - planet positions at birth. Contact Julie at 253-7813 with your exact time of birth.

SPEEDY TYPING SERVICE
24 hour typing at reasonable rates.
For professional service call Jim 546-7042

Health Club membership available at discount price. Call 256-0511

Moving? Our 12 foot enclosed cube truck will help you safely move your stuff 256-0480

WANTED TO BU.

Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for an apartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093

Looking for an apartment in North Amherst starting January 1. Patricia 549-1414 evenings

Room or apertment wanted for two females on bus route for spring semester call 546-9689 anytime

1 female looking for own room in apt in Amherst vicinity starting Jan call 253-2496

3 girls seak 2 or 3 badroom apt in Amherst vicinity call 549-6850

WANTED TO SUBLET

Sublet for Intersession in Northhampton area 2 bedroom apt. call 546-9666

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

BIG SIX OF JAZZ II

WITH

Billy Taylor, Max Roach,
Slide Hampton, Richard Davis,
Jimmy Heath, John Hendricks

A benefit concert for the Fletcher Henderson Memorial Scholarship Fund.

Saturday, December 11 8:00 p.m.
ON SALE NOVEMBER 19

MC, VISA-CHARGE YOUR TICKETS TODAY
Telephone reservations Noon-4:00 p.m. M-F
545-2511

Fine Arts Center Concert Hall

MDI/WORD LINK

Word Processing
. . . 253-9534 . . .
37 So. Pleasant St., Amherst
(above Matthews Shoes)

Need an Interview?
25 resumes 25 cover letters/envelopes
$40.00 certain restrictions apply
TRY OUR RESUME SERVICES

Hallmark, Caspari, Gordon-Fraser Christmas Cards at
A.J. HASTINGS
Newsdealer and Stationer
45 S. Pleasant St., Amherst

BARSELOTTIS
Monday Night Football
FREE Keg!!
(at Kickoff)
Downtown Amherst

BUYING High School Class Rings
HIGHEST PRICES PAID! Also: Gold & Silver Coins and jewelry
Daniel Smith
256-0710
25 North Pleasant Street Amherst

Sports

Women's softball — There will be a meeting Monday, November 22 at 4 p.m. in room 153 NOPE for all interested candidates for spring tryouts.

Season ends in a rush for Pearson

By KEVIN DELUCA
Collegian Staff

Sometimes an extraordinary athlete is able to take a rather ordinary game and make it historic by turning it into a showcase of his talents.

Such was the case with O.J. Simpson, in the 1973 finale, when he rushed for 273 yards against the N.Y. Jets to break the 2000 yard barrier for a season.

And such was the case again last Saturday at Alumni Stadium as University of Massachusetts tailback Garry Pearson ran for 288 yards and a potpourri of records as UMass defeated American International College by a score of 29-13.

The game became secondary, especially in the fourth quarter as UMass was up, 22-7, and the crowd began to realize that Pearson was marching into the record books.

The beauty of Pearson's heroics was that it was a total team effort. The defense, led by seniors Jerry Gordon (alias Mark Gastineau) and Tom Murray, and underclassmen Craig Lesinski and Chris Wood, made sure Pearson had the time to set his records by limiting AIC to 2:44 in time of possession in that final quarter.

The offensive line did more than their share to help Pearson. They consistently opened gaping holes in the AIC defense to allow Pearson to pick up huge chunks of yardage at a time.

"I thought at times that the linemen wanted the records more than I did. After every play they would be picking me up, saying 'C'mon, C'mon, we got to get the record' and hurrying me back to the huddle," said Pearson.

Then there was Pearson himself, slashing and stumbling his way towards the records, trying to shake off the effects of a UMass record 45 carries taking its toll.

With a three-yard run late in the fourth quarter, Pearson set the first of his two major records, breaking University of Maine Lorenzo Bouier's New England career rushing record of 3,827 yards. Pearson would end up his career with 3859 yards before the afternoon ended.

The second record fell with less than two minutes left in the game. Behind right guard Scott LaFond and right tackle Wilbur Jackson, Pearson gained four yards and broke Bouier's New England single season rushing record of 1,622 yards. Two more rushes left Pearson with 1,631 and he left the game at 1:01 to a thunderous standing ovation from the crowd of 5,263.

Pearson also set a record for most yards by a Minuteman running back in a game with the 288 yard total.

It was a storybook ending to a great career.

The game itself was not particularly notable. AIC started fast, their first play from scrimmage being a 40-yard run by fullback Mike Szawlowski. Add a 35 yard pass from quarterback Rod Pena to halfback Greg Gannon and AIC had a 7-0 lead.

UMass' first drive was fruitless but a 46-yard romp by Pearson was an omen of the records to come.

The first quarter ended with the score 7-3, the Minutemen points coming on the strength of senior kicker Bob Ross' 42-yard field goal, the longest of his career.

After AIC's first drive, the UMass defense would pitch a shutout well into the fourth quarter, while the UMass offense grounded out yards and points on the legs of Pearson and fullback Rich Jenkins (19 carries for 94 yards).

By halftime UMass was ahead to stay 10-7, and Pearson was halfway to making history, having already gained 145 yards.

"We accomplished everything we wanted to today. The seniors went out winners and Garry got the records," said UMass coach Bob Picket.

Hoopwomen dunk Siena

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

The 1982-83 basketball season started off with a bang yesterday afternoon in the Cage for the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team and for 5'8" sharpshooter Barbara Hebel. Hebel, a freshman in her first intercollegiate game, hit 72 percent from the field and sank a record 37 points to lead the Minutewomen to an opening game win over Siena College 66-61.

It was a physical game in which UMass started four freshmen, Hebel, Rebecca Kucks, Karen Damminger, and Jerrie Bernier, along with junior point guard Wendy Ward.

But the star of the show was Hebel. UMass trailed 28-26 at the half and Hebel accounted for 21 of UMass' 26 points. Hebel set a new UM women's record in scoring 37 points, toppling Julie Ready's old record of 35 points. The Nanuet, NY native sank 18 of 25 field goals which is second only to the record 19 sunk by Billy Tindall against Vermont in 1968. Tindall sank 19 of 33.

"We had planned to work our inside game," said Hebel, "but we couldn't get it inside. So Ozzie (coach Mary Ann Ozdarski) told us to open the inside from the outside." A lot of the freshman's shots were outside jumpers, but she also had some layups and layups off of fast breaks.

Although, Hebel bore the brunt of the scoring in the first half, it was a team effort on defense and offense that won the game for the Minutewomen.

"We played team basketball," said elated head coach Mary Ann Ozdarski. "We rebounded well in the second half and gave good support to Hebel, who was outstanding. Rebecca Kuchs was the smartest defensive player on the court, today."

The Minutewomen had the pre-game jitters run well into the first half as they let Siena run out to a quick 11-4 lead. But due to some fine defensive play by Kuchs and hustling play by Ward and Kelly collins, UMass closed to within 13-10.

Three straight layups by Hebel gave Massachusetts a 16-13 lead and the big crowd of 300 roared their approval. Both squads went through spurts of scoring and Jean Cooper capped off a UM spurt by sinking two foul shots to give UM a 26-25 lead with 1:55 to go in the first. Siena recovered, though, to take a 28-26 halftime lead.

It was still a close game in the second half, but Massachusetts gradually began to pull away. Led by Karen Damminger's three steals and good team play, UM built up a 42-36 lead before Siena ace Mary Gaudreau hit an outside shot to pull Siena within three, 43-40.

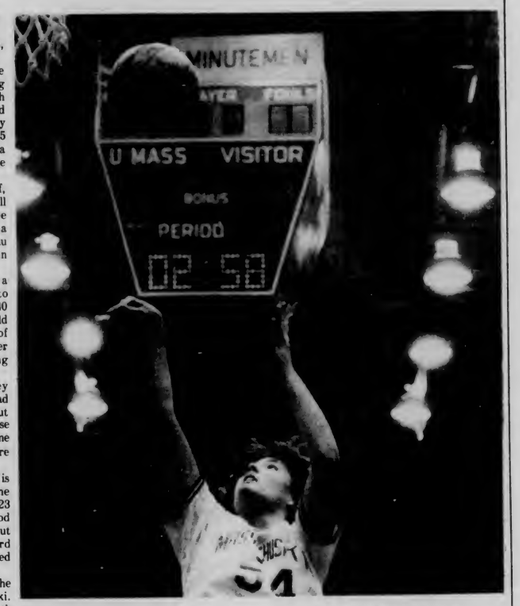
But UMass persisted and again built up a lead. A Ward pass from the baseline to Hebel, on the outside, gave UM a 51-40 lead. For the rest of the game, Siena could not capitalize on their foul shots or any of their opportunities to catch UMass. Cooper sank two foul shots with seconds remaining to clinch the victory.

"Siena," said Hebel, "thought that they could come in and press us because we had four freshman out there and fluster us. But we remained calm and just ran our offense and defense. We did the job with the game on the line. It didn't matter that we were freshmen."

Despite the opening game victory, there is room for much improvement in the Minutewomen game. UMass committed 23 turnovers and did not, overall, play good defense. UM will also have to spread out the scoring. Besides Hebel's 37, Ward scored seven points and Damminger scored six.

"We are very pleased to come out of the opening game with a win," said Ozdarski. "The best thing is that they get better with every game."

UMass will have a real test when they host Division I power Holy Cross tomorrow night in the Cage.



Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

Freshman guard Barbara Hebel goes in for two of her record breaking 36 points during yesterday's Minuteman victory.

There's a rage in the Cage for UM basketball fans

By JIM FLOYD
Collegian Staff

The only thing that went wrong for the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team last night was the fact that the tape of the national anthem didn't work properly.

Other than that, it was a night of positive performances by just about everyone as head coach Tom McLaughlin was able to let the entire team get some playing time en route to a 78-54 victory over the Venuzuelan National Team in front of 3,221 enthusiastic Curry Hicks Cage fans.

The tempo was set before the game even had a chance to get underway. McLaughlin sent the troops to the floor early with orders to entertain. What ensued was the best dunking show this campus has seen in years.

And, as if the pregame show wasn't enough to cover the price of admission, UMass took off from the start of the contest, played even with the veteran Venezuelans, and then pulled steadily away to enter the lockerroom at halftime with a very comfortable 35-19 lead.

John Hempel nailed his first shot as a Minuteman at 19:23 of the first stanza on a 15 foot jumper that evened the first two possessions for each team at 2-2. It was the first of five Hempel baskets in the half as he picked up ten points to lead UMass in scoring during the initial 20 minutes of play.

Joining Hempel in the starting five were junior Edwin Green, who played center, sophomores Horace Neysmith (forward) and Donald Russell, and another freshman, A.J. Wynder, who shared the backcourt with Russell.

The Minutemen, paced by a couple of Neysmith layups, a Green turnaround followed by two more Hempel hoops and a jumper by substitute guard Darryl Carter pushed UMass ahead by five at 15-10 and the home team never looked back from there.

At 8:40 of the period with the score 22-14, McLaughlin called time out and inserted his second starting five, a team made up of center Tom Emerson, forwards George Ramming and Skip Connors, and guards Craig (the winner of the pregame exhibition) Smith and Ron Young.

"We tried to substitute that group as a unit," said McLaughlin, "because they play as a unit in practice."

Group number two faired just as well as Group number one and the result was a 14 point lead as the clock ran out.

The second half was a more-of-the-same type affair as the Minutemen continued to cushion their lead and play better than decent ball highlighted by some very good team rebounding and some nice passing by Carter, who dished off an amazing behind the back feed to Emerson for an easy two points.

"I'm pleased but I'm not overconfident," said a smiling McLaughlin after the game. "I was probably more nervous for this game than any game I've ever coached."

McLaughlin was referring to the fact that much more is expected of the Minutemen this season, even though they are young, because of the raw talent that is present on the team.

Young they are, but the team performing like veterans, they executed both offensively and defensively, the ballhandling was good and the overall team hustle was tremendous.

"They're gonna be a good team," beamed McLaughlin. "They're gonna be very good."

The next game will be away at the University of New Hampshire on November 30. The Minutemen will play again at home on December 4 when they host Harvard University.

NUMMO NEWS

Monday November 22,1982 Volume 11 Issue 68

NUMMO News' ONLY connection with the Massachusetts Daily Collegian is for distribution.

Racism Against Indigenous Populations

As most students prepare to leave the gracious academic community of Amherst for the "Thanksgiving" holiday, it is worthwhile to give thought to the real meaning of this particular American tradition. It is not without significance that Blacks, Latinos, and Asian peoples can look at their own historical experience in America and find much to compare with that of the American Indian's heritage in the very land of their origin.

One important fact that should be taken into account when most of us are sitting around the dinner table ready to carve the turkey, is how the Indians befriended the whites and later were betrayed, not once, but many times. And up until this very day, they are still being betrayed. This issue of Nummo News is dedicated to the memory of the millions of brave people who fought for their land and to those who are continuing this fundamental struggle. La Lucha Continua!

A WRITTEN STATEMENT SUBMITTED TO THE UNITED NATIONS ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL CONUNCIL BY THE INDIAN LAW RESOURCE CENTER

You must give up the practice of purchasing the good behaviour of the Indians by presents....Tell them if they commit hostilities, they must not only expect the severest retaliation, but an entire destruction of all their nations, for I am firmly resolved wherever they give me occasion to extirpate them root and branch....

-Letter from General Jeffrey Amherst, Commander-in-Chief of the British Army in North America, to Sir William Johnson, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, 1761

Racism and racial discrimination against indigenous peoples is today still embodied in the law and legal systems of many countries of the Americas. The Indian Law Resource Center, a non-governmental organization, which represents and offers legal assistance to indigenous peoples in South, Central and North America have conducted legal and factual research into this question.

Race discrimination in the law of any country is recognized as an especially grave breach of human rights because it gives public governmental sanction to discrimination which is therefore institutionalized and on-going. In this respect, the law affecting indigenous populations in the Americas is like the more familiar abomination, apartheid.

With certain notable exceptions, such as the study now nearing completion on the treatment of indigenous peoples, almost no attention has been given to the problems of discrimination against indigenous populations. Because of severe poverty, isolation, political repression and other reasons, indigenous peoples have not until recently been able to bring these problems to the attention of this body and the Commission on Human Rights. Therefore it should be no surprise that we now find widespread, institutionalized and governmentally sanctioned race discrimination against indigenous populations. Race discrimination in the law affecting indigenous peoples has three principal elements which are found in the law of almost every American country having an indigenous population.

The treatment of indigenous peoples as wards, incompetents or beneficiaries of a supposed trust.

Under the law of many countries indigenous peoples are said to be the permanent wards of the Government or it is said that they are the beneficiaries of a trust, with the dominant Government as trustee.

The "trusteeship" is imposed, so far as we are aware, on only one racial group: indigenous peoples.

Such trusteeships have their origin in colonial practices of the past century when they were used to mask the exploitation of colonized people. These trusteeships, then as now, are not true trusts but impositions upon unwilling peoples. The trust usually cannot be legally enforced and the "trustee" is accountable to no one.

The assertion of such a "trust" relationship not only deprives indigenous peoples of their full legal capacity, but also servs as a pretext for broad authority over them. The paternalistic and abusive nature of such a sham trust is but a part of the overall pattern of institutionalized race discrimination practised against indigenous peoples.

The denial of legal or juridicial identity to some or all indigenous entities.

The human rights of greatest importance to indigenous peoples in the Americas are largely rights which exist only as community or group rights, such as the right to maintain

Continue on page 3

The Many Faces Of Racism

By Angela Brown and Adria Crum

The current climate which prevails on our campus is exemplified by recent campaigns put forth by a variety of means. For example, we see anonymous flyers plastered on various buildings proclaiming "Remember the hostage crisis...Khomeni and Arafat, take your pick". This is but one extreme example of the notion that the Palestinian struggle, like all liberation struggles, are equivalent to "international terrorism" and "anti-Americanism". This is one way in which Third World struggles abroad are delegitimized and stereotyped, and we are all familiar with the problem of stereotypes.

Meanwhile, Zionist statements are given front page coverage in the COLLEGIAN in which particular Jewish students, of a specific ideological ilk, declare that the Organizaion of Arab Students are a contributing factor to anti-Semitism. Why? Because they criticize the State of Israel's actions.However, there is a distinction between Jewish people and Israel as a state. Yet, the O.A.S. was implicated, as if Arab students could have anything to gain by fostering Nazi-ism. Nothing could be more ludicrous since Arab students have all too much to lose by promoting "Aryan" supremacy.

An equally pervasive attempt to delegitimize Third World organizations can also be seen. This effort complements the day-to-day problems which can affect people of color to the extent that said students often face a real threat to their very lives, as the death threats and Utopia incident of last Fall so clearly indicate.

In light of these daily realities and problems of this particular campus, it is a highly dangerous and destructive activity in which David McCarthy, a COLLEGIAN columnist, engages in by attacking the S.G.A. and Third World organizations. McCarthy's current series featured in the COLLEGIAN Op/Ed page proves that our job isn't finished yet, and that what he calls "noble causes" are actually central to represent all students' interests on this campus. Thus, the effort initiated by our predecessors is far from complete; much work remains to be done to eliminate forms of human oppression, a task which is necessary for all since without it all will suffer.

THE SO-CALLED "AVERAGE STUDENT"

The most highly questionable precept upon which McCarthy's analysis is based is that of the "average student", who doesn't care about the issues of racism, male supremacy and so on. Beyond the fact that this notion creates division where there might otherwise be an honest effort to communicate and unite, not by ignoring differences but by understanding their causes, this definition is so narrow that it excludes the actual majority of students on campus. McCarthy's concept does not include people of color, those of Jewish descent, or women, who together can not be seen as an insubstantial proportion of the UMass population. In addition, McCarthy's concept of the "average student", who is supposedly not represented in the student government, excludes progressive or open-minded students of any race or gender who simply want a better way of life. Thus, this narrow conception is one of a student who would not support the very organizations which are at least attempting to deal with the problem. What kind of student is McCarthy looking for? Apparently, not one who represents most students' real interests.

McCarthy claimed in Thursday's column that the S.G.A. is insensitive to students' concerns with budget cuts, etc. and in that way displayed a real ignorance about its lobbying efforts and efforts of some of the same "activist organizations" which he attacks, such as SCERA's public policy arm.

On the other hand, he has declared that the financial support appropriated to Third World organizations is somehow of lesser importance than other appropriations. There are many examples of where the Adminstration and the various departments do not support Third World students financially. The S.G.A. has an equal responsibility to provide this support, the fact that there are rather few Third World students on campus is even more reason for the S.G.A. to meet this responsiblity. Students must address what the conditions are after admission to UMass in order to insure that they are conduseive to a representative student body, especially since the conditions prevailing are as determinant as any other factor.

Despite any of the problems which may or may not affect the S.G.A. the appropriate way to deal with them is within the student government structure where all students are encouraged to bring these to light. Dialogue and criticism are necessary for progress, but any proposal to eradicate the power or influence of the S.G.A. is really only an attempt to do the work of those who would rather see students on the whole become a powerless group. Therefore, what is purported to be a criticism of "attitudes" and "structure" can be seen as an attempt to undermine the S.G.A. for opportunistic reasons. The recent onslaught of criticisms brought against the S.G.A. for the past several weeks on the Op/Ed pages of the COLLEGIAN appears to be a potential example of this, although this intent cannot be proven at this time.

High School students attending College Awareness Day

Photo by James W. Williams Jr.

The Use of The Grand Jury

Editors Note: This is the first part of a three part series on the use of the Grand Jury as an instrument of political repression towards the many social, political, religious and cultural movements in the U.S.

A collective effort of,
Liesel Tyson
Loti Reyes-Ocasio
Brian Glick
Roxana Bell

The Grand Jury of the United States was originally won by popular struggle against the Government's use of the criminal justice system to punish its critics.

However, the U.S. Government has managed to turn it into one of the most powerful instruments of political repression. It allows the prosecutor--working with the police, FBI and intelligence agencies,--to subpoena almost anyone to appear in court at any time anywhere in the U.S.

Historically, the grand jury was supposed to be independent and to represent the community. Its job was to decide if the Government had enough evidence to charge someone with a particular crime.

Today the grand jury does not represent poor, working or Third World poeple, and it rarely includes single women head of households or people who do not live in a major city. Grand jurors are not told of their duty to prevent abuses of power by the prosecutor. Instead they are turned into a mechanism for gathering information about the opponents of the Government and for jailing them without a trial. The Irish call this, "political internment."

One of the main needs of the Government is greater control over the public. Political repression, surveillance and harrassment by the Government of its citizens (particularly those with whom it has had a long standing relationship of antagonism and domination) has long been a political fact of life in the U.S., regardless of the state of the economy. But historically repression intensifies during periods of economic crisis.

Developments in the area of grand juries follow similar patterns. The Racketteer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), allegedly designed to combat organized crime, is now being used to establish "conspiracies" among political activists and supporters. This, in addition to the 1970 immunity laws which remove Fifth Amendemet Protection from grand jury witnesses, (the right to not be forced to testify against yourself), and other new developments are making grand juries especially suitable for Government use as a political weapon.

Right now the grand jury is being used against the American Indian Movement in the Yellow Thunder Camp outside Rapid City, South Dakota, against the Puerto Rican Independence Movement in the U.S. and in Puerto Rico, against Filipine opponents of the U.S. backed Marcos regime, against the Black Liberation Movement, under the guise of investigating the Nyack Brinks incident, against the womens movement, the Anti Nuclear Movement as well as the Labor Movement.

Understanding how the grand jury works and how its powers are abused is the key to effective resistance to this form of repression. Anyone can be called as a withness before a Grand Jury--lawyers, preists, newspaper reporters, secretaries, community workers--and then jailed if they refuse to talk.

The Government believes that folks will sacrifice their principles rather than go to jail. It is important that we prove them wrong. Your never know just what the Government is trying to find out. If you talk, you may hurt your friends or help the Government smash a struggle that you care about. You also give legitimacy to the Grand Jury and to the work of political repression and intimidation that it carries out.

DON'T TALK! Support Grand Jury Resisters!!!

There will be a movie shown on the issue of the use of the Grand Jury called "Until She Talks" which will be shown in the Little Theater of the Pleasant Street Theater in Northampton. This event will take place on the 8th of December. Please read the following issues of NUMMO for futher information, and the continuation of this series.

David Du Bois To Join UMass Community

Mr. David Graham Du Bois will be joining the Amherst community for the Spring 1983 term via a visiting appointment to the Journalistic Studies department. The appointment has been made in cooperation with the Five College Black Studies program, and the W.E.B. Du Bois department of Afro-American Studies, of the University of Massachusetts.

Mr. Du Bois has had vast experience both in teaching undergradcates, and in the mass media. He has taught at the University of California, in the California community college system, and at Cairo University. Mr. Du Bois has served extensively in various news services, ranging from the Pacific News Service to Radio Cairo, in Egypt. He has also been Editor-in-chief of the BLACK PANTHER newspaper and served in the President's Office in Ghana, as director of Public Relations.

Mr. Du Bois obtained his formal education in schools such as Columbia, NYU, and Peking University, among others. He is the son of Shirley Graham Du Bois, a former faculty member of UMass, and the adopted son of William E. Burghardt Du Bois, a noted social scientist and a towering figure in American intellectual history.

NUMMO is quite pleased to report that Mr. Du Bois will be lending his expertise to the Black media organizations on campus, which include NUMMO News. Specifically, he will provide instruction to those who work with the organizations on a credit basis (see related story on NUMMO's course credit system for Spring '83).

We look forward in happy anticipation and excitement to Mr. Du Bois' presence on our campus and to his welcome contributions to the Amherst community.

Nummo Offers Credit and Holds Open House

For all those interested in working with an independent weekly newspaper produced by Black, Latino, and Asian-American students take note!!! NUMMO offers course credit for newswriters, reporters, photographers, etc. and all those interested in acquiring these skills. Third World students majoring in the humanities and social sciences, for example in History or Political Science, are especially invited to join NUMMO to gain applicable skills which directly relate to these areas, although a general interest is the main prerequisite.

There will be a brief application process for those who wish to gain full course credit (3 credits) since some of the positions are limited. For more information interested persons should stop by at 103 New Africa House, or call 545-0061. Office Hours are Tu,Th 1:00-4:00 and M,W,F, 1:30-4:00. Interested persons should apply before the end of the semester since spaces will be going fast.

Another way for interested persons to find out about the NUMMO organization is to attend our Open House on Wednesday,December 1. This will be a good opportunity to find out what we are about. The program will consist of a Newsreporting workshop to be given by Karen Thomas, former Black Affairs Editor from the COLLEGIAN of many semesters, who is currently a professional correspondent for the SPRINGFIELD DAILY UNION. A Reception will follow the workshop with refreshments and much socializing....

Remember the Open-House is Wednesday, December 1

Time: at 7:30 pm

Place: New Africa House, Central Area

Custer's Revenge

Racism Against Indigenous Populations

Continued from page 1

their religious and cultural ways. This includes the right to won and use property and natural resources which are almost without exception rights held in common by indigenous peoples or communities. Purely private ownership of land is very rare, in general indigenous people own their land in common. As a result, legal protection of fundamental indigenous rights requires that indigenous groups have juridical indentity or legal existance. Virtually every country we have examined in the Americas claims the unqualified right to deny to or to terminate the juridical identity of any or all indigenous entities. In some countries all indigenous entities are denied juridical existence. This limitless and devastating legal authority applies only to indigenous peoples. It is a special and fundamental legal disability or liability affecting one racial group like no other, and it is one of the keystones of the institutionalized race discrimination against indigenous peoples.

The denial of legal protection or recognition of indigenousproperty rights on the same basis as other races

The dominant Governments in the western hemisphere frequently deny that indigenous peoples own the land on which they live. Indigenous peole who have lived on land for generations, or since time immemorial are regarded under the law of most American governments as haveing nothing more than possessory rights. Indian land rights are sometimes termed "aboriginal title" or "Indian title", but not absolute ownership or title. Because it is denied that Indian tribes, nations and communities actually own their ancestral lands, they often are not allowed to protect their land rights in court. In a number of American countries indigenous peoples, because of their race, receive almost no legal protection for their lands. Indian land can be taken without paying compensation, without notice of intent to take, without opportunity to be heard as to the taking, and for any purpose, including the private profit of non-Indian individuals and corporations.

Everywhere in the western hemisphere, indigenous people are denied the right to own, use and retain their property, through the operation of laws and policies which apply to them solely because of their race.

Land is essential to the cultural, political, and economic survival of indigenous peoples. To most indigenous peoples, land has central spiritual and religious significance. Without land, self-sufficient people lose their capacity to provide for themselves. The racist denial of land rights is part of a process which, if left unchecked, could destroy many of the indigenous peoples.

Effects Of Discrimination

The effects of this discrimination are extremely severe, in some instances leading to the virtual extinction of certain populations. This occurs because of the lack of legal protection and the resulting inability to defend themselves against expropriation of their lands, forced relocations, diseases brought by intruding non-Indians, and destruction of the fish, game and habitat necessary for their way of life.

In some countries literally thousands of indigenous people or people of indigenous heritage have been killed, quite often because of efforts to retain or regain control of their native lands. Not long ago an Indian lawyer in a Central American country, whom we have been proud to assist, and who was working to protect indigenous land rights, was assassinated there along with his young son. Countless tales of horror and repression could be told, all related to this basic fact: institutionalized race discrimination exist against indigenous people in the legal systems of most countries in the Americas.

Where there exists legally sanctioned race discrimination, no rights of the affected class can be secure. Because indigenous people can be and are threatened with such serious violations of fundamental rights, the cannot, practically speaking, defend themselves or protect other rights, even those that are nominally protected by the law. Where the very existence of a community may be destroyed and its lands expropriated with Government sanction, the threat of such action has the effect of nullifying every other right. How can there be freedom of religion, for example, if the dominant Government is free to supress that religion with the threat of expropriation of lands?

It is well understood, particularly in relation to South Africa, that the existence of legally sanctioned race discrimination debases civilization itself and destroyed the moral and civil authority which is the foundation of law. This Sub-Commission must not turn away from this serious problem but must give close attention and study to it. This body must not accept blindly or uncritically the elaborate rationalizations of governments which wish to be excused. Of course, every Government which in fact exercises the right to expropriate indigenous lands discriminatorily and without due process of law or compensation will plead excuses and try to show it treats indigenous people well. But none can deny the existence of overtly discriminatory laws and legal doctrines. This body must not cease its scrutiny of this matter until all such laws are expressly d away with.

Reprinted from AKWESASNE Notes.

AN NOUNCEMENTS

NUMMOS' OPEN HOUSE

For all those interesed in working with the areas ONLY Third World Student run newspaper:

We are inviting you to our OPEN HOUSE On Wednesday, December 1st at 7:00 PM At 103 New Africa House, UMass

There will be a newsreporting workshop to be given by Karen Thomas, former Black Affairs Editor and currently a professional correspondent for the Springfield Daily Union
A reception will follow the workshop with refreshments and much socializing

Come and check us out!!!!

FIESTA DE CUBA IX

Will Be Celebrated On Saturday December 4, 1982, From 8:00 pm Till ?
At 47 South Prospect Street In Amherst

There Will Be Dancing
Typical Food
Refreshments
AND
A Cuban Poster Raffle
AND
MUCH, MUCH MORE

Donation $2.00

This Event Will Be A Send-Off For The Amherst Delegation Of The Antonio Maceo Brigade, A Group Of Cuban-Americans Who Will Be Traveling To Cuba This Winter

This Party Is Sponsored By The Western Mass. Venceremos Brigade And The Antonio Maceo Brigade

EVERYONE IS INVITED!!!!!
Come Early And Enjoy

BLACK MASS COMMUNICATIONS

Student Union, Room 662, University of Massachusetts
Amherst MA 01003 (413) 545 2426

FALL SCHEDULE

DAY		NAME	SHOW NAME	TIME
Sunday		Les Correia	Soft n Easy	2:00-6:00am
		Rev. Pearson	Glory Road To Gospel	6:00-10:00am
Monday		More Music	BMCP	7:00-6:00am
		Ken Johnston	On Air Live-Jazz	6:00-9:00am
		Gus Martins	" "
		Mahoghany	Free As The Wind	12:15-9:00pm
		Merritt Anthony	BMCP	3:00-5:30pm
	*	People's Perspective	BMCP	6:00-7:00pm
		Concepto Latino	BMCP	7:00-10:00pm
Tuesday		The General	BMCP	12:15-3:00pm
		Elliott Andrew	Urban Contemporary	10:00-2:00am
Wednesday		Theresa M	BMCP	6:00-9:00am
Thursday		Rev. Pearson	Glory Road To Gospel	2:00-6:00am
		Concepto Latino	BMCP	6:00-7:30pm
		D.R.	BMCP	3:00-5:30pm
		Karl Miller	Pan Afrique	10:00-2:00am
Friday		Mark Edwards	BMCP	2:00-6:00am
		Mark Semedo	New Jazz Experience	6:00-9:00am
		Concepto Latino	BMCP	9:00-12:00noon
		Carl Lowman	Rhythm Section	12:15-3:00pm
Saturday		Reports In Color	w/Bettina Henry	6:00-7:00pm
		Daddy Nell	Funk n Thangs	7:00-10:00pm
		Frank Oglesby	Frankie O's Odyssey	10:00-2:00am

KEY
* Public Affairs
 Rev. Pearson included, not a part of BMCP
 News

TOTAL HOURS OF PROGRAMMING 68%

Keep on listening to BMCP on WMUA, 91.1 FM and help us keep Black Music alive!

The Third World Women's Task Force is sponsoring a film series this autumn semester, 1982, entitled: Third World Women in Liberation Struggles. In concert with each film presentation, there will also be a faculty member from the five college area to speak, answer questions, fill in gaps, update the film, and help lead a discussion. It is the hope of the Third World Women's Task Force that these presentations will provide a forum of discussion as well as education around topics of concern to the Third World, and specifically to the women of the Third World.

This is a lunchtime film series to be held every-other Thursday at noon until 1 p.m. These presentations are free of charge and open to all.

Due to the nature of the organization, and to the extremely limited budget we are working with, we are asking those groups and individuals like yourselves who share common interests to co-sponsor the series by making a monetary contribution, if possible. Any amount is both welcome and appreciated. We thank you for your interest in our program.

Third World Women in Liberation Struggles

November 18th Women Under Siege
A brand new film which looks at the participation of the women of a small Palestinian village located just six miles north of the Israeli border in their unique and often overlooked struggle. * Speaker TBA. Thursday, noon - 1 o'clock. U.Mass Campus Center. Room 903.

December 2nd A Vieled Revolution
From the same woman who produced Women Under Siege, comes this very recent account of the women's movement in Egypt. *Speaker TBA. Thursday, noon - 1 o'clock. U.Mass Campus Center. Room 904-08.

* Indicates that the speaker has not yet formally confirmed. TBA:to be arranged.

Liberation Film Series

The Northampton Committee on Central America is pleased to announce the debut of it's new film series, "Liberation Film Series" which opened at the Pleasant Street Theater in Northampton. The film will cost $1.50 and proceeds will go to the continuation of the series. For the time being limited seating is available as we are using the downstairs theatre. Following is the proposed schedule of films. All films begin at 2 pm.

December 5 - "The Murder of Fred Hampton"- a documentary portraying the events leading to the government plotted assasination of Fred Hampton a Black Panther leader.

12- "The Westfield Strike"- a videomade by a local film maker on the Sterling Radiator strike. The film gained national attention for the strikers.

19- "Decision to Win - The First Fruits"- this film presents an engrossing portrait of life in the province of Morazan, El Salvador a stronghold of the Ferabund Martí para la Liberación Nacional (F.M.L.N.)

Announcements policy: All announcements must be submitted in writing by the Friday before date of issue.

All unsigned editorials represent the views and opinions of NUMMO Staff

NUMMO STAFF

Roxana Bell	Co-Editor
Angela Brown	Co-Editor
Brynne Clarke	Lay-Out Editor
Mitra Samimi	Graphics Editor
John Wright	Photo Editor
Jennifer Bayne	Researcher
Donna Davis	Business Manager
Angela Siscamanis	Typesetter
Deanna McRae	Administrative Assistant
Keith Johnson	Reporter
Tracey Bryant	Reporter
Max Senior	Photographer
Ed Cohen	Photographer
Sheila Smith	Photographer
Chris Hardin	Photographer

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian

Volume CXII, Issue 54 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Tuesday, November 23, 1982

Proposal calls for alteration of core system

By ANNE CHAPMAN
Collegian Staff

A group of about 80 faculty members and students at the University of Massachusetts are in the Process of distributing copies of a general education proposal which could change the nature of the C,D and E core requirements.

Under the proposal, the courses which presently constitute C,D AND E cores will take on a general heading coined "The Breadth of Knowledge". Under this component, six general types of courses will be offered.

These courses would be: Expressive Culture; Continuity and Change; The Individual; The Biological World; The Physical World; and Foreign Language.

The purpose is to make an important change in the general education curriculum," said Johnetta Cole, associate provost and member of the committee.

"It creates a whole new notion about general education," she said.

"The Breadth of Knowledge component can be considered as the substitution for the existing courses, namely the C,D and E requirements," she said.

Some courses will already satisfy the "Breadth of Knowledge" section. Others may not.

The nature of the Breadth of Knowledge courses is designed to promote more integration between major and non-major courses.

"The courses in the present system are too specialized," said Robert Thayer, a member of the student Committee on General Education.

"The nature of the courses in the General Education proposal is designed to break out of this mode of compartmentalization. For instance, a course in the biological World will also teach something about its implications in the social world," he said.

"The Breadth of Knowledge courses that will replace C,D and E courses will attempt to cross disciplinary boundaries," Thayer said.

Other components of this proposal include a freshman tutorial and senior seminar. These courses are also designed to facilitate integration among undergraduate courses. Members of the faculty and student committees say these tutorials would allow for more communication between faculty and students.

"Much more coherence is needed among courses," said committee member Ellen Nylen. "Education tends to be set up in a one directional manner."

"Students are the recipients of education proposed by faculty. It should be more than just a consumable package of information," she said. "Core requirements are simply handed out to students, without any explanation. The freshman tutorial and senior seminar could provide the necessary interaction between students and faculty," Nylen said.

Collegian photo by Jim Powers

Kevin Richardson, instructor for the University of Massachusetts Parachute Club, takes a backwards step out of a plane over Turners Falls airport.

What lies in the high-tech future of the Valley

By ELLEN M. RYDER
Collegian Correspondent

Editor's Note: This is the second of a two part series on computer companies.

High Technology industries encircle the Boston metropolitan area like jewels on a golden bracelet, enriching an otherwise ragged Massachusetts economy.

Now technology companies big and small are looking to set themselves in the Pioneer Valley.

"If the computer industry is growing, this would be the next logical area," said computer and information sciences (COINS) professor Alan Hanson. "Typically, companies develop around a nucleus of talented people in universities or research labs. Boston is already saturated."

Steve Gross, Manager of Operations at Amherst Associates, a software company in Amherst, said he did not expect the development in Western Massachusetts to equal that of the Boston area.

"I don't think it will get that extreme," Gross said. "I don't think Western Massachusetts will grow as much as Route 128."

"Salespeople come to the company from New York, Hartford and Boston," Gross said. "They are astounded that a company so driven by high-technology should be set in such a pastoral location.

Several computer software companies have already moved into the Valley including to name a few, Intelligent Software Systems on Belchertown Road in Amherst, Computerized Biomechanical Analysis Inc. on College Road in Amherst, Amherst Associates at three locations in Amherst and Garrett Lockheed Inc. in South Deerfield.

Wang Inc. is one large Massachusetts computer company set to expand its operations in Western Mass. It will build a new branch in Holyoke next year to manufacture computer hardware.

A long standing but unsubstantiated rumor holds that Digital Equipment Corporation will soon occupy the almost vacant Mountain Farms Mall in Hadley. Both Digital and Mountain Farms Mall officials firmly denied such plans, however.

One of the reasons that Massachusetts is blossoming as a technology center is that it has a large concentration of high-tech schools. The rapid growth of companies requires qualified people, with the capacity to advance at the same pace. Another reason, speculated Hanson, is that there had been a lot of defense department funding of high technology in Massachusetts.

The job openings in the computer science field currently exceed the number of qualified graduates, Hanson said. Boom periods occur when there is a perceived need in the economy; computers have become a necessity, he added.

"Projections that I've seen indicate that...the job market will absorb them (graduates) easily in the next ten years," said Hanson.

Of the job openings expected to be created here, Gross said that the salaries would probably not be comparable to those around Route 128.

Peggy Shennon, a computer instructor for Garret Lockheed of South Deerfield, said she thinks Route 128 is overcrowded, but Western New England will probably not see the same density of hardware manufacturers.

"I'm afraid they'll (incoming companies) provide only very highly-educated people with positions," Shennon said. "There might be openings only for technological jobs."

Asked if small computer companies would suffer from the invasion of larger competitors, Hanson said he doubted it.

"There will be competition for people and space, of course, but no more direct market competition than there is now," he said. "If the companies do come out here, the area will be selectively developed. Towns can control the number of companies that come into them."

As Massachusetts continues its expansion, the Santa Clara Valley, California's booming "Silicon Valley," overshadows it. The Silicon Valley is the nation's fastest-growing electronics area, according to the Boston Globe, and accounts for twenty percent of the $16 billion worldwide money market.

"Route 128 and the Silicon Valley are comparable," said Hanson. Route 128 has the potential to be as great as the Valley, he added, but "it will take a lot more than potential."

The fact that the industry is flourishing in other parts of Massachusetts indicates that the state is gaining on California.

The years to come may significantly change the Pioneer Valley. The foretold technological growth may not mirror Boston's wealth of industry, but it will surely reflect Massachusett's race to lead the country to its technological future.

World and national news

AP Laserphoto

Discussing emergency help for the needy, are some members of the United States Conference of Mayors. From left are: Mayors Robert Buhai of Highland Park, Ill.; Thomas Cooke of E. Orange, N.J.; Ernest Morial of New Orleans, La.; Arthur Holland of Trenton, N.J.; Ted Mann of Newton, Mass. and Angelo Martinelli, Yonkers, N.Y.

Veteran without battle experience to head VA

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan yesterday named West Point football star Harry N. Walters, a veteran who saw no war service and left the Army after the obligatory four years, to head the Veterans Administration.

Walters would become the first VA chief who never served in combat, a point noted by the American Legion, which specifically had asked Reagan to find a war veteran for the job.

Walters, 46, is now the civilian assistant secretary of the Army for manpower and reserve affairs. Before his appointment to the Pentagon job in 1981, he was the principal owner of a paper company in Potsdam, N.Y.

He would succeed Robert P. Nimmo, a wealthy Californian and Korean War veteran who resigned after 17 stormy months in charge of an agency with a $25 billion budget, a payroll of $220,000 and a constituency of 30 million veterans.

Walters met yesterday with about 20 leaders of veterans' groups and retired military men. Those attending said he pledged to be "the veterans' advocate."

"Surprisingly, he told us he hadn't yet seen the president," said one veterans' leader. "The inference I draw from that is that someone else must have picked him for the job."

Mylio Kraja, executive director of the American Legion, said, 'Time will only tell whether he will be good or bad."

At confirmation hearings for Walters' Pentagon job, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., noted that Walters had left the Army after fulfilling his minimum obligation in exchange for a free West Point education.

Walters explained that he quit because he had a family to support and could make more money as a civilian.

But Thurmond said through a spokesman yesterday that he thought Walters would do a fine job and said he would support him for Senate confirmation.

Before taking the Pentagon job, Walters was the principal owner of the Potsdam Paper Corp. in Potsdam, N.Y., and had held a number of other jobs in the paper industry.

Wyoming wins MX contest: 'dense pack' to be deployed there

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wielding both stick and carrot, President Reagan announced yesterday he intends to deploy the huge MX missle in a "dense-pack" string of Wyoming silos, then prepared to advanced new arms control proposals to the Soviet Union.

"We would prefer that the Soviets dismantle SS-18s (their intercontinental ballistic missiles) rather than we build more holes," Reagan said in a written statement. "But we can accomodate either and maintain stability."

To emphasize his long-range goal, Reagan formally named the MX the "Peacekeeper" missile and called his basing plan "a reasonable way to deter attack."

The long-awaited MX basing decision, which faces a doubtful future in Congress, would have the United States deploy its first new intercontinental missiles in 20 years.

But in a nationally televised speech later yesterday, Reagan was to signal the Kremlin leadership that America would prefer reduction of nuclear arsenals to participation in a dangerous and expensive arms race.

Hours before the formal announcement, all signs indicated the president had accepted the Air Force recommendation to place 100 MX weapons in superhardened launch silos spaced about 1,800 to 2,000 feet apart near Warren AFB in Wyoming.

The close-spacing concept, which the Air Force calls "dense pack," represents a dramatic departure from past missile deployment plans, including the Carter administration's scheme for the MX.

The plan called for spreading 200 MX missiles among some 4,600 concrete shelters stretching across the Utah and Nevada deserts and shifting real missiles and decoys from site to site.

The untested theory behind the dense-pack plan is that most of the MX missiles could survive a Soviet surprise attack because incoming Soviet warheads would disable each other as they converged on the MX silos and exploded.

Nursing home loses euthanasia privacy suit

SPRINGFIELD — A jury awarded $2.58 million yesterday to a widow who said a Holyoke nursing home violated her dying husband's privacy by allowing right-to-life advocates to question him.

Blanche Spring, 78, of Montague, said the Holyoke Geriatric Authority and four nurses invaded the privacy of her husband, Earle, while the family was fighting a court battle to have his life-sustaining dialysis treatment halted.

The Hampden Superior Court jury of eight men and four women returned the verdict after 12½ hours of deliberations over three days.

It awarded the damages against the city-run authority and also ruled against one of the nurses, Joan Wolohan, but did not require her to pay damages.

Mrs. Spring had sought $80 million damages for incidents that occurred when her 78-year old husband was a patient at the nursing home in January, 1980.

Ms. Wolohan and nurse Winifred Greany testified they allowed a Boston doctor and a Hartford, Conn., nurse who were right-to-life advocates to question Spring after they were directed to do so by the nursing home administrator.

Two of the nurses — Joyce Webster and Cathy McEvady — delivered a letter to a newspaper saying that Spring told them he did not want to die.

The nurses' letter to the Holyoke Transcript-Telegram led to the reopening of the precedent-setting Massachusetts court case over Spring's right to die and an order by the state's highest court to continue treatments while the courts re-examined Spring's competency to make his own decision.

Spring died on Easter Sunday, April 6, 1980, a few weeks before the Supreme Judicial Court finally ruled that the retired chemist was too senile to make his own decision and the family could halt the treatments.

Political stance gets rabbi excommunicated

TEWKSBURY — A rabbi has rejected as "nonsense" the order of a rabbinic court excommunicating him and other Jews on charges of "traitorous and treacherous acts against Jewish people."

"This is a self-appointed group which seems to have an aversion to people in the Jewish community taking public stands which run contrary to what this group thinks," said Rabbi Everett Gendler of Temple Emanuel of Lowell.

On Sunday three members of the 13-person Supreme Rabbinic Court of America, Inc. said they excluded Gendler and members of the liberal New Jewish Agenda for what the court said was support of Palestinian and gay rights causes.

Digest

by the Associated Press

Judge expels creationism law

NEW ORLEANS — A federal judge yesterday threw out Louisiana's law providing for the teaching of creationism in public schools.

U.S. District Judge Adrian Duplantier granted a request for summary judgment from the state Board of Elementary and Secondary Education, which had contended the state's 1974 constitution gives it exclusive control over classroom curriculum.

The board also said it needed complete power to shelter the public schools from the whims of politicians.

A similar trial in Arkansas last year brought a federal ruling that its creationism law was a blatant attempt to bring religion into the schools.

Proponents of the Louisiana law have said they would take the case to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals if they lost in district court.

AP Laserphoto

Actor Peter Graves, former "Mission: Impossible" star ("Should you decide . . . "), rides a bike invented by two Massachusetts men through Boston Public Garden. Graves was in Boston after accepting the mission of filming a TV special, "Discover: The World of Science", which will feature unusual machines.

Fourteen communities promise additional trash

NORTH ANDOVER — An innovative plant that will burn garbage from 22 communities to generate electricity has cleared a key hurdle, and groundbreaking will take place within eight weeks, officials said yesterday.

The 12-year quest to build the $102 million plant moved closer to realization when officials from 14 communities pledged to supply additional trash.

The new pledge assured enough trash would be available to make the plant feasible, said Brian Hardy, a spokesman for the state Executive Office of Environmental Affairs.

"Communities that have a lot of trash today — and a headache in disposing it — realize trash can be dollars if they negotiate the right kind of contract," Hardy said.

A similar plant is already operating in Pittsfield, Hardy said, and negotiations are under way in the Springfield, Worcester and New Bedford areas.

The "garbage to gold" concept has so much promise that three private firms are competing in the New Bedford area in hopes of grabbing garbage from communities and turning it into electricity, he said. Two firms have been competing in the North Andover area.

"This deal was just too good to pass up," Walter Tonaszuck, chairman of the North East Solid Waste Committee, told reporters during a tour of the proposed site for the plant.

"We decided to take matters in our own hands and increase our tonnage commitments rather than wait for one more community to join," he said.

The NESWC plant will be located adjacent to the North Andover landfill, a short distance from Interstate 495.

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Michelle Murray
Copy Editor	Mike Mahoney
Layout Technician	Ed Levine
Photo Technician	Mike Margolis
Night Graphics Technician	Sam Levitt
Composition	Gail Tanzer, Lynn Eisenberg, Terri Cooper, Adrianne Dufour, Scott Stockwell, Maria Cahillane, Marianne Walsh, Kathie Wells, Alyssa Rusiecki, Becky Robins, Julie Marcinek

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $25 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

Palestinian liberation the topic of OAS panel

By YADIRA BETANCES
Collegian Staff

A panel discussion last night sponsored by the Organization of Arab Students (OAS) of the University of Massachusetts focused on the invasion of Lebanon and the problems and struggles behind it.

Speaking on the panel were Dr. Khalil Nakhleh, an Palestinian anthropologist and former president of the Arab American University; Paul Saba, a Lebanese lawyer from Boston; and Maja Cathata Mokoena, a student from South Africa studying at Amherst College.

Since the invasion of Lebanon started on June 6, 1982, the facts behind the real issue of the invasion have been hidden by the press and by those who dominate, Saba said.

The real crisis, which is the attempt of the Palestinians to create a secular democratic nation has been exposed by groups in their attempt to support the struggle of the Palestinian people, according to the panel.

"The history of the Lebanese situation is very complex. The crisis existing threatens the sovereignty and independence as well as the existence of Lebanon as a country," Saba said.

In his discussion of the invasion of Lebanon, Dr. Nakhleh started by raising the basic question of why there is a war in Lebanon. Dr. Nakhleh said that in order to understand why these people are waging a struggle, fighting constantly and dying, we should understand why Palestinians were driven from their homeland in 1948. These people were forced out with no hope of returning, while people born jewish can always go there.

"The PLO is the body whose military armed struggle is in order to ultimately liberate what is Palestine today," Dr. Nakhleh said.

"The PLO is not a terrorist organization, but no one will let Palestinians accept the label . . . the label of terrorism had been hurdled at us at any time we take our position contrary to Israel's," he said.

Collegian photo by Michael Margolis

Paul Saba, Lebanese lawyer and panelist during a discussion on Palestine held last night.

Duffey sees mandate for higher education in election results

By JIM FINKLE
Collegian Staff

Despite political attacks against public higher education during the past few years, this month's national elections show that the general public now realizes education benefits the entire society, University of Massachusetts Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey said last week.

"Consistently across the country, the results of the Nov. 2 elections show that the voters supported those candidates for governor and Congress who advocated public responsibility and public investment in education," Duffey said.

"In the last two or three years, many members of the public have had second thoughts on attacks made on public higher education," Duffey said. "They have decided that the benefits for investment in public higher education go to the larger society, and not just to the individuals that participate."

Duffey noted although the curriculum at UMass has changed greatly since it was first created as a land grant university over 100 years ago, the role of the University has always been to serve society.

"The land grant university saw itself with responsibilities to the public," Duffey said. "It was a service to the society."

"Today, the University is seeking to fulfill the land grant role. Our first service is to give the opportunity of education to the young people of the Commonwealth."

In order to best serve society, Duffey said the university must provide its student with a broad education, encompassing the humanities and fine arts as well as the social and natural sciences.

"The future is not going to depend solely on technological achievement," Duffey said. "We need people who can read and write and reason, with a sense of history."

"We need good judgement, the ability to make intelligent decisions in our political life, and the perspective to make decisions in the longer term."

Duffey said the goals of the university today and of the university 125 years ago are the same in this respect.

"The land grant universities were created originally to serve the technical and economic needs of the country, not in a narrow sense," Duffey said.

"It was seen as providing the kind of education needed in a democratic society whose citizens participated in governing themselves."

Collegian file photo by Teresa Bellafiore

University of Massachusetts Chancellor Dr. Joseph Duffey

Collegian photo by Michael Margolis

Rope pull tug-of-war at Boyden Intramural Fields this weekend.

UMass FSO commissioned for cultural bridge construction

By GREG BROWN
Collegian Correspondent

A married exchange student wants to bring his wife to America from Ghana. But first, he has to deal with the massive bureaucracy of immigration services.

Another foreign student comes from a country where professors are too respected for her to ever consider interrupting their lectures for a question. Yet she does have questions.

Foreign students at the University of Massachusetts must deal with many problems including cultural adaptation, language problems and dealing with American bureaucracies.

The UMass Foreign Students Office tries to help foreign students with problems such as these.

"We offer non-academic counseling and we try to provide a casual office for students to come and talk to us, even if they don't have a particular problem," said Carol Cumps, foreign student adviser.

Some of the problems students face, Cumps said, are not so trivial as they might seem.

"People who think 55 degrees is cold may not know how to dress properly for here," she said. "Cultural differences, although not so prevalent in Europeans, are also an occasional problem."

Students themselves, however, do not seem to have many problems with cultural differences. Andreas Laras, 20, is a junior microbiology major from Athens, Greece. Laras said his only problem in adjusting was learning slang. "I was taught English in high school (in Athens), not American," he said.

Although Andreas acknowledges the cultural differences between America and Europe, he said they are minor and not really problems to him.

"There's not a big difference between Europe and America," he said.

Laras was disturbed, he said by the importance placed on money in our society.

"There is a different way of thinking between Europeans and Americans in all respects, but in particular with respect to their motivation for continuing their education on a college level. Like many Europeans, I'm continuing my education because I enjoy learning. But Americans, with a few exceptions, pursue education to eventually become more successful money-makers," he said.

Many students who come to UMass to study from abroad are already very widely traveled. Such is the case of Murtaza (Mert) Bhaijibhai, 17, a freshman from North Yemen who has studied in Ireland, India, and Boston, and has traveled to Africa and much of Asia.

"I have very little trouble adjusting to America because I've been traveling since I was nine. The people here make it easier, too. They're terrific," Mert said.

The main problem dealt with by foreign student advisers, Cumps said, "is the immigration service. Fifty percent of our advising is on immigration problems."

Tahir Durrani, 17, is a freshman from Karachi, Pakistan. His main problem in adjusting has been in dealing with the immigration service.

"They are very strict," he said. "There are always long lines, and complicated forms to fill out. Dealing with them can be frustrating sometimes. I once waited in line for 6 hours."

Anna Ramstad, 21, is from Lillestrom, Norway. She said she loves to party, and that "American drinking habits are quite similar to those of Europeans."

Ramstad is a sophomore in the School of Business Administration who spent her freshman year at City of London Polytechnic.

"I haven't had any problems adjusting to life in America. The American lifestyle is similar to mine in Norway," she said. "The studying is much more intense though. I'm not doing as well as I did in London."

Anna disapproves of "foreign student programming" because she said, "If you're old enough to go study in a foreign country, you're old enough to adapt on your own."

Cumps said programming for foreign students is limited for a number of reasons.

We're looking at the programmng as a trial balloon," Carol Cumps said. "Will they try it or not? I don't think they really want to come to a foreign land to associate with other foreigners."

Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

John Smolen from the Physical Plant works by Goessman Laboratory.

Low-key approach to herpes advised

By EVERETT HARMAN
Collegian Correspondent

There are ways of dealing with the current herpes epidemic, according to a health educator at the University of Massachusetts.

"There are rational ways of coping with the virus," said Debbie Edelman, a health educator with UMass Health Services. "Through education, proper care, and positive attitudes, herpes can be a manageable virus and need not interfere with a healthy lifestyle."

Herpes has recently received considerable attention in the media and Edelman said the sensationalistic treatment given the disease in Time, Newsweek and other national publications has only added to the atmosphere of fear and mystery.

Edelman said she believes both goals of controlling the spread of the disease and alleviating the emotional pain many sufferers experience can be furthered by educating people about it in a calm and realistic manner.

The form of herpes with which people are most familiar is oral herpes, commonly known as cold sores. An estimated 50 million people in the United States are afflicted with this illness.

Many think that the sores are caused by colds and do not take any particular precaution to prevent transmission. In actuality, an infected person always carries the herpes simplex virus which lies dormant most of the time with in triseminal ganglion, where nerves of the face and head meet in the nervous system. When the body is in a physically weakened state, as during a cold, the virus may leave its hiding place and travel down a nerve to create sores at the site of original infection.

The sores usually last for a few days then disappear as the virus returns to the triseminal ganglion.

Recurrence averages about 6 times a year but duration and frequency vary greatly. Some individuals never have a recurrence of the sores though they carry the virus. There is no known means of curing the disease.

Genital herpes, with which 5-20 million Americans are infected, is very similar to oral herpes except for the location of sores and the virus' hiding place in the sacral ganglion located near the base of the spine. However, the psychological effects of genital herpes seem to be much greater than those of oral herpes due to the feelings people have about their sexuality.

Both forms of herpes are transmitted in a great majority of cases by physical contact of mucosal tissue (oral, genital, oral-genital, etc.). Although the virus has been said to survive for hours on certain surfaces, experts have largely discounted the possibility of contracting the disease from toilet seats, towels or the like.

Symptoms generally appear within 2 to 20 days after infection. The initial bout is usually the most severe and may include fever, pain and headache in addition to the itching, burning, blisterlike sores experienced in subsequent outbreaks.

Spread of the virus can be controlled if infected individuals refrain from oral or genital contact with others from the time they feel any itching, tingling or burning at the site of recurrence until all sores have completely healed. Although the virus may be released without active sores, it is not known if this can result in transmission of the disease.

Dean downplays role of press in Watergate

By MARY BALDWIN
Collegian Staff

The incompetence of the Nixon administration, not the diligence of the press was responsible for the failure of the Watergate coverup, John W. Dean, III, special counsel to former president Richard nixon, told a Boston audience this weekend.

Speaking at the Boston Globe Book Festival at the John B. Hynes Veterans auditorium in Boston Saturday night, Dean, whose testimony was the major changing point in breaking Watergate, said the administration was not able to deal with the conspiracy.

One of the myths around Watergate, Dean said, "was the widespread impression that the press, the Washington Post, Bernstein and Woodward, cracked the case. Fifteen reporters were assigned to Watergate in 1972. Not until Spring, 1973 did the press start covering Watergate."

"Watergate fell apart from its own weight," he continued. "The reason Watergate didn't work was because we weren't good criminals. The people dealing with Watergate were incompetent to deal with the type of conspiracy that we were dealing with."

Dean also discussed other illusions surrounding Watergate and its effects on the nation.

"I had seen myths grow up around Watergate that didn't fit for me," he said. "Did the system really work? Nixon wasn't even tried whereas minor figures got 40 years."

Dean said Watergate hindered the relationship between the press and the White House for the following administrations.

Watergate created a hostile relationship between the media and the Ford administration, Dean said.

"During the Carter administration, the press finally looked at what they were doing and decided to give the president in office the benefit of the doubt."

Newslines...

Credit in Scandanavia offered

The Scandinavian Seminar on North Pleasant St. in Amherst is accepting applications for its 1983-1984 academic year abroad in Denmark, Finland, Norway or Sweden. Students stay with a host family in one of those nations and study in a folk school, a small, residential educational community intended for young adults. Academic credit for the study is available. For more information, contact Scandinavian Seminar 358 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, or call 549-5836.

Patrol volunteers requested

The Amherst Conservation Commission is seeking volunteers for its Ridewalker Program. Through the program, ridewalkers sign up for a portion of the 26.2 miles of path and foot trails maintained by the town. The volunteers then patrol the part of the trail, doing light maintenance work, such as removing fallen limbs and hauling small items of trash. Larger problems are reported to the Commission. For more information, contact the Conservation Services Office at 256-0413.

Rape presentation tonight

A Rape Task Force presentation will be given at 7 p.m. today in Cashin Dormitory in the Sylvan Residential area. The presentation will be given by the Educator/Advocate Program of the Everywoman's Center.

Working mothers lecture topic

"Working Mothers and Childcare" will be discussed by Pam Collins at noon today in room 917 of the Campus Center. The lecture is part of an eight part series on women and work sponsored by the Working Women's Task Force of the Everywoman's Center.

SANTA SAYS...
Advertise in the Collegian Xmas Shopper
Call 545-3500 for details

11th Annual Bush Bash
UMASS SKI CLUB
SUGARBUSH VALLEY
Ski & Party Week
Jan. 23-28
(last week of winter break)
INCLUDES 5½ lift tickets
5 nights lodging & meals
free beer & wine party
Hot Tubs Party etc. etc. etc.
Only $189 tax & gratuities included
THE BEST VACATION YOU'LL EVER HAVE.
LAGNAF 83
(get your $40 deposit in now to reserve your place)
THANKS TO ALL WHO HELPED MAKE THE SKI SNATCH A TOTAL SUCCESS ONCE AGAIN
(we couldn't have done it without you)
Thank You
The Ski Club

JUMP UP
Dec. 5 S.U.B.

For women
DISTRESSED by PREGNANCY...
Services that are confidential, helpful, caring and free.
Birthright
Amherst area: 549-1906
Spfld. area: 732-0184

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
Rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays, Saturdays 1-4

YOUR STUDENT- U.R.U. RUN RECORD STORE WISHES YOU
A HAPPY TURKEY DAY
Union RECORDS
201 SUB 545-0400 Unlimited M-F/10-5 SAT/11-3

The 1761 Old Mill
RESTAURANT & VILLAGE SHOPS
Reserve Now for Thanksgiving
Serving Continuously
MONDAY thru FRIDAY — 11 AM to 10 PM
SAT., SUN., & HOLIDAYS — 8 AM to 10 PM
SUNDAY BRUNCH — 11 AM to 2 PM
617-874-5941
RTE 2A, WESTMINSTER, MASS., Just off Rte. 2
Owners — The Foster Family

EDITORIAL/OPINION

A first in a sad series of lasts

It all started with the realization that last Saturday's football game was the last UMass game I would attend as a student. Graduation time is coming and I'm scared to death.

I never thought it would end, really. I remember my first game as a freshman. It was against the Black Bears of Maine, my first college football game. I'd never gone to a Boston College or Harvard game before I came to college. I hated Boston College and I couldn't justify seeing a Harvard game unless it was against Yale, because I wanted only the best. Besides, a true Patriots fan from eastern Massachusetts can't be bothered with trivial things like college football.

The highly touted BC team was having another mediocre year, and UMass was ripe for victory. Despite the snow in the stands which hadn't been cleared out, there wasn't an empty seat to be found. I was sitting in section 12 on the visitors side, and I was quite happy about the snow situation.

Toward the start of the game one certain UMass police officer who was patroling the stands didn't take kindly to being hit with an errant snowball. So he turned on the crowd in an amazing verbal attack.

"I dare you to throw a snowball at me," he barked at my section.

That was his mistake. Everytime the guy turned around for the rest of the game he was pelted with snowballs. And the more he got hit, the madder he became. It was great.

After I got bored with the angry cop, I turned on the BC Eagles. Their players were mad as hell since I wasn't the only one hitting them with snowballs. Some fans also took it upon themselves to teach the Eagle mascot a lesson by tackling the stupid bird by the goalposts and rubbing its face in the snow.

Actually it would have been a perfect day if UMass didn't have a punt blocked setting up what turned out to be the winning BC touchdown. But in that 13-12 loss we taught those preppies from the east not to take UMass lightly.

I only missed three or four games in my entire career. Unfortunately two of them were against Delaware, both heartbreaking losses. But now there will be no more chances for me.

Soon I'll be looking at college football games as youngsters fighting on the gridiron, the way I now view high school football. So you'll have to excuse my depression, because an important era in my life and the lives of every other senior who is a UMass football fan is over. Some of us will come back in the future to route for our alma mater, but it won't feel the same. And if this isn't all bad enough, we still have other things to say goodbye to in the next six months.

Our last snowball fight with Amherst College is still in our future, so is our last basketball game and our last lacrosse game. And were experiencing our last Novembers and Decembers. Those are pretty tough too. So please forgive us if we have to swallow these tragedies one at a time.

Then again, we still have our last go at course selections this week. Soon we will also have our final final. Come to think of it, I might actually enjoy that.

Richard Nangle

Anyway, we destroyed Maine that day. I think the score was 38-7, but it doesn't really matter. I remember there weren't too many people at the game and you could hear one of Maine's defensive backs screaming at his teammates to try to turn the game around. The guy sounded like he was in agony. It only now occurs to me that he was probably a senior.

At least half of the games I attended were on my own. Alumni Stadium was a good place to be alone with your thoughts, not to mention being a good place to recover from a hangover. When by myself, I'd stand in the camera box below the press box. The view was tremendous, and probably the best kept secret at UMass. Rarely was I ever accompanied by anyone other than the opposing team's cameraman.

It wasn't always easy to get to my favorite place in the stadium. The dreaded ushers were always making sure that only those who had purchased reserved seats were allowed in the middle sections, especially during the big games. Oftentimes it took a lot of imagination to get through the crowd and past the armbanded ushers. I used to call them "Hitler youth." It made me feel better about the whole thing. Yes, they were doing their job, but did they have to be so arrogant about it?

Of all the UMass football memories I've accumulated, the best is undoubtedly from the snow bowl of two years ago against Boston College. BC was the team I had always loved to hate. Boston sports gods Don Gillis, Ernie Roberts and Leigh Montville were always telling us how great they were, even though they never did anything of note. Why, I didn't even know UMass had a football team until I saw them in a championship game on television during my senior year in high school.

Richard Nangle is a Collegian columnist

Student vote the final say

Editor's note — This is the final part of a four-part series.

The first two segments in my series on student government at the University focused on the schism that has developed between the general undergraduate population and the student senate. Yesterday, a proposal was made for students to gain control over the (est.) 60 percent of the activities fee that funds essential services. Today, a plan will be presented that first, gives students control of the other 40 percent of each students' $96.00 activities tax presently funding support groups, activist groups, and Senate operations, and second, creates a more vital role for the area governments in the daily lives of students.

Dave McCarthy

Without careful examination, the plan I am about to outline might be construed by some as a veiled attempt to cut support services for women and people of color. On the contrary, within the context of the plan, it will be shown how increased student empowerment can further the goals of campus support groups, and how the area governments can, with more money, be the most effective governing body in the struggle to educate students on issues such as racism, sexism, gay oppression and handicap awareness.

Under our plan where essential services were removed from the budget process, the Senate Budgets Committee would still be considering the budgets of groups as diverse as Students Advocating Financial Aid, the Economic Development Office, and The Asian American Students Association. Every spring, the Budgets Committee presents its appropriations for the coming fiscal year. Under our plan, any proposed increase in the coming budget would have to be put before the student body as a whole in a binding referendum. In this way, students would have a chance to approve or disapprove of any proposed fee increases.

In the binding referendum, 25 percent of the students would have to cast ballots, and of that 25 percent, a majority would have to vote in favor of the proposed fee increase for it to pass. What this actually means is, 12.5 percent of the students would have to approve the budget increase for it to pass.

If the proposed fee increase passed, the coming semester's bill would reflect it. If the budget increase did not get support from 12.5 percent of the undergraduate population, the student activities fee could not be increased, and the Senate Budgets Committee would have to find ways of making ends meet.

The first implication is that the Senate would have to reach out to the students and justify fee increases. In the past, little attempt was made by the Senate to explain the budget process, or why groups needed more money. Under this change, if the Senate wants more money, they will have to prove to the students that they need it.

The second implication of this plan is that the groups receiving increased funding would have to justify their increases. This would make groups, who many students have never heard of because of their specialized service, educate people as to what they do, the important and/or uniqueness of their service, and why they need more funding.

If, with the Senate educating the students on the budget process, and RSO groups explaining their needs to the undergraduates, they cannot get 12.5 percent of the students to approve the budget, they will have to make do with what they have.

This is where increased student empowerment can greatly further campus social awareness. Like more Americans who grumble about how their taxes are spent, many socially unaware students at UMass have a certain animosity towards how their money is spent. They may be unaware of the importance of creating a culturally and politically diverse campus. By getting these students to buy into the budget the area governments will be given a more vital role in our plan. We feel that, by their close proximity to their constituents, they have a better understanding of the needs and wants of the people in their area than the Senate ever could have. Some of the present examples of area funded programs are the Macolm X Center and the Southwest Woman's Center in Southwest, and the New Africa House in Central. Increased funding of the area governments would enhance their already effective fight to increase social awareness, and free up the Senate to deal with pertinent concerns.

This is our plan to return student government to the students. Negative feedback has already been heard from the high echelons of student government. But the plan was not put forth for their benefit. It was written to increase the power of the student body as a whole. Whether you're pro or con, this plan needs feedback from you the students. Tell either your Senator, or write the Collegian. Better yet, Call the SGA Hotline!

Dave McCarthy is a UMass student.

Letters

Returned sign restores resident's faith in human nature

Editors note — Two weeks ago, the Collegian printed a letter concerning a sign stolen from Dr. F.G. Ruder, a local veterinarian.

To the Editor:

I am reporting to you that our sign was returned on Saturday, and was found on the front door steps. Surely you have helped to perform a miracle. It was found with an envelope containing a slip of paper which said, "Sorry, but Happy B. Day and Many More."

You have certainly restored my faith in human nature and I ask that you publish my deepest appreciation of the act of returning this sign. I do not have words enough to express my appreciation of your help in this miracle. The 91 year old woman appreciates the "belated" birthday present. My thanks to you for your kindness.

Ruth S. Ruder
Amherst

Letters Policy

All letters must be signed and include the writer's address and telephone number, which will not be published. Please type double spaced at 67 characters per line. Due to space limitations and the volume of mail, we regret we are unable to acknowledge unpublished letters. All letters are subject to editing for clarity and length.

Black Affairs

Gil Scot-Heron hot property at Rusty Nail

Photo by Malcom Laws

Gil Scot-Heron performs at the Rusty Nail last Saturday night.

By GUS MARTINS
Collegian Staff

The multi-talented Gil Scot-Heron and his Amnesia Express sizzled through a two hour performance last Saturday evening at the Rusty Nail.

After an unusually late start, one may of got the impression that some amnesia actually had set in. Apparently the show's delay was due to the late arrival of bassist Robert Gordon.

But when the entire band finally took the stage at approximately 12:30, any bad sentiment toward them was cast aside. Scot-Heron is no stranger at the Rusty Nail and the audience there anticipates his arrival with the suspense of a Hitchcock thriller.

The show itself was typical of the Gil Scot-Heron that we've grown accustomed to hearing. It was complete with grooving bass lines, searing guitar, tight horns and some down-right funky improvisation, and of course, probably the most incisive socio-political voice on record. That of Scot-Heron himself.

The show started with the number "That Jazz?," from the album Reflections. The next number was called "No Exit," from his latest release Moving Target. The album contains some pretty solid pieces and the one that left the biggest impression is called "Black History/The World."

The number starts with a funky base under the Scot-Heron's baritone voice, a voice that commands attention. Basically the rap is an overview of the history of Black people when they were Africans with a proud heritage and refined culture, before the dispersal to the west.

Scot-Heron also spoke about recent developments "still we are hounded by things that are out of immediate reach, places that were once called underdeveloped, are no mineral rich, Egypt and Lybia used to be in Africa, they've been moved to the Middle East."

"Winter in America" followed and so did the musical solo of the evening. Tenor sax man Ron Holloway from Washington, D.C. played with a vengeance, much to the delight of the full house.

The next number was "Alien (hold on to your dreams)" from the album 1980. The song was written for the illegal aliens crossing over from the Mexican looking for a way to do better. While this number encouraged the greatest amount of crowd participation, the people joined in spreading the word that Scot-Heron has done throughout his career.

The song's chorus reads:

> Hold on, it may not be a lot but you
> Hold on, 'cause you know it's all you got
> No matter the consequences, or the fear that grips your senses,
> You have got to hold on to your dreams.

Other numbers that followed were "Angel Dust" from 1978, "Fast Lane" and "Washington D.C.," both from his latest release. The number written about our nation's capitol takes you just minutes away from the White House, to where things are not necessarily so clean:

> Seems a ball of contradictions pullin' different ways > between the folks who come and go and those who got to stay
> It's a mass of irony for all the world to see
> It's the nation's capitol, it's Washington, D.C.

"Shut Em Down," a number written for the No-Nukes movie a few years ago, was performed with the power and commitment to which the selection was composed. Speaking in behalf of nuclear power plants, Scot-Heron says, "shut 'em down, if that's the only way to keep them, shut 'em down."

JUMP UP
Dec. 5 S.U.B.

Recycle this Collegian

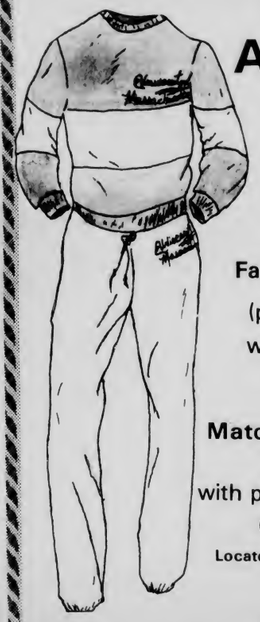
MDI/WORD LINK
Word Processing
. . . 253-9534 . . .
37 So. Pleasant St., Amherst
(above Matthews Shoes)
Need an Interview?
25 resumes 25 cover letters/envelopes
$40.00 certain restrictions apply
TRY OUR RESUME SERVICES

BUYING
High School Class Rings
HIGHEST PRICES PAID! Also Gold & Silver Coins and Jewelry
Daniel Smith
256-0710
25 North Pleasant Street Amherst

Give A Friend A Gram
High Notes
Singing Telegrams and Balloons
Delivered by Tuxedoed Messenger for any and All Occasions
Lowest Prices
Call 665-7664 VISA/MC

UNE
Medical School
Tampico, Mexico
Q. What Makes A Quality Medical School?
A. 1. Fine Faculty
2. Good Facilities
3. Quality Student Body
4. Supervised Clerkship Programs for Qualified 3rd and 4th Year Students
Noreste offers a 4-year program has small classes, is W H O listed
University of the North East Admissions
120 East 41 St. NY, NY 10017
(212) 594-6589
683-6566



JUST ARRIVED
Special Purchase
Two Tone Fashion Sweatshirt
(purple and white)
with script imprint
ONLY $13.95
Matching Sweatpants
in white
with purple script imprint
ONLY $11.95
Located in our Clothing Dept.
pick up your free UMass Basketball calendar with your purchase of any UMass clothing item
Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE
Open Mon, Tue, Wed 9-5

Arts

A brutal, painful Accident

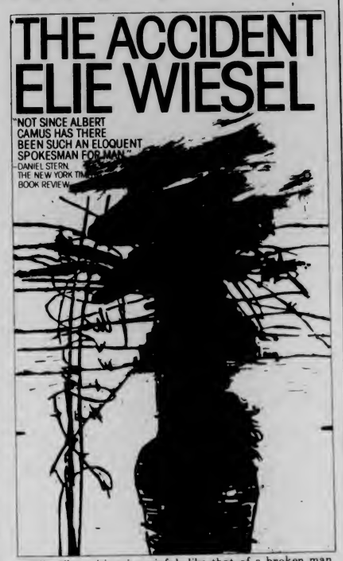
THE ACCIDENT
By Elie Wiesel
Bantam Books, 96 pages, $2.50

By CHRISTINE MARINI
Collegian Staff



Our ties with the past are always strong. They influence — consciously or unconsciously — our present thoughts and actions. But when a person's past is tragic and full of horrors, its authority becomes even greater, and sometime even surpasses the grip of current reality.

In The Accident, Elie Wiesel examines the case of Eliezer, a successful New York journalist struggling with his place in time. Eliezer, a haunted survivor of Auschwitz, is torn between his obligations in the present, and the ethical responsibility he feels toward his shattered past.

Eliezer is struck by a speeding taxicab and gravely injured. He is forced to chose between the voices of the present — of his friends and the woman who loves him — and the keening wails of the restless dead. "'Your past is dead. Dead and buried,' she (his girlfriend) would say. And I would answer, 'I am my past. If it's buried, I'm buried with it'."

While in the hospital, Eliezer travels back in time, recalling the horrors and questioning yet again in his mind, the meanings of goodness and cruelty and death. No one — least of all Eliezer — knows whether or not the accident was indeed a suicide attempt, a final act in the lifelong struggle to erase the guilt that comes from surviving what so many others did not.

Escape is the main theme in Wiesel's novel. One cannot escape from the past — and sometimes the dead hold on tighter than the living. Ultimately, the choice between life and death lies in Eliezer's hands...and it is the stronger influence — past or present — that helps him make his decision.

Wiesel's own early experiences at Auschwitz during World War II strongly affect his writing. This authenticity adds to the tension and mood of Wiesel's novel. He does not bombard the reader with dramatic, graphic descriptions of the horrors suffered by him, and by countless others, in the death camps. He exercises remarkable restraint with this sort of detail; obviously the reader's repelled fascination is not Wiesel's goal. But every word he writes is seeped with sorrow, every gesture tinged with impotent rage.

Wiesel's writing is painful, like that of a broken man speaking with difficulty. His message is clear and strident — death, he points out, is only one of the ways by which a man can be destroyed. Sometimes psychological tortures go on for years and years.

Comicbook comes alive in Creepshow

CREEPSHOW
Directed by George Romero
Hampshire 4 Cinemas

By SCOTT HERSEY
Collegian Staff

During a certain period of my early life, I was a comic book nut. Whenever Dad gave me my $1 a week allowance, I would head fast for the local newstore and that rack of garishly colored cartoon books.

Almost 15 years later, I've once again been treated to that sleazy kind of lurid horror associated with those old comics. This is the video age, however, and the comics are now in movie form.

Horror masters Stephen King (Carrie, The Shining) and George A. Romero (Night of the Living Dead) have collaborated on a video comic book, complete with cartoons and advertisements for body building equipment, just like the old comic books.

There are five stories in the movie, and fans of King's books are sure to be satisfied with the plot lines, ranging from ghosts returning from the grave to invasions by armies of bugs.

I don't want to give away too much of the movie — which would ruin some of the surprises King and Romero have cooked up — but let's just say that fans of classic horror will not be disappointed.

I will say, however, that King makes an acting appearance unequalled by an author since Mickey Spillane decided that he knew best how Mike Hammer should be played.

King plays Jody Verril, a lonesome Maine woodsman who accidentally stumbles upon a meteor. With thoughts of riches dancing in his head, he attempts to pick the meteor up so he can sell it to the local university.

But when he picks it up, the meteor breaks in half, leaking a strange blue substance all over his hands.

Personally, I've never had much experience with meteors, but after seeing what meteor juice does to Jody Verril, I've decided that if I ever find one, I'm leaving it alone, no matter how much money it could be worth.

There's plenty of frights in Creepshow, so if you're a horror fan, go see it.

If not, you might as well stay away.

WHERE HILLS TURN TO MOUNTAINS.

Why conquer hills when you can challenge a mountain. Just over the border is Mount Snow with 2 gondolas, 12 chairlifts, 52 trails and 1700 feet of vertical.

Mount Snow
VERMONT

THE SHORTEST DRIVE TO BIG MOUNTAIN SKIING
LOCATED IN EASY TO REACH SOUTHERN VERMONT ON VT. 100
LODGING (802) 464-8501 • SKI REPORT (802) 464-2151

Coming Back Next Semester?

Wednesday, Nov. 24th, is the Deadline for Preregistration Forms and the Last Day for Academic Counseling. Drop off all forms at the Registrar's Office, rm. 213 - Whitmore, by 5 pm.

P.S. Happy Thanksgiving, Everyone!

IDB TIPS
a Service of the Dean of Students Office

IMPROVE STUDY HABITS
• STOP SMOKING •
HYPNOSIS CAN HELP YOU MAKE IT PERMANENT
Many of our clients are doctor referrals.
Overcome Anxieties, Fears & Phobias
Lose Weight • Insomnia • Nail Biting
Self Confidence • Sexual Problems • Bed Wetting
HAMPSHIRE ETHICAL HYPNOSIS CENTER
Milton H. Askinos, Member A.A.E.H.
Available: Lecture Demonstrations
Call or Write for Free Brochure
The Farrick Building, Rte. 9, Hadley, Ma.
2/10 mile Hampshire Mall (next to Rocky's Hardware)
584-1919 by Appt. Only

Still Buying Highest Prices
Class Rings
Gold and Silver Jewelry
Coins and Stamps
See Me When You Sell
Daniel Smith
permanently located between Fotomat and Logo's
25 North Pleasant St.
Amherst
Member Amherst Chamber of Commerce
256-0710
Mon - Sat 10 - 5:30

JUMP UP
Dec. 5 S.U.B.

Hypercurricula...

"Hypercurricula," a listing of events held at the University of Massachusetts and surrounding area, is published daily in the Collegian. Events are listed only on the day they are taking place. Announcements must be submitted on "Hypercurricula" forms available in the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center, and returned to the office by 3 p.m. the Friday before the event. All submissions should be written in a similar style as they appear in the paper.

CONCERT: BRASS CHOIR AND CHAMBER WINDS — The Brass Choir, conducted by Walter Chesnut, and the Chamber Winds, conducted by John Jenkins, will appear in a free concert sponsored by the Department of Music and Dance. 8 p.m. Bowker Auditorium.

AL-ANON — Having a problem with someone else's drinking? Al-Anon meeting tonight. 8 p.m. Check the Campus Center schedule for room number.

STUDENT MEETING — UPC General Meeting. New members welcome. 6:30 p.m., 165 Campus Center.

WOMEN'S TRACK — Organizational meeting of all members and candidates for Women's Track. 3 p.m. at the track office in Boyden.

FUTURE FARMERS OF AMERICA (FFA) MEETING — All students in the College of Food and Natural Resources and Stockbridge are invited to attend. Highlights: National FFA Convention, Citrus Sale, X-mas party. Bring a friend. 5 p.m. 311 Stockbridge.

Joey D's
DJ entertainment in the lounge
Tonight 5:00 - 9:00
All You Can Eat
Spaghetti & Meatballs
$2.25 Homemade Sauce
includes bread and butter
Draft Beer 50¢ Pitchers $2.95 Well Drinks 95¢
Beat the Joey D's record of 4 helpings!

SAME DAY COLOR PHOTO PROCESSING
FILM IN BY 10:00 AM
BEAUTIFUL COLOR PRINTS
OUT BY 4:00 PM
The Foto Factory
A division of HALLMARK COLOR LABS processors to the professionals
Hours: Mon.-Fri., 8-6 / Sat., 8-Noon
257 TRIANGLE STREET IN AMHERST

STYLES BY DEBORAH • STYLES BY DEBORAH • STYLES BY DEBORAH NEW WAVE
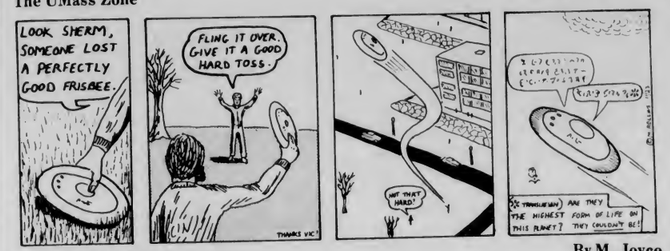
&
DESIGN HAIRCUTS
$8.00 with this coupon
10.50 with shampoo & Blow Dry
11.50 long hair shampoo & Blow Dry
Free Consultations
please call for an appointment
STYLES BY DEBORAH
65 University Drive, Amherst
549-5610
expires 11/30/82 C

BLUE WALL
CAMPUS CENTER AT UMASS
TUES. NOV. 23rd
"KILLER COMEDY NIGHT"
P.J. HAWARD
DON GAVIN
BOBBY GOLDWAITHE
the Fabulous WIREHEADS
Boston Comedy All-Stars
FREE
sponsored by G.P.C.

Doonesbury — By Garry Trudeau

The UMass Zone — By Mark Rollins



Under The Influence — By M. Joyce

Bushwa — by Tom Cushwa

Bloom County — By Berke Breathed

D.C. MENU

LUNCH
Tuna Boat, Southern Beef and Noodle Casserole

BASICS LUNCH
Spinach Noodle Casserole, Tuna Boat

DINNER
Roast Pork/Gravy, Applesauce, Chopped Beefsteak Special, Greek Style Skillet

BASICS DINNER
Tofu Nut Loaf/Light Mushroom Sauce, Greek Style Skillet

Reporters Needed

The Collegian needs reporters to cover campus and area news and women's affairs. All interested students are welcome to come and work for the Collegian, the area's largest daily college newspaper. No experience is needed and we provide training. Great experience for journalism or communications majors or anyone interested in the media. Stop by the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, anytime during the day and ask for an editor.

CROSSWORD

Edited by Margaret Farrar and Trude Juffe

©1982 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

ACROSS
1 Rooster's realm
5 Beanery beverage
9 Fundamental question
14 Architectural fillet
15 Bargain buy caution
16 Author Jong
17 Enthrall
19 Principle
20 Oily acid
21 Standing ovation
23 Seaport on the Amazon delta
25 Alias: Abbr.
26 Birthstone
29 Here, in Caen
30 Solid
34 Simba's conceit
35 Monastic personage
36 Persevere
37 "Ich bin ——— Berliner": JFK
38 Threshold item
39 Certain prayers
43 Tavern
46 Word with soul or ship
47 Work like ——— (drudge)
48 Wallet item
49 Harp, of yore
50 Rush hour situation
51 Circe
53 Rodgers or Romberg
57 Los ———, New Mexico
61 Cat-quick
62 Rebuke severely
64 Store coupon clipper
65 Pulitzer winner of 1957
66 City that sounds mysterious
67 Pung and luge
68 Prepared to drive
69 One of a masculine trio

DOWN
1 Chanel, to friends
2 Viva voce
3 Leather flask
4 Fit to drink
5 Field event item
6 Pretty ——— picture
7 A, B, C, D, or E
8 "Wait ———!"
9 Show
10 Shaw's homeland
11 Sophia's contemporary
12 Like champagne
13 Lot
18 Ending with favor or labor
22 Spelunker's milieu
24 Old French coin
26 Alpha's antithesis
27 Units for Noah
28 One-year diary
31 Creator of the "Count of Monte Cristo"
32 Greek Muse
33 Discourage 40 Wheedled
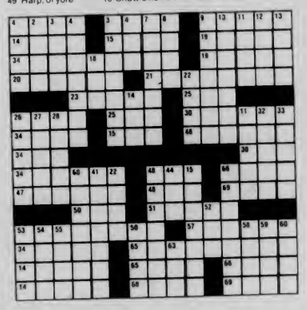
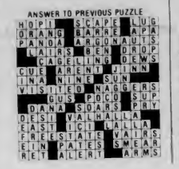
41 Quibblers
42 Prefix with precious and private
43 Stamps
44 Single: Prefix
45 Railed at
46 Administered
52 Yale man
53 Church event
54 Equal, in Evian
55 In the flesh
56 "Flee, feline!"
58 Husband: Fr.
59 Auditory
60 Pursue
63 Observe



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE



Weather

Clouds and coastal fog through tonight. Chance showers west through tonight and over east portion tonight. Showers ending west to east tomorrow, becoming windy and colder. Lows tonight in the 40s. Highs today in the 50s. Highs tomorrow 50 to 55.

WMUA 91.1 FM

6-9	Oblivion Express with Fern Spierer
9-12	Hell Comes to Your House with Pauline
12-3	Wilehmina
3-5:30	Mr Ted Show
5:30-6	Newswatch
6-7	UMass Hotline
7-10	UMass Women's Basketball
10-2	Eliot Andrew
2-6	Classical Reveille with Mike Cevasco

CABLE/VIDEO

Today, Avante Guarde Video

10:30 - 12:30	Un Pas Par Dela — Homegrown Avante Garde Video
12:30 - 1:00	Nam June Paik's View of New York City
1:00 - 1:30	Edited for Television — Nam June Paik distorts Marshall McCluen
1:30 - 2:00	Scapemates

Tonight at
THE PUB
15 E. Pleasant St., AMHERST

it's Miller time
If you've got the time, we've got the beer.
50¢ DRAFTS
AMERICAN QUALITY BEER SINCE 1855

A Pre-Holiday Happy Hour with Jim Plunkett

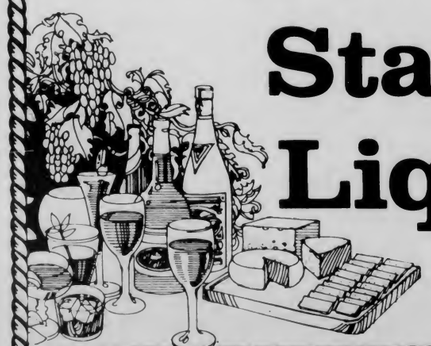
JUMP UP
Dec. 5 S.U.B.

AMERICAN GREETINGS
...for that special person

Thanksgiving Cards
...for spanning the miles.
Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE

Happy Thanksgiving
from the owners & staff of
Stadium Liquors



COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday - Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10 % • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?

Rackedisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

AUDIO

Jensen 30 spkrs $125 Technics rcvr 30 w/ch $85 new Advent util. spkrs $120 all in exc. cond. 6-4504

AUTO FOR SALE

Ford Mercury 1973, very good condition, $950 call 549-6745

BROWNIEGRAMS

Three flavors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

CATE

The Course and Teacher Evaluation Guides have arrivd! Pick one up in the Campus center and use it for next semester's course selection. CATE is a publication of the Academic Affairs Committee, Student Government Association.

DRYCLEANING

Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Way. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ENTERTAINMENT

For the best professional DJ with a superior sound system at the cheapest rate call Peter 546-7504

They drive you up the wall, we drive you on the floor. Lights, sound, price - we beat everybody - POLODROID DJ's Pat or John 253-2957

FOR RENT

Two bedroom apt. near Southwest walking distance to Campus available Jan 1 549-5175

Apt to rent window overlooks bus stop! 2 bedrooms $315 per month available Jan 1 call 665-2807

FOR SALE

GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972

Apple II Plus Computer 64k with language card, printer card, disk-drive, green display C.R.T. $1190 Call Gary 546-6719

Who Tickets 16th row Dec 11 546-6977

Mens fur-lined leather jacket, handmade wedding gown, fiberfill sleeping bag, 586-9040

Women's Bicycle, 5 speed with rack, $70 549-6745

New Skis Dynastar Omeglass II 200 cm still in pkg $175 call Pit 549-5896

FOUND

A certain sum of money on November 15. If yours, tell me sum, denomination of bill(s), and where lost. Box 1166, Hampshire College

GABRIEL AT ORPHEUM

Quality cassette recordings of entire 11/12 concert for info call Mike 546-8095

GAY & LESBIAN ALLIANCE

Notice! The Counselling Collective is moving soon! To 106 CC Same phone (545-2645)! Same hours!

HELP WANTED

Coordinator for production of the Course and Teacher Evaluation Guide. Part-time through school year. Full-time summer committment required. Third World and women students are encouraged to apply. Apply 420 S.U.B. Academic Affairs. Deadline 11/24/82

Nationwide inventory service needs for busy 6 weeks after Christmas. Must work weekends, nights. Averge 25 hours weekly $4.75 per hour. Must have phone, transportation and apply at Student Employment Office by December 1st.

Women and Men who support the American Labor Movement--Fight Union Busting Corporations! Informational Picketing Weekdays and Saturdays, 4.00/hr call 7 P.M.-9 P.M. 665-7149

Business Meneger Union Records bookkeeping experience helpful. Preferably junior status or below. 10 hrs/week $4.00/hr. W.S. or Non. Pick up applications at U.R.U start training Dec 6.

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons: Rock and Roll Lead. Beginners accepted. Reasonable rates. John Cosimini 256-0180

INTERSESSION RENTALS

Delta Chi has furnished rooms for intersession. Located next to S.W. dorms. Laundry, kitchen and parking available. Call Dave 549-0482 or Larry 549-1151

LESBIAN AND GAY

Are you Gay? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2645 or drop in SU406F

LOST

Yellow leather wallet taken at Casiac 11/17. Please return. No questions asked. Sentimental value. Reward. 6-5802.

Brown wallet IDs UMass & MA license 584-2635 William. Scott

Class Ring: Teeneck High School 1982 Lost the weekend of October 30th No questions, Reward. Ken 546-6690

Keys lost at Beat Concert! $5 Reward. Call 665-4187

Police Hat - sentimental value. A reward Call Ed 6-7601

PERSONALS

Happy Birthday Laura I'll mis you next semester! Love, Sherri

To my #1 Scrock! Happy 20th stripper I love you zipperhead - your Scrock - D.D.

John O. - Happy 18th Birthday! Guess Who

Ken S - I had a great time at the Pub Wed, you're "A Charmer." - Carol

Andy Have a great Birthday a few days early. You're a terrific friend--Lori.

Win a Puch 10 Speed, portable FM stereo or dinner for two at the Pub with Pike raffle 3 for a dollar.

Call FLASH to wish him a Happy Birthday 546-4625

To the blonde Brit from Canterbury saw you again Friday on my bus. We seem to have similar tastes in scarves. Call 665-3529.

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Dissertations, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

Ride Desperately needed for Tues Nov 23 Anytime. Will Pay. Call Robin 546-5474.

Ride Needed to Amherst and back to Boston one night weekly. Will pay. 617-423-3077 call mornings.

Ride needed to Philadelphia or Delaware vicinity for Thanksgiving. Chris 546-5739

Help!! I need a ride to Rochester NY on 11/23 or 24. Heidi 6-4219

ROOM WANTED

Femeles looking for a room or whole 2 bedroom apt in Brittany Manor for spring semester. Please call 549-5586. Keep trying.

Fun and energetic femele and her very friendly dog looking for apartment in Cliffside or room in house on bus route call 549-2808.

Single room and/or willing to share a room for Jan & Spring semester. Must be close to campus & on bus route. Preferably Townehouse or Brandywine. Call 549-5990 Mike keep trying

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female Roommate One bedroom townhouse Southwood for Jan 1 155 + util after 9:30 P.M. 256-6053

Keys lost at Beat Concert! $5 Reward. Call 665-4187

Person(s) wanted for Jan 1 spring optional $150, includes heat. 256-0185

2 Roommates wanted to share large bedroom in Puffton Village $96.00 each includes heat available Jan 1 call 549-1703.

Kosher female for one bedroom in two bedroom Southwood townhouse 253-7031

Two women needed for Puffton apt one for single room and one needed to share large double. Call 549-5487

SERVICES

Writing assistence. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729

Need help with typing fast service provided: Dissertations, etc. Double-spaced $1.75 per page Call 323-4054

BIRTH CHART READINGS learn astrology through your sign - planet positions at birth. Contact Julie at 253-7813 with your exact time of birth.

SPEEDY TYPING SERVICE
24 hour typing at reasonable rates.
For professional service call Jim 546-7042

Health Club membership available at discount price. Call 256-0511

Moving? Our 12 foot enclosed cube truck will help you safely move your stuff 256-0480

TO SUBLET

Spring semester, one bedroom in 6 bedroom house, living room, dining room, laundry and kitchen facilities; close to campus, on bus route. 150 +, Call Paul after 6 pm 549-5586

2 bedroom apt on busline in Dec or Jan 325 month 665-7193

Furnished apartment on bus rt call now! 665-4793

Women wanted to share room in apt Feb great deal for info please call 665-7109

2 bdrm for sublet ASAP 665-3480

WANTED TO BUY

Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for an apartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093

3 girls seek 2 or 3 bedroom apt in Amherst vicinity call 549-6850

ARTHUR ANDERSEN & CO.

The following 1982 graduates of the University of Massachusetts have now started their professional careers with our firm. We welcome each of them to Arthur Andersen & Co. We also want to express our appreciation to the students for their continued interest in us and acknowledge the contribution that the University and the professors in particular have made to their development.

BOSTON OFFICE
Sharyn Areano
Steve Caron
Jeanne Cervantes
Bob Conway
Mitch Fishman
Rich Goldman
Kevin Lozaw
Ken Mahan
Tim Moran
Jim Mullen
Vicki Saunders

HARTFORD OFFICE
Linda Cotton
George Kaplan
Paul Schmidt

ROSELAND OFFICE
Ned Futterman

SAN FRANCISCO OFFICE
David St. Jean

SAN JUAN OFFICE
Gabe Olivera

JUMP UP
Dec. 5 S.U.B.

adventura travel
549-1256

Reserve Holiday Flights Now save up to 50%
Upper Level
233 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst Carriage Shops

GRAND OPENING
SALE-A-BRATION
Sat. Nov. 20-Sat. Dec. 4
2 weeks of Madness & Bargains

- Meet Bob Layton, Marvel Comics' Iron Man & Hercules Artist
Sat. Dec. 4
Free Marvel Guide to Collecting Comics with this ad
6 new comics for the price of 5
20% off all back issues in stock

Comics
Prints
Collectibles
Dungeons & Dragons

Copyright 1982 Marvel Comics Group A Division of Cadence Industries Corp All Rights Reserved

Moondance
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, Mass.
413-586-8775

Sports

There will be an organizational meeting of all members and candidates for Women's track today at 3:00 p.m. at the Women's track office at Boyden.

Lady cagers face early test against Crusaders

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team faces its first real test of its young season as they host the tough Holy Cross Crusaders tonight in the Cage.

UMass, undefeated at 1-0, rode the record breaking performances of freshman Barbara Hebel to a 66-61 win over Siena Sunday afternoon. But against division I Holy Cross, UMass will have to improve on some aspects of their game.

"The freshmen have a lot to learn," said head coach Mary Ann Ozdarski. "They have a lot of potential." UMass, who started four freshmen against Siena, "was brilliant at times and at other times we were not", according to Ozdarski.

The Minutewomen will have to improve their defensive play. At times, Siena seemingly waltzed to the basket. And there were times when Siena couldn't break the UMass defense at all.

Inconsistency is the price that teams pay when they have so many freshmen playing. Besides Hebel, Karen Damminger, Jerrie Bernier, and Rebecca Kuchs started along with Wendy Ward, a junior. Freshman Kelly Collins and Jean Cooper were the first two off the bench.

But the frosh are getting better every day out on the floor. Kuchs played good defense and Collins offset the height advantage that Siena had. Hebel, played great enroute to setting two records. She broke Julie Ready's single game scoring record of 35 points with her 37. Hebel also established a record for sinking the most field goals in a game, 19, which broke the previous record of 15 held by four players.

Hebel gives Massachusetts a good outside shooting threat which it has been lacking the past few years.

UMass will go up against an older Crusader team that features more experience than Siena.

"Everyone on the team has a job to do," said Hebel, "If we all do them, we'll win."

It will take a good effort to do so. Gametime is at 7:30 p.m. in the Cage. The game will be broadcast over WMUA (91.1 FM).

Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

Freshman Barbara Hebel, who set a UMass single game scoring record with 37 points in her first game will be in action tonight when the Minutewomen host Holy Cross at the Cage at 7:30.

Record setting year behind 'n Pearson looking ahead

By RUSS WHINNEM
Collegian Correspondent

The pressbox buzzing began just three minutes into the game when man-of-the hour Garry Pearson took a pitch over the Massachusetts 15 yard line and wound up on the AIC 29. Fifty-six yards on his second carry of the day, and suddenly the white charts taped up to the wall didn't seem impossible

The charts, manned by Sports Information Director Howie Davis, kept tabs on Pearson and his progress towards Lorenzo Bouier's all-time New England rushing records for a career (3827 yards) and a single season (1622 yards). Each time Pearson touched the ball, out came Davis black magic marker to write in a new figure. The ultimate goal of all this? Well, Pearson needed a mere 246 yards for the career mark, and a paltry 279 to get by the single season record. The first thought was that Howie was doing some serious wishful thinking.

By halftime Pearson had a touchdown and 145 yards on 16 rushes. Still, 134 yards to go. But on the other hand....

The third quarter was slow and not terribly productive. Sure, for the average back, the 40 yards that Pearson gained would be great. But this was a record chase and the pressbox folks were getting frustrated. Now, with 185 yards, everyone was talking.

"He needs to break one open," someone said. Howie's charts were now only second in attention to Pearson himself.

It was now the Garry Pearson offense and number 22 got the ball ten of thirteen times at one stretch. With 6:40 remaining he broke another record. He had most carries by a UMass back in one game, with 39. Then when the Minutemen scored moments later, and Pearson only had 25 yards to go, the newest foe became the clock.

Nobody complained when AIC scored with 2:59 left in the game. The eyes made one final check of the charts. But, Rich Jenkins took the first hand off.

"What is he doing?" someone yelled in reference to Pickett. "Does he know how close Pearson is?" Both, in fact knew, and Pearson broke over the right side on the next play to the AIC 43 yardline as the box rose up. "Wait, wait," shouted Davis, "17, 18, 19, no, no, he's on short." Aah!

But now it was imminent and on the next carry with 1:36 remaining, he got the record. "GARRY, GARRY, GARRY," a lone fan started yelling. "GARRY, GARRY, GARRY...," chanted the fans. Then came the curtain call at one minute and one second remaining, when Pearson exited to the expected standing ovation and a sea of high fives from teammates.

Howie Davis smiled, and turned, "You are free to clap or cheer in any manner you wish." The box whooped it up.

When it was all over, Pearson smiled and shook hands, many hands.

"I'm on a natural high, it hasn't sunk in yet," he laughed. Then he handed out credit. This offensive line is one of the best in the East. It's a credit to them," he said.

As the locker room cleared Pearson answered another question, namely, what was next for Garry Pearson. "Relaxation," he grinned. "Take some time off, and then I definitely want to pursue my football career."

Meanwhile, the writers got back to the pressbox and tried to think of different ways to open their stories about Garry Pearson. Howie Davis' charts still hung on the wall with a lot of black numbers scribbled on it. They were all the right numbers.

Swimmers still undefeated

By BILLY SHEA
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts womens swim team extended their record to 3-0 Saturday when they defeated the University of Connecticut 79-70 at UConn.

After winning the first two meets over Vermont and Smith College rather easily, the Minutewomen didn't ice the UConn win until the last heat.

The 200 yard freestyle relay team of Connie Anderson, Ann Whitlock, Elizabeth Feinberg, and Jenn Nicolai won the meet with their best time of the year, 1:41.77.

"There was pressure to win and we did," said UMass coach Valerie Turtle. "They swam a good strong race."

Nicolai was the star of the meet, winning honors in four different events. Besides being on the winning freestyle team, she was also on the winning 200 medly relay team along with taking personal triumphs in the 100 yard individual medly and the 100 yard freestyle.

Keen also had an outstanding day as she was a triple winner and also set a UMass swimming record in the 200 yard breaststroke with an exciting come from behind win.

She broke the record set in 1976 by Thersesa Totin of 2:38.27 with a time of 2:37.39.

The swimmers next meet will be December 1 when they travel to take on Springfield College at 7:00 p.m.

Kim Tragedy may keep Boom Boom on the ropes

By ELLIOTT KALB
Collegian Staff

Please don't call Ray "Boom-Boom" Mancini a killer. In his fight last Saturday against South Korean Duk Koo Kim, a blow or culmination of blows by Mancini in the 14th round of a competitive, well-officiated fight ended the life of Mr. Kim.

Mancini is no more a killer than is Bob Arum, the promoter of the fight; CBS Sports, which televised it; or fans like myself, who watched the fight in a bar rooting for Mancini to knock out Kim.

"I was in there with him, and who's to say it couldn't be me?", Mancini said. "And yet, how can I say, "It was better him than me?".

Boxing kills people. Many people connected with the boxing world are sleaze, actually human slime. It is a sport based solely on premeditated violence, blows to the head and abdomen. There is no denying this.

Boxing is perhaps our most primal sport, the one that has been with us longer, and will continue in one form or another, long after we leave.

There is a morbid fascination with boxing. On November 12, Aaron Pryor knocked Alexis Arguello unconscious. Moments before, watching on HBO, I was fervently screaming for Pryor to kill'em. When the fight was stopped in the 14th round, I might have stopped to wonder if I had gotten my wish.

It is a disturbing and unanswerable question. Are Aaron "the hawk" Pryor and Ray "Boom-Boom" Mancini heroes or villains? Are they to be praised, or scorned? Are fans like myself heaping an extraordinary amount of time, attention and affection on men whose sole intention when in the ring is annihilation?

Muhammed Ali is the greatest athlete of my lifetime. A man first and a fighter second. As a symbol of his generation and a minister of his church, Ali has always been a man of uncompromising beliefs. Sugar Ray Leonard, Alexis Arguello, Joe Frazier, Burgess Meredith — all have brought a class and dignity to the fight game. Many others could be mentioned.

There was little that could be done to prevent the tragedy that occurred that Saturday afternoon. Mancini, a victim of circumstance, will be haunted by this incident the rest of his life.

I, like Mancini and millions of others, will not soon forget the sheer horror of Saturday. Hopefully, though, further safety measures will be taken. Hopefully, Ray "Boom-Boom" Mancini will defend his WBA lightweight title many times successfully, and will not have to live with an undeserved tag.

Boxing may be the ultimate sporting confrontation: two men, armed with just a pair of gloves, confront each other. Sometimes to the death. Sometimes, the raging bulls die.

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian
Volume CXII, Issue 55 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Wednesday, November 24, 1982

Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

Sophomore dance major Nina Hutchinson was captured yesterday in the middle of a dance routine in the NOPE dance room.

Attorney general to prosecute for misuse of funds

By JIM FINKLE
Collegian Staff

The Student Attorney General's Office at the University of Massachusetts will prosecute a co-president of Students Advocating Financial Aid (S.A.F.A.) for alleged misuse of Student Activity Trust Fund monies.

Last week Siobhan Powers, chairperson of the Undergraduate Student Senate, placed a formal complaint with the Student Attorney General's Office against S.A.F.A. co-president Jim Shaw for violating two sections of the Student Government Association Constitution while taking a trip to Washington D.C. last spring.

In February, the Undergraduate Student Senate voted to give S.A.F.A. $500 for a trip to Washington to lobby on behalf of financial aid, Powers said. S.A.F.A. also received monies from other sources, including the offices of both the chancellor and the vice chancellor for Student Affairs, according to Shaw. He said these outside funds comprised about 75 percent of S.A.F.A.'s funding for the trip.

Powers has charged Shaw with misuse of funds remaining after S.A.F.A. made its March visit to Washington. Shaw said he used $196 of the funds to pay for a trip he and Cavin Bloomer, then treasurer of S.A.F.A., made in May to meet with a member of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neil's Washington office.

Shaw said yesterday he and Bloomer made the trip to facilitate setting up S.A.F.A. chapters throughout New England.

"We wanted to use our contacts in Washington to help us establish S.A.F.A. chapters throughout New England. It's hard just to walk in and establish a group overnight."

Shaw said he wanted to organize some sort of a forum to attract students at other schools to set up S.A.F.A. chapters. We want to set up a promotional forum simuar to that at UMass."

Powers said Shaw violated two sections of the Student Government Association Constitution. The first being a clause saying that when an organization is given money for a specific purpose, that group must return all funds not used for that purpose. The second clause says a group must always use the most economical form of travel when using Student Activity Trust Fund monies.

"That trip was never authorized by anybody," Powers added.

Shaw said he was not familiar with Student Government Association rules and had met with Leslie G. Bridges, business manager for the Student Activities Office, to review proper proceedures for withdrawal of funds for that trip.

"Because the expenditure was approved by Les Bridges, who has ultimate say on R.S.O. (Recognized Student Organization) expenditures, then it was the responsibility of Les Bridges," Shaw said.

He added that the Student Government Association should have taken the funds back if S.A.F.A. was no longer entitled to spend them.

"If it was supposed to go back, the student government should have taken it back," Shaw said.

Randy Chapman, the assistant attorney general handling the case, said yesterday he would present Shaw with the charge next week.

Amherst area religious leaders involved in nuclear freeze issue

By BROOKE STATES
Collegian Staff

Local religious leaders, like their national counterparts, have become involved in the nuclear freeze issue.

Rabbi Saul Perlmutter of Hillel, a Jewish student organization at the University of Massachusetts spoke at the Amherst College disarmament rally last year.

"Does it seem possible that people are spending billions of dollars to build these weapons and not use them?" Perlmutter asked.

Rev. Ian Montgomery, of the Episcopal Church at UMass has a large poster of a mushroom cloud on his wall with the caption, "Will man destroy in six minutes what it took God six days to create?"

Montgomery also said he is dismayed that the former KGB head Yuri Andropov, is running the Soviet Union now. "I had Hungary in my lifetime, you have Poland and Afghanistan in yours," said Montgomery.

Rev. Joseph Quigly of the Newman Center gave the invocation at the freeze rally held at UMass this fall. He was a forward observer with the artillery in the Italian Campaign of World War II and is now chaplain of the American Legion Post in Amherst.

"Personally I feel there should be a nuclear freeze," Quigley said.

The build up of nuclear weapons is the most pressing problem of our age," he said.

"If they are going to spend money on arms they should spend money on peace," Quigley said.

Quigley said he feels nuclear war is a "good possibility, but I cannot believe that God would let man destroy his world," he said.

Philip Ward is a board member of United Christian Foundation, a retired minister and a theologian. He said he supports the freeze.

If the stance of the United States Government continues, "nuclear war is certain," Ward said. Ward said the change in Soviet leadership will not make much difference.

"The nuclear freeze is the conscience of the country. Churches are in an excellent position to encourage and advance it," Ward said.

First Thanksgiving dinners included food, contests, songs

By PAUL BELVAL
Collegian Staff

Most people's picture of the first Thanksgiving — a sedate harvest feast between solemn Pilgrims and silent Indians — is probably wrong, according to a University of Massachusetts anthropologist.

"I can still visualize in my grade school calendar where you'd have the Indians and the Pilgrims sitting around a table sharing their food. I don't think it was like that. It was probably much more fun than the picture portrays," George J. Armelagos, a UMass anthropologist said.

"We tend to think of Thanksgiving as a religious holiday, but it was actually an English holiday called 'Harvest Home' and it was a very secular holiday " Armelagos said. "In England, after the first harvest, they'd go and have a celebration that would last a week. They would go through the fields singing songs. They would have dolls made out of corn, sporting events, running and throwing stones and shooting contests."

Armelagos said the Pilgrims described the event as a time for recreation and rejoicing, feasting, playing games and entertaining the Indians for the three day feast.

He said the religious aspects of Thanksgiving were introduced later.

"You couldn't go out and throw rocks or play games like cricket. You weren't allowed to do that and I think that was one of the reasons for not making Thanksgiving a religious holiday," he said. "They'd have some fun on Thanksgiving, doing what they want to do."

Just as it is now, food was the main attraction at the first Thanksgiving, Armelagos said.

"The first Thanksgiving wasn't a meal that they sat down to with knives and forks. It probably went over the course of a week or so," he said. "Food was continuously being cooked and then they would share it. They would sit on the ground, eating with their hands most likely."

Collegian photo by Kevin J. Fackett

It almost looks rehearsed. But it isn't. These students, sitting on the Campus Center steps enjoying yesterday's unusually warm temperatures, seemed to know just how to align themselves to form this geometrically interesting seating arrangement.

World and national news

AP Laserphoto

Governor Edward J. King yesterday signed a proclomation forming a new coalition of public and private sector groups to help raise the awareness of the public towards drunken driving.

States roads safe as drunk driving campaign accelerates

BOSTON — Massachusetts — encouraged by the lowest roadway death rate in the country — accelerated its campaign against drunken driving yesterday by forming a coalition to educate the public about the problem.

Gov. Edward J. King told an afternoon news conference that the Massachusetts stands as "the safest state in the nation to drive in," and introduced an 11-organization Coalition on Reducing Drunken Driving to increase public awareness.

The announcement came as King recalled the death toll on Massachusetts roadways between Thanksgiving and New Year's Day. Some 60 percent of all fatal accidents involve a drunken driver, King said.

On other fronts, King said police will extend special patrols looking for drunken drivers over the four-day Thanksgiving weekend, and Ed Esandarian, president of the New England Broadcasters Association, said three radio spots began airing yesterday with the message, "Friends Don't Let Friends Drive Drunk."

The governor began the day by talking to teen-agers at two high schools about drunken driving.

"Now with another holiday season fast approaching, we are committed to doing everything in our power to reduce the deaths, the injuries and the great sorrow that they bring," King said at the news conference.

Public Safety Secretary George Luciano said the state had the lowest highway death toll by population in the country this year — 10.2 deaths per 100,000 population through September.

Later Luciano added the state's total highway fatalities are expected to hit a 20-year low this year, and he credited King's efforts against drunken driving. So far 562 people have died in motor vehicle accidents this year, compared to 690 for the same time last year. In 1961, the death toll was 575, and the lowest since then was 688 in 1963, spokesman Charles Manning said.

King recently pushed through a tough new drunken driving law, effective Sept. 1.

King said seven people died on roadways over the Thanksgiving weekend last year, compared to an annual average of 15 deaths. Between Thanksgiving and New Year's Day, 74 died last year, compared to an annual average of 108 deaths.

"Unfortunately for some it will also be a time of deep sorrow, especially for those who lose loved ones, friends or acquaintenances in motor vehicle accidents," he said.

Earlier, King told about 1,000 Westwood High School students that the higher drinking age — 20 years old up from 18 — is reducing the loss of teen-age lives, too.

"Teen-age drinking and driving is a real problem," he told the group. "For all of us, the safest and best course is to recognize what the statistics show us: at a very young age drinking and driving, physically and mentally we're not able to handle that...

Andropov: tighten up labor increase goods production

MOSCOW (AP) — Communist Party chief Yuri V. Andropov has put Soviet factory managers on notice: Tighten labor discipline and produce more goods or face demotion.

Manpower shortages, absenteeism and shortages of raw materials caused by poor distribution and hoarding have long been cited as drains on the economy.

In his first major speech since moving into the Kremlin's No. 1 job, Andropov added inefficient managers to the list of ills plaguing economic growth. He told the party Central Committee on Monday that bad supervisors could no longer be tolerated.

The former chief of the Soviet KGB secret police, who succeeded the late Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev Nov. 12, ordered managers to "speed up work" and encourage employees to use "initiative and enterprise" to improve factory output and stop waste.

The 68-year-old party chief hinted at readiness to try radical approaches to improve output, and he may have no other choice. Soviet industrial growth was 2.8 percent this year, the lowest since World War II, while labor productivity increased by 2 percent, well off the target of 3.5 percent.

The time seems to have come, Andropov told the Communist policy making body, to "extend the independence" of state-owned enterprises and state and collective farms and provide new "material incentives" to encourage efficiency.

Under the centralized planning system, the Soviet economy is mapped out in five-year plans that set ambitious targets for various industries.

Gas tax increase for bridges, not for jobs, Reagan says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan fell in step with congressional leaders in both parties and said yesterday he will press for an increase in the federal gasoline tax.

The revenue will be used to pay for repairs to the nation's highways and bridges and — coincidentally, he insists — create jobs. Some of the money also would go for mass transit.

The president said doubling the gasoline tax to 8 cents a gallon would cost the average motorist $30 a year.

It would be the first federal gasoline tax increase since 1959. The states also tax gasoline — an average of 12 cents a gallon.

Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker, Jr. of Tennessee and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. of Massachusetts have said they will push for some type of highway rebuilding financed by a gasoline tax increase.

"From our early soundings, it appears this measure will command broad bipartisan support," the president said in a visit to the White House press briefing room to announce his decision.

"We would not be considering such costs unless our needs were both large and pressing," Reagan said. He cited transportation Department figures that snow 10 percent of the nation's interstate highway system and 23,000 bridges need resurfacing, replacement or rehabilitation.

While Reagan and Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis denied that the construction proposal amounted to a politically attractive jobs bill, Lewis said it would create 170,000 jobs in the construction industry, where unemployment is approximately 23 percent.

Digest

by the Associated Press

Rabbi excommunicators abuse old privileges

BOSTON — Rabbis who used an ancient religious rite to excommunicate several hundred liberal Jews abused "a legitimate but very rarely used procedure for political purposes," a Jewish leader said yesterday.

"Excommunication is a very extreme action to be taken only by the highest rabbinic authorities," said Rabbi Pinchas Stolper, executive vice president of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America in New York.

A three-member tribunal, part of a group of 13 rabbis called the Supreme Rabbinic Court of America Inc., took the action Sunday against several hundred Jews who publicly criticized Israel's invasion of Lebanon last spring.

The rabbis, meeting in Tewksbury, Mass., ordered excommunication for members of the liberal New Jewish Agenda who signed a June 24 New York Times advertisement opposing the invasion.

The rabbis said those it accused were guilty of "traitorous and treacherous acts against Jewish people."

Among those identified by the rabbis were Massachusetts Institute of Technology linguistics expert Noam Chomsky and MIT Nobel laureate Salvador Luria, Rabbi Ira Axelrad of Brandeis University and writer Alfred Lilienthal of New York.

Marvin Antelman of Newton, Mass., one of the three rabbis, said yesterday his group was formed in 1973 "to deal with the problems of Jewish survival."

AP Laserphoto

Director Eva Le Galliene auditions a baby pig for a featured role in the upcoming Broadway production of "Alice in Wonderland."

Cardinal Medeiros ill; hospitalized in Rome

BOSTON — The Roman Catholic archbishop of Boston, Cardinal Humberto Medeiros was admitted to Salvator Mundi Hospital in Rome yesterday because of recurring problems with high blood pressure.

A spokesman for the cardinal, who asked not to be identified, said Medeiros was put in the hospital so his fluctuating blood pressure could be monitored.

"Current plans are for the cardinal to remain in the hospital for a few days only," the spokesman said in Boston.

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Ray Beauchemin
Copy Editor	Jim Finkle
Layout Technician	Susan Bankert
Photo Technician	Kevin Fachetti
Composition	Lauri Neely, Kyle Cooper, Ken Kalinowski, Terri Cooper, Gail Tanzer, Donna Maurice, Janet Buch

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $25 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

Collegian photo by Kevin J. Fachetti

One of the campus pond swans will probably be spending Thanksgiving alone there while its partner spends its time at the Tillson Poultry Farm on East Pleasant street. The swan, which could not be captured by Physical Plant employees earlier this week, will be left to the company of the few students on campus over the holiday. Physical plant employees will reattempt the swan's capture this week.

Acting chances plays role in UMass theatre program

By MICHELLE HYDE
Collegian Correspondent

Posters for Dark of the Moon or Vanities, discreet but nonetheless unavoidable with their purples and blues, were splashed all over campus during the weeks the shows were playing at the Rand Theater.

Students last week carried brightly colored helium-filled balloons advertising Seesaw, the latest Music Theatre Guild production.

Some students with a secret desire to act may not be satisfied with posters and balloons and may wonder how they can become involved in the theater productions.

They may feel because this University is so big they do not have a chance, they have neither the experience nor the talent, or that only certain people are chosen for the part.

These students never try out. They simply collect balloons and look at the posters.

According to Richard Trousdell, a professor of directing and performance in the theater department at the University of Massachusetts, it is not impossible to obtain a part in a UMass theater production.

The directors do not immediately ask you about your past experience at the auditions. They are mostly concerned with the way you read or the way you present yourself. Trousdell recommended that students interested in acting take performance courses and audition for plays.

He said auditions are important because they expose would-be actors and actresses to the process of producing a show. If a person is chosen for a part, he said, chances are that he or she has talent.

There are sometimes minor reasons why a person may be turned down. These incude height, haircolor, or something changeable like voice quality.

Classes are important because students are eventually evaluated by their instructors, he said.

Students get to act in class scenes, where they get chances to "get their feet wet." The students will eventually be directing the shows and they will probably remember the students they worked with in class.

"You get known," he said.

Trousdell denied that any of the directors pick their favorites for the productions.

"I think you see the same people in the shows not for any favoritism reasons, but because they are talented. If you get your foot in the door, it's because you had talent. You had an interesting way of presenting yourself," he said.

He compared the cast of a play to a family, because the prople depend on each other throughout the whole production.

"It probably seems intimidating to someone new, but they soon find out after working in a show that they are already part of the department and its work," he said.

"A casting choice is not a decision to like you or not to like you; chances are, the director doesn't even know you," he said.

Iris Valanti, a professor of acting and also the director of A Day in the Death of Joe Egg, which recently held auditions and will play from December 7 to December 11, said she knew "about ½" of the 60 students who tried out for 6 parts. She said she knew Leslie Stainton, the female lead's work well and had seen Mark Cohen, the male lead, in another show.

She also said a "serious" director would not play favorites.

"When you cast someone for a role, you have to pick the best person for the part," she said. She said se would not pick someone she knew for the part if they were not good enough.

She said because of the demanding roles in Joe Egg, however, she might go with familiarity."

"Normally I go with versatility and the ability to try something new and be vulnerable," she said.

Trousdell said that the department has people who haven't had a lot of experience but who have a lot of instinct.

"Chances are that if you are interestd enough and have talent, you will have done something," he said.

He pointed out that Cohen, the lead in Joe Egg, is new to the department.

"I'm not saying that it will happen every time, but sometimes it can and will happen," he said.

Better get in line early: 14,000 due in Whitmore

By ANNE McCRORY
Collegian Staff

You were wrong.

You thought you could go to Whitmore today and preregister without any problems. Guess what? Thirteen thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine other students have the same idea.

Preregistration forms, known as OSCAR forms, will be accepted until 5 today at the main lobby counter in Whitmore as well as in the Registrar's Office, room 213 Whitmore. The purpose of the additional location staffed by Registrar's Office personnel and work study students, is to reduce the long lines incurred by the last minute rush.

"We want to accomodate each student as quickly as possible," said Marion Markwell, administrative assistant to the Registrar.

The greatest rush of students occurs between classes, although even then there are not great delays, she said.

Students turning in forms after 5 p.m. Wednesday without legitimate excuse will have to pay a $5 fine, Markwell said.

"The fine must be paid before blank forms can be picked up or a receipt has to accompany forms to be turned in," she said.

As of lunchtime Tuesday, only 3000 of the 17,000 forms issued had been turned in Markwell said.

"The majority (of students) are rushig in and turning in forms at the last moment," she said. "I expect they (the remaining forms) will be turned in Wednesday."

A random sampling of students in the Campus Center showed 75 percent of those surveyed had not yet passed in their preregistration forms to the registrar's office, and all but one were confident the forms would be in on time.

Beta Kappa Phi sponsors Tug-O-War for United Way

By JIM FLOYD
Collegian Staff

Tommy Heinsohn, former Boston Celtic player and coach, acted as guest referee Saturday as the Beta Kappa Phi fraternity and the United Way sponsored the second annual Lite Beer Tug-of-War on the Southwest playing fields.

The event, which was to benefit the United Way, collected just over $1,000 for the charity, according to Craig Keenan, a member of Beta Kappa Phi who coordinated the contest.

"We were very happy to do something positive for the community," said Keenan.

The tug-of-war was divided into three categories, a men's division, a women's division and a one-on-one competition where the strongest of the crowd were pitted against each other.

In the men's final, the 10-man Undertaker team outmuscled the Phi Sigma Kappa entry to win first place among the 15 entered teams.

Of the 12 teams competing in the women's division, the UMass crew team's B-squad proved the stronger team over the Delta Zeta sorority. The UMass crew A-squad finished third.

There were 20 men entered in the individual strong man competition and when the final challenger was toppled, Tim Boyd stood alone as the victor.

"The main purpose behind the whole event," said Keenan, "was for everyone involved to have a good time while we raised money for the United Way."

Money was raised by the collection of a $25 entry fee from each competing team. This money went directly to the United Way.

Heinsohn provided entertainment for the crowd of spectators as he scowled back and forth amongst the competitors, giving them both helpful and not-so-helpful instructions.

The top 15 teams received T-shirts from Miller High Life, who also helped to sponsor the event by providing the ropes, a float and Heinsohn.

Keenan said Beta Kappa Phi also plans to run another event for the United Way in the spring. He said the plan is a keg roll, possibly from New York to Amherst.

Installation causes noises, dust in student union building

TOM SEXTON
Collegian Correspondent

Excessive noise and dust in the Student Union Building are consequences of preparations for installation of a new fire alarm system there.

The Student Union Building's old ceiling is being removed and a new one is being installed because the old ceiling tiles are not strong enough to support the alarm system that will be installed next month.

"We're replacing the ceiling because with the new fire alarm system the tiles would keep falling down," Dudley Bridges, manager of Campus Center Building Operations, said.

"The old tiles will be down December 1," Bridges said. "We're waiting for the new tile to come in."

Bridges said other areas in the Campus Center Student Union complex will be receiving new ceilings also.

Like the main portion of the Student Union Building, these areas will also have new fire alarm system installed.

Bridges said all offices and hallways will receive new ceilings with a design similar to the old ceiling.

The game room and the craft shop will also have their tiles replaced Bridges said.

Bridges said the safety hazard posed by falling tiles was another reason for their replacement. In response to rumors that the old tiles contain asbestos, a known cancer causing agent, Bridges said, "A fellow got hit by a falling tile a few years ago. They said it was asbestos then, too. The tiles aren't asbestos."

Anita Seroll, of the Environmental Health and Safety department at UMass, also denied the charge.

"We looked into it last year," she said. "There's no asbestos in the tiles."

Collegian photo by Kevin J. Fachetti

Chris Eaton, a junior wood technology major, repairs his Volkswagen van on a road behind the Marshall Annex preparing for his trip home for Thanksgiving.

JUMP UP
Dec. 5 S.U.B.

MGH INSTITUTE OF HEALTH PROFESSIONS

The Master of Science Program in Nursing, designed for non-nurse college graduates, leads to preparation as Clinical Nurse Specialists. Graduates are eligible for RN licensure and specialized practice in one of six clinical areas.

Social Work in Health Care Programs

- ▶Post-Baccalaureate Certificate Program prepares college graduates for practice in a variety of health settings.
- ▶Post-Master's Certificate Program provides an opportunity for social workers todevelop the clinical skills and knowledge needed for advanced practice in health care.

For more information, fill out and return this blank to MGH Institute of Health Professions, Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, MA 02114. PLEASE PRINT

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

The MGH Institute of Health Professions admits students of any race, color and national or ethnic origin.

11th Annual Bush Bash
UMASS SKI CLUB
SUGARBUSH VALLEY
Ski & Party Week
Jan. 23-28
(last week of winter break)
INCLUDES 5½ lift tickets
5 nights lodging & meals
free beer & wine party
Hot Tubs Party etc. etc. etc.
Only $189 tax & gratuities included
THE BEST VACATION YOU'LL EVER HAVE.
LAGNAF 83
(get your $40 deposit in now to reserve your place)
THANKS TO ALL WHO HELPED MAKE THE SKI SNATCH A TOTAL SUCCESS ONCE AGAIN
(we couldn't have done it without you)
Thank You
The Ski Club

Students experience new way of living through UMass foreign study program

By TRICIA YACOVONE
Collegian Correspondent

Studying abroad offers an opportunity to experience a new way of living and a way to learn how to accept different views.

"My experience abroad opened my eyes to a world that is not always as wonderful as I always dreamed it should be" is a common statement of students who have been abroad.

Most people who have studied overseas view the experience very positively regardless of any problems they may encounter, said Sterling Lamet, who with his wife, Maryelise, form the team of overseas study coordinators at the International Programs Office (IPO) at the University of Massachusetts.

Most students have expressed a mixture of benefits in studying overseas because the academic aspects of the experience become tangled in the personal, Lamet said.

However, most returnees are very enthusiastic about overseas study and encourage other students to participate in a study abroad program, he added.

For example, a woman who studied in France in 1976 recommended studying overseas, but said that, "There is a saying that with some people the body travels, but the mind stays home."

She said that people studying abroad should try to prevent this from happening. A woman who wishes to be identified as Cassia, who is in Florence, Italy, emphasized this fact when she said, "(Studying abroad) can be an experience lost if you are not really willing to work hard and learn and understand, and I don't just mean the language."

Many lives have been changed as a result of studying abroad, Lamet said.

Another student who went to Canada in 1977 said, "I'm not certain I had a career goal when I went to Canada. While there, I began to think about law. (My year abroad) was something of a catalyst."

Studying abroad for either a semester or a year is quickly growing in popularity. The trend to study abroad began in the late 1960's, causing an impetus for the development of exchange and other programs offered at the IPO, Lamet said.

With the exception of the Freiburg Program, which began about fifteen years ago, most exchange programs were created by a series of correspondences between UMass and a college or university abroad, Lamet said.

Some of the contacts with the schools were provided by faculty or other interested proples with overseas linkages, he said.

The IPO has information on many study and work programs overseas, available for all students at UMass, the Five Colleges and New England land grant institutions. If there is a high demand for a program that has yet to be established, IPO will do whatever it can to try to create one, Lamet said.

Currently, there are a total of 38 UMass students studying abroad for the fall semester, nine of whom are on UMass exchange programs. 120 students are abroad for the entire academic year, 76 of whom are on UMass exchanges. Last spring 40 out of 68 students studied abroad on UMass programs.

UMass is hosting 60 foreign exchange students out of a total 900 foreign students at the University.

The program costs for UMass students going abroad are kept as close as possible to the University's tuition. Students on financial aid are able to transfer it to their exchange program through the Financial Aid Office.

Dastardly Dans
Mon - Thurs
$3.00 Cover
FREE DRAFT
9 - closing
50¢ Highballs
50¢ Domestic Beers
Pool Table - Pinball - Video Games
POOL TOURNAMENT TONIGHT

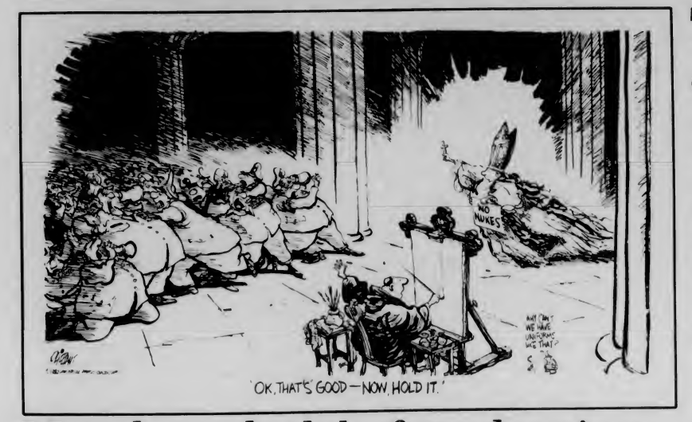
Coming Back Next Semester?

Wednesday, Nov. 24th, is the Deadline for Preregistration Forms and the Last Day for Academic Counseling. Drop off all forms at the Registrar's Office, rm. 213 - Whitmore, by 5 pm.

P.S. Happy Thanksgiving, Everyone!

IDB TIPS
a Service of the Dean of Students Office

EDITORIAL/OPINION



Murphy — look before leaping

Jim Murphy must be kidding.

In his opposition to the Health Council's special report on student alcohol use and abuse on campus at last Wednesday night's Undergraduate Student Senate and Thursday's faculty Senate meetings, SGA President Jim Murphy demonstrated a real ignorance of the alcohol problem at UMass.

Anyone who has observed the traffic going in and out of area package stores on Friday afternoons can see the alcohol consumption at UMass is much higher than the general population, high enough to be called a problem, and the Health Council is to be applauded for attempting to address the problem.

Paul N. Belval

Murphy critized the report because "it looks at the problem of alcohol abuse with a crime and punishment attitude without looking at it as a physical and social ill." While admittedly alcohol abuse is a physical and social problem, many students have forced the University to approach it as a crime and punishment problem. Students who get drunk and decide to break bottles in the dorms or around campus deserved to be punished.

One of the faculty members addressed the problem of broken bottles on Monday mornings at the Senate meeting. After the meeting, Murphy discussed the professors comments, saying "Some clown got up and talked about beer bottles." Murphy tried to discredit the legitimate complaints of one of the faculty by making an immature, childish comment about that person.

Murphy was particularly upset by the first two sections of the report. Section One asks the University to establish "a clearly articulated campus policy that alcohol abuse constitutes unacceptable behavior and is not socially tolerable." In the "real world," the kind of alcohol abuse that occurs on this campus is not tolerated at all, and the Health Council is asking the University to simply adopt these "real world" values. Murphy seems to be suggesting UMass is some kind of fantasy world where students can avoid the social responsibilities of the outside world.

Section Two seeks to establish a task force to address the types of alcohol abuse, such as bottle breaking and drunken vandalism, that are clearly contrary to University policy. When students come to UMass, they have to accept the policies of the University which hold them responsible for their actions. Once again, Murphy seems to be suggesting that at UMass, people have no responsibility for their actions.

While Murphy lashed out against this section of the report for its "crime and punishment attitude," he failed to notice that the task force would also be charged with educating students on the subject of alcohol abuse and provide for non-alcoholic events at UMass on the weekends for students who don't want to drink and have little else to do. At the school where the social life is clearly alcohol oriented, the council is to be commended for trying to change a bad situation.

Murphy said the report reflects a "paternalistic and moralistic attitude." The report actually just tries to address a problem that has been neglected at this University for too long.

Alcohol abuse is a problem on this campus, and the Health Council should be applauded for trying to come up with a cohesive policy concerning it.

Paul Belval is the Collegian Assoc. News Editor

The dark side of UMass

We all know him or her. They live down the hall, next door, they're our roommate or best friend. They are the kids who are all too often depressed. Stress is written all over their face. The following is one such person.

He feels as if he has failed. He will leave this university, for the last time, at the end of this semester.

He came here, to UMass, because that is what you do after high school, you go to college. That is what he was told. And he thought that hotel, restaurant and travel administration would be interesting to study. He hated it.

After one semester he wanted to quit. But his father talked him into coming back.

"What didn't you like?" he was asked.

"Everything," he replied.

He is tall and quite thin with a boyish face. His eyes are set deeply and when he looks at you, he looks into you.

John B. Kenney

And he is here now, again, trying. But he is not succeeding. He does not go to classes anymore, he does not turn in papers, he does not study.

"I came here in the fall of 1979," he says, taking a deep breath. "I stayed for two semesters and left for one, I came back but left after one semester. I took two more off."

"What did you do?" he was asked.

"Oh . . . I washed dishes for a while. And then I worked in an ice factory."

"What made you come back this time?"

"I don't know. I guess I wanted to give it one more shot . . . I'm leaving, though . . . I won't be back. Maybe another school . . . maybe not."

This university, like all universities, is a place founded on learning, on education. He wants to learn. He thirsts for knowledge; of anything, but especially of people. There is something deep inside of him that is growing. It is yearning to come out, to express itself.

He is different, in the way he talks and in the way he thinks.

"I'm part alcoholic, part manic depressive, part genius."

But are we not all different? And is not the question whether or not we will accept other people into our life, day in, day out? Must not we, as sensitive caring people, try to learn, not only of ourselves and of our "major", but of the richness of the people around us? For, is that not what it is all about? They are the truly interesting ones. He is different, yet he is any one of us. And when he goes, we, as a community, as individuals are the ones who lose.

Why can we not simply accept that college is not right for everyone? And that sometimes we all get down — we all get depressed. It is human nature.

"I feel this pressure, ya' know? Jes' . . . I don't know. I don't get along with my parents anymore. They . . . I don't know," he pauses and looks down. His head twitches and his eyes blink rapidly. He has thought so much of why he is not happy here, anywhere.

"My little brothers look up to me . . . I feel as if I'm letting them down . . ." he shakes his head and looks up and smiles.

"The only person I could ever really talk with . . . ya' know, really talk with, not to or be talked at . . . was my older sister, Anne . . . but . . . she ah . . . she died three years ago. She was in a car and . . . well . . . she was killed. I don't know. I guess I'm not right for college," he smiles, a sad smile.

We are pressured by classes, by parents, by friends, by ourselves. We are often so obsessed by this that we overlook others.

We must stop and close our eyes and take a deep breath. We must let people around us know that they are important to us, that we care. We must make this place a place of caring as much as a place of education. For, is that not as much a part of our education as anything in any book?

John Kenney is a UMass student

Letters

Hampshire College student labels Rollins' comic unfair

To the Editor:

This is a response to the cartoon The UMass Zone, that appeared in the Collegian on November 4. The cartoon depicted a couple of the faculty members of "Hampster College" discussing a report that revealed a decline in the academic reputation of the college. In the cartoon, the faculty members decide it would be prudent to change some course titles. The example given is to change "Underwater Basketweaving" to "Aqueous Cellulose Sculpture."

I'm sure the cartoonist, Mark Rollins, meant no harm to Hampshire College, but I feel that the cartoon was damaging nevertheless.

Let me illustrate: In the cartoon one of the "Hampster" faculty members is wearing an Earth Day 1975 tee-shirt. One stereotype that has been floating around at least since the inception of Hampshire College in the 1960's is that Hampshire faculty and students are all flaky radicals more interested in being politically correct than in teaching or learning. This description can be applied to some people at Hampshire, but they are a small minority, albeit a vocal one. The same minority exists at each of the other colleges in the valley. The Earth Days tee-shirt feeds into that stereotype nicely.

The course titles, as depicted in the UMass Zone, are more damaging. They imply that courses at Hampshire are frivolous. I would be interested in knowing how much the cartoonist knows about the courses at Hampshire. Has he ever taken one? Has he read the course catalogue? Courses at Hampshire tend to be more specialized than the courses at other colleges. I think that this is just about the only accurate generalization one can make about them, and even so, there are a number of exceptions.

This cartoon comes at a time when Hampshire is especially vulnerable. The report the cartoon referred to, the Krukowski Report, did in fact conclude that Hampshire's image has deteriorated. Many factors have contributed to this problem, some of which rest squarely on the shoulders of the college itself, but it is clear that cartoons like this one exacerbate the problem.

What I'm asking for is a little sensitivity. Find out about Hampshire. Talk to students and faculty. Visit the campus. Read the catalogues. Take courses. If you aren't willing to learn about us, don't talk about us.

Argyl Houser
Hampshire College

Board of Editors

John Brobst	Editor-in-Chief
Ed Levine	Managing Editor
Stuart J. Sajdak	Production Manager
Joel Myerson	Business Manager
Lise Zeiger	Executive Editor
Michael Foley	News Editor
Cris Schuster	Women's Editor
Andrew Gordon	Arts Editor
Phillip Jennings	Black Affairs Editor
Jim Floyd	Sports Editor
Kevin Fachetti	Photo Editor

The Collegian
wishes you
a
Happy Thanksgiving

Letters Policy

All letters must be signed and include the writer's address and telephone number, which will not be published. Please type double spaced at 67 characters per line. Due to space limitations and the volume of mail, we regret we are unable to acknowledge unpublished letters. All letters are subject to editing for clarity and length.

Arts

Corea retains the feel on Touchstone

TOUCHSTONE (Warner Bros.)
Chick Corea

By DAVID CHEVAN
Collegian Staff

Chick Corea is the driving force on Touchstone.

Chick Corea is one of the few contemporary jazz musicians that has gained a large following in both jazz and popular music spheres. His fusion work with Miles Davis and his own group, Return to Forever, is extremely influential among today's musicians. As a multi-talented keyboard player, Corea felt limited by the acoustic piano and pioneered the use of synthesizers in rock and jazz. Those synthetic sounds which we consider wimpy and cliched today were, at one time, fresh and original. I would even venture to say that much of today's "modern" popular music can trace its roots to Corea's experiments with the various colors of the synthesizer. In the past few years, Corea has returned to an increased use of the acoustic sound. His recent show at UMass with Paco DeLucia is only one example of this.

Touchstone, Chick Corea's most recent album, is a reflection of the many voices of this talented musician. Side one is mostly a continuation of Corea's association with flamenco guitarist, Paco DeLucia. This music is quiet and open, the type of melodic interaction enjoyable on a Sunday morning after an insane Saturday night. Corea uses percussion extensively on Touchstone and this spacey but driving sound creates a peculiarly dreamy openness. In the early seventies, Corea would have filld these spaces with booming drum fills and synthesized riffs. His decision to leave breathing space in the music reflects an increased maturity on the artist's behalf.

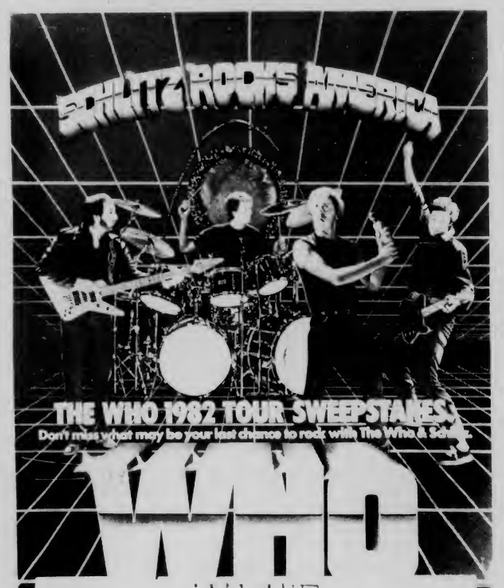
Side two is as raucous as side one is contemplative. The first cut, "Compadres," is a blazing fusion "Return to Forever" piece. All the classic members of the group; Stanley Clarke, Al DiMeola, and Lenny White are featured on this number which is based on licks so deceptively simple, that in the hands of lesser musicians they would sound extraordinarily hokey. Although I personally dislike Return to Forever, I found this cut excellent, perhaps only because it proves that fusion, in the hands of proficient players, is a valid and exciting musical form. Though the total sound is very complex, each musician is actually playing a simple part, something many young players just starting out fail to realize. The final cut on the second side, "Dance of Chance," is the weakest piece on the whole album. A one riff song, it is much too long, every horn player gets a solo, despite the fact that no one seems to have anything interesting to say.

Collegian photo by Dave Deuber

Peter Gabriel in concert at the Orpheum in Boston last week.

Despite the weakness of the final cut, this album serves well as a reflective work by Chick Corea. He explores his past without repeating himself, and gives us a glimpse of possible ideas for the future. Although it is not his best work, Touchstone is good for someone who is not familiar with Corea's work. If Touchstone is really Corea's "coming of age" album, the remaining question is really what he will have to say in the future.

JUMP UP
Dec. 5 S.U.B.



Arriving Just in Time for Thanksgiving Break

Youths & Childrens Imprinted Sportswear

Great Gift Idea

Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE

Arts

Steel Breeze performed Thursday night at the Rusty Nail.

Steel Breeze blows it

STEEL BREEZE
Thursday, November 18
Rusty Nail

By SAUL NATANSOHN
Collegian Correspondent

When I first listened to Steel Breeze's debut album the band struck me as just another commercially oriented band in the .38 Special style looking to make an easy buck. My initial skepticism was replaced by reluctant appreciation.

When I heard Steel Breeze were playing the Nail, I jumped at a chance to catch them live, just to see if they live up to their album. Well, let's just say I don't tune-out to Steel Breeze anymore, nor do I think I ever will again.

Unfortunately, listening to a band on an album and hearing them perform live can be two entirely different musical hearing experiences. This was the band's debut appearance on the East Coast, and judging from the way it went, their act seems to need a bit more polish.

Rod Toner had an elaborate set-up of synthesizer, electric piano, organ and what appeared to be a moog. It's too bad he played his toys with little regard for harmony or musical appeal. Toner's electronic chords would linger on irritating notes, from which he seemed to derive perversc satisfaction. The same was true for when he played the clarinet; his showmanship came across as being unjustly vain.

Similarly, a prolonged duet by bassist Vinnie Pantaleoui and drummer Barry Lowenthal led nowhere and left the valiant dancers struggling on the floor, dazed and confused. Only solid guitar playing by Waylin Carpenter in songs such as "Who's Gonna Love You Tonight?" and "I Think About You" spared the audience from Toner's awful synthesizer play. Throw in an unimpressive bassline and vocals that had more than their share of lows and you get a disappointing show from an otherwise appealing band.

Steel Breeze plays the Calvin in Northampton on November 27. Maybe I caught them on an off night. After all, their album definitely merits a listen by any curious music lover, and from the sound of it the band certainly has talent. Maybe on their second East Coast show they'll be a little less cocky and play as a unit rather than a bunch of individuals with egos. Perhaps they'll perform the way they did in the studio.

But the album is OK

STEEL BREEZE (RCA)
Steel Breeze

By SAUL NATANSOHN
Collegian Correspondent

Steel Breezes debut album opens with their previously released single, "You Don't Want Me Anymore." This is a song that is definitely Solid Gold material; a strong vocal combo is sensibly led by a catchy guitar/synthesizer beat that has the tendency to stay with you long after the song is over.

Ric Jacobs' voice is clearly on key and well suported in "I Think About You," a tune that has a guitar mix reminiscent of the Cars' "You're All I've Got Tonight," though it differs slightly in composition.

Another of the record's highlight is "All I Ever Wanted To Do," a song with danceable, upbeat tempo led again by a well mixed guitar sequence, though the backup vocals don't quite make it beyond the "passable" category.

"Can't Stop This Feeling" is a very likeable love number that would be potential radio material if the guitar leads were a shade more emphatic.

"Street Talkin'" is a bold attempt at a reggae beat, with Jacobs' voice and Rod Toner's synthesizer providing the funky inspiration.

All in all, the album is very entertaining and well produced, with some minor exceptions that don't merit mention here. I was suitably, and surprisingly, impressed.

La creme de la creme

ONE DOWN (Elektra)
Material

By PETER WISSOKER
Collegian Staff

Material is like an intellectual Steely Dan. The core of the band is two musicians Bill Laswell and Michael Beinhorn. On One Down they are joined by Nona Hendryx, Fred Frith, Archie Shepp and Yogi Horton.

The press release we received for the album was out of date. It quotes Bill Laswell as saying that "our next album will be more commercial." And commercial it is, but not the way one would expect. "One Down" is an excellent funk album. Material has captured the true essence of the medium.

The album is about half slow tunes and half dance tunes. The dance tunes have that iresistable beat that has funk written all over it. I guess that's what surprised me about this album. I was expecting Talking Heads pseudo-funk. Uh-uh. Wrong. This is the real thing. So throw on that record let's tear up that danee floor. Now.

The music on this album is what makes it so good. Beinhorn's synthesizers and Laswell's bass playing are really hot. All four guest vocalists including R. Bernard Fowler are la creme de la creme.

Contributors to a vision

CLOUDS
Sunday, November 21
Student Union Ballroom

By CHARLES FRANCIS CARROLL
Collegian Correspondent

The performance of CLOUDS last Sunday night was a feat of musical alchemy: out of an amalgam of elements as diverse as the musicians, the audience, and the music, came a message of pure gold.

Under a spell of genius, the three different duos of Akua and Gayle Dixon of the Max Roach group, Victor Baily and Omar Hakim of Weather Report, and John Blake and Joe Ford of McCoy Tyner, combined their respective talents to the vision of composer/conductor/pianist Clyde Criner to contribute a new vista for contemporary Black music. By writing a score with these particular performers in mind, Criner united the virtuosity of each to create a harmonic whole, an achievement in jazz of a gifted few. All the more remarkable for the fact that he's a student at the University.

Furthermore, the performance connected music with image, as a slide show prepared by Alanna Georgens, depicting inner city scenes, flashed on the wall above the stage like a big picture window.

The first set opened with a string arrangement somewhat reminiscent of Alice Coltrane and a slide of a chalk rendering of the human figure. "Transformation" gave way to "Metamorphosis" as faces of dejection gave way to faces of determination in a series of slides revealing the strong in the weak, the stunning portraiture supported by an Ellingtonian flickering of the keys by Criner, the mounting flame drumrolls of Hakim, and the shivering cello of Akua Dixon.

In "Five," Joe Ford's suprano spoke out triumphantly against a towering skyline and wept with joy and sadness, as Victor Bailey spanked a whining base with fatherly affection.

"Pelican" Part I displayed the string section, particularly violinist Gayle Dixon on a bop chamber piece which hailed two centuries back to Bach into an exotic antiquity

The final peice of the first set, "The Border People," featured 22-year-old Victor Bailey playing a dreamy base over the deep rhythmic snoring of 23 year old Omar Hakim on snare. Their synchronicity and intimacy reminding me of MINGUS and DOLPHY with the upbeat of WAR. But quickly the comparisons fail as Bailey's base shifts suddenly from thunder rumbling to a man mumbling to himself. He is a true successor to the lineage of Vitous and Pastorius.

The visual images not withstanding, the final slide of the set shifted from a negative to a positive image of a man sleeping on open ground, the whole band joining in the celebration of the human struggle for existence.

The second set, one long piece entitled "Trees," conjoined the inner space of earthly roots to the outer space of the treetops, perhaps in the spirit of a SUN RA, but in an original manner which was among other things poetic.

Criner introduced the composition with a soulful solo and ended it with a moan, a voice unmistakably female; an appeal for the future. Sure enough, there appeared on the screen a woman kneeling before a happy gang of kids and beaming like the Black Madonna, as the audience erupted with applause, accolades, and alleleuias, overcoming their own great diversity in the unity of an even greater enthusiasm for the music. The musicians responded by playing their hearts out for another half-hour encore.

CLOUDS not only celebrated the diverse origins of jazz through the eclectic and evolutionary nature of Criner's music; it also celebrated the heterogeneity of us all and the communication between us with Georgen's emphasis on social awareness and statement. If music can thus evolve, so can man and woman. If we were up in the clouds, we were also down on the corner, on the street, on the front steps where we all meet, rapping and clapping and tapping our feet.

Collegian photos by Chris Hardin

The modern jazz ensemble CLOUDS appeared Sunday night in the Student Union Ballroom, featuring UMass Student, Clyde Criner, on keyboards. Also featured were Victor Bailey (above) on electric bass and Omar Hakim (below) currently with the new Weather Report.

Knapp: get kids ready for computer era

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — University of Massachusetts President David C. Knapp said yesterday he wants his professors to help public high school teachers prepare students for working in the computer era.

The idea already has led to the Boston Compact in the state's largest city. Knapp said if the plan can work in Springfield, the state's third largest city, about 20 miles from the UMass campus in Amherst, it could be brought to other communities statewide.

The program allows professors to help teachers to revamp the way they teach students whose needs and social standings may be different from the pupils they had when they started their careers.

"A much higher proportion of high school students is going to be minorities — blacks and Hispanics. That's a national and state trend, especially in cities. With a growing labor force, the state is going to need very skilled people," Knapp said of the needs of numerous computer businesses that have developed in Massachusetts.

In Boston, where talk of the university program began a year ago, several businesses since have promised to offer jobs to students as incentives to achieve better grades, Knapp said.

"What's in it for business is getting a labor supply," Knapp said.

Knapp first offered the idea to Springfield in a speech Monday to politicians and business leaders.

"We need to work with public schools so we can get the competencies up. Then we won't have to do so much compensatory work at the university level," Knapp said in his speech.

Allan Blair, executive vice president of the Greater Springfield Chamber of Commerce, responded to Knapp's proposal by telling him, "You're talking to the right people. Open the door a crack and half our city will through to make that happen."

Springfield Mayor Theodore Dimauro, who told Knapp he wants to discuss the idea and put it in writing, said if Springfield entered the program, it would not mean the city was following Boston's lead.

AP Laserphoto

Charles Halbert of Berkley, Michigan, chose a vacant lot Monday to make his needs known. He had three job offers over the course of a couple hours.

JUMP UP
Dec. 5 S.U.B.

WELCOME to Miller Time

© 1982 Beer Brewed by Miller Brewing Co., Milwaukee, WI

Hypercurricula

THANKSGIVING EVE INTERFAITH SERVICE — Chanted Psalms and prayers, trumpet fanfare, brass, vocal and handbell choirs will be featured in this Thanksgiving service to benefit the Prospect House, Amherst's Emergency Housing Facility, at 8 p.m., Jewish Community Center, 742 Main Street, Amherst.

HOUSE CHURCH — A gathering of students engaged in mutual ministry. An opportunity for dialogue in a supportive community, with a simple closing Communion. 428 Student Union, 7:9:00 p.m. Sunday.

THE SALVATION ARMY
Give to The Salvation Army so others may have a happy holiday.

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
Rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays, Saturdays 1-4

Still Buying Highest Prices
Class Rings
Gold and Silver Jewelry
Coins and Stamps
See Me When You Sell
Daniel Smith
permanently located between Fotomat and Logo's
25 North Pleasant St.
Amherst
Member Amherst Chamber of Commerce
256-0710
Mon - Sat 10 - 6:30

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

The UMass Zone By Mark Rollins

Under The Influence By M. Joyce

Bushwa by Tom Cushwa

Bloom County By Berke Breathed

D.C. MENU

LUNCH
Roast Beef Grinder,
Chicken a la King/Biscuit

DINNER
Veal Parmesan, Baked Cod/Newburg Sauce

BASICS LUNCH
Vegetable Grinder,
Chicken a la King/Biscuit

BASICS DINNER
Eggplant Parmigiana, Baked Cod/Newburg Sauce

Reporters Needed

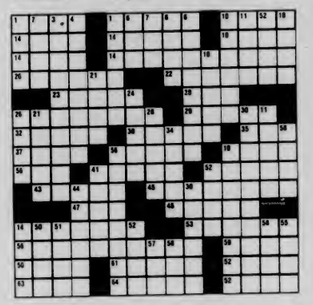
The Collegian needs reporters to cover campus and area news and women's affairs. All interested students are welcome to come and work for the Collegian, the area's largest daily college newspaper. No experience is needed and we provide training. Great experience for journalism or communications majors or anyone interested in the media. Stop by the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, anytime during the day and ask for an editor.

CROSSWORD

Edited by Margaret Farrar and Trude Jaffe
©1982 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

ACROSS
1 Boundaries
5 Coarse cotton fabric
10 Margot Fonteyn, e.g.
14 Duckilke bird
15 Entirely
16 Character in "The Good Earth"
17 Julia Ward —
18 Kind of cake
20 Fancy
22 Entertainers
23 Part of ancient Babylon
25 Exist
26 Gave support to
29 Hot drink
32 Tolted up
33 Type of oil
35 Poetic contraction
37 American lawyer and statesman
38 Gazed intently
39 Have influence on
40 Actress Joanne
41 Gas used in air-conditioners
42 Common or horse
43 Hackneyed
45 Altercations
47 Greek letters
48 Act briskly: Colloq.
49 May and Joyce
53 Left complete
56 Minimizes
59 Smooth
60 Legally qualified
61 City: Fr.
62 Dies —
63 Bryophytic plant
64 First name in entertainment
65 Kitchen abbr.

DOWN
1 Narcissus's lover
2 American-born Asian queen
3 Impoverished
4 Carving necessity
5 Sound of delight
6 Wimbledon award
7 — — de veau
8 "— — later than you think"
9 Acted the arbitor
10 Side-slepped
11 Succulent plant
12 Bryn —
13 River into the Danube
19 Sign up
21 Won a ring decision, for short
24 Author of "Moll Flanders"
26 Sports program
27 Emanations
28 Breed of large hogs
30 Half of a well-known TV title
31 Baking ingredient
34 Man of Madrid
36 Gentlemen gypsies
38 Sanctuary for game
39 Attends
41 Tossed
42 Astound
44 Chemical compounds
46 Sounds, collectively
49 Commune in Holland
50 Wolf
51 Pointed instruments
52 Flying jib
54 Applaud
55 Nautical chains
57 1427 years ago
58 High priest



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

C	O	D	P	■	J	A	V	A	■	B	I	G	I	F
D	R	I	D	■	A	S	I	S	■	E	N	I	G	A
C	A	P	I	T	A	L	■	V	A	T	E	E	T	■
D	E	A	T	E	■	A	C	O	L	A	D	E	■	■
■	■	G	E	L	E	M	■	A	K	A	■	■	■	■
O	P	A	L	■	I	C	I	L	■	E	N	D	E	D
M	A	I	N	■	N	U	N	■	E	N	D	U	R	E
E	I	N	■	■	■	■	■	■	M	A	I	L	E	■
G	R	A	C	E	S	■	P	U	B	■	M	A	T	I	E
A	S	T	A	V	E	■	O	N	E	■	A	S	O	R	■
■	■	■	J	A	M	S	■	S	I	R	E	N	■	■	■
M	E	L	O	D	I	S	T	■	A	L	A	M	O	S	■
A	G	I	L	E	■	C	A	S	T	■	G	A	T	E	■
S	A	V	E	R	■	A	G	E	S	■	E	N	T	E	R
S	L	E	D	S	■	T	E	E	D	■	D	I	C	K	■

Weather

Fog and drizzle ending this morning then becoming windy and colder from west to east by midday. Clearing skies during the afternoon except chance snow flurries over the Berkshires. Highs near 50, falling into the 30s during the afternoon. Clear skies, windy and cold tonight and tomorrow. Lows in the teens. Highs tomorrow 35 to 40.

WMUA 91.1 FM

6-9am	Good Morning Amherst with Teresa
9-noon	Mike Malone
12-3pm	Michelle
3-5:30pm	Mary Kelly
5:30-6pm	Newswatch
6-7pm	Sportscafe
7-10pm	Paula T.
10-2am	Terpsichorean Cacophony with James Neill
2-6am	Glory Gospel Road with Rev. Pearson

CABLE/VIDEO

10:30 - 11:30	Reefer Madness — Drugs from the 30's
11:30 - 12:30	No One Here Gets our ALIVE Jim Morrison et al
12:30 - 1:30	Jazz with Spyra Gyra — The Musicians and their music
1:30 - 2:00	Mush Productions Presents "The Crew Team"

JUMP UP
Dec. 5 S.U.B.

Joey D's
wed. 4 for 1 all nite.
relaxed dress code
No Cover
Thursday Ladies Nite 60¢ drinks
Fri & Sat 75¢ drinks

Massachusetts bred hoopsters playing in Division I colleges accross the nation

By DAN LEBERFELD
Collegian Staff

The state of Massachusetts is not considered to be major recruiting area for Division I basketball. This can be attributed to the fact that the major winter sport in the Baystate is hockey. The assembly lines for big time college basketball talent are considered to be the New York, Chicago, and Washington D.C. areas.

Nevertheless a few kids in this hockey state distinguish themselves on the hardwood and are playing with NCAA Division I competition. The following ten players are the top ten Massachusetts high school graduates competing intercollegiately now.

1) Patrick Ewing — 7'0", center, Georgetown. Last year this 7' phenomenon from Cambridge Ridge and Latin, via Jamaica, was the most highly recruited player in the country. Ewing lived up to all the hype he received by leading the Hoyas to the national championship finals and a one point loss to North Carolina. With the loss of starters Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, Ed Spriggs, and Eric Smith to graduation, the density of this team is on the large shoulders of Ewing. This year we'll see what Pat Ewing is made of.

2) Karl Hobbs — 5'8", guard, Connecticut. This mighty mite graduated one year before Ewing at Ridge and Latin and now starts in the backcourt for the Huskies. This super, quick guard, who was the mainstay in the Huskies backcourt last year, will be helped greatly with the addition of high school All-American Earl Kelley. This will be the premier backcourt in the east.

3) Dwayne McClain — 6'6", swingman, Villanova. This super sophomore who averaged 10.4 per game as a freshman, attended Holy Name High School in Worcester. He will be a key man in Wildcats quest to overtake George wn in Big East race.

4) Butch Wade — 6'7", forward, Michigan. Wade was the most highly recruited player in Massachusetts last year. He was named the best player in the state last spring at Boston Tech. Michigan has a handful of blue-chips coming in so he'll have to impress coach Bill Frieder to start.

5) Al McClain — 6'2", guard, New Hampshire. This Hyde Park High School graduate is considered to be one of the best pure shooters in the nation. He averaged 18.3 points per game in his two seasons for coach Gerry Friel's Wildcats. He should break the all-time New Hampshire scoring record with no problem.

6) Champ Godbolt — 6'4", guard, Holy Cross. Godbolt sat out last year after transferring from Maine where he scored 19 points a game as a sophomore. His best game at Maine was a 29 point performance against Depaul, while being guarded by Mark Aguire. He will run the Crusaders attack this season. This Springfield Tech graduate was elected captain of the team.

7) Paul Little — 6'5", forward, Pennsylvania. Little was co-player of the year in the Ivy League last year. The Dorchester High School graduate averaged 11.6 points per game last year and is considered new coach Craig Littlepages premier player. He should lead the Quakers to the Ivy League crown this season.

8) Martin Clark — 6'8", forward, Boston College. Clark attended Don Bosco in Boston after arriving from England. He surprised everyone last season with his steady play in Boston College's surprising NCAA tournament upsets last season. Clark scored 8.9 points per game last year and should score even more with the departure of John Bagley.

9) Robin Dixon — 6'2", guard, New Hampshire. Dixon will combine with fellow Massachusetts native Al McClain to form a super backcourt. He averaged 13.2 points per game in his first three years for the Wildcats. His best season was in his sophomore year, when he scored 16 points per contest. He attended Thayer Academy in Mattapan. He comes from an interesting family. His brother Zachary is a running back for the Baltimore Colts and his sister Medina was one of the most sought after high school basketball players in the country.

10) Larry Westbrook — 6'1", guard, Holy Cross. This Holyoke High School graduate was the Crusaders number one player off the bench last year as a freshman. He will most likely start with Champ Godbolt in the backcourt this season.

Unlike NCAA football in which you have to be a large school to compete in Division I competition, NCAA basketball has a much wider spectrum of schools competing. There are quite a few schools with enrollments below 2000 students competing in the ranks with schools like UCLA with 35,000 students.

These David and Goliath games are one of the intrigues of college basketball.

Here are some fun tidbits from around the college basketball world. The Northern Arizona basketball team has been dreadful the last couple of years. The Lumberjacks, in all their misery do have two things to brag about. They are 6'11" twin brothers Dan and Doug Busch, who are listed as the tallest identical twins in the Guiness Book of World Records...What do the University of Hawaii and Youngstown State basketball programs have in common? They both have 7 foot centers named Rick Tunstall.

the Hungry Q Restaurant
55 University Drive
Amherst, MA
fine food and drink at affordable prices
We will be open at 4:00 Thanksgiving Day
Join us for a relaxing evening
10% off all our warming concoctions
5:00 - close Thanksgiving evening
Next week we invite you to sample our delicious $2.49 luncheon

STILL WANT NURSING?
If the answer is "yes," it's not too late to apply. You could even start planning your courses to qualify for our advanced placement program.
Just call Joy Erb, recruitment coordinator, at (617) 732-8359
Come join us at our Open House on January 16, 1983, from 1 to 5 p.m.
New England Deaconess Hospital
School of Nursing
1 Autumn Street
Boston, Massachusetts 02215
Committed to the concept of equal opportunity in education

NEW ARRIVALS
Hooded 2 tone Sweatshirt powder blue and cream
or lilac and cream
$19.95
located in our Clothing Dept.
pick up your 1982-83 UMass Basketball Calendar with any purchase of UMass clothing
Open Wed. 9-5
Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday - Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10 % • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?

Rackadisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

AUTO FOR SALE

Ford Mercury 1973, very good condition, $950 call 549-6745

BROWNIEGRAMS

Three flavors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

CATE

The Course and Teacher Evaluation Guides have arrivd! Pick one up in the Campus center and use it for next semester's course selection. CATE is a publication of the Academic Affairs Committee, Student Government Association.

DRYCLEANING

Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Way. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ENTERTAINMENT

For the best professional DJ with a superior sound system at the cheapest rate call Peter 546-7504

They drive you up the wall, we drive you on the floor. Lights, sound, price - we beat everybody - POLODROID DJ's Pat or John 253-2957

FOR RENT

Two bedroom apt. near Southwest walking distance to Campus available Jan 1 549-5175

Apt to rent window overlooks bus stop! 2 bedrooms $315 per month available Jan 1 call 665-2807

Room for rent available Dec 1 close to campus Phyllis 549-6333 $175 includes everything

FOR SALE

GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972

Apple II Plus Computer 64k with language card, printer card, disk-drive, green display C.R.T. $1190 Call Gary 546-6719

Women's Bicycle, 5 speed with rack, $70 549-6745

New Skis Dynastar Omeglass II 200 cm still in pkg $175 call Pit 549-5896

WHO Tix Dec 11 Centrum best offer evenings 549-5289

FOUND

A certain sum of money on November 15. If yours, tell me sum, denomination of bill(s), and where lost. Box 1166, Hampshire College

Cat friendly, female black and white kitten adopted us near Puffton. If yours is lost, call 549-5796

GABRIEL AT ORPHEUM

Quality cassette recordings of entire 11/12 concert for info call Mike 546-8095

GAY & LESBIAN ALLIANCE

Notice! The Counselling Collective is moving soon! To 106 CC Same phone (545-2645)! Same hours!

HELP WANTED

Coordinator for production of the Course and Teacher Evaluation Guide. Part-time through school year. Full-time summer committment required. Third World and women students are encouraged to apply. Apply 420 S.U.B. Academic Affairs. Deadline 11/24/82

Nationwide inventory service needs for busy 6 weeks after Christmas. Must work weekends, nights. Averge 25 hours weekly $4.75 per hour. Must have phone, transportation and apply at Student Employment Office by December 1st.

Women and Men who support the American Labor Movement--Fight Union Busting Corporations! Informational Picketing Weekdays and Saturdays, 4.00/hr call 7 P.M.-9 P.M. 665-7149

Business Manager Union Records bookkeeping experience helpful. Preferably junior status or below. 10 hrs/week $4.00/hr. W.S. or Non. Pick up applications at U.R.U start training Dec 6.

Earn $5,000.00 next summer painting houses in your home town. Apply today at Student Employment Office, 239A Whitmore

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons: Rock and Roll Lead. Beginners accepted. Reasonable rates. John Cosimini 256-0180

INTERSESSION RENTALS

Delta Chi has furnished rooms for intersession. Located next to S.W. dorms. Laundry, kitchen and parking available. Call Dave 549-0482 or Larry 549-1151

LESBIAN AND GAY

Are you Gay? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2645 or drop in SU406F

LOST

Yellow leather wallet taken at Casiac 11/17. Please return. No questions asked. Sentimental value. Reward. 6-5802.

Class Ring: Teaneck High School 1982 Lost the weekend of October 30th No questions, Reward. Ken 546-6690

Keys lost at Beat Concert! $5 Reward. Call 665-4187

Police Hat - sentimental value. A reward Call Ed 6-7601

Lost - one old, worn, tattered and faded Levi jacket. Lost last Thursday night at Hanger One during Johnny Copeland show. Coat has torn elbows and Ronald McDonald pin. If you picked it up by mistake, please call Drew at 256-0391. Reward will be given for return, coat has extreme sentimental value.

MOE

Diddle ee Dee - Happy Birthday to thee! Love Gina Lisa Mary

PERSONALS

John O. - Happy 18th Birthday! Guess Who

TIGAH! I'll miss you these next days in many different ways I'm thinking about you right now T.S.T.

Happy 21 MBM we'll celebrate this weekend! Love Julie and the dinner crew Win a Puch 10 Speed, portable FM stereo or dinner for two at the Pub with Pike raffle 3 for a dollar.

KRISSY
If a year is a day
Then let's hope the sun never sets!
Oh happy day!
LOVE. . .Z

#158 more games more toys!

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Dissertations, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

Ride Needed to Amherst and back to Boston one night weekly. Will pay, 617-423-3077 call mornings.

ROOM WANTED

Females looking for a room or whole 2 bedroom apt in Brittany Manor for spring semester. Please call 549-5586. Keep trying.

Single room and/or willing to share a room for Jan & Spring semester. Must be close to campus & on bus route. Preferably Townehouse or Brandywine. Call 549-5990 Mike keep trying

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female Roommate One bedroom townhouse Southwood for Jan 1 155+ util after 9:30 P.M. 256-6053

Person(s) wanted for Jan 1 spring optional $150, includes heat. 256-0185

2 Roommates wanted to share large bedroom in Puffton Village $96.00 each includes heat available Jan 1 call 549-1703.

Kosher female for one bedroom in two bedroom Southwood townhouse 253-7031

SERVICES

Writing assistance. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729

Need help with typing fast service provided: Dissertations, etc. Double-spaced $1.75 per page Call 323-4054

BIRTH CHART READINGS learn astrology through your sign - planet positions at birth. Contact Julie at 253-7813 with your exact time of birth.

SPEEDY TYPING SERVICE
24 hour typing at reasonable rates.
For professional service call Jim 546-7042

Health Club membership available at discount price. Call 256-0511

Moving? Our 12 foot enclosed cube truck will help you safely move your stuff 256-0480

WANTED TO BUY

Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for an apartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093

3 girls seek 2 or 3 bedroom apt in Amherst vicinity call 549-6850

A Thanksgiving Greeting card takes you home for the holiday.
AMERICAN GREETINGS
...for that special person
Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE

JUMP UP
Dec. 5 S.U.B.

ATTENTION STUDENTS
Students required for shoveling snow on campus.
Must be available to be on call thru snow season, including intersession.
Contact Physical Plant Grounds Office
545-0600 Ext. 28.

Sports

More sports on page 10

Holy Cross overruns UMass women

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

It was an encouraging start for the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team last night in the Cage. UMass ran out to an early 7-2 lead over the Holy Cross Crusaders before the visitors wore down the Minutewomen, enroute to a 88-75 win.

The Crusaders, 23-4 last season, gradually took control of the game using a relentless press which forced numerous Minutewomen turnovers.

Cheryl Aaron's layup with 14:37 gone in the first half gave Holy Cross the lead which they would never again relinquish. Massachusetts hung tough in the first half and stayed close but, in the second half Cross ran up a 26 point lead outscoring UMass, 26-11 to open the second half.

"We couldn't get into our offense," said UMass high scorer Barbara Hebel. "We couldn't get our inside game working." The press gave the Minutewomen fits and was a major cause of their 24 turnovers.

"The press is a head game," commented Hebel, "We had to work so hard to get the ball inbounds and then when we did, we just ran. We have to take our time."

Despite the troubles, the UMass offense was able to keep from being blown away in the first half. Buoyed mainly by the accurate shooting of Hebel (14 points in the first half, alone) UMass stayed within striking range.

Point guard Wendy Ward, who played very well throughout the game, also kept the UM show running by with some efficient ball-handling. Ward was the second highest scorer for UMass with 17 points, most of them coming in the second half.

The second half was the time for Massachusetts to fall behind them and then try to catch up again. The score at the half was a respectable 47-35 in favor of Holy Cross.

But behind the explosive play of Cross ace Sherry Levin, who had a game high 30 points, the Crusaders pulled away and at one point led 73-48. But, the Minutewomen just kept plugging away and slowly crept up on the Worchester based team.

Karen Damminger, who had eleven points on the day, was the spark as she scored six points in a row followed by scores by Ward and Jerrie Bernier (with a three point play) and the score was 76-61. Massachusetts closed to within 12 before Holy Cross began to assert themselves againand built the lead back up.

UMass scored seven points on shots with under two minutes to go as Holy Cross consistently fouled the Minutewomen. That was a testament to the rough, physical game that both teams played.

"I have to give UMass credit," said Holy Cross coach Togo Palazzi. "They were down 27 points and they still kept coming at us. Give coach Ozdarski credit for keeping them in shape. At the end they played as hard as they (UM) had done earlier."

UMass defensive play improved over the Siena game but "we didn't play with the intensity that we needed" according to head coach Mary Ann Ozdarski. Massachusetts has six steals compared to Cross' 10. The Minutewomen pulled down 36 rebounds to Holy Cross' 30. But at times, UM was being eaten alive on the boards.

"It is going to take the freshman time," said Ozdarski. "Teams are going to pressure us all year because we're so young. Holy Cross rattled the kids and took us out of the game with their pressure."

Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

UMass' Jean Cooper fights for a rebound during last night's loss to Holy Cross in the Cage. Holy Cross' Janet Hourihan (left) and Phyllis Townsend compete for the ball. The Minutewomen lost 88-75 to even their season record at 1-1.

Stockbridge basketball hard at work preparing for season

By JIM SAMIA
Collegian Staff

The Stockbridge School of Agriculture men's basketball team will open its season against Southern Vermont College on Tuesday night, November 30th, at the Curry Hicks Cage. Head coach Jack Leaman and his squad are looking forward to another successful season. The Aggies compiled an impressive 13-2 record last season. They will start the campaign with a 10 game winning streak which they hope to continue will into the year.

The Aggies will have a very powerful and experienced frontcourt. Returning to the number one forward position is 6'5" John Paquette. The senior led the team last year in scoring with 18.8 points per game, and in rebounding where he hauled down 155 miscues for an 11.9 average. Paquette also shot an amazing 62% from the floor to go along with a 75% mark from the charity stripe.

At the other forward position will be Andrew Fritsche. At 6'5", Fritsche is a good shooter to compliment Paquette and can also take the ball to the hoop when he has to. Splitting the duties with Fritsche will be senior Shawn Cameron. The senior will most likely be the first off the bench for Leaman to fill in for the two starters. Also coming off the bench will be first year player Dennis Houle.

The center position is in the hands of Craig Manning. The 6'4" senior was third on the team in scoring with a 9.2 average and second in rebounding, behind Paquette, with 126 rebounds for an 8.4 average.

While the frontcourt is big and experienced it is the backcourt that will be under the magnifying glass when the season opens.

"There is no backcourt experience except Mike," said Leaman referring to guard Mike O'Connor. O'Connor, who was the third guard last year, will be elevated to a starter this season. O'Connor averaged 6 points and 2 assists per game coming off the bench and his stock will definitely rise as a starter.

At the other guard will be 6'3" Chris Storie. Storie was the leading scorer from the 12-3 team two years ago. He left school last year, but now has returned and should provide leadership as well as some scoring punch. Coach Leaman also plans to use Storie occasionally at small forward.

Challenging for a starting spot in the backcourt is freshman Peter McDonough. McDonough is an outstanding shooter and good ball handler according to Leaman.

Also in the thick of things will be John Biondo, a freshman who is a super ball handler. Biondo will give the backcourt some depth. Coming off the pine for the Aggies are first year guards Pearl Keyes and Rich Tworig.

"We will have a young backcourt," said Leaman, "and how they handle the pressure will determine a lot this season. The guards have good size, great defensive quickness and will shoot the ball well."

There is a winning tradition of basketball under Coach Leaman at Stockbridge and it makes it that much easier to develop the program. They have won 25 of their last 30 games over a two year span.

Leaman enjoys teaching basketball at Stockbridge.

"It is an ideal situation for a coach and teacher," said the Aggies mentor, "you accomplish a lot and are able to see the players grow as student-athletes. It makes coaching fun again."

Coach Leaman ... his team practicing every night at NOPE in preparation for another exciting season. Stockbridge games at the Cage are at 5:00 preceding the UMass games. Come to Curry Hicks to cheer the Aggies to another winning season.

* * *

The Stockbridge basketball team is looking for Stockbridge freshmen 6'2" or taller to try out for the team. Coach Leaman is also looking for a team manager. Anyone interested may contact Coach Leaman at 228 Boyden, phone number 545-1301.

Inexperience helps BU to lopsided win over wrestlers

By STEVE FITZ
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts wrestling team lost their opening match Tuesday night at Boyden Gym to last years New England conference champions, Boston University, by a score of 31-9.

"We lost mainly due to inexperience," said UMass head coach Rick Freitas.

UMass senior captain Doug Johnson scored the first team points by defeating BU's Darrow Traylor 7-2 in the 134 lb. weight class. Darrow was New England champion last year at 12 pounds. Johnson took control in the third period with a reverse and a takedown.

BU won the first two matches to take a commanding 9-0 lead.

In the 118-pound bout, UMass' Marc Weisman led 7-1 at one point, but Boston's Ernie Millard came back to win 16-9.

BU's Sidney Lewis gained a pin over UMass' Doug Gotlins at the 4:32 mark in the 126-pound match. Gotlins wrestled in place of the injured Brian O'Boyle.

"We really didn't know what to expect, it could have went either way," said BU head coach Carl Adams.

"We figured them (UMass) on winning the first two matches, winning them was definitely the turning point," said Adams.

BU's Mike Enzien pinned UMass' Paul Sullivan at the 2:31 mark to put his team ahead 15-3.

The 150-pound match was one of the most exciting of the evening, pitting UMass' Mike Bossi (two-time Mass. State Champ) against BU's Dan Charland (two-time R.I. State Champ).

Bossi had a 6-5 first period lead, but Charland came back to take a 8-7 lead at the end of two periods. Charland scored on two takedowns in the third period and went on to win by a score of 13-9.

"Bossi lost to inexperience, and Chartland already had wrestled this year," said Freitas.

Scott Mcquaide dominated BU's Chris Joy in the 158-pound match to win 8-6. After McQuaide's victory, the team score was 18-6 in favor of BU.

UMass' Dana Richard decisioned BU's Ian McDonald in the 167-pound bout, 5-0.

BU 177-pounder, Tony D'Arreizzo, manhandled UMass' Mike Rodgers by a score of 8-0. The victory put the score out of reach for UMass as BU took a commanding 22-9 lead with only two bouts remaining.

UMass' Dave McEntee was upset by BU's Tony Cotrupi, 15-10, in the 190-pound match.

UMass forfeited in the heavyweight bout.

"I knew that we had to get in better shape than when we wrestled them last year, because last year they outconditioned us. This fall we worked hard on condition," said BU's Adams.

"We need a lot of work, and can gauge the whole season on tonight. Dual meets are preparation for tournaments," said coach Freitas.

"We have a freshman lineup and also three major injuries," said Freitas, explaining the lopsided score.

BU beat UMass by one point last year, and after beating UMass last night, they are favored to repeat as conference champions.

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian

Volume CXII, Issue 56 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Monday, November 29, 1982

Trustee's contributions questioned

By KEVIN BOWE
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Trustee Einar Paul Robsham may have exceeded the maximum legal limit individuals may contribute to a political candidate in a single year, a Collegian investigation has revealed.

The campaign committee returned a $200 donation alledgedly given by Robsham after the Collegian pointed out possible discrepancies in campaign contribution records because state law "dictates the maximum amount an individual may contribute in a calendar year is $1000." Robsham received the news in a letter from Kathy Vierbickas, assistant treasurer to the Committee to Re-Elect the Governor.

According to records from the Office of Campaign and Political Finance, Einar P. Robsham of Wayland contributed the legal limit of $1000 to the King Committee while Paul Robsham of Framingham also contributed $200 to the committee during the same year.

When contacted last night, Robsham, whose full name is Einar Paul Robsham, confirmed that the Wayland address is that of his home and the Framingham address is one of his business addresses.

Robsham said he was unaware of any of the allegations.

"I wouldn't do that intentionally. I know the maximum allowance (for campaign contributions). There's no intention of kidding anyone, the addresses (his home and business) are well known," he said.

Robsham said all allegations were true, it was his wife or son who contributed the additional $200 without his knowledge.

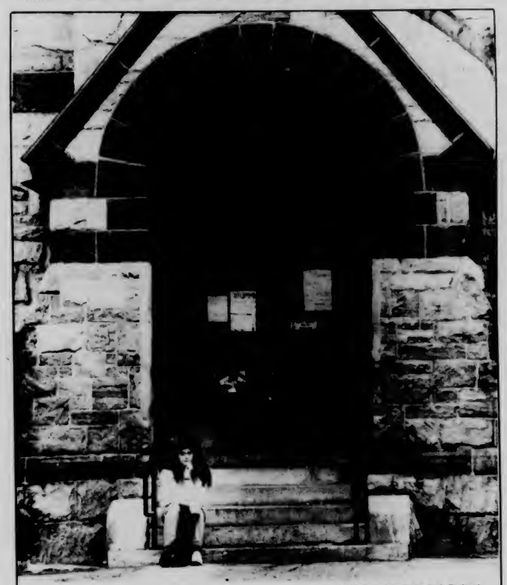
"My wife may have; we have a joint checking account. Or it may have been my son, we have the same name," Robsham said.

In 1978, Robsham's wife gave the maximum $1,000 contribution to the King campaign under her own name, Joyce.

Robsham said he has not received the $200 check from the King committee, which was dated November 10, 1982, but confirmed that the committee contacted him on the amount of money he contributed to the campaign effort.

The allegations were brought to light after the Collegian asked the staff of the state Office of Campaign and Political Finance to investigate some possible discrepancies found in the King campaign records filed with the office.

According to a spokesperson at the office, no legal action will be taken concerning the allegations because the King Committee cooperated fully by immedietely returning the $200.



Collegian photo by Kevin J. Fachetti

The campus emptied fast at the start of the Thanksgiving vacaton last week, leaving Jeannie Morris of Grayson dormitory alone and waiting for a friend.

New deputy provost : 'news travels slowly'

By PAUL BELVAL
Collegian Staff

In addition to his numerous duties as dean of the School of Physical Education, David C. Bischoff has been appointed acting deputy provost at the University of Massachusetts.

Bischoff has been handling both roles since his appointment by Provost Loren Baritz on Nov. 1. As acting deputy provost, he will be Baritz' chief adviser, discussing campus policy issues and filling in for Baritz when he is away.

Bischoff said he has "indeed" been busy, and expects a new acting dean of the School of Physical Education to be appointed in the near future.

"What will probably happen is I'll move someone in there as acting dean soon," he said.

Bischoff said the title of deputy provost, covers various responsibilities.

"The deputy provost takes over when the provost is gone," he said. "It's an opportunity to sit and talk with the provost about the issues of the university."

Bischoff refused to speculate on the possibility of him moving into the position of provost should Baritz decide to go on a sabbatical to finish a book on Vietnam.

"It depends on the conditions on which he lea... ," the dean said.

P noff admitted few peopie on cmapus ! w about his appointment.

ve been up in the office since November 1 It's one of those things where news travels slowly," he said.

Bischoff will continue in his duties as special assistant to the chancellor for athletics even after an acting dean for the School of Physical Education is appointed.

Bischoff replaces former Deputy Provost Robert C. Sleigh, jr., who is now at the School of History and Science at the Institute of Advanced Studies at Princeton.

Bischoff refused to specualte on the possibility of him moving into the position of provost, should Baritz decide to go on a sabbatical.

Bischoff came to UMass in 1957 and was named dean in 1972. He was associate provost from 1970 to 1978, first for professional schools, and then for academic affairs.

Bischoff is a former president of the National College Physical Education Association and he is a member of the American and Massachusetts Associations for health, Physical Education and Recreation. He received his Ph.D. from Pennsylvania State University.

$75,000 house nearly done

By PAUL BASKEN
Collegian Staff

Repairs and renovations to the Chancellor's House on Orchard Hill, totaling $75,000, are now ongoing and are expected to be completed in January, allowing Joseph Duffey to move in by next semester.

Duffey, who this summer replaced former Chancellor Henry Koffler, lived in a Campus Center Hotel room during the first half of this semester, but has since moved into an Amherst house rented for him by the University.

"Nothing has been done on (the Chancellor's) house in years," said Vice-Chancellor for Administration and Finance John L. DeNyse. "It's in bad need of refurbishing." He said, however, "needed" repairs were done on the house's heating and air conditiong system two years ago, following Koffler's hiring.

DeNyse said he did not know the total amount spent at that time on the house.

DeNyse said the repair funds, which were appropriated by the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees following Duffey's hiring, will provide for bathroom remodeling and wallpapering, painting, and carpeting throughout the entire house.

While a portion of the job is being contracted to outside businesses, DeNyse said the Physical Plant would perform some of the work.

Edmund Ryan of the design and construction division of the Physical Plant said it would perform "general work" which has been "needed to be done for years.

"It's in a down-graded shape," Ryan said of the building.

Student Government Association President Jim Murphy, who also serves as student member of the Board of Trustees, said the appropriation motion passed with little discussion.

"I was told at the time that it hadn't been touched in years" Murphy said of the house, which he said was described as having a leaky roof and faulty plumbing.

Collegian photo by Kevin J. Fachetti

The Chancellor's House on Orchard Hill, which is presently being refurbished at a cost of about $75,000.

World and national news

See more AP page 6

AP Laserphoto

Members of a recovery team suit up outside the J-4 missile test silo at the Arnold Engineering Development Center in Tullahoma, Tenn. Four men were killed Saturday in a flash fire in the silo.

Fire in MX test silo kills four, injures two

TULLAHOMA, Tenn. (AP) — Fuel fumes blocked rescuers from entering a 250-foot-deep MX missile test silo yesterday to recover the bodies of four men killed in a flash fire that "went off like a sparkler" as they were removing debris left by an earlier blast.

Two other men were injured in the fire, which broke out about 6 p.m. Saturday, engulfing the silo and consuming its contents.

Air Force Sgt. John Blackburn said a "large blaze" erupted in the 100-foot wide vertical silo at Arnold Engineering Development Center.

Blackburn said a spark or overheating during the removal of debris and fuel may have touched off the fire.

"It was an instantaneous flash with tremendous heat... there wouldn't be any way they could have survived that flash," said Brig. Gen. Kenneth R. Johnson, commander of Arnold. "It went off like a sparkler with trememdous heat and energy."

The 41,000-acre site, about 60 miles southeast of Nashville, is the largest propulsion and aerodynamics testing center in the nation.

Tests are being conducted on the four-stage MX missile, the nuclear weapon President Reagan has named the "Peacekeeper."

The below-ground concrete silo, called a J-4 test cell, is covered with an above-ground 85-foot-high building where engines are tested. It is one of 40 test cells at Arnold, which began operations in 1951.

Mom charged in girl's death

LOWELL (AP) — A friend and neighbor of Linda Beauchamp says she never saw the accused woman beat her 3-month-old daughter but did see the little girl with two black eyes and facial swelling four days before she died.

Another neighbor who asked The Boston Globe for anonymity, said she heard a baby cry loudly and continuously in the child's home last Tuesday, about 14 hours before she was pronounced dead at Lowell General Hospital.

Beauchamp, 21, who arrived in Lowell from New Jersey several months ago, is charged with murder in the death of her daughter, Crissilee Santos.

A hospital autopsy showed the girl died of a ruptured liver due to multiple blunt force injuries to her abdomen, face, neck and ribs.

Minerva Cruz, who let Beauchamp, Crissilee, and Beauchamp's boyfriend, Andre Camacho, share her housing project apartment for several weeks, said that on Nov. 20 she saw Crissilee with two black eyes and facial swelling, and asked Beauchamp how the child was injured.

"She said, 'I don't know.' I said 'You're the mother, you better know.'"

But Cruz, her husband, Juan Hernandez, and several other neighbors said they never say Beauchamp beat Crissilee.

"I think she didn't do it," Hernandez said. "She was always playing with her the way a normal lady loves her kid."

Lowell police said Crissilee was treated at Lowell General Hospital on Nov. 12 for head injuries, and the treating physican notified the Department of Social Services because he was suspicious of child abuse.

Police said the DSS investigated, but returned Crissilee to her mother.

A DSS spokesman, Michael Ripple, told the Globe he couldn't comment on the case.

"We will be participating fully in any criminal investigation and will be working with the court accordingly," he said.

Lowell police Sgt. John Newell said Beauchamp claimed that the Nov. 12 injuries were caused by a fall, and that on the day Crissilee died, she pressed against the child's belly because she was choking. Newell said Beauchamp offered no other explanation for the other injuries.

Israeli leaders meet; peace talks planner

Israel yesterday dropped its demand that Cabinet ministers lead delegations to talks aimed at withdrawal of foreign troops from Lebanon, official sources in Jerusalem said.

In other developments, a mine blast wounded three Israeli soldiers in an armored personnel carrier 12 miles east of Beirut, a Lebanese Christian commander called for closer ties to Israel, and U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib met with Egypt's foreign minister in Cairo to discuss widening peace talks.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Cabinet in Jerusalem said in a resolution that civilians should lead delegations to the Israel-Lebanon talks on troop withdrawals from Lebanon, and that sessions be held in the capitals of both countries.

The text of the resolution indicated Israel was standing firm on its demand to link the talks to a security pact with Lebanon. But official sources said it also meant that Israel no longer was insisting that Cabinet ministers lead the delegations.

The Cabinet met under intense U.S. pressure for starting the withdrawal negotiations, which have been blocked by procedural issues. The resolution, the Israeli sources said, was based on an assumption transmitted by U.S. mediators that Lebanon will not appoint a military man to head its delegation.

Israel seeks a measure of political recognition from Lebanon in the withdrawal negotiations and insists on signing a security arrangement with Lebanon to prevent southern Lebanon from becoming a launchpad for Palestinian guerrilla attacks on Israel.

More than 300 dead on holiday weekend

The number of people killed in traffic accidents during the Thanksgiving holiday passed the 300 mark yesterday as the long weekend drew to a close.

By 4 p.m. EST, 314 deaths had been reported in highway accidents across the nation since the holiday began at 6 p.m. Wednesday.

The National Safety Council has estimated that between 420 and 520 people would die in traffic accidents before the four-day weekend ended at midnight last night.

During a four-day, non-holiday period at this time of the year, an estimated 480 traffic deaths could be expected, the council said.

The toll for last year's Thanksgiving weekend was 413.

In 1968, there were 764 traffic fatalities over the four-day period, the most of any holiday weekend on record.

Digest

by the Associated Press

Cardinal flies home after illness in Rome

BOSTON — Cardinal Humberto Medeiros has returned home from Rome and is described as "doing well" by his secretary and a physician after spending several days at Salvator Mundi Hosptial for fluctuating blood pressure.

The Rev. James McCune said Saturday evening that Medeiros, 67, arrived at Logan International Airport about 2 p.m. and was "at home, doing quite well, thanks be to God."

Dr. John O. Pastore, a cardiologist at St. Elizabeth's Hospital where the Roman Catholic archbishop of Boston was discharged Nov. 13 after a five-day stay, accompanied Medeiros on the flight and said upon his arrival that he "is doing very well."

Bulldog fight raided; state police arrest 57

COVENTRY, R.I. — State and local police said they raided a major pit bull dog fight in a farm outbuilding here, arresting 57 people and seizing five dogs.

"It might have been a national championship of some sort, or you might want to call it a national spectacle," state police Lt. Richard M. Wheeler said yesterday. "It is a real cruel and inhuman thing to see those dogs laying there."

Wheeler said police arrested 22 Rhode Island men, 25 men and five women from out of state from as far away as Georgia and Montreal and five juveniles in the Saturday night raid prompted by a telephone tip received by Coventry police.

Out of the five dogs, one was dead, three were critically injured and one was caged and had yet to fight in the 15-foot square pit with three-foot-high walls on the floor of a farm outbuilding when police raided it, he said.

"We are asking the U.S. attorney to look into charges of transporting pit bulls across state lines for fighting purposes," Wheeler said.

"Seized at the location were paraphernalia consistent with the art of pit bull fighting: needles and syringes, leashes and scales. They use the needles to hype them up. The fight was going on when police went in," he said.

Many of those arrested carried thousands of dollars on them, he said. Also seized were a handgun, some knives and a quantity of money believed to be counterfeit, he said.

ID-engraved gems easier to be returned

BOSTON — The secret to retrieving stolen jewelry is cutting the owner's initials in them before they can be snatched, a detective advises, as hundreds of robbery victims tried this weekend to identify gems taken in housebreaks in the Boston area.

One unidentified woman found some $11,000 of her stolen jewelry that was laid out for inspection at Boston police headquarters this weekend, but most left the property room disappointed.

"I lost $20,000 worth of stuff," one unidentified man told reporters. "It's gone now, and there's no use crying over it. It's just gone."

For future burglary victims, Detective Lt. Walter Tower had some advice.

"The most important thing people can do to save themselves from these losses is simply to have their initials engraved in their jewelry," he said.

"They will spend $2,500 on a ring, but won't spend another $5 to have their initials put in...

"The chances of getting marked jewelry back are excellent. If the initials are put on, we have a 75 to 80 percent chance of recovery. If there are no markings on the jewelry, the owner has little or no chance.

"The people that have come through have been very good. In several instances people have identified several items on an envelope as theirs but added that one or two other pieces in the package were not.

"Also, we've been lucky so far. We haven't had the same pieces identified by two people as their property. They are being very, very careful in identifying the items."

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Scott Hersey
Copy Editor — Hannah Hosom
Layout Technician — Susan Bankert
Photo Technician — Bradford Hammer
Composition — Lauri Neely, Susanne Erickson, Liz Ward, Gail Tanzer, Adrienne Dufour, James Shanahan, Janet Buch, Will Hopkins

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $18 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

Collegian photo by Kevin J. Fachetti

Rebecca Lalonde, 4½, of 1 Clifton Ave., amuses herself by sitting on the bell in front of the Amherst Fire Station on Main Street.

Freeze fight not over; Peacemakers member says write legislators

By TOM SEXTON
and SCOTT HERSEY
Collegian Staff

David Shakespeare isn't ready to give up yet.

Although a resolution for a nuclear freeze in Massachusetts was overwhelmingly passed in a referendum vote earlier this month, Shakespeare says the fight for the freeze is far from over.

"Many people think that because they voted for the freeze, they have done their part," said Shakespeare a member of the UMass peacemakers. "But there are important votes coming up in the next few weeks, and people have to let their legislators know how they feel."

Shakespeare, a junior environmental science major, is urging anyone interested in the nuclear issue to contact their congressmen and tell them not to vote for any prospective nuclear programs.

Among the nuclear programs coming up for funding within the next few weeks are the MX and Pershing II missile programs, Shakespeare said.

Shakespeare urged any students registered to vote in Amherst should contact U.S. Rep. Silvio Conte, as he is representative for the region and is also the ranking member of the house Defense Appropriations Subcommittee — which will decide whether to fund the various projects.

Shakespeare could be considered an expert in the field of nuclear disarmament, having testified before the House appropriations subcommittee and attended a conference on nuclear disarmament last month.

At that conference, Shakespeare and a number of other UMass students met with experts in the field and participated in discussions on "The Fate of the Earth."

"A possibility recognized by the conference," said Shakespeare, "was that the world powers may go to war over such areas as the oil-rich Persian Gulf." He also said hostilities between mideast countries themselves are a major cause of instability in the world.

He said the conference was sponsored mainly by the Friends of the Earth, a national environmental group, and featured such speakers as Amory Lovins, author of Soft Energy Paths, Paul Ehrlich, author of The Population Bomb, and Nobel Prize winner Dr. Linus Pauling.

He said the main thrust of the conference was to begin a dialogue between environmentalists and people from disarmament groups "to find out what environmentalists can do about the arms race."

A related area explored at the conference was the concept of what is known as a "sustainable earth society" Shakespeare said.

"A sustainable earth society relies on the 'soft' energy technologies of solar heating and power produced by wind generators and hydro-electric dams," Shakespeare said. Such a society "would stay away from nuclear and fossil fuel technologies."

Those attending the conference, he said, expressed the fear that if we continue at present growth rates in population and energy consumption, "we'll reach a critical point where the earth's resources will be exhausted."

Shakespeare's one criticism of the conference was that the interests of Third World countries and minority groups weren't represented.

Weight loss and health focus of department

Body fat percentages shown by arm x-rays

By MARY ANNE BEEN
Collegian Correspondent

Just when it seemed relatively safe to eat that second pint of chocolate chip ice cream, yet another program has been developed to fight the war against fat.

This weight loss procedure, being used by the University of Massachusetts department of exercise science, includes the use of an arm x-ray to estimate the percentage of fat in the body.

The x-ray concept, according to frank Katch, chairman of the exercise science dept., was developed by Albert Behnke, an adjunct professor in the department.

The procedure for estimating the percentage of body fat is nearly as accurate as underwater weighing — a technique based on Archimedes' principle of water displacement. It is also less time consuming and more cost efficient.

Both methods are being used on the UMass campus.

"If you want to lose twenty-five pounds, you couldn't pick a better way," said Mike Lacombe, a graduate student whose wife is on the faculty.

"The people involved in this research are great. Everyone helps each other. Dr. Katch knows everyone personally and that makes a difference," he said.

"The amount of radiation administered during the x-ray is 10 milirems, one-fourth the amount of a dental x-ray," Katch said. "There is no accompanying danger because the amount is trivial."

The information gathered from the arm x-ray is processed through a computer to formulate individual meal and exercise plans. The system is called FitCom (Fitness By Computer).

"We give the volunteers, forty-six in all, choices from a list of foods. I believe there are 300 choices on the list," Katch said. "They are asked to pick out only those foods that they absolutely will eat."

"The FitCom system also includes a list of fourteen exercises in increasing difficulty. The subjects can be expected to lose twenty-five pounds in twenty-five weeks," Katch said. "This program blends nutrition, weight control, and exercise."

The difference of this program, is that the subjects are losing twenty-five pounds of fat and not lean mass. The individualized diet is helpful because the volunteers are eating food they like. The individualized exercise plan also helps each volunteer increase his or her strength at their own pace.

X-rays are taken after every 15-pound loss. This is done in order to tell how weight loss correlates with x-ray estimate.

"Most of the people who volunteer for this research are self-motivated. There's no pressure," said Kathy McCormick, a graduate student in Exercise Science.

Every Monday through Friday the subjects cycle for thirty minutes on stationary bikes. A pulse is taken every ten minutes to determine the level at which the body is working.

Katch said the body performs best at a pulse rate between 75 and 85 percent of its maximum. Walking, running and swimming can also be used as supplementary measures.

Because volunteers are weighed every Monday and Friday, a weight chart is kept on the wall to record progress.

The present group of 46 began the program the first week of October. McCormick said most subjects are already ahead of their projected rate of loss. Only three persons have dropped out of the program.

Collegian photo by Jim Powers

Debbie LaPlante and Mike LaCombe take the opportunity to pedal away some pounds last week.

Body Shop facilities offer superior training

By MARY ANNE BEEN
Collegian Correspondent

In this era of body-consciousness, the department of exercise science at the University of Massachusetts, is evaluating the use of new resistive exercise machines known as Hydra-Fitness Hydraulic Exercise units.

The Body Shops, located in the NOPE and Boyden gymnasiums, make use of this sophisticated equipment. According to Frank I. Katch, (chairman of the department) the hydra-fitness units are far superior to the popular Nautilus method of weight training. Resistive exercise involves continuous contraction of the muscle fiber.

Unlike the Nautilus method, however, weight lifting is not part of the Hydra-Fitness units. A set of hydraulic cylinders is utilized instead.

This resistive method is especially beneficial to women and older persons because the body never becomes sore as it wougtifting weights.

The Body Shops also have a number of stationary bicycles. Varying degrees of chain resistence to assimilate steep and level grades are used. The rooms in which these bicycles are located are completely carpeted and mirrored and are equipped with television sets and stereo systems.

"The equipment we have produces an amazing training effect," Katch said. "Great cardiovascular fitness as well as muscle strength can be achieved."

"Another attraction to these facilities is that no one ever works out alone," Katch said. "Everyone encourages each other. All workouts are closely supervised."

Research to be done in the Body Shops next semester include studying the effects of 13 weeks of extensive resistive training. These effects will be taken from four points of view, including biochemistry, biomechanics, strength and cardiovascular fitness.

These facilities are available to all students, faculty and staff. Nine University athletic teams use the equipment in their daily workouts.

The Body Shops are open from 7-9 a.m., 12-1 p.m., 4-6 p.m., and 7-9 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

The cost is $45 per semester. If a person brings a friend, the friend receives a 50 percent discount. Free membership for a year can be obtained with the registration of five new members.

Biofeedback available for students' use soon

By FRED STEINWAY
Collegian Correspondent

The procedure is called biofeedback.

Wires are attached to the body to measure a peron's brain waves, muscle tension, heartbeat or skin electricity. The person observes their own body responses on electronic display, and through a mental effort they can learn to alter body functions normally automatic and unconscious.

Biofeedback services are available at Berkshire House at University of Massachusetts — in the Career Counseling Center — and through University Health Services.

E. Bruce Taub-Bynum of UHS is training interns so that two or three more staff members will be available to offer biofeedback soon.

A typical biofeedback session might go like this: A UMass student closes her bloodshot eyes and moans, "I have this horrible headache, I can't even think...How am I ever going to do this paper?"

In a UNS office, an assistant attaches leads to the students' forehead. She relaxes back in the chair, near a small console display that shows blinking lights and beeps softly.

After fifteen minutes the beeps grow less frequent and then stop. The assistant takes the wires off. The student stands up and takes a deep breath, "I feel much better," she says.

Biofeedback takes a lot of work and is not effective in just a single session.

"The machine is mindless, basically a mirror," said Taub-Bynum. "It's not magic, you have to work at it in daily practice sessions, and not become dependent on the machines."

"First you learn control, then get back in harmony with your own body," he said. "The concept of health here is harmony, not forced control. This goes against the grain of our usual understanding of illness. We think sickness comes into us from out there, and then we put something into our body — a pill, a shot — to drive it out. In biofeedback you take responsibility for maintaining your own well being."

"Biofeedback is the yoga of the West," said Taub-Bynum.

"It's related to hypnosis but different, he said. "The idea is 'passive volition'. This sounds like a contradiction but actually means 'go with the flow' or 'relax and enjoy', whether it is a dance or a termpaper."

"Stress is less focused today than it was in, say, the days of the Huns in Europe," he added. "Nowadays there's nothing specific to account for it, so it becomes generalized and people don't realize they're under stress."

Biofeedback has had unusual success at UMass health services according to Dr. Taub-Bynum, partly because it is something new that appeals to clients, and partly because the clinicians offering the service have worked with an interest and enthusiasm that has inspired full cooperation in the clients.

Biofeedback has been used at the university especially for headaches and difficulty concentrating.

It is in use elsewhere to treat pain, sleep disorders, hypertension and for physical rehabilitation, said Taub-Bynum.

Newslines...

Wintersession booklets available for January class registration

Wintersession booklets, listing credit and credit-free offerings in the month of January, are now available at the Division of Continuing Education in the tower library.

Walk-in registration begins Dec. 1, and the mail registration deadline is Dec. 10. Classes begin the week of Jan. 3 for a four week period. Credit courses are held during the day, and most credit free workshops are held in the evening.

In addition to the regularly offered workshops such as music, bartending, drawing and photography, this year, there will be more unusual topics. Cross-country skiing, wine making and quilting are just some of the topics.

The School of Business Administration will be giving a workshop entitled "Participating Management-Quality Circles" in three locations this spring.

The workshop will be held Jan. 18 at the Commander Sheraton in Cambridge, March 8 at the Yale Motor Inn, Wallingford, Conn., and May 17 at the Holiday Inn Central, Albany, N.Y. The fee for the workshop is $225. For more information, contact James Malone at 545-0312.

Neuroscience research discussed at University Thursday evening

The origin of creative thought will be the subject of a talk by Robert Samples, presented by Center for Research and Applied Development Theory at the University of Massachusetts.

Samples will discuss recent research in the neurosciences and its implications on such fields as education, management and mental health at 8 p.m. on Thursday in the Marks Meadow Auditorium on campus.

Battered women subject of event

A presentation on "The Issues of Battering" will be held at 7 p.m. today in Cashin Dormitory in the Sylvan residential Area. Educator-Advocates from the Everywoman Center will give the presentation.

'Sex and Discrimination' next talk

"Sex and Race Discrimination in the Workplace" will be the topic of the lecture given by Thelma Griffith-Johnson in Room 917. The lecture is sponsored by the Everywoman's Center Working Women's Task Force and is part of the series on Women and Work at noon in the Campus Center.

THIS WEEKS SPECIAL

NyQuil 6 oz $2.01 Reg. $3.59
Contac 10's $1.93 Reg. $2.46
$2.63 Reg. $3.97
One A Day Reg or Plus Iron 60 ct
$1.79 Secret 6 oz Reg. $2.35
Gillette Foamy $1.59 Reg. $2.63
Lady Shaver 3's 46'
Faberge Shampoo or Conditioner 15 oz
99' Super Value
Pert 15 oz norm or dry $2.01 Special Value
April 4 oz $3.29 Reg $5.01
Colgate Great Regular Flavor
Colgate Reg or Gel 7 oz $1.33
64' Pepsodant Brush Hard, Med or Soft Reg $1.25
All sale items also available the Mini Store located in the Student Union
UNIVERSITY STORE
Located in the Campus Center Open M-F 9-5 Sat. 11-4

GRAND OPENING SALE-A-BRATION
Sat. Nov. 20-Sat. Dec. 4
2 weeks of Madness & Bargains
- Meet Bob Layton, Marvel Comics' Iron Man & Hercules Artist
Sat. Dec. 4
Free Marvel Guide to Collecting Comics with this ad
6 new comics for the price of 5
20% off all back issues in stock
Comics Prints Collectibles Dungeons & Dragons
Copyright © 1982 Marvel Comics Group A Divison of Cadence Industries Corp. All Rights Reserved.
Moondance
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, Mass. 413-586-8775

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
$ PRIZES $ PRIZES
Monday Night introducing the Amherst Backgammon Tournament
- only $2. entry fee
- B.Y.O.B. (board, not beer!)
- 8:30 pm kickoff EVERY Monday

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Panicky views from balcony blues

It was a time for a little culture. The Amherst area offers students many cultural opportunities and no school year at UMass would be complete without an evening at the Fine Arts Center. And with company coming from Vermont for the weekend, I really thought a nice show at the Center would cap an early dinner at the Top of the Campus.

But nobody told me not to buy seats in the first balcony. If you haven't been to the Fine Arts Center yet, don't buy seats in the first balcony, unless you happen to like heights. I don't.

Georgette Roberts

Wouldn't you think the first balcony would be the first balcony? You know, the first balcony after the main floor? Well, it isn't. The first balcony at the Fine Arts Center is almost on top of the world. . . next to the roof.

This UMass older student has trouble getting three feet off the ground to wash windows on a step ladder, and they send me up to the top of the world to watch the Vienna Choir Boys. It was really more listening than watching, all I could see after slouching down in my seat in panic was the tops of their heads. And even that was too much for my acrophobia.

Panic really set in when my two guests leaned over the railing of our front row seats to view the sights a zillion stories below. My phobia rally went winging as I grabbed their arms and asked them please to refrain from such sport. After all, they were my guests, and aren't guests supposed to follow the lead of the hostess?

All right everybody, 1. . . 2. . . 3. . . slouch! But all they did was grin, fiendishly, I might add. I'll never invite them to sit in the first balcony with me again, you can count on that.

In fact, the Fine Arts Center box office had better beware. I'm educated now. A half-semester as an older student at UMass and one trip to the Fine Arts Center has done that much for me. Can't imagine what a half-semester might have done for me as a younger student, years ago.

Come to think of it, I didn't see too many younger students at the concert. Could be they had already learned the horrible secret of the first balcony. Hangar One, anybody?

Georgette Roberts is a UMass student

"No first use" a good policy

The amount of debate over the issues of nuclear armament and global security has increased in recent months. In their article "Nuclear Weapons and the Atlantic Alliance" in the Spring 1982 issue of Foreign Affairs, McGeorge Bundy, George F. Kennan, Robert S. McNamara, and Gerard Smith, respected people in the field of foreign affairs and international relations, recommended the United States adopt a policy of "no first use" of nuclear weapons similar to that of the Soviet Union. This policy, which has given harmful credence to the growing nuclear freeze movement, is both unworkable and would threaten rather than promote world peace.

Timmi W. Rudolph

After the Second World War this nation dismantled many of our major conventional capabilities, and relied instead on the "nuclear umbrella" to insure world peace. In both 1948 and 1961, the city of West Berlin was threatened by the conventional means of the soviet bloc. Both crises were diffused by the United States responding with the threat of a first strike. The deterrent was successful and there was no outbreak of hostilities.

The NATO triad now rests on conventional forces, theatre nuclear weapons in Europe, and US strategic nuclear weapons. The escalation of any one of these three branches would be suitable to meet any level of threat to the Atlantic Alliance nations. To abandon the possible first use of nuclear weapons as a deterrent would necessarily mean a strengthened conventional force to adequately deal with a threat from the Warsaw Pact. The feasibility of this, however, is very questionable. According to former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig, Jr.'s assessment, to meet the threat would require "tripling the armed forces, and putting the economy on a wartime footing." This is beyond the 129 plus billions of dollars we contribute yearly for the conventional defense of Europe. If the United States cannot attain this heightened level of conventional defense, then should we concede defeat and allow the communist hordes to sweep in and conquer the rest of Central Europe, or should we rely as we have in the past on the deterrent of the first use of nuclear weapons on a soviet sponsored attack? The question is a great one, affecting the globe, but the answer seems clear.

The NATO triad has worked for these many years in keeping peace between the powers on the continent. The answer to "no first use" from the Federal Republic of Germany, the nation with the most to lose if any conflict erupted in the area, has been an emphatic "No 'no first use'." This "no first use" policy would be detrimental to the free world if Soviet aggression manifested itself again, especially given their record as of late. The policy might placate the anti-nuclear movement, but its long range effects may include total disaster. NATO's policy of no first use of military force is much more credible and effective than denying the use of nuclear weapons after an attack has begun. As the President stated last Fall, "No NATO weapons, conventional or nuclear, will ever be used except in response to an attack." This is how it must be.

Timmi W. Rudolph is a UMass student

Letters

General Education proposal is not chiseled in stone

To the Editor:

First, I'd like to thank Anne Chapman for her articles describing the efforts of students and faculty to redesign the "core" (General Education) requirements and make them more meaningful. Secondly, I'd like to clarify a couple of points.

The General Education Porposal now being considered calls for six "Breadth of Knowledge" courses and a "Quantitative Reasoning" course to replace the current C, D, and E "cores. The proposed categories for "Breadth of Knowledge" courses are: Continuity and Change, Expressive Culture, The Individual, Societies and Institutions, The Biological World, and the Physical World. Every student would draw at least one course from each category. Foreign Language would not be a "Breadth of Knowledge" requirement as the article states; rather, that issue is being considered separately.

Perhaps most importantly, the General Education Proposal is not a fixed and absolute document. In fact, a revised version of it will be put together in December based on feedback and criticisms from the University community. In order to put this issue more clearly in front of students, we have arranged for the Proposal and a related set of recommendations from our committee to be mailed directly to every student after Thanksgiving.

Rob Thayer
Student Sub-Committee on General Education

Board of Editors

John Brobst	Editor-in-Chief
Ed Levine	Managing Editor
Stuart J. Sajdak	Production Manager
Joel Myerson	Business Manager
Lise Zeiger	Executive Editor
Michael Foley	News Editor
Cris Schuster	Women's Editor
Andrew Gordon	Arts Editor
Phillip Jennings	Black Affairs Editor
Jim Floyd	Sports Editor
Kevin Fachetti	Photo Editor

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

Catch "The Act" at the Fine Arts Center

CONNIE STEVENS
starring in
I'm Getting My Act Together And Taking It On The Road
November 30 - December 1 8:00 p.m.
On Sale Now

Friday, December 3 8:00 p.m. PRIMAVERA STRING QUARTET

Lotte Goslar's PANTOMIME CIRCUS
Thursday, December 9 8:00 p.m.

BIG SIX of JAZZ II
with Billy Taylor, Max Roach, Slide Hampton, Richard Davis, Jimmy Heath and John Hendricks
All Shows On Sale Now
MC, VISA-CHARGE YOUR TICKETS TODAY
Telephone reservations Noon-4:00 p.m. M-F
545-2511

Fine Arts Center Concert Hall

AP Laserphoto

Figurines, believed to represent some still unidentified god, rest against the base of the Great Temple of Tenochtitlan, the ancient capital of the Aztecs, recently uncovered and opened to the public.

Sweet-toothed hound stops Quincy traffic

QUINCY (AP) Louis, the 10-year-old bassett hound, is getting a little long in the tooth to be crossing the street unaided, so his owner is reinstalling the official-looking traffic sign warning motorists that Louis is crossing Sea Street.

Why does Louis cross the road?

Because Finlay's E-Z Store is there and Louis has a charge account for candy that his owner, Don Sartori, says "Sometimes costs me as much as $35 a week.

"But it's worth it," says Sartori. "It's my way of saving Louis from a life of crime."

Friends of Sartori, upset when Louis was hit by a car some years ago, suggested an official looking, diamond-shaped traffic sign, complete with a likeness of Louis, cautioning motorists that the 10-year-old bassett hound was likely to cross Sea Street at any time to satisfy his sweet tooth.

Mayor Francis X. McCauley, some area legislators, and a city councilor were among the officials who showed up back up in June for the formal ceremony erecting the sign.

"The wind knocked down the sign a couple of months ago," Sartori said the other day after several motorists inquired if Louis had gone the same way of the missing sign.

"Louis is still crossing Sea Street every day," said his owner, who operates Louis' Cafe across from Finlay's "still eating cookies, still running up a tab.

"But I worry about him a little because he's going on 11 and beginning to show his age. He's arthritic and he's getting deaf. So I'm planning to put the sign back up any day now."

Sartori doesn't know if the sign has saved Louis from some speeding or careless driver, but he knows that is has made him famous.

MDI/WORD LINK
Word Processing
. . . 253-9534 . . .
37 So. Pleasant St., Amherst
(above Matthews Shoes)
Need an Interview?
25 resumes 25 cover letters/envelopes
$40.00 certain restrictions apply
TRY OUR RESUME SERVICES

IMPROVE STUDY HABITS
• STOP SMOKING •
HYPNOSIS CAN HELP YOU MAKE IT PERMANENT
Many of our clients are doctor referrals.
Overcome Anxieties, Fears & Phobias
Lose Weight • Insomnia • Nail Biting
Self Confidence • Sexual Problems • Bed Wetting
HAMPSHIRE ETHICAL HYPNOSIS CENTER
Milton H. Askinos, Member A.A.E.H.
Available: Lecture Demonstrations
Call or Write for Free Brochure
The Farrick Building, Rte. 9, Hadley, Ma.
3-1/2 mile Hampshire Mall (next to Rocky's Hardware)
584-1919 by Appt. Only

RSO Workshops:
Tues. Nov. 30
at 5:30 in rm 416 SU
Wed. Dec. 1
at 4:30 in rm 811 CC
Mon. Dec. 7
at 5:30 in rm 803 CC
All RSOs requesting funding must attend!

AMHERST CINEMA
Mon Tues
The China Syndrome 7:00
Dr Strangelove 9:00
Wed - sat
Diva 7:00
The Harder They Come 9:00
Downtown Amherst
253-5426

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
Rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays, Saturdays 1-4

Writing/Rhetoric Requirement
LAST CHANCE
to take the
Writing Program Placement Test
The Writing Program will offer currently matriculated students a final chance to take the Writing Program Placement Test on Thursday, December 2 at 7:00 PM in Bartlett 61. Anyone planning to take English 190A this spring, who has not yet taken the Placement Test, must do so on December 2. Freshmen who do not complete their first level 'B' core during the freshmen year may find it necessary to take an equivalent course at another institution at their own expense.

ATTENTION
All UMass Honor Societies
Make Yourselves Known
Booklet on Honor Societies
being compiled by Mortar Board
Senior National Honor Society
advisors, officers or members -
Please contact: Jim Lonergan
Dean of Students Office, Room 227 Whitmore
545-2685 545-2684

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
BIG SIX OF JAZZ II
WITH
Billy Taylor, Max Roach, Slide Hampton, Richard Davis, Jimmy Heath, John Hendricks
A benefit concert for the Fletcher Henderson Memorial Scholarship Fund
Saturday, December 11 8:00 p.m.
ON SALE NOVEMBER 19
MC, VISA-CHARGE YOUR TICKETS TODAY
Telephone reservations Noon-4:00 p.m. M-F
545-2511
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall

Arts

Somalia's premeiere novelist

Mogadishu, Somalia (AP) — Farah Maxamed Jama, a burly ex-cop, spends his days running Somalia's National Transport Agency from a walled compound filled with heavy trucks on Mogadishu's outskirts.

It's nothing out of the ordinary for a man trained in automotive engineering. But it's his nighttime activities that set Jama Apart.

After sunset, his attention turns to literature — for the tall, 45-year-old Somali is the premiere novelist of this semi-nomadic state perched on the Horn of Africa.

His ancient people have had a written language only since 1972, when the military government of President Mohamed Siad Barre decreed one. Before, when something had to be put down on paper, the language of Somalia's Moslem faith, Arabic, was used, or those of its colonizers — English and Italian.

Jama, who had been recording traditional Somali oral poetry and history in his own romanized transliteration since the age of 15, was dared by a group of friends to write the first Somali novel following the promulgation of the decree. He took up the challenge, and the result, "Ignorance Is the Enemy of Love," was published two years later. It became, by local standards, a runaway best seller.

"I stayed up nights for months writing the novel with the light on while everyone else in my family tried to sleep," he recalled. "My family didn't like the idea at all."

The complete press run of 10,000 was grabbed up in six months. UNESCO brought out an English translation this year, and the distributor in the United States is Lawrence Hill and Co.

The novel is a simple story of a love doomed by orthodox tribul custom, and is told in the tradition of Somali storytellers — partly in verse. With forceful reformist themes, the novel assails the inequality of women and widespread illiteracy which have kept this country among the world's dozen poorest.

Jama, who published the book under a pseudonym, Faarax M.J. Cawl, says that "Enemy of Love" is faithful to word-of-mouth accounts passed down from the period — the 1915-20 Somali dervish revolt against British and Italian authorities.

An Australian Western

The Man From Snowy River is worth a small "yip-pee! It's a real honest-to-goodness western, the likes of which haven't been seen in these parts for a long spell. Never mind that the cowpokes talk in Down Under accents.

Overlook the script, as heavily plotted as a gothic novel, and the dialogue that smacks of 1930s serials. It's still a western, by gum, and we've missed 'em.

Based on an Australian folk poem, the story concerns a mountain boy who loses his parents and his home and reaches manhood with a feat of skill and strength.

Newcomer Tom Burlinson plays the title role in a winning manner, both on and off the horse. Kirk Douglas, the only American in the cast, appears in a double role as an embittered ranch owner and his brother, a one-legged coot with dreams of hitting it rich in a gold mine. His performances lack subtlety but remain in keeping with the proceedings.

The final sequence, a breath-taking chase after wild horses through the Australian high country, is worth the admission price. Rated PG, but seems suitable for the whole family.

The Department of Music and Dance at the University of Massachusetts will present the Jazz Ensemble I, directed by Jeff Holmes, and the University Wind Ensemble, conducted by Malcolm W. Rowell, Jr., in concert on Wednesday at 8:00 p.m. The event, which is free of charge, will take palce at Bowker Auditorium in Stockbridge Hall.

The 27-member Jazz Ensemble I will perform "Autumn Concerto for Trumpet," composed by music faculty member Frederick Tillis. Originally written for jazz trumpeter Jimmy Owens, the piece will feature soloist Sean Devlin. Two of Holmes' compositions will also be performed. They are "Saxiphrass," which features the saxophone section, and an arrangement of "Jolly Ole St. Nick." Spotlighting many student soloists, the program also includes Les Hooper's "Shuffluphagass," Bob Currow's "Writer's Cramp," and Thad Jones' "Us."

The 40-member University Wind Ensemble will open the second half of the program with Gustav Holst's "Hammersmith, Op. 52." In recognition of the 100th year anniversary of Percy Grainger's birth, they will also perform Grainger's "Children's March" and "Lincolnshire Posy," a cycle in six settings. The program concludes with Robert Russell Bennett's Symphonic Songs for Band.

Conductors Holmes and Rowell are both on the music faculty at UMass. In addition to his teaching and directing responsibilities, Holmes is active as a jazz composer and performer. Several of his compositions were featured on a recent recording by the Valley Big Band with which he plays lead trumpet.

In addition to conducting the University Wind Ensemble, Rowell also directs the Symphony Band and the Youth Wind Ensemble. His broad conducting background includes eight years as Music Director in the Springfield, Vermont schools where his Concert Band won recognition throughout the East. The University Wind Ensemble has been chosen to perform at the Eastern Division Convention of the Music Educators' National Conference in February.

The smash musical hit, "I'm Getting My Act Together And Taking It On The Road," starring Connie Stevens is coming to the Fine Arts Center. The show will run for two days, Tuesday, November 30 through Wednesday, December 1, with performances beginning at 8:00 p.m.

"Getting My Act Together," is a celebration of life and of people. Connie Stevens stars as Heather Jones, a 39 year old performer who decides that it's about time she faces life. Heather is getting older, but according to her, "that ain't so bad." She puts together a new cabaret act, one where she can be herself, in an attempt to step down from the pedestal of perfection the public has built for her. Mark Hutter stars as Joe, Heather's manager, who worries that her new image won't be a commercial success. Also in the cast are Zelda Pullman as Alice, Betty Aberlin as Cheryl and Mark Buchan as Jake.

Gretchen Cryer wrote the book and the lyrics for the show, and Nancy Ford was the composer. Together they have created a musical (somewhat autobiographical) about one woman's personal and professional relationships. The play is produced by Richard Martini, directed by Word Baker with music director Alan Axelrod. The show played for two years in New York and one year in Los Angeles. A cabaret like setting including four musicians on stage is the locale for this upscale, fast-paced show, jam packed with music running the gamut from pop rock to middle-of-the-road.

Tickets for the performance are on sale at the Fine Arts Center Box Office, open Monday through Friday, Noon to 4 p.m. Tickets are priced at $20, 18, 16 for the general public and one half price for UMass, Hampshire, MHC and Smith College students. For additional information call the FAC box office at (413) 545-2511.

The Brass Choir, conducted by Walter Chesnut, (pictured below) and the Chamber Winds, conducted by John Jenkins, appeared in a joint concert on Tuesday, November 23, at 8:00 p.m. at UMass. The performance, which was free of charge, took place at Bowker Auditorium, located in Stockbridge Hall.

The 40-member Brass Choir opened the program with Fanfare, Scherzo and Allegro by Leonard Wagner. This exciting piece featured brass and percussion. They also performed J.S. Bach's "St. Anne's Fugue," arranged for brass choir by Chester Roberts, a new arrangement of "Greensleeves" by Edgar Howarth, and Symphony for Brass and Percussion by Alfred Reed. Reed's colorful work featured keyboard and tympani.

The Chamber Winds performed "Petite Symphonie," written for nine wind instruments by French composer Charles Gounod in 1895. The Chamber Winds toured Romania and the Soviet Union this past summer with the University Chorale and Trade Winds Jazz Quintet.

The Brass Choir, founded over a decade ago by Walter Chesnut, has toured extensively throughout New England and New York State. They performed in Romania in 1976 and since that time have made three special appearances at the all-state conventions of the Music Educators' National Conference.

Tuesday's concert was presented by the Department of Music and Dance.

Hypercurricula...

"Hypercurricula," a listing of events held at the University of Massachusetts and surrounding area, is published daily in the Collegian. Events are listed only on the day they are taking place. Announcements must be submitted on "Hypercurricula" forms available in the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center, and returned to the office by 3 p.m. the Friday before the event. All submissions should be written in a similar style as they appear in the paper.

"Hypercurricula" notices not submitted on the standard form and not submitted by the Friday before the week the event will take place will not be run. Due to space limitations, the Collegian cannot guarantee printing of all "Hypercurricula" notices. Priority will be given to UMass organizations.

OPEN ORGANIZATIONAL MEETING — CIA recruitment PROTEST. Anyone interested in helping to organize a protest of the CIA's recruitment on UMass campus Dec. 1,2,3rd, is invited to planning meeting. 5:30 p.m. in Earthfoods.

UMASS HUNGER TASK FORCE MEETING — Mary Jo Langston will conduct a training session on public speaking and presentations. 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., 428 Student Union.

CLEAN AIR ACT: CEQ MEETING — CEQ (Coalition for Environmental Quality) meeting. Planning for the Clean Air Act alert table in the Campus Center. 6 p.m., 306 Student Union.

UMASS PEACEMAKERS MEETING — Planning for civil defense celebration now in progress, 6 to 8 p.m., 903 Campus Center.

WORKSHOP ON WIFE AND COURTSHIP BATTERING — Victims and alternatives will be discussed. The film "We Will Not be Beaten." 7 p.m., Cashin Main Lounge.

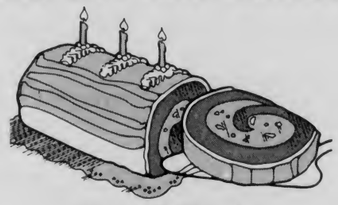
UMASS PIB: PEOPLE INTERESTED IN THE BIBLE — All are invited to join us in an informal gathering to study about the teaching and life of Jesus Christ as described in the New Testament. 7 p.m., 801 Campus Center.

I.F.S.E.A. — Guest speaker will be Ronnie Skole from Chez Joseph in Agawam. He will speak about catering. 7 p.m. Flint Coffee Shop.

"THE CONNECTIONS BETWEEN ANIT-SEMITISM AND RACISM" — Lenny Zakim, of the B'nai Brith Anti-Defamation League will be speaking. 8 p.m. 917 Campus Center.

UMASS ARMENIAN CLUB MEETING — Mandatory meeting for all members. New members welcome. 8:15 p.m., Leach dorm basement.

$1.00 off All Cakes



Hours 11-10 daily

BASKIN-ROBBINS ICE CREAM STORE 31

UNE
Medical School
Tampico, Mexico

Q. What Makes A Quality Medical School?

A. 1. Fine Faculty
2. Good Facilities
3. Quality Student Body
4. Supervised Clerkship Programs for Qualified 3rd and 4th Year Students

Noreste offers a 4-year program has small classes, is W.H.O. listed

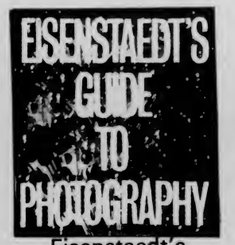
University of the North East Admissions

120 East 41 St. NY, NY 10017
(212) 594-6589
683-6566

ATTENTION STUDENTS
Students required for shoveling snow on campus.
Must be available to be on call thru snow season, including intersession.
Contact Physical Plant Grounds Office
545-0600 Ext. 28.

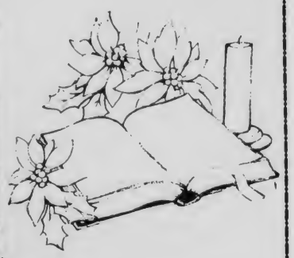
GIFT BOOKS

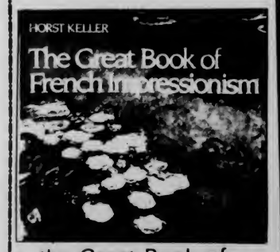
Norman Rockwell
$7.98 List $20.00



Eisenstaedt's Guide to Photography
$7.98 List $17.95

Dong Kingmans Watercolors $10.98 List $24.50





the Great Book of French Impressionism
$19.95 List $50.00

Dali $17.95
List $35.00

Van Gogh
$9.98

Open M-F 9-5 Sat 11-4
Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

The UMass Zone By Mark Rollins

Under The Influence By M. Joyce

Bushwa by Tom Cushwa

Bet you cut your toe-nails wrong!

9 out of 10 people cut their toe-nails wrong. Chiropodists say this is the major cause of ingrown toe-nails.

CUT YOUR TOE-NAILS RIGHT

Bloom County By Berke Breathed

D.C. MENU

LUNCH
Hot Beef Sandwich
Corn Fritters/Sausage Links, Maple Syrup

BASICS LUNCH
Spinach Noodle Casserole
Corn Fritters/Maple Syrup

DINNER
Roast Lamb/Gravy, Mint Jelly
Chicken Stew/ Savory Garden Biscuits
Fruit Plate with Saltines

BASICS DINNER
Carrot Loaf/White Sauce
Chicken Stew/ Savory Garden Biscuits

Reporters Needed

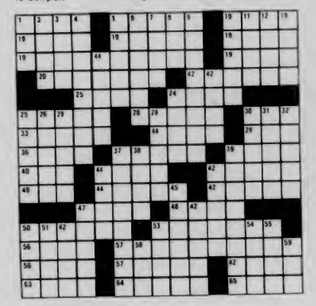
The Collegian needs reporters to cover campus and area news and women's affairs. All interested students are welcome to come and work for the Collegian, the area's largest daily college newspaper. No experience is needed and we provide training. Great experience for journalism or communications majors or anyone interested in the media. Stop by the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, anytime during the day and ask for an editor.

CROSSWORD

Edited by Margaret Farrar and Trude Jaffe
©1982 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

ACROSS
1 Los Angeles team
5 Retains
10 Hacienda
14 "—— a man with seven wives"
15 Among Fr
16 Hautboy
17 Everywhere
19 Bergamot
20 Legal heirs: Law
21 Sacristy
23 Gunpowder and hyson
24 Facet
25 Remained unchanged
28 Commonwealth
30 Warp yarn
33 Hades, in Roman mythology
34 Severn tributary
35 Oriental sauce
36 Rustic vehicle
37 To that extent
39 Skullcap
40 Fabrication
41 Exertion
42 Von Flotow opera
43 Greek letter
44 Functioning
46 Complete
47 Joplin compositions
48 Thames estuary
50 When one wishes
53 To the extent of
56 Grassy fields
57 Full of resentment
60 Football player
61 Escritoire
62 City on the Tevere
63 Fukien province port
64 Dutch painter
65 Float

DOWN
1 Berber
2 Oriental governess
3 Pure and simple
4 Make a beginning
5 Ibsen heroine
6 Father or son American painter
7 Road map abbrs
8 Period of history
9 Follower
10 Chaparral
11 Not on ——
12 Float in the blue
13 Ethereal
18 Desiderata
22 Delightful region
24 Danube tributary
25 Base of a statue
26 Distinguishing feature
27 Petiole sheath
29 White House family of 1910
30 Of ——
31 French night club
32 Considerably
37 Jerseys, British style
38 Charge
39 Attendants at a reception
41 Radio feature
42 Marshal of France: 1804
45 Store fodder
47 Fraught with danger
49 Many times
50 Troubadour's song
51 Sports group
52 Texas university city
53 French church man's title
54 "And pretty maids all in ——"
55 Not fully
58 Doily
59 Davis or Hoover



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

E	N	O	S		S	C	R	I	M		D	A	M	E
C	O	S		S	U	I	T		E	D	I	A	N
H	O	W	E		O		L	E	D	O	W	N
E	N	N	A	T	I	E		S	N	E	A	S
	A	K	K	A	D			A	R
C	I	O	N	S		E	D			G	O	O	S	E
A	D	O		F	U	S	E	L		O	T	E	R
R	I	O	T		F	O	R	D		S	W	A	Y
O	R	U		F	R	E	O	N		S	E	N	S	E
		S	T	A	L	E		G	O	U	L	D
			M	U	S			D	U	S	T
E	L	A	I	N	E	S			S	A	C	I
D	O	W	N	G	R	A	D	E	S		O	O	Z	E
A	G	E		V	I	L	L	A			I	R	A	N
M	O	S	S		E	L	V	I	S		P	S	P	S

Weather

Rain, tapering to showers from this morning, becoming partly sunny this afternoon. Temperatures rising into the 50s today. Partly cloudy tonight. Lows 30 to 40. Mostly cloudy tomorrow with a chance of showers in the afternoon. Highs 45 to 55.

CABLE/VIDEO

Distinguished Speakers Day

10:30 - 12:00	G.Gorden Liddy	speaks to UMass
12:00 - 1:00	Nickii Giovanni	speaks at Black Homecoming
1:00 - 2:00	Katherine Brady, The Feminist

WMUA 91.1 FM

6-9	Ken Johnston — Jazz
9-12	Dave Sobel
12-3	Mahogony
3-5:30	Merritt Anthony
5:30-6	Newswatch
6-7	Peoples' Perspectives
7-10	Concepto Latino
10-2	Reggae
2-6	Nightclub with Evan

Sports

Entries for intramural basketball are due today.

Sports babblings from the Thanksgiving weekend

By JIM FLOYD
Collegian Staff

Having returned from the looonnnnggggg weekend, my head is a little bit sore and my mind a little bit discombobulated but, nonetheless a lot of sports thoughts have been jumbled around and I feel compelled to spit them out. Pay attention now, this may get confusing.

A lot of people watched the Larry Holmes bout with that other guy uh, Randy "Tex" Cobb. Great fight huh? Only if you're a pacifist. If Holmes had gotten mad and shown some of the killer instinct that made him a champion in the first place then he could have put Cobb away in any given round. Holmes toyed with the guy the whole fight. Now I do want Gerry Cooney to beat him.

Real fight fans should have been at the Bruins game on Saturday to see Bruin rookie defenseman Gord Kluzak take on Hartford Whaler Greg Adams in a non-title heaveyweight match that went three rounds. The victor was Kluzak in a split decision 2-1.

The Sugar Bowl will be the Big Game this year when the number one ranked Georgia Bulldogs take on the number two ranked Penn State Nittany Lions in what should decide the national championship. You could say it will be a battle that decides whether it will be reigning cats or dogs. (ouch)

And speaking of Georgia, the only thing that might keep Herschel Walker from winning the Heisman Trophy as the outstanding collegiate football player is the fact that so many people feel that he should win it. Voters might vote against him just to be different.

Closer to home, college basketball has arrived and the campus excited. Both the men's and women's basketball teams here at UMass look good even though they are young.

On the UMass women's basketball scene, head coach Mary Ann Ozdarski is still looking for two recruits. The first is someone to operate the 30-second clock at home games and the second is a manager. The manager spot is particularly attractive because it offers all kinds of opportunities for travel to different colleges around New England and it's a chance to hang around with tall women. Anyone interested should contact the basketball office.

Let's backtrack. (I said this would be a little jumbled.)

The campus is probably split pretty evenly between winners and losers at their respective Thanksgiving Day high school football games. In the long run though, unless it's a super bowl bound team you're routing for, the outcome of the game really doesn't matter. Thanksgiving Day games are a social event.

Good news, the UMass crew team is once again holding their annual raffle in order to raise money to help with the upkeep of their equipment. This means that people will have an opportunity to meet the crew as they visit all over campus trying to peddle tickets. Think I'll put off doing my laundry for another week so I can buy a ticket.

That's about it for now. Hope you haven't been too confused. Hope you're still reading. Hope all your wishes come true. Hope Lange starred in the ghost and Mrs. Muir...this is really jumbled now.

Tex Cobb AP Laserphoto

AP Laserphoto

John McEnroe holds up the Davis Cup after the United States victory over France in the Davis Cup final yesterday. USA defeated France by a score of 4-1.

Moses leads us to hatred

By TONY BETROS
Collegian Staff

As basketball season is upon us, the Boston Celtics find themselves trying to regain the NBA title that they last won in 1980-81. To do this, the Celts must beat their usual nemesis — the Philadelphia 76ers.

The rivalry between these two teams has been intensified over the past few years, to say the least. The war will be further amplified with the 76er acquisition of a new leader — Moses Malone. Although this deal will make the 76ers a better basketball team, Boston fans will have a luxury they haven't had in recent years — someone to spit on, someone for the Boston Globe to abuse, in other words, someone to hate.

The rivalries of Boston teams, which were once evident in all four major sports have become nearly non-existent lately.

Take the Red Sox, for instance. We all know that the Sox enemy has been "those people from 'de Bronx." But ever since Reggie Jackson left, the competition just hasn't been the same. Who can hate a guy like Dave Winfield, who buys hundreds of seats for underpriveledged kids? The Yankees don't have people on their club who can be classified as hated personalities. Remember Mickey Rivers? — he was the prime example, giving cheap shots, hot dogging, and the like. Now, there are no Mickey Rivers or Reggie Jacksons to hate and somehow that takes away that certain extra from the competition.

The Patriots (remember them?) are also in dire need of someone to hate. I used to love it to see someone like Tony McGee or Sugar Bear Hamilton sack Burt Jones; God, I hated Burt Jones. But, he's gone. How about what Jack Tatum did to Darryl Stingly? What a guy to hate. But, he's gone. Now, the Pats don't even have a team to hate. I've gotten to the point where I really don't care about football anymore, so there's no use talking about it.

Hockey season has started already, as the Bruins once again go up against the Canadians. Now there was a rivalry! Who could ever forget the now-famous too many men on the ice penalty which cost the Bruins the series? How 'bout all dem fights (I thought I'd try sounding like a hockey fan), with Jonathon vs. Robinson, or O'Reilly vs Lapointe. I still have nightmares seeing Guy LaFleur skate down the ice, ready to deck Gerry Cheevers.

That was hockey at its best.

It just isn't the same anymore. The Canadians have dominated the Bruins in regular season play recently, and the two haven't even met in the playoffs over the last few years. It looks like Quebec may be the start of a rivalry, but it's too early to tell — the only thing I know about Quebec is that they pronounce it differently up in Canada.

So, it looks like the Celtics will be the only team in the Boston area who has one person to despise. I hope this one can grow like the old Celtics-Knicks one in the early '70's. Cowens battling under the boards against Reed.

Malone looks like the perfect person to hate. Two years ago, if you recall, in the championship series against the Celts said he could pick up four guys from the playgrounds and beat the Celtics. Larry Bird responded by saying, "He's a &$#'%."Now that sounds like hatred.

Malone is cut from the typical mold — arrogant, a hot dog, not afraid to voice his opinion, and, above all, a great athlete who can usually back up his words. It's been awhile since we've had someone to hate — Reggie, Jones, Robinson. So, while Malone will make games tougher for the Celtics, he will at least make the games more interesting, something that's been lacking around here.

the rusty nail Inn
Full House Productions Inc.
presents
"only area appearance"
THE MOTELS
Thursday
Dec. 2
2 shows
7:00 & 10:00 pm
Located at the Calvin Theatre in Northampton
tickets available at "For the Record" (Faces) in Amherst Main St. Records, Northampton, Platterpus Records, Northampton and at the Calvin Theatre Box Office
Rt. 47, Sunderland, MA 665-4937

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday - Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10 % • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?

Rackadisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

ATTENTION DEMO

Dear Demo called about last ML Party sorry you weren't there Hope to see you at Thatchers Dec 3 Love teehee

ATTORNEY GENERAL SEARCH

STUDENT ATTORNEY GENERAL applications are now being accepted for this paid position. For more information and an application go to rm 432 S.U.B. and pick up a packet. ALL STUDENTS ARE ENCOURAGED TO APPLY! Applications are due by Wed 12/1/82 at 4:00 p.m. The S.G.A. is an affirmative action, equal opportunity employer

AUTO FOR SALE

76 Plymouth Volare automatic slant 6. Good condition dependable! Asking $1,500 Call 665-4284

69 Firebird convertible - A classic. Needs engine work and some minor body work. Easily restorable to mint cond. BO around 2000. Call nights 256-0435

BELLYGRAMS!!

Delivered by professional bellydancer for most unusual gift. Thereza 253-7822

BROWNIEGRAMS

Three flavors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

DRYCLEANING

Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Way. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ENTERTAINMENT

For the best professional DJ with a superior sound system at the cheapest rate call Peter 546-7504

Having a Party? Call Tempest live R & R John 546-5211 Scot 1 562-0343

FOR RENT

Two bedroom apt. near Southwest walking distance to Campus available Jan 1 549-5175

Room for rent available Dec 1 close to campus Phyllis 549-6333 $175 includes everything

Nice two bedroom townhouse epartment available immediately. On bus route, three miles from center, wall to wall carpeting and large storage space. Call Mike 253-2741 or 256-6496 at work

FOR SALE

GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972

WHO Tix Dec 11 Centrum best offer evenings 549-5289

TRS80 Model1 Microcomputer. LNW exp. interface, RS232C + parellel ports. Disk controller, etc. Full Pascal compiler, APL interpreter, assem/disassem, Basic, 1 disk drive, games etc. $1200 after 8 pm Vincent 253-2615

Casiotone MT-30 electronic musical instrument. 22 different sounds. Piano-like keyboard. Professional quality. $200 Call Jane/Bruce 256-6296 or 549-5796

Why rent? Buy a fridge, only $60. 6-8068

Snow tires 2 steel belted radials 175 13 $40 549-6147

FOUND

A certain sum of money on November 15. If yours, tell me sum, denomination of bill(s), and where lost. Box 1166, Hampshire College

Cat friendly, female black and white kitten adopted us near Puffton. If yours is lost, call 549-5796

Small, young, female Golden Retriever. Call 546-8096 found in Southwest area 11/22.

HELP WANTED

Coordinator for production of the Course and Teacher Evaluation Guide. Part-time through school year. Full-time summer committment required. Third World and women students are encouraged to apply. Apply 420 S.U.B. Academic Affairs. Deadline 11/24/82

Nationwide inventory service needs for busy 6 weeks after Christmas. Must work weekends, nights. Averge 25 hours weekly $4.75 per hour. Must have phone, transportation and apply at Student Employment Office by December 1st.

Business Manager Union Records bookkeeping experience helpful. Preferably junior status or below. 10 hrs/week $4.00/hr. W.S. or Non. Pick up applications at U.R.U start training Dec 6.

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons: Rock and Roll Lead. Beginners accepted. Reasonable rates. John Cosimini 256-0180

INTERSESSION RENTALS

Delta Chi has furnished rooms for intersession. Located next to S.W. dorms. Laundry, kitchen and parking available. Call Dave 549-0482 or Larry 549-1151

LESBIAN AND GAY

Are you Gay? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2645 or drop in SU406F

LOST

Keys lost at Beat Concert! $5 Reward. Call 665-4187

Thurs Nov 18 at Barselottis or Mikes Westview dungaree coat with glasses in pocket keep the coat but I need those glasses 253-5507

Lost - one old, worn, tattered and faded Levi jacket. Lost last Thursday night at Hanger One during Johnny Copeland show. Coat has torn elbows and Ronald McDonald pin. If you picked it up by mistake, please call Drew at 256-0391. Reward will be given for return, coat has extreme sentimental value.

PERSONALS

To Complainers 2nd floor Ceshin the club invites you to their next rock'n party join us and you won't complain.

Beenie: Now you're legal and you don't even care! Buy me a drink? Happy B-Day your loving roommate.

Kingbid* — Glad we're back! The foreign pillows were no substitute. We only have a month to make up for the last 4 days. — Queenie.

Win a Puch 10 Speed, portable FM stereo or dinner for two at the Pub with Pike raffle 3 for a dollar.

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Dissertations, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

Ride Needed to SMU and back on Fri Dec 3rd. Call Jill 6-9354

ROOM WANTED

Females looking for a room or whole 2 bedroom apt in Brittany Manor for spring semester. Please call 549-5586. Keep trying.

Single room and/or willing to share a room for Jan & Spring semester. Must be close to campus & on bus route. Preferably Townehouse or Brandywine. Call 549-5990 Mike keep trying

ROOMMATE WANTED

2 Roommates wanted to share large bedroom in spacious S. Amh. Apt. only $80 ea aval immediately call 253-5012

2 Bedrooms in 4 bedroom apt available Jan 1 $165/month. call 253-5218

Spring: two persons for two connected rooms in small two bedroom. $125 each including heat! Russell, evenings 549-6647.

Female wanted to share bedroom in So Amherst Apt starting Jan 1 call 253-5604

Person(s) wanted for Jan 1 spring optional $150, includes heat. 256-0185

Kosher female for one bedroom in two bedroom Southwood townhouse 253-7031

SERVICES

Writing assistance. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729

BIRTH CHART READINGS learn astrology through your sign - planet positions at birth. Contact Julie at 253-7813 with your exact time of birth.

SPEEDY TYPING SERVICE
24 hour typing at reasonable rates.
For professional service call Jim 546-7042

Moving? Our 12 foot enclosed cube truck will help you safely move your stuff 256-0480

TO SUBLET

Spring semester, one bedroom in 6 bedroom house, living room, dining room, laundry and kitchen facilities; close to campus, on bus route. 150+, Call Paul after 6 pm 549-5586

Woman wanted to share room in apt Feb great deal for info please call 665-7109

1 Bedroom Univ Perk apt to sublet 1 Jan $295/mth all utilities included, on Main St exc bus service call 8 p.m.-1 a.m. Vincent 253-2615

WANTED TO BUY

Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for an apartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093

2 female graduate students looking for rooms or apart for January and spring semester center of Amherst call 546-9954 or 546-9962.

2 females seek 3 bedroom apt, to share room, or have own rooms in apt in N. Amherst or Southwood Call anytime 546-9689.

Explore Careers in Arts Management

- Career Opportunities in Arts Management
  Tuesday, November 30
  Campus Center, Rm. 903, 7 - 9 p.m.
- Careers in Performing Arts Management
  Monday, December 6
  Campus Center, Rm. 903, 7 - 9 p.m.
- Careers in Film Industry
  Tuesday, December 14
  Herter Hall, Rm. 231, 7 - 9 p.m.

Career Opportunities in Arts Management
Topics: Skills, Entry-level positions, Resources for job information. Presented by the Arts Extension Service, Division of Continuing Education.

TO REGISTER, CALL AES: 545-2360.

Careers in Arts Management workshops made possible with the support of the University Arts Council

Christmas Boxed Cards

Remembering, caring, and sharing are the very special joys of Christmas!

AMERICAN GREETINGS
Americard
The right card for that special person

Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE
Open
M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4

Sports

More sports on page 10

Patriots humble Houston in front of almost nobody

FOXBORO, Mass. AP — When the Houston Oilers learned last week that Steve Grogan had been reinstated as New England Patriots starting quarterback, they mapped strategy to prevent the veteran from unloading long passes.

It didn't work.

Grogan, making his first start in more than a year, threw three touchdown passes and the New England defense sacked Archie Manning six times for a total loss of 62 yards Sunday in leading the Patriots to a 29-21 National Football League victory over the Oilers.

"The first thing we wanted to do was stop Steven Grogan from throwing the long bomb," said Houston coach Ed Biles. "We didn't do it. He burnt us twice on long throws right off the bat.

"We knew we also had to stop Tony Collins, and we didn't do that either."

"It's nice to look at a .500 record," New England coach Ron Meyer said. "It feels good to win. I don't know why Steve's passing was better here than in preseason. He did the job. Our defensive line also did a good job. But that's not to say we were perfect."

Grogan, replacing Matt Cavanaugh, hit Stanley Morgan on scoring tosses covering 63 and 24 yards in the first period, then connected with Tony Collins on a 14-yard touchdown maneuver in the fourth quarter.

Collins, a second-year pro from East Carolina, enjoyed his finest game, carrying 32 times for 161 yards, setting up a pair of field goals by rookie Dan Miller, who was signed as a free agent four days ago.

The Patriots, playing before only 33,602 fans, the smallest turnout in Schaefer Stadium history, harassed Manning, who replaced injured Gifford Nielsen in the starting lineup.

When sacked for the sixth time by George Crump at start of the fourth quarter, Manning was called for intentionally grounding the ball in the end zone, giving New England an automatic safety.

Then, after Grogan's pass to Collins for a 29-7 lead, the Oilers scored two consolation touchdowns. Manning passed to Dave Casper for 14 yards and a score, then hit Mike Renfro on an 8-yard toss into the end zone with 1:39 remaining.

The Patriots struck back after Houston capitalized on a fumble recovery of a punt return at its 48 to march downfield for a touchdown. Earl Campbell capped the march with a 1-yard scoring plunge with the game just six and a half minutes old.

New England kept alive playoff hopes in improving its record to 2-2. Houston dropped to 1-3.

Grogan, who was injured in his last start on Nov. 15, 1981, and then was beaten out by Cavanaugh in preseason training, completed 10 of 16 passes for 195 yards.

On his initial pass he hit Morgan, who made an over-the-shoulder catch at the Houston 18 and raced untouched for the touchdown on the 63-yard play.

Rookie Lester Williams sacked Manning for a 13-yard loss to the Houston 16 before a short punt against the wind set up New England's go-ahead score. On the seventh play, Grogan, looking in the direction of Collins on the left, suddenly fired to Morgan in the right corner of the end zone.

The fourth-period flurry enabled Manning to finish with respectable figures. He completed 19 of 33 attempts for 231 yards.

Campbell, the NFL's 11th alltime ground gainer with nearly 6,800 yards in his career, managed just 37 yards in 16 carries against the New England defense.

The Patriots announced there were 451 no-shows for the game in the 60,000-seat stadium. The weather was sunny but cold.

AP Laserphoto

Roland James of the New England Patriots intercepts a pass intended for Dave Casper during yesterdays game.

Women hoopsters go one for one over weekend

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

KINGSTON, R.I. — The learning continued for the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team this weekend at the University of Rhode Island tournament. UMass split the two games they played, losing to Rhode Island and topping Connecticut.

URI gave the Minutewomen a painful lesson in defense and rebounded enroute to a 73-53 opening game win. The WRams outrebounded UMass by a whopping 55-37 score. URI led the entire game.

Rhode Island stole 16 balls from Massachusetts and shut down UM ace Barbara Hebel. Center Kelly Collins led UM scorers with 15 points, but it wasn't enough to overcome URI.

Hebel, the leading scorer for UM in their two previous outings, was held to six points. Jerrie Bernier was the second leading scorer for the Minutewomen with seven points. Wendy Ward added six points.

Karen Damminger was the top UM rebounder with six. URI's Judy Ryan and Michelle Wasington led WRam scorers with 12 points.

Against the University of Connecticut, UMass took control early and romped to a 64-43 consolation win over the Huskies. The win evens the UM season record at 2-2.

A vicious defense led by point guard Wendy Ward kept the Minutewomen on top. Ward had seven steals in the first half as UMass established a comfortable 37-23 lead.

In the second half, it was all UMass as the Huskies eliminated themselves shooting 21 percent from the field, while Massachusetts hit on 45 percent of their shots for the game.

UConn couldn't stop Hebel in this game as she scored 26 points to lead the Minutewomen scorers. Rebecca Kucks added eight points while Ward and Patty Maguire scored five each.

New Hampshire stopped URI 70-69 for the tournament championship for the third consecutive year.

Coach Mary Ann Ozdardski's hoopsters travel to Springfield on Wednesday to face the Springfield Chiefs in their next encounter. The Minutewomen hope to improve on their defensive play and spread out the offensive scoring against the tough division II school.

Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

Minutemen Bobby Braun (left) and John Hempel in action last week.

Speakers to come to UMass

By RICH ENSOR
Special to the Collegian

The UMass Sport Studies Department has announced that Don Canham, athletic director at Georgia Tech will lead off the department's 1982-83 Lecture Series.

Scheduled for consecutive Tuesday night's at 8 p.m. in the UMass Campus Center the lecture series begins with Homer Rice on November 30 when he discusses, "The Competitive Role in Sport Management," (Campus Center Auditorium) and will follow on December 7 with Don Canham who will lecture on, "The Impact of Television on College Sport." (Campus Center Rm.#180)

Don Canham has supervised the Michigan athletic program for 13 seasons during which time it has produced 46 Big Ten Championships. Michigan's intercollegiate program includes 22 varsity sports for men and women with an annual budget of 11 million dollars. The department is self-sufficient and has broken NCAA attendance records for the past five years.

Nationally, Canham serves on various Big Ten and NCAA committees. He is considered one of the top authoritites on promotion and administration of college athletics. At Michigan, Canham has organized major direct mail and advertising programs to sell football tickets, but he also established a series of fund raising clubs, organized parking and concessions and developed a new area of income in the marketing of specialty items.

One of the most learned men in the field of athletic administration, Dr. Homer Rice was named athletic director at Georgia Tech in 1980. Strong on motivation and organization, Rice has had football coaching experience on the high school, collegiate and professional levels along with administrative experience gained during executive level stints at the University of North Carolina, Rice University and with the Cincinnati Bengals of the National Football League (NFL).

The author of five major books, Rice is the founder of the Attitude Technique Leadership Program, which he wrote for the benefit of organizations seeking to improve their productivity. Included in the program is a Leadership in Athletics section which serves as a model for several collegiate athletic departments around the nation.

The UMass Sport Studies Department offers this series of lectures for all interested students, faculty and staff. Future lectures include Gordon "Scotty" Stirling, Vice-President of Operations for the NBA on Dec. 9 and Dave Gavitt, Commissioner of the Big East Conference on April 20.

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian

Volume CXII, Issue 57 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Tuesday, November 30, 1982

Photo by David May

Jane Mushinsky weaves a basket in the Craft Shop of the Student Union Building.

Trustee maintains innocence

By KEVIN BOWE
Collegian Staff

Amidst apparent contradictions, the campaign committee of Gov. Edward J. King accepted full responsibility surrounding the fact that University of Massachusetts Trustee Einar Paul Robsham exceeded the maximum legal limit of financial campaign contributions to a political candidate.

Early this month King's campaign committee returned $200 to Robsham after two campaign donations were found that exceeded the $1,000 per year limit that an individual can contribute to a political candidate. According to records at the Office of Campaign and Political Finance, Robsham donated $1,000 to the King campaign which lisied his Wayland home address and contributed $200 which listed his Framingham business address.

In an interview Sunday night Robsham denied any knowledge of the $200 contribution and speculated that either his wife, Joyce, or son, Paul, wrote the check.

Volunteers, not paid professionals, were responsible for the compiling of campaign donors that are filed with the Office of Campaign and Political Finance and must have inadvertently listed the printed name on the cheek, Paul Robsham, and not the name of the signature, Joyce Robsham, said Kathy Vierbickas, assistant treasurer to the Committee to Re-elect the Governor.

"It was my fault. I jumped the gun," Vierbickas said explaining that she initially only checked the list of donors and found Robsham's name twice. It was only after she sent out the $200 refund to Robsham that she examined the checks and found out that one of the checks was signed by Robsham's wife, Vierbickas said.

When contacted yesterday, Joyce Robsham said it was probable that she wrote the check but could not remember specifically if she did.

Statements made by a King campaign official regarding the sending of the $200 refund and those made by Mr. Robsham contradicted each other.

Robsham denied he received the $200 refund but the King campaign official said that Robsham had received the check and was going to return it. This official made the same comments to the Office of Campaign and Political Finance according to Betty Macdonald an auditor for the office.

The official later conceded that Robsham did not receive the check because the official only sent information concerning excessive contribution to the Office of Campaign and Political Finance and not to Robsham because the official wanted to confirm the matter with Mr. Robsham.

The campaign official said this was improper procedure and made "distorted" comments to the Collegian because "I just wanted to save my job."

Regents move to emphasize SAT's in college admissions

By DIANE KADZIS
Collegian Staff

A deteriorating system of secondary education in Massachusetts could prove to be an inhospitable host to a proposal calling for a redefinition of admission procedures to state universities and colleges.

A proposal that shifts the focus of admissions review from a college candidate's secondary school transcripts to the results of the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) is currently under the consideration of college presidents and admissions officers throught Massachusetts. The draft, designed by the Board of Regents as part of its long range planning, suggests the alteration will enhance rather than restrict, access to public higher education.

Dave Taggart, director of admissions at the University of Massachusetts, said the recommendations are a step toward upgrading the state's entire educational system. High schools, he said, will be forced to examine the quality of students their curriculums help to produce.

According to a letter issued to the Collegian by Chancellor of the Board of Regents John Duff, a minimum combined score of 800 on SAT's would be required of high school students ranked in the upper half of their graduating class applying to public universities. For those ranked in the upper third of their graduating class, a minimum combined score of 750 on SAT's would be the primary qualification for admission.

One shortcoming of the plan as it is now constructed, Taggart said, is that it "severely penalizes students who are exposed to more information (in their high school studies) but whose grades are low." These students, he explained may receive a combined SAT score of 1,600 but would not be included in the category defined by a score of 800 and above. Instead they would be placed in a waiver category.

The waiver category is designed to allow institutions to grant admission to a percentage of its entering class outside the projected criteria.

The Regents' scheme has come under fire from the minority community at UMass on the basis that SAT scores of minorities are traditionally lower than non-minorities.

"A change in the admissions procedure is not going to mean an enhancement of low standards or a decrease of high standards," said Rick Townes, associate director of the Committee for the Collegiate Education of Blacks and Minority Students. "They (the Regents) are changing who they want to come to the University."

Townes said minority organizations throughout the state recognize the importance of the philosophy backing the proposal, but said they see a problem with the fact the Regents are using SAT scores to remedy the qualitative problems in education. "The policy coming down the pipeline doesn't follow what's needed," he said.

Off-Campus Housing office handles Amherst complaints

By ANN CARRNS
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Off-Campus Housing Office (OCH) will serve as a referral center for all complaints of housing discrimination in the Town of Amherst, Amherst selectmen decided last night. The movement is part of a fair housing plan.

The plan was composed by the Amherst Fair Housing Committee to comply with Massachusetts Committee Against Discrimination (MCAD) guidelines and designates the OCH as the mediating body for housing discrimination complaints by both students and non-student tenants.

Amherst Director of Fair Housing, James P. Cope, said OCH was chosen as a central referral body because a large proportion of people renting apartments in Amherst are in contact with that office and because "all complaints we know of have been dealt with by OCH."

Cope said University officials have informally agreed to the plan and formal agreement is expected soon.

OCH Director, Joanne R. Levenson, who is also chairman of the Fair Housing Committee, said the office would have no problem handling whatever additional complaints may arise from the new plan.

The plan calls for OCH to try to resolve complaints directly first in an informal way. This is important, she said, because sometimes a landlord may not be discriminating intentionally. If the matter cannot be resolved that way, an investigation and legal action may follow.

Levenson said the level of housing discrimination in Amherst "is very low, but it exists," OCH receiving less than five complaints a year.

UMass financial aid lobbyists eye success in Congress

By RICH NANGLE
Collegian Staff

WASHINGTON - The prospect for maintaining level funding for financial aid at the nation's colleges and universities appears favorable to lobbyists from the University of Massachusetts.

Students Advocating Financial Aid (SAFA) are here to lobby legislators for financial aid during the lame-duck session. The group of 40 UMass students is considered by many senators and congressmen to be the only effective lobby of its kind in the country. The group is concentrating its efforts on the level funding measure, House Bill 7205, the continuing resolution.

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass, addressed SAFA, reitterating his support for maintaining current levels of financial aid. He said it might be advantageous to wait until January to vote on a measure since additions could be made at that time. The current resolution expires Dec. 17.

"It seems really essential to undo some of the cuts," Frank said. "I'm sure it will be a very high priority for us."

"The only reason we're here is because Reagan thought he'd have an advantage. We'll do better in January than we'll do now," he said referring to the 26 newly elected Democrats in the House of Representatives.

Frank cited increased defense spending as an obstacle to programs like student financial aid.

"You can't fund the MX missile and have a decent program here," he said.

Frank also expressed his strong opposition to the Solomon Amendment which requires all 18-24 year olds to register for the draft in order to qualify for financial aid.

A group of SAFA members also met with Rep. Joseph Early, D-Mass, Early said he would vote in favor of financial aid programs, but added he could not vote against the draft registration requirement.

"A lot of tax payers support it," he said.

Continued on page 4

Collegian photo by Kevin J. Fachetti via AP

UMass students and SAFA members, Jim Quinn, left, and Jim Shaw, center, listen attentively to Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., as he addresses SAFA members.

World and national news

Soviet article by Hemingway found

CHICAGO (AP) — A Spanish Civil War news dispatch that Ernest Hemingway wrote for a special 1937 issue of Pravda was published in English for the first time yesterday, thanks to sleuthing at the Kennedy Library by an MIT professor.

In the artical, Hemingway said he felt "anger and hatred" at the fascists of Spanish Gen. Francisco Franco, who committed murder against their countrymen "almost every day."

The "lost" article was rediscovered when history Professor William B. Watson of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology found an original draft while doing research for a book at the John F. Kennedy Library in Boston.

The 1,500-word article, with an accompanying account by Watson of his discover, was published Monday by the Chicago Tribune and distributed to other newspapers by Tribune Company Syndicate Inc.

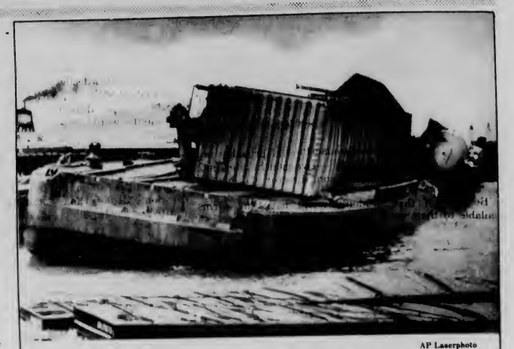
The copyright is held by the author's widow, Mary Hemingway. The American novelist killed himself in 1961.

Hemingway covered the Spanish Civil War for the North American Newspaper Alliance, and his experience there provided background for several works, including the novel "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

The article was written for a special issue of Pravda, the official Soviet communist party newspaper, published Aug. 1, 1937. It was entitled "Murder Done in Spain by Fascist Invaders."

Hemingway's account appeared on the same page as articles by American novelist Upton Sinclair and Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai, who were then leaders of China's communist insurrection.

The article distinguishes between the killing of combatants in war and what Hemingway took to be intentional bombings and attacks on civilians.



AP Laserphoto

Three boxcars float in the San Francisco Bay after sinking during a storm. A fourth car, loaded with Canadian whiskey, was not found.

Common Market ignores American demands for farm subsidy cuts

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — An 88-nation trade conference yesterday dashed U.S. hopes of phasing out Common Market farm subsidies and winning Third World concessions on trade barriers, approving a final declaration that skirted both issues.

"Overall, the results might get a grade of C," said U.S. trade representative William E. Brock. "I don't think Congress will be happy."

After five days of grueling and at times bitter negotiations, delegates from nations subscribing to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade voted early yesterday for a 3,000-word document that endorses neiht of free and open trade.

The vote came in a plenary session that originally was scheduled for Saturday, but was repeatedly delayed to avoid having the conference end without making any kind of joint declaration.

The compromise document, watered down in marathon bargaining over the weekend, committed GATT members to "resist" protectionist trade barriers erected to protect weak domestic industries.

But, under objections from the Common Market and elsewhere, it dropped a previous draft's pledge to "refrain" from protectionism, as well as a U.S.-backed text that would have called for "dismantling" existing protectionist measures.

Some GATT members even objected to language providing for a study of perhaps the most hotly debated issue — agricultural subsidies.

The United States was deeply involved in both major disputes that had paralyzed the conference since opening day and threatened its collapse.

One focused on the Common Market's refusal to meet U.S. demands for a gradual phaseout of agricultural subsidies enacted to reduce huge surpluses. The U.S. delegation said the subsidies make for unfair competition by undercutting other nations' prices.

Most GATT members outside the European Economic Community backed Washington in the debate.

Economy still 'bottoming-out,' White House economist says

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's chief economist said today it will take four or five years of slow, steady economic growth to bring unemployment down to 1980 levels without triggering a new wave of inflation.

But Martin Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, warned that a deficit-swelling jobs program or congressional pressure on the Federal Reserve System to artificially reduce interest rates further could wreck economic recovery and send inflation spiraling upwards again.

"The economy is still in the ambiguous bottoming-out range of the business cycle, ... but the favorable signs of an upcoming recovery are getting better all the time," Feldstein said at a breakfast meeting with reporters.

He said those signs include a 30 percent increase in housing starts over this time last year, a 33 percent jump in housing permits since August and rising sales of cars and major consumer durable goods.

Feldstein said bringing joblessness from its present 10.4 percent to a level of 6 to 7 percent means finding jobs for about 5 million people now out of work and creating 10 million jobs for new workers who will join the labor force over the next five or six years.

Feldstein said the recovery will depend on Congress cutting the federal deficit to one-fourth its present level of $115 billion to $150 billion and the Federal Reserve System resisting pressure to stimulate the economy by expanding the money supply too rapidly.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said Sunday that Congress is not likely to make any more big cuts in domestic or military spending and that the onus is on the Federal Reserve System to revive the economy by cutting interest rates further.

No injuries (hunters, that is) in deer season's rainy opener

SPRINGFIELD — Shotgun volleys echoed through the western Massachusetts hills as the state's longest deer hunting season in a century got underway yesterday in a foggy downpour.

The nine-day shotgun season, extended three days this year in response to a growing deer herd, continues through Wednesday, Dec. 8, with no hunting allowed on Sunday, Dec. 5.

Although some snow cover remained in the high forests of the Berkshire Hills — the state's prime hunting area — dense fog and rain discouraged some first-day hunters, according to Tom Keefe, of the state Division of Fisheries and Wildlife in Pittsfield.

"We may be off to a slow start because of the weather, but we expect to get clearing by mid week and more hunters," he said.

State Police reported no injuries Monday morning, but heavy traffic.

Digest

by the Associated Press

$40M high-tech center gets Gov. King approval

BOSTON — A proposed $40 million center for training workers in high technology industries should help Massachusetts maintain its leadership in the competive microelectronics field, Gov. Edward J. King said yesterday.

"There isn't any reason why with the brilliant people we have, the academic institutions and leading high-technology companies, we shouldn't be in the forefront," King said after swearing in the board of directors for a quasi-public corporation that will supervise construction of the school.

The Massachusetts Technology Park Corporation will use $20 million in state funds and $20 million in equipment, services and aid from private companies to build a microelectronics school. Students will learn state-of-the-art technology used in computers, digital watches, calculators and video systems, officials said.

The training center, which will includes classrooms, a design center and production facilities, will be the largest technology park of its kind in the nation, state officials said. It is expected to open by early 1985.

"Students will be able to go into a classsroom and be taught by faculty loaned by industry, then go into a lab area and design a product, then go into an experimental manufacturing facility and actually make a few," said Paul L. Schultz, a spokesman for George Kariotis, state secretary of economic affairs.

Boston subway crash leaves six injured during rush hour

BOSTON — A collision of two trolley cars at Park Street Station caused minor injuries to six people, including the driver of one of the cars, at the end of the morning rush hour yesterday.

A spokeswoman at Massachusetts General Hospital said three passengers were released after treatment there.

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority reported two other passengers declined medical treatment.

A fire in a roof electrical unit knocked out a trolley car at the Fenway Station at about the same time as the collision, but no injuries were reported, according to spokesman Paul DiNatale.

Both mishaps involved the Green Line trolley car system.

The collision just before 9 a.m. involved two Light Rail Vehicle (LRV) cars.

Evidence of chem warfare found claims State Dept.

WASHINGTON — The State Department said Monday it has fresh, conclusive evidence that the Soviet Union is using poisonous chemicals and toxins in its war in Afghanistan and supervising their use in Cambodia and Laos.

Evidence from Afghanistan, a report issued by the department said, includes two Soviet gas masks bearing traces of toxins that cause blistering, nausea and vomiting.

While the United States had previously charged toxins were being used in Afghanistan, the department said it has only recently managed to prove the allegation beyond doubt.

The report said trichothecene mycotoxins have been used by Soviet forces in Afghanistan since at least 1980 and cited reports from guerrilla sources that at least 100 persons were killed in separate attacks in Afghanistan in 1982, including 73 who died from a gas pumped from an armored vehicle into a water supply used by Moslem guerrillas in Lowgar Province on Sept. 13.

There were reports of a similar water poisoning on Sept. 20, but the results were not known, the report said.

It said the new accounts came from a variety of sources "and cannot be dismissed."

The report said Soviet chemical warfare advisers are supervising the use of lethal and incapacitating chemical agents and toxins by Vietnamese and Lao troops in Laos and by Vietnamese forces against guerrillas in Cambodia.

Correction

Due to a typographical error, the story in yesterday's Collegian on questions about University of Massachusetts Trustee Einar Paul Robsham's campaign contributions to Gov. Edward J. King stated that Robsham admitted the allegations against him were true. The sentence should have read, "Robsham said if all the allegations were true, it was his wife or son who contributed the additional $200 without his knowledge." The word "if" was inadvertently omitted.

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Ray Beauchemin
Copy Editor — Mike Mahoney
Layout Technician — Kelley Riley
Photo Technician — Mike Margolis
Night Graphics Technician — Sam Levitt
Composition — Adrianne Dufour, Laurie Frank, Terri Cooper, Sheryl Silver, Maria Cahillane, Marianne Walsh, Kathie Wells, Alyssa Rusiecki, Becky Robins, Julie Marcinek

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $18 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

Two-month delay forseen in financial aid form distribution

By RAY BEAUCHEMIN
Collegian Staff

Students will have to hustle to fill out their financial aid forms this year because of a law suit that has been filed in Washington, D.C., by a national student group, causing a two month delay in the distribution of the forms.

Previously, students applying for aid had at least three months to complete the form, but this year student will have only one month because financial aid forms will not be distributed until mid-January. The March 1 deadline, however, remains.

"The University (of Massachusetts) will probably not receive forms until mid-January — two months later than any other year," said Art Jackson, director of Financial Aid at UMass.

"Because of that, students won't have the forms available to them until the second semester. When they come back for classes we'll have them available," Jackson said.

The delay is the result of a law suit filed in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia by the National Coalition of Independent College and University Students. The student organization is charging that the U.S. Dept. of Education illegally allowed students to be charged fees last year when they applied for federal financial aid through the College Board's College Scholarship Service (CSS) or the American College Testing Program (ACTP), two privately-funded multi-data processing companies.

On campus students will have the forms in their mailboxes when they return from intersession. Forms will be available at three or four on-campus locations for students living off campus.

"It will be their responsibility to pick up the forms," Jackson said.

"We will be publicizing the locations for the off-campus students in the Collegian," Jackson said.

The March 1 deadline will remain in effect because "it is consistent with the Board of Regents General and Honors Scholarships deadline. If we delayed our deadline, students would miss the external deadlines," Jackson said.

"We feel four weeks is enough time for students and parents to fill out the form. The form itself only takes half an hour to forty-five minutes to fill out. We will have people available in our office to help out," Jackson said.

Some 21,000 UMass students apply for aid and will be affected by the delay. Of that 21,000, about 16,000 receive aid, Jackson said.

"If necessary, we can extend the deadline, but I don't think that will be necessary," said Conrad Kohler, a scholarship officer with the Massachusetts State Scholarship Office.

"If anything, it'll be an improvement. Parents will have their 1040 (income tax) forms completed by then. We will have more accurate figures," Kohler said.

Jackson said aid will continue to be conducted on a first come , first served basis. "Students missing the deadline will be second priority. This can mean a six month delay in notification of their financial aid status. We're just considering late students now," Jackson said.

"Students should not be afraid of not getting aid. There is going to be aid. What it does is the students have to have their forms in on time," Jackson said.

Students who complete the forms after the March 1 deadline will have to go into their private funds including bank loans, Guaranteed Student Loans and their own savings.

"That's how the majority of students of second priority pay their bills. Unfortunately, they have to go into their pockets deeper," Jackson said.

In the law suit, unsettled at press time, the student group contended that students who wanted to apply for federal financial aid should do so without charge under a law prohibiting the charging of fees for processing the federal aid applications.

Although the government form was available free, more than three-quarters of students applying for aid used the private companies' forms.

The College Board's forms are usually made available in mid-November after approval by the secretary of the Dept. of Education. The government's form is not available until March after the deadlines for Pell (Basic) Grants and Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants among others.

The ACT and CSS charged students $6.00 or more last year because the Dept. of Education refused to subsidize a fee waiver for students applying only for federal aid.

Dept. of Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell approved this year's form in mid-November. The form, the same as last year's, does not include the waiver. Students will again be charged for applying for federal aid.

SAFA co-president claims charges based on retribution

By JIM FINKLE
Collegian Staff

A student charged with alleged misuse of Student Activity Trust Fund monies said he is being accused in retribution for past statements and actions he has made against the Student Government Association.

The Student Attorney General's Office is charging Jim Shaw, co-president of Students Advocating Financial Aid (SAFA), with misusing funds appropriated by the Undergraduate Student Senate to SAFA for a trip to Washington, D.C. last March.

Shaw, who described the Undergraduate Student Senate as "self-serving," said he is being accused "because I have been known to make statements about student government."

"I fought hard and will continue to keep SAFA out of the hands of student government," Shaw said.

"The SGA (Student Government Association) is making a big deal out of nothing. They are using the political leverage they have to exploit this more than this is," he said.

Today Shaw is in Washington, D.C. with SAFA on a trip to lobby against President Reagan's proposed financial aid cuts. The Undergraduate Student Senate voted two weeks ago to give SAFA $500 to make that trip.

Siobhan Powers, chairperson of the Undergraduate Student Senate's finance committee, filed the complaint against Shaw.

Powers said Shaw's accusations were incorrect.

"That's false," Powers said.

She noted that she did not know Jim Shaw until after she discovered the alleged misuse of funds.

"I didn't even know Shaw's name, all I knew was that SAFA had made an unauthorized trip. The charges are being made because he did something illegal," Powers said.

"As soon as we noticed he had done something illegal, we chose to take action," she added.

Shaw is being charged with violating two sections of the Student Government Constitution while making a trip to Washington, D.C. last May that Powers said was "unauthorized."

Assistant Student Attorney General Randy Chapman, who is handling the case for Powers, said he will present Shaw with the charges this week.

Although Shaw called the Undergraduate Student Senate "garbage," he said, "some sincere senators earn my respect."

Collegian photo by Michael Margolis

No. This isn't Wilbur from Charlotte's Web fame. This is just one of the many pigs residing on the farm by Boyden fields.

Student group plans picket; coincides with CIA student recruitment on campus

By BROOKE STATES
Collegian Staff

As part of Anti-Racism week at the University of Massachusetts, Leonard Zakim, Eastern States Regional Civil Rights Director of the Anti-Defamation League, addressed a crowd of 45 students in the Campus Center last night.

Zakim's talk focused on the increase in anti-semitic and racist activity, the common thread that binds racism and anti-semitism and what can be done about it.

"It is a tough time for minorities. Civil rights are not a priority on anybody's agenda, except perhaps the victims. We have to deal with the same problems that we dealt with ten and twenty years ago," said Zakim.

Zakim said there has been a three-fold increase in Neo-Nazi activities in each of the last three years. Massachusetts ranks fourth in the nation in acts of anti-semitism.

"Anti-semitism is the persecution of Jews because they are Jews. Racism is the persecution of minorities because they are a race. Racism and anti-semitism know no boundaries and class and have pervaded all areas of society. Both the Klan and the Nazis are non-discriminatory in their hatred. Both have merged for training in para-military camps to prepare for the final race war against Blacks and Jews," Zakim said.

Despite the rise of the Klan and Nazis, Zakim said he does not believe that they are a major danger. "The major problem is the people that we deal with on a daily basis. Anti-semitism and racism have become acceptable again. The ideology has gained wide acceptance. We have to speak out. Nobody will do it for us. One racist or anti-semite is one too many," Zakim said.

Anti-Racism week is being sponsored nationally by the United States Student Association. UMass groups working on the week include The Anti-Racism and Womens Issues team of The Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy, the Radical Student Union, Hillel and the Office of Third World Affairs. The week is being funded and endorsed by the Student Government Association.

As part of the week, Mel King, D-Boston, will speak at 7 p.m. tomorrow in room 163 of the Campus Center.

Anti-Defamation League director focuses on racist activities increase

By JIM FINKLE
Collegian Staff

A group of students calling themselves the ad hoc committee against the CIA is conducting a picket line tomorrow while CIA representatives visit campus to recruit students.

According to Abbe Bjorklund, a member of the committee, the committee will establish a picket line tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. to "have a visible group of people protesting the CIA."

We're not protesting people's rights to interview with the CIA, but we are protesting the CIA's activities," Bjorklund said.

Bjorklund said the CIA has a history of intervening in other countries' affairs, violating their national sovereignty.

"They have actually gone into other countries and intervened and manipulated domestic affairs," she said.

The committee, which Bjorklund said was formed to use the CIA's visit to campus tomorrow to educate people about the CIA, is sponsoring a film and lecture about the CIA tonight.

At 7:30 p.m. in room 911 of the Campus Center, the group will show "On Company Business." Bjorklund said the film is a documentary about the origins of the CIA. "It explains what the CIA has done around the world," she said.

After the film Gerry Fraria of the Northampton Committee on Latin America will speak on his experiences working for CIA.

According to Bjorklund, Fraria was involved in covert activities in Vietnam that were directed by the CIA.

Director of Placement Services at UMass Art Hill said the CIA did not want to attract much attention to their visit.

"They only come (to campus) because students have said they want to talk with them," Hill said.

Bjorkland said she hopes faculty members will participate in the picket, which she said is expected to include about ten people.

She added that when the CIA made recruitment visits to the campuses of Amherst and Mount Holyoke College earlier this year, they were met with protests from both faculty and students.

Workshop on battered women

By GAYLE MCGILL
Collegian Staff

We live in a society that condones violence against women, said Education Advocates from the Every Women's Center who conducted a workshop last night on the problems of battered women.

"Violence against women is prevalent in our society and it stems from laws far back in history," said Jo Ellen Franklin, advocate from the Every Women's Center and a peer sex educator.

Franklin cited laws from the Bible, British Common law and the Napoleonic Civil Code that stated it is okay for a man to beat his wife.

There are many myths associated with the battering of women. The belief that as you go farther down the economic scale, battering of women increases is not true, according to the advocates.

"Battering crosses all social, racial and economic lines. Women in higher socio-economic standings most often have a higher degree of education and are thus able to support themselves, so they can leave the situation," said Franklin.

Battering is the reason for 23 percent of middle class wives seeking divorce, said a facilitator of the workshop.

Photo by David May

Guy Letourneau, a member of the Medieval Club, laces together a leather chest protector.

★SAFA

Continued from page 1

Early's comments were generally critical of the Reagan administration.

"A person should be able to go to school because of intellect, not a pocketbook."

He also criticized the administration's four percent across-the-board budget cuts for the current fiscal year.

"I can't go for an across-the-board cut with the defense department or the state department, and I don't have too much love for either one," he said.

Graduate student William Keegan said he believed the session with Early was a positive one.

"The discouraging part of it was that there seems to be no commitment on the part of the administration for financial aid. The Congress may just reitterate that directly," Keegan said.

"He was pretty realistic in his outlook," said Kevin Coen, a sophomore political science major.

At a reception where he received an award for service to the elderly, Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., was also critical of the Reagan administration when asked about pending financial aid bills.

"Few things other than physical violence could hurt young people as much as cuts in financial aid. I voted against every effort by the administration to cut financial aid," Pepper said.

"It's folly not to educate young people," he said.

Newslines...

Rape Task Force tonight in Butterfield

A Rape Task Force Presentation will be held at 7:00 p.m. tomorrow in Butterfield dormitory in Central Residential Area. The Everywoman Center Education/Advocate Program will give the presentation.

Film today on East Indians in America

Too Far From Home, a documentary on the cultural alienation and isolation of East Indian people living in the United States, will be shown at 12:30 p.m. today in the Campus Center room 911.

Women's event meeting scheduled

A planning meeting for the "International Women's Event" will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday in Room 905 of the Campus Center. Programming for the event in March will be discussed. All interested are invited.

Self-defense workshop with state cops tonight

A self-defense workshop will be held at 9 tonight on the 12th floor in Coolidge Dormitory in the Southwest Residential Area. Self-defense techniques and rape prevention tips will be discussed by two members of the New Hampshire State Police.

STYLES BY DEBORAH

NEW WAVE & DESIGN HAIRCUTS

$8.00 with this coupon
10.50 with shampoo & Blow Dry
11.50 long hair shampoo & Blow Dry

Free Consultations
please call for an appointment

STYLES BY DEBORAH
65 University Drive, Amherst
549-5610
expires 12/31/82 C

adventura travel
549-1256
Reserve Holiday Flights Now save up to 50%
Upper Level 233 N. Pleasant St. Amherst Carriage Shops

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
Rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays, Saturdays 1-4

THE SALVATION ARMY
Give to The Salvation Army so others may have a happy holiday.

For women
DISTRESSED by PREGNANCY...
Services that are confidential, helpful, caring and free.
Birthright
Amherst area: 549-1906
Sp'fld. area: 732-4184

MDI/WORD LINK
Word Processing
. . . 253-9534 . . .
37 So. Pleasant St., Amherst
(above Matthews Shoes)
Need an Interview?
25 resumes 25 cover letters/envelopes
$40.00 certain restrictions apply
TRY OUR RESUME SERVICES

GOING TO BE ON CAMPUS IN JANUARY?
WHERE ARE YOU GOING TO EAT?
- Worcester Dining Commons will be open Lunch and Dinner - Monday - Friday
- Choose any of the five meal plans and SAVE! 20-25-30-35-40
From $70.00 To $130.00
- SIGN UP: DEC. 1-20.
MEAL TICKET OFFICE - FRANKLIN COMMONS
Offering soup, sandwich, casserole, self-service salad bar, and homemade desserts for lunch. Dinner two entrees, self-service salad bar, some vegetarian selections homemade breads and desserts. All this and more for less than you would pay anywhere in the campus area.
WHY NOT TRY IT OUT!
Alternative to an Intersession Board Plan
Pay Cash or Buy Strip Tickets

Mount Snow Vermont Tours
"Presents"
SKI SEMESTER
Collegiate Ski Weeks
6 Days 5 Nights
Jan. 2-7, 1983 Jan. 16-21, 1983
Jan. 9-14, 1983 Jan. 23-28, 1983
at Mount Snow Vermont
$179.00 per person Quad occupancy
$50.00 deposit required
Package includes:
* 5 nights lodging
* A gala welcome party
* Five day lift tickets at Mt Snow ski area
* Five full skiers' breakfasts
* Four full course dinners
* Ski tour guide & host
* And so much more!
* Welcome Get-Together Party * Beer Bash
Wine & Cheese Party * Fondue Party * Horse-Drawn Sleigh Ride * Movies * And so much more
"The Mountain of Fun, MT Snow Vermont"
All Rates Subject to 5% State Tax and 15% Hotel Gratuity Service Charge
Mount Snow Vermont Tours
PO Box 571, Route 100
West Dover, Vermont 05356
802-464-2076

BLUE WALL
CAMPUS CENTER AT UMASS
Tuesday, Nov. 30
FREE
MAGIC NIGHT
and Jimmy Jon Stetson Peguita!
sponsored by G.P.C.

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Student Senate deserves credibility

Former Speaker of the United States House of Representatives Sam Rayburn once said, "Any jackass can kick a barn down, it takes a good carpenter to build one." David McCarthy's column on the Student Government Association brings to mind this sage remark.

In his experience as a student senator, which covers all of the portion of this semester that has so far transpired, he neglected to mention many of the things that the SGA has worked on. This summer SGA officers went to all the orientation sessions, and talked with students about getting involved with the SGA. A follow up letter was sent to all new students, with cards to return if they were interested in working with the SGA. In conjunction with the Office of Third World Affairs, the SGA sponsored the largest voter registration drive in the state. By registering to vote, students could vote against candidates that make sure we continue to suffer "classroom overcrowding, teaching assistants outnumbering professors..."

Brooke States

The SGA also produced the pamphlet, The Next Four Years, that gave the positions of the gubernatorial candidates. Another project the SGA has worked on is the Communique. This requires senators to inform their constituency, at least twice a semester, about what is going on in the senate. Space does not permit further detailing of the many aspects of work done by this "body doing a fine job of guaranteeing the interests of all constituencies but one, the average undergraduate," and who "fight noble causes in a totally ineffectual manner."

Throughout Mr. McCarthy's first two installments, the point is made that, in his opinion; "What sort of control do we, the general student population have over our monies? The answer, unfortunately is almost none." This whole line of reasoning conveniently ignores the fact that the Student Senate and all its officers are elected. It's procedures no more resemble the Soviet Politburo, as is claimed in the column, than does the U.S. House of Representatives resemble the Central Committee of Albania.

In his column Mr. McCarthy mentions the fact that former Student Senate Speaker Brian DeLima made personal phone calls to Hawaii, with SGA money. Conveniently forgotten is the fact that Speaker Brian DeLima was forced to pay back the money that he owed, and was almost impeached as a result of making personal phone calls. Likewise not mentioned is the fact that the SGA Treasurer, who placed a Collegian add in favor of the SATE fee increase was brought up on charges. The undergraduate student body does have control through its elected representatives.

To save Mr. McCarthy the trouble of saying, "I have here a list...," I will confess that I am a member of the Radical Student Union, and I am also employed by the SGA to clean its Communications Office. With that out of the way, there are a few things that should be cleared up with regards to financing. According to the fiscal 1983 SGA Budgets Act, there are six groups that could be considered "political." These are the Radical Student Union, Students Advocating Financial Assistance, Student Coalition Against Nukes Nationwide, Western Mass. Latin American Solidarity Committee, Young Workers Liberation League, and the Massachusetts Association of State Students. The total funding of these groups comes to 4,625.00 dollars. In the RSU's case, this comes to .0009 percent of the total budget. This is obviously a "lion's share." Out of these six groups, come varied programs that include, the sending of students to Washington, D.C. to lobby for increased financial aid, and the bringing of speakers such as Sean Sands to campus. If these groups are so all powerful and united in some dark scheme to fleece the students of their money, why are they only capable of getting $4,625.00 from the budget process? Maybe they have Commie front groups?

Mr. McCarthy feels that the money spent on racism and sexism is badly spent and does not reach the people it should. From reading his column this is obviously true in some cases. When one considers how it would be to be one of 1,500-2,000 Irish Catholics on a campus of 25,000 Irish Protestants the situation should become a little bit easier to understand. Funded Third World activities are not only used by Third World people. Many others, for example, listen to Black Mass Communications Project, and read NUMMO News.

Mr. McCarthy also complains about the increase in the Student Activities Fee. The $12 increase did go to transit costs. It was the University administration that wanted the SGA to raise the fee to cover expenses of the transit system. The alternative would have been an administratively mandated fee tacked on to our bills. The $26,052 in salaries for the three officers and committee chairpersons, divided among them, comes to a grand total of $2,600 per person. This probably buys quite a bit of cocaine, as well as pays rent, and helps cover school costs, etc. The reason that any of these jobs were made paying in the first place, was so that students who did not have a full wardrobe of alligator shirts, could also have the chance to be involved in student government.

There are problems in the SGA. There are problems with individuals and some problems with the system as a whole. But Mr. McCarthy's series has been reminiscient of another McCarthy in American history. Perhaps we should let the administration take back our money, and see if they could do a better job of dealing with many of the problems they created in the first place.

As far as student satisfaction with the SGA I would like to quote SAREO report number 233, spring of 1982. This is an administration document. It shows 14.5 percent of the student body feeling the SGA is responsive to a great or very great extent. The figure for the administration is only 9.4 percent. While this number could be improved upon, it cannot be by emasculating the SGA.

Brooke States is a Collegian columnist

Letters

Anti-Racism Week to work against unjustified prejudices

To the Editor:

This week an event will occur that embodies a tremendous amount of social and humanitarian significance — The Student Government Association's Anti-Racism Week. During this time, as concerned and conscientious students, we will have the opportunity to denounce the shallow prejudices that have plagued this country for centuries; while simultaneously reinforcing the ideals that were promised by the Declaration of Independence — "...that all men and women are created equal." The University of Massachusetts has made several advances in promoting anti-racism; yet its contribution lies about a small number of sincere awareness groups and a "Year Towards Civility" campaign. We must band together to arrest the narrowminded, racist attitudes that thrive even in our own liberal environment. Hopefully, the S.G.A.s' impending anti-racism week will prove to be the catalyst necessary to unite the students of this university in the war against unwarranted and unjustified prejudices. Please come and join us.

Ellen M. Denlin
North Amherst

Klan's history is still alive

Editors Note — This is the first column in a three part series on the Ku Kluz Klan.

Uptight about schools...or just about Negroes?!!" Well now there is something you can do about it." This is the introduction to an organization, written on the back of their "business card," and passed out at their rallies all over the country. It is not a joke. It is a very serious threat to people of all races, yet it is an idea that is becoming more widely accepted and tolerated every day. Yes folks, the Invisible Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan has raised its ugly head into the public spotlight once more. And this time, it promises that it is here to stay.

Josh Meyer

Staging "Support Your Local Police" rallies, and attempting marches in big cities as a show of force and desire for recruitment, the Klan has of late been getting more media coverage than they could ever have hoped for in the past. Recession, unemployment, and the tide of conservatism that swept in with Reagan in '81 have given rise to a "new and improved" Klan, one that is anxious to broaden its base of support in an effort to become accepted by the mainstream of American society.

This past Sunday marked the third time in less than eight weeks that the Klan decided to "march" through a major city. Each time, they were vastly outnumbered by riot police, reporters and protesters, yet they managed to cause a riot on two of the occasions. Twelve police officers and seven demonstrators were injured this last time Sunday in a two-hour melee that lasted long after the Klan had left town. Many questions arise as a result of this curious spectacle. For instance, why has the Klan re-emerged after years of silence? And why has their presence caused such "blind, senseless rage" as one D.C. patrolman put it? Before a constructive analysis of these events can take place, it is necessary to first examine the roots of the Klan and historical context in which they've operated since their inception.

The KKK was started in 1865 in Tennessee by six bored and frustrated Confederate soldiers. By the time the Civil War was officially over, the Klan was transformed from its original "social club" status to that of a paramilitary ogranization which thundered across the war-torn South, sabotaging Reconstruction governments and imposing a reign of terror and violence that lasted for ten years.

Confederate rebels, who had lost what they perceived to be a Holy War, saw in the KKK a way to win back through organized terrorism what they had lost on the battlefield; the subordination of the black race. "God, Guns, and Guts were what made America great," according to the Klan, and they would do what they felt right, regardless of the law of the land. Klan Night Riders were seen and appreciated by many as vigilantes, out to restore law and order to the South.

During this reign of terror, Klansmen were aided by Southern politicians who successfully enacted "Black Codes," which in effect amounted to the virtual re-enslavement of blacks. Northerners who had fought so long and hard for equal rights under the law were outraged, and a legislative re-enactment of the War followed. Southern congressmen were refused seats in the Congress of 1865, and lost the showdown in Congress to those from the North.

As a result, the Reconstruction Acts were passed, abolishing the ex-Confederate state governments, and turning them into military districts. The new governors of these were responsible for enrolling black voters, and holding elections for a new Constitutional convention. These actions met with great resistance in the South, providing fertile spawning ground for the Klan and its supporters. Thousands of Klan representatives met in Nashville, Tennessee in 1867 to plan an organized response to the new policies.

By the late 1860's, acts of terrorism had gotten so frequent and vicious that orders were issued by all Southern state capitols and Union Army headquarters to stop the growing insurrection led by the Klan at any cost. The warlike zeal with which the Klan carried out their tasks was met with public silence from white and black communities alike.

The Ku Klux Klan disbanded by 1870, and though no specific cause has been verified, many historians believe that Klan leaders themselves made the decision shortly after martial law was declared in Tennessee on Feb. 20, 1869. Violence continued after this, and may have increased, but the Klan as an organized body had ceased to exist. The Ku Klux Klan Act was initiated in 1871 to expressly prohibit all Klan activities, including harassment and intimidation of black citizens. When they did reappear at the beginning of the century, the roots of the Invisible Empire had spread enormously. By World War I, the Klan had become a political and social force that had to be reckoned with.

Josh Meyer is a Collegian columnist

Black Affairs

Magazine goes into twelfth year

By YADIRA A. BETANCES
Collegian Staff

The Black Collegian, a magazine published by Preston J. Edwards in New Orleans, as a national magazine for Black college students, is celebrating its twelfth year of publication this Fall 1982.

Since it was first published in the Fall of 1970, its aim has been to provide Black students with useful information, vital to their survival in the competitive world.

There were approximately 500,000 Black students on the nation's campuses in the 1970's. Many of these students were the first in their families to attend college, so it was necessary for a magazine with valuable information to help the Black population get ahead in the career world to be published.

Since its beginning, the Black Collegian has covered important information on career opportunities, strategies for success, educational planning, self-developmental techniques and Black role models.

In the celebration of its twelfth anniversary, the Black Collegian recalls the good times as well as the bad. The birth of the Black Collegian has not brought the best of times economically, but the philosophy of the Black Collegian staff for surviving this hardship has been to continue "to reach for the top," continuing to be an active forum for the concerns of Black college students, continuing to offer ideas, information and advice which will give the necessary competitive edge to this decade's crop of Black college students.

There are approximately a million Black students on campuses nationwide today, and the Black Collegian has been there with ideas, to give rise to the development of these students as the generation of Black leaders of tomorrow.

A true pioneer battled segregation

By JAMES R. WILLIAMS
Collegian Staff

The first few days of college can be a very anxious and apprehensive period for many incoming freshmen (and women). This is usually a result of the transformation from being dependent on your parents to the semi-independent life style of the dormitories. For many, this period of adjustment can, at times, be very rough.

Exactly twenty years ago, James Howard Meredith was confronted with a similar, yet more direct situation. Oh yes, he had to deal with the same phobias that all incoming students must face. Yet his situation was magnified due to the fact that he was a Black student entering an all-White school. Neither the students, the faculty nor the administration, for the most part, were willing to accept a member of the Black race into "their" school. Yet this did not stop James Meredith from pursuing his college education at Mississippi.

The battle began on May 25, 1961. The University of Mississippi had rejected Meredith's application for admission. A week later, N.A.A.C.P. attorney Constance Baker Motley filed a suit claiming that Meredith was refused admission "solely because of his race." She demanded an injunction barring "Ole Miss" from refusing to admit Meredith on racial grounds.

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans eventually issued an injunction forcing the University of Mississippi to admit Meredith. This decision would later be upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court. Yet the University still refused to accept Meredith on the grounds that segregation had to be maintained in Mississippi. As the former governor of Mississippi, Ross Barnett, stated, "We will not drink from the cup of genocide. There is no place in history where the Caucasian race has survived social integration."

Meredith eventually had to be escorted by four U.S. Marshalls and a contingent of Justice Department lawyers on enrollment day. On this day he again was refused admission by Governor Barnett whom the university officials had appointed as acting registrar. A week later they still refused to admit him. This time he was turned away by the Lieutenant Governor, Paul Johnson.

On September 30, 1962, Barnett finally agreed to enroll Meredith. This decision was mostly due to increased pressure from both President Kennedy and his brother Robert, the Attorney General. Yet the students on campus still openly opposed the admission of Meredith. Their anger would lead to the creation of a mob. In the ensuing struggles a reporter eventually died.

Many of the students and faculty at the University of Mississippi felt committed in maintaining the "all White" status of the school. The hostilities which transpired eventually led to the deaths of two people. Yet James Meredith continued to fight for what he believed in. The hostile tactics of the students could not get him to succumb to their desires. He would remain strong.

The courage of James Meredith was essential in order to change the racist policies of our nation's educational system. The admission of Meredith was a stepping stone towards the admissions of Black students into previously all White schools. He was an early pioneer in our struggle for equal education.

We all remember the names of Martin Luther King, Rosa Parks, Malcolm X and other great contributors to the civil rights movement in our country. Yet few of us remember, if we have even heard of, James Meredith. Yet his contribution was very essential and beneficial to many of us in the United States today.

As the late Martin Luther King once said "One day the South will recognize its real heroes. They will be the James Meredith's, with the noble sense of purpose that enables them to face jeering and hostile mobs, and with the agonizing loneliness that characterizes the life of a pioneer."

Let us remember James Howard Meredith.

Always read
Black Affairs

Christmas Gift Trims

A beautiful package makes a gift even more special!

AMERICAN GREETINGS
Americard
The right card for that special person

Open M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4

UNIVERSITY STORE

Located in the Campus Center

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

Catch "The Act" at the Fine Arts Center

CONNIE STEVENS
starring in
I'm Getting My Act Together And Taking It On The Road
November 30 - December 1 8:00 p.m.
On Sale Now

Friday, December 3 8:00 p.m.
PRIMAVERA STRING QUARTET

Lotte Goslar's
PANTOMIME CIRCUS
Thursday, December 9 8:00 p.m.

BIG SIX of JAZZ II
with Billy Taylor, Max Roach, Slide Hampton, Richard Davis, Jimmy Heath and John Hendricks
All Shows On Sale Now
MC, VISA-CHARGE YOUR TICKETS TODAY
Telephone reservations Noon-4:00 p.m. M-F
545-2511

Fine Arts Center Concert Hall

Arts

American doesn't work

AMERICAN WORKERS (ARISTA)
The Busboys

By DAVID CHEVAN
Collegian Staff

The Busboys are one of those groups which always seem to have two strikes against them. First, they are the only all black group trying to play what has been, since the death of Jimi Hendrix, white man's rock. Second, the Busboys are receiving little or no support from their record company, Arista, to promote their new album, American Workers. Unfortunately, the Busboys have come up with an album, which, to continue the metaphor, is little more than a series of foul balls.

Collegian photo by Nancy Nuttle
Victor Johnson of The Busboys

The problems with this album are many. Producer Pete Solley has given the album a heavy metal sound which does not accurately reflect the grooves the band sets up. Solley's technique is to mix the guitar up way over the rest of the band and then add loads of distortion. Anyone who saw the Busboys at the Rusty Nail last month knows this does not reflect their live sound at all.

Whoever made the choice of song order on this album really goofed. The Busboys perform two types of songs, humorous rock and roll, and ironic political pieces. The way these two types of music are combined on this album leaves the group with a complete sense of directionlessness.

Which is not to say the Busboys are a bad band. Their recent local appearance proved they are anything but that. The songs on American Workers are sometimes funny and often provocative. The band makes fun of the white stereotyped image of blacks on Soul Surfing USA and points out possibilities for social change. A rock-reggae number Opportunity, knocks the Reagan government and lays the government racist attitude right on the line.

While American Workers is not a strong album, it is not so terrible that the band will be dropped from the Arista roster. This band has something to say. With any luck next time the message won't get lost in the mix.

Nightmare doesn't stink

By BEN TARRALL
Collegian Correspondent

Watching The Perfumed Nightmare can be a disconcerting experience if you are expecting cinema of the plastic TV-movie variety, but if you're willing to suspend traditional Hollywood standards of quality, seeing this film can be a rewarding experience. Though somewhat choppy and made with little money, its humor, imagination, and humanity puts most Hollywood products to shame.

As well as directing, Kidlat Tahimik (who had a bit part in Werner Herzog's The Mystery of Kasper Hauser) plays the central character, who lives in a small village in the Phillippines and makes a meager living driving a taxi-like transport. Constantly fed a stream of propaganda by American radio about the benefits of "progress," he leaves his homeland for the lure of bright lights and high technology in Europe.

His gradual realization that all that glitters is not gold could easily have wound up as cliched dogma, but instead it is moving and often hilarious. Tahimik's tongue-in-cheek narration (in English) helps to point out the more inane aspects of Western culture, as well as its tendency to cheapen or destroy everything it touches; while Tahimik witnesses the dedication of a huge Parisian supermarket there is even an appearance by noted war criminal Henry Kissinger.

By distributing this film in the United States, Francis Ford Coppola continues to put money into films, like Abel Gance's silent masterpiece Napolean, that would not otherwise be seen by the general public. Unlike George Lucas, who claimed he would put his Star Wars profits into producing independent filmmakers but has in reality sat on his millions, Coppola is helping to keep vital cinema alive. Tonight is the last night you can see The Perfumed Nightmare and it is worth the 3 bucks. In Kidlat Tahimik's words, "this is a small budget movie, made for $10,000 and a lot of love."

Francis Ford Coppola, distributor of The Perfumed Nightmare.

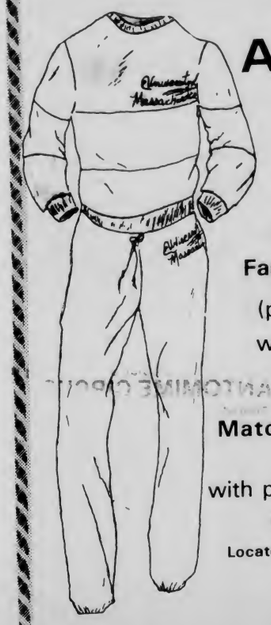
JUST ARRIVED



Special Purchase
Two Tone Fashion Sweatshirt
(purple and white)
with script imprint
ONLY $13.95
Matching Sweatpants
in white
with purple script imprint
ONLY $11.95
Located in our Clothing Dept.

pick up your free UMass Basketball calendar with your purchase of any UMass clothing item

Located in the Campus Center

UNIVERSITY STORE

Open Mon, Tue, Wed 9-5

ATTENTION
All UMass Honor Societies
Make Yourselves Known
Booklet on Honor Societies
being compiled by Mortar Board
Senior National Honor Society
advisors, officers or members -
Please contact: Jim Lonergan
Dean of Students Office, Room 227 Whitmore
545-2685 545-2684

Writing/Rhetoric Requirement
LAST CHANCE
to take the
Writing Program Placement Test
The Writing Program will offer currently matriculated students a final chance to take the Writing Program Placement Test on Thursday, December 2 at 7:00 PM in Bartlett 61. Anyone planning to take English 190A this spring, who has not yet taken the Placement Test, must do so on December 2. Freshmen who do not complete their first level 'B' core during the freshmen year may find it necessary to take an equivalent course at another institution at their own expense.

Louis FINE FOODS
76 N. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST, MASS.

Sale Nov. 29 thru Dec. 4

WE GIVE S&H GREEN STAMPS

FRESH Ground Beef
LESS THAN 22% FAT
$1.59 LB

• FREEZER SPECIAL •
ARMOUR VERIBEST WHOLE Pork Loins
$1.55 LB
EXTRA LEAN BONELESS PORK. CUT & PACKAGED TO YOUR ORDER IN CHOPS & ROASTS

We reserve the right to limit quantity. Not responsible for typographical errors.

ARMOUR VERIBEST PORK SALE!!

EXTRA LEAN SUPER QUALITY Sirloin Pork Roast LB $1.59
RIB BLADE BONE REMOVED Pork Roast UP TO 6 LBS LB $1.49
CENTER CUT Pork Chops LB $1.99
FAMILY PAK ASST Pork Chops LB $1.69

ARMOUR VERIBEST PORK SALE

FRESH FLORIDA Eggplant 49¢ LB

HOOD 100% PURE ALL NATURAL Orange Juice $1.39 ½ GAL

LIGHT N'LIVELY Ice Milk $1.39 ½ GAL

WITH THIS COUPON & $7.50 PURCHASE EXCLUDING COUPON ITEMS & CIGARETTES.
KEEBLER Town House Crackers 16 OZ PKG 89¢
GOOD NOV. 29–DEC 4. ONE PER FAMILY AT LOUIS FOODS

WITH THIS COUPON & $7.50 PURCHASE EXCLUDING COUPON ITEMS & CIGARETTES.
SWEET LIFE Tomato Soup 10½ OZ CAN FREE!
GOOD NOV. 29-DEC 4. ONE PER FAMILY AT LOUIS FOODS

WITH THIS COUPON & $7.50 PURCHASE EXCLUDING COUPON ITEMS & CIGARETTES.
SWEET LIFE Bath Tissue 4 ROLL PKG 59¢
GOOD NOV. 29–DEC. 4. ONE PER FAMILY AT LOUIS FOODS

Hypercurricula

"Hypercurricula," a listing of events held at the University of Massachusetts and the surrounding area, is published daily in the Collegian. Events are listed on the day they will take place and are listed only once. Announcements MUST be submitted on "Hypercurricula" forms available in the Collegian office, 113 Campus Center, and returned by 3:45 P.M. Friday before the event is to take place. All submissions should be written in the same style as they appear in the paper.

TOO FAR FROM HOME — A very special film presentation documenting the cultural alienation living in the U.S. Discussion with the film's creator and Amrita Basu to follow. 12:30 p.m., 911 Campus Center.

ALPHA ZETA MEETING — This is the last meeting before initiation. Everone MUST attend or else have an excuse in to one of the officers. Wine and cheese will be served. 6:30 p.m., 311 Stockbridge.

CAREERS IN ARTS MANAGEMENT — Topics include skills, entry-level positions, resources for job information. Presented by the Arts Extension Service of the Division of Continuing Education. 7 p.m., 903 Campus Center.

PRE-MED CLUB MEETING — Special Meeting. All those interested in going on the UMass Worcester Med-School tour Dec. 10 must attend (or call Karen at 546-4111 with a good excuse). 7 p.m., 802 Campus Center.

GRADUATE STUDENT SENATE — Senate meeting. 7:15 p.m., 917 Campus Center.

CAMPUS FORUM ON CIA — The film "On Company Business" will be shown followed by speakers and a discussion of the origins and actions of the CIA on campus and in the world. 7:30 p.m., 911 Campus Center.

[illegible]SMA MEETING — Guest speaker. 7:30 p.m., 168 Campus Center.

SPORTS STUDIES LECTURE — Dr. Homer Rice, Director of Athletics at Georgia Tech and former head coach of the NFL Cincinnati Bengals will talk on the "Competitive Role in Sport Management." 8 p.m., Campus Center Auditorium.

SPANISH CLUB MEETING — Wine and cheese will be served. To be Discussed: Movie "Goldfinger" on Dec. 2; Potluck Supper, Dec. 3. 8 p.m., Third floor lounge, Herter.

Open 24 Hours—7 am Mon. thru Sat. Midnite
in Hadley-Amherst and Pittsfield stores.

Guaranteed tender, lean and juicy or your money back!

Shoulder London Broil USDA CHOICE Beef Chuck 1.69 lb

3 Pound package or more
Fresh Lean Ground Beef Ground several times daily, consistently fresh & tasty. 1.59 lb

Boneless Chuck Roast Beef Chuck lb 1.69
Boneless Blade Steak Beef Chuck lb 2.19
Boneless Chuck Steak Beef Chuck lb 1.79
Bottom Round Roast up to 5 lbs lb 1.69
Rump Round Roast Beef Round lb 1.89
Eye Round Roast Beef Round lb 2.29

Beef Top Round Steak USDA CHOICE 2.19 lb
Beef Top Round Roast 1.89 lb
Top Round London Broil 2.29 lb
Beef Round Stew USDA Choice 2.29 lb

DOUBLE MFG. COUPONS
Hadley-Amherst only see Store for Details

It's time to STOP & SHOP

corner deli Available in stores featuring a service deli.
Wilson Honey Cured Ham Sliced to your order 3.99 lb
Stop & Shop Pastrami 2.29 lb

Our Seafood Specials!
Fresh Cod Fillets 1.99 lb
Stuffed Clams Pint (1 pkg) Frozen 1.69

Meaty Savings!
Continental Brand Corned Beef Brisket 1.19
Point Cut
Flat Cut Brisket lb 1.89
Smoked Pork Butts water added 1.79 lb
Colonial
Ham Steaks Colonial water added 2.89
Boneless & Skinless Chicken Breast 'White Gem' 1.99 lb
Chicken Leg Qtrs. White Gem 5-6 lb pkg with bag lb 49¢
Skinned & Deveined Beef Liver Frozen 59¢
Calves Liver Skinned & Deveined lb 1.59
Colonial Extra Mild Franks 1 lb package 89¢
Meat Bologna Colonial Natural 1 lb pkg lb 89¢
English Muffins Reg. or Split Stop & Shop 12 oz pkg of 6 39¢
Aqua Fresh Toothpaste 8.2 oz tube 1.29

Chicken Legs 5-6 lb package 59¢ lb
'White Gem' 5-6 lb pkg
Chicken Thighs 79¢ lb
Chicken Drumsticks 'White Gem' 5-6 lb pkg 89¢ lb
Chicken Breast Split 'White Gem' 5-6 lb pkg with back 99¢ lb

produce Fresh savings to pick and choose!
Maine U.S. No. 1 size A Potatoes 10 lb bag 69¢
McIntosh Apples Fresh Crisp from Maine U.S. Fancy 2¼" min. 3 lb bag 79¢
Large Tomatoes For Slicing Firm and ripe. Pick your own. 69¢ lb
Fresh Escarole or Chicory 49¢ lb
Avocados Fresh California Perfect for Salads 2 for $1
Fresh Spinach Pick Your Own 2 lbs $1
Dressing Walden Farm Asst'd Varieties 12 oz btl. 1.19

White Rock Soda 2 Liter bottle Asst'd Flavors, CT deposit 89¢
Hills Bros. Coffee Regular Grind One pound can 1.99
Star-Kist Tuna Chunk Light in Water or Oil 6½ ounce can 79¢
Ronzoni 1 lb box Pasta Ziti, Vermicelli, Medium Shells or Linguini 2 for $1
Contadina Puree Tomato 29 ounce can 79¢
Ivory Liquid Detergent For Dishes 32 ounce bottle 1.59
Blue Bonnet Margarine quarters one pound package 2 for $1
Light n' Lively Yogurt Assorted Varieties 8 ounce cup 3 for $1
Stop & Shop Waffles Round style 11 ounce package 59¢

Stop & Shop Bakery Coupon A13 — C Regular or Split English Muffins 19¢ Stop & Shop 12 oz pkg of 6
Stop & Shop Grocery Coupon A7 — C Save 40¢ Package of 40 Stop & Shop Trash Bags
Stop & Shop Grocery Coupon A11 — C 2 Ply roll Coronet Towels Decorated 125 sheet roll 29¢
Stop & Shop Dairy Coupon A12 — C Stop & Shop Half Gallon Orange Juice From Concentrate carton 59¢

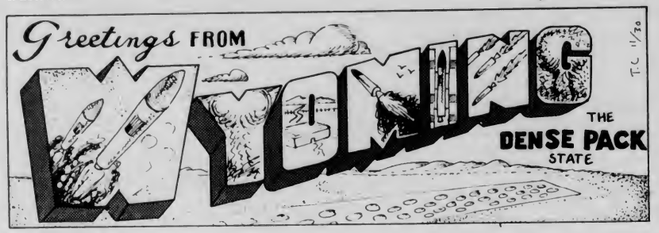
Prices effective Sun. Nov. 28 Sat. Dec. 4 in Mass Mon. Nov. 29 Sat. Dec. 4, 1982 we reserve the right to limit sales to three packages of any items offered for sale. Not available on case lots or to other dealers or wholesalers. Copyright 1982 by Stop & Shop Supermarkets. Not responsible for typographical errors.

Doonesbury — By Garry Trudeau

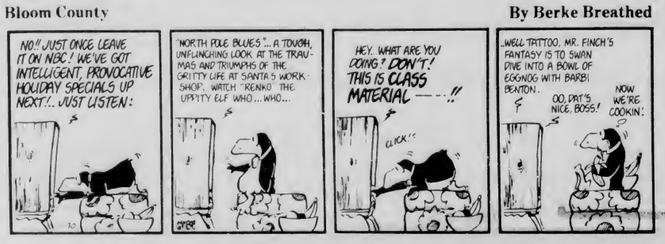
The UMass Zone — By Mark Rollins

Under The Influence — By M. Joyce

Bushwa — by Tom Cushwa



Bloom County — By Berke Breathed



CROSSWORD

Edited by Margaret Farrar and Trude Jaffe

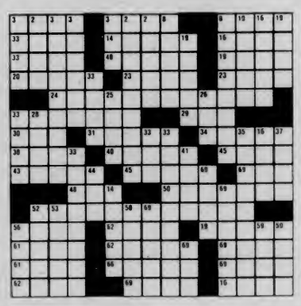
©1982 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

ACROSS

1 Look over
5 Cote talk
9 Peddle
13 River to the Baltic
14 Per ——
15 Iroquoian
17 Change course
18 Name in film lore
19 Of the fields: Prefix
20 Pope's "—— on Man"
22 Wading bird
23 Certain payments
24 Late Old Glory
27 Rain-on-the-roof sound
29 —— the line
30 —— julienne
31 Cookies
34 Money in the bank
38 Encircle
40 Hackneyed
42 Rumpus
43 Mitigates
45 —— charmer
47 "Many —— called..."
48 Mass transport
50 Third man in the ring
52 Portent, to ancients
56 Lake or song
57 Where Nepal is
58 Entrance stairway
61 Coin, in Napoli
62 Shine
64 Unerring
65 Kind of climax
66 Weapon
67 Shoshoneans
68 Equal
69 Pond
70 Furrier's concern

DOWN

1 Pirates' hideout
2 Lemon and orange
3 Takes a knockout punch
4 Mistakes
5 Where Casey Jones rode
6 Thank ——
7 Successful
8 Buddha's dialogues
9 Like the Sleepy Hollow horseman
10 Contend
11 Sent a communication
12 One of the Cyclades
15 Intended
21 Kennel sounds
25 Harangue
26 —— long way
27 Book feature
28 Dorsal bones
32 Word with nine or ten
33 Daydreamer
35 Path for a private mail carrier
36 Sometime word on a green stamp?
37 Up a —— (stumped)
39 Gracious
41 Supplements (with "out")
44 His others, in Italia
46 Lizards
49 Forest denizens
51 Takes pleasure
52 Herd's care
53 Author of "Poker Flat" story
54 Muhammad's teaching
55 Weeping figure of myth
56 Kind of happy
59 City 205 mi. south of Moscow
60 Nuisance
63 Before, in poems



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

R	A	M	S		H	I	R	E	S		C	A	S	A
I	M	E	I	T		E	N	T	R	E		G	I	B
F	I	A	N	A		N	O	A	N		P	E	A	R
H	E	R	E	I	D	E	S		V	E	S	T	R	Y
			B	E	A	S		S	I	D	E
S	T	I	D		S	T	A	T	I	E		A	B	B
O	R	C	I	U	S		A	V	O	N		S	O	Y
C	L	A	R	T		S	O	F	A	R		G	O	L	F
L	I	E		O	I	N	T		M	A	R	I	A
E	T	A		I	N	U	S	E		U	T	T	E	R
			R	A	G	S		M	O	R	E
A	E	W	I	L	L		K	A	I	S	E	R	A	S
L	E	A	S		E	M	B	I	T		T	E	R	E	D
B	A	C	K		T	A	B	L	E		R	O	M	A
A	M	O	Y		S	T	E	E	N		S	M	I	N

Weather

Patchy fog today and tonight. Highs 50 to 55. Lows in the 30s to mid 40s. Tomorrow mostly sunny. Highs 55 to 60.

CABLE/VIDEO

Dancin' in the Streets Video

10:30 - 11:30 Jimmi Plays Berkeley
11:30 - 12:15 Blondie, Eat To the Beat
12:15 - 1:15 Beau Bolero plays Steely Dan at the Wall
1:15 - 2:00 The Fools, all in all just another band in the Wall

D.C. MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
Turkey Club Sandwich Fish in Batter/Tartar Sauce	Baked Ham/Fruit Sauce Chili Cheese Puff Italian Shell Casserole BREAD BUFFET
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Vegetable Taco Fish in Batter/Tartar Sauce	Tofu Shen Chili Cheese Puff BREAD BUFFET

Reporters Needed

The Collegian needs reporters to cover campus and area news and women's affairs. All interested students are welcome to come and work for the Collegian, the area's largest daily college newspaper. No experience is needed and we provide training. Great experience for journalism or communications majors or anyone interested in the media. Stop by the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, anytime during the day and ask for an editor.

WMUA 91.1 FM

6-9	Ovlivion Express with Spierer
9-12	Hell Comes to Your House with Pauline
12-3	Wilhemina
3-5:30	Mr. Ted
5:30-6	Newswatch
6-7	UMass Hotline
7-10	Miss Priss
10-2	Eliot Andrew — Urban Contemporary
2-6	Classical Reveille with Mike Cevasco

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10 % • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?

Rackadisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

ATTORNEY GENERAL SEARCH

STUDENT ATTORNEY GENERAL applications are now being accepted for this paid position. For more information and an application go to rm 432 S.U.B. and pick up a packet. ALL STUDENTS ARE ENCOURAGED TO APPLY! Applications are due by Wed 12/1/82 at 4:00 p.m. The S.G.A. is an affirmative action, equal opportunity employer

AUTO FOR SALE

76 Plymouth Volare automatic slant 6. Good condition dependable! Asking $1,500 Call 665-4284

69 Firebird convertible - A classic. Needs engine work and some minor body work. Easily restorable to mint cond. BO around 2000. Call nights 256-0435

BELLYGRAMS!!

Delivered by professional bellydancer for most unusual gift. Thereza 253-7822

BROWNIEGRAMS

Three flavors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

DRYCLEANING

Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Way. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ENTERTAINMENT

For the best professional DJ with a superior sound system at the cheapest rate call Peter 546-7504

Having a Party? Call Tempest live R & R John 546-5211 Scot 1 562-0343

MOVIE James Bond Goldfinger Wed 12/2 SUB 7/9/11

FOR RENT

Two bedroom apt. near Southwest walking distance to Campus available Jan 1 549-5175

Room for rent available Dec 1 close to campus Phyllis 549-6333 $175 includes everything

Nice two bedroom townhouse apartment available immediately. On bus route, three miles from center, wall to wall carpeting and large storage space. Call Mike 253-2741 or 256-6496 at work

FOR SALE

GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972

WHO Tix Dec 11 Centrum best offer evenings 549-5289

TRS80 Modeli Microcomputer. LNW exp. interface, RS232C + parellel ports. Disk controller, etc. Full Pascal compiler, APL interpreter, assem/disassem, Basic, 1 disk drive, games etc. $1200 after 8 pm Vincent 253-2615

Casiotone MT-30 electronic musical instrument. 22 different sounds. Piano-like keyboard. Professional quality. $200 Call Jane/Bruce 256-6296 or 549-5796

Why rent? Buy a fridge, only $60, 6-8068

FOUND

Cat friendly, female black and white kitten adopted us near Puffton. If yours is lost, call 549-5796

Small, young, female Golden Retriever. Call 546-8096 found in Southwest area 11/22.

HELP WANTED

Nationwide inventory service needs for busy 6 weeks after Christmas. Must work weekends, nights Averge 25 hours weekly $4.75 per hour. Must have phone, transportation and apply at Student Employment Office by December 1st.

Business Manager Union Records bookkeeping experience helpful. Preferably junior status or below. 10 hrs/week $4.00/hr. W.S. or Non. Pick up applications at U.R.U start training Dec 6.

Earn $5,000.00 next summer painting houses in your home town. Apply today at Student Employment Office, 239A Whitmore

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons: Rock and Roll Lead. Beginners accepted. Reasonable rates. John Cosimini 256-0180

LESBIAN AND GAY

Are you Gay? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2645 or drop in SU406F

LOST

Keys lost at Beat Concert! $5 Reward. Call 665-4187

Thurs Nov 18 at Barselottis or Mikes Westview dungaree coat with glasses in pocket keep the coat but I need those glasses 253-5507

Lost - one old, worn, tattered and faded Levi jacket. Lost last Thursday night at Hanger One during Johnny Copeland show. Coat has torn elbows and Ronald McDonald pin. If you picked it up by mistake, please call Drew at 256-0391. Reward will be given for return, coat has extreme sentimental value.

PERSONALS

Happy Birthday Steven with lots of love Aimee

Dear Mark (Kidgy)
Happy Birthday! Youshould only hope your next girlfriend is as ____ as me!
Love ya always, M.H.

Win a Puch 10 Speed, portable FM stereo or dinner for two at the Pub with Pike raffle 3 for a dollar.

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Dissertations, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

PURPLE OR WHAT?

Have a very colorful birthday Lizzie! Red, blue, or will it be purple? Happy 21st.. .love ya--Lori & Krista

RIDE WANTED

Ride Needed to SMU and back on Fri Dec 3rd. Call Jill 6-9354

ROOM WANTED

Females looking for a room or whole 2 bedroom apt in Brittany Manor for spring semester. Please call 549-5586. Keep trying.

Single room and/or willing to share a room for Jan & Spring semester. Must be close to campus & on bus route. Preferably Townehouse or Brandywine. Call 549-5990 Mike keep trying

ROOMMATE WANTED

2 Roommates wanted to share large bedroom in spacious S. Amh. Apt. only $80 es aval immediately call 253-5012

2 Bedrooms in 4 bedroom apt available Jan 1 $165/month. call 253-5218

Spring: two persons for two connected rooms in small two bedroom. $125 each including heat! Russell, evenings 549-6647.

Female wanted to share bedroom in So Amherst Apt starting Jan 1 call 253-5604

Kosher female for one bedroom in two bedroom Southwood townhouse 253-7031

SERVICES

Writing assistance. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729

BIRTH CHART READINGS learn astrology through your sign - planet positions at birth. Contact Julie at 253-7813 with your exact time of birth.

SPEEDY TYPING SERVICE
24 hour typing at reasonable rates.
For professional service call Jim 546-7042

Moving? Our 12 foot enclosed cube truck will help you safely move your stuff 256-0480

TO SUBLET

Spring semester, one bedroom in 6 bedroom house, living room, dining room, laundry and kitchen facilities; close to campus, on bus route. 150 +, Call Paul after 6 pm 549-5586

Woman wanted to share room in apt Feb great deal for info please call 665-7109

1 Bedroom Univ Park apt to sublet 1 Jan $295/mth all utilities included, on Main St exc bus service call 8 p.m.-1 a.m. Vincent 253-2615

WANTED TO BUY

Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for an apartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093

2 females seek 3 bedroom apt, to share room, or have own rooms in apt in N. Amherst or Southwood Call anytime 546-9689.

RSO Workshops:

Tues. Nov. 30
at 5:30 in rm 416 SU
Wed. Dec. 1
at 4:30 in rm 811 CC
Mon. Dec. 7
at 5:30 in rm 803 CC

All RSOs requesting funding must attend!

Joey D's
DJ entertainment in the lounge
Tonight 5:00 - 9:00
All You Can Eat Spaghetti & Meatballs
$2.25 Homemade Sauce
includes bread and butter
Draft Beer 50¢ Pitchers $2.95 Well Drinks 95¢
Beat the Joey D's record of 4 helpings!

the rusty nail
Rt. 47, Sunderland, MA 665-4937
Full House Productions Inc. presents
"only area appearance"
THE MOTELS
Thursday Dec. 2
2 shows
7:00 & 10:00 pm
tickets available at "For the Record" (Faces) in Amherst Main St. Records, Northampton. Platterpus Records Northampton and at the Calvin Theatre Box Office
Located at the Calvin Theatre in Northampton

Sports

There will be a mandatory sports staff meeting Wednesday at 7:00 at the Collegian. New writers are welcome.

Fantasia's to host Pearson and Ross

Pearson tops in NE

By BILLY SHEA
Collegian Staff

Considering the senior season that Garry Pearson had, it is no wonder the all-time leading ground gainer in New England football history is going to have a busy post-season banquet schedule.

First stop for Pearson will be the Fantasia Restaurant in Cambridge where Pearson will receive a nice meal and also pick up the 1982 Harry Agganis Award which goes to the outstanding collegiate football player in New England.

Chosen by the New England Football Writers, the last UMass player to receive the award was Greg Landry, who won the prestigous award in 1967.

Just taking a look at Pearson's statistics, particularly this season, it is clear that he was a hands down choice for the award.

First of all, he was the leading Division 1-AA rusher in the nation at 148.2 yards per game, and holds every conceivable record at UMass for rushing and all-purpose yards.

He set New England and career and season rushing records and his 288 yard performance in his last game in a UMass uniform against AIC is a UMass single game record and is the highest single game performance in Division 1-AA this season.

On top of that, Pearson was second in the nation this year for all-purpose yards (rushing, receiving, kickoff returns and punt returns) with an average of 169 yards a game. He is the only football player in New England history to crack 5,000 yard mark in that category, finishing his career with 5,292 yards.

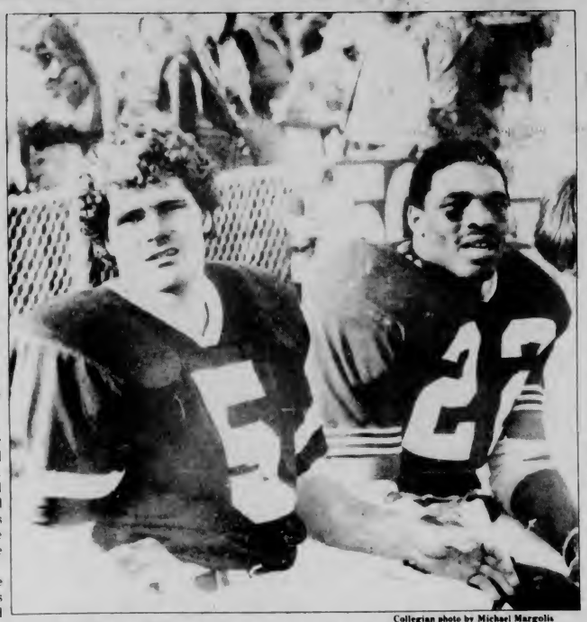
As far as finding the endzone is concerned, Pearson was pretty good at that also in his stay here at UMass. Pearson's 220 career points places him second in New England and first at UMass in terms of modern day (since 1945) scorers.

With all the yards, records and awards comes selection to various all star teams around the country and for Pearson this is nothing new.

Monday, when the American Football Coaches Association named Pearson to the first team Kodak All-American team, they made Pearson only the second player in UMass history to be a two-time first team All-American. The last Minuteman to accomplish that feat was Bruce Kimball now with the New York Giants in 1977 and 1978.

Pearson better hope the food at the Fantasia is good because when he leaves the place tomorrow night it won't be his last chow there.

December 8 Pearson will return to Cambridge to share the Bulger Lowe Award as the most outstanding football player in New England with Boston College's Doug Flutie.



Collegian photo by Michael Margolis

Bob Ross (left) and Garry Pearson (right) will be honored tomorrow night by New England Football Writers at Fantasias in Cambridge.

Ross wins Nason award

By BILLY SHEA
Collegian Staff

For UMass place kicker Bob Ross, the attention is nice but he can do just fine without it.

"Nobody really noticed my foot, which is the way I like it, until the reporters started asking me about it," said Ross. "But, that's the way I am and I accept it."

What Ross is talking about is his right foot which has been a club foot since birth, but it didn't stop Ross from participating in athletics.

For his outstanding senior year, in which he hit eight of nine field goal attempts, Ross is the 1982 recipient of the Jerry Nason Award for senior achievement from the New England Football Writers. He will receive the award at the Fantasia Restaurant in Cambridge tomorrow night.

Ross had overcome his handicap long before he arrived at UMass. As a Pop Warner player and as a senior at Framingham North, besides being the placekicker Ross amazingly handled the quarterback role.

"And the good thing about it was that no one noticed my foot," said Ross. "I don't want to stand out, I just like to fit in with everyone else."

Besides his football endeavors, Ross was also a member of the university gymnastics team, competing in the pommel horse event.

His varsity football career is over and according to Ross he's already missing football.

"One year and it's over," Ross said of his collegiate kicking career, "and I really miss it. The guys have been just great. I see them walking around Boyden and I really miss them."

For Ross the toughest part of the night may be the speech.

"They want me to give a short speech but right now I don't know what I'm going to say. I'm honored, for sure."

That's all he has to say.

Men swimmers open '82 campaign against Tufts

By JIM FLOYD
Collegian Staff

Splash splash splash breath, splash splash splash breath. The beat goes on and on as the University of Massachusetts men's swimming team glides through practice at the Boyden Pool in preparation for their season opener today at Tufts University.

On the side of the pool UMass coach Russ Yarworth barks instructions and encouragement to his troops as he explains how the team is shaping up for the 1982-83 season.

"This is a good, hard working group of kids," he said. "I think we can have a winning season. I'd like to go 6-5."

A 6-5 year may seem to underestimate a team that was ranked sixth in New England at the end of last year, but, Yarworth knows that the schedule UMass faces is a tough one and his team is in an unusual rebuilding stage.

The unusual aspect of the situation is that when the season ended last year, the team appeared to be on the upswing with many good swimmers returning. But, such was not the case as several of Yarworth's key performers chose either not to come back to school or not to swim.

Regardless, Yarworth feels that the team is a good one. The question then will be, out of the members of the team, who will step beyond the rest of the pack to give the swimmers that extra edge.

Of the seniors, Brian Spellman, who is just coming back from a separated shoulder, should do well in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle events. Last year, Spellman took fifth in the New Englands in these categories.

Co-captain John Mulvaney, another senior, will be called upon to add points to the Minuteman tally in the backstroke. According to Yarworth, Mulvaney is a very good team leader and this should be a major asset to a young team like UMass.

Other key performers returning veterans who Yarworth will be counting heavily upon will be juniors Chris Porter, another co-captain, who is a freestyler and ranked in the top ten in four events in New England last season, and Phil Surette who competes in the breaststroke and individual medley and "has the shortest legs of anybody on the team," according to Yarworth.

"But, he is also the hardest worker," Yarworth adds quickly.

Tom Lowery, Chris Clarke and Paul McNeil will also be other returnees who will be counted on for points.

As for Tufts, Yarworth knows that the team that was ranked fifth in the nation (Division III) will once again be tough. Last season, Tufts swamped the Minutemen 68-43 but the score was not indicative of the way the meet went.

"What we do is use it (the Tufts meet) as a tuneup meet," said Yarworth. "What we'll be doing is having kids swim in off events to prepare for Lowell (this Saturday) and Springfield. Those are our big ones."

And all the while Yarworth talks, the swimmers keep going back and forth through the water getting ready, getting tired. Splash splash splash breath. Splash splash splash breath.

Hoopmen start regular season at New Hampshire

By JIM FLOYD
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's basketball team will open its regular season tonight when the Minutemen travel to Durham, N.H. to take on the Wildcats of the University of New Hampshire.

The starting lineup will probably be the same group that started in the exhibition game against the Venezuelan National Team last week when the Minutemen coasted to an easy 78-54 victory, Edwin Green, John Hempel, Horace Neysmith, A.J. Wynder and Donald Russell.

UNH has one of the better backcourt duos in the East in Al McLain (17.8 points per game) and Robin Dixon (13.5 points) and these two should give Russell and Wynder all they can handle throughout the contest.

In the frontcourt, Hempel showed that he could play well last week and he, Neysmith and Green will be looked to for an offensive punch against a fairly untested Wildcat frontcourt combination.

Last season, UMass came up on the short end of a 67-63 contest and UMass head coach Tom McLaughlin and the veterans on the squad will most certainly be out to avenge that loss.

The series between the two schools, which dates back to 1917, currently stands at 55-26 in the Minutemen's favor.

For any fans unable to go to Durham to cheer for the team WMUA will be broadcasting the game live at 7:30 p.m.

Fall baseball is successful

By BILLY SHEA
Collegian Staff

While the regular season doesn't get underway until March, the University of Massachusetts baseball team has already begun preparation for the 1983 campaign.

Some 108 candidates showed up for fall tryouts. Head coach Dick Bergquist gave the top 35 players tentative varsity and junior varsity assignments to make the evaluation process a bit simpler.

The highlight of the fall season was the 100 inning Marathon game the Minutemen held at Lorden Field. The weather for the game was great and the game took 8½ hours to complete with UMass topping Jim Bedard's AIC team 60-38.

According to Bergquist, JUGS pitched a great game, 8½ hours without giving up a walk. Not a bad performance.

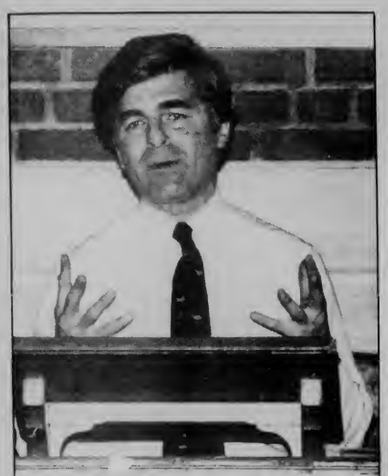
Last year's MVP and top home run hitter Warren McReddie participated in the fall Alumni game smashing a tater in his first Alumni game.

He had a tremendous year last season, hitting .394, leading the team in runs, hits, RBI, and walks. Warren was named first team All New England and played in an all-star game at Pawtucket on June first. He was drafted and signed and is presently in Saratosa in the Gulf Coast Rookie League.

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXII, Issue 58 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Wednesday, December 1, 1982



Collegian file photo

Governor-elect Michael Dukakis.

Dukakis to speak to Faculty Senate

By KEVIN BOWE
Collegian Staff

During the last year Michael Dukakis has visited the University of Massachusetts three times, asking the students and employees here to vote for him in his bid to win the Governorship of this state.

Unlike most politicians who, once elected, rarely leave their office to meet with the people, Dukakis has spoken to many constituent groups since he won the November election. As part of this effort, Governor-elect Dukakis will be on campus tomorrow discussing the problems of the University.

"The fact he is coming up here (after the election) is a demonstration of his support for public higher education," said Ben Ricci, a UMass faculty member and long time Dukakis supporter.

Dukakis will at 3:30 be touring the Computer Consulting Center in SBA 204 and will be addressing the Faculty Senate at 3:50 in SBA 120, according to Richard Rust, a spokesperson for Dukakis. He will be speaking on the problems of public higher education and the University specifically, Rust said.

Dukakis will also meet with members of the faculty union, which supported Dukakis in his bid for the governorship.

Dukakis enters the governorship at a critical time for UMass. Many of the buildings on campus are deteriorating because of faulty building construction or lack of maintenance due to insufficient state funds.

Federal funding cutbacks are threatening the quality and access of UMass. Dukakis made a campaign pledge to lobby against such cuts and to freeze tuition at all state colleges and universities for at least one year.

Labor board issues complaints against three Gnomon strikers

By PAUL BELVAL
Collegian Staff

The National Labor Relations Board has issued complaints against three striking Gnomon Copy employees and the United Electrical Union, Local 264 business manager for threatening and assaulting non-striking workers.

The National Labor Relations Board complaint lists 12 illegal union activities during the strike and charges Carol McColl, Toby Saisa and Mary Erin Crook, striking employees, and David Cohen, the union's business manager with harassing the employees hired by Gnomon to replace the striking workers.

The complaint, a result of an investigation of allegations against the union by Candy Iannacchino and Roland Wetherbee, the owners of Gnomon, claims McColl tripped and threatened Gnomon employees as they went into and out of the shop.

McColl denied these charged, which she said were made up by the current Gnomon employees.

"They (the National Labor Relations Board) came down and interviewed a bunch of scabs," she said. "They made up a bunch of stuff. I didn't trip anyone. I didn't threaten anyone. I hate scabs like everyone else, but I didn't threaten anyone with bodily harm."

Tracy Butler, a non-striking Gnomon employee, said the charges are accurate.

"Carol McColl is a vindictive, unhappy person," she said. "She has a lot of hate in her. We didn't make it up. It's all true. Of course they're going to say we lied. They're coming up on formal charges."

"She told me one day real soon, someone was going to beat me up, and she wanted to be there laughing," Butler said. "They do things like that quite often."

The complaint also charges Crook, Saisa and Cohen with blocking the entrance to Gnomon. Crook and Suisa denied the allegations. "We don't block ingress and egress," Crook said. "Nobody has physically harmed anyone."

"I think Candy and Rollie (the owners of Gnomon) made it all up," Saisa said. "I don't think they've displayed any interest in honesty during the strike. I think they're trying to manipulate the legal possibilities."

David Cohen could not be reached for comment.

Crook and McColl said the charges were made against the four individuals named in the complaint because they are the members of the union's negotiating team.

"The only people named are the members of the negotiating team," Crook said.

"It seems to be a pretty clear attempt to discredit the negotiating team," McColl said.

Crook said despite the complaint, the union is "going to continue to picket. We haven't been proven guilty," she said.

Iannacchino, who along with Wetherbee plans to relinquish the Amherst store to Casper Enterprises, Inc., of Cambridge, Gnomon's parent company, and take up another franchise elsewhere, said she feels "great" about the National Labor Relations Board complaints.

"It takes an awful lot to substantiate a charge for them to prosecute," she said. "They don't want to lose."

Iannacchino questioned the effectiveness of the complaint.

"It doesn't help things though. They haven't stopped what brought on the original charge," she said.

The union is scheduled to be tried on the National Labor Realtions Board charges in April, 1983.

Housing discrimination affects students

By ANN CARRNS
Collegian Staff

A young black man decides to rent an apartment in Amherst. He calls a local landlord and is told an apartment is available for $350 per month. Pleased that he has found an apartment he can afford, he goes to see it. Upon arriving, the landlord says, "oh, the price is $450 per month. I made a mistake." Disappointed, the young man feels something is wrong but he does not know what to do and looks elsewhere for housing.

Situations such as this hypothetical one can and do occur, according to Joanne R. Levenson, director of the off-Campus Housing Office and chairman of the Amherst Fair Housing Committee.

"There is a problem in that people do not always know they are being discriminated against," Levenson said. "They may think, 'well, that situation was strange,' but they do not expect to be discriminated against."

Students as a class do not have recognized legal rights, Levenson said and are therefore vulnerable to discrimination by landlords who may perceive tham as rowdy or unreliable.

"Students should be aware that landlords can legally choose to discriminate against them because they are students," Levenson said. "However, if the landlord does so by refusing them housing because they are not married, or they have children, they may have recourse in their complaint."

"The answer to that is for students to go to the state legislature and ask why they are not recognized as a class of people who can be discriminated against," Levenson said.

Educating tenants about recognizing and dealing with potential discrimination incidents is part of a new fair housing plan for Amherst that involves the Off-Campus Housing Office.

The plan designates the office as a referral center for all complaints of housing discrimination in Amherst.

The plan will go into effect upon approval by the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination. Levenson said approval is expected within two months.

"The volume of actual discrimination cases in Amherst is very low," Levenson said. "We're hoping the increased publicity will either prove that the actual incidence of discriminatory acts really is low, or that by making information more accessible, tenants who in the past haven't come forward will feel more comfortable doing so now."

Situations that should alert tenants that they may have been discriminated against include being told that one can only rent in a certain area, being told one price over the phone and another in person, or being told an apartment is rented when it is still being advertised, Levenson said.

In addition, people may not be refused housing on the basis of race, sex, handicap or veteran's or marital status, Levenson said.

The Office has revised its complaint process under the new plan and the plan itself gives the office "some teeth," Levenson said.

"The new plan has all cases reviewed by the office in conjunction with the Amherst Fair Housing Committee and director," she said. "This legitimizes the process and provides a formalized mechanism for complaints."

Student lobbying trip 'success'

By RICH NANGLE
Collegian Staff

WASHINGTON — The second and last day of financial aid lobbying in Washington, D.C. by a University of Massachusetts contingency was labelled a success by the group's co-presidents.

Co-presidents Jim Shaw and Jim Quinn of Students Advocating Financial Aid (SAFA), along with UMass Coordinator for Community Relations Gerald Grady all said they believed the lobbying trip was a success.

"It looks like level funding will happen. Under this administration, that is the only thing we can hope for," Quinn said.

"I think we will have no problem getting the continuing resolution passed," Shaw said. "We feel we solidified our support behind these programs."

Grady, who accompanied SAFA on the trip and is closely associated with the group, said the trip made legislators realize students do care about financial aid.

"It is very obvious this is a political issue nationally now. Congressmen and senators are attentive to the student voting block," Grady said.

Probably the best news SAFA heard all day was the speculation that Sen. Lowell Weiker, R-Conn., will probably chair the Senate Committee on Health and Human Services. The position was left vacant when Sen. Harrison Schmidt, R-New Mexico, was defeated in last month's elections. The Health and Services Committee deals with financial aid legislation.

Nina Bar-Droma, Weiker's legislative aid for education, said it looks as though

Continued on page 5

Collegian photo by Katie Watters

Eric Nelson, of Landscape Design, and a University of Massachusetts graduate in elementary education decorates Plumbley's on the Common in Amherst for the holiday season.

World and national news

Suspect believed to be Tylenol killer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A mechanic wanted for questioning in the Extra-Strength Tylenol poisoning deaths was arrested yesterday in Los Angeles after he contacted FBI agents voluntarily, authorities said.

Kevin John Masterson, 35, walked into the FBI office in West Los Angeles on Monday afternoon and said he was willing to be interviewed about the Chicago-area poisonings, said FBI spokesman John Hoos.

Masterson was questioned, detained overnight, then turned over to Los Angeles police, who arrested him yesterday at FBI headquarters on an outstanding warrant from Illinois on an unrelated matter, Hoos said.

Authorities who searched Masterson's rooms in Chicago in October found two Tylenol capsules and two bottles labeled poison. Investigators have also suggested that Masterson had a grudge against two of the retail outlets where the poisoned Tylenol was purchased.

Hoos said he did not know why Masterson came to the FBI office, nor would he comment on what Masterson said during interviews.

"We interviewed him as a possible suspect in the Tylenol case," Hoos said. Asked whether Masterson was still considered crucial to the Tylenol case, Hoos said: "All I can say is there are no federal charges against him."

Masterson was held without bail on an outstanding warrant for possession of marijuana and was scheduled for arraignment on that charge Wednesday, said police Lt. Keith Ross.

AP Laserphoto

Indian police move in to rescue a soccer referee who was beaten by angry North Korean players last night. The North Koreans attacked the ref because of an allegedly unfair call during an Asian Games match in New Delhi. The North Koreans lost to the Kuwaitis, 3-2.

Aides say Kennedy will not run in '84

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., appears to have decided not to run for president in 1984 and intends to make a formal announcement on today, sources close to the senator said late last night.

Aides who asked not to be identified by name said Kennedy intends to disclose his decision not to run at a late-morning news conference.

"He will make that announcement," said one source.

But this source cautioned that Kennedy had been in meetings on the subject late last night and there were "still people who are trying to talk him out of it."

Kennedy, who tried unsuccessfully to win the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination from President Carter, has been the front-runner in the polls for the 1984 nomination.

But aides and other close associates have said in recent weeks that some members of Kennedy's family have been urging him not to run.

One associate of Kennedy said he made his apparent decision at a family Thanksgiving holiday.

Kennedy arranged a meeting with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., a longtime political ally, for this morning, apparently to inform him of his decision.

The Boston Globe said in today's editions that political associates had told Kennedy that if he ran, he had as good a chance as anybody of winning the nomination if the economy continued in a slump, but would have a poor chance of winning the election.

Boston hotel strike possible if agreement not reached

BOSTON — Last-ditch negotiations began shortly before noon yesterday to head off a possible strike at midnight by an estimated 3,000 workers at nine major Boston hotels.

"We are willing to negotiate tonight and through the night if it will lead to an agreement," said spokesman Kevin Sidel of the Hotel, Restaurant, Institutional Employees and Bartenders Union.

The old three-year contract runs out at midnight. Union employees voted 1,409-198 last week to authorize a walkout.

Sidel said it would take an all-night session to wrap up an agreement. "All the issues are on the table," he said. "Nothing has been settled yet — wages, pensions, health plan, job posting, the whole thing."

Attorney Louis Chandler, who has been spokesman for negotiators, was not available immediately for comment.

Chandler told a news conference Monday: "If there's a strike, the hotels will continue to operate."

Domenic Bozzotto, president of union Local 26, said after Monday's talks that he considered a strike likely.

Union workers set up a picket line in front of a temporary hiring center for possible replacement employees for the hotels. An estimated 100 people carried banners and chanted "scab" and "union buster" to those crossing the line to enter the building.

The hotel workers represented by the union include kitchen personnel, waiters, maids, cleaning and laundry staffers and others.

The nine hotels have about 5,000 of the approximately 9,000 hotel rooms in the city. They are the Airport Hilton, Colonnade, Copley Plaza, Copley Square, Lenox, Boston Park Plaza Hotel and Towers, Parker House, Ritz-Carlton and Sheraton-Boston.

AP Laserphoto

Thousands of people were evacuated yesterday from the Orange, Calif. area when a storage tanks at the Cosden Oil andchemical Company in Orange caught fire. The tank held the irritating and flammable chemical styrene monomer.

Digest

by the Associated Press

Greenfield school department may feed lunch to jobless

GREENFIELD — Greenfield school officials have disclosed a plan to offer low-cost weekday lunches to jobless people at the high school cafeteria.

The idea is still being studied, said Robert Tombs, assistant to the superintendent. He said he plans more talks with the Council of Unemployed on how it would work.

The Greenfield Recorder reported yesterday that a soup kitchen sponsored by a variety of groups will open once a week beginning Dec. 8 in the meeting hall of Local 274 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Union.

Union Local President Judith Ruff said jobless people and their families are already being registered. She said volunteers are rounding up equipment to begin making and serving "casserole-type" meals every Wednesday night.

Atlantic oil exploration sale proceedings begun

SOMERVILLE — Federal officials have begun steps toward a 1984 sale of deepwater oil exploration areas in a 60 million-acre stretch of ocean bottom that runs from the Gulf of Maine to New York.

The U.S. Interior Department's call for information on the proposed Lease Sale 82 comes as state and federal officials continue to debate Lease Sale 52, a sale of 3.1 million acres of offshore tracts in the Georges Bank fishing grounds tentatively set for March 1983.

Both sales were discussed yesterday at a meeting of the North Atlantic Regional Technical Working Group, a committee of federal, state officials and environmental groups who monitor oil exploration off New England's coast.

Oil exploration in the Georges Bank, one of the nation's richest fishing areas, ended, at least temporarily, this fall after five oil companies drilled eight exploratory wells without finding commercially developable reserves of oil or natural gas.

Joseph Kennedy's company helps poor insulate homes

BOSTON — An innovative program designed to help poor people insulate their homes and prevent fuel from going through the roof and "heating the moon and the stars" paid its first dividend yesterday when five participants received energy rebate checks.

Joseph P. Kennedy II, president of Citizens Conservation Corp. (CCC), said his project addresses two traditional energy problems: giving poor people an incentive to conserve fuel in their homes, and preventing the waste of government-subsidized fuel in poorly insulated buildings.

"No matter how much fuel assistance the government gives to needy people, over one third of the energy winds up heating the moon and the stars" without adequate insulation, Kennedy said as he presented checks totaling $469.28 to landlord Barbara Wilson and her tenants in the city's Roxbury section.

Business, labor endorse bill to open stores on Sundays

BOSTON — Business and labor groups yesterday endorsed a compromise bill to allow Sunday openings of retail stores year-round, as the Massachusetts House began debate on the repeal of the Blue Laws.

"We feel it's something whose time has come," James Sullivan, president of the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce, told a Republican caucus before the House convened.

Elliot Stone, president of Jordan Marsh, and William Cashman, representing the AFLCIO, also backed the proposal to repeal the Massachusetts Blue Laws, dating back to a 1791 provision for a common day of rest.

The compromise draft of the bill was drawn by Rep. Timothy Bassett, D-Lynn, House chairman of the Commerce and Labor Committee, after working with business and labor groups, according to Michael Shea, the committee's senior research analyst.

Supporters argued consumers want to shop on Sundays, workers want the time-and-a-half pay and Massachusetts will reap tax benefits.

'Bubble boy' may benefit from new medical treatment

BOSTON — Doctors have cured a baby girl born without resistance to disease and say the treatment offers hope for other children like her who are forced to live in germfree plastic bubbles or face certain death.

The key to the new approach is monoclonal antibodies, substances that zero in on the cells that have prevented these youngsters from being helped by bone marrow transplants.

Doctors at the Sidney Farber Cancer Institute in Boston have used the new procedure on a 4- month-old girl who had to live in a microbe-free world because she had no natural immunity to disease.

"We believe that this is a cure for this child," said Dr. Ellis L. Reinherz. "That is why we are very excited."

The youngster is now about 18 months old. "She has completely normal immunity," he said. "It would be impossible to distinguish her from anyone else."

Among possible beneficiaries of the new treatment are David, the so-called "bubble boy" who is the most famous victim of this condition. At Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, David's physician has discussed the new treatment with the 11- year-old boy's parents.

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Michelle Murray
Copy Editor — Jim Finkle
Layout Technician — Stephen Anderson
Assistant Photo Editor — Katie Watters
Composition — Laura Shanahan, Jackie Femino, Nancy Gallo, Kyle Cooper, Ken Kalinowski, Janet Buch, Terri Cooper, Scott Stockwell, Gail Tanzer, Adrianne Dufour, Sheryl Silver, Lynn Eisenberg, Laurie Frank

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $18 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

Collegian photo by Katie Watters

Michael, a youngster from Skinner Toddler Day Care Center, pouts outside Morrill Science Center, during an outing in the sun.

WMUA 'psyched' for move

By GREG BROWN
Collegian Correspondent

The staff at WMUA, the University of Massachusetts radio station, is anxious to finally move from their old studios, and into offices in the lower level of the Campus Center, near the Collegian.

Three years ago, in December of 1979, Bill Stepchew, WMUA's chief engineer, received a memo from the University's administration, informing him of the engineering department's need to take over the WMUA studio in Marston Hall for new engineering facilities.

Stepchew said that money is now scarce, and progress in obtaining new studios is slow.

"Predictably, the problem is that none of the appropriate sources of funds have a lot of money to kick around," Stepchew said.

"Whatever sources it comes from will have to tighten their belts, and the money will probably have to come from more than one source."

When the plans to move WMUA were announced three years ago, they coincided with the administration's plans to segregate trust funded operations like WMUA from state funded operations, such as engineering laboratories.

"Just about everyone here is very psyched to move. We're on the ground floor here, so we get a lot of noise from outside. The place is also pretty old, and not very secure," Stepchew said.

WMUA has over $29,000 worth of new studio equipment that they are holding for their new studio.

"The equipment here is almost obsolete, but it wouldn't be practical to install the new stuff here," Stepchew said.

Two control boards among the new equipment have one-year warranties that will expire this summer. If WMUA is not moved before then, there could be money lost on repair services, should anything happen to the control boards.

Stepchew said the Provost's Office gave him July 30, 1983 as a deadline for the project. He said he has been given too many deadlines in the past three years to get overly optimistic about this one, he said.

"From what I've seen, projects of this kind usually take a long time to develop. So all we can really do is wait," he said.

Data General Corporation donates 'Eagle' to UMass

By BILL WALL
Collegian Staff

The partnership between high technology corporations and the University of Massachusetts was enhanced recently with the donation of two computer systems by Data General Corporation of Massachusetts to the UMass departments of computer and information science (COINS) and electrical and computer engineering.

The system, known as the ECLIPSE EV/8000, will be located in the Graduate Research Center and will be utilized by students taking certain courses in the two departments, Dr. Walt Kohler, acting head of the electrical and computer engineering department, said. The system is valued at $343,070 and includes a printer, eight terminals and five software packages, Kohler said.

The system was immortalized by its role in Tracy Kidder's Pulitzer Prize winning novel The Soul of a New Machine where it was known as the Eagle, according to the Science Journal, a weekly report on UMass science and technology.

Kidder came to UMass November 15 for the dedication ceremony for the new system, which is part of the Center for Computer Science and Computer Engineering, a facility formed to coordinate educational and research activities of the electrical and computer engineering and COINS departments.

Kohler said his department received an announcement last December that Data General had a program for supporting contributions to education and was accepting proposals from interested parties.

Data General was interested in the number of undergraduates and graduate students in the department and "they basically wanted some justification for using the equipment," Kohler said.

"I took up the initiative to form a proposal, really by coordinating the interests of both departments. We put in a joint proposal from the ECE (electrical and computer engineering) and COINS departments," Kohler said.

Kohler said after he learned that Data General had agreed to donate the equipment, he had to get the support of the University administration because there were other costs involved with installing the system besides the actual donated equipment.

"It takes a lot to keep it running. Air conditioning had to be installed, tables had to be bought. The University is contributing $60,000 to the maintenance of the equipment. The University is also involved with preparing the space and setting it operational. It is to be upgraded to support 30 or 40 additional users and the University is going to buy more terminals and memory space," Kohler said.

Dallas Darland, director of development for the University, said he saw donations to universities by private corporations, in general, and that of Data General, in particular, to be in the spirit of "enlightened self-interest."

Companies see it as mutually beneficial for themselves and universities to arrange donations so that more students will become exposed to and familiar with their equipment, Darland said. He added that upon entering the industry, students will look favorably on acquiring equipment they are familiar with.

Legislator to discuss racism's effects on higher education

By MARK J. WELCH
Collegian Staff

State Representative Mel King, D-Boston, will address the Undergraduate Student Senate at the University of Massachusetts tonight on "racism and its effects on public higher education."

King is the first of a series of state legislators who will address the Senate as part of a program arranged by the Senate's Public Policy Committee.

King is a member of the House Education Committee and has shown strong support for public higher education, according to program organizer James H. Budreau. King also serves on the House Natural Resources Committee and is a member of the Black Caucus.

"He's been a powerful advocate for public higher education, specifically UMass," Budreau said, "and also in fighting racism in the Commonwealth. He's a very frank and honest man and he supports social issues, issues of equality."

Budreau said students from Boston are specifically invited to attend the lecture, which will be at 7 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center. Students are also invited to a reception in Memorial Hall from 5:30 to 7, Budreau said.

King is the first of three legislators who will participate in this series on issues relating to public higher education.

Next Wednesday, Barbara Gray, R-Framingham, will speak on "sexual harrassment and sexism in public higher education."

Gerard D'Amico, D-Worcester, will address the Senate Dec. 15 on "Reagonomics, financial aid c and effects on public higher education."

Budreau said the program is an effort to allow UMass students to talk to their state representatives one-to-one and to show student support for legislators that support higher education.

"These three legislators are powerful advocates of public higher education," Budreau said. "It's important that students show support of their efforts. This is also a means of showing that students are not apathetic."

"We're trying to build a visible constituency base for public higher education," Budreau said.

Budreau said the Public Policy Committee will send invitations to many students in Gray's district next week and to D'Amico's student constituents the following week, so that those students will be able to talk to their representatives. A similar mailing to Boston students attending UMass was cancelled because mailing labels were not available on time, Budreau said.

Affirmative Action director speaks on sexism, racism

By CRIS SCHUSTER
Collegian Staff

The excuses people give for discrimination against women are the same excuses given for discrimination against minorities, said the director of the Affirmative Action Office at the University of Massachusetts.

Thelma Griffith-Johnson, who spoke yesterday at UMass on "Sex and Race Discrimination in the Workplace," said, "Sexism and racism have run hand in glove in this nation."

"Very often women and minorities, blacks, hispanics, find themselves allowed into the marketplace only at the very lowest level," Griffith-Johnson said.

One way to make sure minorities and woman do not have access to the marketplace, she said, is by "insufficiently educating them in the first place."

School systems and businesses work together to keep cheap labor in the form of women and minorities, she said.

"I will submit that there is no group on this earth that is less intelligent than any other group given the same exposure and the same education," she said.

Griffith-Johnson said traditionally women are the secretaries and the clerical workers. They are asked to make the coffee, take the notes at the meetings and they have their intelligence underestimated.

"Those are the kinds of insults that women face, that minorities face," she said. "Take those kinds of insults into the marketplace and you see how they can cut you off."

When applying for a job, Griffith-Johnson said to make sure an employer does not ask questions such as "do you have children?" or "do you have someone to take care of the children?" if the employer asks those type of questions, that is discrimination.

"That person is setting it up not to hire you," she said.

Sexual harassment, as well as discrimination, is also a very big problem in the workplace, she said.

"It is inevitable someone will ask you to sleep with him in order to get promoted. None of you have to take that," she said.

"Although I don't promote sexual harassment, I do believe in equality. I think if men can do it, women can do it too," she said.

"The issue of promotion is a way blacks and women are discriminated and segregated against," she said. With the issue of sexual harassment, "you have to learn to give as you get," she said.

"If a little kid cries at school because someone is teasing him, what happens? They all start teasing him," she said. "Because I have a terrible mouth on me, I give as I get and I get people off my back."

Griffith-Johnson's lecture was part of an eight-part series on women and work, sponsored by the Working Women's Task Force of the Everywoman's Center.

Collegian photo by Katie Watters

Brian Sullivan, left, president of Beta Kappa Phi fraternity and Craig Keenan, director of college and youth marketing for Miller Brewing Co., present Everett Emerson, campus United Way coordinator with a $1,000 check yesterday in Whitmore. The check is from proceeds of the Tug of War sponsored by BKO staged Nov. 20.

Newslines...

Arms control issues to be subject of symposium

"A Symposium on the Arms Race," a series of lectures and discussions on arms control issues, is being held tomorrow through Saturday at Amherst College.

President of the Arms Control Association, Dr. Herbert Scoville will speak on "Driving Forces – an Insight" at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in Johnson Chapel. Research Director of the Council on Economic Priorities, Dr. Gordon Adams will deliver a lecture on the economics of defense systems procedures called "Are We Getting Our Money's Worth?" at 7:30 p.m. on Friday in the Red Room of Converse Hall. Director of the Disarmarment Office of the Riverside Church in New York, Cora Weiss will speak on "What Now? – The Aftermath of the November Elections" at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in the Red Room of Converse Hall. The lecture will be followed by an open discussion.

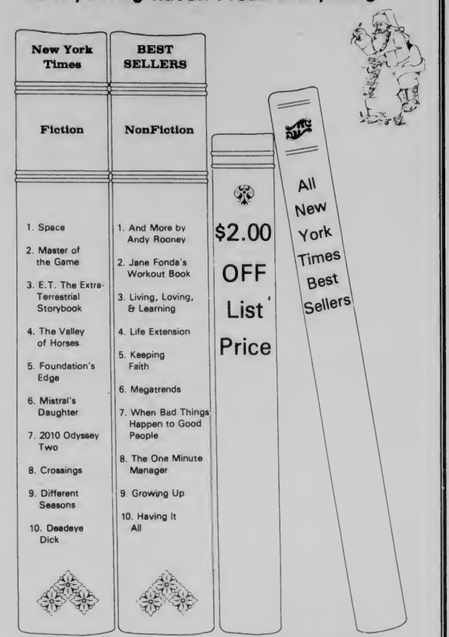
Women's movement in Egypt discussed

A Veiled Revolution, an account of the women's movement in Egypt, will be shown at noon tomorrow in the Campus Center room 904. Professor Farideh Seihoun, from the University of Massachusetts School of Education, will lead a discussion following the film. The film, part of the film series Third World Women in Liberation Struggles, is sponsored by the Third World Women's Task Force of the Everywoman's Center.

Free counseling available for rape victims

Free counseling and information is available for people who have experienced a past or recent rape. Assistance is also offered for those who have experienced battering, attempted rape, assault or incest. Call the Everywoman's Center at 545-0883 for appointments or at 545-0800 at anytime.

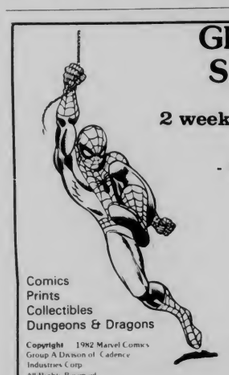
Thank Goodness people who have everything haven't read everything



Open M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4
Located in the Campus Center

UNIVERSITY STORE

GRAND OPENING
SALE-A-BRATION
Sat. Nov. 20-Sat. Dec. 4
2 weeks of Madness & Bargains



- Meet Bob Layton, Marvel Comics' Iron Man & Hercules Artist
Sat. Dec. 4

Free Marvel Guide to Collecting Comics with this ad
6 new comics for the price of 5
20% off all back issues in stock

Comics
Prints
Collectibles
Dungeons & Dragons

Copyright 1982 Marvel Comics Group A Division of Cadence Industries Corp. All Rights Reserved

Moondance
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, Mass.
413-586-8775

TONIGHT
DYNASTY
DRINK SPECIALS 9-11

TOP of the CAMPUS
RESTAURANT & LOUNGE
11th Floor • Campus Center • UMass

RSO Workshops:
Wed. Dec. 1
at 4:30 in rm 811 CC
Mon. Dec. 6
at 5:30 in rm 803 CC
Pick up information packets in Senate Office,
Rm 420 Student Union
All RSOs requesting funding must attend!

UMASS SKI CLUB
Sign up now for all trips
office hours M-F 11-4
HIGH PEOPLE
IN HIGH PLACES
430A Student Union 5-3437

Graduate Senate funds speaker

By SEAN CASEY
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts Graduate Student Senate Finance Committee announced last night it had approved a funding request put forth by the Stockbridge Student Senate.

The money will be used to help defray the cost of a speaker for the Professional Agricultural Convention to be held Feb. 16.

Frances Moore Lappe, author of the book Diet For A Small Planet, will speak in a lecture welcome to all members of the University community.

Lappe is an expert on hunger problems facing the world today and the economics of food distribution. Lappe's book, which has been translated into Swedish, French and Spanish, has sold over a million copies.

The finance committee decided to fund $200 definitely and also to have an additional $100 on reserve if enough funding is not obtained to meet the $1,950 estimated cost of the event.

The Stockbridge Senate is also seeking funding from the Distinguished Visitors Program, the Student Government Association and the Stockbridge Senate itself.

In other business, the Senate was addressed by Floyd Martin of the University Placement Office, who said many graduate students do not take advantage of or may not even be aware of the services provided by the Office.

"We're not getting the numbers of graduate students we'd like to get, so we want to make them aware that we're there and can help them in many ways," Martin said.

Martin noted that counselors are on hand to assist students in preparing resumes for jobs and to provide information on graduate programs at other schools. Martin also mentioned the job-employment matching system, which uses a computer to match students with jobs.

★D.C.

Continued from page 1

Weiker will get the position. Weiker has consistently voted for financial aid increases.

If he does not get the position, however, it is speculated that Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Oregon, will get the position. Hatfield is also considered a friend of education.

Rep. Joseph Maokley, D-Mass., met with SAFA members and expressed his support for their efforts and financial aid legislation in general.

"That's (education) on the top of my list. It is the universities — public and private alike — that have to accomodate people," Moakley said.

Moakley also cited his extreme displeasure with proposals to eliminate the Graduate Guaranteed Student Loan Program.

An aid to Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colorado, told Quinn he was certain the Senator, who is a probable presidential candidate, would continue to support financial aid legislation.

ATTENTION
All UMass Honor Societies
Make Yourselves Known
Booklet on Honor Societies
being compiled by Mortar Board
Senior National Honor Society
advisors, officers or members -
Please contact: Jim Lonergan
Dean of Students Office, Room 227 Whitmore
545-2685 545-2684

SANTA SAYS...
Advertise in the Collegian Xmas Shopper
Call 545-3500 for details

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
Rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays, Saturdays 1-4

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Wednesday Night
FREE
Hot & Cold Hors d'oevres 10 pm
Sombreros 95°
Rolling Rock Pitchers $2.95
Rolling Rock Drafts 50°

BLUE WALL
CAMPUS CENTER AT UMASS
Wednesday, Dec. 1 MEL BROOKS BLAZING SADDLES
No Admission/Free popcorn
Show Times: 8 pm & 10 pm
Thursday, Dec. 2 "OPEN MIKE" COMEDY NIGHT
ARRIVE AT 8:30 CHECK IN w/ M.C.
Happy Hour with Jim Bianchi
JOHN LINCOLN WRIGHT
Friday, Dec. 3 COVER $2
Happy Hour
with John Vorhaus 3-6 pm
"The area's most revered country artists"
Saturday THE WARRIORS
No Admission/Free Popcorn
Show Times: 8 pm and 10 pm

d'amour's BIG
Bacon, Lettuce & Anything!
is what you'll find and save on at Big 'Y'. Enjoy the Holidays and enjoy the Savings!
Not responsible for typographical errors

CLIP & SAVE COUPON
$1 OFF Total Purchase
WITH THIS COUPON
and additional $10 purchase exclusive of coupon items and cigarettes, lottery tickets and any item prohibited by law. Good at Hadley Big 'Y' only. Valid thru Sat., Dec. 3, 1982
LU-111

CLIP & SAVE COUPON
Bacon (Any 1-Pound Package)
50¢ OFF
WITH THIS COUPON
and additional $10 purchase exclusive of coupon items and cigarettes, lottery tickets and any item prohibited by law. Good at Hadley Big 'Y' only. Valid thru Sat., Dec. 3, 1982
LU-112

CLIP & SAVE COUPON
Iceberg Lettuce
39¢ Head
WITH THIS COUPON
and additional $10 purchase exclusive of coupon items and cigarettes, lottery tickets and any item prohibited by law. Good at Hadley Big 'Y' only. Valid thru Sat., Dec. 3, 1982
LU-113

SAME DAY COLOR PHOTO PROCESSING

FILM IN BY 10:00 AM

BEAUTIFUL COLOR PRINTS OUT BY 4:00 PM

The Foto Factory

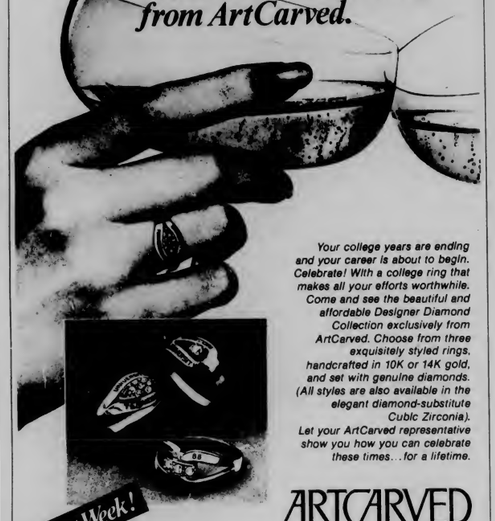
A division of HALLMARK COLOR LABS processors to the professionals

Hours: Mon.–Fri., 8–6 / Sat., 8–Noon

257 TRIANGLE STREET IN AMHERST

Celebrate!

With a Diamond College Ring from ArtCarved.



Your college years are ending and your career is about to begin. Celebrate! With a college ring that makes all your efforts worthwhile. Come and see the beautiful and affordable Designer Diamond Collection exclusively from ArtCarved. Choose from three exquisitely styled rings, handcrafted in 10K or 14K gold, and set with genuine diamonds. (All styles are also available in the elegant diamond-substitute Cubic Zirconia). Let your ArtCarved representative show you how you can celebrate these times. . .for a lifetime.

Next Week!

ARTCARVED CLASS RINGS, INC

DATE: Dec. 1, 2, 3 TIME: 10-4 PLACE: UNIVERSITY STORE

DEPOSIT REQUIRED. MASTERCARD OR VISA ACCEPTED

©1982 ARTCARVED CLASS RINGS, INC

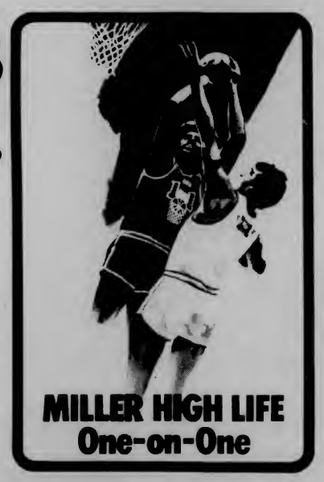
ANY STUDENT IS ELIGIBLE TO PARTICIPATE IN THE...

SEMI-FINALS

PLACE: Boyden Gymnasium

DATE: Thursday, December 9

TIME: 7:15 p.m.



MILLER HIGH LIFE One-on-One

FINALS

PLACE: Curry Hicks Cage

DATE: Tuesday, December 14

TIME: Halftime Basketball Game

PRIZES WILL BE AWARDED

* Registration Deadline December 5

CONTACT: Ray Wilson at the Intramural Office or Craig B. Keenan BKO 549-4066 Director of College and Youth Marketing

Miller High Life Beer

HAPPY HOLIDAYS

FROM YOUR STUDENT CONTROLLED BUSINESSES

Valley Women's Voice

P.O. Box 392 Northampton, MA

Don't miss the December issue!
I want the Voice to speak for me.
Here's my ☐ subscription $6. for 10 issues

☐ contribution
☐ area of expertise

Name_____

Address_____

Phone_____

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY Collegian

Telephone (413) 545-3500

Campus Center / University of Massachusetts / Amherst, Mass. 01003

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian services its market each morning of the University's academic year. 18,000 newspapers are delivered to the campus each morning and it's usually the first news the community sees.

In addition, the Massachusetts Daily Collegian is delivered to central locations at Amherst, Hampshire, Mt. Holyoke and Smith Colleges. This increases exposure and broadens the Five College Community cooperative concept.

Recognized as a leader in the college newspaper field, the Massachusetts Daily Collegian is operated by students, for students in the dynamic Amherst Market.

The Collegian staff wishes all a happy holiday season.

Attention

John Adams Residents

Today is the GRAND REOPENING of the John Adams Snack Bar

(12th floor)

Offering: Subs Munchies Ice Cream Bagels

Hours 8 pm - 12 pm Sun - Wed
8 pm - 2 am Thu, Fri, Sat

FREE SODA with any sub and this coupon

Resident work-study positions available

HAPPY HOLIDAYS from.

Student Note & Printing Service

3¢ Copies All Day 12/2 w/coupon

HAPPY HOLIDAYS FROM

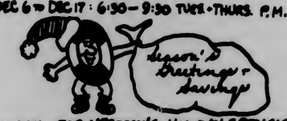
Student Note & Printing Service

FREE single LECTURE NOTE TO ANY COURSE WE CARRY (does not apply to subscriptions)

U.R.U. ANNOUNCES SPECIAL CHRISTMAS HOURS

DEC 6 TO DEC 17 : 6:30–9:30 TUES.-THURS. P.M.!



LOOK FOR UPCOMING HOLIDAY SPECIALS THIS MONTH AT

201 SUB 545-0400

Jump Records Unlimited

M-F 10-5

Get Physical . . .Sporting Goods for Less

Sneakers:
* Converse High-Tops
* Pumas
* Brooks
* Adidas
 we do resoling

GREAT GIFT IDEAS:

Basketballs - Volleyballs - Knee Pads

Racketball Rackets & Balls

Visit Us Today

Located next to the Post Office in the Student Union

Do your stomach a favor - visit

earthfoods restaurant

Wholesome & delicious vegetarian fare

All freshly prepared here in the Earthfoods kitchen

Come on in!

Mon-Fri., 11am-3pm Commonwealth Rm., S.U.B.

Earthfoods is a student-run Collective. Kitchen volunteers welcome.

GREENOUGH SNACK BAR

Open Weekdays Evenings

All Day Saturday & Sunday

CENTRAL DORM AREA

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Debate on Klan rally melee

Nonviolence is the only answer

It all began as a very noble cause — a counter protest against the Ku Klux Klan. The Klan was planning their first rally in the nation's capitol since 1925 when over 35,000 of them had marched down Pennsylvania Ave. in a show of their political strength. It ended on a bizarre note, the protesters against the Klan wreaking a path of violence, destruction and chaos, ironically a path which the Klan had taken so many times before.

It is sad that many in our country will view this occurence as a natural phenomenon, a reaction to the Klan and the idea that such a group could again rise to political power in the U.S. This may be true, but no group whether it be anti-Klan, Nazi's, Freeze protesters, or the Klan themselves has a right to violently protest against anything in this country. Quite simply, the All-Peoples Congress, the group which sponsored the rally, broke the rules of free speech and peaceable assembly on Saturday.

John F. Hudson

Ironically these laws were created to protect the minority, a group so often downtrodden, mistreated and forgotten in this country. In the '30s, these laws allowed labor activists to rally in the streets and begin the long hard battle toward the right to unionize, a battle which would not have been won without the right to peaceable assembly. In the sixties they allowed anti-war and civil rights protesters to take to the streets, an odyssey which eventually brought about the end of the war and the passage of the Civil Rights Act, the Voting Rights Act, and the Fair Housing Act. It was the non-violent aspect of these protests which moved the politicians. If anything the violent aspects of protests often galvanized opposition to reform movements, an opposition which often reacted to violence with more violence. This snowball effect, in the end, severely hurts the protesters which so sincerely set out to change conditions in the first place.

If the protester's acts of violence and looting on Saturday was a sincere indication of minority frustration with the Reagan Administration's economic policies and a call for jobs, then they should take heart — the call has already been heard. The current lame-duck session the Congress will more than likely pass a highway jobs construction bill, a bill which will provide over 320,000 jobs in fiscal 1983. Another $5 billion dollar jobs bill has also been proposed by the Democrats. Though the second bill has a less than likely chance to pass, it symbolizes a reaction by the government to a message by the people. It wasn't a rock through the window of a business unrelated to the Klan, an over-turned car, an injured policeman or a looted store which told Congress to get moving on jobs. In the end it was the ballot box and the voting booth which moves the politicians, not mindless violence and destruction.

Lastly, in the electronic age when images and deeds would seem to speak louder than words and proclamations, the anti-Klan protesters played right into the hands of the Klansmen themselves. In blazing color the network news shows reported on the rally, running the story first and devoting a large amount of airtime to it. Picture this if you will. Close-up of 40 Klansmen, gathering in a small park in Washington. The press outnumbers them two to one. Reporters jokingly ask in a comic sense if the Klan will accept the protection of black policemen. The "press conference" breaks up in 35 minutes. The Klansmen, being safely whisked way, their march cancelled.

Now cut to three hundred screaming protesters throwing rocks, bottles and other items at rushing policeman. Cut to protesters flipping over a car, smashing its windows and raising their fists in a triumphant sign of rebellion. Cut to protesters throwing rocks through the windows of businesses. Cut to looters breaking the windows of a shop, jumping up inside and reemerging holding the spoils of their act — stereos, bikes, cameras, and other items. In this visual age, the Klan came out without a mark on the white robes they so often wear, and the protesters came out looking like common criminals, more intent on committing a felony than protesting the Klan. Score KKK 1, Anti-Klan 0 in this world of public relations and three minute T.V. images.

Last Saturday's rally was a good example of how not to protest, how not to grab the ear of Congress and how not to portray your cause to the American people. More importantly though, the protesters lost all credibility when they crossed the line between peaceful and violent protest.

"Nonviolence is the answer to the crucial political and moral questions of our time; the need for man to overcome oppression and violence without resorting to oppression and violence, the foundation of such a method is love."

— Martin Luther King Jr.

John F. Hudson is the Collegian Associate Executive Editor

Violence reflects black frustration

Unless you watched a certain television network or looked carefully through most major newspapers, you would probably not have heard about the small riot in Washington, D.C. this past weekend.

For the second time in a month, the Ku Klux Klan, the bastion of white supremacy and hate-filled racism which has been appearing more prominently lately, had scheduled a rally near the White House to demonstrate that most white people agreed with their ideals. Earlier this month, the Klan backed off and held their rally in Suburban Maryland, while several thousand people staged a counter-demonstration in the capital. This time, however, the Klan came to Washington, probably counting on the fact that the counter-demonstration would not be as large during a holiday weekend.

Ed Levine

The counter-demonstrators were there, too, although in smaller numbers than previously. They were more vocal, however, and emotions ran high, eventually leading to a rock-throwing melee between the demonstrators and police and later, amidst tear gas and the thrusts of riot police, the looting of stores and cars in the area.

But the story was not well covered. Admittedly, network newscasts carried long reports on the riots, probably because they had such spectacular footage of the police chasing people through the streets. For some reason, the press decided it was not a newsworthy event, one that lacked any significance.

Some may argue that the event was not significant since it, in reality, was just a bunch of poor black kids who had nothing better to do on a cold Saturday afternoon and saw the occasion as a good opportunity to rip off a few stores and smash some windows and hurl rocks at the cops. But it was more than that.

The Klan and other right-wing hate groups have prospered in the past couple of years, especially following the election of Ronald Reagan and the rise of the New Right. In many areas, the Klan is now fashionable, a sign that you are upset with the way bleeding-heart liberals have sold out this country and the white race. While the Klan and other groups preach white supremacy and subjugation of blacks and other minorities, governmental policies seem to be working in tandem to enhance these ideals.

While Ronald Reagan pours millions of dollars into the defense budget for such supposedly peaceful projects as dense pack MX missiles, millions are being cut from public aid budgets, directly affecting people in the inner-cities and low-income areas, namely minorities.

The national unemployment rate is more than 10 percent, even higher among blacks and teenagers. Frustrations will naturally run high when thousands of people in one deteriorating city, who are unable to get work, see a symbol of racial prosperity marching by their front doors. While parts of Washington are immaculate, with huge government buildings and official's residences shining like ornaments, the vast majority of the city is deteriorating, with unemployment and poverty a way of life.

So last Saturday when the Klan came to town, the black population of Washington, a majority of the city's residents, lost their cool. The Klan marching in front of the White House was a symbol; a symbol that the white people do come first, at the expense of second class citizens like minorities. Frustrations, long pent up, boiled to the surface and the violence erupted.

The violence that occurred in Washington, while it may be defined as "criminal" by existing laws of this society, could also be seen as a positive action, a sign of civil protest against repression. Violent protest is not necessarily negative. Sometimes, it's the only way of getting a message across. When analyzing violent protest, one must examine the reason and motivations. In Washington last weekend, there was indeed justification.

The action in Washington was a message to Reagan and the rest of the power establishment. It said the people are fed up, that they won't take attacks on their race lying down, that they will not accept the demolition of the last 25 years of civil rights struggles, which had come so far.

Ed Levine is the Collegian Managing Editor

Ignoring causes of alcohol abuse

Some years ago, I worked as a street musician in Boston. One day, as I was playing in Washington Station, a man walked up to me and asked if I would open his bottle of Wild Irish Rose for him. He was drunk, and had obviously been that way for years. When I couldn't open the bottle for him, he tried to pry it open with a large pocket knife. His hands were shaking and it took quite some time, but he finally managed to get the bottle cap off. He then started to put his knife away. However, before closing it, he drew the blade slowly and lightly across his wrist as if to cut it open. He then put the knife in his pocket and staggered away; having neither the will to live nor to take his life.

Jim Murphy

On another occasion, I had to go to a wake. It was a friend with whom I'd grown up who had been killed in an automobile accident. He and another friend were drunk and hit a tree at a high rate of speed. Upon arriving at the funeral home, it was clear that his face had been reconstructed, so that the wake could be 'open casket.'

That's reality.

A couple of weeks ago there was a report on alcohol abuse given to the Faculty Senate by the University Health Council. In it there was a number of proposals made in an effort to curb this campus' problems with alcohol abuse. Most of the recommendations were highly constructive. However, within the context of the first two recommendations, there were some subtle, anti-student attitudes implied. For example: Would the report have recommended regulating alcohol use by Faculty and Staff in their homes? It's highly doubtful; however, there was no hesitation in applying the concept to the student body.

The issue was discussed by the Undergraduate Student Senate when it reviewed the Health Council's report, and its feeling was that the problem of alcohol abuse should be treated in terms of treating its causes, rather than its more visible effects. For this reason, the Senate passed a motion, asking that the first two recommendations be reworked by the Health Council. Unfortunately, the Faculty Senate did not concur, and, during their discussion of the matter, I was witness to a contempt of the student body, on the part of a few faculty members, that was entirely shocking. In fact, I was moved to wondering what those individuals were doing at the University.

A more recent shock resulted from the myopia expressed on the editorial page of last Wednesday's Collegian. Its author followed the lead of those faculty members who condemned the 'bad student body' for its irresponsibility. How unfortunate that the author missed the entire point of the Undergraduate Senate's recommendation. More unfortunate is the fact that the author is an undergraduate, himself. However, what serves as the saddest comment upon the author, those individual faculty members, and the society as a whole is the fact that the attitude that they've expressed exists at all. It is an attitude whose approach to the problem is analagous to an attempt at curing a tuberculosis victim by gagging her/him, so that the coughing is no longer heard.

Alcohol abuse is not a disciplinary problem. It is a highly complicated social disease that demands an extensive social solution. It will never be solved by regulation, paternalism, or boorish editorials. Certainly alcohol is no excuse for destructive behavior. That is plain, and such behavior should be discouraged and dealt with strongly. But let's face it: If we think that alcohol abuse will go away as a result of efforts to track down and punish the abusers, we must be kidding ourselves.

Jim Murphy is a UMass student

Klan's roots & power spread

Editor's note: this is the second segment of a three part series on the Ku Klux Klan.

When the Ku Klux Klan re-emerged at the turn of the twentieth century, it's power and organizational network had spread immensely. The gains made by blacks and poor whites during Reconstruction were still a primary concern for the Klan; the newly integrated public school system, voting and land reforms, and other progressive acts intitiated by the post-war governments were met with fierce opposition throughout the South, and other parts of the country. In 1896, the codification of Jim Crow laws made the policies already in use by the KKK the law of the land in the South. With the government responsible for protecting white supremacy in all economic, social and political spheres, the Klan turned its attention elsewhere.

Large groups of immigrants had been coming to the States in periodic waves. Catholics, Jews, Asians, and other "aliens" immediately became a top priority on the KKK's hate list. Public sentiment, for the most part, supported this attitude of intolerance, and the Klan was soon transformed into a national organization. By the early 20's, there were an estimated four-to-ten million card-carrying members, and a large base of support among the silent majority.

Josh Meyer

Other factors contributed to the popularity of the Klan in the "Roaring Twenties." The movie epic by D.W. Griffith, "Birth of A Nation," had been released in 1915 and had grossed over $20 million by 1917. A saga of how the Klan had "Saved the South" during and after the Civil War, the movie had become an over-night sensation that set new standards for the fledgling film industry. A Congressional inquiry into Klan activities in 1921 found the problem to be an alarming one, yet adjourned without action. As one Klan leader of the time put it, "Congress gave us the best advertising we ever got...Congress made us." To give a public show of strength, 40,000 Klansmen marched past the White House to the Washington Monument in 1925. With members paying a $10 membership fee to the tax-free "Benevolent association," the Klan became a lucrative money-making machine. The size and strength of the organization, complete with many internal power struggles, caused it's downfall. By mid-Depression the Klan had gone underground.

The second Klan revival came after World War II. New Deal "welfare state" policies set in motion years before by FDR were used as a platform by the Klan. Combined with the hysteria of the Cold-War era, communism and liberalism became a unified threat to many. A growing rift between conservatives and liberals was a tool used by the Klan to seperate the country into two opposing camps. This confrontational atmoshpere became more intense as the Civil Rights movement of the fifties and sixties progressed.

By the time the Civil Rights movement had reached full force, the Klan had adopted a much more violent system of confrontational tactics. Members were responsible for thousands of killings, rape, arson and other illegal acts as usual, but now they had bombchuckers. From 1956 to 1963, the Klan was suspected of 138 bombings across the South alone. After that period, the number of incidents of this nature is estimated to have risen sharply.

In 1964, the FBI mounted an extensive effort to infiltrate subversive groups, and the KKK was their number one target. One of every five Klansmen allegedly relayed information to the government during this period, and the FBI had infiltrated the top echelons of seven of the 14 different Klan factions then in existence.

As the Seventies arrived, the Klan began to shrink in size and power, to an estimated 1,500 members in 1971. But between 1975 and 1980, the KKK experienced another explosive growth spurt. Membership had grown to nearly 12,000 members, many of whom were experts at attracting the necessary national media attention to further their interests. An example of their continued use of organized violence, along with the complicity of the police is the Greensboro, North Carolina incident of 1979. Nine klansmen and Nazi Party members were shown on film shooting down five Communist Party members. All five were acquitted by a local jury, and demands for an inquiry into the event have been unsuccesful.

Since the beginning of this decade, the Klan has spread like a plague across the country, and tomorrow we'll find out why.

Josh Meyer is a Collegian columnist

Letters

W. Germans oppose nukes

In Monday's Collegian, Timmi Rudolph makes several statements about U.S. policy regarding the "first strike" use of nuclear weapons, and the role of The Federal Republic of Germany (W. Germany) in relation to this policy.

Having lived in the Federal Republic, and having visited both West and East Berlin, I am convinced that Mr. Rudolph has made several misstatements of fact that I feel compelled to correct. His first statement, that Soviet bloc threats to West Berlin were diffused by a U.S. threat of a nuclear first strike, is false. One of the incidents to which he refers, a Soviet blockade of the city, was actually diffused by a U.S. airlift of food and supplies, to the point where the blockade became ineffective for the Soviets. It had nothing to do with nuclear weapons.

In his final paragraph Mr. Rudolph says that the West Germans' response to a U.S. policy of "no first strike" has been to emphatically oppose it. This is simply not true either. Recent changes in the West German political situation have put the right-wing CDU into the Chancellor's office, and Helmut Kohl may certainly be against any such proposal. One must look, however, at how this change came about in order to determine whether this is the view of the West German populace. The CDU did not come into power because their views suddenly became popular, but because the "Green Party" (made up of environmentalists, feminists, and people who oppose any deployment of nuclear weapons in their country has become so politically popular that they took some power away from the moderate SPD which did control the Chancellor's office. The CDU did not come to power through any vote of the West German people.

The people of West Germany (and those of East Germany as well) are on the whole quite emphatically opposed to anyone's nuclear weapons in their countries, and certainly not against a policy that would prohibit an offensive use of nuclear weapons.

Mr. Rudolph must be careful not to make misleading and untrue statements about the people of Europe, especially around a debate as important as the one around the use of nuclear weapons in Europe.

Mitch K. Gaslin
Amherst

Random Notes

We have seen them, read them and laughed at them, but to some people they are important. They are no smoking signs.

They are all around the campus. It is expected that we, as law abiding students, obey them. But are the students the only ones who should obey them? Are faculty and administrators "above the law?"

At Thursday's (Nov. 25th) Faculty Senate meeting Loren Baritz, apparently felt he was just that "above the law." In the School of Business Administration auditorium, Baritz sat in the front row before the meeting, puffing away on a cigarette while a sign hung directly in front of him which read "No Smoking."

Am I being picky? Perhaps. But, is it too much to ask that those persons on this campus who hold positions of prestige and importance, like the Provost, set an example not only for students but also for fellow employees of this university?

How can a man who does not obey a simple no smoking sign expect others to obey his orders and proposals?

Why is it that if it was a student in the SBA smoking, he or she would immediately be expected and asked to get rid of the cigarette?

A rule is a rule. And all rules, if they are to be obeyed, must be obeyed by everyone. No one, not Loren Baritz, not Joseph Duffey, not John Doe, should be exempted from obeying the law. Just because they hold high, prestigous and important positions on this campus they do not have the right to live by a different set of rules and regulations.

There was absolutely no excuse why Baritz had to sit there and smoke. He could have smoked the cigarette outside of the meeting. He had time. But he just didn't think of himself as having to obey the law.

Or perhaps Loren Baritz is unable to read. In that case, I would apologize to him. But that old cliche still holds true: Ignorance of the law is no excuse.

So Loren, the next time you light up, look around and take the time and consideration to read those small red signs. Because to some people, they are not so "meaningless."

Rita Murphy
Northeast

Collegian

Board of Editors

John Brobst Editor-in-Chief
Ed Levine Managing Editor
Stuart Sajdak Production Manager
Joel Myerson Business Manager
Lise Zeiger Executive Editor
Johanna Hosom News Editor
Cris Schuster Women's Editor
Andrew Gordon Arts Editor
Phillip Jennings Black Affairs Editor
Jim Floyd Sports Editor
Kevin Fachetti Photo Editor

WE NEED COLUMNISTS!

"The Best Chinese Food"

家滿園南湖
Hunan Garden Restaurant

MANDARIN SZECHUEN CUISINE

Luncheon Specials Take-Out Service

Every Mon.-Thurs. from 5-8

& Sunday from 11:30 - 3

For only$5.25 per person

Chicken Fried Noodles
Sweet & Sour Chicken
Pan Fried Rice
Chinese Barbecued Pork

Hot & Sour Soup
Chicken Fingers
Pan Fried Ravioli
Beef with Green Pepper

Sun.-Thurs. 11:30 a.m.-10:00 p.m.
Fri. & Sat. 11:30 a.m.-11:00 p.m.

10 Belchertown Rd., at Route 9, Amherst
256-0251 256-0252

Hypercurricula...

"Hypercurricula," a listing of events held at the University of Massachusetts and the surrounding area, is published daily in the Collegian. Events are listed on the day they will take place and are listed only once. Announcements MUST be submitted on "Hypercurricula" forms available in the Collegian office, 113 Campus Center, and returned by 3:45 P.M. Friday before the event is to be held. All submissions should be written in the same style as they appear in the paper.

"Hypercurricula" notices not submitted on the standard form and not submitted by the Friday before the week the event will take place will not be run. Due to space limitations, the Collegian cannot guarantee printing of all "Hypercurricula" notices. Priority will be given to UMass organizations.

PICKET OF CIA RECRUITERS — If you object to CIA activities or want to learn more, bring a sign and join us. 10 a.m., Hampshire House.

BROWN BAG THEOLOGY — "God's Gift of Shalom" is the discussion topic beginning the Advent season. Facilitated by Rev. Phil Ward, open to all, 12:15 to 1:15 p.m., 428 Student Union.

STUDY ABROAD IN SCANDINAVIA — An informational meeting will be held for semester and year long exchange programs in Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Finland. Slides will be shown. 3 p.m., third floor lounge, Herter.

25+ CLUB MEETING & SOCIAL — Open to all older students who will be at least 25 at the time of graduation. Help plan social events for spring semester. Election of officers. 4 p.m., Faculty Club.

FRENCH CLUB MEETING — Come to the next French Club Meeting and get involved. New members welcome. 4 p.m., third floor loung, Herter.

MEL KING: BOSTON STATE REPRESENTATIVE — a member of the Black Legislator's Caucus will speak about racism at the Undergraduate Student Senate meeting. A reception precedes the event at 6:15 in Memorial Hall. 7 p.m., 163 Campus Center.

WOMEN'S SPIRITUALITY GROUP — A group of women challenging traditional ways of experiencing spirituality in a supportive community. 7 to 9:00 p.m., 428 Student Union.

JOURNALISM CLUB MEETING — Organizational meeting will be held to discuss and plan future events. All interested students are urged to attend. We need your input. 7 p.m., Top of the Campus.

ISRAELI FOLK DANCING — Come dance to these beautiful rhythms. Everyone is welcome. 7:30 beginners, 8:30 all others. Commonwealth Room, Student Union.

WHITE-WASH: THE EFFECTS OF RACISM ON HISTORY — The movie "Black History: Lost, Stolen or Strayed" will be shown and Homer Meade of the Afro-Am Studies Dept. will speak about W.E.B. DuBois. 8 p.m., 124 Hasbrouck.

FREE CONCERT: JAZZ ENSEMBLE 1 and UNIVERSITY WIND ENSEMBLE — The 27-member Jazz Ensemble 1, directed by Jeff Holmes, and the University Wind Ensemble, directed by Malcolm W. Rowell, Jr., will perform in a free concert. 8 p.m., Bowker Auditorium, Stockbridge.

Americans, Israel, and Peace

The peoples of the United States and Israel share common ideals, values, and spiritual roots. Both governments are committed to democracy, justice, human rights and freedoms. WE AFFIRM OUR UNYIELDING SUPPORT FOR THE STATE OF ISRAEL and recognize its right to live within secure and recognized boundries free from the threat or act of force. We feel that it is essential for the Congress and the Administration to continue the bi-partisan policies which enhance the economic stability and the military seciurity of the State of Israel. These policies are clearly beneficial to both Americans and Israelis.

In light of this consensus, we commemorate the November 29, 1947 United Nations resolution in which the world community joined is in supporting the establishment of the Jewish State. We regret the state of war that has enveloped the nations of the Middle East for more than three decades. We call on Israel's neighbors to end their continued rejection and invite them to join all peace-loving people in an effort to make the dream of peaceful coexistence a reality.

The following people stand by the above doctrine:

Mark Altheim
Carl Goldstein
Neil Smith
Brian Wilk
Heather Steniford
Nancy Kaplan
Donna Appelstein
Judy Marino
Marcia Marget
Larry Smith
Michael Maron
Karen Teicher
Alison Klein
Andy Stein
Mike Freiberg

Cindy Bloomer
Lisa Disraeli
Debbie Propper
Danny Siegel
Lisa Osofsky
Jeff Rosenberg
Mike Dornfeld
Sherry Kleinman
John Rosenberg
Dave Dubinsky
Ira Roppaport
Gene Litchner
Rob Chernick
Elizabeth Walher
Allen Resnick

Rose Gershon
J.R. Chase
Jeff Leichter
Liz Weiss
John Parritz
Karen Wattman
Suzanne Sill
Liz Kraus
Barry Safchik
Todd Klepper
Dave Feiven
Andy Block
Riki Nisim
Jay Peltz
Avi Landau

John Markowitz
Sue Jacobs
Jeff Klepper
Rob Ostrovsky
Rick Ostrovsky
Harlan Mandel
Larry Ostroff
Steve Shallop
Ilan Ben-Arush
Richard Kirschen
Charley Levine
Steve Liebowitz
Donna Ackerman
Barbara Grancell-Frank
Andy Symans

Arts

Fripp and Summers pool talents on new LP

Robert Fripp of King Crimson fame is half the genius behind I Advance Masked.

I ADVANCED MASKED (Epic)
Robert Fripp and Andy Summers

By DAVID CHEVAN
Collegian Staff

About a year ago I read an interview with the Police's Andy Summers in Rolling Stone in which he described an exciting solo project he was working on with Robert Fripp from King Crimson. His only fear was that Epic, the label he records for, would choose not to release the project. Epic's concern was that an album of such an experimental nature might damage the reputation the Police had built.

I Advanced Masked, the recorded results of the Fripp/Summers project, has finally been released and it is easily worth whatever pressure Summers may have given his company. All the instruments are played by either Fripp or Summers and the sounds they create are hard to describe. Robert Fripp is one of the most respected rock guitarists to have emerged from the late 60's/early 70's post-Hendrix period of rock. The combination of Fripp's frantic atonal guitar with Summers' swirling synthesized chords create waves of music unlike anything else in modern music. Guitar sounds like those used on the most recent Police album, Ghosts in the Machine, are prevalent.

This album is a listening record; there is no conventional dance music on it. However, if you are familiar with any of Fripp's or Summers' work, it is worth the listen. Songs like "Painting and Dancing" take two simple guitar lines and juxtapose them in odd ways that create new melodies I don't think either guitarist expected to find. The title cut, I Advanced Masked, combines some of the most typical King Crimson/Police riffs with overdubbed African drumming. The sound is reminiscent of demented sixties jazz fusion, but the playing is far more virtuostic.

This music is not rock, jazz or any form of music I'm readily familiar with. I guess the popular label for this might be art music, but these days that has negative connotations. The best label for this music is different. If you need a Christmas present for your favorite Police fan, I Advanced Masked might be just the gift.

Andy Summers of the Police is the other half.

Larry Keith in Mass Appeal, playing at Stage West through December 11. Look for a review in tomorrow's Collegian.

Play by Play

by Pam Madnick

The five-college area has much to offer this week in theatre.

Connie Stevens stars in the Broadway musical I'm Getting My Act Together and Taking It On The Road tonight at the FAC. The musical compresses the problem of a liberated woman in rehearsal for a nightclub act. The performance begins at 8 p.m. Tickets are $20, 18, 16 for the general public and half-price for students.

The Two by Stuart Browne will be presented as "a work in progress" at the Hampshire College's Performing Arts Center. Throughout the development of the play, Browne worked closely with Theatre III, a workshop class at Hampshire College. The Two is concerned with the inner and outer worlds of Chang and Eng, the original Siamese Twins. It will be presented Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday and December 9, 10 and 11. Tickets are $2.50 for the general public.

The Amherst College One-Act Play Festival begins this weekend. Students will perform The Saliva Milkshake by Howard Brenton, Good Neighbors by John Bartholomew Tucker, String by Alice Childress and Action by Sam Shepard. The festival will be held Friday through Sunday at Fayerweather Theatre, Amherst College. Tickets are $1.

Owners by Caryl Churchill opens Friday at Smith College. Presented by the Department of Theatre, Owners tells a story about a butcher, a realtor, a mystic, a housewife and a suicidal clerk and expresses each of their philosophies on life. The play runs December 4, 9, 10, 11, 17 and 18. Tickets are $4 for the general public and $2 for students. Dollar night is Thursday, December 9.

Homeland will be presented Thursday, Friday and Saturday by the UMass Third World Theatre Series. Written by Steve Friedman and Selaelo Maredi, Homeland compares life in South Africa to life in America. The show begins at 8 p.m. in the Hampden Theatre at UMass.

The University Ensemble Theatre ends their 1982 season with a production of A Day in the Life of Joe Egg by Peter Nichol. Joe Egg is a black comedy about a husband and wife who feel haunted by their daughter because of their pre-marital indiscretions. The play opens next Tuesday in the Curtain Theatre at 8 p.m. Tickets are $2.50 for the general public and $1.50 for students and senior citizens and are available in the Rand Theatre Box Office, FAC.

The Long Christmas Dinner by Thornton Wilder will be performed by the Holyoke Community College Drama Dept. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. A matinee performance will be performed December 5 at 2 p.m.

Theorist, critic, teacher, editor, author, producer and director Richard Schechner will speak on "Whatever Happened to the 60's Avant Garde?" on Friday, December 3 at 1:10 p.m. in the Green Room at Smith College. Schechner was active in the founding of the Performance Group of New York City during the Sixties. he is the former editor of the Drama Review.

Calamity Jane by Steve Wangh will be presented by Present Stage Friday, Saturday and Sunday and December 10, 11, and 12. This story tells of a woman who becomes a legend in her own time. Performances begin at 8 p.m. at 19 Hawley St., Northampton.

The Easthampton Theatre Association will perform Equus, a psychological drama about a psychiatrist and his patient, who blinded six horses in a horribly violent event. Equus runs Thursday, Friday and Saturday and December 9, 10, and 11 at the Williamston Theatre on Payson Avenue in Easthampton.

Mass Appeal, a comedy, continues at Stage West, in West Springfield, through December 11. This play centers around an older priest who caters his actions to his congregation's wants rather than his own beliefs and a young deacon who tries desperately to understand the older priest, but can't

Head for the Mountains

UMASS SKI CLUB
Killington
Sat. Dec. 4
Includes:
bus, refreshments, lift ticket
$23

SKI NOW, PAY LATER
(financing available)
Aspen, Colorado
SKI WEEK Jan 8-15
This Deluxe Vacation Includes:

- ☐ Round Trip Air, Scheduled Non-Stop Service from Boston, NYC, Phila. or Wash. to Denver
- ☐ Round Trip Bus Transfers to Aspen
- ☐ Deluxe Slope-Side Accommodations for 7 Nights, Tax Included
- ☐ Six-Day Lift Ticket Good at Aspen Mountain, Snowmass, and Buttermilk

Deluxe Slopeside Shadow Mountain Condominiums
Featuring fully equipped kitchen, maid service, fireplace, color TV, heated pool, sauna, and skiing out your door.
$659 per person
or
Woodstone Hotel Package
Located right on the mountain next to the lift, featuring: heated pool, jacuzzi, sauna, maid service, apres ski atmosphere.
$599 per person
non-members welcome

11th Annual BUSH BASH
SUGARBUSH VALLEY VERMONT
SKI & PARTY WEEK
Jan 23 - 28
Includes: lifts, lodging meals, free beer & wine parties hot tub party, etc, etc
ONLY $189 tax & gratuities included
THE BEST VACATION YOU'LL EVER HAVE
non-members welcome

Contact your Ad Rep
Deadline is Dec. 3

U.R.U. ANNOUNCES SPECIAL CHRISTMAS HOURS
DEC 6 to DEC 17: 6:30-9:30 TUES-THURS. P.M.!
Season's Greetings & Savings
LOOK FOR UPCOMING HOLIDAY SPECIALS THIS MONTH AT 201 SUB 545-0400
Juliet Records Unlimited
M-F 10-5

MDI/WORD LINK
Word Processing
. . . 253-9534 . . .
37 So. Pleasant St., Amherst
(above Matthews Shoes)
Need an Interview?
25 resumes 25 cover letters/envelopes
$40.00 certain restrictions apply
TRY OUR RESUME SERVICES

Gifts & Cards for the Holiday Season at
A.J. HASTINGS
Newsdealer and Stationer
45 S. Pleasant St., Amherst

Wednesday
Pub Mug Night
35¢ Beers
- Pub Mugs -
Music by Rack-A-Disc 9-1
No cover
THE PUB
15 East Pleasant St.
AMHERST

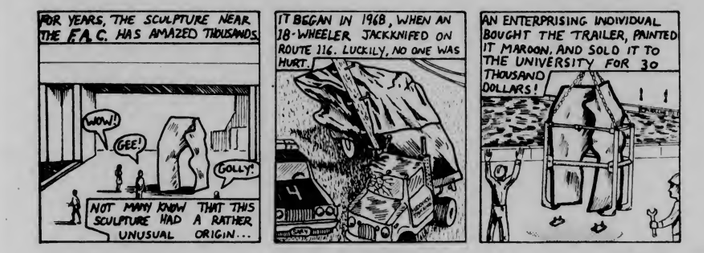
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
Entertainment at its Best
Lotte Goslar's
PANTOMIME CIRCUS
Thursday, December 9 8:00 pm
BIG SIX of JAZZ II
with Billy Taylor, Max Roach, Slide Hampton, Richard Davis, Jimmy Heath and John Hendricks
Saturday, December 11
8:00 p.m.
MC, VISA-CHARGE YOUR TICKETS TODAY
Telephone reservations Noon-4:00 p.m. M-F
545-2511
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall

Mount Snow Vermont Tours
"Presents"
SKI SEMESTER
Collegiate Ski Weeks
6 Days 5 Nights
Jan. 2-7, 1983 Jan. 16-21, 1983
Jan. 9-14, 1983 Jan. 23-28, 1983
at Mount Snow Vermont
$179.00 per person Quad occupancy
$50.00 deposit required
Package includes:
* 5 nights lodging
* A gala welcome party
* Five day lift tickets at Mt Snow ski area
* Five full skiers' breakfasts
* Four full course dinners
* Ski tour guide & host
* And so much more!
* Welcome Get-Together Party * Beer Bash Wine & Cheese Party * Fondue Party * Horse-Drawn Sleigh Ride * Movies * And so much more
"The Mountain of Fun, MT Snow Vermont"
All Rates Subject to 5% State Tax and 15% Hotel Gratuity Service Charge
Mount Snow Vermont Tours
PO Box 571, Route 100
West Dover, Vermont 05356
802-464-2076

CHIROPRACTIC FOR BETTER HEALTH
Dr. Virginia Harper DC
Dr. Howard Ewert DC
CHIROPRACTORS
Tendonitis Problems
If you have a muscular pain in any part of your body, it may be caused by a condition known as tendonitis (inflammation of a tendon).
The joints in your body, in addition to bone and muscle, include tendons. These are fibrous cords that attach the muscle to the bone. When a tendon becomes inflamed, it can cause pain as sharp as that associated with bursitis. The cause may be excessive stress caused by muscles out of balance.
Every joint has muscles that must work in unison for normal joint movement. As some of the muscles contract or tighten, others relax, and this should happen at the right time and with the right amount of pressure. If the muscles are out of balance, this can result in excessive stress on the tendons, causing irritation and inflammation.
Treatment to restore muscle balance and to check for any misalignments in the spine and nervous system may eliminate the source of the problem and the pain.
In the interest of better health from the office of:
Amherst Chiropractic Center
190 University Drive at Route 9, 256-6700

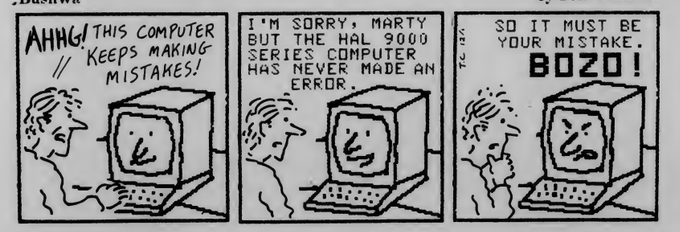
Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

The UMass Zone By Mark Rollins



Under The Influence By M. Joyce

Bushwa by Tom Cushwa



Bloom County By Berke Breathed

D.C. MENU

LUNCH
Hamburg on Roll
Eggroll/Duc Sauce
Soy Sauce

DINNER
Roast Top Round of Beef/ Mushroom Sauce
Baked Cod with Lemon Slice
Squash Bake

BASICS LUNCH
Golden Burgers
Eggroll/Duc Sauce,
Soy Sauce

BASICS DINNER
Baked Cod with Lemon Slice
Squash Bake

Reporters Needed

The Collegian needs reporters to cover campus and area news and women's affairs. All interested students are welcome to come and work for the Collegian, the area's largest daily college newspaper. No experience is needed and we provide training. Great experience for journalism or communications majors or anyone interested in the media. Stop by the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, anytime during the day and ask for an editor.

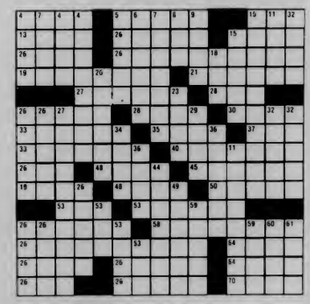
CROSSWORD

Edited by Margaret Farrar and Trude Jaffe

©1982 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

ACROSS
1 Place for corn
5 China name
10 Advanced deg
13 Partner of now
14 Famous Justice of Lincoln's era
15 Graf —
16 Matinee —
17 Holmes' word
19 Becomes gelid
21 Hits a homer
22 Write
24 Cockney residence
25 Purim villain
28 Statistician's need
30 ABA members
33 Straightens
35 Hindu deity
37 Retirement acct. of a type
38 Prayer books
40 British party
42 Wagner heroine
43 Blackbirds
45 Channel near Isle of Wight (with "The")
46 Medieval worker
48 Bks. of the Douay Bible
50 Penlous
51 Tease
53 Aids for scholars
55 Barrel parts
58 Not open minded
62 Bissful periods
64 Seine tributary
65 Energy units
66 Molded metal
67 — — East
68 Scottish river
69 Youngsters
70 Revive, as wine

DOWN
1 Stylish
2 Make over
3 Hot item
4 Europeans
5 Word with bed or home
6 Unhealthy looking
7 Certain restaurant rating
8 Opponent of Rep
9 Potato parts
10 Motorist's needs
11 Waxed
12 Tunisian rulers
15 Leaf aperture
18 Sgt. or Cpl
20 Group of nine
23 Relative of etc.
25 Harness parts
26 Man — !
27 Adjust improperly
29 Parisian buddies
31 Piece of leather for one glove
32 Like brine
34 Bidder's choice, at cards
36 Cuts a flight short
39 Booty
41 Droppings of vowels
44 Symbol of miserliness
47 Basketball teams
49 Piece of ordinance
52 Turkish official
54 Finds a home
55 Place for tools
56 Rushed
57 Tarnish, Scot
59 Legislative body
60 Hunter, in Genesis
61 Skin: Prefix
63 Late show time



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

C	A	S	E		C	O	O	S		H	A	W
O	D	E	R		A	N	N	U	M	E	R	IE
V	E	R	T		B	E	N	T		A	G	RO
E	S	S	AY		S	O	R	A		D	U	ES
		S	T	A	R	S		P	A	N	G	LED
P	U	L	A	P		A	T	O	E		S	TIR
A	L	A		S	N	A	P	S		A	S	SET
G	I	R	D		U	R	T	I	E		S	TIR
E	A	S	E	S		S	N	A	K	E		MA
		B	U	S			R	E	F	E	R	E
	S	H	O	O	T	I	N	G	S	T	A	R
S	W	A	N		A	S	I	A		S	T	OP
L	I	B	R	A		G	L	O	Z	E		SURE
A	N	T	I		S	A	B	E	R		U	TES
P	E	T	E	R			M	E	R	E		PEN

Weather

Today, becoming cloudy with rain likely in the afternoon. Highs 50 to 55. Occasional rain tonight. Lows 35 to 45. Tomorrow, rain ending in the morning, then mostly cloudy. Highs in the lower to mid 50s.

CABLE/VIDEO

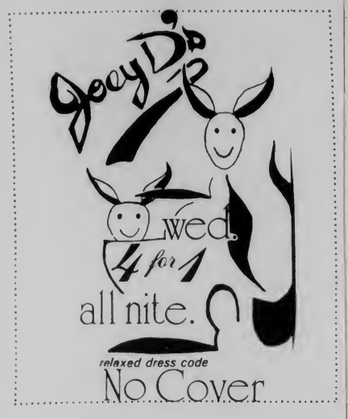
Saint Patrick's Day Warm-Up

10:30 - 12:30 Sean Sands, Brought to you by the Radical Student Union
12:30 - 2:00 Bernadette Devlin-McAliskey speaking at UMass

WMUA 91.1 FM

6-9	Good Morning Amherst with Teresa
9-12	Spiral Scratch with Art Failure
12-3	Menarche with Michelle
3-5:30	Mary Kelly Beat the Beat
5:30-6	Newswatch
6-7	Sportscafe
7-10	Paula T — Modern Rock
10-2	Terpsichorean Cacophony with James Neill
2-6	Glory Gospel Road with Rev Pearson

Earthfoods
Pizza
Carob Brownies
Gypsy Soup
Green Salad



Another writer's bowl predictions

By RUSS WHINNEM
Collegian Correspondent

The final bids are in, the invitations accepted, and the preparations have begun. We're on the cage of bowl season in college football and it's time for this sports writer to go out on a limb and make some predictions.

THE ORANGE BOWL
NEBRASKA 29 LSU 20

Those Cornhuskers are too tough in this one. They looked good against another bowl team, Oklahoma last week. Besides, I've liked Nebraska ever since they won the national championship with tear-away shirted Johnny Rogers years ago. It was the first bet I ever won with my Grandfather.

THE ROSE BOWL
UCLA 21 MICHIGAN 17

The Bruins are in their own backyard, in their own stadium, in front of their own fans. I always did want to go to UCLA.

THE SUGAR BOWL
GEORGIA 23 PENN ST. 22

This will be a bowl watchers delight. Penn State is awesome and very hungry for their first national championship. But somewhere in the back of my mind I hear a chant. It starts out softly and becomes a roar. Herschel, Herschel, Herschel.....

MIRAGE BOWL
CLEMSON 21 WAKE FOREST 17

This one is uncanny, I saw it in a dream one night. 80,000 people will pay 50 dollars a ticket and be given a team to root for. I just can't be wrong on this one.

THE TANGERINE BOWL
BOSTON COLLEGE 24 AUBURN 14

Only those from Natick Ma. and the people from third Wheeler know why I'm pickin' the Eagles. Hi Brian.

ALOHA BOWL
MARYLAND 14 WASHINGTON 10

How soon people forget that the Huskies were once ranked number one.

THE FIESTA BOWL
OKLAHOMA 27 ARIZONA ST. 17

The Sun Devils are also home for this one, but Oklahoma has the edge. His name is Marcus Dupree. Say it to yourself. Marcus Dupree. The name itself suggests a great running back.

THE HALL OF FAME BOWL
VANDERBILT 19 AIRFORCE 6

How did Air Force ever get into a bowl game?!!

Intramural notices

Intramural hockey entries for the spring season are due today, Wednesday, in the intramural office.

Basketball entries are still being accepted and there is a need for women to form 3 on 3 basketball teams. The 3 on 3 league starts play on Monday.

The volleyball playoffs will start tomorrow night at 6:30 p.m. in Boyden Gym and the racquetball playoffs will start on Friday. Spectators are welcome to attend and watch the games.

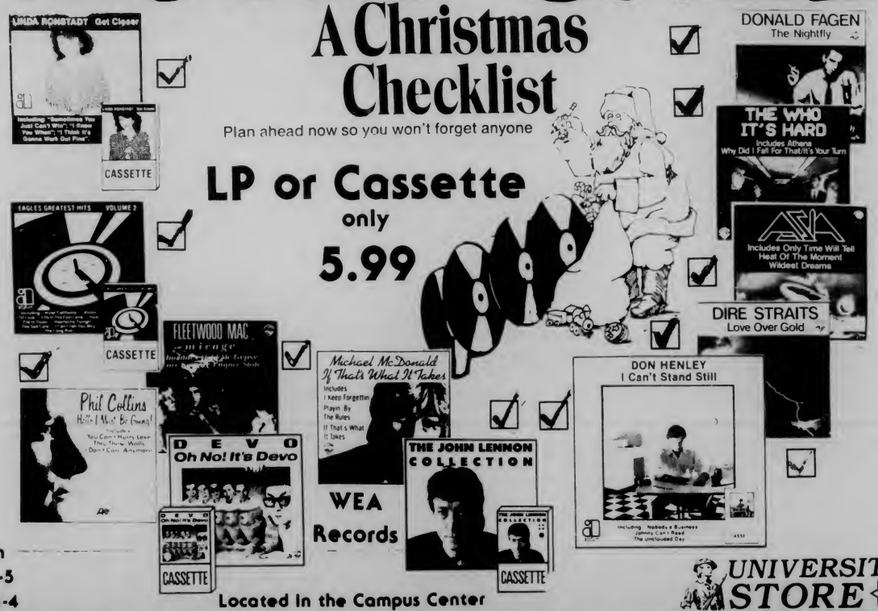
— TONY BETROS

RECORD SALE

A Christmas Checklist

Plan ahead now so you won't forget anyone

LP or Cassette only 5.99



Open
M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4

Located in the Campus Center

UNIVERSITY STORE

THE CALVIN THEATRE

Full House Productions Inc. presents
THE MOTELS
"only area appearance"

Thursday
Dec. 2
2 shows
7:00 & 10:00 pm

tickets available at "For the Record" (Faces) in Amherst Main St. Records, Northampton, Platterpus Records, Northampton and at the Calvin Theatre Box Office Located at the Calvin Theatre in Northampton

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday - Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10 % • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?

Rockadisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

ATTORNEY GENERAL SEARCH

STUDENT ATTORNEY GENERAL applications are now being accepted for this paid position. For more information and an application go to rm 432 S.U.B. and pick up a packet. ALL STUDENTS ARE ENCOURAGED TO APPLY! Applications are due by Wed 12/1/82 at 4:00 p.m. The S.G.A. is an affirmative action, equal opportunity employer

AUTO FOR SALE

76 Plymouth Volare automatic slant 6. Good condition dependable! Asking $1,500 Call 665-4284

69 Firebird convertible - A classic. Needs engine work and some minor body work. Easily restorable to mint cond. BO around 2000. Call nights 256-0435

1970 Opal $100 needs much work 546-7706 after 7:00

1978 Toyota Corolla SR5 liftback A/FM stereo, air condit, headers excellent gas mileage mint condit BEST OFFER 546-4366

BELLYGRAMS!!

Delivered by professional bellydancer for most unusual gift. Thereza 253-7822

BROWNIEGRAMS

Three flavors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

DRYCLEANING

Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Way. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ENTERTAINMENT

For the best professional DJ with a superior sound system at the cheapest rate call Peter 546-7504

Having a Party? Call Tempest live R & R John 546-5211 Scot 1 562-0343

MOVIE James Bond Goldfinger Wed 12/2 SUB 7/9/11

Great Parties/Dances/Formals need great Dance Music. Call POLODROID DJ's and ask about our awesome light show. Pat or John 253-2957

MAX CREEK at the Rusty Nail Thurs Dec 2 A RUMOUR IN THEIR OWN TIME

Free kittens 1 m and 1 f trained 256-6064

FOR RENT

Nice two bedroom townhouse apartment available immediately. On bus route, three miles from center, wall to wall carpeting and large storage space. Call Mike 253-2741 or 256-6496 at work

Three bedroom house for spring semester 2 miles from center, on bus route. 253-2763

FOR SALE

GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972

WHO Tix Dec 11 Centrum best offer evenings 549-5289

Why rent? Buy a fridge, only $60, 6-8068

Squirrel coat full length $40.00 549-1143 good condition

Womens ski boots Nordica, size 9. In excellent condition. Worn once. 253-5980

"Rick" 4001 Bass, black $400 Acoustic 360 Bass Amp 200W $200 Alex 6-7135

Sweater Ladies Return! Gifts - new samples 40% off retail 12/2 & 12/3 Campus Center cash only

FOUND

Gloves on franzy, 29 Nov, 2 pm call John 665-2484

HELP WANTED

Business Manager Union Records bookkeeping experience helpful. Preferably junior status or below. 10 hrs/week $4.00/hr. W.S. or Non. Pick up applications at U.R.U start training Dec 6.

Assistant Business Manager at the Collegian. Business major preferred but not a requirement. Low pay, great experience. Apply at the Collegian by Dec. 8. An equal opportunity employer.

Winter Vacation Jobs promoting ecology, consumer issues and safe energy. The Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG) is hiring staff for winter session and full-time positions. Will train. $135-$225/wk BOSTON area only. Elise 256-6434

LESBIAN AND GAY

Are you Gay? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2645 or drop in CC 106

LOST

2 keys on red, white, and blue key ring. Reward. Call 6-7823

Chem. Research notebook lost 11/20. Call 665-7721 Reward R. Dufresne

Lost - one old, worn, tattered and faded Levi jacket. Lost last Thursday night at Hanger One during Johnny Copeland show. Coat has torn elbows and Ronald McDonald pin. If you picked it up by mistake, please call Drew at 256-0391. Reward will be given for return, coat has extreme sentimental value.

PERSONALS

Karen! (Ayda) Happy B-day Sis! (ha! ha!) No more fake ID's kid (woo-woo!) Have fun and go wild! Love Shirl! (ha! ha!)

JCW Now we can say we went to HARVARD and played blow ball! Who'd ever thought such a game existed, I sure didn't! Are we MOTEL bound Thursday night or what? VMC

To Jay in our PoliSci 362, we think you're cute!!!

Yearbook Staff Therewill be a meeting of all staff members on wed 12/1 at 6:30 RSVP Sheila 5-0321

JLE - Today is the day love, Mugga

RAT, Happy 22nd Birthday! Get psyched for Saturday night. . .it will be fun. Your little sister

Boston Representative Mel King here on campus December 1st 6:00 reception Memorial Hall 7:30 lecture at Campus Center 163 Racism and Public Higher Education

Saint and Diz need dates for Rugby Banquet 12/3 Joey D's will trade good looks for a good time call 256-6747

Daar Mark, Happy 20th Birthday. Lets make it special. I love you. Anne

Nancy - Happy 20th birthday, the day after! How va feelin'? Get psyched for Pat! - Brunettie

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Dissertations, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

Ride Needed to SMU and back on Fri Dec 3rd. Call Jill 6-9354

Ride needed this weekend to/from URI-Providence leaving Fri,sat returning late Sun, early Mon either way Gregg 6-4356

ROOM WANTED

Females looking for a room or whole 2 bedroom apt in Brittany Manor for spring semester. Please call 549-5586. Keep trying.

Single room and/or willing to share a room for Jan & Spring semester. Must be close to campus & on bus route. Preferably Townehouse or Brandywine. Call 549-5990 Mike keep trying

ROOMMATE WANTED

2 Roommates wanted to share large bedroom in spacious S. Amh. Apt. only $80 ea avail immediately call 253-5012

2 Bedrooms in 4 bedroom apt available Jan 1 $165/month. call 253-5218

Spring: two persons for two connected rooms in small two bedroom. $125 each including heat! Russell, evenings 549-6647.

Female wanted to share bedroom in So Amherst Apt starting Jan 1 call 253-5604

Kosher female for one bedroom in two bedroom Southwood townhouse 253-7031

Roommate needed to share room in 2 room apt. Brit Manor $112 a month excludes elec. call ray 253-7918

1 or 2 females for a large bedroom in a 3 bedroom Gilreath Manor apt 549-1377

Housemate wanted beautiful log cabin in Leverett wood heat available now Cindy 256-6434

Looking for male to share one bedroom apartnebt in Puffton for spring call paul 549-6411

Two people wanted for one bedroom Puffton apartment starting January call 549-1643

Roommate wantad to share furnished Brittany Manor apartment over intersession $115 + utilities heat included 253-3581

Two women needed for Puffton apt one for single room and one needed to share large double call 549-5487

Starting Jan 1, one male remaining in 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt 2 or 3 possible openings up for grabs for more info call Arty or Gene 256-8987

SERVICES

Writing assistance. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729

SPEEDY TYPING SERVICE
24 hour typing at reasonable rates.
For professional service call Jim 546-7042

Moving? Our 12 foot enclosed cube truck will help you safely move your stuff 256-0480

TO SUBLET

Spring semester, one bedroom in 6 bedroom house, living room, dining room, laundry and kitchen facilities; close to campus, on bus route. 150 +, Call Paul after 6 pm 549-5586

Woman wanted to share room in apt Feb great deal for info please call 665-7109

Intersession rental Puffton Village $150 utilities included Tony 549-6802

WANTED TO BUY

Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for an apartmant in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093

Sublet or take lease in Puffton spring semester Amy 253-3401

OLDER STUDENTS
25 + CLUB PARTY
• LIVE MUSIC
• CASH BAR
THURS. DEC. 2 7 PM
CAMPUS CENTER 10th FLOOR
FREE ADMISSION • FREE MUNCHIES

Dastardly Dans
Mon - Thurs
$3.00 Cover
FREE DRAFT
9 - closing
50¢ Highballs
50¢ Domestic Beers
Pool Table - Pinball - Video Games
POOL TOURNAMENT TONIGHT

MAKE YOUR MARK. Make it hard to erase.

Your college years can be more significant than an endless stream of late nights, term papers and fee receipts. As a Christian, you can make an indelible impact on your world.

Discover more about God's exciting plan for your life at the 1982 Christmas Conference. You'll learn how you can have an impact on the lives of others. That's a mark that's hard to erase.

Send in this coupon for a brochure and registration form.

Sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ International.

Yes! Send me a brochure.
Name
Address
City
State ZIP
Mail to Glenn S. Carter
167 E. Hadley Rd., Amherst, Mass 01002
or call 413 256-0660

Sports

There will be a mandatory sports staff meeting tonight, Wednesday, at 7:00 at the Collegian. New writers are welcome.

Zulu wins National Championship

Defense leads the way for women's ultimate frisbee

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

AUSTIN, TEXAS — It wasn't easy but Zulu, the University of Massachusetts Women's ultimate frisbee team, overcame all the obstacles in their path as they won their first national championship, Sunday afternoon.

The Northeast champions lost only once in the double-elimination tournament and played some of their best frisbee of the year in taking the national crown.

Zulu toppled the Fisheads 12-8 in a close and tight finals match. It was the second time in the tournament that Zulu had beaten the squad from Michigan State.

It wasn't a easy road to the finals as the UMass women had four tough matches before getting into the Finals.

Zulu opened their tourney championship drive with a 14-7 win over the Air Waves, of Atlanta, GA. in heavy rain. The rains left the fields slick and full of mud puddles, but it didn't slow down Zulu.

"The weather was horrendous," said captain Donna Levine. "It was colder in Texas than it was in New England. It was raining and it was 40 degrees out and windy."

Zulu eked out a close 13-12 in overtime in their next match with Dark Star from Eugene, Oregon. The match was tied 12-12 at the end of regulation before Zulu scored the winning goal, in OT.

Zulu was down by two goals with two minutes to go, in regulation , but they didn't panic. They simply went to work.

"The match was so evenly matched because Dark Star was just as experienced as we were," said Levine. "Their catching and defensive ability was equal to ours. It came down to who was stronger at the end." That match was also played in Friday's rains.

On Saturday, Zulu dropped their only match of the weekend, to UVA from the University of Virginia. UVA gave Zulu a lot of trouble as they employed a press to shut down the Massachusetts team enroute to a 11-6 win. It was the first time this year that Zulu had seen the press.

Zulu closed up play on Saturday with an impressive 13-11 win over the previously undefeated Fisheads.

The finals match was held on Sunday in Tony Berga Stadium before 500 spectators in Austin and it was much closer than Saturday's match. Both teams entered the match with 3-1 records.

The crucial factor was, again, the weather. It wasn't the cold rain, but the wind. It was very windy in the stadium and it forced both teams to fall back on their defenses.

The Fisheads took an early 2-0 lead but Zulu closed the gap to 2-1 before the Michigan based squad scored again to up the score to 3-1.

But, then the tough Zulu defense got hot and the Zulu offense responded with two goals to give Zulu a 3-3 tie at the half.

"It was our defense that held us up," said Levine. "It was like a metal shield. The wind gave both teams problems with their offenses and it came down to who could play better defense."

The Northeast champs, known for their explosive second halves, came out flying. Zulu got their passing game under control and that was the deciding factor as Zulu defeated the Fisheads 12-8 for the national championship.

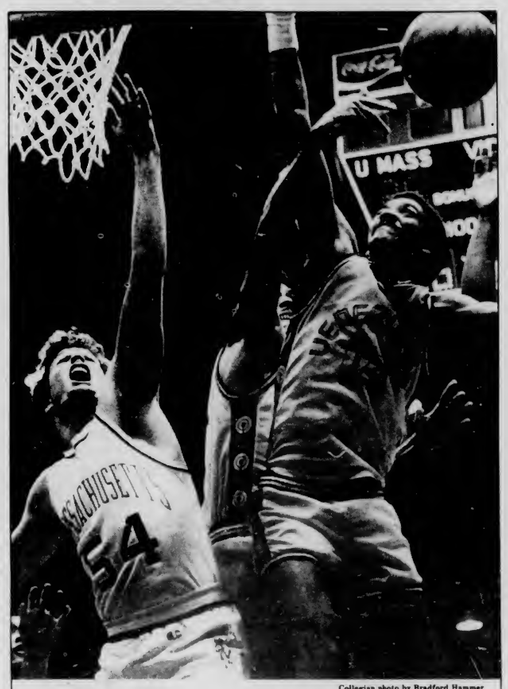
Levine led the team in the finals with some outstanding play along with teammates Sue Hawkins, Lesile Dale, Kate Noonan, and Amy DeVeuve.

It was the Zulu defense that kept the Massachusetts team going throughout the championship tournament. With the weather being sub-par for much of the weekend, the teams had to fall back upon their defenses because the offenses just could not get going in the bad conditions.

"It was a lot of fun," remarked Levine. It should have. Zulu won because they had the talent to outlast their opponents and were not single-faced. They had a good offense and a good defense.

Being multi-talented and "more powerful at the end of the game" according to Levine, catapulted Zulu over Dark Star and the Fisheads.

The championship capped off an extremely productive year for the UMass women, who call themselves King of the Hill for a year.



Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

George Ramming competes with Ivan Olivares of Venezuela in last week's exhibition win. UM didn't win against UNH last night, dropping a close one, 63-60.

AP Laserphoto

The Washington Redskins are the only undefeated team left in pro football thanks to a 13-9 win over Philadelphia last Sunday. The Redskins have been making the big plays. Here, Perry Harrington (35) fumbles the ball and Perry Brooks (69) and Neal Olkewicx (52) of Washington are ready to recover.

Minutemen falter as New Hampshire wins

By JIM FLOYD
Collegian Staff

DURHAM, N.H. — Inexperience played a key role last night as the University of New Hampshire handed the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team a season opening loss, 63-60.

UMass held a 51-42 lead midway through the second period but was unable to hold on as UNH, led by senior guard Robin Dixon and senior center Joe Rainis, came back and evened the score at sixty apiece and pulled ahead to win.

In the first half, playing without stellar guard Al McClain, who was out with an ankle injury, New Hampshire jumped out early on the Minutemen, 22-17, but UMass dug in.

Led by eight straight Donald Russell first half points, and the consistent play of Bobby Braun, Skip Connors, and John Hempel, UMass climbed into the drivers seat when they took the lead at the 28-26 with little over four minutes remaining in the first half.

By halftime, the lead had expanded to 35-31 in the Minutemen's favor.

In the second half, Massachusetts appeared to have put everything together as their pressure defense caused several UNH turnovers and a nine point lead was eventually built up.

But as will happen with a young team, UMass began to cough up several turnovers of their own and the veteran Wildcats capitalized.

The Minutemen did have a chance to tie the game at 62 apiece with 13 seconds remaining but a Russell layup bounced off the rim and into the hands of Wildcat defender Karl hicks. hicks had one final free throw to create the final score.

UMass was led in scoring by Edwin Green, who scored 14 points, 12 in the first half. Green was followed by Hempel with 12 and Russell with 10.

Dan Nolan led UNH with 18 points and was followed by Rainis who finished with 15.

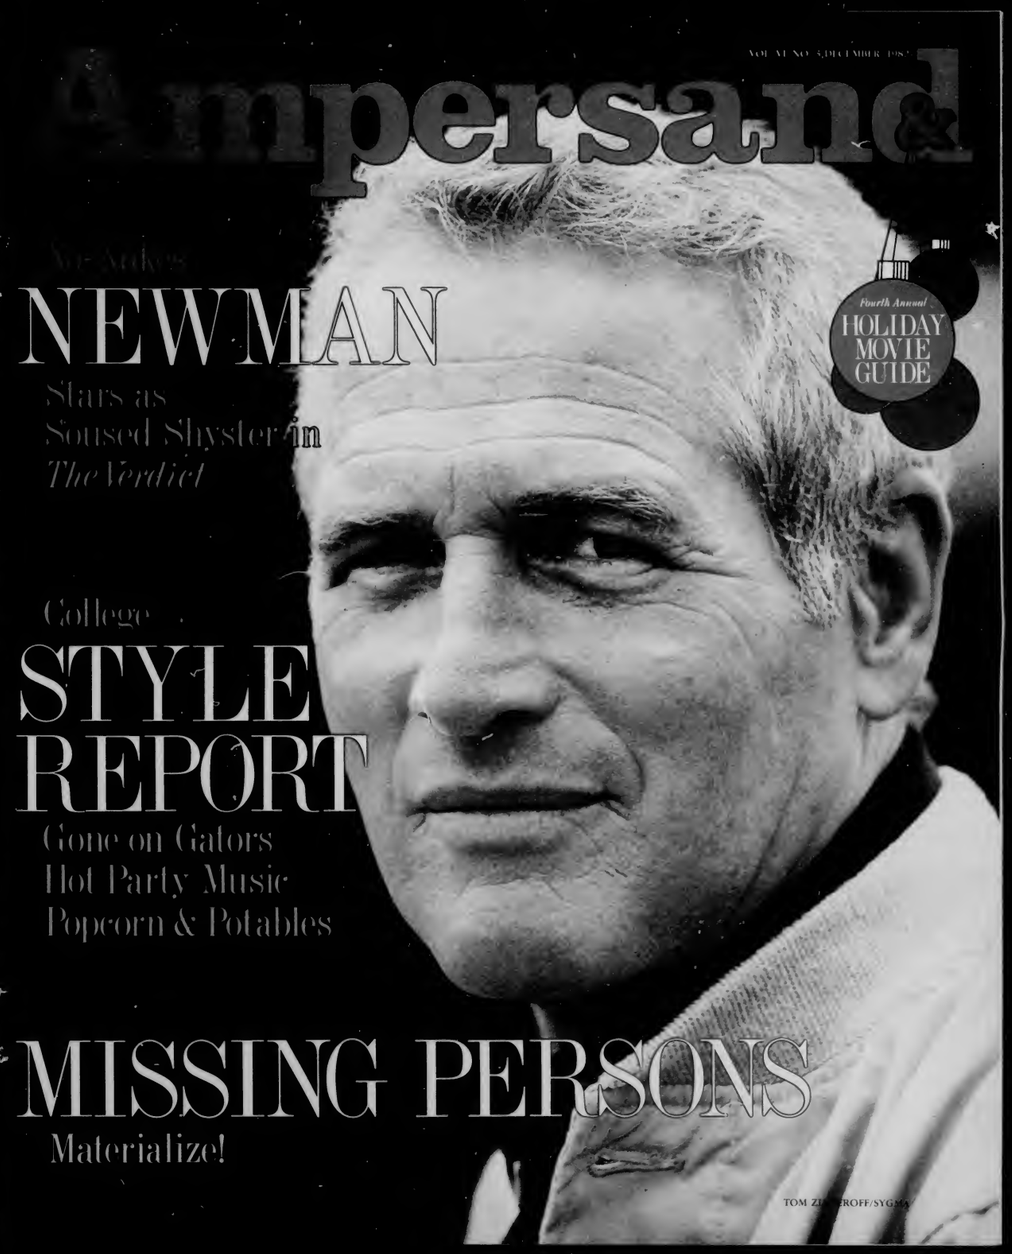
The Minutemen opened the game with a man to man defense which was fairly effective, but the veteran New Hampshire team was able to adjust using a patient offense.

In the second half, UMass came out with a 3-2 zone defense, which they used a lot last year, hoping to force the Wildcats to shoot from the outside. UNH, 1-0, is not a good outside shooting team and that helped UM build up the nine point lead.

UMass, 0-1 hosts Harvard Saturday night in the Cage in their next encounter. Game time is 7:30 p.m. Last Night's BOXSCORE:

MASSACHUSETTS (60) - Russell 2-0-2, Wyner 0-0-0, Neysmith 2-1-5, Smith 1-0-2, Connors 2-1-5, Young 1-1-3, Hempel 5-2-12, Carter 3-0-6, Braun 3-1-7, Emerson 0-0-0, Green 7-0-14

NEW HAMPSHIRE (63) - Johnson 2-1-5, Connelly 2-0-4, Dixon 4-0-8, Nolan 6-6-18, DiGarde 1-2-4, Hicks 2-2-6, Rainis 3-6-15



"If it had a Jensen, it would be a classic."

People who know sound know what it takes to make classic car stereo. Electronics like Jensen® RE518 electronically tuned stereo/cassette receiver.

The RE518 features a Quartz Digital Synthesizer that electronically locks into the radio frequency you select. Tuning is extremely accurate because there is no mechanical drift from temperature variations or vibrations.

Feather touch push buttons on the RE518 control refinements like equalization for normal or metal and chrome tape playback. And conveniences such as electronic pre-set tuning, seek, scan, loudness compensation, and digital readout.

The RE518 has a universal sized chassis that fits most American and European cars, as well as many other imports.

So even if you don't own a 1934 Buick Club Sedan, with a Jensen RE518 you can have a classic.

JENSEN
CAR AUDIO

When it's the sound that moves you.

© 1981 Jensen Sound Laboratories, Schiller Park, Illinois 60176

Ampersand

features

AMPERSAND'S FOURTH ANNUAL HOLIDAY MOVIE GUIDE • 9
Eighteen beauties (& a few wallflowers) for your vacation viewing pleasure.

AMPERSAND'S FIRST COLLEGE STYLE REPORT • 11
Parties, food, drink, clothes, music

PAUL NEWMAN • 17
He hates nukes, but likes his new movie

MISSING PERSONS • 18
Zappa-launched quintet begins first tour departments

IN ONE EAR • 7
Letters

& OUT THE OTHER • 7
Hot news & tepid rumors

OUR COVER
The elusive Paul Newman was snapped on the set of The Verdict by Tom Zimberoff/Sygma.

Publisher DURAND W. ACHEE
Editor-in-Chief JUDITH SIMS
Music Editor BYRON LAURSEN
Contributing Editors JACOBA ATLAS, STEVEN X. REA, DAVIN SEAY, FRED SETTERBERG
Design Director CATHERINE LAMPTON
Production Manager CHIP JONES
Illustrator DAN EICHOLTZ
Production ART & DESIGN
Circulation Manager ROXANNE PADILLA
Office Manager BARBARA HARRIS
Staff CATHEY HALLEY, LYNN BARSTOW
Typography COMPOSITION TYPE, INC.
Advertising Offices
East Coast
National Director LARRY SMUCKLER
Manager JAMES SPANFELLER
134 Lexington Ave., Third Flr.
NY 10016 (212) 696-0994
West Coast
Manager JENNIFER OWENS
1680 North Vine, Ste. 900
Hollywood, CA 90028
(213) 462-7175
Midwest
Director RAY TOBIN
Manager MAUREEN RILEY
4753 N. Broadway, Chicago, IL 60640 (312) 561-9334
Corporate Offices
President RICHARD J. KREUZ
1680 North Vine, Ste. 900
Hollywood, CA 90028

© 1982 Alan Weston Publishing, a division of Alan Weston Communications, Inc., 1680 North Vine, Suite 900, Hollywood, CA 90028 All rights reserved. Letters become the property of the publisher and may be edited. Publisher assumes no responsibility for unsolicited manuscripts. Published six times during the school year. Annual subscription rate is $6.00. To order subscriptions or notify change of address, write Ampersand, 1680 North Vine, Suite 900, Hollywood, CA 90028.

©1982 TDK Electronics Corp.

Every playback is an encore.

Stevie Wonder takes his music home from the studio on TDK. Because he knows that TDK tape records and captures everything he creates...and gives it back to him playback after playback after playback.

TDK's advanced audio cassette technology gives you the full musical spectrum. Take TDK's AD cassettes, for example. AD's are the normal bias cassettes with a brilliant high end, broad dynamic range and low noise levels. They give you outstanding performances at an outstanding value.

All TDK audio cassettes are designed to capture the wonder of the creative mind. That's why Stevie Wonder wouldn't think of using any other cassette.

Find out for yourself what makes TDK cassettes special. You'll find every playback is an encore...for a lifetime.

TDK®
Music lives on TDK

The world's smallest stereo cassette. It's less than a handful but sounds like a roomful. The Way™ from Panasonic.

Way smaller than the rest.
The Way is the world's smallest stereo cassette player. It fits in almost any pocket. And it weighs in at under 9 ounces. The new Way from Panasonic, in red and white (RQ-WJ1) or metallic grey (RQ-KJ1).

Way out sound.
With its super-lightweight adjustable headphones, you'll feel like you're moving with a roomful of music between your ears. And on the move, its anti-roll mechanism helps keep the sound from fluttering.

Way easier to use.
The controls are big, and each one has a different shape. So you can use the Way by feel. Even use it with your gloves on. There's also a holster that lets you change tapes without removing the Way.

Way ahead on features.
A unique pause switch on the headphone wire stops the music while you stop to talk. So you'll never miss a beat. And one headphone wire means way less tangling. The Way is way ahead of its time.

Tape and AA batteries not included.

Panasonic.
just slightly ahead of our time.

Good friends stand up for you when you need them.

Phone calls got you nowhere, but this should get her attention. A mission requiring split-second timing, perfect planning and most importantly, some surefooted, stand-up guys.

When you come down to earth, spring for something special.

Tonight, let it be Löwenbräu.

Löwenbräu. Here's to good friends.

© 1982 Beer Brewed by Miller Brewing Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

Kodak film

what you see. It's how you see it.

Capture the heat of the moment... in dazzling, sizzling hot color.
No matter how fast it's happening. With Kodak film.
For sharp, beautiful shots that scream color.

Kodak

Evening Portrait. Fujicolor 1600

IN ONE EAR & OUT THE OTHER

Your article spotlighting Eddie Murphy was very interesting and entertaining, but should your front cover attract "such racial overtones" as "Saturday Night Live's Darkest Comedian Makes New Album and a Major Movie"? Racial suggestions of this type should be avoided, or do you really mean to call Mr. Murphy a "darkie"? It is so easy to say Black, or leave it out completely.

Vandella Brown
Iowa City, Iowa

As a black student enrolled at the University of Calif. at Santa Barbara, I found your recent publication of Ampersand insulting. In the issue, Eddie Murphy is featured on the cover while the caption below states "Darkest Comedian Makes New Album and a Major Movie." Apparently for the Ampersand editors, it is Murphy's color rather than his comic prowess that is most interesting. Similar mockery is not new to Afro-Americans who have, in the past, been labeled as "coon," "blackie," "nigger" and other insulting terms. And now in your October issue of Ampersand we are being mocked "darkest." I doubt that an Anglo-Saxon comedian would be subjected to the same ridicule. If Steve Martin appeared on your cover would the caption read "Whitest Comedian"? I am proud of my heritage and of our cultural contributions to the American stage, screen and the arts; and I resent the implicit racism represented by the Ampersand caption. I hope in the future your "collegiate" publication will be more cognizant of how you portray Afro-Americans. It should not be too much to expect it to be in a sensitive, fair and reasonable manner.

Ethusian Exum
U.C. Santa Barbara

It was simply a play on words, and we liked the double entendre — referring not only to Mr. Murphy (who is undeniably darker than the other pasty faces on Saturday Night Live*), but also to black comedy, a kind of humor that is best described as "getting laughs from something that is not intrinsically funny." Black humor is a distinctly non-racial term, first applied to Lenny Bruce in the Fifties. Black humor is angry, bitter, sarcastic, modern! — and funny. Much like Mr. Murphy.*

We did not call him a "darkie."

As a matter of historical fact, we did call actor Christopher Walken "The New Wasp Heartthrob" on our May 1979 cover, but Ms. Exum's suggested Steve Martin headline is far better than the one we used for his cover blurb.

Last, but certainly not least, we did choose Mr. Murphy for our cover. Were we really racist, we probably would have used someone of a more beige persuasion.

Regarding your article on Donny & Marie being dropped from Hawaiian Punch's ad-campaign because they're no longer "hot." Frankly this annoys me. Your column gave no factual reason for their termination but inferred their lack of popularity was the reason, and that they weren't connected with "fun & sun." The reason this annoys me is because the Osmond family is a rarity in the entertainment business concerning their beliefs in family, in religion, and in avoidance of liquor & drugs. If kids today can't identify with good, clean, decent people as role models, without being laughed at, we're in trouble. That leaves the likes of Alice Cooper to idolize. P.S. the principal export of Utah is copper.

Jamie Rackley
U.C. Davis, CA

Send us your comments, complaints, compliments (especially your compliments), your philosophy of life or even your SAT scores. We like to get mail — any mail. Send the goodies to In One Ear, 1680 North Vine, Suite 900, Hollywood, CA 90028.

BY STEVEN GINSBERG

Meet McCartney

Paul McCartney is in London starring in his first feature length solo film since the Beatles days. Called Give My Regards to Broad Street, it features McCartney's wife, Linda, Ringo Starr and guitarist Eric Stewart in a story that traces a fictionalized day in the life of McCartney. The former Beatle is also writing the screenplay and composing its theme and other songs. (There will also be other music from the Beatles and Wings.) The picture is being done through McCartney's own company, MPL Communications. Incidentally, Paul and Ringo did star in their own short film, The Cooler, which unspooled at the Cannes Film Festival earlier this year.

Ampersand Jokes

So many yucks! We could barely get any work done, what with all the guffawing, chortling, giggling and tittering. Finally, at gunpoint, the editors and the publisher forced themselves to choose. The winners below were picked on the basis of apparent originality and downright funniness. Just remember, one person's tee bee is another's yawn, so shut up if you don't like 'em.

However, if you're anxious to earn an easy $20, as do these three happy contributors, send your jokes to Ampersand Jokes, 1680 North Vine, Suite 900, Hollywood, CA 90028.

1. What's black-and-white and red and can't turn around in a telephone booth?

A penguin with a javelin through its head.

David Nicholls Montague, Jr.
Charlottesville, VA

2. What is the difference between erotic and kinky?

Erotic is when you use one feather; kinky is when you use the whole chicken.

Rebecca A. Winfield
Normal, IL

3. Did you realize that San Francisco actually has gay schools now? They teach the kids about the birds and the birds.

Rob Gold
Sacramento, CA

Future Flicks

Warren Beatty, who is not exactly collecting unemployment, just signed a deal to star in Mermaid. His salary: $5 million. The script (by C. J. Carruthers, to be rewritten by Robert Towne) is about this mermaid who is kissed by (and, as legend goes, subsequently falls in love with) a handsome young rake, but he betrays her and she ends up with the older brother. Maybe. Robert Redford was originally set to star, but as one Hollywood wit observed, "I just couldn't see Bob getting in any tank with a girl in a mermaid skin."

Obviously, someone in charge should hire Bette Midler for the mermaid. She already has the costume.

The stars of Officer and a Gentleman are busy — but separately (although there is talk of a sequel, since the aforementioned flick was the only one to give E.T. a run for its greenbacks). Ms. Winger will play Shirley MacLaine's daughter in Terms of Endearment, to be written and directed by Jim Brooks, who created Taxi and The Mary Tyler Moore Hour (good) and the Burt Reynolds film Starting Over (bad). Mr. Gere is off in Mexico starring in The Honorary Consul, after the Graham Greene novel. It also stars Michael Caine and Britain's irresistible Bob Hoskins (The Long Good Friday).

Good news for Saturday Night Live fans. Dan Aykroyd (you remember him from the old show) and Eddie Murphy (the new kid) will begin work on a new comedy film in December directed by John Landis (Blues Brothers). The only problem is the title: Black and White. The powers that be don't think it's exactly the right image for this particular project, so they're offering a cash reward to crew members to come up with something better. The rest of us are excluded from the competition, they say, because the picture's subject matter is very hush-hush. Big deal.

We checked this one twice. Yes, there will be yet a third in the hugely successful series of Smokey and the Bandit films. No, this one will not star Burt Reynolds or Sally Field. But it does once again feature Jackie Gleason as both the dumb hick sheriff, Smokey, and as the Bandit (Burt's role). Hence the title Smokey Is the Bandit. Argh.

This mechanical beauty comes to us from Michael Schaffuch of the University of Oregon. He earns $50 for his effort. You, too, may enhance your income: just submit your original Ampersand, rendered in black ink on white paper, to Ampersand of the Month, 1680 North Vine, Suite 900, Hollywood, CA 90028.

Paul Bartel and Mary Woronov (introduced to Ampersand readers in the October issue) are currently filming a new flick called Get Crazy, directed by Alan Arkush (Rock 'n Roll High School, Heartbeeps) which features Malcolm McDowell in his first singing role, plus Lou Reed, John Densmore (drummer for the Doors), Howard Kaylan of Flo & Eddie, and assorted other music mavens. The plot centers around events in a Fillmore East-type concert establishment.

Despite the tragic death of Vic Morrow and two child actors while filming director John Landis segment of the upcoming feature Twilight Zone, Warner Bros. is going ahead with plans to release it next summer to theaters. They claim it would be even more tragic if Morrow's final performances were not seen. We suspect that the Accounting Department would find it most keenly tragic. Also featured in that episode are Dan Aykroyd and Albert Brooks. The movie has three other segments, one of which will be directed by Steven Spielberg.

Quote of the Month

Eighteen-year-old student and unknown actress Jennifer Beals is the star of Footloose, a much talked about picture concerning a woman who goes through the motions of stripping at a bar filled with men but actually remains clothed. She recently spoke about beating out thousands of others for the role:

"I had moved into the dorm at Yale and didn't have a phone so the producers had to go through the New Haven police to track me down. When they told me I had the part I said I would only do it if Yale would give me a deferment. If Yale said you can't defer I would've stayed in school. Yeesh."

Best Sellers

Hotel New Hampshire and Gorky Park, two recent best-selling novels, are all set to be made into movies in 1983. Jodie Foster and Marty Feldman have signed to start making Hotel (a strange saga about five kids in a family) this spring in Montreal and Vienna under the eye of writer-director Tony Richardson. Gorky Park, a thriller about the ramifications of a triple murder in Moscow, starts earlier in the year in northern Europe with director Michael Apted (Coal Miner's Daughter) and screenwriter Dennis Potter (Pennies from Heaven). William Hurt stars as Arkady.

Prolific writer Harlan Ellison has signed to write the screenplay for None of the Above, based on a political novel titled Big Jack Baron. Costa-Gavras, who recently directed his first American movie, Missing, helms this one beginning in June.

Shake, Rattle and Roll with the Punches

Veteran rocker Jerry Lee Lewis, who was nearly scandalized into oblivion 25 years ago when he married his then 13-year old cousin Myra Brown, may find his personal life the subject of a new movie. Polygram Pictures has optioned the film rights to Myra's tell-all book Great Balls of Fire.

Big News for Small Screens

With more than 50 features to his credit, famed Swedish filmmaker Ingmar Bergman says he is giving up the big screen and will instead work only on the stage or in television. The reason? A loss of energy. "But I love to have a camera and a small crew and to make things for television," he said in a recent Variety interview. "You can make it and then in one evening it is finished. Nobody thinks about it any more. We try not to."

The Paper Chase has been a movie, a canceled network television show and a regular rerun on PBS. What else is left? Well, cable biggie Showtime has just ordered seven new hour long episodes of the program at a cost of $500,000-$600,000 each, making it the first pay service ever to have a regular dramatic series.

Kiss Off

BY PAUL ROSTA

"If they spent this kind of money to promote an unknown band," groused one wishing to be anonymous guest, "it would make their career."

Kiss is hardly an unknown band, but they have been rather ignored lately. To get the once-reigning bubblegum stompers back in the public eye, and to promote their 100-city tour for a new LP called Creatures of the Night, Casablanca Records threw a shindig like no one in the pinched record business had done for years. At Zoetrope Studios sound stage in Hollywood the bar was open and so was bass player Gene Simmons' mouth. "We're the best show on Earth," he informed the assemblage.

Before the buffet was cleared and the room forcibly emptied by means of playing the group's new single at top volume, over and over, someone asked Simmons if he didn't think the band's flamboyant garb was perhaps a wee bit out of style. "We're above style," Simmons shot back.

The Historian Skeksis in The Dark Crystal.

Ampersand's Fourth Annual

HOLIDAY MOVIE GUIDE

BY JUDITH SIMS

This is Hollywood's favorite time of year: happy people sharing love, presents, good will — and going to the movies. Traditionally, late December is Big Bucks time for the studios, when all those bored, restless, humbug folks (college students included) go to dark theaters in search of laughs, insights and stale popcorn. Thus giving the film studios their own presents (money!) and good cheer (success!). Everybody should be happy during the holidays. . . .

Last year, it should be noted, we had an abundance of turkeys for the season, and I do not refer to the light-and-dark-meat variety. In December 1981 Buddy Buddy, Rollover, Heartbeeps, Pennies from Heaven, Modern Problems and Whose Life Is It Anyway? all did Scroogy business. Bombed, as it were.

This year, Hollywood is offering eighteen hopefuls of assorted types and sizes. Maybe our luck (and the studios') will change.

SOPHIE'S CHOICE stars Meryl Streep, Kevin Kline and Peter MacNichol in the film version of William Styron's best-selling novel about a Catholic Polish immigrant who survived a Nazi concentration camp. The story plays out in Brooklyn, where Sophie and her Jewish lover Nathan (Kline) live in a boarding house also shared by young Stingo (MacNichol), a would-be writer who falls in love with Sophie. The Holocaust is presented in flashback, filmed in Poland (Streep learned Polish for the role). Written and directed by Alan Pakula.

SIX WEEKS gives us Dudley Moore and Mary Tyler Moore (no relation, naturally . . .) and young ballerina Katherine Healy in a modern three-hanky romance. Dudley's a politician, Mary's a cosmetics queenpin, Healy is her doomed dancing daughter. Actor Tony Bill directed. For those expecting this year's version of Arthur, be advised that this is being called Dudley Moore's first dramatic role.

FRANCES is the compelling, often gruesome story of Thirties actress Frances Farmer, who rebelled against conformity and ended up in a mental institution. Jessica Lange stars; acclaimed stage actress Kim Stanley portrays her dominating mother, and playwright Sam Shepard is a mysterious detective who met Frances when she was 16 and loved her until her death in 1970.

THE DARK CRYSTAL is a live-action, non-animated film in which no humans appear — only creatures devised by Muppeteers Jim Henson and Frank Oz and artist (the book Faeries) Brian Froud. The Dark Crystal is peopled (creatured?) with Gelflings, Skeksis, Garthim warriors and Mystics; they all talk and move (thanks to some space age engineering by the technicians behind the creatures) amid magical forests and anthropomorphic rivers. The plot is good vs. evil, the effects look spectacular, and it's all produced by Star Wars' producer Gary Kurtz.

THE VERDICT stars Paul Newman as a down-and-out Boston lawyer, a drunk who's sunk so low he frequents funeral parlors hoping to cadge a few contested-will cases. He is suddenly handed the case of a lifetime: an "unwinnable" malpractice suit against a big, rich Catholic hospital. But first, he has to get sober . . . Charlotte Rampling and Lindsay Crouse also star.

KISS ME GOODBYE stars James Caan, Sally Field and Jeff Bridges in a good-natured fantasy love story wherein Caan, deceased famous Broadway choreographer, returns to haunt his very much alive wife (Field) on the eve of her wedding to Egyptologist Bridges. There is a message underlying the silliness — letting go of the past — and Caan does some tap dancing; the latter may (or may not) be worth the price of admission.

AIRPLANE II: THE SEQUEL reportedly has wonderfully dumb puns just like the original; it also stars Robert Hays and Julie Hagerty, just like the original (plus dozens of famous TV faces like Peter Graves, Sonny Bono, Raymond Burr, William Shatner, et al.) This time, the airplane is really the space shuttle, and it's forced to crash land on the moon . . . where it is greeted by several Hare Krishnas.

TOOTSIE: Dustin Hoffman in drag. As an out-of-work actor desperate for work, any work, Hoffman dons a dress, makeup and wig and lands a part in a soap opera. As a woman. Tootsie also stars Jessica Lange, Charles Durning and Teri Garr.

THAT CHAMPIONSHIP SEASON (a huge Broadway hit in 1972) was written by Jason Miller, who also directed this film version (as an actor, he starred in The Exorcist, but nobody's perfect). The title season was 1957, when the players (our stars) won the Pennsylvania basketball championship; they've been getting together every year, more or less, with their coach (Robert Mitchum), but this time, the 25th anniversary, things are a little different. Stars Martin Sheen, Bruce Dern, Stacy Keach and Paul Sorvino.

Ben Kingsley as Gandhi.

FIVE DAYS ONE SUMMER. Set in 1932, Five Days is a provocative, haunting tale of sexual obsession, hopeless love and shattered dreams, but told with restrained passion. Sean Connery is a Scottish doctor who's come to the Alps for some mountain climbing and adultery — with his young niece (Betsy Brantley); their Swiss guide (Lambert Wilson) completes a very tense triangle. This is not a film that bangs us over the head; it lingers and resonates and captivates. Fred Zinnemann directed with impeccable skill; he has reportedly wanted to make this film ever since he read the Ray Boyle short story "Maiden Maiden" on which is is "partially" based. He read it 40 years ago . . . as I said, it lingers.

HONKY TONK. One of the worst things about last year's holiday fare was the total absence of the traditional Clint Eastwood offering. Well, thank goodness, the man has come through for us this year. Honky Tonk is a more "personal" film, we're told (not exactly Dirty Harry Goes to a Bar, if you get my drift, podner). Clint plays a singer — yes, a singer — back in the Thirties, who journeys from dust bowl Oklahoma to the Grand Ole Opry to make his name and fortune. Clint also produced and directed and I, for one, can't wait.

BEST FRIENDS. Burt Reynolds, who used to be ingratiating and amusing but is now just boring and self-important; and Goldie Hawn, who was once cutely iconoclastic but is now just cute, portray two screenwriters whose close working habits lead to closer personal habits. Best Friends was written by Barry Levinson (who wrote Diner) and Valerie Curtin; together they also wrote . . . and Justice for All, among others, and Best Friends is partially based on their own writing (and other) experiences.

TWICE UPON A TIME is that old-fashioned holiday standby, an animated adventure film in which two apprentice heroes do battle with evil. The subtitle may explain everything: "The Synonamess Bosch and His Murk Workers Try to Save the Rushes of Din from Non-Stop Nightmare Bombs — Clocks Stand Still."

GANDHI is a four-hour multi-million dollar international cast-of-thousands epic — and glorious it is, too. (Gandhi, Five Days One Summer and Still of the Night are the only films in this list I've actually viewed.) We see Gandhi's rise from lawyer to spiritual leader, his power and influence over millions simply awesome: when Gandhi fasted, India came to a halt until he resumed eating. Ben Kingsley, a British/Indian actor and member of the Royal Shakespeare Company, is completely convincing. The script is powerful and witty, the spectacles spectacular, the path to unity and peace fascinating. In these uncertain times, it is strangely comforting to look back at other uncertain times, to see one little man stubbornly — but peacefully — prevail over one of the most powerful nations in the world. Gandhi instructed the world in the ways and powers of non-violent protest; it is a lesson worth a refresher course.

48 HRS. has Nick Nolte as a tough Los Angeles cop who springs Eddie Murphy (the comedian from Saturday Night Live in his first film role) from the slammer because he needs Murphy's help in tracking down some vicious cop killers. Written and directed by Walter Hill (The Warriors, Southern Comfort, The Driver) who knows a thing or two about stylish violence.

Jeff Bridges, Sally Field and James Caan in Kiss Me Goodbye.

THE TOY stars Jackie Gleason and Richard Pryor, which is a good start. It's based on the French film of the same name which starred Francois Perrin (that blond guy in The Tall Blond Man with One Black Shoe). It was awful, even in French. The plot (assuming they haven't changed it drastically): Jackie Gleason is richer than any man has a right to be; one Christmas, his son wanders through a store and decides he wants Richard Pryor, out-of-work journalist, as his new toy. Gleason obligingly "buys" Pryor for his son, and thereafter son and father learn a few corny lessons about life and love from their new possession. Let's hope it improves in English.

STILL OF THE NIGHT. Meryl Streep is a mysterious and very nervous woman whose lover was just murdered; Roy Scheider was her lover's psychiatrist. Written and directed by Rober Benton (Kramer vs. Kramer), this movie wants very much to be a stylish Hitchcockian thriller . . . but it's too obvious, too self-consciously scary, and ultimately just plain silly. (An aside: the actors smoke enough cigarettes in this flick to choke the audience. Any audience.)

THE TRAIL OF THE PINK PANTHER. For people who can't get enough of Peter Sellers as the bumbling Inspector Clouseau, director Blake Edwards put together this pastiche of film clips from previous Pink Panther films. Outtakes, in other words. The bits are tied together by a journalist reviewing the Inspector's cluttered life.

SCHLITZ ROCKS AMERICA

THE WHO

1982 TOUR

Schlitz

For free, 20" x 30" full-color, Schlitz Rocks America with THE WHO Poster send $1.00 (or $5.00 for 4' x 6' giant poster) to cover postage and handling. Mail to: THE WHO 1982 Tour Poster Offer, P.O. Box WHO, Libertyville, IL 60048.

©1982 JOS. SCHLITZ BREWING COMPANY MILWAUKEE, WIS. This offer expires 1.31.83

THE FIRST ANNUAL AMPERSAND COLLEGE

Style

S E C T I O N

NOTABLE FOR THREE REASONS:

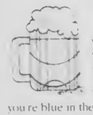
It's concerned only with after-class, leisure hour, party down and hang-it-out style. No dress codes allowed.

We won't bore you with too many brand names you can't find in your local stores anyway.

The Ampersand staff received no graft, no bribes, no tokens from anybody. After all our work. Not so much as a non-gourmet kernel of popcorn. We must be doing something wrong.

Beer Is a Many-Splendored Thing

BY MORLEY JONES



You can talk about your Château neuf-du Pape and you can talk about your Caymus Vineyards Napa Valley Oeil de Perdrix. You can talk about your Glendronach single-malt Scotch whiskey and you can talk about your Amaretto di Saronno on the rocks with a splash of heavy cream. You can blabber on and on forever about your Tequila Sunrise and your elegantly perfect 22-to-1 martini, and you can prattle till you're blue in the face about your damned fancy-schmancy European soda water at 79 cents a pint. But when all that yackety-yak dies down and you discover that you're thirsty, really thirsty, brush-fire-on-a-hot-day thirsty — chances are pretty good that you'll reach for a good old-fashioned beer.

The U.S. is the largest producer of beer and related beverages (like ale, stout, etc. — about which, more later) in the world, and one of the largest consumers of the stuff. Each and every one of us, statistically at least, drinks about 22 gallons of beer and such a year — and if you personally drink somewhat less than that, don't worry, because the guy next to you probably more than makes up your share. (By way of comparison, American per capita consumption of hard booze is only about two gallons a year, and wine consumption is slightly less than that — though it's increasingly rapidly.)

Beer has been around for a long time. Since before there was whiskey. Since before there was chocolate milk. Since before plain old water was even safe to drink. Beer was probably the first alcoholic beverage known to humankind. It was made as early as 5000 B.C., in Mesopotamia. You remember Mesopotamia — the Fertile Crescent, most productive agricultural land in the ancient world. Well, most of what they grew in Mesopotamia was grain, and almost half of all that grain was used for making beer. Sumerian workers were paid in beer. Hammurabi took it so seriously that he wrote special rules into his Code condemning people who sold watered-down brew.

The Egyptians liked the idea of beer, and passed it along eventually to the Greeks, who were nice enough to tell the Romans about it. The Romans introduced it to what are now Germany and Great Britain, and look what they're done with it.

The light, medium-bitter style of beer that most of us are used to today was probably born 800 years ago or so in Czechoslovakia, at the Pilsner Urquell brewery in the town of Pilsen. (The firm is still in business today, and Pilsner Urquell is available in the U.S.)

What is beer, anyway? you might well ask — besides being just that frothy stuff that tastes so good? Well, beer is sort of like wine, except that it's made from grain instead of grapes. It starts out with a mixture of kinds of grain, usually heavy on the barley. The grain is allowed to "malt" — which means that the grain grows sprouts and the starches it contains become converted, through natural processes, to sugar (which is necessary for fermentation). The grain is then "cooked" with water, and the resulting liquid, called "wort," is drained off into a brewing vessel. Here, flavorings are added, the principle flavoring agent, the one that makes beer taste like beer, is hops, which are blossoms of a vine related to the mulberry bush. The flavored mixture is cooked a bit longer, then the flavoring substances are removed, the mixture is cooled, and brewer's yeast is added. Now fermentation begins. (To make beer, a yeast is used which sinks to the bottom of the fermenting vat and works from there; ale is made with a kind of yeast which floats on the top of the liquid. (And, as long as we're at it, it might as well be mentioned that stout is ale made with roasted malt, and porter is stout fermented to a higher degree of alcohol.) When the fermentation is finished, the beer is filtered, aged for a short time, and then bottled or canned or loaded into barrels — mostly aluminum these days.

This is where the controversy usually starts. Does beer taste better from a barrel than it does from a bottle or can? Do cans give beer a "tinny" taste? In answering these questions, it is good to remember first of all that beer didn't always come in cans and bottles. In fact, when the radical notion of bottling beer was first proposed earlier in this century, H.L. Mencken snorted something to the effect that putting beer in a bottle was like putting a kiss in the icebox. He was a curious man, Mencken.

LINDY FESTIN

Sooner Or Later You'll Get Responsibility Like This. In The Navy It's Sooner.

You're maneuvering 445 feet of guided missile frigate through the navigational hazards and non-stop traffic of one of the world's busiest ports.

But you'll dock safely. Because you know your equipment. You know your men. And even when the responsibility weighs in at 3,600 tons... you're ready.

After four years of college, you're ready for more responsibility than most civilian jobs offer. Navy officers get the kind of job and responsibility they want, and they get it sooner.

Navy officers are part of the management team after 16 weeks. Instead of boot camp, officer candidates receive four months of leadership training. It's professional schooling designed to sharpen their technical and management skills.

Then, in their first assignment, Navy officers get management experience that could take years in private industry. And they earn the decision-making authority it takes to make that responsibility pay off.

As their management abilities grow, Navy officers can take advantage of advanced education and training in fields as varied as operations management, electronics, and systems analysis. In graduate school it would cost you thousands; in the Navy we pay you.

And the Navy pays well. The starting salary is $16,400 (more than most companies pay). And that's on top of a comprehensive benefits program that can include special duty pay. After four years, with regular promotions and pay increases, the salary is up to as much as $29,800.

If you qualify to be an officer in the Navy, chances are you have what it takes to succeed. The Navy just makes it happen faster.

NAVY OPPORTUNITY INFORMATION CENTER
P.O. Box 5000, Clifton, NJ 07015

W191

☐ I'd rather have responsibility sooner. Tell me more about the Navy's officer program. (ØG)

Name _____ (First) (Please Print) (Last)

Address _____ Apt. # _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Age _____ +College/University _____

‡Year in College _____ ♦GPA _____

▲Major/Minor _____

Phone Number _____ (Area Code) Best Time to Call

This is for general recruitment information. You do not have to furnish any of the information requested. Of course, the more we know, the more we can help to determine the kinds of Navy positions for which you qualify.

AMP 12/82

Navy Officers Get Responsibility Fast.

Style

Beer doesn't show the vast range of varying characteristics that its cousin wine does — still there are great differences in color, body, and flavor from one beer to the next. These differences are due to the types and amounts of grain and flavorings used, to the quality and constituents of the water employed, and simply to brewing methods. Beer can be made into a very light, almost flavorless beverage (like many of the American "lite" beers), or it can be made into something dark and rich and extremely bitter (like Guinness Stout, for instance). There are even beers in Belgium — some of which are sealed with corks, like wine bottles — that are flavored with macerated bitter cherries!

What are the best beers in America today? That is, of course, a matter of personal opinion. I don't much like most of the regular mass-market American beers, simply because they don't have much of what I have come to think of as beer flavor. I do favor Anchor Steam Beer and Albion Ale, as well as the medium-dark Bohemia Ale from Mexico (which, since I live in Southern California, is virtually a regional beer for me.) For the fun of it, I held a wine-tasting type judging of beers with some friends of mine not long ago, and Heineken's came out Number One almost unanimously, for its rich blend of flavors and its good, full body. Other beers we rated highly included Carlsberg (Denmark), Becks and Würzburger (Germany), Harp Lager (Ireland), and Asahi (Japan). I also enjoy Kronenberg, a pleasant, medium-body beer with a vaguely sweet aftertaste, from the Alsatian region of France.

The aforementioned H.L. Mencken, apparently a dedicated brew sampler, covered the field best when he noted, "There is no bad beer; some kinds are better than others."

Popcorn: The Most Popular Munchie

BY JOHN KROUT

Everyone goes for popcorn. It's the most economical of people-pleasers. But it has to be made right. None of that ancient, soggy, chewy, lumpy, starchy junk that's sold in most movie theaters. No, no, popcorn must be hot, crunchy and unburnt — and that isn't as easy as most people think.

The kernels must heat evenly on all sides, so choose a pot or skillet with a thick bottom that spreads heat uniformly. A thin bottom will inevitably develop hot spots where kernels char, and black popcorn carbon is a miserable cleanup headache as well as a waste of good kernels.

Cooking oil should surround each kernel and provide even heat. Too little oil promotes burnt corn, too much produces a soggy mess. One major popcorn marketer says that a volume ration of 5 parts oil to 1 part popcorn is perfecto for his product; your mileage will probably be lower, depending on the brand of corn. A good test: drop one or two kernels in the bottom and add a layer of oil just deep enough to cover them, and no more.

Those first two kernels can save some effort. Turn on the heat before adding the full load. When they pop, the oil is hot enough for the main event. Any burner setting from medium to high should work, if cooking with gas, the flame should definitely touch the pot.

Pour in the corn and slap on the lid. A lid with a steam hole helps the popcorn stay crisp, because the steam of several hundred popped kernels is substantial, and most of the cooking oil is vaporized too.

Naturally, when the popcorn starts flying, some unpopped kernels lift off as well. Sooner or later a layer of popped material prevents the unpopped from falling back for another hot oil bath, so the pot needs to be shaken to help the unpopped make it back to the bottom. A good rattle or two every thirty seconds will do, though some fanatics insist on constant agitation.

When the sound has slowed down to about one pop per second, shut off the heat and get the pot off the burner. Expect the last few kernels to pop as the pot cools.

Pour the finished product out for the grateful masses and start the next batch immediately — if the first bowlful is a hit, a popcorn frenzy will probably strike.

"Some Call It Preppy"

BY BYRON LAURSEN

We asked everybody. Several people, any way. From Harvard Squares to Rambling Wrecks (from Georgia Tech). We even gave the Beavers (of Oregon State) a shot. Menfolk, Womenfolk, Sophomores, Texans and normal people, too. Ampersand's Very First Annual Survey of Campus Style covered ten diverse campuses all across the country, water-witching for signs of trends to come, probing for the favorites of the day, divining the Great American Collegiate Closet. And what'd we get? Too many alligators, that's what! We couldn't see the trends for all the pesky Izod Lacoste alligators crawling over the questionnaire forms like cockroaches on a BLT abandoned yesterday in a New York apartment. Some of you loved 'em! (The alligators, we mean, not the cockroaches.) Some of you couldn't stand the sight of 'em. It confused us horribly. One editor began to make deplorable noises into his Selectric, then left to enroll in a truck driving correspondence school.

But the more thoughtful of us began to notice things like, perhaps the preppy/classic/all-must-look same movement reflects a tough economy.

Money for clothes has to be aimed at sure bets these Reaganistic days. Furthermore, even if sameness reigns, the locus on fashion is strong. Fashion, as much for collegians as anyone else, remains a primary way of telling the world what you want it to think about you. In the eloquent words of a male Purdue sophomore, "People seem to be more aware of the physical appearance, then handle the mental aspects later."

"Almost anything goes these days," says another Purduvian man. "I hear the mini skirt is back! Where is it?"

It is not on the lips of the 21 year-old Purdue woman who listed the resurgent mini under "Things I would never wear." Other a thousand times-no items included sparkles or beaded looks (says an Oregon State senior woman), hot pants and/or "tramps clothes (women from Tulane) and plaid pants, velour shirts, tank tops or fat ties for a 20-year-old Georgia Tech man in his junior season.

Prep stuff" and "ALLIGATORS" made the never-wear lists, too. But more frequently they were on lists of choice for date wear, party clothes and going-to-class togs. The Izodian reptiles also appeared often in the "Going Out of Style" questionnaire slot. So go figure. Likewise miniskirts were perceived both as coming into and going out of favor. So were designer jeans.

Luckily, since lasting fashion value turned up as a major concern, we asked what each respondent thought had stayed in style over the last three years. Here are some of the more interesting answers.

Women cited "rustic" styles, Levi's, designer jeans, designer anything, bulky sweaters, oxford shirts, "renaissance" styles, narrow leg pants, classic sweater and blouse combos and, of course, the preppy look. A University of Texas woman, about to gun for an advertising career, ended her discussion of lasting styles with a strong practical note. "I'm more conscious of my clothes," she said, "because I'll be interviewing soon. I have to spend more $ on quality items."

Men listed tweeds as perpetually stylish along with buttondowns, corduroys, pennyloafers, topsiders, wool jackets, thin silk ties, neat looking stuff as opposed to sloppy jeans, and the ever popular navy blazer. I used to be very lush ion oriented — what is in today, says a junior man from Georgia Tech. Now I am more into the classical look (some call it preppy).

But the same student listed preppy clothes as the worst thing a woman could wear. So did yet another Georgia Tech man, who stated a preference for women in semi-tight jeans and shirts (not crotch-grabbers). Interestingly, no women added gratuitous comments on what men should not wear.

The fashionable folks on these pages are UCLA students, most of 'em, whose pictures say more about style than any words could. The pictures are by Linda Epstein, and they were taken in M & J Country Shoe Store in Westwood, CA, under the astute direction of coordinator Elizabeth Freeman.

LINDA EPSTEIN

Style

Stylish cars included the predictable run of Mercedes-Benz, BMW, Mazda RX-7 and Datsun 280ZX, plus a DeLorean and a Porsche or two.

Finally, if a major dollop of refined sensibility was to be found anywhere on the fashion questionnaires, it was in the words of a University of Texas senior of the male persuasion who attends, says he, some 50 movies and 50 concerts in an average month. "Austin should pass an ordinance," he states clearly, "banning 'cardboard salt-free' fashions."

Now who can argue with that?

The Rhythm Method (of Party Giving)

A party without music? C'mon! You'd do better without food, or drink, or even guests. Unless you care to play host for a rap session on Reaganomics, there's got to be a reliable juke box (o.k., stereo) and a stimulating selection of long players. Here's where we can help. Polling a few of Ampersand's musical contributors, we've compiled a helpful — but by no means all-inclusive — list of records that can give any party a lift. As the venerable Willie the Shake said: "If music be the food of love, play on . . ."

LIVE AT THE APOLLO VOL. II

James Brown (King)

The perfect party record. Over two hours of J.B. at his Mr. Dynamite peak, and believe me, we're talking dance attack. There's a 20-minute rendition of "There Was a Time" that won't quit and for the dreamy side another 20 minutes of "It's a Man's World." Too much.

Tom Vickers

25 THUMPING GREAT HITS

The Dave Clark Five (Polydor)

Of course, the Dave Clark Five never had 25 hits. But they did have a solid beat. Also a joyously tacky organ and farty saxophone. Stick with "Glad All Over" and the other bona fide hits.

Steven X. Rea

LET IT BLEED

The Rolling Stones (Atlantic)

Old but irresistible — especially loud over a good stereo. Nominated for rowdiness and rhythm.

Alison Wickwire

HISTORIC PERFORMANCES LIVE AT MONTEREY POP

Otis Redding & The Jimi Hendrix Experience (Reprise)

Two masters for the price of one, how can you go wrong? Big O absolutely torches the crowd with the help of the solid Stax band (Booker T. and the MGs plus the Memphis Horns). On the flip side Hendrix lays out the performance that caused his career to "catch fire" in America.

Don Snowden

THE SUPER HITS VOL. I

Various Artists (Atlantic)

Sure to get everybody up and moving. A total shing-a-ling experience from the late Sixties, including "Hold On, I'm Coming," "Mustang Sally," "Respect," "In the Midnight Hour." This is the record that can teach you to do the Philly Dog.

Bob Merlis

JR. WALKER & THE ALL-STARS GREATEST HITS

Jr. Walker and the All-Stars (Motown)

Mr. Sax had a party going on in the studio when he put down these tracks. "Shotgun" and "I'm a Roadrunner" are guaranteed dance starters, and the human who can resist the sax hook to "What Does it Take" hasn't been born yet.

S.X.R.

SILK DEGREES

Boz Scaggs (Columbia)

A classic with no bad tracks. And, for some reason, it reeks of sex. What more can anyone ask of a party record?

A.W.

LIVE!

Bob Marley and the Wailers (Island)

"One good thing about music/When it hits you feel no pain." That's the first line Marley casts on this, the definitive reggae album to date. Bend your knees to the chopping rhythm guitar and the rest of your body will invent a new dance on the spot.

D.S.

GREATEST HITS

Mitch Ryder and the Detroit Wheels (Virgo)

For true rock and roll party spirit there is no white singer/bandleader who has matched Mitch. Forget your punks, your Springsteen, even your Stones; this guy was the heaviest. "Little Latin Lupe Lu," "Devil with the Blue Dress," this LP kicks from start to finish.

T.V.

IN A SILENT WAY

Miles Davis (Columbia)

Threw you off a bit with this one, eh? But with its steady, understated pulse and the spare, atmospheric melodies, Silent Way is the perfect album for cruising down to the end of a long night of serious partying.

D.S.

Finally, here are some timely choices when the old Stones and Motown records don't quite get your mojo working.

If it's a birthday party: The Birthday Party, Grand Master Flash and the Furious Five 12-inch 45.

If you want the scene to be a skanking sensation: the first albums of either the Specials or Madness.

If it's a punky reggae party: Smitten by Black Uhuru, Wailing Souls LPs on Studio One or Mango, or Bob Marley and the Wailers' Punky Reggae Party 12-inch 45.

If it's a crawl-on-your-belly-like-a-reptile, boogie-til-ya-puke affair: the first George Thorogood and the Destroyers record on Rounder (featuring "One Bourbon, One Scotch, and One Beer"), or, even better, Beware of the Dog by Hound Dog Taylor and the Houserockers. Any J.Geils Band record before Monkey Island might do just as well.

If it's a TV party and your guests have thrown the TV out of the window, along with most of the furniture: Damaged by Black Flag.

If your friends are chronic cough syrup drinkers, Detroit auto workers, or are similarly brain-damaged: Raw Power by Iggy and the Stooges.

If your friends are intellectual types who like to get down and boogie every once in a while: Remain in Light by Talking Heads.

If the party is being held in a garage: the first Sonics album or "Sometimes Good Guys Don't Wear White" by the Standells.

If the police pull up in the driveway and all the lawn chairs have gone into the pool: Brian Eno's Music for Airports at very low volume. (Useful dialogue: "Honest, officer, we were just having a quiet evening at home with friends . . .")

If you want everybody to get the hell out: Trout Mask Replica by Captain Beefheart or Ascension by John Coltrane.

— Chris Morris

TILL HELL FREEZES OVER

Presenting High Bias II and the Ultimate Tape Guarantee.

Memorex presents High Bias II, a tape so extraordinary, we're going to guarantee it forever.

We'll guarantee life-like sound.

Extraordinarily flat frequency response at zero dB recording levels, combined with remarkably low noise levels, means music is captured live. Then Permapass,™ our unique oxide-bonding process, locks each oxide particle—each musical detail—onto the tape. So music stays live. Not just the 1st play. Or the 1000th. But forever.

We'll guarantee the cassette.

We've engineered every facet of our transport mechanism to protect the tape. Our waved-wafer improves tape-wind. Silicone-treated rollers insure precise alignment and smooth, safe tape movement. To protect the tape and mechanism, we've surrounded them with a remarkable cassette housing made rigid and strong by a mold design unique to Memorex.

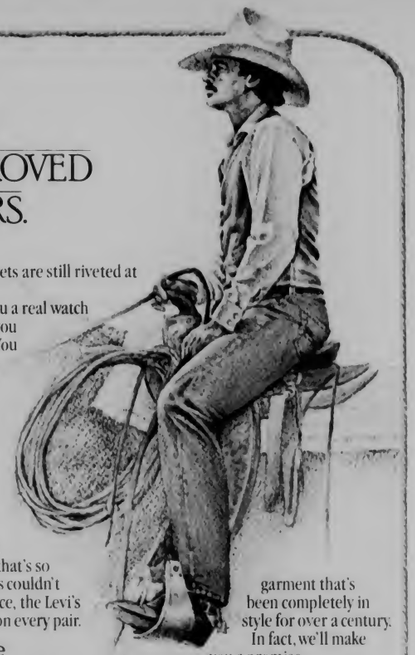
We'll guarantee them forever.

If you ever become dissatisfied with Memorex High Bias II, for any reason, simply mail the tape back and we'll replace it free.

YOU'LL FOREVER WONDER,

IS IT LIVE, OR IS IT MEMOREX

LEVI'S® 501™ JEANS SUCCESSFULLY UNIMPROVED FOR OVER 125 YEARS.



One day a man named Levi Strauss created the world's first blue denim jeans.

Then something really remarkable happened:

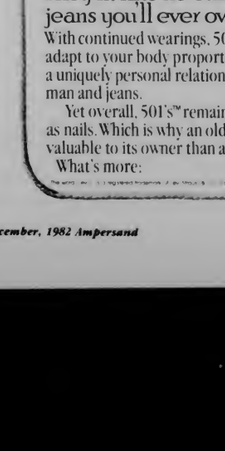
For over 125 years, we didn't improve them.

The authentic, original Levi's 501™ jeans you buy today are virtually identical to that very first pair.

Which means they're still rugged, comfortable, classic . . . and a bit odd.

Still guaranteed to shrink and fade.



1. Before 2. After

Odd and Unusual Fitting Guide

Waist	Add
27" - 46"	1"
48" - 48"	2"
50" Up	4"

Inseam	Add
27" - 34"	3"
36" Up	1"

Just pick out a pair that's 1 to 3 inches too big in the waist. (Trust us on this.) And 3 or 4 inches too long in the legs.

After 3 washings, our exclusive 'XX' all-cotton denim will "Shrink-To-Fit™"

A few more washings, and the fabric "breaks in" to become softer, lighter in color and even more comfortable.

They fit like no other jeans you'll ever own.

With continued wearings, 501's™ actually adapt to your body proportions, forming a uniquely personal relationship between man and jeans.

Yet overall, 501's™ remain as tough as nails. Which is why an old pair is more valuable to its owner than a new pair.

What's more:

a) Our front pockets are still riveted at the corners.
b) We still give you a real watch pocket, whether you need one or not. You never know.
c) You get a 5-button fly. No need to go switching to something that might just be a temporary fad, like zippers.
d) We still use only heavyweight 14-ounce denim that's so strong two horses couldn't tear it apart. Hence, the Levi's two-horse patch on every pair.

Classic style never goes out of style.

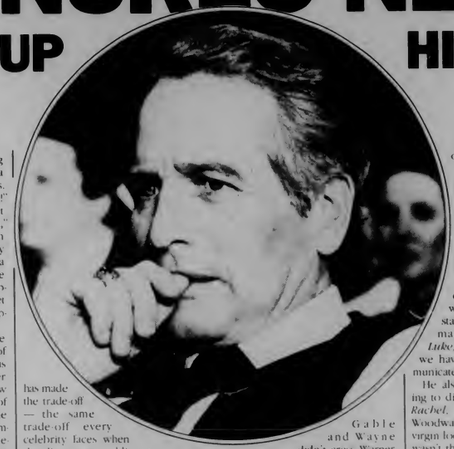
And the result of all this?

Levi's 501's™ are probably the only garment that's been completely in style for over a century. In fact, we'll make you a promise.

You keep buying original Levi's 501™ blue denim jeans, and we'll keep adding no improvements.

QUALITY NEVER GOES OUT OF STYLE

NO-NUKES NEWMAN PUTS UP HIS DUKES



"It's me," says Paul Newman, flashing a sardonic smirk as he strolls onto a soundstage at Universal Studios. "One of the duped and manipulated!" Wearing a white tee-shirt, emblazoned with "Team Newman," his newly-formed racing team scheduled to debut at the 1983 Indy 500 race, Newman is here to tape a commercial for the Nuclear Freeze movement. These days only two subjects can compel Newman to meet the press — anti-nukes and his upcoming movie, The Verdict.

Universal Studios, a debt-free company rolling in money (much of it courtesy of E.T.), is an incongruous choice to tape an anti-nuke commercial. The studio is headed by Lew Wasserman, a powerful supporter of Reagan and the status quo. But the studio is also the home base of Embassy Pictures, headed by a somewhat less powerful but never heless formidable producer, Norman Lear, an avid supporter of liberal causes. It's Lear who has put together the talent for this commercial, and it's Lear who is calling the shots. Besides, as one executive put it, money's money, the studio will rent to anyone.

When Newman comes onto the soundstage, General William Fairborne, retired, is talking into a camera, telling us all that nuclear escalation is "madness." He's not an expert actor, and he's called upon to repeat his lines so many times the General finally jokes in embarrassment. "This is just like training recruits — 'Hey, you knucklehead.'" He is referring to himself.

Newman confers briefly with Lear. He wants it made perfectly clear that General William Fairborne, retired, is a former military man.

For close to thirty years Paul Newman has proved himself to be not only an indispensible actor and bonafide movie star, but an outspoken and thoughtful supporter of causes — all liberal. Newman, who was born in Shaker Heights, Ohio, a one-time Quaker community, says he was raised to use his mind. (That training took him to Kenyon College in Ohio and to Yale University for his MA.)

Newman has followed his convictions away from Hollywood. Last year he served as a delegate to the United Nations Conference on Disarmament and this year he is devoting much of his free time to that same cause. He knows people listen to him because of his name, his movies. He knows that while he talks arms, treaties and alternatives, they're thinking about Butch Cassidy and Hud, or they're looking at his slightly thinning close-cropped gray hair and thinking how well he's held up, or they're trying not to stare into those famous blue eyes. He knows this and has made the trade-off — the same trade-off every celebrity faces when deciding to go public on issues.

Newman is not a brilliant talker; he does not have the gift of gab to seduce the unwilling, and he's the first to admit it. Even those who think he's doing a pretty good job on the anti-nuke issue have been tripped up by his insistence that the United States and the Soviet Union are about equal in terms of treaty violations. The public reaction included charges that Newman was "duped and manipulated."

Civil defense in this country is an absurdity," he starts off, munching an apple, the only food he says he's eaten in almost eight hours. "I've been up since 6:30," he adds, digressing from the issue, "and I'm starved." His voice trails off as if he'd rather think about something other than what he's talking about. When he picks up the conversation again, he speaks slowly, deliberately, choosing his words with care. "For one thing, civil defense requires a very cooperative enemy. To evacuate a city takes at least seven days — is the enemy going to announce seven days in advance what they're going to do? Also," he adds, "let's say you start to evacuate a city and the bus drivers who get out with the first load of people refuse to go back for another, or the subway shuttle conductors take one run and then say 'Enough, I want to be safe.'"

Newman is not naive. Thirty years of political activism have taught him that nothing is final. "The freeze initiative," he says in response to a question about small steps and great issues, "is not the answer. But it is a beginning. Salt II took seven years. Do you know how many weapons both sides will build in another seven years? We have to create a climate where cooperation is possible."

Newman, who will be 58 in January, grew up in a time when movie heroes played by the rules. Tracy, Gable and Wayne didn't cross Warner, Mayer and Zanuck, not about politics and not about lifestyles. It took Newman's generation to change all that. A couple of his compatriots from the Actors Studio in New York made their marks before Newman did — Marlon Brando and James Dean. By the mid-Fifties they were well on their way to creating a screen image we now take for granted — the anti-hero with a heart.

Newman's distrust for Hollywood (encouraged by Brando and Dean) was not without justification. Jack Warner was not good to Newman. The actor's first film was a laughable Biblical drama called The Silver Chalice. It sent Newman fleeing back to New York and live television.

Eventually he returned to Hollywood and the roles got better. He did a line job as the original Rocky — Rocky Graziano in Somebody Up There Likes Me — and scored even more strongly in The Long Hot Summer, loosely based on short stories by William Faulkner. Summer earned Newman his first Oscar nomination and brought him recognition as a sex symbol. As Pauline Kael put it, Paul Newman did more for removing a shirt than any actor since Clark Gable (she would later point out that the same could not be said of Robert Redford).

Along the way, Newman became rich and famous. He divorced his first wife and mother of his three oldest children and married actress Joanne Woodward. Together they had three other children — all girls — and together they made some terrible movies, such as Rally Round the Flag, Boys and A New Kind of Love (in which Newman actually mistakes Woodward for a man). For an acclaimed movie star, Newman made a surprising number of clunkers.

But when Newman was good and the material fit him, he had no rival. He excelled at creating a certain type of character — laconic, stoic, cynical. He played that role to perfection in The Hustler, a taut, crackling drama where he traded pool shots with Minnesota Fats (Jackie Gleason) and learned about guts from Piper Laurie and George C. Scott; in Hud, where his cynical, amoral cattleman who believed in nothing still stands as a landmark performance; and in Cool Hand Luke, which introduced "what we have here is a failure to communicate" to the American language.

He also took some chances, turning to directing with a movie called Rachel, Rachel, starring Joanne Woodward as a thirty-five-year-old virgin looking for love. That certainly wasn't the sort of subject matter anyone thought fitted Newman's on-screen personality.

He also made money with pictures like Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, The Sting and The Towering Inferno. He spent a lot of time on the racing circuit and waited. By 1979, Newman was at that awkward age, no longer quite able to get away with playing the young hero, but still too juicy to play the voice of wisdom. He had gone beyond being Richard Gere but he wasn't yet ready to be Melvyn Douglas.

In the last three years he's made three controversial films that have made money and earned him personal honors. The first was Fort Apache, the Bronx, about cops in the South Bronx trying to do what's right in a very wrong place — a kind of big-screen Hill Street Blues. The film was uneven and damned by residents of the South Bronx as racist, but Newman emerged unscathed, creating a very sympathetic character, an over-the-hill cop still trying to do the right thing. Next came Absence of Malice in which Newman, the son of a Mafioso, was tarred by an overzealous reporter, Sally Field. The film was a slap in the face to journalists and women, but as critic Andrew Sarris pointed out, women accepted from Newman lines they'd never accept from, say, Clint Eastwood. Newman earned his fifth Oscar nomination for Malice.

Newman is almost certain to get another Oscar nomination for The Verdict. Directed by Sidney Lumet, who has made films such as Dog Day Afternoon and Prince of the City, The Verdict deals with issues and morality, right and wrong. It was originally developed for Robert Redford, but he pulled out of the project due to "creative differences." For a while, the role was actively sought by just about every actor between the ages of 30 and 50. The main character is the sort actors dream of playing: showy, multi-dimensional and ultimately heroic.

In The Verdict, Newman is Frank Galvin, a washed-up, alcoholic attorney who takes on a malpractice suit that pits him against the finest law firm in Boston, a reputable hospital run by the Catholic Church, public opinion, and even his own sense of himself.

"It's a story about the redemption of a human being," says Newman of The Verdict. "It's not an attack on the legal system or the Catholic Church or hospitals. Those institutions are springboards for the development of his character. They're metaphors for what seem to be insurmountable obstacles all around him."

The Verdict is a different sort of role for Newman. "It's a very interesting character for me because he's not cool or collected. He's frightened. He's living on the edge and he's panicked. There are people who really do find their lives in a shambles, and they decide they don't like it. Some just continue to degenerate and some, like Galvin, can pick themselves up.

"Every person is vulnerable in certain ways, at certain times in their lives."

There are many ways in which Newman is not now vulnerable. He is not vulnerable when it comes to his career or his financial security. In other areas his defense is shakier. Two years ago his only son, Scott, died from an overdose of drugs. Newman is still coming to terms with that tragedy. He was teaching an acting and directing seminar at Kenyon College when he got the news his son had died. He does not talk publicly about what happened, but he has poured money, time and influence into the Scott Newman Foundation, which funds projects directed at drug rehabilitation.

In the early Seventies Newman told a reporter, "Kids, it's a fantastic time to be young. In some ways they have less imposed upon them than my generation did — they're less acquisitive, property no longer has such importance and they're less inhibited."

Yet they have other things imposed on them that are harsher than anything we had to face. Things are no longer clearly defined in black and white, good and bad. There's this acceleration of change, things are moving too fast, it's enough to drive them all crazy."

Madness of one sort or another seems to be a recurring Newman concern, one he shares with his public on political issues. Not personal ones.

BY JACOBA ATLAS

Missing Persons (clockwise from top): Chuck Wild, Warren Cuccurullo, Terry Bozzio, Dale Bozzio, Patrick O'Hearn.

BY BILL BRAUNSTEIN

AS THE CAR taking Dale and Terry Bozzio to their sound check passes through the cactus-sprinkled Phoenix, Arizona parking lot and rolls by the giant marquee, the driver slows down just enough to let them take it in. "You know," says Dale, the tiny blonde siren lead singer, to her husband, drummer Terry, "'Missing Persons' looks good in big letters."

The genuine awe registered in her voice is just one indication that the success the group is experiencing hasn't really had time to sink in. After all, their first album, on Capitol Records, Spring Session M (an anagram for Missing Persons) has only been out two weeks. But Missing Persons, a Los Angeles-based band that has managed to wrap a catchy hi-tech pop sound around non-threatening songs that deal with everyday problems and fears, has already enjoyed some modest triumphs.

A few of the group's early songs like "I Like Boys" and "Mental Hopscotch" have given them a strong following in their home town. And an EP they released earlier this year managed to get national airplay and produced a hit single, "Words," that broke into the top 40 last July. Now, with the album moving up the charts, along with their newest single, "Destination Unknown," Missing Persons hopes that this tour will make them known.

"We are trying to do songs that everyone can relate to," says the band's leader and driving force, Terry Bozzio, a veteran of three years service with Frank Zappa's band (which he left in 1978). Bozzio formed Missing Persons with other Zappa alumni, including his wife Dale, guitarist Warren Cuccurullo, bassist Patrick O'Hearn and keyboardist Chuck Wild. "The music is modern. It's electronic. It's played by good musicians. And it breaks new ground because they're not your typical pop songs — it's very accessible. We don't want to alienate people. We want to make friends."

Central to the band's appeal is Dale Bozzio, a former Playboy bunny from Boston who has been a model, actress and artist; she provides the band with its visual fireworks and an engaging, distinctive singing style that is punctuated by occasional high-pitched yips. ("It really is an odd tone that is a natural thing that I do that seems right for certain words and certain songs and I've just tried to procure it as such and as to my own curiosity, it's been something that people have noted on as an odd thing that I do," she says in her own inimitable syntax.) A five-foot-one, 88-pound blonde with feathery red and green-streaked hair, Dale also designs her own clothes, sometimes on the spur of the moment. She has worn everything on stage from a skirt made of old 45s to a brassiere made of halved coconuts.

The story of the group forming starts in Boston in 1974 when Dale met Zappa after one of his shows. A few years later, after she had quit her job as a Playboy bunny, she left Boston and came west to Los Angeles. She stumbled onto a Zappa rehearsal session in 1976 and it was there that she met Terry.

"It was love at first sight, unfortunately," Dale says. Unfortunately? "Yes, because it gets so serious at times you wonder how you can put up with it all." Three years later they were married.

In the meantime, Terry, after playing with Zappa for about three years, recording eight albums and touring the world four times, started to get itchy feet. He felt there was more he could do. "I really wanted to write my own music," he says, "and I got frustrated at not being able to do that. Finally in 1978, I wasn't showing the same enthusiasm I had shown earlier, and Zappa said 'I think it's time for you to leave the band and pursue what it is you want to pursue.' So I left, on good terms, to try new things."

After a stint with a band called Group 87, where he played with Patrick, Terry was invited to join the British progressive rock group U.K., where he stayed for about six months. In the meantime, an old acquaintance, Warren Cuccurullo, had joined Zappa's band as a guitarist. Dale, too, worked with the Zappa band. He had encouraged her to try singing and she does vocals on his Joe's Garage albums and the single "I Don't Wanna Get Drafted." A friendship with Warren blossomed, and the two started writing songs together while Terry was on tour.

"Together they wrote the beginnings of what was eventually to become 'I Like Boys' and they brought a tape of it to me while I was touring," says Terry. "When I heard it, I thought, this is incredible. I'm quitting this band and we are going to form our own."

Terry persuaded Patrick to play bass and eventually the four made a rough cassette that they took to veteran producer Ken Scott, a man who had produced such acts as David Bowie, Supertramp, George Harrison and Devo.

Scott liked what he heard and helped the band make a real demo tape that was shopped around to record companies. "We figured with all our past experience, we'd have a record deal in about two weeks," remembered Terry. "Little did we know ... No one wanted us."

Undaunted by their lack of success at getting a record deal, and confident the material they had was hit potential, the band decided to cut a seven-inch EP. They borrowed money, did their own art work, the promotion, the advertising, distribution and the actual selling. They took it to radio stations, seeking airplay. Amazingly enough, many deejays did play the record, but still, no label deal. "That was our incubator period," says Dale.

With the added income from the EP, the group was able to hire keyboard player Chuck Wild. Dale was starting to come into her own as a performer, adding visual spice with her off-the-wall costumes that she created out of burlap, airline tubing, plant pots, leather or beads.

"All this stuff had a wonderful effect on people," says Terry. "They kept coming to see our shows to see what we would do next. We would change from show to show, the same way a big rock group would change from tour to tour." When the band, which was still unsigned, sold out the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium, a 4,000-seat venue, record companies could no longer ignore them.

Capitol signed Missing Persons, put out a slightly different version of the EP on a 12-inch disc, and it ended up selling more than 220,000 copies, making it the largest-selling debut EP in recording history (or so claims Terry). "And that," says Terry, "is the point of the whole story. Nothing on that tape was changed, production-wise. It was the same tape that all the record companies passed on. The same tape they said would never get airplay."

"I think the album is solid," Dale adds, "and we're the type of band that are really true to life, as well as the material being genuine, it delivers on stage as well. It suffices the means."

CLASSIFIED ADS

Quality Tapes

BELOW WHOLESALE SPECIALS

TDK		MAXELL
SA C-90	2.50	UDXL I or II C-90	2.85
SA C-60	2.10	UDXL I or II C-60	2.45
SAX C-90	3.55	XLII or IIC-90	3.75
SAX C-60	2.95	XLII or IIC-60	2.95
MA C-90	4.45	UD C-90	2.35
MA C-60	3.55	UD C-60	1.80
AD C-90	2.05	MX C-90	6.95
AD C-60	1.55	MX C-60	5.75
ADX C-90	3.19	LN C-90	1.94
ADX C-60	2.59	LN C-60	1.28
D C-90	1.45	VIDEO I C-120	11.35
D C-60	1.15	VIDEO HGX PRO C-120	13.95
VIDEO I C-120	11.35	VIDEO I C-750	11.35
VIDEO HGX PRO C-120	13.95	VIDEO HGX PRO C-750	13.95
VIDEO I C-750	11.35	UD II XL C-90	5.35
VIDEO HGX PRO C-750	13.95	XL II C-90	6.69
UD II XL C-90	5.25	XL II C-60	11.49
UD II XL C-60	5.85	HE METAL BEMG	16.49
CAMCORDER	7.35	SONY
HEAD CLEANER	4.25	UCX C-90	3.19
FUJI		UCX C-60	2.45
FX I C-90	2.49	FECR C-90	2.75
FX I C-60	1.49	FECR C-60	2.15
FX II C-90	1.49	VIDEO HG C-120	12.95
VIDEO I C-120	11.35	VIDEO I C-750	11.35
VIDEO I C-750	11.35	VIDEO I C-500	9.49
VIDEO I C-500	9.49	VIDEO HG C-750	13.95

DISCWASHER

STAMPER SYSTEM	9.50	DISC CLEANING KIT	10.50
STYLIST	18.45	ZERO STATIC GUN	14.95
FILTER	32.95	VIDEO HEAD CLEANER	13.75

ALSO VIDEO HEAD CLEANER WITH BETA 14.95

PRICES NOW REFLECT NO MINIMUM ORDER. THERE IS A MAXIMUM APPLIES TO U.S.A. PLEASE NOTE: SHIPPING CHARGES ON TAPE ORDERS ONLY. $4.00 MAXIMUM FOR ANY NUMBER OF TAPES. ALL TAPES GUARANTEED NOT TO SHRINK OR STRETCH. ALL TAPES GUARANTEED FOR LIFE. NO MINIMUM ORDER. ALL TAPES ARE BRAND NEW. FACTORY SEALED. ALL TAPES ARE FIRST QUALITY. NO SECONDS. NO REJECTS. NO FLEA MARKET TAPES. ALL TAPES ARE GUARANTEED TO BE PERFECT. IF YOU ARE NOT SATISFIED FOR ANY REASON, RETURN THE TAPES WITHIN 10 DAYS FOR A FULL REFUND.

QUALITY TAPES — DEPT. AMI
864 EAST 7th STREET, BROOKLYN, NY 11230

"EYEBEAM" — outrageous cartoon book about college life in the 80's, by Sam Hurt. Foreword by PULITZER PRIZE winner Ben Sargent. Send $4.95: Sam Hurt, 200 West 31st Street, Austin, Texas 78705. 50¢ postage per order. NOT AVAILABLE IN STORES!

OFFSHORE JOBS! LATEST INFORmation! Positions, wages, companies now hiring! Send long stamped envelope to: OFFSHORE GUIDES, P.O. Box 4478-A, Biloxi, Ms 39531 (023)

Now you can purchase rolling papers, pipes, clips, snuff supplies, water pipes and much, much more through our mail order catalog. Send $3.00 for our catalog and receive FREE 4 pack of rolling papers. FANTASY HIGHLAND, P.O. Box 1271, Dept. A, Northbrook, IL 60062. Credit card holders call 312-966-7878, Monday-Friday 10-9, Saturday 10-5:30, Sunday 12-5, Central Time.

THESAURUS AT PLAY
THE LAST WORD IN WORD GAMES

A game for those who read and like to understand what they read — for those who want to add precision and eloquence to their speech and writing. To begin a fascinating odyssey into that wonderful world of words, send 50¢ in stamps for brochure to LOGOPHILIA UNLIMITED, P.O. Box 11344-A, Palo Alto, CA 94306. Canadians: P.O. Box 11246, Station H, Nepean, Ontario, K2H7T8.

SMOKING ACCESSORIES
Quality pipes, papers smoking and snuff accessories at the best prices. Catalog $1. You must be 18. High Class 4009 Pacific Coast Hwy. Torrance, CA 90505

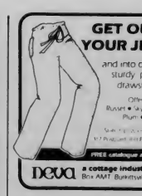
It Covers Your Body Too!
Ampersand covers the news and people that entertain you. Now we have a limited number of official Ampersand T-shirts to cover your body (and maybe a friend's body too!) Classic black with red & gold Ampersand logo. Send check or money order to: Ampersand T-Shirt, P.O. Box 699, Hollywood, CA 90028. $7.00 for one — $6.00 for additional same order T-shirts. Please include 50¢ per shirt for postage/handling. Specify size(s) — S,M,L,XL. (173)

Join 3 Stooges Fan Club!
RECEIVE CLASSIC STOOGES poster, certificate, membership card, newsletter, product offers! $5: Official 3 Stooges Fan Club, P.O. Box 266 Dept. A-5, Mt. Morris, IL 61054. (036)

Need Credit?
GET MASTERCARD, OTHERS, w/no credit check. Guaranteed!! Simple, Legal. Plus other credit secrets. Free details! Inflation Reports, AMC, Box 60148, Los Angeles, CA 90060 (133)

YOU CAN GET — $$$$$$$$$$$$$$$
CASH FOR YOUR COLLEGE EDUCATION
250,000 sources $450 million yearly available! Find between 5 and 25 private and government sources — easy.
Send for FREE literature
ALLSTATE STUDENT GUIDANCE SERVICE
8306 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 2010 • Beverly Hills, CA 90211

PENFRIENDS - ENGLAND - USA. Make lasting friendships through correspondence. Send age, interests. Free reply. Harmony Box 89AMP, Brooklyn, NY 11235.



GET OUT OF YOUR JEANS!
and into our soft and sturdy pure cotton drawstring pants.
Offered in: Natural • Russet • Jay Blue • Green • Plum • Black • Navy
Sizes: Petite, Misses, Women's. M-F Pajamas and Pants. Guaranteed.
FREE catalogue and swatches.
DEVO a cottage industry
Box AMT, Burkittsville, MD 21718

Women Too Expensive?
STOP DATING RIPOFFS! FREE details. New Lifestyle Publishing, Box 4419, AM-A, Los Angeles, CA 90051 (133)

HOW TO STUDY FOR EXAMS ... and pass (even if you have to cram). Get a copy today, send $3.00. Severin Associates, P.O. Box 1353, Boston, MA 02117 (133)

Collect POLISH KRUGERRANDS
Uncirculated print-mint condition on natural wood. Buy direct. No broker or dealer commissions. One Krugerrand, in hand-sanding, genuine corrugated display case. Send $49.95 for one Krugerrand, in case. And/or SAVE — Buy 10 Krugerrands, in plain paper wrap, for $5.00. Goony Products, Box 12558, Lafayette, CA 94549

For a 22" x 26" full-color poster of this ad, send $3.00 check or money order payable to Anheuser-Busch, Inc. Dept. 6-D, 2800 South Ninth St. St. Louis, MO 63118
Allow 4-6 weeks. Offer expires December 31, 1982. Void where prohibited.
BUDWEISER® • KING OF BEERS® • ANHEUSER-BUSCH, INC • ST. LOUIS

HEAR THE BEAUTY THAT IS MCS

Come close. Fill your ears with clear, enticing sound. Feel the precise beauty of our MCS* cassette decks. Shown here, model 3555 cassette deck with Dolby* Noise Reduction System and fluorescent record level meters 219.* Model 3554 cassette deck with Dolby* Noise Reduction and soft touch transport buttons, 189.* Model 3575 computer controlled cassette deck with electronic touch controls, preset playback and random search programming, 299.* All feature metal tape capabilities

Inside today: 'Gifts for Family,' a holiday special

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian

Volume CXI, Issue 59 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Thursday, December 2, 1982

Racism hinders higher education says state rep

By ANNE CHAPMAN
Collegian Staff

Citing the delay in building a campus for Roxbury Community College as an example of racist actions by state higher education authorities, State Representative Mel King last night launched into a discussion of "Racism and its Effects on Higher Education" to the Undergraduate Student Senate.

Addressing student senators as part of Anti-racism Week at the University of Massachusetts, King commenced his discussion with an update on the proposal to construct a new campus for Roxbury Community College. King said if the college had been designed for white students, the higher education authorities would have worked more quickly on the proposal. In contrast, King said Bunker Hill Community College, situated in a predominantly white section of Boston, was instituted in half the time it took to work on the Roxbury school.

"The Board attempted to frustrate the attempts of the Roxbury School. In five years, they were able to go from the conception of the idea to actually constructing the college," said King. "Planning for the Bunker Hill Community College, on the other hand, was started within only two years of its conception. This is an example of power relationships and white control. The Board could not see fit to listen to the Roxbury Board."

King said, "This is clearly an example of the failure to listen to people of color and also the institution of a Black college."

King went on to say the Roxbury Community College proceedings are simply one example of the impact of racism on higher education. King said the narrowing of opportunities for Blacks consequently closes doors for other races as well.

"It is a dramatic presentation of the impact of racism on public higher education. Whenever you have a process where it is easy to exclude one group from having access it is twice as easy to exclude other students. When funds are reduced for 'denied' students because of legislative actions, you have to understand its effects on white students as well," he said.

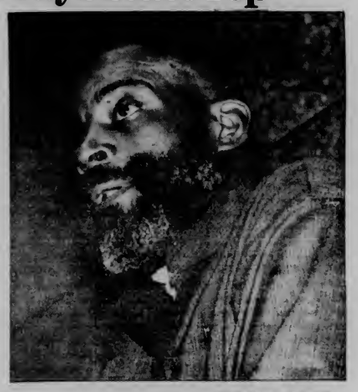
Racism, referred to by King as a disease, is "unfortunate" in higher education because it prohibits students from obtaining an education which promotes all cultures and opinions. Racism in higher education, he said, leaves people without higher education.

"As long as there is racism, there isn't any public education. If you think it is important in the education process to obtain the widest possible diversity of opinion and personality, but if racism is a factor in the selection of faculty members, this will not be possible for you," King said.

King blamed the racist attitude at the legislative level on the fact there are no longer any Blacks on the Board of Regents. King said the failure to reappoint Betty Rawlins, who was an advocate of minority issues and education issues to the Board of Regents, was a further example of racism in higher education.

"You need to recognize," King stressed, "the dangers that exist. The Board of Regents does not have a Black person on it any longer. We had a press conference to address the issue of the failure of Governor Edward King to reappoint Betty Rawlins. She was the only advocate on the Board of Regents with student and Black concerns. She's not there any longer," he said.

Instead, he said, the Board of Regents consists of advocates of high technology and industry. The issue of stressing high technology over the humanities hurts all students and not only Black students, he added.



Collegian photo by Drew Ogier

As part of Anti-racism Week at UMass, State Representative Mel King last night spoke to the Undergraduate Student Senate on "Racism and its Effects on Higher Education."

Collegian photo by Peter Marien

Although their work is not easily viewed atop Worcester Dining Commons, John Fransescon (center) and his two associates show no sign of discouragement as they replace the roof.

Loans drawn by Housing questioned

By MARK J. WELCH
Collegian Staff

A special project eliminating $3 million worth of "interproject loans" done by Housing Services last July was illegal, according to Peter Graham, an aide to Student Government Association (SGA) President Jim Murphy.

Speaking before the Undergraduate Student Senate last night, Graham said the accounting changeover was merely a change from one illegal system to another and the purpose of the change was to make the system "less accountable."

"They changed the accounting system and made the change retroactive to 11 years ago," Graham said. "It's a very sleazy move, and in court they would call it 'institutional fraud.'"

"Each project is supposed to be self-amortizing, self-liquidating," Graham said. "The loans were made illegally, and the change was done to cover up the illegal loans. The new system allows them to (illegally) commingle funds without ever having to account for the loans."

Graham said no auditor will accept the change as legal, and asked the Senate to endorse a request to the University that a special audit be done on the changeover.

"We are asking the University to request that Peat, Marwick and Mitchell (the firm which regularly audits the Housing Office) take a special look at the accounting change and verify it," said Graham.

The Senate supported the request unanimously.

Murphy, in introducing Graham, said since he made charges that Housing Services had violated bond agreements two weeks ago, he has not been able to talk to UMass President David Knapp.

"The President hasn't been returning my calls," said Murphy. "I guess maybe he isn't getting my messages."

The accounting changeover has prompted considerable attention recently, but University administrators have maintained the change was not illegal and that neither the old or the new accounting system was illegal.

Morris Goldings, attorney for the UMass Building Authority, which oversees the projects charged to be in violation of bond agreements, denied that the change was illegal in a phone interview last week.

"The changeover was not illegal," Goldings said. He described the conflict as "an honest difference of opinions on accounting practices," and said the change was merely from one legal system to another.

In other Senate business last night, amendments to the SGA budget totalling over $10,000 were approved, after being recommended by SGA Treasurer Lisa Potter.

Potter said most of the changes were due to errors in estimating merit and overtime pay for professional employees.

CIA recruiting on UMass campus; students protest

By MICHAEL FOLEY
Collegian Staff

While CIA representatives interviewed students in the Hampshire House at the University of Massachusetts yesterday several other students carried signs and handed out leaflets outside the building protesting the CIA.

"I believe the CIA is politically, socially, economically and morally wrong. In every way they are wrong," said Roberta Churchill, 20, a junior psychology major.

About 10 people, most of them members of Students Against Militarism, a recognized student organization at UMass, gathered to criticize CIA adventurism around the world.

They stretched a red banner across the steps of Hampshire House which read, "Stop CIA terrorism. El Salvador, Chile, Laos, Greece, Iran, France, Vietnam, U.S....Where will they stop?"

The CIA comes to campus each year to interview prospective employees at the UMass Placement Office along with other organizations and businesses.

"We have a list of employers," said Arthur L. Hilson, director of Placement Services. "Students sign up to see them."

Hilson said at least 13 students must sign up for interviews before a particular business or organization is invited to campus.

"It is free speech and I encourage that," said Hilson of the demonstrators. "I also encourage free choice if students want to talk to someone, that is their right."

"I hear as much from students who want to see them as from those who don't," Hilson said.

Hilson said a protest against the CIA last year was responsible for a large number of CIA interviewees that year. He explained that students interested in meeting with CIA representatives were shown pamphlets criticizing the CIA as well as given information praising the organization.

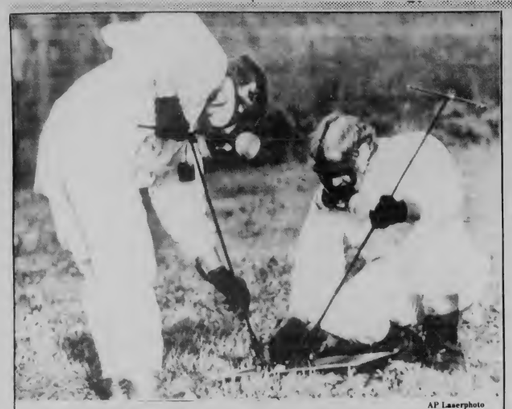
Many students hurrying by the rally outside shouted statements in support of the CIA.

"My dad works for the CIA and I think it is great," said one student.

"It seems like a lot of people have forgotten about what the CIA has done," said Blair Sandler, 28, a graduate student in economics. "It seems like college students were more aware during the Vietnam war."

"They shouldn't forget, because of what was going on right now in Honduras against the Nicaraguan government," said Ron Milcarek, 26, a graduate student in economics.

World and national news



AP Laserphoto

Environmental Agency technicians suited in white protective gear gather soil samples along the streets on Times Beach, Mo., to be tested for dioxide poisoning.

Reagan eases U.S. quotas on sugar to appease Brazil

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — President Reagan, armed with a decision to ease the impact of U.S. sugar quotas on the ailing Brazilian economy, plunged into sensitive talks yesterday with Brazil's chief executive and emerged pledging renewed U.S. support.

"We have come to some agreements about future cooperation," Reagan told reporters after a 90-minute conference with Brazilian President Joao Baptista Figueiredo at the Palacio do Planalto, the modernistic presidential palace.

Reagan, who arrived here Tuesday night at the start of a four-nation Latin American tour to promote democracy and strengtiien relations, said he looked forward to "working with Brazil on their economic problems as well as our own." He did not elaborate.

However, as the two leaders met, Reagan's press office announced he had signed a proclamation waiving U.S. quotas for sugar used to produce gasohol and alcohol for industrial purposes.

Although Reagan administration officials had warned in advance that this would not be a trip in which there would be U.S. handouts at every stop, the gesture was seen as symbolic of the administration's efforts to ease the trade protectionism Figueiredo has decried.

As the world's largest sugar producer, Brazil complained that the quotas Reagan imposed last May to protect the U.S. sugar market would cost up to $400 million in exports this year. This is just a fraction of Brazil's total annual exports of $22 billion, but the issue typifies the South American nation's complaints about U.S. restraints on its trade.

Reagan also told reporters he is considering a request from the Beirut government to increase the number of U.S. peacekeeping troops in Lebanon and also make seek other nations' participation in the multinational force.

"We will be talking to friends and allies about that...because we want to do whatever we can to help get the foreign forces out of Lebanon," Reagan said, referring to the Israeli, Palestinian and Syrian forces that remain in the strife-torn country.

Dioxin search in Missouri scares Time Beach residents

TIMES BEACH, Mo. (AP) — Workers in white plastic suits with black gas masks walked the streets of this small town yesterday, looking for traces of deadly dioxin in dirt that kids have played in for the past 10 years.

"You don't see guys who look like they're from outer space come into town every day," said resident Donna Winebaugh. "I don't think it's out there. At least, I hope it's not.

"There are just too many people who have been living out there for years, and it's really going to put a scare into them," she said.

Dioxin, a chemical byproduct, is one of the most toxic manmade substances — far deadlier than strychnine or cyanide.

Scientists don't know what small doses do to humans, but it has been shown to create serious health problems in other animals.

Environmental Protection Agency workers began testing along the roadsides of this town about 25 miles southwest of St. Louis this week after learning that Russell Bliss, an Ellisville waste hauler, was hired in 1972-73 to spray city streets with oil to control dust.

Bliss is known to have sprayed oil contaminated with dioxin in several Jefferson County horse arenas in the early 1970's. Horses, birds and small animals later died in those areas. Bliss did not know the oil, obtained from a chemical company, contained the poison.

Times Beach, population about 2,500, is the sixth site in Missouri to be tested this year for dioxin contamination. More than a dozen locations are known to contain dioxin, and about 35 other sites are suspected of contamination.

"Sure, I remember when they used to oil the streets," said Marsha Thebeau, 19, as she watched EPA workers dig core samples outside her home.

"When we were kids, we'd walk in it, ride our bikes in it, track it into the house and get it all over the rugs," she said. "You didn't think anything about it then.

"But now, it's probably too late. If that stuff is there — if the dioxin is there — it's probably already gotten you."

Environmental groups dramatize their cause

BOSTON — A member of an environmental group backing changes to a hazardous waste clean-up fund bill dramatized its cause yesterday with a mock-death from waste-induced liver cancer in front of the Statehouse.

Barbara Melamed of Boston publicized the issue for Greenpeace by rolling in the oozing red gelatin spill before clicking cameras, next to barrels labeled hazardous waste. Nearby, two colleagues in white decontamination suits with gas masks held a sign, asking who should pay for waste clean-ups.

"I was dying of liver cancer caused by the waste," Ms. Melamed, her face smeared, said in the mock scene. "Toxics leaked into my water supply."

Greenpeace is part of a coalition of environmental, consumer and health organizations supporting amendments to a bill for a taxpayer-financed $25 million superfund for cleaning up hazardous wastes. Rep. Michael Barrett. D-Reading, said the coalition wants industry to help finance the clean-ups through fees and to compensate the victims of hazardous waste.

Ms. Melamed's scene was the climax for Greenpeacee's "A Toxic Tale of a Statehouse Dumpsite," a story read at the Statehouse steps.

Digest

by the Associated Press

Efforts to save paper meet union resistance

BOSTON — Under pressure of a Thursday midnight deadline, five of the 11 unions at the Boston Herald American still had not agreed yesterday to concessions publisher Rupert Murdoch says he needs to save the troubled tabloid.

The Hearst Corp. has announced that it will print its last Herald American today unless the unions reach agreement with Murdoch, who says he must trim $7 million a year from the morning newspaper's money-losing operations and eliminate a third of its 800 employees.

"At this time, it's at a standstill," Charles Dugan, president of the mailers' union local, said of his negotiations.

In addition to the mailers, contracts still had not been reached yesterday with the pressmen, the paper handlers and two Teamsters locals.

Murdoch's negotiators reached tentative agreement yesterday morning with the engravers.

Dukakis, King silent on Blue Laws repeal

BOSTON — Neither the outgoing governor nor the incoming governor would state a position yesterday on the House-passed bill repealing Massachusetts' 18th-century Sunday closing laws.

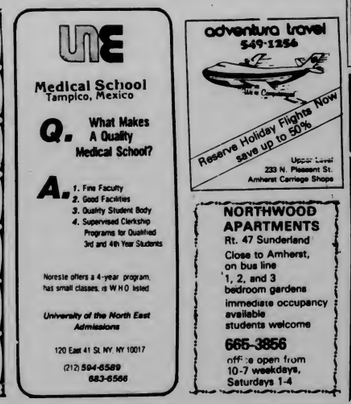
The current bill, if passed, will be Gov. Edward J. King's to sign or veto. If it fails to clear the House and Senate, a new bill would have to be filed for action by the 1983 Legislative session, which begins Jan. 5. Michael S. Dukakis becomes governor Jan. 6.

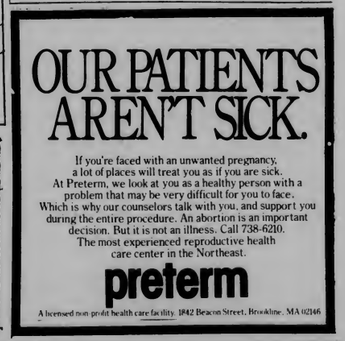
Today's Staff

Night Editor — Diane Kadzis
Copy Editor — Cris Schuster
Layout Technician — Brad Eden
Photo Technician — Drew Ogier
Night Graphics Technician — Sam Levitt
Composition — Andrea Repass, Jennifer Winslow
Becky Robins, Marianne Walsh, Jamie Katz
Laurie Frank, Scott Stockwell, Adrianne Dufour
Terri Cooper, Sheryl Silver, Joy McCarthy
Lynn Eisenberg, Gail Tanzer, Lisa Jalbert

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $18 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.





Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

Silhouetted between two looming smokestacks, sophomore Jerimy Seager searches for a friend's dog Dusty in Tuesday evening's dusk.

Proposals stress education's role in revitalization of the economy

By MATTHEW BERMAN
Collegian Correspondent

To keep the level of American education at pace with rapidly developing high technology, two congressional bills have been proposed that would pump over half a billion dollars of federal money into the country's system of higher education.

The bills, proposed by Senator Paul Tsongas, (D-Mass), and termed "The High-tech Morrill Act" and "The National Teacher Retraining Act," are aimed at upgrading the nation's technical education, creating new jobs, and helping American industry compete with foreign technology.

"The concept is that we want to get funding for things that the public thinks are important, but would be prohibitively costly for them," said Andy Bagley of Tsongas' Boston office.

"What we're attempting to do is to deal with a whole range of problems that are making American industry less competitive with foreign countries," he added.

Tsongas' High-tech Morrill Act, to be introduced to the United States Senate in January, would establish a trust fund made up of one or two percent of the revenues received from the sale of off-shore drilling rights, estimated to be a half a billion dollars. The money from this fund, along with matching grants from state and private industry, would go towards establishing or supplementing math, engineering, science and computer science departments of universities.

According to Bagley, enactment of the bill would mean that industry and higher education propose a project that would normally be unprofitable. The proposal would be reviewed by the state involved. If it matched with the state's economic needs, the project would then be submitted to the National Science Foundation which would chart the implementation of the project.

The National Teacher Retraining Act, now in committee, is designed to establish four national centers to last three years to train teachers in computer literacy and science related subjects, along with trying to help them cope with general teaching related problems.

"A major part of this bill is helping to deal with teacher burn-out and other not specifically technical related issues," said Brenda Wilburn of Tsongas' Washington office.

Although a federal program Wilburn said "not less than 50 percent of the money will come from industry and the states." The amount of money needed for the program is still under discussion.

The location of these centers will be determined by areas which bid highest for them. Although the four centers are only three year prototypes, Tsongas' office hopes they will lead to more permanent centers.

The ideas for Tsongas' bills came from Dan Dimancescu, James M. Botkin and Ray Stata, authors of the book "Global Stakes" which advocates the establishment of what they call a "New Morrill Act" to ensure a successful transition of the American economy to a computer based economy.

The original Morrill Act of 1862 gave federal land and money to the states to establish colleges to teach new methods of agriculture. Among the schools set up was the University of Massachusetts, established in 1863 as the Massachusetts Agricultural College.

UMass students are subjects of a pornography study

By MICHELLE HYDE
Collegian Correspondent

Massive exposure to pornography tends to create "visions of hypersexuality" and a loss of compassion for women as rape victims and for women in general, according to a study done at the University of Massachusetts.

The study, published in the current edition of the "Journal of Communications," was conducted by Professors Dolf Zillman and Jennings Bryant, former communication studies professors at UMass.

Students exposed to large amounts of pornography perceived the use of particular sexual activities to be more "pronounced" than students who viewed less pornography, the study states. This was true for both men and women.

"Massive exposure to pornography apparently produced visions of people doing more of anything pertaining to sex," the study states.

The study, which was done three years ago, involved 80 male and 80 female UMass students who were randomly assigned to four groups. In three of the groups, students participated in three experimental sessions over a six week period that exposed them to levels of pornography ranging from "massive, intermediate or nil," depending on the group.

The students, including a fourth group with no previous exposure to pornography, were then brought to a laboratory and were tested for "habitation effects," including perceptions of sexuality and dispositions concerning sex and gender.

"Compared to the two no-exposure control groups, visions of hypersexuality were created," the study states.

Those exposed to large amounts of pornography did not distort the perception of very popular sexual activities; however, the popularity of uncommon sexual practices was "grossly overrated."

Students were introduced to a rape case and were told to give the convicted rapist a prison term as a measure of their disapproval of rape. A minimal sentence would indicate a "sexual callousness towards women."

Massive exposure to pornography resulted in suggestions of significantly shorter sentences. "Such exposure," according to the study, "seems to make rape appear a trivial offense."

The belittlement of rape was apparent in women as well as men, but women in general gave the rapist harsher sentences than the men.

The study concluded the displayed loss of compassion for women as rape victims "generalizes to a loss of compassion for women in general" and thus undermines supportive disposition twoards women's causes."

According to the study, students who viewed more pornography considered it less offensive than those who were subjected to less exposure.

While this applied to both men and women, women tended to view pornography as significantly more offensive than men.

Massive exposure to pornography tended to diminish the concern about its potential adverse effects, the study stated. This concern was measured by the perceived need to control access to pornography.

Females expressed more concern about the accessability of pornography, according to the study, while men and women were equally concerned about the uncurtailed broadcasting of pornography.

Jackson, Jump Up concert cancelled due to poor sales

By DANIEL MACNEIL
Collegian Correspondent

The Union Program Council production of Jump Up and Michael Gregory Jackson that was scheduled for Sunday, has been cancelled due to lack of ticket sales.

UPC decided Monday, that if the show went as planned, it would incur a loss of money.

"It was cancelled because it would have been an embarrassment to us as well as the performers," said Greg Cohen, a UPC member.

UPC members said they were surprised this occured, because the group consists of talented performers who are usually well received.

"Everything was going as planned. I'm really surprised that this happened," said Theresa Mitchell, a member of UPC.

Oliver Lake, leader of the group Jump Up, was a member of the World Saxophone Quartet from 1977 to 1980. In 1980 he formed Jump Up, and his music progressed from jazz to a fusion of jazz, funk, and reggae. Lake has performed quite a bit in the New York City area, and he has toured in Africa and in Europe.

Michael Gregory Jackson is a talented guitarist from Connecticut who performs with his band Signal. He has played at the Blue Wall in the past and he and Oliver Lake have cut a few albums together.

Everything was all set for the show, but not enough tickets were sold, Cohen said. Perhaps the main problem here is they are not top 40 performers, and many people will not pay six dollars for a group they haven't heard of.

Collegian photo by Drew Ogier

Constructed of wood and iron, this piece of sculpture stands in the Student Union Art Gallery as part of Kurt Schmitz's BFA exhibit. The sculptural display is being exhibited through Dec. 4.

Newslines . . .

Human relations forum held today at noon

A human relations forum, sponsored by the Office of Human Relations at the University of Massachusetts, will be held from 12 to 1:30 p.m. today in the Campus Center. The focus of the forum will be the Student Government Association, the obstacles it faces in carrying out its functions and how interested members of the University community can support its efforts.

Featured speakers will include SGA President Jim Murphy, Speaker Sharon Davies and Treasurer Lisa Potter.

Women's spiritual exploration tonight

"The Spiral Way," an exploration into women's spiritual journey, will be held at 7 tonight at the Everywoman's Center. Women will explore mediums of art, dance, song and ritual as support for their spiritual lives. Bring food or drink for two to share. For pre-registration or further information, call 545-0883.

U.S. rep to speak on El Salvador conflict

An eyewitness testimony of the conflict in El Salvador will be presented at noon tomorrow in the Student Union Ballroom. Arnaldo Ramos, U.S. representative and spokesperson for the Revolutionary Democratic Front-Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front of El Salvador will be speaking.

ONLY 2 THURSDAYS TILL FINALS!

THE BIG ONE 16 oz drinks for reg price! while you can

POOR RICHARD'S A STEP UP

GRADUATE TO GOLD.

Now Save $25. on 14K gold College Rings.

You're ready! For the biggest and the best that life has to offer. And for the college ring that will speak volumes about you—and your achievements—for years to come.

What's more—you can afford it! Because now, for a limited time you can order from the entire ArtCarved collection of 14K gold college rings and save $25. Come and see the exquisitely crafted styles—from the classic to the contemporary. And choose the ring and custom options that most eloquently express you.

Now is your time to get what you deserve. And remember—nothing else feels like real gold.

ARTCARVED® CLASS RINGS INC

Date: Dec. 1, 2, 3 Time: 10-4

Place: Outside UNIVERSITY STORE

Deposit Required MasterCard or Visa Accepted.

© 1982 ArtCarved Class Rings, Inc.

VALUABLE COUPONS

BREAKFAST SPECIAL — Reg. $2.55 With This Coupon C
2 EGGS, 2 PANCAKES, 2 STRIPS BACON, 2 LINKS SAUSAGE
2 For $3.25 Please present coupon when ordering
SERVED ALL DAY ANYTIME

DELI MELT — Reg. $2.85 With this coupon C
Oversized 6 oz. Chopped Beef With Sauteed Onions, Melted Zesty Cheddar Cheese On Grilled Pumpernickel Served with French Fries.
2 For $4.49 Please present coupon when ordering
SERVED 11 A.M.-10 P.M.

FISH DINNER — Reg. $3.25 With This Coupon C
Our Famous Batter-Dipped Fillets English Style — Served with French Fries, or Baked Potato, Cole Slaw, Roll & Butter.
2 For $4.95 Please present coupon when ordering
SERVED 11 A.M.-10 P.M.

Some Coupons Discounts 2.5 p.m. 20% All other times 10% Does not apply to specials

James H. McManus eating place
CAMPUS SHOPPING PLAZA
RTE. 9, HADLEY, 256-6869
STOP & SHOP

HOURS: OPEN 24 HOURS Fri. & Sat. Sun. Mon Thurs. 7 a.m.-3 p.m.

NEW POLITICS
MASS FAIR SHARE
a statewide citizen's action organization

Has full and part time positions available to do fundraising, outreach, and to develop a citizen's lobby that can shape and influence the political and economic decisions in this state.
Hours are 2-10 pm; pay $175-225/week
call 586-8713
will train, college credits available
11 am - 1 pm Mon-Fri

An MBA for Liberal Arts, Engineering, and Science majors—

The Whittemore School of Business & Economics

University of New Hampshire

Program — Rigorous. Two years in accounting, finance, marketing, operations, economics, organizational behavior, and quantitative methods. Develops analytical and decision-making skills. Teaches implementation through leadership and cooperation.

Faculty — Experienced professionals. Consultants to industry and government. Professors who have chosen Whittemore's small classes and student involvement.

Students—Bright. With broad interests and backgrounds from environmentalist to engineer. Mature. With a desire to integrate thought and action, on Wall Street or Main Street.

Location — An hour from Boston. Southern New Hampshire — New England's fastest-growing region. A great place to study management, enjoy the outdoors, stimulate your mind.

For further information:
George Abraham, Assistant Dean
McConnell Hall
University of New Hampshire
Durham, New Hampshire 03824
603-862-1981

AA/EO

THE CALVIN THEATRE

Full House Productions Inc. presents THE MOTELS

"only area appearance"

Thursday Dec. 2 2 shows 7:00 & 10:00 pm

tickets available at "For the Record" (Faces) in Amherst Main St. Records, Northampton, Platternus Records, Northampton and at the Calvin Theatre Box Office Located at the Calvin Theatre in Northampton

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Klan vows it's here for good

Editors Note — This is the final column of a three part series on the Ku Klux Klan.

Get ready for what we know is coming. Everyone talks of a race war. How many guns, bullets, food, training, and preparations have you made?

The Klan of today expects an imminent confrontation between the races, "brought on by the Communists, through the (actions of) the Negroes," according to one Klansman. The exhortation made above was made by the Grand Dragon of the Texas Klan, top dog in the state hierarchy. It is a statement echoed by all Klan factions, but particularly by the Invisible Empire of the KKK, which has been by far the most violent of the splinter groups.

Bill Wilkinson, leader of the Invisible Empire, advises all his members to openly display the weapons they carry with them at all times. Although he condemns violence of any kind when speaking in public, he has said on occasion that "these weapons aren't for killing rabbits; they're for wasting people."

Josh Meyer

While the Klan factions have become more militant than ever, they have learned to manipulate the media to their own best advantage. By toning down their public image from one of radicalism to one of political and social legitimacy, they have successfully won over large segments of America's "silent majority." By ideologically aligning with conservatives on many "soft issues" like crime, inflation, affirmative action, busing, energy, defense, sexual promiscuity and drug abuse, the Klan has struck a responsive chord in Middle America. While the citizenry may object to the Klan as an organization, they will certainly find themselves in agreement with them on some of these specific issues. The Klan is aggressively "pro-American," and has reiterated time and again that they are merely responding to the anger and frustration prevalent in the U.S. today.

An example of this is the Klan's vehement opposition to immigration of aliens. In order to "stem the Brown Tide" of Hispanic refugees from places like Mexico, Cuba, and Haiti, the Klan has set up armed border patrols. Their recruiting strategy is to capitalize on peoples' resentment of these people coming into the country and competing with native-born Americans for the few available jobs.

Stances against such issues as Affirmative Action and forced busing have doubled the periphery of non-member Klan supporters and sympathizers over the past few years. Affirmative Action, according to Wilkinson, will be a major force in the upcoming "race war." Convinced that they are the victims of reverse discrimination in employment, housing, and education, many rational white people are turning to the Klan for lack of a better alternative. What they don't realize is that even though the Civil Rights era did achieve gains for minorities, their relative standard of living, as compared to whites, has been steadily declining during the past twenty years.

The Klan openly supported Reagan for President, and now feel that the victory was a racial mandate. Since 85 percent of whites voted for Reagan and 85 percent of blacks voted for Carter (according to Wilkinson), the country obviously supports racial segregation, laissez-faire economics, and a rejection of all existing civil rights legislation.

A recent Gallup Poll would seem to confirm some of the Klan's boasts. Last year, 10 percent of Americans approved of the Klan and their activities, as compared to 6 percent in 1965. While many assert that the popularity of the Klan rises as the economy gets worse, this is not the case. The two most popular heydays of the Klan were during periods of prosperity and low unemployment.

The Klan has always held a special appeal for youngsters. They are starting to become one of the largest groups of Klan members. Urging youngsters to "Get on the Klan Van," the recruiting officers for the Klan Youth Corps have emphasized that it is a wholesome, all-American alternative to sex-and-drugs-and rock 'n' roll. Teenagers comprise one out of six at an average Klan rally, and those in their twenties to mid-thirties comprise another 60-to-80 percent. At Klan Youth Camps, kids ranging from 12 to 17 years old mix volleyball with semi-automatic weapon practice. Camps attract kids from 22 or so states. According to the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League, young Klansmen and women under the age of 21 are responsible for a large majority of the violent acts committed.

While all this is certainly alarming, even more upsetting is the widespread acceptance that the Klan has been enjoying recently. Last year, the Klan was suspect in 374 racially-motivated incidents of violence, up from 377 in the previous year. Few of these were met with anything more than an insignificant blip of protest, usually from radical left wing groups who use the publicity to further their own objectives. The silent majority of Americans has certainly been silent on this issue. The Klan has not been seen as a national threat. Its popularity can be seen as "a series of warning beeps, rather than sirens of alarm," according to B'nai B'rith.

This time around, the Klan obviously means business. As Bill Wilkinson said at a recent rally in Maryland, "We're sending a message in broad, open daylight — we're not sneaking around the woods late at night, and we're not going to start...I'm no fool. I'm here to build a movement, for my children and my grandchildren's sake."

Josh Meyer is a Collegian columnist

New admissions policy clarified

The articles which appeared in the Collegian (October 21 and 22) in reference to a new admissions policy for public higher education included a number of misleading statements. The Regents in their long range plan developed broad, generalized missions for the community colleges, the state colleges and the universities. As a component of the mission statements, the community colleges were identified as "open admissions" institutions and the baccalaureate degree granting institutions were directed to "enroll a student population which holds promise of success and can benefit from the advanced capabilities of these institutions. Selectivity in admissions assures a match between student needs and abilities and institutional strengths."

The present proposal has been recommended by the

John B. Duff

Task Force of Public Presidents and Admissions Officers for release for discussion. The Presidents within the system have taken the proposal under advisement, are reviewing it and will be reporting back their criticisms and concerns before any discussion by the Regents occurs. That proposal suggests that a weighted class rank and combined SAT score serve as the objective criteria for admission. In addition, subjective criteria were also agreed to by the Task Force. They are as follows: 1) comments from appropriate individuals; 2) interviews; 3) extra-curricular contributions; e.g. music, sports, leadership, etc.; 4) institutionally determined criteria, e.g. dormitory request/space, programmatic interest, portfolio, other.

The suggested proposal of minimum standards is not in my thinking restrictive:

I. Proposed Minimum Standards:

To be minimally eligible, applicants must have:

1. At Universities:
   a. A minimum combined score of 800* on SAT, and upper half of graduating class — using weighted cumulative class rank, or
   b. A minimum combined score of 750* on SAT, but upper third of graduating class — using weighted cumulative class rank.
2. At State Colleges:
   a. A minimum combined score of 750* on SAT, and upper three-fifths of graduating class — determined by weighted cumulative class rank, or
   b. A minimum combined score of 700* on SAT, but upper two-fifths of graduating class — determined by weighted cumulative class rank.

*All numbers asterisked allow for standard error of measurement. For this year (82-83) that number is */-30.

II. Waiver Category:

Additionally, the proposed policy provides for a waiver of these standards. Each public baccalaureate degree-granting institution shall seek and define a percentage of its entering students outside of the above-stated criteria. Once that proportion has been determined, it should be submitted along with justification to all Presidents and Chancellors within the system.

Such a policy, or one similar to it, if adopted, will not lessen UMass/Amherst's ability to admit more minorities than are currently being enrolled. In fact, the waiver category would permit the University to admit as many minority students as it could recruit.

As I have said before, the Regents are cognizant of the importance of access and to that end have developed a tuition waiver policy to assist students in meeting costs as federal financial policy remains uncertain. Furthermore, the Regents have been working with the Legislature to increase the scholarship aid available by requesting an increase in the number and amount of scholarships available. All of these measures are designed to increase access for students to public higher education.

John B. Duff is the Chancellor of the Board of Regents of Higher Education

Random Notes

To the Editor:

Is this University really trying to get at the root of racism, sexism and anti-semitism? Seems hardly the case in view of the two lead articles in last Monday's Collegian?

The gratuitious treatment of the two administrators, to the tune of $100,000 a year, plus benefits, is entirely undeserved and even illegal as far as I know the rules applying to faculty and administrators and their contracts.

Dr. Baritz has not been at the University for the required six years and therefore is not entitled to a paid sabbatical. By the same token, if an administrator is replaced at the close of one administration and the takeover of a new one, it certainly is not binding that the replaced person be "paid off" with taxpayer's money. I must admit, of course, that the Governor does it.....

In the case of Ms. Reid, if she chooses not to take a demotion (and it is in title only since the agreed upon salary can be drawn for the duration of her contract), then it is just that — "her choice" and she is not therefore entitled to a reward in exchange for her embarrassment. To cite discrimination is utterly ridiculous. She is paying the price for the gutless way in which the previous administration built their empire and now the new administration is continuing the folly. Woe the University — again and again and again.

Does the Chancellor really believe that in view of these new affronts that there will be any sense of loyalty to the University left in the rest of us who are powerless? In Whitmore "getting theirs by hook and by crook" is legalized, but the rest of us have to be more careful. It is far easier to create a new Vice-Chancellor than it is to get an upgrade for a clerk.

I'm really disgusted and I'm sure I'm not alone.

From a 25 year employee who's been extremely loyal — but now I'm not so sure.

Collegian

Board of Editors

John Brobst Editor-in-Chief
Ed Levine Managing Editor
Stuart Sajdak Production Manager
Joel Myerson Business Manager
Lise Zeiger Executive Editor
Johanna Hosom News Editor
Cris Schuster Women's Editor
Andrew Gordon Arts Editor
Phillip Jennings Black Affairs Editor
Jim Floyd Sports Editor
Kevin Fachetti Photo Editor

Black Affairs

Homeland reveals racist tendencies

By YADIRA A. BETANCES
Collegian Staff

The Third World Theater Series closed its fall '82 semester with the production of Homeland.

Homeland, written by Steve Friedman and Salaelo Maredi is a domestic comedy about the situation of Blacks in South Africa, and an interpretation of the status of Blacks over the last two centuries in the United States.

Homeland presents some similarities as well as some differences between the treatment of Blacks in both countries.

One major difference is that of enslaved labor. Keentseng Monahenb, played excellently by Maria Virginia Garcia in her acting debut, is a maid for a White couple in Johannesburg, South Africa who works sixty hours a week and earns forty-six dollars.

In contrast, Lezlie Harrison who played Frances Green, also a Black maid for a White couple in Connecticut is well treated and well paid. The big similarity that restricts these ladies fr.m pursuing their desired goals is that of the papers in "White hands" that control their freedom and their attempt for social mobility.

For Keentseng is her pass book withheld by her boss Mr. Kenelworth in his responsibility to return Keentseng back to South Africa. For Frances it is her social security papers unsigned by Mr. Sloan in his attempt of keeping Frances for his wife's company.

Much too often in literature, the role a Black man is forced to play is a tramp. Mahlomola, played by Bheki Langa, i: Keentseng's brother who represses his sister for working for White men. Mahlomola himself has chosen to play the "streetlife" instead of going the same route that Keentseng did.

These Blacks wish to be totally accepted by the society in which they live in, but while confronted by racism, discrimination and oppression, they turn to the street life in order to survive societal rejection.

Homeland will again be performed on December 2, 3, and 4 at the Hampden Theater in Southwest. All shows start at 8:00 p.m. Tickets are $2.00 students and $3.00 general public.

COME FROM WHERE IT MAY

RACISM DIVIDES

Panel discussion on Racism

Thursday, Dec.2, 8pm
Campus Center 917
-Join the reception at 7pm -CC 9:7

Smurfs
Stuffed Animals
Cards
Pencils
Pencil Sharpeners
Shot Glasses
Garfield Soap
Ziggy Soap
Pads
Posters
Many other items throughout the store
Located in the Campus Center
Open M-F 9-5 Sat 11-4
UNIVERSITY STORE

Tonight at
THE PUB
15 E. Pleasant St., AMHERST
Budweiser
2 DRAFTS FOR $1.
KING OF BEERS.

A Free Bottle of Budweiser
TO THE FIRST 100 PEOPLE
STARTING AT 9:00

AND...
T-SHIRTS
PRIZES

ENTERTAINMENT
— with —
Al Stoner
9 til 1
Rock & Roll
no Cover

Arts

live wire

By Phil Planto

More often than not, blues music seems steeped in a kind of night-clubbish macho mysticism which excludes women. Though there have always been great blueswomen, Koko Taylor is one of, if not the only major woman singing a female perspective of the blues today. Koko's style, like Ma Rainey and Bessy Smith, speaks of unabashed female sexuality and independence; a kind of gutsy folk-feminism which has been known to bring the house down. Koko and her Blues Machine can be seen and heard tonight at Hangar One (with some unannounced special guests to boot).

Also tonight: national recording artists the Motels will do two shows at 7 and 10 p.m. in the Calvin Theatre in Northampton. Tickets are an outrageous $9.50 and are available at Main Street Records, Platterpus, Faces, the Music Store, and the Calvin Theatre box office. In addition: Max Creek will be playing at the Rusty Nail; First Rate will be at the Wok; and the Armstrong Brothers will play cover tunes in the Blue Wall (bring your own apple pie). Max Roach, Oscar Brown, Marion Brown and Dave Burell, Hammiet Bluitt, and the recent performance of Clyde Criner and Clouds will all be shown on video tape at 8 p.m. tonite in the back of the Hatch. Sponsored by the Union Video Center, tonite's screening will highlight tapes compiled over the years by Video Center personnel — free of charge.

Average White Band will be performing Friday night at the Rusty Nail.

Friday night, the slick, and funky sounds of the Average White Band can be found at the Rusty Nail. These old favorites, though out of the limelight now, have some irrepressable danceable stuff.

Also Friday night: ass-kickin' Southern rock, like you first heard it on an eight-track cruising in your hometown, can be had at Hangar One with Fountainhead. John Lincoln Wright and the Sour Mash Review will be in the Blue Wall.

Saturday night, The Women of the Calsbash, an all-female African percussion ensemble, will perform on the third floor of Thornes Market in Northampton. Tickets are $6 and $8 and are available at Woman Frye Books, Country Comfort, and For the Record (Faces) in Amherst. On a slightly less cultural note, Victim will do their thing at the Wolf's Den; the mega-violent flick, The Warriors, will be shown in the Blue Wall, and the Valentines will play in the Worcester D.C. at 9 p.m. Saturday night.

Sunday night, outspoken musician and educator Archie Shepp will perform at 7 and 10 p.m. at the Iron Horse in Northampton. Since gaining recognition in the second wave of "new thing" players, Shepp has developed a reputation as a poignant, yet incredibly powerful performer. He explores the avant-garde extensively while maintaining a sincere commitment to his jazz and Afro-American heritage. If Shepp's performance Sunday (and Monday night) is anything like the one last spring at Clark University, the Iron Horse's refined, neo-bohemian trappings may crumble into the cappuchino — though the confined atmosphere of the Iron Horse will probably lend to a more restrained performance. Tickets for the Shepp Quartet are $5 and can be reserved by calling the Iron Horse at 584-0610. To accommodate the overwhelming response to the Sunday night performance, two additional shows will be added Monday night.

Also Sunday night: the Hartford Jazz Society will present a stellar line-up of performers in the Creative Improvisations Orchestra, which includes Anthony Braxton, Leroy Jenkins, Mulhal Richard Abrams, and Amina Claudine Myers. Tickets are $6 for the performance which begins at 7 p.m. at the Holiday Inn in Hartford.

Take note: UPC and the Duke Ellington Committee have cancelled Oliver Lake and Jump Up due to some rather sad ticket sales. The two persons who did buy tickets can get reimbursed at the UPC office in the Student Union Building.

Also: Kaspar Hausar's new single is available at all local record stores. Look for the distinctive decomposed cat legs. Local heros the Pleasure Dots, are in the studio this weekend to record a four song EP that should be available in the not so distant future.

Kasper Hausar's new single has finally hit the streets.

DAYS OF INNOCENCE (Network)
Moving Pictures

By DAVID CHEVAN
Collegian Staff

Recently, the pop charts have been filled with bands from "the land down under." Namely, Australia. During the past year, groups like AC/DC, Men At Work, Split Enz, and everyone's favorite, Olivia Newton-John, all had top-ten songs. The record companies have not let this phenomenan go unnoticed, and like any trend with some monetary potential, are releasing Australian albums stateside, regardless of their quality.

Sound Advice

One of these Australian bands, Moving Pictures, have just entered Billboard's top-40 this past week with their single, What About Me. Neither the single, nor the new album, Days of Innocence, are worthy of the current popularity they are receiving. Every song Pictures performs sounds like someone else's. The album is filled with bad imitations of Rod Stewart and Faces, Split Enz, and Bruce Springstein. This group has no sense of identity nor any particular message, beyond the usual sexist posturings popular to macho rock bands.

Days of Innocence is a weak album without any redeeming market value besides the novelty of being an Australian album. It is a disappointing reflection of the popular trends the recording industry emphasizes. One can only hope these trends will change.

ATTENTION
All UMass Honor Societies
Make Yourselves Known
Booklet on Honor Societies
being compiled by Mortar Board
Senior National Honor Society
advisors, officers or members -
Please contact: Jim Lonergan
Dean of Students Office, Room 227 Whitmore
545-2685 545-2684

the Hungry U Restaurant
55 University Drive
Amherst, MA
Fine Food and Drink at affordable prices

Relax at the 'U'
Friday Afternoon Happy Hour
99¢ Bar Drinks
50¢ Drafts
Orgasms $1.50
all the free pizza you can eat
2:00 - 5:30 Thurs - Sat
Watch for
Miller night - next Thursday
Christmas Party - 12/16

rusty nail presents
Thur. Dec. 2 Max Creek
Fri. Dec. 3 Average White Band
Sat. Dec. 4 Loose Caboose
Sun. Dec. 5 Justin
Coming Sat. Dec. 11 NRBQ
Rt. 47, Sunderland, MA 665-4937
You must be 18 to enter.

SANTA SAYS...

Advertise in the Collegian Xmas Shopper

Call 545-3500 for details

SALADS SUBMARINES SYRIANS

the sub

11 A.M. TO 2 A.M. / 7 DAYS

33 E. PLEASANT ST., AMHERST / 549-5160

Friends and neighbors lend us your ears (and your stomach)!

The SUB would like to offer you a coupon special. Buy any two subs and get a third* absolutely FREE! This coupon is good from now thru Dec. 24, 1982, on Sunday - Wednesday between the hours of 3 p.m. and 6 p.m.

We hope to see you soon and don't forget to bring a friend.

FREE 1 FREE sub with a purchase of any two whole subs when purchased along with this coupon. coupon good til any Sun. - Wed. December 24, 1982 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. FREE

*Free sub is of equal or less value than most expensive sub purchased.

TWO DAYS ONLY FRIDAY, DEC. 3, 11 A.M.-8 P.M. and SATURDAY, DEC. 4, 10 A.M.-5 P.M.

HOWARD JOHNSONS MOTOR LODGE

401 RUSSELL STREET, HADLEY, MASS. (RT. 9) (Next to Hampshire Mall)

SPECTACULAR SALE!!!

Open to the public

$80,000 1st Quality Furs, Housewares, Tools, Stereo & Electronics and more!

Hundreds of Genuine FUR & LEATHER JACKETS & COATS $49

Other SUPER VALUES In First Quality Merchandise

GENUINE FUR JACKETS $39 GENUINE FUR COATS ¾ Length $59

Other top-of-the-line styles & sizes $69 and $79!!! Oriental imports CLOSE OUT by N.Y. Wholesaler at BELOW ORIGINAL COST. 1st quality. Be early for best selection of styles and sizes.

Men's Winter Suede Jackets Fur Lined Liquidation Price $69 Show Special Women's Suede Blazers Only $59.00

Flatware Set Now $19.00 Full Service For 8

Socket Set with Ratchet List Price $49.00 Liquidation Price $9.00

14 pc. Open End WRENCH SET $19.00

5 pc. Mechanics PLIER SET Only $15.00

11 in. SCREWDRIVER SET $7.00

3 Ton COMB. JACK $19.00

40 in. TAP & DIE SET $17.00

19 pc. Stainless Steel English Cutlery Set in Beautiful Gift Box $15.00

SILVER PEN WATCH W/Day/Date/Time & L.C.D. Digital Display Reg. $14.95 Now! $5.00 Limit 3 Per Customer

½ Horse Power Bench Grinder $49.00

Foot Pump $9.00

25 pc. 1/2" SOCKET SET Liquidation Price $20.00

18 Backgammon Set $17.00

1 pc. Adjustable Wrench $15.00

Mechanics Dragsaw $7.00

25 Extension Cord $9.00

½ in. PIPE WRENCH $19.00

Deluxe Hair Dryers $10.00

Riviera Stainless Steel Copperclad Bottom Cookware $24 7 pc. Set Reg. $79.50

BRAND NAME TOYS AT LIQUIDATION PRICES.

PIONEER POWER MAGNUMS $149 A PAIR

For big bass and crisp sibilants. The R.Y. Wholesaling Co. has repossessed a limited quantity of Pioneer Component 5-Way Speakers. These 400.00 10-inch woofer speaker systems are now being made available to the Public for only.

Pictured 4-Way Speaker System Limited Quantity $199 a pair

100 Watt 5 Element System W-137 Woofer Control Box & Circuit Breaker

Also being offered at Liquidation Prices

PANASONIC STEREO TO GO Only $59.00

MARANTZ THIN-LINE RECEIVER Only $209.00

POPULAR NAME INDASH AM-FM STEREO RADIO/ Cassette Player Liquidation Price $59.00

Full Line of Akai, Marantz Technics and Pioneer Receivers

Home & Auto Box Speakers 2-Percent Sound Reg. $109 Now $59.00

GEMINI HOME EQUALIZER REG. SPK. Liquidation Price $179.00

MAXELL BLANK TAPES 2 for $7.99

SANYO AM/FM with CASSETTE WALKMAN RADIO Only $99.00

TECHNICS MANUAL BELT DRIVE TURNTABLE LIST PRICE $149.00 $79.00

FAMOUS BRAND 120 Watt 7 Band Car Equalizer w/ Fader Control and L.E.D. Lights Reg. $139.00 Now $59.00

Stereo HEADPHONES $9.00

PIONEER COMPONENT 15" Woofer 5-Way Speakers Liquidation Price $399.00 a Pair

SHURE Phono Cartridge Reg. Price $80.00 Liquidation Price $29.00

6 x 9 4 Component Car Stereo SPEAKERS Reg. Price $109 Liquidation Price $39.00

DOOR BUSTER SPECIAL

Beautiful LCD Wrist watches. Pushbutton NITE LITE Day/Date/Time/Stop Second. Gold, Silver. Men and women styles $9.99 List Price $59.95

MANY OTHER ITEMS AVAILABLE

THIS WOULD BE AN EXCELLENT OPPORTUNITY TO PURCHASE NEEDED HOLIDAY WEDDING SHOWER AND BIRTHDAY GIFTS, AS WELL AS ONE FOR YOUR OWN USE.

SORRY NO PERSONAL CHECKS

LIMITED QUANTITIES — FIRST COME FIRST SERVED

UMASS SKI CLUB

Sign up now for all trips

office hours M-F 11-4

HIGH PEOPLE IN HIGH PLACES

430A Student Union 5-3437

A Christmas Checklist

Plan ahead now so you won't forget anyone

Embroidered Sweater

Sale priced $12.00 reg 14.95

V-Neck
100% Acrylic
Colors: Powder Blue or Cream
Sizes S-M-L-XL

Limited quantities

Located in the Campus Center

Oper M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4

UNIVERSITY STORE

O'Keefe Ale

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE

O'Keefe Ale

The Only Place To Be On Thursday Night In Amherst

O'KEEFE NIGHT

12 oz Bottles .95

plus

Two For One Bar Liquor Drinks

Three 7 oz Rolling Rocks $1.25

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

The UMass Zone By Mark Rollins

Under The Influence By M. Joyce

Bushwa by Tom Cushwa

Bloom County By Berke Breathed

CROSSWORD

ACROSS

1 Chewed the fat
6 Mischief
10 Quatrain
14 Talk on the campaign trail
15 Beginning, on Broadway
16 Induce ire
17 Item on the menu
20 Soap ingredient
21 Korean soldiers
22 Eliminate
23 Disturbs
25 Mucks
26 Royal headquarters
28 Sports area
29 Frolic
30 Perched
31 Salamanders
35 Third can. data
36 Outer clothing
37 Tax man: Abbr.
38 "Simon ——"
40 Muhammed and Baba
41 "...fair weather: for the sky ——": Matt. XVI
43 Discover
45 Coastal features
46 Elves
49 Provide
50 Writer Wylie
51 Astringent fruit
52 Drivers' gp.
55 Garden area
58 Unusual person
59 Spin like ——
60 School assignment
61 Ending with good or bad
62 Avian sound
63 Seraglio

DOWN

1 Facial feature
2 "—— of sunshine"
3 "To a ——," McDowell opus
4 Season, in Savoie
5 Oil well framework
6 Listens
7 Deck components
8 Bill of ——: Abbr.
9 Sins
10 Nut confection
11 Lubricated
12 Raise the spirits of 13 Persians' rivals
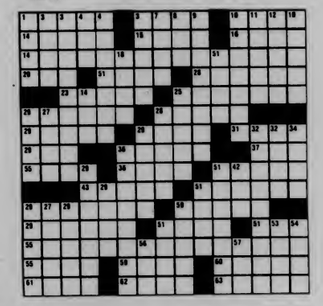
18 Porter of music
19 Dried
24 Alliance of Amer. states
25 Faucet faults
26 Army men: Abbr.
27 Ancient chest
28 Commodity in commerce
30 Guthrie and namesakes
32 Whiskey
33 Waste allowance
34 Lawn replacements
36 Boat employee
39 Silverfish
41 Kind of study
42 Bike sign
44 Take —— leave it
45 —— the ground floor
46 Apply applique
47 Carpenter's tool
48 Ceremonies
49 Run off, in a way
51 Place for a token
53 Top
54 Attention-getting sound
56 Ike's command
57 Eureka!



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

C	I	R	C	U	S		S	P	O	D	E		S	C	O
H	E	E	L		T	A	I	L		E	P	E	E
I	D	O	L		S	E	C	R	E	T	A	R	Y
C	O	N	C	E	A	L	S		E	S	C	O	R	T
			O	N	E		O	N	E
H	A	M	A	N		D	A	N	A		A	T	L	A
A	L	L	E	G	E	S		R	A	M	A		I	R	A
W	I	S	T	A	R	I	A		S	I	E	R	R	A
C	I	V	I	A		O	A	W	S		S	O	L	E	N	T
S	E	R	F		M	A	G	I	C		B	I	S	K	Y
		S	T	U	D		C	R	A	N	E	S
S	T	A	V	E	R	S		O	W	N	E	R		I	D	E	D
H	O	N	E	S	T	Y		O	D	I	N			D	U	S	E
C	R	I	S	I	S		P	I	N	G	O		M	E	A	N
D	E	I	E			V	I	K	E		M	I	S		S	T	U	M

Weather

Partial clearing today, remaining mostly cloudy with a chance of a lingering shower. High temperatures in the 50s.

CABLE/VIDEO

Comedy, Old & New Video

10:30 - 12:00 Scapin: A Moliere play at UMass
1:00 - 2:00 Blue Wall Comedy: Comedians from Greater Boston

WMUA 91.1 FM

6-9	Concepto Latino
9-12	Steve Diamond
12-3	Trip to What Next with Ed Berk
3-5:30	DR
5:30-6	Newswatch
6-7	Focus
7-10	Women's Media Project
10-2	Njiiri Pan Afrique
2-6	More Music

D.C. MENU

LUNCH
Cold Cut Grinder
Quiche Lorraine

BASICS LUNCH
Vegetable Grinder
Quiche Lorraine

DINNER
Baked Chicken/ Supreme Sauce, Cranberry Sauce
Macaroni and Cheese
Deviled Egg Cold Plate

BASICS DINNER
Baked Chicken/ Supreme Sauce, Cranberry Sauce
Macaroni and Cheese

Reporters Needed

The Collegian needs reporters to cover campus and area news and women's affairs. All interested students are welcome to come and work for the Collegian, the area's largest daily college newspaper. No experience is needed and we provide training. Great experience for journalism or communications majors or anyone interested in the media. Stop by the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, anytime during the day and ask for an editor.

Earthfoods

Potato Pancakes
Black Bean Soup
Green Salad

Head for the Mountains

UMASS SKI CLUB
Killington
Sat. Dec. 4
Includes:
bus, refreshments, lift ticket
$23

SKI NOW, PAY LATER
(financing available)
Aspen, Colorado
SKI WEEK Jan 8-15
This Deluxe Vacation Includes:
- Round Trip Air, Scheduled Non-Stop Service from Boston, NYC, Phila or Wash to Denver
- Round Trip Bus Transfers to Aspen
- Deluxe Slope-Side Accommodations for 7 Nights, Tax Included
- Six-Day Lift Ticket Good at Aspen Mountain, Snowmass, and Buttermilk

Deluxe Slopeside Shadow Mountain Condominiums
Featuring fully equipped kitchen, maid service, fireplace, color TV, heated pool, sauna, and skiing out your door.
$659 per person
or
Woodstone Hotel Package
Located right on the mountain next to the lift, featuring: heated pool, jacuzzi, sauna, maid service, apres ski atmosphere.
$599 per person
non-members welcome

11th Annual BUSH BASH
SUGARBUSH VALLEY VERMONT
SKI & PARTY WEEK
Jan 23 - 28
Includes: lifts, lodging
meals, free beer & wine parties
hot tub party, etc, etc
ONLY $189 tax & gratuities included
THE BEST VACATION YOU'LL EVER HAVE
non-members welcome

MDI/WORD LINK
Word Processing
. . . 253-9534 . . .
37 So. Pleasant St., Amherst
(above Matthews Shoes)
Need an Interview?
25 resumes 25 cover letters/envelopes
$40.00 certain restrictions apply
TRY OUR RESUME SERVICES

Good Thyme Deli
Voted Best Deli in the Valley for 2 Years in a Row!
- homemade soups
- homemade salads
- weekly cheese specials
- dried fruits & nuts
- herbs & spices
- baskets, housewares
The area's most complete ethnic food store
Catering Brochures Available
In the Armory Building
131 King St., Route 5
Northampton
584-6195

Mount Snow Vermont Tours
"Presents"
SKI SEMESTER
Collegiate Ski Weeks
6 Days 5 Nights
Jan. 2-7, 1983 Jan. 16-21, 1983
Jan. 9-14, 1983 Jan. 23-28, 1983
at Mount Snow Vermont
$179.00 per person Quad occupancy
$50.00 deposit required
Package Includes:
* 5 nights lodging
* A gala welcome party
* Five day lift tickets at Mt Snow ski area
* Five full skiers' breakfasts
* Four full course dinners
* Ski tour guide & host
* And so much more!
* Welcome Get-Together Party * Beer Bash
Wine & Cheese Party * Fondue Party * Horse-Drawn Sleigh Ride * Movies * And so much more
"The Mountain of Fun, MT Snow Vermont"
All Rates Subject to 5% State Tax and 15% Hotel Gratuity Service Charge
Mount Snow Vermont Tours
PO Box 571, Route 100
West Dover, Vermont 05356
802-464-2076

Hypercurricula

THIRD WORLD WOMEN IN LIBERATION STRUGGLES — This week's film, the final film in the series, is "A Veiled Revolution." Completed in 1981, this film provides a vivid account of the women's movement in Egypt. Discussion with Farideh Seihoun to follow. Noon, 904 Campus Center.

STUDY IN THE U.K. SOCIAL SCIENCES AND BUSINESS — An informational meeting will be held for students in the social sciences and business interested in studying in the U.K. 3 p.m., Third floor lounge, Herter.

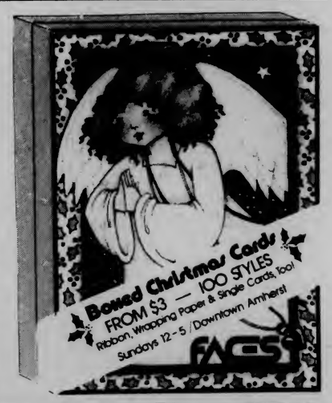
MASSPIRG MEETING — Get ready for the future by making it happen your way. We will discuss and approve of new projects for next year. All are welcome. 7 p.m., 423 Student Union.

IRISH SOLIDARITY COMMITTEE OPEN MEETING — Anyone interested in the current political situation in Northern Ireland and/or working for solidarity for the Irish is welcome to this open meeting. There will be a slide show and presentation. 7:30 p.m., Bangs Community Center, Amherst.

PANEL DISCUSSION: "COME FROM WHERE IT MAY, RACISM DIVIDES" — Participants include Gary Lee, John Bracey, Thelma Griffith-Johnson asharon jskmith, Ruth Diaz and Liz Hill. Reception at 7 p.m. Panel Discussion at 8 p.m. 917 Campus Center.

STUDY IN THE U.K. NATURAL SCIENCES — An informational meeting will be held for science majors interested in studying abroad in the U.K. 8 p.m., Third floor lounge, Herter.

WOMAN'S SOCIAL GATHERING — Come support the Lesbian Union. Join us for an evening of music and conversation. Entertainment provided. Feel free to bring your own talent. Refreshments. All women welcome. 8 p.m., 904 Campus Center.



SONY. THE ONE AND ONLY
TC-FX44 STEREO CASSETTE DECK WITH DOLBY "C" $189
STR-VX22 AM/FM STEREO RECEIVER WITH NEW "DIRECT ACCESS" TUNING $215
PS-LX2 SEMI-AUTOMATIC DIRECT-DRIVE TURNTABLE $119
TX-FX66 STEREO CASSETTE DECK TWO-MOTOR, DOLBY "C", WITH REAL TIME COUNTER $285
Sound & Music Good Advice Honest Price
90-92 King Street (Rte. 5), Northampton, 584-9547
Mon.-Wed. 10-6, Thurs., Fri. 10-9, Sat. 10-5

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday - Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10 % • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?

Rackadiac Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

AUTO FOR SALE

76 Plymouth Volare automatic slant 6. Good condition dependable! Asking $1,500 Call 665-4284

69 Firebird convertible - A classic. Needs engine work and some minor body work. Easily restorable to mint cond. BO around 2000. Call nights 256-0435

1970 Opel $100 needs much work 546-7706 after 7:00

1978 Toyota Corolla SR5 liftback A/FM stereo, air condit, headers excellent gas mileage mint condit BEST OFFER 546-4366

1978 VW Scirocco excellent condition AM/FM stereo 3800. 549-2696

For sale 1974 Chevy Suburban runs OK needs tune-up great for moving or skiing call between 4 and 7 PM only 253-9049 $700.00

BELLYGRAMS!!

Delivered by professional bellydancer for most unusual gift. Thereza 253-7822

BROWNIEGRAMS

Three flavors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

DRYCLEANING

Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Way. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ENTERTAINMENT

For the best professional DJ with a superior sound system at the cheapest rate call Peter 546-7504

Having a Party? Call Tempest live R & R John 546-5211 Scot 1 562-0343

MOVIE James Bond Goldfinger Wed 12/2 SUB 7/9/11

Great Parties/Dances/Formals need great Dance Music. Call POLODROID DJ's and ask about our awesome light show. Pat or John 253-2957

MAX CREEK at the Rusty Nail Thurs Dec 2 A RUMOUR IN THEIR OWN TIME

Free kittens 1 m and 1 f trained 256-6064

FOR RENT

Nice two bedroom townhouse apartment available immediately. On bus route, three miles from center, wall to wall carpeting and large storage space. Call Mike 253-2741 or 256-6496 at work

Three badroom house for spring semester 2 miles from center, on bus route., 253-2763

1 bdr. apt. for rant call 549-4709 $275/mo

One room available Jan 1st in Puffton apartment, $118/m includes heat. non-smoking. Hazel, Pamela; 549-5184

FOR SALE

GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972

WHO Tix Dec 11 Centrum best offer evenings 549-5289

Womens ski boots Nordica, size 9. In excellent condition. Worn once. 253-5980

'Rick" 4001 Base, black $400 Acoustic 360 Bass Amp 200W $200 Alex 6-7135

Bicycle - 1981 Univega-Gran Turismo, 15 speed, 27" frame, $155. 546-1011

100% Alpaca wool sweaters handmade in Peru. Selling for much less than store cost! Great Christmas gifts! 546-5512

Pair Realistic Mach 1 speakers $250 Jodi 6-9555

10 speed bike, practicaly brand new with kriptonite lock $190 549-3956

FOUND

Gloves on frenzy, 29 Nov, 2 pm call John 665-2484

License piete 400-GVR if you have registration call 549-3956

FRYE BOOTS

New mens size 10½ D style 2350, raisin color regularly $120.00, $90.00 call 546-7475 after 5 PM

HELP WANTED

Business Maneger Union Records bookkeeping experience helpful. Preferably junior status or below. 10 hrs/week $4.00/hr. W.S. or Non. Pick up applications at U.R.U start training Dec 6.

Assistant Business Manager at the Collegian. Business major preferred but not a requirement. Low pay, great experience. Apply at the Collegian by Dec. 8. An equal opportunity employer.

Winter Vacation Jobs promoting ecology, consumer issues and safe energy. The Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG) is hiring staff for winter session and full-time positions. Will train. $135-$225/wk BOSTON area only. Elise 256-6434

WFCR needs spring interns. Up to 9 credits possible working in membership. Call 545-0100

Telephone sales day & night hrs. no experience needed good pay call 467-3105

LESBIAN AND GAY

Are you Gay? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2645 or drop in CC 106

LOST

2 keys on red, white, and blue key ring. Reward. Call 6-7823

Lost - one old, worn, tattered and faded Levi jacket. Lost last Thursday night at Hanger One during Johnny Copeland show. Coat has torn elbows and Ronald McDonald pin. If you picked it up by mistake, please call Drew at 256-0391. Reward will be given for return, coat has extreme sentimental value.

NEED CASH?

Christmas raffle. $100-$50-$25 prizes. 3 for $1 table in C.C. Concourse Thurs and Fri

OLDER STUDENTS PARTY

Older Students 25+ Club party tonight! Live music Campus Center 10th floor 7 pm free

PERSONALS

To Jay in our PolISci 382, we think you're cute!!!

Happy Birthday Gumbi. Sorry it's a day late bit it's here! Love Arg, Pooch, Nick, and Bing

HEIDI: Met you at Freshman Orientation. Lunch. Theatre/Psychology. Blond from Providence. 40's movies. Michael 6-6696

Peter Delisa - Happy 22nd Birthday! How about a private party? You're not getting older, you're getting crazier! Love always, T.

Courtney - 21 years, 21 shots have a fantastic day Shari

Support UMass Basketball w/40 minute gang Sat. vs Harvard

BETH I'm so glad that you're here and that we have become such good friends! Let's not worry about everyone from home. Let's just concentrate on being happy, having fun and getting skinny! Lots of love, Adrienne

Dear Paula Quirk Thanks for being is wonderful Merry Advent

Contra Dance - Easy, Fun! Singles welcome. Every first Saturday: Dec 4, Jan 1 etc. Traditional fiddle music. Instruction 8:00 PM, Dance 8:30 Munson Library, South Amherst Center

Final exams, memory, concentration, - success - group rates University Hypnosis Center 549-4645

Leslie 5, Happy Anniversary ! love you - Doug

Hey Ceth - How about a little blow ball with Paul!

Jim Morrison wall size silkscreens perfect Christmas gift. Only 5 left so hurry! $12 each call Steve 546-8562

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Dissertetions, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

To Milwaukee/Chicago Area around 20 Dec. will share gas/driving. call Pam 253-7405.

Need a ride to VA or Wash D.C. for Xmass after Dec 21 call Susie 546-8989

ROOM WANTED

Female needs furnished room int. sess. only call 546-8378 evenings Susan.

Females looking for a room or whole 2 bedroom apt in Brittany Manor for spring semester. Please call 549-5586. Keep trying.

Single room and/or willing to share a room for Jan & Spring semester. Must be close to campus & on bus route. Preferably Townehouse or Brandywine. Call 549-5990 Mike keep trying

ROOMMATE WANTED

2 Badrooms in 4 bedroom apt available Jan 1 $165/month. call 253-5218

Kosher female for one bedroom in two bedroom Southwood townhouse 253-7031

Roommate needed to share room in 2 room apt. Brit Manor $112 a month excludes elec. call ray 253-7918

1 or 2 females for a large bedroom in a 3 bedroom Gilreath Manor apt 549-1377

Housemate wanted beautiful log cabin in Leverett wood heat available now Cindy 256-6434

Looking for male to share one bedroom apartment in Puffton for spring call paul 549-6411

Two people wanted for one bedroom Puffton apartment starting January call 549-1643

Roommate wanted to share furnished Brittany Manor apartment over intersession $115 + utilities heat included 253-3581

Two women needed for Puffton apt one for single room and one needed to share large double call 549-5487

Starting Jan 1, one male remaining in 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt 2 or 3 possible openings up for grabs for more info call Arty or Gene 256-8987

Female for apt. on bus rte 100 + /mon call 256-0786

Male to share bedroom in Southwood townhouse, $93/month, evenings 253-5963

One bedroom available in house minutes from Main St, Northampton starting Jan $100 plus heat call 584-9480

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom in apt available Jan 1 $170/month utilities included call 665-8168 evenings.

TO SUBLET

Whole apt. 2 bedroom Squire Village call 665-3032

Spring semester, one bedroom in 6 bedroom house, living room, dining room, laundry and kitchen facilities; close to campus, on bus route. 150 +, Call Paul after 6 pm 549-5686

Woman wanted to share room in apt Feb great deal for info please call 665-7109

2 br. Townshouse apt Jan-Aug, fall option busline Sunderland Squire Village utilities not included $410 665-7930.

Women wanted to sublet bedroom in four bedroom apartment on Lincoln Ave. Available Jan 1 for the spring semester and the summer. Rent includes heat. Easy going household. For more information call Diane at 549-6925.

Amherst Center apt 115 mo + utilities car available too negotiable big comfortable convenient January only 549-5382 Kathy.

January Break-Room in house, 3 blocks from campus $200/mth utilities incl call Joan 549-5519

4 bedroom apt on bus route Swiss Village $165 ech including utilities 253-9519

SERVICES

Writing assistance. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729

Moving? Our 12 foot enclosed cube truck will help you safely move your stuff 256-0480

THE VALENTINES ARE COMING

To Worcastar D.C. on Saturday December 4 from 9:00-1:00 $1.00 in advance $1.50 at door sponsored by Northeast Area Government.

WANTED TO BUY

Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT

'Looking for an apartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093

Sublet or take lease in Puffton spring semester Amy 253-3401

'Looking for one or two bedroom apartment for January sublet. call Tom 546-8080

sponsored by:
UNION VIDEO CENTER
JAZZ VIDEO
Come enjoy the finest jazz from the Archive Collection. A celebration of Black Music.
Max Roach, Oscar Brown, Hammiet Bluitt
Marion Brown, Dave Burger, Clyde Criner
FREE!
in the 'Back of the Hatch'
Thurs, Dec. 2 at 8:00PM
(bar will be open)
Coming: Dec. 8 - "Future Shock"
Dec. 16 - "Raw Energy" Punk Rock

GRAND OPENING
SALE-A-BRATION
Sat. Nov. 20-Sat. Dec. 4
2 weeks of Madness & Bargains
- Meet Bob Layton, Marvel Comics' Iron Man & Hercules Artist
Sat. Dec. 4
Free Marvel Guide to Collecting Comics with this ad
6 new comics for the price of 5
20% off all back issues in stock
Comics
Prints
Collectibles
Dungeons & Dragons
Copyright 1982 Marvel Comics Group A Divison of Cadence Industries Corp All Rights Reserved
Moondance
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, Mass.
413-586-8775

Sports

If you are interested in the UMass Lifeguard test for Spring semester, come to Boyden Pool either Thursday at 7:30 pm or Saturday at 9 am. You must have current certification in CPR, Lifesaving, and Standard First Aid. Any questions call Val Turtle at 545-0093.

Springfield College routs UMass women, 76-48

By JENN KUPPER
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team suffered an old-fashioned whooping by Springfield College as the Maroons routed the Minutewomen by a score of 76-48.

UMass led at the start of the game and held it for only four minutes into the first half until Springfield tied the game with each team scoring seven points. That was the last time the women would see a set of comparable numbers on the scoreboard.

Springfield began to pull away in the first half with UMass's improving defense keeping them within ten points at halftime.

Coach Mary Ann Odarski had her young team playing a man to man defense but they later fell into a zone. Springfield had come out with a fullcourt press, provoking UMass to rely on their outside shooting. The press accounted for 21 UMass turnovers.

Meanwhile, Springfield's Kathy Urbanowitz was lighting the place on fire. She finished the night with 22 points to pace Springfield. Teammates Jenny Crawford (19 points) and Sharon Playdon (14 points) also supplied offensive punch to the Maroon attack.

Both Karen Damminger and Jerrie Bernier had six points in the first half for UMass, but Springfield held shooting sensation Barbara Hebel to only three points the entire first half. Hebel was replaced early in the game and returned later in the second half.

Springfield won the second half tip, and UMass immediately responded with man to man defense. Kelley Collins hit the first basket for Minutewomen in the second half. The Massachusetts women, however, were unable to capitalize on their halftime rest, as the maroons outscored the Minutewomen 13-2 in the first four minutes of action.

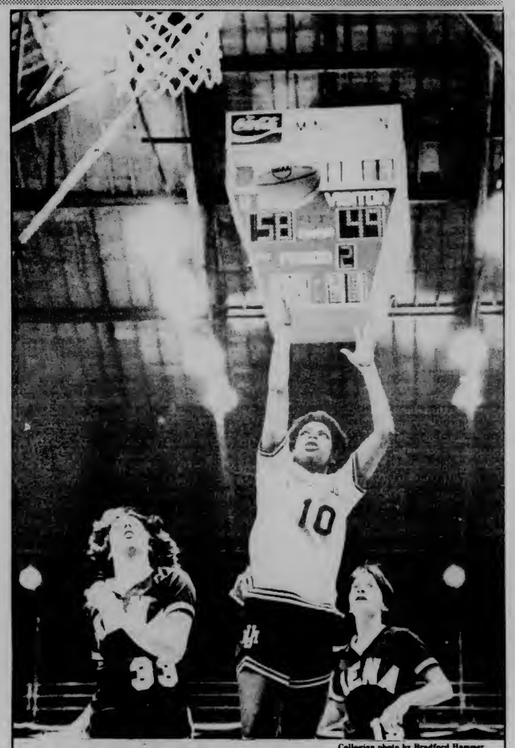
Instituting almost a whole new team, only starter Hebel remained in the game after four minutes of play (the score was 45-29 Springfield.)

With nine minutes left and the score 66-38 Massachusetts had only the second team in. Senior Marlene Susienka led the Minutewomen with experience and scored seven of the remaining ten points.

The scoring summary:

MASSACHUSETTS (48)- Susienka 1-5-7, Kucks 2-2-6, Ward 2-0-4, Todd 1-1-3, Collins 2-1-5, Cooper 0-1-1, Bernier 4-0-8, Maguire 1-0-2, Hebel 3-0-6

SPRINGFIELD (76)- Lasardo 0-2-2, Playdon 5-4-14, Thrasher 2-0-4, Crawford 9-1-19, Urbanowitz 10-2-22, Peterson 1-0-2, Therey 1-0-2, Larkin 4-0-8, Brown 1-1-3



Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

Guard Wendy Ward makes a drive in a women's game against Siena College earlier in the season at the Cage.

Celts fans should be thankful they don't live in Cleveland

By SCOTT HOOD
Collegian Staff

Pro basketball fans in Boston have it easy. They sit back, put their feet up, relax and enjoy the spectacle of 82 regular season NBA games, most resulting in Celtic victories.

Then it's on to the playoffs where the Green Machine either wins the championship (14 crowns in the 37 year existence of the club) or comes down close. With Red Auerbach, the chief architect, the Celtics have constructed an organization that represents everything good about professional sport in America: Class, good coaching, teamwork, crafty management, and loyal fans.

Unfortunately, the same sweet song of success fails to be experienced by the overwhelming majority of clubs in the NBA. Case in point: The Cleveland Cavaliers. Nowhere in sport today can one uncover a better example of how not to conduct and operate a major league professional sport franchise.

The sad story begins twelve years ago when Cleveland began NBA play as an expansion franchise. Not surprisingly the early days were rocky. Then coach Bill Fitch (yes, that Bill Fitch) kept the troops jumping with a constant stream of one-liners.

The team steadily improved, and in 1976 the zenith of the franchise was reached as the Cavaliers won the Central Division title and took eventual-champion Boston to six hard-fought games before bowing. Led by Jim Chones, Campy Russell, and Bingo Smith the Cavaliers turned on a city whose pride and confidence had long been eroded by too many Cleveland jokes.

Capacity crowds of over 20,000 patrons became commonplace as Cavalier fans gained the reputation as the loudest and most enthusiastic in the league.

Well, it has been downhill ever since. After a 30-52 campaign in 1978-79, Fitch was fired. In 1980, long-time owner Nick Mileti sold the franchise to Ted Stepien, owner of the largest advertising agency in the country. In typical new owner enthusiasm Stepien promised to lead the team to unparalleled heights of basketball greatness. His dreams quickly became just that, dreams.

As in most cases of organizational incompetence, the blame begins at the top. Stepien, in only two years, has lost over $8 million on the team. It is not hard to see why. After a 28-54 slate in the first year of the Stepien regime (1980-81), the team underwent major changes.

Tomahawk Ted ambushed practically the entire roster, bringing in new players, via both the free-agent and trade routes. Stepien's first sin was the inking of James Edwards, Scott Wedman, and Bobby Wilkerson to outlandish seven figure multi-year contracts. He also traded away every first-round draft pick the Cavaliers owned up to 1987.

Stepien topped off a grand summer by signing 13 players to guaranteed contracts, even though the roster limit is 12. It got so bad that the Commissioner's office intervened and prohibited the Cavaliers from making another player transaction without league permission. Hey folks, that was only the OFF-season.

The team averaged only 5,744 fans per home contest, which combined with the huge salaries of the players resulted in a financial bath for Stepien. Wedman missed most of the year with injuries and Edwards performed like the mediocre center he is instead of the $800,000 a year superstar Stepien thought he was. In addition, the Cavs ranked near the bottom of the league in points scored (103.8) and points allowed (111.7).

After an opening night crowd of 10,000 showed up to see the Celtics, the Cavaliers returned to reality as attendance fell below 3,000 for the next several home contests. This was true despite the pre-season efforts of Stepien to lure fans. In a unique plan, Stepien offered a rebate program to season-ticket holders if the Cavaliers failed to win 30 games.

The team is not a bad one. The starting unit of Wedman, Edwards, Cliff Robinson, Ron Brewer, and Geoff Huston can boogie with many first fives in the league. The bench, though, is shallow, as several rookies are learning the ropes. It is certainly not a playoff team, but with intelligence in future dealings the club certainly has a somewhat decent base from which to build.

Stepien will not be involved in those future dealings because he recently announced his intention to sell the team. He claims there are up to six interested buyers. Whoever wins the sweepstakes can expect an ocean of red ink to meet them head on. The future of the club in Cleveland is shaky at best. Stepien threatened several times to move the franchise if attendance did not pick up.

A major hindrance to fan support is the arena itself. The Richfield Coliseum, although architectually one of the finest in the nation, is located in the middle of a wasteland and halfway between Cleveland and Akron.

Because of the mystique and success of the Celtics, we in New England can easily lose touch with NBA reality. Although the Cavaliers are certainly the extreme, several other franchises are presently in financial trouble. Give thanks, New England.

Remember, there is only one Larry Bird, and we have him. Amen for that.

Wrestlers bow to Hofstra

By STEVE FITZ
Collegian Correspondent

In an impressive outing, the University of Massachusetts wrestling team lost 30-14, to a highly touted Hofstra University team, Tuesday night in Hempstead, New York.

"We would have done much better against Boston University, and probably would have beaten them if we wrestled them the way we wrestled Hofstra," said head coach Rick Freitas.

The loss dropped the Minuteman grapplers record to 0-2. Hofstra ranked 24th in the nation, won the East Coast Conference four out of the last five years.

UMass jumped out to a quick 8-0 lead behind major decisions by 118-pounder Marc Weisman and 126-pounder Brian O'Boyle.

"We shook them up winning the 118 and 126 pound bouts," said Freitas.

Weisman and Hofstra's Dion Dyes were tied after the first and second period, but Weisman took command in the third period on his way to a decisive 12-3 win.

Mike Kase of Hofstra got the takedown on O'Boyle in the 126-pound bout, but O'Boyle came back to lead 9-2 after one period.

O'Boyle, out with an injury against BU, went on to win 14-4.

In the 134-pound match senior Doug Johnson faced Hofstra's Ed Pigeon, a Division I All-American.

Pigeon took down Johnson for a 2-0 lead after one period. In the second period Johnson escaped but Pigeon again took him down, and led 4-1 at the end of the second period.

Pigeon escaped to start off the third period, and then took Johnson down. Pigeon let Johnson escape three times in the third period, and took him down after he escaped every time. The Hofstra All-American went on to win the match 13-4.

UMass's 142-pounder Paul Sullivan wrestled well against another Hofstra All-American Ted DiPasquale.

Sullivan only trailed 2-1 after two periods, but DiPasquale dominated the third period and won 8-3.

Freshman Mike Bossi lost by a major decision 14-3, to Hofstra's Tony Arena in the 150-pound bout.

The win put Hofstra in front for the first time, 12-8.

UMass 158-pounder Scott McQuaide trailed Hofstra's Mike Doherty 7-3, at the end of the first period.

McQuaide fought back and pinned Doherty at the 4:29 mark.

McQuaide's win put UMass ahead 14-12.

Hofstra's Phil Mattera dominated UMass's Dana Richard in the 167-pound match. Mattera won by major decision, 14-6, and put his team in front for good.

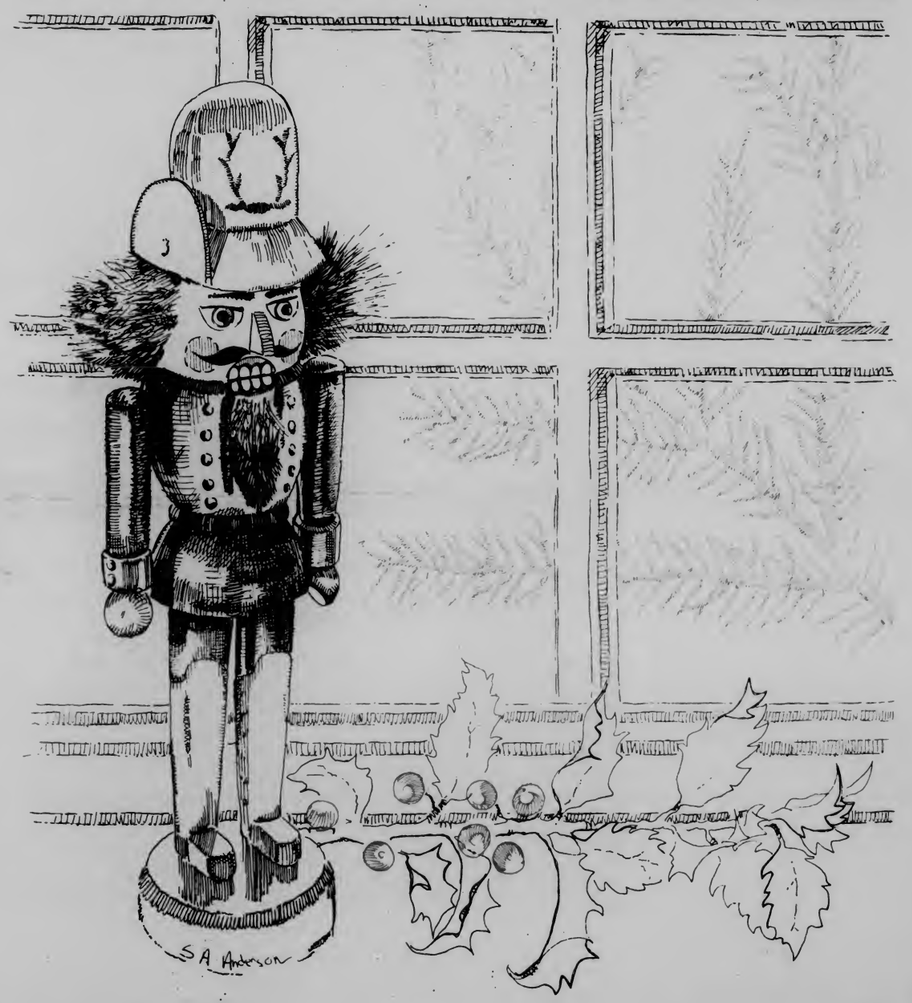
UMass's Mike Rodgers was pinned by Hofstra's Pete Capone at the 2:55 mark in the 177-pound bout.

In the 190-pound Hofstra's Rich Staublitz decisioned UMass's Dave McEntee 9-5.

"We were in much better condition and more aggressive than them, which is good for this early in the season," said Rick Freitas.

The wrestling team will compete in the Coast Guard Tournament this coming weekend.

"'Tis the season..."



"Gifts for family." A holiday special presented by the

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian
113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500

Thursday, December 2, 1982

Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

Often, the holiday season just catches people off guard. This young boy had to think over his options for a while before deciding what to ask Santa for as a Christmas present.

Who is Santa Claus, anyway?

By TRICIA YACOVONE
Collegian Correspondent

It's here again. The season to be jolly, with heralding angels, silent nights spent roasting chestnuts, and thousands of seasons' greetings and good tidings.

Occasionally, around this time of year, rumors begin to circulate about a generous plump and bearded man who wears a red suit and distributes presents to all the good boys and girls around the world.

The man allegedly has eight flying reindeer who pull his sleigh, laden with gifts, through the sky. Every now and then, hot allegations fly about another reindeer who was born with a mutation so that his nose lights up, allowing the jolly man and the rest of the reindeer to see on foggy nights.

This man goes by the name of Santa Claus, a man who lives on the North Pole with an army of elves who make the toys he gives away. He hops on his sleigh on Christmas Eve, flies around the world, climbs down people's chimneys and leaves the presents under the Christmas tree or in the stockings hung by the chimney with care.

Is there any truth in these rumors? Where did these outrageous stories begin?

This story is based on some facts...and many exaggerations. There was a saint named Nicholas who was bishop of Myra during the fourth century in what is now called Turkey. St. Nicholas had a reputation for kindness and generosity which finally earned him the honor of being the patron saint of children. The reasons for his appointment are certainly worthy of the recognition he obtained.

It seems St. Nicholas gave three bags of gold as a dowry to three poor sisters. One bag, thrown through a window at night, fell into a stocking hung over the chimney to dry, resulting in the modern tradition.

Another act performed by St. Nicholas, although disputed, is he restored life to three students who were butchered and pickled by an innkeeper.

During the Middle Ages, especially in Germany and England, December 6 was allocated St. Nicholas' Feast Day. During the festival, a boy was elected bishop for the day. He was robed in the full Episcopalian regalis of miter, cope and crozier and led a parade through town.

Gradually, St. Nicholas' Feast Day, and the tradition thereof, became associated with Christmas because the Dutch tradition of giving presents on December 6 became anglicized.

The tradition of Santa Claus was introduced to the U.S. by the Dutch, who called him "Sihter-Klaas."

From this point on, the modern image of Santa Claus is more of a literary than a mythical creation. Washington Irving, in his Knickerbocker's History of New York, (1809) described Santa Claus as a rotund, jolly figure wearing a wide-brimmed hat and smoking a long-stemmed pipe. In A Visit From St. Nicholas, a poem by clement C. Moore which begins "Twas the night before Christmas," the reindeer, sleigh, twinkling eye and the laying of his finger along his nose were added to the tradition.

The idea for the reindeer is derived from the Scandinavian or Norse traditions of this season, that say Kriss Kringle aided St. Nicholas with his reindeer and sleigh that could glide across rooftops. The reindeer seemed to be derived from a Norse legend about Odin's white horse Sleipnir who had eight feet and was the fastest horse in the world.

The German image of St. Nicholas as a furry imp "Pelz Nichol" led to the tradition of a fur suit, and Thomas Nast, in a political cartoon in Harper's Illustrated Weekly, showed the man in a soft, furry cap.

In Holland, the tradition is not as distorted from the original concept as is the American tradition. In Dutch tradition, Saint Nicholas still appears in the Episcopalian regalia of a medieval bishop, descends the chimneys and leaves presents for the children in the wooden shoes they leave filled with hay for the white horse.

In Italy, Santa has a female counterpart Befana; in Russia, it is Babouschka, recently changed to Grandfather Frost; in England, it is Father Christmas; in Germany, it is Christkindl (Christ child); and in Denmark, it is Yule Man. Thus, Santa Claus seems to be an international tradition for Christian countries that has evolved as differently as the nations themselves have.

Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

A young girl clings to her father apparently terrified of the red-suited old man we all know as Santa Claus. Vising Santa to ask for Christmas gifts is a tradition often enjoyed by kids. This girl, however, seems afraid of jolly 'ol St. Nick.

Traditions ignore commercialization

By HANNAH HOSOM
Collegian Staff

The commercialization of the holidays is always a favorite topic just about now. I can bitch with the best of them about decorations before Thanksgiving, Christmas specials, holiday happenings, and all the other excuses to make money off the winter holiday season. Somehow, though, the commercialization can always be avoided, ignored, and put aside in your mind if you really want to do it.

Traditions are always the best part of the holidays, not the giving or receiving; it's the sharing that always makes it special. When I go home this winter, it's not for the hour in front of the fireplace unwrapping all the gifts my parents got me — although that's fun, too — it's to see my friends, or to go caroling on the green with my old Latin teacher leading the group of 40 townspeople faking it on the high notes.

Or the party afterward at the Joneses' (no joke) with all the 'kids' downstairs and all the adults (everyone over 35) upstairs, all getting drunk together, then meeting in the den for another round of caroling and drinking. Mr. Jones always floats in, smiles, and then goes back out to the kitchen to check on the spiced cider. It's always fun to see a high school administrator something less than stern for a few hours.

New Year's Eve, is of course, part of the holiday. It's connected to the end of finals by a series of parties, and is always the last big event of the season before a few of us start heading back to school. New Year's tradition is the big bash at a friend's house. There is food, everywhere; there is the special recipe punch, everywhere; and there are people coming in off the street, everywhere. It's not unusual for the hostess to have no idea who the group of suited guests in the kitchen are, but nobody really cares anyway.

It's fun complaining about the exploitation of the holidays by the commercial world, but when it comes down to it, who really notices in the end anyway?

DYNAMITE RECORDS
BUY SELL TRADE
RENT
NOW OPEN IN AMHERST
in Paul's Old Time Furniture
57 E. Pleasant
JAZZ - BLUES - ROCK
CLASSICAL - FOLK
Thornes Marketplace Northampton 584-1580

THE ULTIMATE IN FINE JEWELRY
J. AUSTIN JEWELER
ON THE COMMON - AMHERST - (413) 253-3986

Installed WHILE-U-WAIT
Mobile or Drive-In Service
Auto Glass Specialists INC.
297 Pleasant St. Northampton
Open Mon-Fri 8-5
• 586-8388 •
Sat. 9-2

Shopping time for families is here!

By CRIS SCHUSTER
Collegian Staff

Oh no, not again!

It's that time of year again, folks. You know, when you spend all your money on gifts for friends and family and panic when you can't think of what to get them.

I'll be the first person to admit that shopping is a lot of fun if you're shopping for yourself. But, I'm one of those people who can't shop for gifts for other people without going into hysterics.

Every year its the same thing. What can I get Dad for the holiday? What can I get Mom? How about my sister and brother? And I can't forget Grandma and Grandpa, because they never forget me. There's nothing that makes me feel more awful than not getting someone a gift when they get me one.

But then again, it's the thought that causes many of the problems. I can never think of what to get them. I'll think and think and think and do all my shopping in one day, at the very last moment. Every year I tell myself I am not going to wait until the last moment, but every year that's exactly what I end up doing.

So on the last day, after much thought, consideration, and panic, I go from department to department, store to store, in search for the "perfect gift." (Which by the way I never find. I really don't think it exists).

However, before leaving for the stores, I make myself one huge list of possible ideas. I avoid including what I got my family the year before if I can help it. But as luck and memory would have it, I usually can't remember what I got everyone.

So, in an attempt to start my shopping early this year and avoid all the crowds, frustration and hysterics, I've already made a list of what I plan to get for my family. It goes something like this:

DAD AND GRANDPA

Now what do you get a man? That has always been my biggest problem whenever I shop for gifts, whether it be for birthdays or for one of the other holidays of the year. What do men need? I haven't been home in four months. How do I know what my Dad has bought himself since then, so I don't give him the same thing?

Mom's no help. She keeps telling me I don't have to get Dad anything. But I want to!

A pipe.. tobacco...a nice lighter...but I don't like to encourage my Dad's smoking...a sharp Irish-looking hat...a tool box...a nice record...a tie...a good book...stationery so he will write me more often...a poster...a nice pen set...a flannel shirt...a UMass t-shirt...a paperweight...a bottle of wine...wine glasses...a jar of peanuts...

MOM AND GRANDMA

Stationery so she can write me...her favorite perfume...a poster...a plaque...a bouquet of flowers...a pair of gloves...a scarf...a plant...a simple piece of jewelry...New England maple syrup...tennis balls...an invitation to dinner...a homemade hook rug...a bottle of wine and/or wineglasses...a stuffed animal...a picture of us kids framed...

MY SISTER

Anything that I can borrow...clothes...stuffed animal...posters...a movie pass for two...a good trashy novel...a magazine subscription...jewelry...a record ...some sort of game, i.e. Twister or Chess...a nice belt...hair ornaments...a box of chocolates...stationery...a box of cookies...a calendar...a nice shirt...a pair of shoes...slippers...a photo album...a scrapbook...a vase...bookends...a pen set...a nice hat...a wallet...keychain...a football...a candle...an ornament...plant hanger...

MY BROTHER

Stationery...gift certificates to some restaurant ...poster...record...belt...dictionary...book...stuffed animal...puzzle...a UMass shirt...shaving items...model airplane...a box of cookies...a mobile...comic books...a keychain...a magazine subscription...a deck of cards...a calendar...photo album...a can of Pledge for their room...music books...a frisbee...a fishing pole and/or equipment...a fishing box...headphones to his stereo...a wallet...dart game...ping pong paddles and balls...a six-pack of beer...

Naturally these are just ideas. With my luck I'll probably forget the list when I do go shopping. Most of the items can be switched around and chances are once I get to the stores I'll see other things I like better, but at least this list is a start.

I hope you have better luck than I do.

Happy shopping!

Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

The holiday season is a time for families, especially children. One boy (above) samples a toy dog while shopping with his parents, while another toddler (below) gets a close-up look at some stuffed toys, thanks to a lift from his father.

Watch out for the holiday blues

Lack of gifts for friends cause deep depression

By LISA PEDULLA
Collegian Staff

It is a Tuesday morning (the last before finals), I storm into the Coffee Shop, in my usual hurry, almost running smack into an innocent passerby. I grab a cup of coffee, spilling half of it as usual, and fling myself into a seat at our regular table (I always did have a slight flair for the dramatic). I sigh heavily hoping the two of you will notice my melancholy mood, but you ignore me as usual, knowing my moods all too well.

Finally one of you looks up.

"Why so glum," you ask.

"I think I just flunked an exam, and its not even finals yet."

I know, I know, big deal you say. But it is to me. You look at me and yawn, as my other friend plays an invisible violin. Some friends you two are. Do you know how many times I've listened to you complain?

A pause — as we all lapse into silent memories. Suddenly the bustling coffee shop seems quiet. We laugh at our sudden lack of conversation.

"Oh well, we're headed into town," you say, starting to get up.

"Wait a minute," I yelp. "Don't you care, I'm really deep in depression and you two are going to leave me."

You sit down, knowing better than to try and fight me in a mood like this.

"Okay, so what's the problem," the first asks, as the other glances at her watch.

"I'm sick of life," I sigh, stretching back in a more comfortable position. You look at each other and groan. "And you two are part of the problem."

You look puzzled.

"Don't you realize that it is almost Christmas time, we'll all be leaving each other, and I haven't even gotten anyone a present," I said.

"Is that all," you both sigh.

"We haven't gotten you anything either," the first says.

"And don't expect anything we're broke," the second adds.

But after all we've been to each other, don't you even feel bad that we'll be apart for a month." I search your faces for an answer.

You both start a conversation, ignoring everything I've said, pretending I'm not there, as if you thought that would shut me up.

"Besides I feel like a good complaint session, I have a lot I want to get off my chest," I say.

You look at each other and laugh. If I was looking for this kind of treatment I could have gone anywhere.

I begin my monologue, without your attention. "Why am I working so hard to get into a major I don't think I like."

You both shrug. If I had wanted an answer I would have asked for it.

"Then there's the paper," I say.

You both look upward. As the first says, "Please God, don't let her get started on the paper agin."

I ignore you, continuing on, "either I'm not working enough and feeling guilty, or I am writing and my work is lousy," I say.

My first friend looks off, I follow her eyes staring at the tall gorgeous guy with the blue eyes. "Is he more important to you than I am," I snap.

"He sure is," you reply.

Quickly tapping me on the shoulder you say, "Cheer up quick, look who just walked in."

"Oh him," I grumble.

"You really are depressed," you say with surprise, as our other friend looks up from her book puzzled.

The expressions on your faces tell me you haven't been listening to a word I've said.

"I'm not interested in him anymore. He doesn't even know I'm alive and besides, the semester is almost over anyway," I groan.

"He just winked," you say.

"Yah, at you," I snap.

"It's not my fault," you say slightly panic stricken.

"I know, I'm just tired of never being noticed," I weep, as I drop my head on the table.

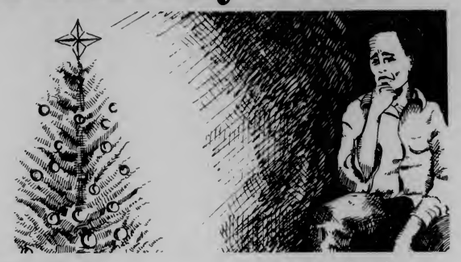
You pat my shoulder. Sympathy at last.

"We really have to be leaving now. Are you okay?" You ask with concern this time.

"Yeh, I'm fine," I say with indifference.

You leave me with my original problem: what to get my friends for Christmas. I know everyone's broke — especially me. I realize suddenly I feel cheery, as long as I have friends like you to listen to me, life can't really be all that bad.

And so this Christmas I give you this as my git — to my friends — your friendship is the only gift I ask in return.



Holiday season can bring depression to some people

By JOHN BROBST
Collegian Staff

In December each year, psychiatrists, psychologists and mental health counselors are besieged with requests for treatment of what is known as the "holiday syndrome."

Christmas, according to a psychiatrist who deals with this phenomenon, is a time when we lose some of our inhibitions and become emotionally more child-like. Thus the outpatient, though normally able to cope with job, school, or family — by clinging to a strict routine, keeping emotions in check — finds himself emotionally defenseless and vulnerable during the holidays. So, for a while at least, he cracks up.

For students, many of whom are struggling for independence from their families, or just as many who think back on the days when life seemed simpler at home, the reality of family life doesn't always agree with the excitement and anticipation heightened to a frenzy by holiday advertising.

For others — the legion of the lonely, those who've recently lost a mate, a child or a parent, or even a job — the season of joy is an emotional wrench.

Consider an elderly woman I saw standing at the cashier's counter at a local department store. Holding a sweater, she volunteered, "I don't have anybody to give me anything for Christmas, so I just thought I'd buy myself a present."

There are modern day Scrooges who profess to hate the holidays. They protesteth too much, the psychiatrist says. They are using their feigned toughness to insulate themselves from "the emotional pattern of the holidays."

Even those who merely say they dread the holidays or complain it's too commercial often are those haunted by the sweet poignancy of holidays past — the good ones they knew as children or young adults.

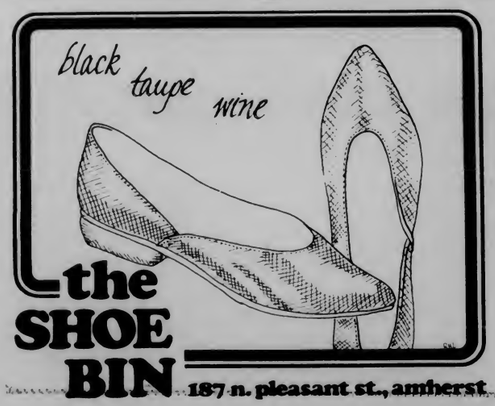
So what does this mean to those of us who have the old holiday spirit?

It means being aware of the "holiday syndrome," aware of holiday depression. It means being sensitive to the emotional needs of those who cannot be joyous, offering kindness instead of merriment. Instead of heaping more gifts on already overflowing laps, or more food on mounded plates, it means sending a little remembrance to one who has no one, or putting an extra plate around our dinner tables.

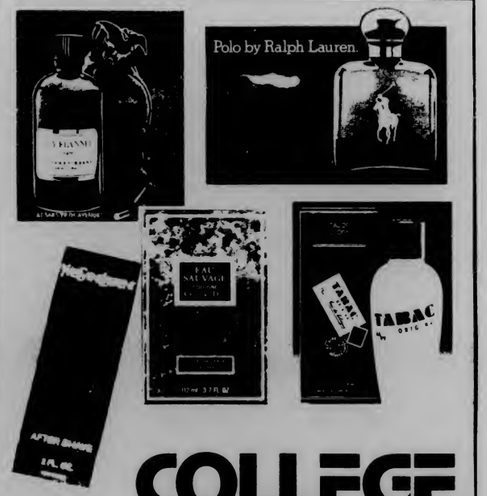
For instance, many of the area's elderly never venture out at night. Think of what a tour of the holiday lights might mean to them.

At the very least, let's be mindful in our holiday joy that for all too many in our midst, the most blessed day of the year is December 26.

The Collegian wishes everyone a safe and happy holiday season



the SHOE BIN
187 n. pleasant st., amherst



COLLEGE DRUG
9-9 weekdays/ 9-6 Sat./ 9-3 Sun.
4 MAIN STREET, AMHERST, Phone 253-2523

Beat inflaton: steal the gifts

By RICH NANGLE
Collegian Staff

I don't mean to ruin the party, but I hate the holidays. It is the most despicable and blatant form of capitalist commercial overkill ever devised by man. Remember Christmas is a relatively new idea. Its origins trace back to the alleged birth of Jesus Christ in 6 B.C. (check encyclopedia if you doubt the date).

Perhaps Christmas was a way to get people to buy things in a religious sense so they wouldn't feel so guilty about spending obscene amounts of money. Whatever the reason, it's tough to buy for family and friends with a limited budget here in Reagan's recession. So here are some tips to relieve the pressure and have some fun, too.

Shoplift your presents.

It's easy and fun, but you have to know what to steal and what to disregard. Cassette tapes are primo. They fit easily into trouser pockets and make a nice gift for any music loving relative. For those who live in eastern Massachusetts, try Lechmere's. They are not as easy as they used to be, but security is still pretty lame there.

Another easy item is record albums. Take an armful of records and put them under either your left or right arm. Then drape your coat over your shoulder a la Mike Dukakis. No problem. Try to look evil as you leave the store to make sure nobody bothers you.

Almost any small item can be stolen if you wear the right clothes. I suggest wearing your old high school varsity jacket, the one that has holes in the side pockets. They are perfect for jamming things into the deep dark crevices of your "klepto coat." You'll be amazed by how many times you can make a clean escape after being frisked by a paranoid security officer.

It's easy to justify this seemingly unliberal lawbreaking method of fun. Stores hire security guards, right? The security guards have to be paid, right? Where do you think the money to pay them comes from, your student activities fee? Wrong. Remember, you owe it to yourself to shoplift occasionally to make up for the added costs these overly cautious stores incur upon you.

Changing pricetags is tres facile and can be done in multiples as high as you could imagine. But you have to know a few things in order to be successful. For instance, my golf bag includes two $50 drivers which I bought for less than $10. This would have been impossible if I'd brought the items in question to the checkout lane with the guy who looks like he's spent his life playing golf. I'd have been nabbed on the spot. So instead I brought them to the lane guarded by the naive looking old lady. Again, no problem.

One more way to buy that item you just can't afford is to put it in another container. My favorite example of this is when I put an electronic soccer game inside a cake mold box. The soccer game went for $39.95, the cake mold sold for $2.49.

Happy holidays.

Editor's note: Rich Nangle, on leave from the Collegian, is serving 30 days in the Hampshire County Correctional Institution.

Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

Shopping becomes a major activity during the holiday season. A young girl checks out the decorations and the crowds at the Hampshire Mall last week.

creswell gallery
15 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst
upstairs over N'Hamp Coop Bank
next to Lodestone & Gladbags
Tues. thru Fri.
11 to 2 & 4 to 6
Sat. 11 to 3
or by appointment
black art, posters
cards & prints
african & third world artifacts
256-8000

CHINESE KITCHEN
興旺樓
FAST FOOD RESTAURANT
Luncheon Specials $1.19
Every Day
Take Out Orders
150 King St.
Northampton, Mass.
Please call
(413) 586-8220
586-8221
OPEN HOURS
SUNDAY 12 NOON to 10:00 P.M.
MON. thru THURS. 11:30 A.M. to 10:00 P.M.
FRI. & SAT. 11:30 A.M. to 12:00 MIDNITE
HOLIDAYS 12 NOON to 10:00 P.M.

GIFTS
Pasta
WOK
WOK
elegant gift boxed housewares
HATS, GLOVES, SOCKS & SCARVES
CANDLES
Big selection of colors, shapes, and scents.
The SOAP CART
bubblebaths • moisturizers
soaps • soaps for kids
loofahs • brushes • sponges
sachets
gift boxed wine & beverage glasses
toys & games
PLUSH ANIMALS
Jewelry
Cosmetics
Hair combs
and unique accessories...
casual wear for women & men • jewelry
cosmetics • soap cart • accessories • gifts
home furnishings • kitchen • housewares
glass & china • prints • cards • totes & soft luggage
SUNDAY 12-5
EVERY NIGHT TIL 9
MASTER CHARGE
VISA
FACES
Downtown | Amherst
A Store-full of Stocking Stuffers

ATLANTIC SUN ACTIONWEAR
67 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002
Long Sleeve T-Shirts
Corduroy Pants & Jackets
Sweaters
ocean pacific sunwear.

Watch for Holiday Shopper II
December 10

GIVE THE ARTS
This Holiday Season
Fine Arts Center Gift Certificate
To: anyone
Any Denomination
Available Now
Fine Arts Center Box Office
Open M-F,
noon to 4 p.m.
For information
call 545-2511
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
Philip Glass Ensemble
The Washington Ballet
Jeffrey Kahane, piano
Marcel Marceau
Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra
"Twelfth Night"
"Tartuffe"
Tokyo String Quartet
Bella Lewitsky Dance Co.
Springfield Sym. w/Billy Taylor Trio
Dexter Gordon Quartet
Dong-Suk Kang, violin
New York Chamber Soloists

Lifa Bodywear
The Original Polypropylene
Introduced 18 years ago, LIFA polpropylene bodywear was the first synthetic to revolutionize the sports underwear industry. Today, LIFA is synonymous with quality and high performance. It's the perennial favorite of cross-country skiers, skaters, runners, cyclists, and has been selected for use by the U.S. and Canadian Nordic Ski Teams.
LIFA's extremely smooth filament fiber does not absorb moisture and is so thin that body warmth easily transfers perspiration through the fibers and out to the next layer of clothing. LIFA stays dry. And you stay warm and comfortable.
Helly-Hansen makes LIFA in a wide range of styles for men, women and children. LIFA's soft, stretchy knit fits like a second skin and allows full freedom of movement. LIFA bodywear is machine washable and quick drying.
Men's & Women's Shirts & Pants $19.00 each runner'shop
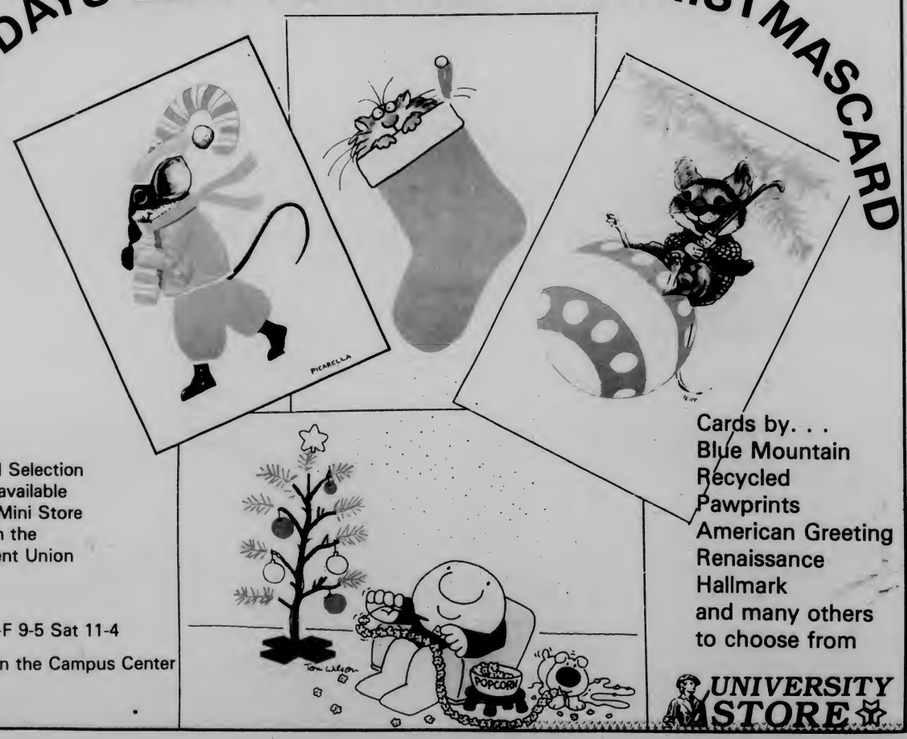
114 Main Street
Northampton
Mon - Sat
9:30 - 5:00
586-1971

ONLY 22 DAYS LEFT TO SEND A CHRISTMASCARD



Limited Selection also available in the Mini Store in the Student Union
Open M-F 9-5 Sat 11-4
Located in the Campus Center
Cards by. . .
Blue Mountain
Recycled
Pawprints
American Greeting
Renaissance
Hallmark and many others to choose from
UNIVERSITY STORE

Family Resale Clothing
ONCE MORE WITH FEELING
Quality clothing and gift ideas at low prices for the holidays
Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant
Amherst, MA.
549-3772

Union Records Unlimited
Presents
BLIZZARD BLITZ
DON'T GET CAUGHT IN THE STORM WITHOUT YOUR FAVORITE TUNES TO KEEP YOU WARM!
ONE COUPON PER CUSTOMER EFFECTIVE 10/4 - 12/10
50¢ OFF ANY ALBUM IN THE STORE WITH THIS COUPON
TAKE ADVANTAGE OF OUR SPECIAL CHRISTMAS HOURS
DEC 6-17:
WE'RE OPEN IN ADDITION TO REGULAR HOURS 6:30-9:30 TUES.-THURS. PM!
M-F: 10 to 5
GREAT GIFT IDEAS!

art • architecture • children's • computers
The Reading Remedy
ENTIRE STOCK
50%-90% OFF
PUBLISHER'S LIST PRICE
The Reading Remedy
NEW BOOKS AT HALF PRICE
come see us you'll be surprised at the beautiful affordable gifts at the Reading Remedy... a very different kind of bookstore - where every book is always below regular wholesale price!
open Thurs & Fri evenings 'til 9, Sunday 12-5 down the ramp at - 71 N. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST (Across from Lows Foods) film • foreign languages • gardening • history
• cookbooks • crafts • drama • economics • english • etc
• fiction • nat sci • pol sci • soc sci • technical • travel • etc

SALADS SUBMARINES SYRIANS
the sub
11 A.M. TO 2 A.M. / 7 DAYS
33 E. PLEASANT ST., AMHERST / 549-5160
FREE 16 oz. soda with a whole sub

Can we build one for you?
ONION BAGEL
LOX
CREAM CHEESE
ONION BAGEL
Design your favorite bagel sandwich and bring us the blueprint - we'll build it to exact specs. We're the bagel engineers at
THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN
Amherst Carriage Shops
549-6314

PRAKTIKLY WORNE
fine used and vintage clothing
Season's Greetings
from the area's oldest and largest used clothing store!
48 GREEN ST N'TON·586-1913

Great Gifts
Stocking Stuffers
Posters Cards
BLOUSES
Dresses, Skirts, Scarves
Earrings Crystals
Mugs Calendars
Ornaments
Vases, Boxes, Tins, Mobiles, Toys
Weeknights 9 pm Dec 10 - 23
Sundays 12 - 5 pm
Daily 10 am - 6 pm
Open 10 am - 6 pm - 9 pm Fri.
Open Sundays 12-5 p.m.
Great Gifts - Great Prices
THE MERCANTILE
AMHERST CARRIAGE SHOPS

Holiday gifts: what do you want?

By JIM FINKLE
Collegian Staff

While running around searching for Christmas and Hanukkah gifts for family and friends, one question inevitably comes up in the mind of the shopper as he or she goes from store to store, or leafs through the endless holiday specials and advertising supplements: What do I want for Christmas or Hanukkah?

Collegian file photo

Dean of Students William F. Field: No Campus Center leaks

Student Government Association President Jim Murphy said he would like to see "low cost education."

CASIAC major Judy Day of North Reading said she would like a black kitten because black kittens are "cute and cuddly."

Art major Paul Dimattia of Weston wanted a light blue Triumph Spitfire "that works right all the time and nothing would happen to it."

University of Massachusetts Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey wants a white Christmas and a little peace and quiet.

"I'd like six inches of snow and two — maybe three — days off," he said.

Michelle Ryback, 18, of Natick is interested in pursuing a new hobby with her coveted gift.

"I'd like an Olympus OM-1 camera so I can get into photography as a hobby," she said.

Engineering major Mark Cacciapouti of Westboro wants a new turntable for his stereo system.

"I've needed a new one since I came here (to UMass in September)," he said.

Dean of students William Field's gift choice will improve life for the entire UMass community. He would like "to have the Campus Center stop leaking."

Zoology major Alex Zucker of East Lansing, Michigan has two requests. He would like a BMW 633i and a sensory deprivation tank.

John Strymish, 18, of Newton has a practical request.

"I want leather pants because they keep you warm," he said.

"I haven't really thought about it," said Inquiry program member Aikel Pandor, 18.

Collegian file photo

Chancellor Joseph Duffy: A few days off

CASIAC major Cary Braynt of Fitchburg wants some new audio equipment.

"I'd be happy with a really nice stereo in a sound proof room," she said.

Fisheries biology major Dan Stanley of Lunenburg was the most generous person interviewed by the Collegian.

"I'd like to take everybody I like skiing and to the Bahamas," he said.

After more thought, however, he turned out to be humanly selfish. He said he really wanted a four-track tape recorder.

Some souls must work Xmas day

By LISA PEDULLA
Collegian Staff

Christmas day is the one time of the year when everyone gets to relax, forget about the finals they flunked, the lab fees they haven't paid and the neighbors down the hall who will surely retaliate for all the nasty tricks played on them this semester.

It is the day when the University of Massachusetts will (hopefully) be covered in snow, and all will be still for a change.

While most of the UMass community sits before the Christmas tree opening presents, singing carols and feasts on cookies and eggnog, a few people will be left behind to make sure the University continues running smoothly.

When the Campus Center and the administrations close for the holiday and the dorms are still and abandoned, the University Health Services will still be in operation, providing 24 hour emergency service for anyone in need. The Health Services will be closed for appointments, but will have a nurse and a physician on hand at all times for urgent cases.

The physical plant operations will also be running and University telephone operators will be available for those who need telephone service on Christmas Day.

Operator Dolly Cleveland said, in the past the operators have split up the time into four hour shifts so everyone could enjoy part of the holiday. She said this year three operators will be working, but she does not know how they will divide their hours.

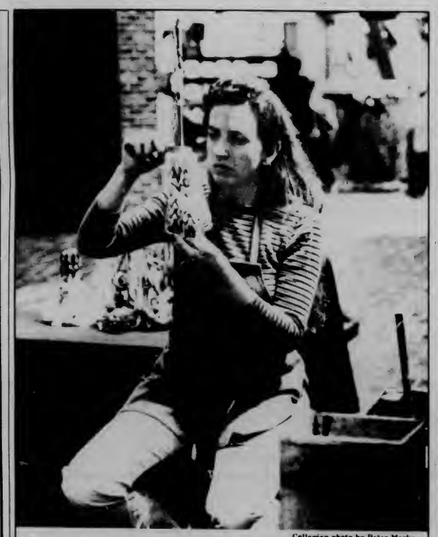
The Physical Plant will have a two person crew working 24 hours a day, and someone must be on the desk at all times, according to Don Sturtevant. He said there will be a call back list for problems requiring the service of a worker in a specific trade, but no one from those trades will actually be working on Christmas.

For the people who work on Campus on Christmas there will be no special parties, or Christmas dinners, although both the University Health Services and the telephone operators have employee parties before Christmas.

Sturtevant said too few people will be working for them to have a party.

"We just have to make our own entertainment," Cleveland said.

This year when everyone has put UMass, "out of sight and out of mind," to coin a phrase, remember that some people do remain behind. Maybe while everyone is home enjoying the holiday season with family and friends, they can take time out to toast those few who will keep our campus running smoothly this Christmas day.



Collegian photo by Peter Marks

Valeria McCann, a vendor at the Hampshire Mall, demonstrates the art of candle making. Candles are one option for an inexpensive holiday gift.

The Christmas pen set.

Give America's finest writing instruments, the Cross ball pen and Selectip™ Pen. In gold filled, sterling, Classic Black* and lustrous chrome. Priced from $26.50.

Fred J Houck Jeweler CROSS SINCE 1846

26 Main Street, Amherst, MA

Be sure to ask about personalized engraving.

"Look what's cooking"

Roberto's

"HOME OF ITALIAN FOODS"

PIZZA OUR SPECIALTY
CHICKEN - SPAGHETTI
ORDERS PUT UP TO TAKE OUT

584-0204

Kitchen Hours 11:30 A.M.-11:30 P.M.
223 Pleasant St., Northampton

THE SALVATION ARMY

Christmas is love, hope and caring.

At The Salvation Army Christmas means "sharing."

Give to The Salvation Army so others may have a happy holiday.

Holidays are times for family unity

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collgian Staff

The holiday season. When most of us were younger, the holidays meant a long list of toys and gifts that we hoped Santa would bring us for being good little boys and girls. High up on the lists were GI Joes, Barbies, hot rod cars and what ever seemed to be the fad of Madison Avenue advertising that year.

It was taken for granted the family would be together for the holidays. But as we grow older, the holiday season is appreciated more for what it is.

It's not appreciated for all the holiday specials like Frosty the Snowman or Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer, or the never ending KMart, Caldors, Sears and McDonalds commercials. Nor is it remembered for the incessant message of "Buy now! Pay later." Six or eight months later and you're still paying and it starts all over again.

That's not Christmas or the season spirit.

It's a time to get together with the ones we love and our families. For most of us as students here at UMass, we are away from our families for four months, slaving away (with a bit of partying mixed in here and there) at the books. Then comes the pressure-filled final exams. What a load off UMass students shoulders when they are over and it's time to head home.

It's time to head home for some relaxation and partying. No, not that kind of partying. It is 'partying' with your family and loved ones during the holiday celebrating whatever traditions your family has started over the years.

It is a time to save the richness of the butterball turkey roasting in the oven for the holiday dinner, to take in the fresh, alpine smell of the evergreen tree, and the spectacle of the visual show that lights up your tree against a white New England snowfall.

It is a time to gather the joy radiating from the person who just opened up your gift to them. The smile and the anticipation of the receiver is worth every penny.

The holiday is a time to get together with the entire family and sit down and enjoy each others company, to find out new news and old news, what's good and what's bad. It is truly a time of celebration.

It doesn't matter if you open your gifts on Christmas Eve or on Christmas morning or even have gifts at all. What does matter is being together with your loved one and family.

This description of the holiday may not be how your family celebrates it (I like to think that my family celebrates it this way). However you celebrate your holiday find peace and happiness. Happy Holidays.

Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

Sometimes, shopping for presents can be more fun than receiving them. These two kids certainly seem to have the holiday spirit.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY Collegian Telephone (413) 545-3500

Campus Center / University of Massachusetts / Amherst, Mass. 01003

"Gifts for Family"
A Collegian* holiday special
December 2, 1982
Directed and Edited by Cris Schuster
Editing and layout by Ed Levine
Cover design and graphics by Steve Anderson
Photography by Tom Kudla and Peter Marks
Written by: John Brobst, Gerry deSimas, Jim Finkle, Hannah Hosom, Anne McCrory, Rich Nangle, Lisa Pedulla, Cris Schuster, Tricia Yaccavone
Production: Laura Shanahan, Nancy Gallo, typesetting; Stuart Sajdak, camera and paste-up. Printed by Ware River News, Turley Publications, Palmer and Ware.
Advertising: Craig Robbins, advertising manager.
Jeff Taylor, Jeff Hirschberg, associate advertising managers.
Joleen Benedict, Jay Brightman, Joel cantor, Gary Cohen, Chris Lonergan, Caren Orlick, Steve Roberge, Stacy Schott, Sandra Stambovsky.
Produced by the staff of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, the student-run newspaper at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, published Monday through Friday during the school year. Offices at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Ma., 01003. 545-3500.

GIFTS • GIFTS • GIFTS FOR MEN & WOMEN

• Sweaters •
Icelandic · Reindeer · Fair Isle
Ragg and more
• Mittens
• Gloves • Hats
• Scarves • Ragg Socks
• Warm-Ups
• Much, Much More
Gift Certificates Available

Saturday Clothes

266 N. Pleasant St. (Behind Silverscape) 253-9729
9:30 - 6:00 Mon. - Sat., FRI. 'TIL 9, SUN 12 - 5

The Bird of Paradise

THE FINEST SELECTION OF VINTAGE CLOTHES, LINENS, ANTIQUE JEWELRY AND OBJECTS OF ART

WE ALSO BUY AND SELL

150 MAIN STREET
(THORNE'S 2nd FLOOR)
NORTHAMPTON, MA 01060

(413) 586-0216
(413) 567-8306

Crabtree & Evelyn®
LONDON

A Wide Range of Gift Ideas
for Everyone on your Christmas List

Soaps, Toiletries
Potpourri & Comestibles
Made from natural herbs, fruits and flowers in the countryside of England and Europe.

71 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 253-9561

Take a Break from your Christmas Shopping by Stopping in at one of our 3 Subway Locations

SUBWAY

America's Famous Foot Long Sandwich

Hampshire Mall Hadley
214 Exchange St. Chicopee
90 King St. Northampton

It's still easy to find many cheap gifts

By HANNAH HOSOM
Collegian Staff

Admit it, how many of you are looking at all the advertisements for presents and then at your checkbooks? How many of you are paging wildly through piles of papers looking for the gingerbread recipe you used last year for presents?

My friends and I cannot afford what we'd love to give each other, and so we have developed a game of giving cheap, creative presents, trying to outdo each other every year. Thus we now lead into:

Cheap Presents I Have Gotten and Loved

Creativity in this game is a definite plus. One friend of mine is the unofficial champion, but she's got the advantage: she's an advertising major. She is a terrific artist, and has made calendars and stationary. Once she chose a poem for each of us, wrote it out in calligraphy, and drew a design in the background...it still hangs on my wall at home.

Ornaments are another biggie. I received a mouse one year made from walnut shell halves. My friend covered the bottom, painted eyes on one end, attached felt ears and a tail, and viola, instant present. Heavy tinfoil snowflakes are always fun, but fellow clutzes must be wary of sharp edges.

Food and drink are, of course, not only fun to get, but fun to make. Dig up a recipe for cookies or cake and double the recipe. Eat some yourself. Make a little bit of everything and give a gift pack. Be creative — I once got a zucchini cake with cranberry frosting. It wasn't as bad as it sounds, tasting a little like a carrot cake with lemon frosting, so there's really no limit to experimentation here!

Another idea is glogg, a hot spiced alcholic drink from Scandinavia. Fun to make? Definitely! Even better, get together with friends here and make two batches — one for you and one for those at home. It makes a great get-together right before a holiday party, too.

If you have a lot of time, there is always the option of quilts, scarves, handmade boxes, woodwork, but not many people are that organized.

If you're getting close to the big day, and absolutely have to go out and buy things, there are always ways to cut corners here, too. Jellybeans in cut-glass shotglasses are colorful, and simple, and the glass gives them something to keep and use later. Candles are a big hit. One friend of mine (the artist during a bad year) gave each of us votive candles in personalized colors. If you can find inexpensive vases, fill them with different kinds of flowers for each person. Buy something small, and elaborate, is the rule here.

Think about what you've gotten in the past, and what you still use and remember as being particularly memorable. As a college student, you're not expected to come up with $20 or even $10 presents for everyone you know, but there are always ideads for those you care about to get something in the mail without your going broke.

Good luck and happy holidays.

Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

Video games always make good holiday gifts, especially for youngsters. One local kid checks out a home version of "Donkey Kong" at a local store last week.

Parents reluctantly accept video craze

By ANNE McCRORY
Collegian Staff

December 1982. A white blanket of fresh snow covers the ground. A sleepy household awakens early to dispel the mysteries awaiting amidst assorted packages lying still under a tinsel tree. A whisper becomes an impatient nudge as three toddlers clamber on their parents' bed in anticipation of Santa's gifts.

Moments later the living room is a disarray of torn paper, the scene ablaze with electronic lights. Beeps, blips and buzzers break the morning silence as not even the most traditional of holidays remains immune to technology, 1982 style.

"It (the video craze) was bound to happen," said one resigned parent. "The producers of The Jetsons predicted it years ago. I'm only sorry it took this long. My 10 year old is better at Defenders than I am."

Another parent advocating video games called the games "blunt recreations of reality."

"The possibility of a space invasion is very real," said one noted astronomer and parent. "Personally, I'd feel safer knowing our people were capable of defense from such an attack. All alien visitors won't be as friendly as E.T.," he added.

"It's too bad women are exempt from combat," said one mother. "My daughter eats her peas like Ms. Pacman with amazing accuracy and speed. I think someday she will have military potential," she said.

A rumor that the video industry has been covertly financed by President Reagan's defense budget, though as yet unfounded, is probably in the minds of some parents.

"That Mr. Reagan is a clever fellow," said one data systems analyst. "Video, as a means for subtle integration of military tactics into today's radical young minds, is a brainwashing mechanism. What better way is there to cultivate a generation of robots than to support his outrageous military spending?"

Additional proposals circulating in the Defense Department include consideration of Tron and Battle Zone scores as admissions criteria to competitive military schools. No official word has yet been released on this policy.

Concern over harmful side effects caused by video technology, such as eye damage, currently appears minimal.

"By the time electronic games are cited as the cause of mutations in the human species, cloning should be perfected," said one optimistic scientist. "If not, there probably won't be much of a world left to look at anyway."

'Twas the night AFTER Christmas...

Christmas Gift Certificates
One Size Fits All!

EAST HEAVEN TUB Co

Private Hot Tub Rooms
33 West St. Northampton
586-6843

Sale

20% OFF ALL

CLOTHING
JOHN HENRY, WILLI WEAR, BELLE FRANCE, FENN WRIGHT AND MANSON AND MORE

LINGERIE
LILY OF FRANCE, HANRO, HANKY PANKY, CHICAS AND MORE

SHOES
NICKELS, JAZZ, CAPEZIO, GOODY TWO SHOES AND MORE

THURS. DEC. 2 THROUGH SUN. DEC. 5
9:30 - 9:00 THURS. AND FRI., 9:30 - 5:30 SAT., 12 - 5 SUN.

Chona

CHONA CONTEMPORARY FASHION
THORNES MARKET NORTHAMPTON

It's not so easy to find some generic holiday cards

By HANNAH HOSOM
Collegian Staff

The annual holiday frustration has set in. Here it is, just barely December, and the stores are filled with cards. Santa, reindeer, elves, red and green and white graphic designs are everywhere. Yet in the middle of all this merriment is a small problem.

Have you ever tried to find an entire box of cards suitable for giving to everyone? To be really economical, practical, cheap, whatever, and get one (1) box of cards for christian friends, Jewish friends, aethiests and my relatives of non-specific religious persuasions, is quite honestly a pain in the gluteus maximus.

Ziggy is obviously all set. He doesn't know anyone who celebrates anything but Christmas. He's even happy at this time of year, instead of playing his usual underdog role: hanging mistletoe, wrapping presents, commenting on the commercialism of the season. Little mice run around between presents, and birds hang ornaments on fir trees.

Happy holidays cards are pathetic. You know, the kind of card made for people with my problem, having rings of smiley faces on the cover and a big HAPPY HOLIDAYS inside. Yuck. Or sentimental pictures of snow-on-a-mailbox. They're okay, but I don't like sending cards I can't tear the cover off of and use as wall decorations.

Things are looking up, though. Boyton, who does all those animal cards for every occasion, has hippo holiday cards. Cutesy, but not boring. Funny cards with tasteful comments are now being put out by Hallmark, when you care enough to send the very best but don't want him/her to know by the mushy sentiment written over the picture of poinsettas.

Best of all, new wave is now hitting the racks. Colors and stripes in purple and yellow form the words "happy holidays" on the cover, letting you write what you want on the inside. The one I liked the best was a mouse hanging off a huge snowflake. Nothing on the inside, nothing restricting on the outside. Those of you who might be getting one, don't be surprised.

On the other hand, even though I had to look around now, I never buy anything less than two weeks into December. So, as usual, you all might get those little notes attached to your plastic bags of jellybeans again. That's always economical, yet practical...and nice and cheap, too!

Collegian photo by Peter Marks

A holiday mannequin welcomes shoppers into a local store.

Are you a Secret Santa?

toys games unusual gifts & unique accessories for under $3.00

many under $10.00!

FACES

A Store-full of Stocking Stuffers

Sundays 12 - 5 Downtown Amherst

THE SALVATION ARMY

Give to The Salvation Army so others may have a happy holiday.

feast & folly restaurant

SPECIALIZING IN CHICKEN, FISH, & VEGETARIAN ENTREES - $3.25 - $4.95
DINNER IS SERVED FROM 5-10
111 PLEASANT ST. NORTHAMPTON — 586-8387
TYPOR CLOSED TUES.

THE COPY CENTER
FINE OFFSET PRINTING & COPYING

You'll like what we can do for your image

32 Pleasant Street
(across from Pleasant St. Theater)
Northampton 584-0117
Open 9 a.m.-5 p.m. daily

PAVLOVA™ PARIS 1922

Chloé

OPIUM Parfums YvesSaintLaurent

HALSTON

GUERLAIN

Lauren

BATH POWDER Caléche

HERMÈS

COLLEGE DRUG

9-9 weekdays/ 9-6 Sat./ 9-3 Sun.

4 MAIN STREET, AMHERST, Phone 253-2523

The Collegian Staff wishes you a
Happy
Holiday Season

Read "Gifts for Friends," the second super Collegian holiday special, coming Friday, Dec. 10.

89 Main St.
Amherst
256-0880
Behind the Cheese Shop
& Valley Farms Dairy Store

and also....

For the Holidays at Hampshire Mall

Try a new approach to gift-giving (or requesting?)
Help stamp out polka-dotted ties, pencil sets, plaid socks, shirts that don't fit!

Use Valley Bicycle's

Gift Registry

Drop in to either Valley Bicycles location to register your bicycle needs and wants, complete with sizes and colors. Then tell your friends and relatives that you have registered with Valley Bicycles and they can stop in to select the perfect bicycling gift for you.

Gifts for Bicyclists 75¢ to $500.00

Wrenches, mirrors, fenders, gloves, tires, helmets, water bottles, odometers, trainers, tights, handlebar bags, lights, shorts, books, ponchos, grease, backpacks, pumps, shirts, toe-clips, carriers, shoes, jackets....the list could go on forever.

Also see....

The FUJI BMX $159.95

assembled by experienced bicycle mechanics

Check our Factory Outlet prices on Dawes Hand built English Bicycles.

the hatch
GROUND FLOOR/STUDENT UNION

pair up patent for parties! black patent leather with chestnut suede lounge. phyllis poland's "sugar" $53.00

STRUT NORTHAMPTON

"YULE" FEAST

with Carbur's Special Party Menu featuring:

PRIME RIB SEAFOOD
STEAKS

Book your party today!

•Cocktail Parties •Buffets •Banquets
•Hot Hors d'oeuvres

Private rooms accommodating parties up to 75.

Eat, Drink and Be Merry!

CARBUR'S
RESTAURANT & Lounge
at the Elmwood Shops 586-1978
Route 9, Hadley 584-4310

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

Collegian

Volume CXII, Issue 60 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Friday, December 3, 1982

Dukakis, Duffey face Faculty Senate

Education a focus second time around

By RITA MURPHY
Collegian Staff

Claiming a new respect and understanding for public higher education, Gov.-elect Michael S. Dukakis yesterday pledged his support to the University of Massachusetts and public higher education before an overflowing crowd of 200 at the Faculty Senate meeting.

"There's something in the wind about education these days that wasn't there ten years ago. During the '50s and '60s, education was taken for granted. We all thought that it was just a good thing," he said.

In the past ten years, however, education has been looked at in a different light, he said.

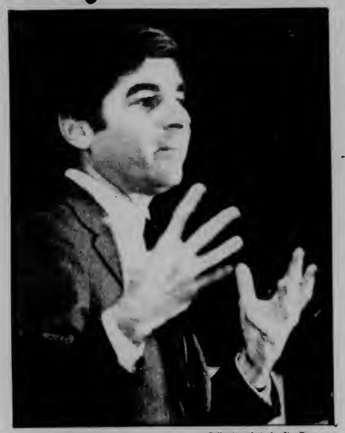
"Before, we never stopped to wonder about or question it (education)," he said, but now people are starting to question the role and future of education.

Dukakis admitted during his first term as governor, from 1974 to 1978, he made many mistakes. One of which was not adequately understanding the importance of higher education, he said.

"I had to be the worst communicator in America in 1974. In the last four years, which have been some of my best and most productive, I became a faculty member myself. I have developed a new respect and understanding for higher education," said Dukakis, who taught at Harvard University from 1979 to 1981.

Dukakis said he would keep his campaign promise of appointing a special advisor for public education. He said he had not yet reached a decision on who the person would be, but promised it would be someone from the educational community.

Continued on page 5



Collegian photo by Jim Powers

Gov.-elect Michael S. Dukakis informs University of Massachusetts Faculty Senate members yesterday of his heightened concern for educational issues which he said will be evidenced in his second term in office.

Criticism of Duffey rising in Reid case

By JIM FINKLE
Collegian Staff

Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey has come under heavy criticism from the University of Massachusetts community concerning his handling of a dispute with a top UMass administrator.

Duffey responded yesterday to what he called "recent journalistic assertions and speculations" about an agreement he made with UMass Assistant Chancellor and Director of the Office of Planning and Budget Marie Reid that included her taking a one-year professional leave of absence with full pay.

"Some speculations and assertions are false, some are distortions and some need to be clarified," Duffey said to the Faculty Senate immediately before introducing Gov.-elect Michael S. Dukakis. "I will speak to these clarifications as soon as possible."

Criticism has been directed toward Duffey by faculty and students for giving Reid the leave of absence after a series of negotiations between Reid and Duffey concerning a change in her title and job description that Reid said was a "demotion."

Last week, when Duffey announced Reid was granted a leave of absence, Reid said she planned to seek employment elsewhere while on leave. She cited racial prejudice in the UMass administration as the reason for her wanting another job. At that time, however, she also said she would sign a five-year contract with the University.

During Dukakis' 20 minute speech to the Senate, he made two references to Duffey's situation.

Continued on page 5

Faculty union challenges new policy for patent royalties

By TIM MacPHEE
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts faculty union has filed a charge against the Board of Trustees challenging the new University patent policy designed to channel a share of royalties from faculty inventions back to the University.

The policy, approved Aug. 11 by the Board of Trustees, is considered unfair by the Massachusetts Society of Professors (MSP), which claims the policy was imposed on them and they were not consulted on it. "Under the new patent policy, which is in line with those of other schools, if University time, materials or supplies go into an invention, the University should have some rights to it," said Lee Beatty, Grant and Contract Administration Director.

Before the present policy, the University made no claims to inventions made by faculty members.

According to Beatty, dissension had been generating on all three UMass campuses because previous inventions made on federal money went to the federal government.

However, the new federal policy emerged to stimulate quick invention and give the public a claim to some rights from federal grants given to small businesses and universities.

Under this system, rights to patents are now partly assigned to the University.

The MSP believes the new patent policy is unfair because it was imposed and not bargained for.

"We are opposed to any unilateral change. We live under collective bargaining. Any policies that affect terms and conditions of employment should be bargained, not imposed," said Bruce Laurie, MSP President. "The policy represents a unilateral change in these conditions."

The MSP filed a charge with the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission to try to force administration back to the bargaining table.

Both sides agree that the former system suffered from a lack of policy.

"Now if a faculty member uses labs and materials supported by the taxpayers' money, he can no longer claim sole rights to the invention," Beatty said.

The hearing, the outcome of which will primarily affect polymer research and chemical engineering developments, is scheduled for Dec. 15.

Collegian photo by Drew Ogier

Freshmen Dominique DeShare, left, and Lauren Powers inspect stained glass artwork being sold on the Campus Center concourse Wednesday afternoon.

American women being seen as more politically powerful

By CRIS SCHUSTER
Collegian Staff

American women, on their own terms, are on the threshold of achieving real power in the government, said the political director of the National Democratic Committee last night at Smith College.

Ann Lewis, speaking to more than 60 people about "Women and Power," said the 1982 election was the most important election for women in the last 50 years.

"Women voters are perceived as having power," Lewis said. After the election, "the women's vote was on all the exit poll articles and news analyses."

"There is no elected official who can discount the women's vote and no elected official who can afford to antagonize women," she said. "We have to take advantage of that."

Both the Republican and Democratic Parties realize how important women's votes are to their candidates' future, Lewis said.

"Support for women's rights is the mainstream of the Democratic Party," she said. "Candidates elected in 1982 are sensitive to the fact that they have substantial votes in women."

Most Republicans understand they are lacking votes from women. However the Reagan Administration does not care, she said.

"This administration has a few token women who are against the best interest of all of us," she said.

Lewis, the older sister of U.S. Rep. Barney Frank, D-Newton, said now after the election, it is important for "women to move forward, consolidate and maximize the opportunity that was opened to us."

"Our goal is to change the world. I assume we are going to try to change it," she said. "To do this, it's going to take power."

In the past 10 years, what were women's "private values" such as caring for the poor, elderly, and sick, have become women's "public values," Lewis said.

"Women have come to the conclusion that our private values are good enough to be our public values and now we're using them to make our public judgements," she said.

Power, however, "will not work for us if we do not take advantage of it. It is so important having come this far that we really move on and organize," she said.

"We are going to gather as much power as we can because we are going to need it," she said. "Pretty soon women in the Democratic Party are going to say 'we want a woman vice-president.'"

World and National News

MX missile survives a tie vote in House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The MX missile system barely survived on yesterday its sternest test in Congress as the House Appropriations Committee turned back, on a tie vote of 26-26, an attempt by budget economizers and advocates of a nuclear freeze to scuttle funds for the first editions of the new weapon.

In Brazil, President Reagan called it "a vote for a stronger, more secure America." But he said "We're not jumping up and down and claiming a victory, because we know it's going to be a very tough battle on the floor" of the House, possibly next week.

The deadlock rejected a move by Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., to cut $988 million for the first five of an eventual 100 of the nation's first new strategic missiles in two decades. The committee then went on to approve an overall defense spending bill of $231.6 billion.

Addabbo also failed, by voice vote, to slash all but $1 billion of the $2.45 billion earmarked for research and development work on the missile and its basing system.

But the committee did attach some strings, approving an amendment by Rep. Ralph Regula, R-Ohio, that would forbid the Air Force to spend any of the production funds or $600 million of the research money until March 15.

In the meantime, the Pentagon would have to submit a report on March 1 giving a monthly production and delivery schedule for the weapons and assuring that none would have to be put in storage before the basing system is operational in 1986.

AP Laserphoto

Demonstrators tear and burn an American flag during an anti-Reagan demonstration yesterday in Bogota, Columbia. President Reagan is scheduled for a 5-hour visit to the Columbian capital today.

Reagan decries trade restrictions while continuing to propose them

SAO PAULO, Brazil — President Reagan yesterday called economic growth "a crucial pillar of peace" and denounced the spread of international trade restrictions as "an ugly specter stalking the world" destroying jobs.

"The aim of these actions may be to protect jobs, but the practical result, as we know from historical experience, is the destruction of jobs," Reagan told U.S. and Brazilian business leaders.

Reagan flew to Sao Paulo, the largest and most industrialized city in Latin America, to deliver his speech and was returning to the capital city of Brasilia to spend the night. He goes on to Bogota, Colombia, today.

Before making the 520-mile journey here, Reagan held a final round of discussions with Brazilian President Joao Baptista Figueiredo and stopped briefly at the U.S. Embassy to praise the mission staff and appeal for help in "strengthening our relations with Brazil."

U.S. advisors could increase in El Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior Pentagon officials have urged dropping the fixed limit of 55 U.S. military advisers in El Salvador and using instead an "annual average" that would permit more advisers to go to the Central American nation.

Defense Department officials who discussed the plan, asking not to be identified, said the proposal would allow the United States to send in more than 55 advisers at times as long as the average for the year was 55 or fewer.

The officials said the proposal — even if approved — would not mean a significant increase in the number of U.S. advisers in El Salvador, but would allow "greater flexibility" in responding to Salvadoran training needs.

The chances for President Reagan's approval of the change, however, appear doubtful.

It is opposed by the State Department, which fears that any move to increase the number of advisers would spark a negative reaction in Congress, where U.S. aid to El Salvador is already under attack.

The limit of 55 advisers was set in March 1981 when Reagan stepped up military aid to El Salvador. The ceiling has remained unchanged since then, a stability that some officials feel has helped quiet public fears about a Vietnam-style escalation.

A State Department official, who requested anonymity, said he felt the averaging plan stood little chance of approval because of political sensitivity over ending a firm limit.

Union bargaining talks will decide Herald fate

BOSTON — Publisher Rupert Murdoch and four remaining newspaper unions faced a midnight deadline yesterday in an attempt to save the Boston Herald American, one of two remaining newspapers in the city that gave birth to American journalism.

Representatives of the international publisher spent the day in meetings with officials of the pressmen and paper handlers union in an attempt to reach an agreement on staffing reductions.

The mailers union was scheduled to meet with management last night.

The Hearst Corp., the present owner of the Herald, has said today's newspaper would be the last unless all the unions reach agreement with Murdoch by midnight.

Murdoch has said he must trim $7 million a year from the morning newspaper's operations and eliminate a third of its 800 employees.

Seven unions have reached tentative agreements, according to Robert E. Page, vice president of Murdoch's News America Publishing Inc.

Page said the latest tentative agreement was with the paper haulers of Teamsters Local 25.

"We now can announce agreement with the haulers, so that brings to seven of the 11 that are in place, and we are waiting to hear from Local 259," Page said.

The 149 member truck drivers of Teamsters Local 259 had still not accepted a proposed settlement worked out earlier.

The 21-member photoengravers union agreed to cut six employees Wednesday. Meanwhile, reporters and editors, who had made a tentative agreement, voted Wednesday night to accept open-ended cuts in the 100-member union, Page said.

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Paul A. Basken
Copy Editor — Bill Wall
Layout Technician — Brad Eden
Photo Technician — Jim Powers
Composition — Laura Shanahan, Lauri Neely
Sue Hawkins, Becky Robins, Donna Maurice
Donna Estabrooks, Alan Steinberg, Karen Fredey
Marge Hochman, Scott Stockwell, Sheryl Silver
Adrianne Dufour, Lynn Eisenberg
Terri Cooper, Gail Tanzer

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $18 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

Digest

By the Associated Press

House finds EPA head in contempt of Congress

WASHINGTON — A House subcommittee voted yesterday to cite Anne M. Gorsuch, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, for contempt of Congress for witholding documents on President Reagan's orders.

The 9-2 vote by the House Public Works investigations subcommittee came after Mrs. Gorsuch invoked executive privilege in withholding the documents dealing with EPA's toxic waste cleanup program.

The subcommittee had subpoenaed an estimated 787,000 items to examine how EPA manages the $1.6 billion "superfund" program to clean up abandoned chemical dump sites.

Mrs. Gorsuch, appearing before the panel in response to the subpoena, said the "vast majority" of documents would be duplicated and shipped to the subcommittee, though it will cost EPA at least $145,000 and could take six months.

But she said that "sensitive documents found in open law enforcement files" — such as legal strategies and case analyses — would be withheld on the president's orders.

She submitted a letter signed by Reagan in which the president said: "Because dissemination of such documents outside the executive branch would impair my solemn responsibility to enforce the law, I instruct you and your agency not to furnish copies of this category of documents."

AP Laserphoto

Construction workers Richard Gibbia, left, and Joseph Scerra dine on Chevalean horseburgers yesterday afternoon at the corner of 53rd Street and Lexington Avenue in Manhattan. The New York City Health Department agreed this week to the sale of horsemeat for consumption for the first time since World War II. Reactions to the equine delicacies have been mixed, ranging from "it takes like the horse I bet on yesterday," to "you're going to feel like you're eating Mr. Ed."

Kidneys to be donated after local man's death

ORANGE - The kidneys of Gerald L Canning, 21, of Orange, who died Wednesday at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center, will be given to two persons in need of the organs.

"Two other children will live because of my son," said James A. Canning, the man's father.

Canning died from injuries sustained in a car accident Thanksgiving Day in which two youths also were killed.

A spokesman for the New England Organ Bank in Boston said the kidneys were removed with the permission of Canning's family after attempts to relieve pressure on his brain failed.

Recipients of the kidneys were to be chosen late yesterday, according to Bruce Zalneraitis, senior procurement specialist with the organ bank. Selection is made based on need and the likelihood the transplanted kidneys would be accepted by the recipients' bodies, Zalneraitis said.

Student excesses end traditional Easter party

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA — The University of Virginia has abolished the school's Easter celebration, a liquor-drenched springtime student party that has been a tradition since the last century.

The mid-April party has drawn crowds of 12,000 to 20,000.

"I have concluded that the Easters celebration...no longer merits official university sanction," Ernest Ern, the university's vice president for student affairs, said in a letter Wednesday.

Dean of Students Robert Canevari said the partying has caused a public relations problem with city residents, created an anti-intellectual atmosphere and encouraged excessive drinking.

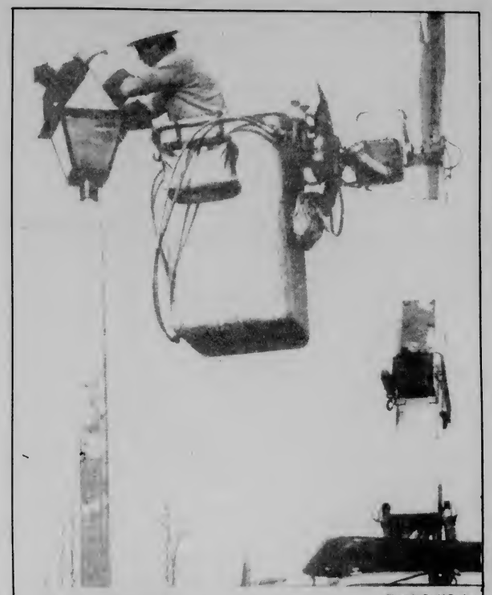


Photo by David Deuber

Charlie Bobala of Easthampton peeks under the cover of a street lamp at Brittany Manor Apartments to change its bulb.

Fee estimates predicted to be accurate and not increased much for fall

By MARK J. WELCH
Collegian Staff

Fee increases next fall may be less painful than this year, according to financial managers of the two largest fee-based trust funds on campus, and a late budgeting process this year may result in more accurate fee estimates.

Because the University of Massachusetts' Office of Planning and Budget has not yet issued financial guidelines for the various student fee-based trust funds, such as the dining commons and health services, budgets have not yet been prepared. As a result of the delay, the Fee Review process normally held in the fall by the Student Government Association has been put off until early February.

"We have more accurate information to prepare the budget this year," said James Weaver, Financial Manager of Food Services, who predicted the delayed budget process will allow more concrete planning. "It's easier to deal with the numbers, but time is shorter."

Weaver said since financial figures for the first five months of the current fiscal year will be available to him, planning should be more accurate. Weaver also noted that those figures are making him "very optimistic" about next years fee increases.

"From what I've been able to see, I'm very optimistic about a very conservative fee increase request for fiscal year 1983-84," Weaver said. Last year, the average annual meal plan increased $73, from $1,014 to $1,087.

At Housing Services, the budgeting delay may present more of a problem, according to Ann Koski, assistant director in charge of finance.

"Basically we have two weeks to do the fees," she said, "but we still haven't got the budget packets yet."

Koski explained that because the dorm closings will take two weeks, plus the Christmas holidays, the scheduled January budget deadlines will mean a very short preparation time for Housing Services $13 million budget.

Koski said she also is optimistic about the fee increases she will request for next year. Utility costs and debt services expenses have been lower than expected, she said.

Still, the budget guidelines will have a substantial effect, Koski said. If the University increases the cost of utilities, the overhead charge for Physical Plant labor, or if "full-costing" is implemented, Koski said the fee increase could be substantial.

This year, the average dorm resident paid $1,212, an increase of $76 over the $1,136 room charge levied last year.

The Fee Review process, during which students ask for an explanation of fee increases, was held last year in November, which was later than the prior year's review held in October. Last year, departments submitted fee-based budgets in October. The year before, budgets were given a deadline in mid-August.

First Amendment education program planned by professor

By AMY JENNESS
Collegian Staff

Lawyers nationwide are planning early for the celebration of the bicentennial of the ratification of the United States Constitution and the Bill of Rights according to a University of Massachusetts professor and lawyer.

David Shimmel said he and other lawyers in Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity, International (PAD) plan to commemorate the bicentennials (the Constitution in 1987 and the Bill of Rights in 1991) by creating an outreach program for communities throughout the nation to inform them about First Amendment issues.

The main purpose of the program is to educate citizens on the historical issues, philosophical principles and jurisprudential foundations of the First Amendment and how they relate to every day life.

"In the aftermath of the bicentennial of 1976, many Americans know we could have done better," Shimmel said in the legal magazine Update. "The bicentennial left us with memories of Tall Ships, big parades and fireworks, but little of substance remains."

Shimmel said he sees the program addressing such issues as prayer in public schools, academic freedom, censorship of school texts and library books, obscenity and pornography and free press/free trial. Shimmel said these issues should be approached with an informed and intelligent understanding of history, philosophy and jurisprudence.

"We are going to try and make things come alive for people that we all take for granted. We are going to try and figure our future implications of making it in the 21st century," Shimmel said.

Shimmel said the goal would be to educate all citizens in the community and school by establishing a partnership between lawyers, humanities specialists (college faculty members), and people in the community.

"We are going to use lawyers as the primary communicators. I see lawyers as a kind of broker or facilitator of communication about constitutional issues," said Shimmel.

Shimmel is the PAD appointed national director for the program. He is a lawyer as well as a UMass professor of education, the director of UMass' program in legal literacy and education, and co-author of several books.

Three sites on the east coast have been chosen as key places for planning the program. The sites are Amherst, Baltimore, Md. and Winston-Salem, N.C.

The first planning conference for volunteer PAD members will be held Dec. 17 and 18 at UMass. Teams from the three sites will meet to discuss how they are going to plan the program.

"We will be organized by 1987. We have a long time to plan but if we do it right we'll need all of it," Shimmel said.

The program has been funded by a National Endowment for the Humanities grant for the planning stages. Shimmel said he hopes to get another one next year for implementation of the program.

Due to the stipulations of the grant, the project can only reach out to adults — it may not go into the school system to teach children about the implications of the First Amendment.

The coordinators of the program hope to establish volunteer "PAD coordinators" from local communities across the country who would be members of the bar or the local bench. These coordinators would then coordinate the local "Community Bicentennial Project."

"We would go to any community group who wants us, like the Rotarians or the Kiawanis club," Shimmel said. "With so much going on around First Amendment issues and with legislation being proposed to change it, it is important that people are educated about the debate."

BOG grants Union Records $2,000 to compete with University Store

By DAVID SUMMERSBY
Collegian Staff

In a move designed to help all student controlled businesses in the Campus Center against competition with the University Store, the Campus Center Board of Governors (BOG) last night voted to grant Union Records Unlimited (URU) $2,000 for advertising purposes.

"We think that student controlled businesses are important and this is just to reaffirm BOG position on this issue," BOG Treasurer Todd Zigelbaum said. "We are flexing a muscle."

Due to a lack of resources and a relatively small budget, URU as of late has not been able to keep up with the University Store in the advertising of records, Zigelbaum said, and is being run out of business.

"Our sales are down over the past few years and right now with regards to funds we are in a critical stage where we must make a stand. We need help," said Graig Colbath, business manager of URU. "Right now we are living on a week to week basis."

URU currently has a monthly advertising budget of $200, and with this they can barely afford to run one quarter page ad a week in the Collegian at $68 and five ads in the personals. The University store has been running three half page ads a week in the Collegian at $136 a piece throughout the semester. "They spend more in one day than we do in one week," said Kim Cohane, general manager of URU.

"Our advertisements are also put in places in the Collegian where people just don't read them," Cohane said.

The increased funds for advertising for URU will double their advertising budget and will allow URU to compete with the University Store in advertising and stay alive financially.

Cohane added that the University Store should cut back on advertising of records and concentrate on other areas because the record department is such a small part of their overall budget.

"It is not fair because they are trying to attract people into the store through record advertising," Cohane said. "Records constitute exactly 1.4 percent of the total revenue in the store while all we sell is records."

"I don't see how they can justify all those ads," Zigelbaum said.

"I believe that the University Store has a goal to put URU out of business. This money will help URU, but I think it will help all co-ops. We are trying to make a stand against their advertising practices and hopefully they will view this as a threat."

Collegian photo by Tom Kedis

Coordinator of the Office of Community Relations Gerald Grady listens at last night's meeting of the Campus Center Board of Governors before speaking about both his office's functions and his just-concluded trip to Washington with the Students Advocating Financial Aid lobbying group.

La Raclette

WINE DOWN

AFTER CLASS
2:30-5:00
OR AFTER THE SHOW
9:00-11:00

CHEESE and WINE SAMPLER

$2.50

YOUR CHOICE OF ANY 3 OF THE FOLLOWING WINES.

FRENCH

VAL DE LOIRE
ROSE D'ANJOU
GRAND MAITRE

BORDEAUX
ENTRE DEUX MERS
BARRIERE
CHATEAU DE CLYDES

BOURGOGNE
LA VIELLE FERME
ROUGE OR BLANC

GERMAN

KANZEMER—SONNENBERG
RIESLING KABINETT 1977

CALIFORNIA VARIETALS

WENTE BROTHERS
1980 GREY RIESLING

WENTE BROTHERS
1980 SAUVIGNON BLANC

BERINGER VINEYARDS
1980 CHARDONNAY

COMMONWEALTH WINES
PLYMOUTH, MASS

CRANBERRY APPLE ROSE
SEYVAL BLANC
DE CHAUNAC

AND ANY 3 SELECTIONS FROM OUR INTERNATIONAL CHEESE BOARD.

WINES

On The Boltwood Walk
103 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002
253-5927

Diving group to head to Florida for vacation

By PAUL BEVAL
Collegian Staff

Some University of Massachusetts students will be spending their Christmas breaks diving in Florida.

For the seventh consecutive year, Project DEEP (Diving Education Extension Program) will be offering extension courses in Key Largo, Fla. for UMass students over intersession.

This year, Project DEEP is offering advanced, open water courses, formerly called sport diving, which is designed to give novice divers an opportunity to get a great deal of experience in a short span of time.

The course will cover subjects such as boat diving, navigation, marine environment, and night and deep diving.

The course costs $325. This fee includes camping, three meals a day, instruction, and equipment such as tanks and weight belts.

The courses run from Dec. 27 to Jan. 2 and from Jan. 3 to Jan. 9.

A general meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Dec. 10 in Room 10 of Curry Hicks to arrange transportation and finalize plans.

For more information, contact Project DEEP at 584-0456 or write P.O. Box 415, Northampton, MA. 01060.

Photo courtesy Project DEEP

A member of Project DEEP holds on tight while hitching a ride from a sea turtle off the coast of Key Largo, Fla. during one of the club's recent expeditions.

Magazine proposes to cover Pioneer Valley

By SCOTT HERSEY
Collegian Staff

In the tradition of New York and Boston, two area persons are planning to publish a magazine covering the Pioneer Valley.

The magazine, Valley Images, will feature all aspects of Valley life, with a particular emphasis on people, said Lorenzo Diaz, senior editor.

"We will have articles primarily on valley people and the events they are involved in," said Diaz, who formerly published a small weekly newspaper in California.

Although budget limitations have forced the magazine to be published in black and white only, Diaz said he hopes to be using color soon.

Right now, the magazine is only covering the five-college area, but Diaz said he ultimately hopes to cover the entire valley, as far north as Vermont and as far south as Springfield.

The first issue should be out by Christmas and will cost $1, Diaz said.

Although several area magazines have folded recently, including New Roots and Springfield Four County West, Diaz said he expects his to be successful.

"You can look at any period of time and say it's difficult," he said. "There is no contemporary magazine covering the valley right now, so I think people will buy ours."

The magazine will feature a special section called "Valley Nurturing," Editor Wilesse A. Commissiong said.

This special section, which Diaz referred to as a "magazine within a magazine," will feature articles and columns on caring and humanistic ideas, Commissiong said.

Commissiong said the concept for the section came as an outgrowth of a newsletter and radio programs she had done on the nurturing concept.

"Nurturing expands on the idea of caring for people," she said. "We want to focus on the tender caring of people."

The first issue will feature an article on the nurturing concept in regards to human sexuality.

Are you a Secret Santa?

toys games unusual gifts & unique accessories for under $3.00

many under $1.00!

FACES
A Store-full of Stocking Stuffers
Sundays 12 - 5 Downtown Amherst

MDI/WORD LINK
Word Processing
. . . 253-9534 . . .
37 So. Pleasant St., Amherst
(above Matthews Shoes)
Need an Interview?
25 resumes 25 cover letters/envelopes
$40.00 certain restrictions apply
TRY OUR RESUME SERVICES

MGH INSTITUTE OF HEALTH PROFESSIONS

The Master of Science Program in Nursing, designed for non-nurse college graduates, leads to preparation as Clinical Nurse Specialists. Graduates are eligible for RN licensure and specialized practice in one of six clinical areas.

Social Work in Health Care Programs

▶Post-Baccalaureate Certificate Program prepares college graduates for practice in a variety of health settings.
▶Post-Master's Certificate Program provides an opportunity for social workers to develop the clinical skills and knowledge needed for advanced practice in health care.

For more information, fill out and return this blank to MGH Institute of Health Professions, Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, MA 02114. PLEASE PRINT

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____

The MGH Institute of Health Professions admits students of any race, color and national or ethnic origin.

Collegian photo by Jim Powers

Gov.-elect Michael S. Dukakis and University of Massachusetts at Amherst Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey chat with students in the Computer Consulting Center yesterday.

★Dukakis

Continued from page 1

Commenting on Massachusetts' unique position of being one of the leading states in the country in academic standing, the former and future governor said, "This state, without its reputation for academic excellence, would be an economic wasteland."

"A friend once said if the pilgrims had landed on the west coast, we would be a state park," he said.

Dukakis urged the forming of coalitions made up of faculty, students, and government leaders, including himself.

"I am reaching out to you and I ask you to be part of that coalition," Dukakis told the Senate. "We will make it work and we will make it work well."

Robert E. Jones, a history professor, said "I found the governor-elect's attitude and his words to be very encouraging. That's an important step in the right direction. I liked most of what he said; now let's see what he does."

Frank Hugus, a German professor, said he was pleased Dukakis admitted making mistakes in the past, particularly concerning higher education.

"I think he is a very straight-forward man. He seems to be a man happy to be in office. I think he will fair well," he said.

Stanley M. Moss, a psychology professor, said Dukakis' speech was "very impressive and optimistic."

"I think his experience in teaching caused him to take an about face in his feelings towards higher education," he said.

Moss said there is some resentment among senators concerning the treatment they received during Dukakis' first term of governor when he froze all wages of state employees after taking office in 1974.

★Reid

Continued from page 1

"He (Duffey) is making the newspapers a lot more than I am these days," Dukakis said.

Later in his speech, Dukakis quipped to Duffey, "If you need help with the problems you are having, let me know."

Before Duffey and Dukakis arrived at the meeting, two senators brought up this issue, which is being called the "Marie Reid Affair."

Professor Frank R. Hugus of the German languages and literatures department asked if giving Reid such a leave in a time of fiscal austerity was a just and responsible decision.

"Is it fair when the rest of the campus must tighten its belt?" Hugus asked.

Professor Donald E. Scott of the electrical and computer engineering department said granting a leave to Reid, who has worked at UMass for two and a half years, is against personnel regulations that state an employee must work at the University for at least six years before being granted a paid leave of absence.

Earlier yesterday afternoon, Duffey declined to comment on the accuracy of published reports quoting Reid as saying she was granted the leave of absence to avoid a law suit.

Characterizing Reid as "a troubled woman," Duffey said there were contradictions in her statements as well as inaccuracies in several published reports on the situation.

Duffey confirmed reports that he was setting up meetings with all deans, department heads and chairmen at UMass to discuss the Reid situation.

Professor Dario Politella of the journalistic studies program criticized Duffey's actions because he said granting the leave serves as an admission of guilt to Reid's charges of racial discrimination.

"It was really stupidity on Duffey's part to do that," Politella said.

He said Duffey had to override the personnel regulations to give Reid the leave. Although the personnel regulations do allow such an override, Politella questioned whether Duffey had appropriate reasons for doing so.

Linking high tech, education is a new priority for Dukakis

By KEVIN BOWE
Collegian Staff

When Gov.-elect Michael S. Dukakis toured the Computer Consulting Center in the School of Business Administration before addressing the Faculty Senate yesterday, it was a symbol of his new commitment to the role of higher education in meeting the needs of high technology in Massachusetts.

But Dukakis is only the latest of many Massachusetts officials who are preaching the need to "forge an alliance" between the Commonwealth and high tech companies to increase the resources of engineering and computer science programs in higher education.

News Analysis

Sen. Paul E. Tsongas, D-Mass., is proposing federal legislation aimed at upgrading the nation's technical resources by providing more than $500 million in assistance to educational institutions.

Ray Stata, a member of the Massachusetts Board of Regents and owner of Analog Devices, a high tech firm, has written a book advocating the need to revamp higher education that will ensure a smooth transition from the present industrial and manufacturing base to the knowledge-based economy of the future.

University of Massachusetts President David C. Knapp has been echoing these same themes for goals of the University. He has also began a program to improve the technical and remedial skills of high schools students in the city of Boston, and plans to do the same in Springfield.

The fundamental emphasis of increasing computer sciences to aid the high technology industry in Massachusetts was cemented into place far before the November election. In fact, statements made by the various gubernatorial candidates were almost carbon copies of each other.

One of Dukakis' goals is to establish a "computer literacy" campaign that will attempt to educate all secondary school students in the functional use of computers.

"We have an opportunity in this state to chart a future that serves for a model as an economy and a society of the future," he said during his Faculty Senate address.

"Any student with a high school diploma should have some computer capabilities. So much of our economy is tied up in computers these days," Dukakis said during his tour of the Computer Consulting Center.

With an increasingly tight fiscal situation in the state, Dukakis said the high tech industry must also contribute to the computer literacy effort.

"Many high tech companies have committed themselves to donate equipment. With (their) help. . .we can do this (the computer literacy campaign)," Dukakis said.

But the question that remains is how committed Dukakis will be to the emphasis of high tech in higher education.

After asking a student at a nearby computer terminal what her program meant, Dukakis apologized by describing himself and UMass Chancellor Joseph Duffey as "humanist".

Collegian photo by Tom Kedis

Two dogs enjoy a wrestling match near the Campus Pond.

Sweeties
FINE CHOCOLATES AND CONFECTIONS
Over 100 kinds of candy
Secret Santa's
Christmas gifts and gift certificates
Quality Chocolate
Gourmet Jelly Beans
Tins, Glassware, and more
Downtown Amherst 253-5589 & 68 Main St. Northampton 586-4180

The Sale's On!
Boots
Shoes
Sox
Bags
Mittens
Hats
the SHOE BIN
187 n. pleasant st., amherst

11th ANNUAL BUSH BASH

UMASS SKI CLUB

SUGARBUSH VALLEY VERMONT

SKI & PARTY WEEK
JAN 23-28

THIS TRIP INCLUDES:

- Lift Ticket (5½ days)
- Lodging (Hotel or Condo)
- Meals (with Hotel)
- Free Beer & Wine Parties
- Hot Tub & Sauna Party
- Etc. Etc. Etc.

only $189.00

tax and gratuities included

beware of other ski trips that set a base price and THEN ADD 5% tax & 15% gratuities

Non-Members Welcome

Deposit & Final Payment Deadlines have been extended.

So get your deposits in now to reserve your vacation for WINTER BREAK

sign-up table

M-F Ski Club Office 9-3
430A Student Union
for more info call 5-3437

LAGNAF 83

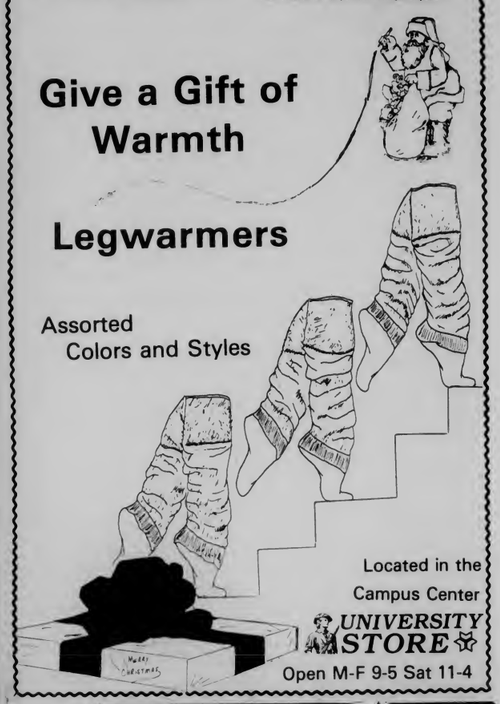
A Christmas Checklist

Plan ahead now so you won't forget anyone

Give a Gift of Warmth

Legwarmers

Assorted Colors and Styles



Located in the Campus Center

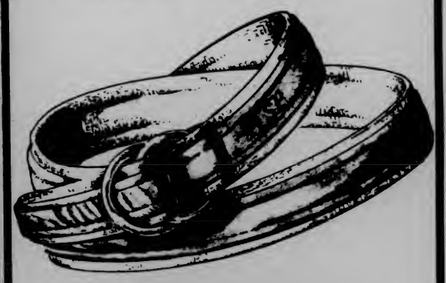
UNIVERSITY STORE

Open M-F 9-5 Sat 11-4

REGATTA BELT

from YRA

Solid sailcloth brass ring belt on natural cotton web. Choose from thirteen colors that can be monogrammed with your initials in practically any color. These belts come in two widths (1½" version or narrower 1¼") and are sized XXS—XL. $15.00



House of Walsh, Inc.
32 Main Street
Amherst, Massachusetts
Daily 9:00 to 5:30 253-3361

Activist sees Europe as wary of U.S. nuclear policy

By GAYLE McGILL
Collegian Staff

The people of western Europe feel threatened by the Reagan administration's concept that "limited" nuclear war is possible, said Mary Wentworth, former candidate for Congress, who just returned from observing the European peace movement.

Wentworth, co-ordinator of the Poor Women's Task Force at the Everywoman's Center, traveled to West Germany and The Netherlands with a group of 32 other Americans active in the U.S. peace movement during November.

"Limited nuclear war for us is total nuclear war for them. They have no control over the weapons the U.S. deploys in Europe," Wentworth said.

Wentworth, an Amherst resident said she is very concerned with the U.S.'s military budget and for that reason is involved with the peace movement.

"I do advocacy work with the poor, and the money which is being spent on defense is being taken away from social programs," she said.

Wentworth ran an unsuccessful write-in campaign this fall against Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Pittsfield, for his seat in the House of Representatives.

While in Europe, Wentworth said the group observed demonstrations and met with organizers of the peace movement.

All age groups are involved with the peace movement in Europe, except those of the age who were involved in Hitler's Youth Movement, she said.

"They are the only group not apparent, and that is because they tend to feel they were heavily involved in politics and blew it, so they are leery of getting involved," Wentworth said.

Churches both in Germany and in the Netherlands have taken a leadership role in the peace movement, she said.

"They are taking a military stance, saying no Christian would ever participate in a nuclear war. This scares the government because people in these countries are close followers of the church," she said.

The women's peace movement is very active in Europe, according to Wentworth, and they attribute much of their perspective to the women's peace movement in the United States. Wentworth said, however, the larger peace movement in the United States owes a lot to the European peace movement.

"The European peace movement started way before ours and is much more active," she said. "The major difference between the two peace movements is that the Europeans have a much different attitude toward the Soviet Union. They don't have the fear and hysteria toward communism like in the U.S. This is because they have communist and socialist parties in their government."

Wentworth said she observed much concern among Europeans over how the Soviet Union might react to what she sees as intimidation being placed on the Soviets by the U.S.

"The U.S. rationalizes by saying what if the Soviets invade Europe? Europeans don't see this as a real possibility. Many people are willing to believe the Soviets are sincere in wanting a peaceful coexistence," she said.

While in Europe, Wentworth said she noticed many differences in the way political parties work.

"The Social Democratics of West Germany are holding a conference devoted specifically to the disarmament issue. What will come out of that conference is a total party stand," Wentworth said. "It would be very unusual for the Democratic or Republican Party here calling a conference just on that issue."

The presence of nuclear weapons alone frightens many Europeans, Wentworth said.

"The Netherlands is calling for a unilateral disarmament for their country to agree not to deploy any missiles," she said.

Collegian photo by Drew Ogier

Former Congressional candidate Mary Wentworth discusses her recent trip to Europe at the Everywoman's Center.

Newslines...

Middle East discussion set

The Jewish Community of Amherst and Five College B'na B'rith Hillel are sponsoring a discussion on the Middle East situation titled "Israel After Lebanon: Peace Now?" at 9:30 a.m. Sunday, at the Jewish Community of Amherst, 742 Main St., Amherst.

The featured speakers are Yohanan Ramati, former managing editor of the "Israel Economist" and a lecturer on international affairs for the Israel Foreign ministry, and Shmuel Ettinger, a professor of Modern history at Hebrew University and a visiting professor at Harvard University. Registration fee is $2 for students and $3 for non-students, including lunch.

Student offers new look at TV

Aron Ranen, a Hampshire College student, will be presenting a new view of television in "Aron Ranen's New Video Environment: A Series of Video Installations," which will be debuting at 7 tonight at Hampshire.

Ranen said he believes television is too passive a medium and that he will be trying to challenge people's perceptions of television by taking them through a series of video installations designed to "objectify the cultural icons of the television set and utilize them in a sculptural/environmental context."

Classifieds Reach 25,000 daily

Arts

Gallery Prints

by Julie Sabilka

Donato Pietrodangelo: Caribbean Images, November 22-December 10 at the Hampden Gallery. Pietrodangelo has captured the charm of doorways, ship hulls and cement walls in his photographs. His images consist of pastoral scenes involving a simple, yet powerful use of color. Through his camera we experience a great closeness to the subject. The photographs were all taken in and around the Caribbean and are a must for anyone interested in photography and color.

The Student Union Gallery is currently exhibiting two very talented artists. Both are BFA shows and will run until December 4. Elizabeth Peters is exhibiting a series of paintings and sketches. Her work consists mainly of distorted faces and figures gliding along the canvas achieved through the juxtaposition of various colors. These pictures are bold and bright eye-openers. A collection of Kurt Schmitz's sculptures is also being shown. These life-size figures are made of old wood, rusty farm machinery, and pieces of string and cloth. The way in which these materials come together to form a human being is quite beautiful, evoking a country touch due to the material used.

Denise Weaver: Wish You Were Here, November 28-December 3 at the Herter Gallery. This exhibit both attracts and repels the viewer at the same time. Big black shapes engulf slender white lines to make for a thoroughly interesting composition. Little figures like paper dolls entertain here and there. But what are these figures doing? Is their meaning childhood memories or social messages? — very intriguing and involving.

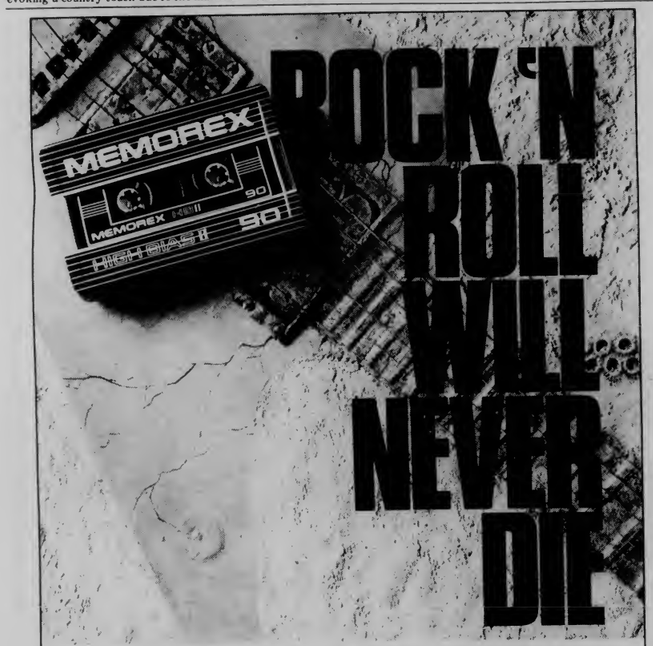
Herter Gallery is also presenting Marianne Shepardson (BFA PROJECT) and Cigdem T. Akkurt (MS thesis) until December 3. This combined exhibit presents new ideas about interior design and architecture. Practical, strongly constructed furniture is displayed. Several viewer-involved pieces are on show as well. Solar house possibilities are explored, also. This exhibit provides a fascinating glance into the future for everyone.

In addition, The University Gallery is continuing Barbara Zucker's collection of recent works, The World of Donald Evans and selections from the gallery's permanent collection.

The University of Massachusetts Chorale and the Choral Union, both conducted by Richard du Bois, will present their annual winter concert on Sunday, December 12, at 8:00 p.m. The program will include Benjamin Britten's "Ceremony of Carols," Ralph Vaughan Williams' Mass in G Minor, Daniel Moe's "Fall Softly Snow," and Francis Poulenc's "Hodie Christus Natus Est." The concert will take place at Bowker Auditorium. There will be no admission charge for the event.

This performance marks the first concert given by the Chorale since its three-week tour this past summer of Romania and the Soviet Union. Its major offering on Sunday's program is Britten's "Ceremony of Carols." The piece, written during Britten's voyage home from America to England in 1942, consists of eight carols framed by a procession and recession. The words are drawn from anonymous medieval texts.

The Choral Union will perform Vaughan Williams' Mass in G Minor, composed for unaccompanied choir in 1920. When written, the Mass broke new ground setting a standard for the re-creation of the a capella tradition.



ROCK 'N ROLL WILL NEVER DIE

Presenting High Bias II and the Ultimate Tape Guarantee.
Memorex presents High Bias II, a tape so extraordinary, we're going to guarantee it forever.

We'll guarantee life-like sound.
Because Permapass," our unique oxide bonding process, locks each oxide particle—each musical detail—onto the tape. So music stays live. Not just the 1st play. Or the 1000th. But forever.

We'll guarantee the cassette.
Every facet of our cassette is engineered to protect the tape. Our waved-wafer improves tape-wind. Silicone-treated rollers insure smooth, precise tape alignment. Housing is made strong by a design unique to Memorex.

We'll guarantee them forever.
If you are ever dissatisfied with Memorex High Bias II, mail us the tape and we'll replace it free.

YOU'LL FOREVER WONDER,
IS IT LIVE, OR IS IT MEMOREX

DELANO'S

DECEMBER HAPPY HOUR SPECIAL
Heineken Bottles
plus our original twofers and hors d'oevres
7 days 7 nights
4-6 pm 10 - midnight
Proper ID a MUST
57 N. Pleasant St.
253-5141

GOING TO BE ON CAMPUS IN JANUARY?
WHERE ARE YOU GOING TO EAT?
- Worcester Dining Commons will be open Lunch and Dinner - Monday - Friday
- Choose any of the five meal plans and SAVE! 20-25-30-35-40 From $70.00 To $130.00
- SIGN UP: DEC. 1-20.
MEAL TICKET OFFICE - FRANKLIN COMMONS
Offering soup, sandwich, casserole, self-service salad bar, and homemade desserts for lunch. Dinner two entrees, self-service salad bar, some vegetarian selections homemade breads and desserts. All this and more for less than you would pay anywhere in the campus area.
WHY NOT TRY IT OUT!
Alternative to an Intersession Board Plan
Pay Cash or Buy Strip Tickets

Arts

Marriage est tres beau

Le Beau Marriage
Directed by Eric Rohmer
Pleasant St. Theatre
By ELAINE SENAY
Collegian Staff

Eric Rohmer's Le Beau Marriage is a pleasant comedy about love and marriage that centers around a young woman reaching a crisis in her life.

Sabine, played by Beatrice Romand, is a young and impetuous woman leading a bohemian existence. She moves from man to man without any intention of getting married. But when her latest affair with a married man breaks up, she decides she should pick out someone and get married.

All this sounds abrupt and that is where the fun starts. Sabine is determined to meet and to marry the first eligible man she likes. Her best friend Clarisse, played by Arielle Dombaise, introduces her to Edmond, played by Andre Dusollier. He is a successful lawyer who works in Paris.

Sabine's pursuit of Edmond takes up the rest of the film. Every time she tries to catch Edmond and fails, she runs to Clarisse for support. It is the friendship between Sabine and Clarisse that gives Le Beau Marriage its hilarity. Sabine and Clarisse act as if they are two schoolgirls whispering in corners about the boys whom they like. It is amusing to listen to Clarisse's flights of fancy about Edmond's supposed feelings towards Sabine. Arielle Dombaise portrays Clarisse's idealism with a genuine belief that romance is alive and well.

Le Beau Marriage is a light film that mocks the morales of modern society. It shows that marriage is still a serious undertaking and not everyone can handle it. By the end of the film, Sabine realizes that she cannot change overnight. She understands that there must be not only attraction but also love to even consider marriage.

Rohmer presents his comedy in a playful manner that never loses its clarity. The dialogue between the characters is direct. When Sabine tries to play little games with Edmond, she seems awkward and unnatural. Even though the overall tone is straightforward, there is a hint of slyness that slips in from time to time.

Le Beau Marriage is a delightful film that never disappoints. The pace is fast and there is a spirit of fun that is sure to charm.

Beatrice Romand pursues Andre Dusollier in Le Beau Marriage.

Gandhi is dandy

FILM

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

Gandhi is one of the few films in recent years that deserves to be called an epic. It is a magnificent panorama of the life and achievements of Mahatma Gandhi, who faced the British Empire in non-violent combat and won independence for India.

Jack Briley's script does not present Gandhi as a remote saint, but as an intensely human figure thrust into activism by his revulsion of how his fellow Indians were treated, first by South Africans, then by the British in India.

Director Richard Attenborough uses the screen to its fullest potential, capturing limitless crowds as well as focusing on the tiny, humble man who set the momentous events in motion.

Ben Kingsley in the title role is the most inspired casting since Peter O'Toole in Lawrence of Arabia which Gandhi resembles in scope and mysticism. Candice Bergen, John Gielgud, John Mills, Edward Fox, Trevor Howard and Martin Sheen offer support, but some of the appearances seem gratuitous — star names to bolster the box office. Particularly Sheen, who shows up over the years as an American journalist but never ages.

If the film has a flaw, it is the portrayal of the British, who are almost entirely callous, stupid and brutal. But that may be how the Indians saw them over the long, suppressive years of British rule.

Ben Kingsley's makeup is checked on the set of Gandhi.

trailers

By Andy Gordon

Dustin Hoffman plays the title character in Tootsie.

Last summer was financially the best season ever for movies and all the major studios are gambling that Christmas, the medium's other prosperous season, will bring equal profits.

The big offering from Warner Brothers is Honkeytonk Man, in which Clint Eastwood plays Red, "a hard-drinking country musician whose goal is to perform at the Grand Ole Oprey." He heads out in a beat up old limo to realize his dream, accompanied by his nephew Whit, played by 14 year-old Kyle Eastwood (How'd he get the part, you ask?). Kyle's daddy is also producer and director on the flick, which will presumably have more heart than Firefox.

Paramount's major offering is 48 Hours, with cop Nick Nolte working on a case with convict Eddie Murphy, in his film debut. The picture was directed by the excellent Walter Hill (The Warriors, The Long Riders) and was written by the awful Roger Spottiswoode (Terror Train).

From Columbia comes Gandhi reviewed at left. The Toy and Tootsie. The latter should be interesting. Dustin Hoffman stars as an aspiring actor who dresses as a woman to land a part in a soap opera. How did Columbia get Hoffman to play a woman for the film's 10 week shooting schedule? Perhaps his five million dollar salary had something to do with it.

While we're on the subject of outrageously high salaries, Warren Beatty will also be paid 5 mil to do up a mermaid in Mermaid. Robert Towne (Personal Best) is the man behind the soon-to-be-classic. And Robert Redford has signed a two-picture deal with Warners in which he'll be paid 6.5 million for each picture of his choice.

Columbia Pictures will control the distribution of Sean S. Cunningham's Spring Break, a comedy about "sun, sand, surf, suds and sex." Cunningham (Here Come the Tigers, Friday the 13th) has made a career out of easy to exploit shock films and rip-offs. The flick will open during spring break.

Trick or Treats will open soon. Its a semi-comedy horror flick set on Halloween night (original really). Peter Jason plays the looney who escapes from an asylum to wreak havoc. In other roles, David Carradine and Carrie Snodgress play a married couple and Dan Pastorini and Tim Rossovich play asylum guards. Paul Bartel (Eating Raoul) plays a wino.

Bartel also turns up in Get Crazy, along with Raoul co-star Mary Woronov. The film is a takeoff on Rock concerts and will be directed by Alan Arkush (Rock and Roll High School, which also featured Bartel and Woronov). Malcolm MacDowell and Lou Reed also appear as rock stars.

Dudley Moore, due out this Christmas in the tearjerky Six Weeks, will soon begin filming Unfaithfully Yours, in which he is teamed with Natassia Kinski. The comedy is a remake of Preston Sturges' classic. Armand Assante, whose I, The Jury is also due out this Christmas, co-stars in the film.

The Concrete Jungle, a shlocky women's prison flick starring Jill St. John as the warden, is soon to be released locally. Meanwhile, shooting starts next on the film's sequel, Heat, which features Linda Blair and Tamara Dobson as inmates.

Local Best Bet: Tonight and tomorrow, the Academy of Music in Northampton will show the incredible double feature of Atlantic City and Harold and Maude. Both films are fantastic. Then Saturday is free movie night at the Blue Wall, where they'll be showing The Warriors, another great flick, at 8 and 10 p.m.

TRAILERS Trivia: Here are the characters, name the films - John Rambo, Regan MacNeil, Harry Callahan, Plenty O'Toole. Answer to last week's question: Russ Winneman won a movie poster for being the first to identify Alan Swann from My Favorite Year, Sam Spade from The Maltese Falcon, Jody Verill from Creepshow and Jake La Motta from Raging Bull.

Clint takes to the camera to line up a shot for Honkytonk Man.

GRAND OPENING
SALE-A-BRATION
Sat. Nov. 20-Sat. Dec. 4
2 weeks of Madness & Bargains

- Meet Bob Layton, Marvel Comics' Iron Man & Hercules Artist Sat. Dec. 4
Free Marvel Guide to Collecting Comics with this ad
6 new comics for the price of 5
20% off all back issues in stock

Comics
Prints
Collectibles
Dungeons & Dragons

Copyright 1982 Marvel Comics Group A Division of Cadence Industries Corp. All Rights Reserved

Moondance
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, Mass.
413-586-8775

amc THEATRES
$2.00 LIMITED REDUCED PRICES FOR STUDENTS WITH AMC CARE SEAT NO.
amc HAMPSHIRE 4 584-7550 HAMPSHIRE MALL
Lord Grade Presents
The Last Unicorn
Fri (4:00 @ $2.00) 6:00, 8:00, 9:45
Sat (2:00 & 4:00 @ $2.00) 6:00, 8:00, 9:45
Sun (12:30, 2:30 & 4:30 @ $2.00) 6:30, 8:30
The Most Fun You'll Ever Have BEING SCARED!
CREEP SHOW
Fri (5:15 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sat (2:30 & 5:15 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sun (1:00 & 3:30 @ $2.00) 6:00, 8:30
RICHARD GERE
AN OFFICER AND A GENTLEMAN
Fri at (5:00 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sat (2:15 & 5:00 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sun (1:00 & 3:30 @ $2.00) 6:00, 8:30
he's fighting for his life.
SYLVESTER STALLONE
FIRST BLOOD
Fri at (5:15 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:30
Sat at (2:30 & 5:15 @ $2.00)7:15, 9:30
Sun at (1:30 & 4:00 @ $2.00) 6:15, 8:15
amc MOUNTAIN FARMS 4 584-9153 MOUNTAIN FARMS MALL
Outrageously Spectacular!
JOHN CLEESE
SEAN CONNERY
TIME BANDITS
Fri at (4:45 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sat at (2:00 & 4:45 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sun at (1:00 & 3:45 @ $2.00) 6:15, 8:45
PG
He is afraid. He is totally alone.
E.T.
THE EXTRA-TERRESTRIAL
Fri at (4:45 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sat at (2:00 & 4:45 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sun at (1:00 & 3:45 $2.00) 6:15, 8:30
PG
THE SAGA CONTINUES
THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK
Fri at (4:30 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:45
Sat at (1:45 & 4:30 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:45
Sun at (12:45 & 3:30 @ $2.00) 6:00, 8:30
PG
Tex McCormick isn't giving in.
MATT DILLON
TEX
TOUGH TENDER TODAY
Fri at (5:00 @ $2.00) 7:45, 10:15
Sat at (2:15 & 5:00 @$2.00) 7:45, 10:15
Sun at (1:15 & 4:00 @ $2.00) 6:30, 8:45
PG
MIDNIGHT MOVIE MADNESS
EVERY FRIDAY & SATURDAY 12:15 AM ALL SEATS $3.00
amc HAMPSHIRE 4 584-7550
THE WHO
The Kids Are Alright
Register for a pair of tickets for "The Who" concert
PG
THE ROCKY HORROR PICTURE SHOW
50¢ off to anyone in costume
R
HEAVY METAL
R
THE EXORCIST
R

Sears

B. 2409
A. 2165
C. 2327
$15 OFF AM/FM radio with headphones Regular $39.99 24.99 Batteries extra
$10 to $20 OFF
Your Choice 29.95 each
A. Cassette recorder Regular $39.99
B. Portable stereo Regular $39.99
C. AM/FM digital clock radio Regular $49.99
Batteries extra
Sale ends 12/11/82
FREE: Your choice of any Maxell, TDK, or Memorex 90 minute blank cassette when you fill out a SearsCharge application*
Name _____ School _____
Student _____ Faculty _____ Other _____
*SearsCharge application and FREE blank tape are available at Customer Convenience Center
Coupon must be presented for FREE item. Coupon expires 12/11/82
You can count on Sears
Satisfaction Guaranteed or Your Money Back
ALBANY, NY; AUBURN, NY; FAIRMOUNT FAIR, NY; FAYETTEVILLE, NY; GLENS FALLS, NY; NEWBURGH, NY; N. SYRACUSE, NY; POUGHKEEPSIE, NY; EASTFIELD MALL, MA; HOLYOKE, MA; PITTSFIELD, MA; BROCKPORT, CT; HAMDEN, CT; MANCHESTER, CT; MIDDLETOWN, CT; NEW LONDON, CT; ORANGE, CT; W. HARTFORD, CT; BURLINGTON, VT

BLUE WALL
CAMPUS CENTER AT UMASS
"The area's most revered country artists"
JOHN LINCOLN WRIGHT
& The Sour Mash Revue
Friday, Dec. 3
Happy Hour with John Vorhaus 3-6 pm
COVER $2
Saturday
No Admission
Free Popcorn
THE Warriors
Show Times: 8 pm and 10 pm

The rusty nail Inn presents
Fri. Dec. 3
Average White Band
Sat. Dec. 4
Loose Caboose
Sun. Dec. 5
Justin
Coming Sat. Dec. 11
NRBQ
Rt. 47, Sunderland, MA 665-4937
You must be 18 to enter.

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Is Space the final frontier?

Mary Beth Hebert

Space, the final frontier. This is the voyage of a typical, UMass airhead. It's four to five year mission: to explore old worlds, seek alien life (people from Western Massachusetts)...To boldy go where men have gone before."

The United States has invested a great deal of time and money into its space program over the past twenty years. We have learned much about the world around us. Yet not one of those dollars has been put toward studying the untouched region of space that surrounds an airhead's brain.

At this point, it may be appropriate to point out who exactly is an airhead. You have all seen them before. In the past they were refered to as being "absent minded" or perhaps a touch "flighty." In current phraseology, they are called "space cadets" or sometimes a "space shot." They are the people who served as models for the absent-minded professor stereotype or the young housewife who always locks her keys in the car. At UMass they are the people who leave class five minutes late because they didn't notice that everyone else was gone. Or maybe they've gotten their schedule mixed up and missed an important test because they got the days wrong.

For whatever reason, the airhead is usually just slightly off-center. Not his politics — his whole being. Everything from his speech to his physical mobility is somewhat affected by the dense fog that surrounds his brain. Mouths and feet compete for dominance as the foot struggles to keep the mouth's mistakes to a minimum. The mouth tries it's best not to screw up because it knows that the poor person has enough trouble standing on two feet, let alone one.

Mobility with any amount of feet is often a confusing proposition for the airhead. Frequently, the dense fog from loftier cerebral habitats descends into the victim's line of vision. They get lost. Suddenly, their surroundings have been changed without their noticing it. "How did I get here?" can frequently be answered by tracing the path of a stone that has been kicked about for forty minutes. Often, they can't move anywhere at all as an airhead will discover that he has tied his shoelaces together or left the headlights on his car for three days in a row.

Most endearing of all the qualities of an airhead is his speech. The airheads of the world can claim responsibility for such linguistic gems as "What?" and "Huh?" and the ever popular, "Whatdidyousay?" He is also noted for not only dangling modifiers but whole sentences that are left up in the air, to be completed only as an after-thought, five minutes after it was begun.

Star Trek may be dead, but space exploration lives on.

Mary Beth Hebert is a Collegian columnist and cosmonaut.

Letters

Zionist sign on CC garage perpetuates a problem

To the Editor:

As a Jewish activist, I feel compelled to express my total disgust at the sign on the CC garage which says "Israel — Land of the Jews."

Nothing could better justify the opinion that Zionism is racism than this slogan. Many Israelis are not Jewish. If Israel is the "Land of the Jews," then what of them? How would we react to a sign that said "The U.S. — Land of the Christians"? If that would be anti-Semitic, then the sign on the garage is racist.

Furthermore, what is the point of writing such a slogan in Arabic as well as English? I know that posters from opposing groups have been torn down and accusations have flown on all sides, but really, how childish can you get?

The only hope for peace in the Middle East is for Israelis and Palestinians to recognize each other's right to self-determination. This sign, and all the attitudes behind it, only serve to perpetuate the problem.

Steven Shulman
Northampton

Random Notes

To the Editor:

Is our university run by mindless people who take orders from no one? Apparently so. I live in the Central residential area and like every Tuesday morning, I wake up at 10:00 for my 11:15 class. This morning, however, was a bit different. At 9:30 I heard a quiet knock at the door, which I disregarded with half closed eyes. Then I heard someone fidget with the door, which I also disregarded with the same enthusiasm. At 10:00 my alarm went off, and, as always, I picked up my key, grabbed my towel and soap, and headed towards the bathroom, with eyes closed and hair on end. I left my roommate asleep because it seemed that he was not ready to face the world. As I walked towards the bathroom I realized that I had forgotten my shampoo. So I headed back to the room and put my key in the door. To my great dismay the key didn't work. I brought it close to my face to see if I had possibly picked up the wrong key. No such luck! I knocked on the dorm president's door and he was as confused as I was. Apparently a university worker had received orders to change the locks on several doors on my floor. The dorm president told him that we were not informed of this and told him of the problems it would present. The man's reply was simple, "I have my orders." And he proceeded with his "work." We found out after several calls that new keys would be available in the cluster office, but it was not known when. So I stood in front of my door and my room mate stepped out in the same condition that I had previously been in. When I went down to the cluster office they told me that some time last semester the keys to these rooms had been lost and that that's why they were being replaced. They didn't know, however who issued the orders! The day was so typical of a Monday morning, that I turned to my calendar just to make sure.

Kevin Rubin
Central

We need columnists!
Drop by with a piece, Room 113 Campus Center

UM used to be progressive

If you have been following the Collegian editorial page this semester, you will recall that herein there have been several columns written by conservative students on everything from the nuclear freeze to student government.

If you have been at UMass for a while, you probably realize that this is not normal for the Collegian and is due mainly to the fact that 1) progressive students have not been writing often enough (hint, hint) and 2) the conservative element, always present even at excellent places like UMass, now feels it is socially acceptable to publicly espouse conservative views. This latter reason is particularly distressing, considering the properly held reputation of UMass as a progressive Mecca of sorts. However, this whole trend may simply be an aberration, as anyone associated with this paper knows that in a student-run operation with such a transient student population, individual personalities can have significant impact on the editorial content and even policy of the paper.

But don't get me wrong. I do not think this conservative trend is all bad. In fact, it may prove to be a positive thing in the long run. Although I have always believed that being young and conservative was almost a contradiction in terms, I also believe that the best way to counter the Right is to let them expose themselves. The ultimate example of this is Richard Nixon's racist and anti-Semitic comments on some of the White House tapes. And I'd love to hear some of Reagan's secret tapes. I'm sure he lets some of his true feelings slip when he's away from the cameras backstage at the White House.

As far as the Collegian goes, I have no desire to censor these conservative columns or even discourage them. They serve a useful purpose. They give students an opportunity to see just how intellectually and morally bankrupt and compassionless conservative philosophy really is. A local example of this "right self-exposure" principle can be seen in Ray Shamie's nuclear freeze rally appearance here in early October. Although thankfully he did not submit a column to the Collegian, his dishonest and tacky performance probably cost him more votes than if he had remained simply a name on the ballot.

Anyway, in the interst of furthering our understanding of this conservative mini-trend, I have outlined some of the major categories of conservatives here at UMass and other places. Please understand that there are conservatives who don't fall into any of these categories.

The "anti-progressives." Their political views can best be summed up as opposing anything they take to be progressive. The difference between them and regular conservatives is that they don't necessarily subscribe to conservative philosophies either. They simply get their satisfaction from putting down progressive people and their efforts. Included in this category are many of the anti-Student Government Association types.

The racist, sexist, super-patriotic redneck types. You guessed it, most of them are white, middle or upper-class males.

The conservative-due-to-ignorance types. This is probably the largest category of conservatives. I tend to give conservative people I meet the benefit of the doubt that their conservative attitudes reflect their very narrow and close-minded upbringing, as well as the fact that they haven't yet been exposed to progressive ideas. Also, I can't imagine that they watch or read the news much, because one of the requirements of "principled" conservatism is shutting yourself off from human suffering. I also assume they have never seen an inner-city ghetto or known what it is like to be poor and unemployed and uneducated, etc. It is no coincidence that college tends to have a "life-long liberalizing effect" on graduates. At a place like UMass, it is especially hard to go four years and still be a conservative.

The cynical conservatives. These people are honest enough to see how screwed up this world we live in is, but they have resigned themselves to the inevitability of this situation — "human nature is inherently greedy and competitive" — and so they consider any efforts to change things futile.

The diehard Reagan cultists. These are the people who supported Reagan in 1980 and now won't admit how terribly wrong they were. They hated Jimmy Carter and wanted change, but were too short-sighted and politically ignorant to understand the implications of Radical Right Ronnie Ray-gun running this country.

Finally, despite all this talk of conservatism, UMass remains a vitally progressive university and center of learning. I dare say that fact is one of the best of the many good things about this place, and the one of which myself and many others is the most proud.

As the primary organ of communication for UMass students, the Collegian should and usually does reflect this. There have been more conservative columns these past few weeks, but to be fair I have to admit that there have been so few conservative columns in the Collegian over the past few years that the appearance of even a few is worthy of comment.

Hopefully, however, this isn't indicative of a "swing-to-the-right" here of all places. At a time when we already have to live with the devastating effects of a conservative government in Washington, UMass going conservative would be just too much to bear.

Jackson Katz is a UMass graduate

Explore Careers in Arts Management

- Careers in Performing Arts Management
  Monday, December 6
  Campus Center, Room 903, 7 - 9 p.m.
- Careers in Film Industry
  Tuesday, December 14
  Herter Hall, Room 231, 7 - 9 p.m.

CAREERS IN PERFORMING ARTS MANAGEMENT
presented by:

Barbara Schaffer Bacon	Arts Resource Coordinator Arts Extension Service
Sheldon Wolf	Director, Audience Development, StageWest, W. Springfield
Earle Batchelder	former General Manager, Erie Philharmonic Orchestra past board member, Boston Ballet Society, Metropolitan Cultural Alliance

TOPICS: Performance Facilities and Companies, Theatre Management, Agencies

TO REGISTER, CALL AES 545-2360.

Sponsored by the Arts Extension Service of the Division of Continuing Education with the support of the University Arts Council.

"The Best Chinese Food"

家酒園南湖
Hunan Garden Restaurant

MANDARIN SZECHUEN CUISINE

Every Mon.-Thurs. from 5-8
& Sunday from 11:30 - 3

For only$5.25 per person

Chicken Fried Noodles	Hot & Sour Soup
Sweet & Sour Chicken	Chicken Fingers
Pan Fried Rice	Pan Fried Ravioli
Chinese Barbecued Pork	Beef with Green Pepper

Sun.-Thurs. 11:30 a.m.-10:00 p.m.
Fri. & Sat. 11:30 a.m.-11:00 p.m.

10 Belchertown Rd., at Route 9, Amherst
256-0251 256-0252

Ski Now - Pay Later

UMASS SKI CLUB

Aspen, Colorado
SKI WEEK Jan 8-15

This Deluxe Vacation Includes:

- ☐ Round Trip Air, Scheduled Non-Stop Service from Boston, NYC, Phila. or Wash. to Denver
- ☐ Round Trip Bus Transfers to Aspen
- ☐ Deluxe Slope-Side Accommodations for 7 Nights, Tax Included
- ☐ Six-Day Lift Ticket Good at Aspen Mountain, Snowmass, and Buttermilk

Deluxe Slopeside Shadow Mountain Condominiums
Featuring fully equipped kitchen, maid service, fireplace, color TV, heated pool, sauna, and skiing out your door.

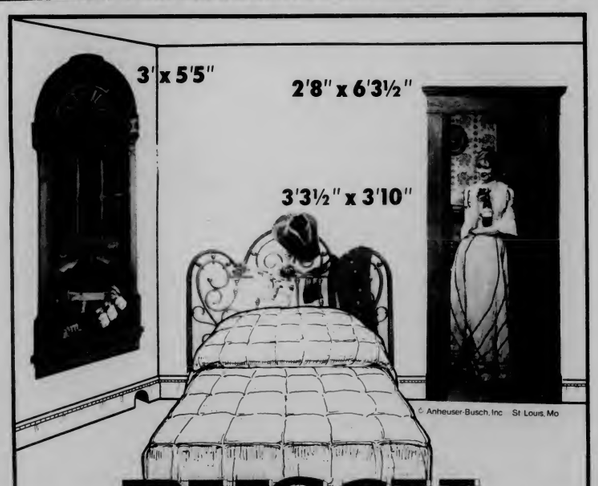
$659 per person

or

Woodstone Hotel Package
Located right on the mountain next to the lift, featuring: heated pool, jacuzzi, sauna, maid service, apres ski atmosphere.

$599 per person

Sign-Up Now
Ski Club Office
430A Student Union
5-3437



BUSCH®
LIFE SIZE POSTERS

Get these life size, full color Busch Bunk House posters for only $2.00 each. Or, order the complete set of three for just $5.00.

DOOR
Cover an existing door or hang it on the wall and add a door to your room. Full color, life size. Just think, a cold Busch waiting at the door!

BRASS BED
This is an incredible poster! A brass bed in your room for just 2 bucks. Don't pass it up.

WINDOW
A Busch Cowboy makes a getaway out of your room. Look for the rattlesnake hatband!

$2 EACH

Busch Bunk House Life Size Posters
HERE'S HOW TO ORDER

Please send me:

- #____ Window poster(s) at $2.00 each (P-141)
- #____ Door poster(s) at $2.00 each (P-140)
- #____ Bed poster(s) at $2.00 each (P-139)
- #____ set(s), one of each poster at $5.00 per set (P-142)

Make check or money order payable to Busch Bunk House Poster Offer

Your Name
Address
City
State Zip

Mail to: Project Inc. 6301 Manchester St. Louis, MO 63139

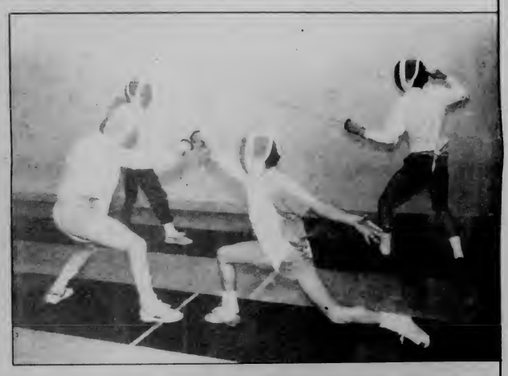
Allow 4-6 weeks for delivery. Void where prohibited. Offer good while supplies last.

Sport of fencing enjoys UMass renaissance

Collegian photos by David May

Members of the fencing class practicing their ancient art in the North Physical Education Building. Students are members of a class of around 20 being taught the sport by the course instructor, Paul Berube. Class routine includes warm-up sessions, practice drills, and fencing in contests called "bouts," which are scored both on "hits" and technique.

Clockwise, from bottom left, Anne Albertine puts on her mask in preparation for drills; Wayne Nelson checks in to pick up his equipment before class; Roz Olson, left, and Anna Fossas thrust swords while participating in end of class drills; Sir Winston, left, and Gerry Campbell duel in the foreground while Dan Chang, left, and Wayne Nelson square off in the background; and Dan Chang executes a forward lunge.



TIME OUT

Two TV's

COME AND JOIN THE CROWD

Free Popcorn

Amherst's Biggest Little Bar
37 N. Pleasant Street

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS

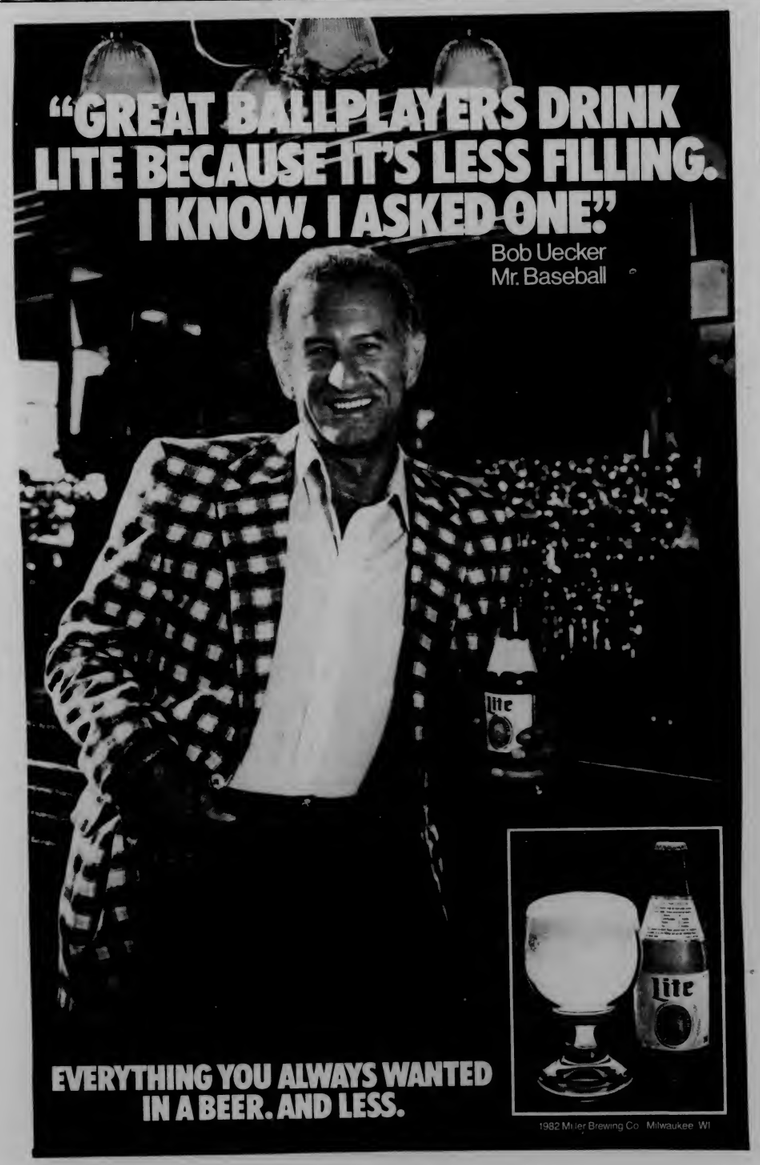
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Minatures (whiskey, liquors, etc.)	45¢ & up/ea
Labatts beer or ale	$2.99/6 pk
Beck's light or dark	$3.99/6 pk
Miller 12 oz NR bottles	$8.99/case
Vodka or Gin 80°	$5.45/1 liter $8.99/1.75 liters
Folonari & Soave	$3.99/1.5 liters
Almaden Mountain Wines your choice	$4.79/1.5 liters

Don't forget your SECRET SANTA!

"GREAT BALLPLAYERS DRINK LITE BECAUSE IT'S LESS FILLING. I KNOW. I ASKED ONE."

Bob Uecker
Mr. Baseball



EVERYTHING YOU ALWAYS WANTED IN A BEER. AND LESS.

1982 Miller Brewing Co Milwaukee WI

OUR PATIENTS AREN'T SICK.

If you're faced with an unwanted pregnancy, a lot of places will treat you as if you are sick. At Preterm, we look at you as a healthy person with a problem that may be very difficult for you to face. Which is why our counselors talk with you, and support you during the entire procedure. An abortion is an important decision. But it is not an illness. Call 738-6210. The most experienced reproductive health care center in the Northeast.

preterm

A licensed non-profit health care facility. 1842 Beacon Street, Brookline, MA 02146

LAGNAF 83

Celebrate!
With a Diamond College Ring from ArtCarved.

Your college years are ending and your career is about to begin. Celebrate! With a college ring that makes all your efforts worthwhile. Come and see the beautiful and affordable Designer Diamond Collection exclusively from ArtCarved. Choose from three exquisitely styled rings, handcrafted in 10K or 14K gold, and set with genuine diamonds. (All styles are also available in the elegant diamond-substitute Cubic Zirconia). Let your ArtCarved representative show you how you can celebrate these times...for a lifetime.

Final Day!

ARTCARVED CLASS RINGS, INC

DATE: Dec. 3 TIME: 10-4 PLACE: University Store

DEPOSIT REQUIRED MASTERCARD OR VISA ACCEPTED

©1982 ARTCARVED CLASS RINGS, INC

Spare-parts medicine making greater strides

By PAUL RAEBURN
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Last month, a 22-year-old Ohio woman with paralyzed legs stood, tottered and walked, her legs wired to a roomful of electronic machinery. Doctors in Boston are healing burn victims with patches of manufactured skin. And now a man lies in a Utah hospital, his heart replaced with a pulsating web of plastic.

The age of spare-parts medicine is suddenly upon us.

The implantation yesterday of the first permanent artificial heart into the chest of Barney Clark at the University of Utah Medical Center is a riveting example of how a machine can be used to save and extend a life, but the promise of artificial organs and other products of biomedical engineering goes far beyond such dramatic treatment.

Twenty years from now, the use of replaceable parts might be keeping hundreds of thousands of people alive, and improving the lives of many others, says Clark Colton, Bayer Professor of chemical engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

As an example of what artificial organs will be able to do, Colton described his work on the development of an artificial pancreas for diabetics. It consists of a pump to feed insulin into the bloodstream, a monitor to measure blood sugar level, and a microcomputer to control the amount of insulin delivered.

Ultimately, the entire device will be no larger than a deck of cards, Colton said. Insulin would be supplied from a reservoir carried outside the body.

In another approach to the problem, Colton is experimenting with an artificial pancreas that would make its own insulin, because it would incorporate living cells from an animal pancreas.

Colton's experimental devices make use of the two critical scientific advances that have made artificial organs possible: The ability to build an entire computer on a chip smaller than a thumbnail; and the development of radically new plastics and other materials.

The use of artificial organs dates to the 17th century, when artificial materials were used to replace bones and noses, says Arthur Caplan, a specialist in medical ethics at the Hastings Center in Hastings-onHudson, N.Y.

More sophisticated organ substitutions began in a penthouse in occupied Amsterdam during World War II, Caplan said. There Willem Kolff, using materials he had in the apartment, built the first artificial kidney, otherwise known as a kidney dialysis machine.

Need Cash?

Member Amherst Chamber of Commerce

Buying Class Rings
Highest Prices Paid
Also: Gold & Silver—Coins & Jewelry

DANIEL SMITH
25 North Pleasant Street
Amherst Mon - Sat 10 - 5:30 tel. 256-0710

FOUR SEASONS

Miller	bot	$8.99
Michelob	regular & light	$9.99
Labatts	beer & ale	$9.99
Bacardi Rum	1.75 L	$12.99
Boris Gudanoff Vodka	1.75 L	$7.99
Glennfiddich single malt scotch	in tin gift box $1.50 off	$16.99
Andre Champagne		$2.99
Sebastiani Table Wines	3 L	$6.99
1977 Beychevell		$10.99

Mini-Gift Sets available for Holidays

Kegs Free Delivery

Open 10 AM to 11 PM
in front of the Malls
Wines/Liquors
rte.9, hadley, ma./584 8174

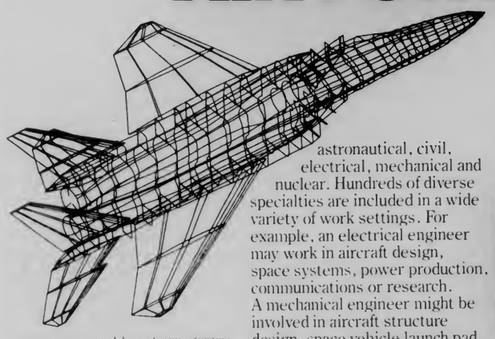
Joey D's

Fri.&Sat.
9-11
Well Drinks.
75¢

NEW area D.J.'s starting tonight
Elliot Andrews & Jeff Taylor
Coming Next Week:
Lacrosse Final Exam Jam!!

Jeans Accepted.

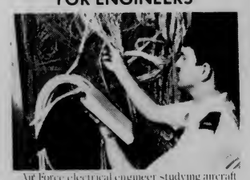
ENGINEERING TAKES ON EXCITING NEW DIMENSIONS IN THE AIR FORCE.



Computer-generated design for investigating structural strengths and weaknesses.

Developing and managing Air Force engineering projects could be the most important, exciting challenge of your life. The projects extend to virtually every engineering frontier.

8 CAREER FIELDS FOR ENGINEERS



Air Force electrical engineer studying aircraft electrical power supply system.

Engineering opportunities in the Air Force include these eight career areas: aeronautical, aerospace, architectural, astronautical, civil, electrical, mechanical and nuclear. Hundreds of diverse specialties are included in a wide variety of work settings. For example, an electrical engineer may work in aircraft design, space systems, power production, communications or research. A mechanical engineer might be involved in aircraft structure design, space vehicle launch pad construction, or research.

PROJECT RESPONSIBILITY COMES EARLY IN THE AIR FORCE

Air Force mechanical engineer inspecting aircraft jet engine turbine.

Most Air Force engineers have complete project responsibility early in their careers. For example, a first lieutenant directed work on a new airborne electronic system to pinpoint radiating targets. Another engineer tested the jet engines for advanced tanker and cargo aircraft.

OPPORTUNITIES IN THE NEW USAF SPACE COMMAND

Artist's concept of the DSCS III Defense Satellite Communications System satellite. (USAF photo.)

Recently, the Air Force formed a new Space Command. Its role is to pull together space operations and research and development efforts, focusing on the unique technological needs of space systems. This can be your opportunity to join the team that develops superior space systems as the Air Force moves into the twenty-first century.

To learn more about how you can be part of the team, see your Air Force recruiter or call our Engineer Hotline toll free 1-800-531-5826 (in Texas call 1-800-292-5366). There's no obligation.

AIM HIGH AIR FORCE

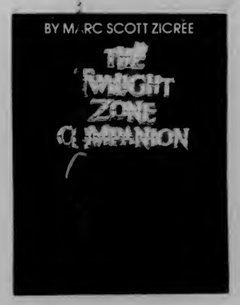
Read and Recycle this Collegian

AMHERST CINEMA
Fri - Sat
Diva 7:00
The Harder They Come 9:05
Sun - Tues
Das Boot [R] 7:30
Downtown Amherst
253-5426

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
Rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
Immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays Saturdays 1-4

JOBS OVERSEAS
ALL COUNTRIES
ALL CATEGORIES
INCLUDING CRUISE SHIPS
200 COMPANIES MOST POSITIONS OPEN
ACT FAST
CALL
1-716-885-3242
EXT. 601

About the only thing that isn't in it is the theme music!



It debuted on October 2, 1959 and over the next five years and 156 episodes, it charted a territory all its own filled with magic, horror, and wonder. Now, submitted for your approval, is THE TWILIGHT ZONE COMPANION. Profusely illustrated with over 200 photos, this definitive volume combines evocative synopses of each episode with cast and credit listings, incisive commentary and colorful behind-the-scenes recollections. $9.95 wherever books are sold or order directly from the publisher by including $1.25 for postage and handling.

A BANTAM TRADE PAPERBACK.
BANTAM BOOKS, INC., Dept. DR 18, 666 Fifth Avenue, New York 10103

the Hungry U Restaurant
55 University Drive
Amherst
549-5713
Fine food and drink at affordable prices

By popular demand our weekend evening happy hours are back!
FRIDAY and SATURDAY
9:00 - close
Free Pizza 99¢ bar drinks
Free Peanuts 50¢ drafts
games area
or sample dinner for two
only $9.95 - 5:30 - 9:00

Hypercurricula...

"Hypercurricula," a listing of events held at the University of Massachusetts and surrounding area, is published daily in the Collegian. Events are listed only on the day they are taking place. Announcements must be submitted on "Hypercurricula" forms available in the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center, and returned to the office by 3 p.m. the Friday before the event. All submissions should be written in a similar style as they appear in the paper.

"Hypercurricula" notices not submitted on the standard form and not submitted by the Friday before the week the event will take place will not be run. Due to space limitations, the Collegian cannot guarantee printing of all "Hypercurricula" notices. Priority will be given to UMass organizations.

Today

OLDER STUDENTS SERVICES NETWORK — Informal lunch for older students and OSSN members. Noon, quickie lunch, 10th floor, Campus Center.

SHABBAT SERVICES — This special Shabbat service will be on Dreams, led by Daniel Berlin. The Torah Portion will be on Joseph. 7 p.m., Dukes Room, 310 Student Union Building.

Saturday

WORKSHOP FOR HUMAN SERVICES MAJORS — The undergraduate human services coalition presents — Life After UMass: Career Outlook and Graduate School Overview. Coffee provided — bring a donut (or two) 10 a.m., fourth floor, Hills South.

EYEWITNESS TESTIMONIES FROM CENTRAL AMERICA — FDR spokesperson Arnaldo Ramos and Guatemalan Indian Rights spokesperson Jose Marroquin will discuss current events in Central America particular emphasis will be paid to impact of U.D. military aid upon this region. 7 p.m., Cape Cod Lounge, Student Union.

Sunday

NEED A RIDE TO CHURCH? — UCF CHURCH BUS leaves from Grayson parking lot at 9:30 a.m., stops at Cashin Dorm and then NOPE by 9:35 a.m. for the Amherst churches. Coffee and donuts served in Grayson dorm from 9 to 9:30 a.m. Call 545-2661 for more information.

FREE JAZZ BRUNCH — Orchard Hill/Central Arts council, UMass Arts council and Butterfield present a free jazz brunch with the Art Matthew's Trio. 1 to 3 p.m. Butterfield dining hall.

FALL HONORS RECITAL — The Performing Arts Division's advanced students of private study will perform works by Bach, Dowland, Mozart, Chopin and Kabalersky on guitar, piano, violin and North Indian Dance. 3 p.m., Bezanson Recital Hall, Fine Arts Center.

ART EXHIBITION — BFA thesis exhibition of fiber sculptures and printed textiles by Rhonda Cunha. Opening reception 4 p.m., Herter Gallery.

HOUSE CHURCH — A student group engaged in mutual ministry, Bible study, personal sharing and encounter, and a simple closing Communion which reflects the spirit of the group. 7 to 9 p.m., 428 Student Union.

UMASS SKI CLUB
Sign up now for all trips
office hours M-F 11-4
HIGH PEOPLE IN HIGH PLACES
430A Student Union 5-3437

MENS and WOMENS SWEATER SALE
20% Off
Sale Ends Sunday
(Dec. 5)
ALL Sweaters
20% off
Saturday Clothes
10-6 Mon - Sat Sun 12-5
Fri til 9
(behind Silverscape)

the hatch CAFETERIA
GROUND FLOOR/STUDENT UNION

A Christmas Checklist
Plan ahead now so you won't forget anyone

Give the Power of the Computer
for Just $89.95
reg. $99.95

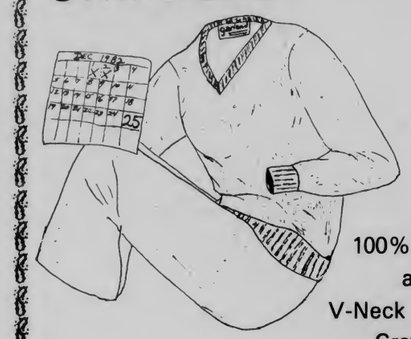
Now Timex brings you a real computer at an unreal price with these sophisticated features:
- Unique "one-touch" entry of key words like RUN, LIST, PRINT eliminates tiresome typing.
- Full range of mathematical and scientific functions accurate to nine and a half decimal places.
- Graph drawing and animated display facilitis.
- Multidimensional string and numerical arrays.
- 2K RAM expandable to 16K with the optional accessoty RAM module.
- Cassette LOAD and SAVE with named programs.
- Advanced 4-chip design: microprocessor, ROM, RAM, plus Master Chip.
- Ability to imbed Z80A machine code within BASIC programs.
- Full data address and control busses access provided.
- Powerful data string-slicing mechanism.

Optional 16K RAM module available for $49.95
Open M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4
UNIVERSITY STORE
Located in the Campus Center

A Christmas Checklist

Plan ahead now so you won't forget anyone

Women's GARLAND SWEATERS



100% orlon acrylic V-Neck or Crewneck

Located in the Campus Center

Open M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4

UNIVERSITY STORE

THE VALENTINES

DECEMBER 4th
WORCESTER D.C.

9:00-1:00 am
presented by NEAC

Tickets ~ $1.00 in advance 1.50 at the door

FRIDAY MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE HAPPY HOUR

Mike's Smorgy is back!
"All you can eat for $1.00"
Still the best happy hour in town
three 7 oz Rolling Rocks $1.25
Bar drinks - 95¢
4:00 - 7:00

BARGAIN BASEMENT SALE

Selected Groups of
Mugs
Cards
Cubes
Games
Frames
Candles
Buttons
Posters
Puzzles
Tin Boxes
Plant Pots
Stationary
Rubber Stamps
Plastic Boxes
many other items. . .

ALL ITEMS SUBJECT TO PRIOR SALE

ALL SALES FINAL!

on the concourse
STARTS MONDAY, DEC. 6, 1982
MONDAY thru FRIDAY
Monday 25% off original price
Tuesday 33% off original price
Wednesday 50% off original price
Thursday 75% off original price
Friday 90% of original price
cashier will take the mark-down at the register

UNIVERSITY STORE

Doonesbury by Garry Trudeau

The UMass Zone by Mark Rollins

Under the Influence by M. Joyce

Bushwa by Tom Cushwa

Bloom County by Berke Breathed

D.C. MENU

	Saturday	Sunday
LUNCH Tuna Boat Turkey Divan	BASICS LUNCH Lentil Spinach Stew Turkey Divan	BRUNCH Omelet Bacon Slices Waffles/Maple Syrup Deli Ham on Pumpernickle	BRUNCH Scrambled Eggs Breakfast Sausage Clam Roll/Tartar Sauce California Sauce
DINNER Royal Zucchini Beef Parmesan Fish Fry/Tartar Sauce	BASICS DINNER Ratatouille Fish Fry/Tartar Sauce	DINNER Stir Fry Beef and Vegetables Chicken Cutlet/ Supreme Sauce, Cranberry Sauce Mexican Vegetable Bake	DINNER Roast Pork/Gravy, Applesauce Manicotti with Sauce Sweet and Sour Tofu

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1 Gamble
6 Fresh water fish used for bait
10 Noted architect
13 Slow down
14 Rani's husband
15 Swallow
16 Adjust, as a dial
17 Chemical suffix
18 Author of "A Death In the Family"
19 Gambler's concern
22 Recess
23 Olympic contests
24 Type of valve
27 Capital of the Treasure State
29 Dinner entree
30 Heat: Lat.
31 Kind of poker hand
34 Sardonic laugh
35 Gamblers
37 Surprised remark
38 Title for Marie
39 Sultan's milieu
40 Three-handed card game
41 Skirt styles
43 Entree
45 Surround with a covering: Var.
47 —— Beach, Fla.
48 Gambler's concern
53 Pastoral poem
54 "To —— and a bone and..."
55 Shows grief
57 Connections
58 Mona ——
59 Place: Lat.
60 Men's patriotic org.
61 Draw —— (gamble)
62 Web

DOWN
1 Conflict
2 Make —— (gamble)
3 Cut
4 Always the same
5 Captured again
6 Sneaky gambler
7 Word with back or baked
8 Distinct part
9 —— of Arts
10 Risky purchase
11 Raise
12 Pierre's perceptions
15 Half a German spa
20 Grief
21 Medgar ——, memorable member of NAACP
24 Sports league and others
25 Nonaligned: Abbr.
26 Gamble
27 19th President
28 Basic, for short
30 Mind
32 Exclamations
33 Adds up, as scores
35 —— Vance, S.S. Van Dine sleuth
36 Voyage's end
40 Make points against 42 Lounges about
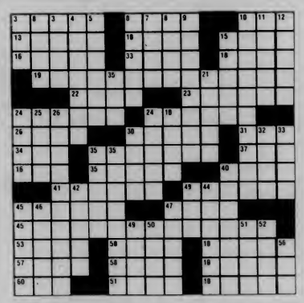
43 Energy agcy.
44 Pool strokes
45 "—— Tuesday, This Must Be Belgium"
46 Gymnast Comaneci
47 Short for a gamblers' hangout
49 Musical group
50 Verb with "thou"
51 Ten: Prefix
52 Siding
56 Direction



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

J	A	W	E	D	■	H	A	M	■	P	O	E	M
O	R	A	T	E	■	A	C	T	■	P	I	L	E
W	A	T	T	E	R	C	R	E	S	S	A	L	A	D
L	Y	R	E	■	R	O	K	S	■	D	E	L	E	T	E
■	■	R	O	L	L	S	■	D	I	E	H	A	R	D	■
P	I	A	L	A	C	E	■	G	R	E	E	N	■	■	■
F	I	N	■	S	A	N	D	■	D	E	F	I	S	H
C	I	C	L	E	■	W	R	A	P	S	■	I	R	A	D
S	T	A	T	S	■	A	L	I	G	■	I	S	R	A	E	D
■	■	H	U	D	S	O	N	■	I	N	■	E	E	T	S
S	P	R	I	T	E	■	E	N	D	O	W	■	■	■	■
E	L	L	I	N	O	R	■	S	L	O	E	■	A	A	A
W	A	T	E	R	M	E	L	O	N	■	P	A	T	C	H
O	N	E	■	A	T	O	P	■	T	H	E	M	E	■	■
N	E	S	S	■	N	O	T	E	■	H	A	R	E	M	■

Weather

Early morning fog today and then sunny and mild. Highs around 60°, except 50's Cape Cod. Fair and mild tonight, lows in the 40's. Tomorrow sunny and warm, highs in the 60's to around 70.

CABLE VIDEO

Movin' Upward Music Video

10:30 - 11:30	Mitch Chauchor at Springfest 82
11:30 - 12:30	The Neighborhoods in the Wall
12:30 - 1:30	The Fools, also in the Wall
1:30 - 2:00	Rockin' Video

WMUA 91.1

6-9	More Music
9-12	Concerto Latino
12-3	Carl Lowman
3-5:30	Jim McDee
5:30-6	Newswatch
6-7	Athena's Web
7-10	TK Til Ten
10-2	Vickie Bates The Radical Dub Faction

EARTHFOODS MENU

Tempeh Burgers
Split Pea Soup
Hermatins

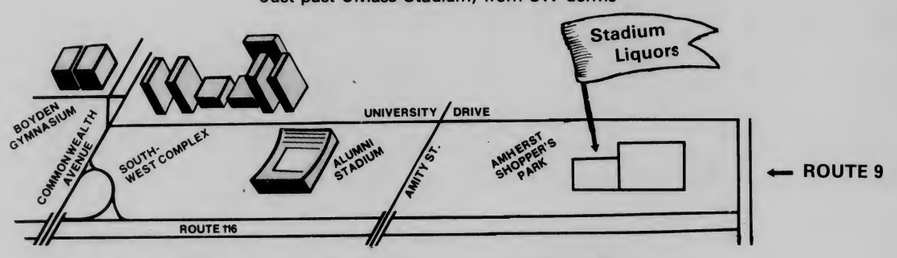
STADIUM

UMass Amherst

10 a.m. LIQUORS til 11 p.m.

Kegs • Beer • Wine • Soda • Ice

University Drive, Amherst, Mass.
Just past UMass Stadium, from SW dorms



Michelob & Michelob Light bottles....	$9.75 case
Miller 12 pack btls.	$4.50
Lowenbrau bottles.	$9.99
Molson bottles.	$11.75
Rolling Rock cans 12 pack.	$4.00
Moosehead	$12.50
Canadian Club 1.75.	$16.95
Canadian Club 750 ml.	$8.50
VO 1 liter.	$10.59
Smirnoff Vodka 1.75.	$11.75
Skol Vodka 1.75.	$8.20
Newport Rum 1.75.	$9.95
Sebastiani 3 L.	$5.95
Gallo 1.5.	$3.99
Martini & Rossi Asti 750 ml.	$8.25
Carlo Rossi 3 L.	$4.99

253-5595

not responsible for typographical errors

Sports

Entries are still being accepted for five-on-five and one-on-one basketball. Contact the intramural department.

Army invades Boyden

By ELLEN RICHARD
Collegian Staff

Strong and experienced are the words to describe the University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics team as it prepares for its first meet of the season on Saturday against Army at 1 p.m. in Boyden Gym.

The squad, which finished with a deceiving 5-7 record last season, will have the same team back from last year. Only two out of the nine team members that will perform on Saturday are freshmen. The strength of the team will lie on the shoulders of the experienced players.

"We had a great team last season and our record isn't indicative of how we did," UMass coach Roy Johnson said. "I think we have an even stronger team this year."

Johnson said the power in the team will be expected from juniors William Stevens, and Bert Mathieson and senior John Macurdy. Both Stevens and Mathieson compete in all six of the events (floor exercise, pommel horse, still rings, long horse vaulting, parallel bars and high bars) with Stevens expected to lead the team in high bars, his best event, and Mathieson anchoring the team in pommel horse, still rings and parallel bars.

Macurdy, who was the 1982 New England Invitational champion in floor exercises and long horse vaulting, will perform in five events. He will not compete in still rings because of a shoulder injury suffered in his sophmore year.

The other key competitors in Saturday's meet will be freshmen Joe DeMarco, who will be performing in the floor exercises and rings, and Mark Quevillion, who will compete in the pommel horse event.

Sophomores Lewis Wingert and Tony Sbarra are two more gymnasts who will be counted on in the meet. Lewis will perform in pummel horse, parallel bars, rings and high bar. Sbarra will compete in long horse vaulting and will be the anchorman for the high bar event.

In the floor and vaulting events, junior Peter Lucchini has the potential to score nines. Senior co-captain Robert Goulart (along with John McGonagle who is not competing Saturday) will perform in rings and parallel bars.

UMass' strength will be put to a test by Army tomorrow in an exciting match. The men last beat Army in 1980 when they went into their last losing and came from behind to win by one tenth of a point. Johnson expects another exciting meet this year with the competition probably going into the last event.

"The team (Army) isn't that good," Johnson said, "but they're good enough to get the job done."

Johnson said he thought UMass had the stronger team. Event wise, Johnson said the two teams were even in floor exercises and parallel bar with UMass being the better ring team. Johnson said the pummel horse could go either way.

Army started its season already by beating Cortland State 241.50-220.25. Army's strongest event was long horse vaulting for which the team scored 46 out of a possible 50 points, and its weakest with a score of 35.9 was pummel horse.

"Army is a very solid and clean team," Macurdy said. "They don't have big tricks."

"Army's always been the closest match of the season," said Goulart. "I'm not sure what to expect this year. It's going to be a really close meet."

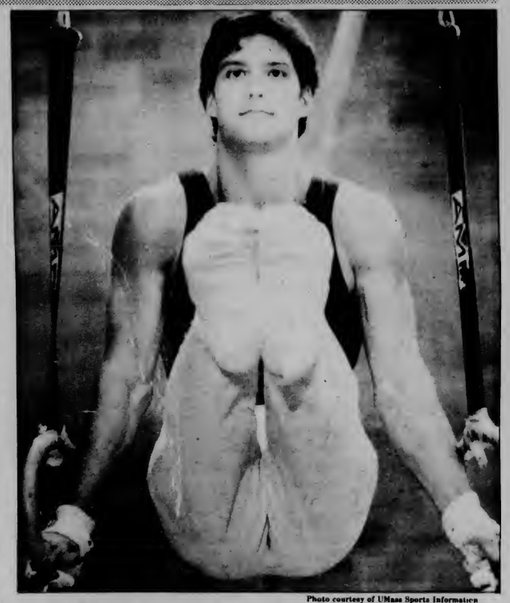


Photo courtesy of UMass Sports Information

John Macurdy works out on the rings.

Women hoopsters ready to Cage the Wildcats

By ADAM NAZIMOWITZ
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team will bring a 2-3 record into the Curry Hicks Cage tomorrow afternoon as they take on an experienced University of New Hampshire team.

UNH features two seniors and two juniors on their starting five, which has compiled an impressive 4-0 record so far this season.

"I consider their women's team to be the best in New England," said UMass coach Mary Ann Ozdarski. "I feel that the only thing they have on us is experience. Our kids just have to go out and take charge of the game."

UMass is led by freshman shooting guard Barbara Hebel who is averaging 19 points a game. There is no one else on the team in double figures. The team has been averaging 61 points a game while giving up 68 points per game.

Hebel can't continue to carry the burden offensively. Everyone on the team is capable of scoring and they just have to score," said Ozdarski.

In their last game, the hoopwomen lost to Springfield College, one of the top 8 Division 11 teams in the country, by a score of 76-48, and did not play hard, according to the coach.

"The members of the team are not playing consistently. We are a peak and valley team, one day we play well, the next day we don't. To be a good basketball team, which we are, we must play consistently," said Ozdarski.

Some of the other problems of the team that Ozdarski talked about were the amount of freshmen, the lack of hard work, and the difficulty of establishing an inside game.

"The freshmen have to get experience somewhere. They must be ready to go out everyday whether it is practice or a game, and play hard and they are not. It is a lesson they have to learn soon. Also we have to have the big people score inside consistently, and we haven't had that take charge kind of inside game," said Ozdarski.

The Minutewomen will try to even their record at .500 as they meet UNH in the Cage Saturday afternoon at 2:00 p.m. They will then host Harvard University on Tuesday night.

Photo by David Deuber

Swimmers leave their marks during practice at Boyden Pool yesterday.

Let's add a few more bowls to the holiday table

By ELLIOTT KALB
Collegian Staff

There are 15 scheduled football bowl games this season, as many as there have ever been. New Year's Day alone gives the football fanatics the opportunity to watch five college bowl games, including the Rose, Orange, Sugar, Fiesta and Cotton Bowls.

Not enough, I say. Oh sure, maybe in the days when there were only 30 or 40 good teams in the country, but today there are plenty more teams who would die for the chance to go to a bowl game.

And we're just the guys to watch them.

Here then are my suggestions for additional college football bowl games:

DAVID LETTERMAN BOWL: This game will have a New England flavor to it, being played in (Paul) Schaeffer Stadium. Annually select the two most outrageous teams of the year, with Dr. Ruth Westheimer serving as color commentator. This game promises more action than humans should be allowed.

SIESTA BOWL: Each year pick the two most boring teams in the nation. This one can be played live at 3 a.m. in the morning on New Year's Eve, so football fans will not have to go more than four hours in a row without football that holiday weekend.

THE PLAY IT AGAIN, SAM, BOWL: Selects the two teams that played the most exciting contest of the year for a rematch. A 1982 Play It Again, Sam, Bowl might match up Stanford-California or perhaps Maine-Rhode Island (6 overtimes).

THE FRITZ MONDALE BOWL: One team from the Midwest meets a New England football powerhouse that refuses to show up, forcing the Midwestern team to play a weaker opponent.

THE RONALD REAGAN BOWL: Actually a bowl already in existence with a new name: the Senior Bowl.

THE CEREAL BOWL: Played in Battlecreek, Michigan early in the morning; this game annually pits C.W. Post against either the Cornhuskers from Nebraska or Rice University.

THE DUST BOWL: Woody Hayes comes out of retirement to coach one of the two teams, both of whom will not be allowed to throw a forward pass. Three yards and a cloud of dust football at its best.

THE MOE HOWARD BOWL: This game would annually feature the two dirtiest, savage, most penalized teams in college football and pits them on the same field. This game would feature plenty of head slaps, eye-poking, name-calling, pies in the face, and all that good stuff.

Finally, the ultimate bowl of them all:

THE ROMAN BOWL: Annually pits the religious Athletes-in-Action team against the Lions. Real lions.

Head for the Mountains

UMASS SKI CLUB
Killington
Sat. Dec. 4
includes:
bus, refreshments, lift ticket
$23

SKI NOW, PAY LATER
(financing available)

Aspen, Colorado
SKI WEEK Jan 8-15
This Deluxe Vacation Includes:

Round Trip Air, Scheduled Non-Stop Service from Boston, NYC, Phila or Wash to Denver

Round Trip Bus Transfers to Aspen

Deluxe Slope-Side Accommodations for 7 Nights, Tax Included

Six-Day Lift Ticket Good at Aspen Mountain, Snowmass, and Buttermilk

Deluxe Slopeside Shadow Mountain Condominiums
Featuring fully equipped kitchen, maid service, fireplace, color TV, heated pool, sauna, and skiing out your door.
$659 per person
or
Woodstone Hotel Package
Located right on the mountain next to the lift, featuring: heated pool, jacuzzi, sauna, maid service, apres ski atmosphere.
$599 per person
non-members welcome

11th Annual BUSH DASH
SUGARBUSH VALLEY
VERMONT
SKI & PARTY WEEK
Jan 23 - 28
Includes: lifts, lodging
meals, free beer & wine parties
hot tub party, etc, etc
ONLY $189 tax & gratuities included
THE BEST VACATOR YOU'LL EVER HAVE
non-members welcome

A look at the NBA right now

By BRIAN C. MURPHY
Collegian Staff

First off, anybody who saw Larry Bird's clinic against Atlanta Wednesday was entitled to a treat, and it was play similar to that that enabled Bird to walk away with the NBA player of the month for November. He is THE best player in the NBA.

A month into the season, L.A., Boston and Philadelphia are the cream of the crop, with Seattle and Milwaukee a notch below the preceding triumvirate. It's a tossup between the Big 3 as to who is the best. Anyway, it should make for some hot playoff action.

L.A. has gotten their act together after stalling at the beginning of the season, and James Worthy is playing like a number one draft pick should. Word has it that Pat Riley has been experimenting with Worthy and Magic Johnson as a guard duo. Ouch!

Boston has played very well considering that Tiny was out for a while, as was Gerry Henderson. The acquisition of Quinn Buckner certainly hasn't hurt the Celtic guard corps and Danny Ainge seems to be getting better. The big question with the Celts is where has Max been this year?

Biggest surprise of the year has been the play of Russ Schoene and Marc Iavaroni for the Sixers. Each has shown signs of being a player during the course of the season. Sixer fans can start to gloat. Moses has been awesome this year and I've eaten my words doubting him. He gives Philly a weapon they've never had before. He can run, and his rebounding strength helps out the team so much.

Seattle scored big time with their acquisition of David Thompson. He is everything Lenny Wilkens hoped he'd be, plus Gus Williams and he are getting along. These two probably form the most explosive backcourt in the league. Milwaukee has been having problems due in part to their age, also in part to a lack of a point guard. Phil Ford may help out, but as of now he hasn't gotten used to the other Bucks. Lanier is getting fragile in his old age, and his knees are wearing out. Cowens was playing well, but he's out with an injury.

San Antonio apparently doesn't miss Corzine and Olberding. Artis Gilmore is playing very well. Gervin is Gervin, and Johnny Moore is an excellent complement to him. Gilmore gives the Spurs someone to offset Kareem when it comes down to playoff time.

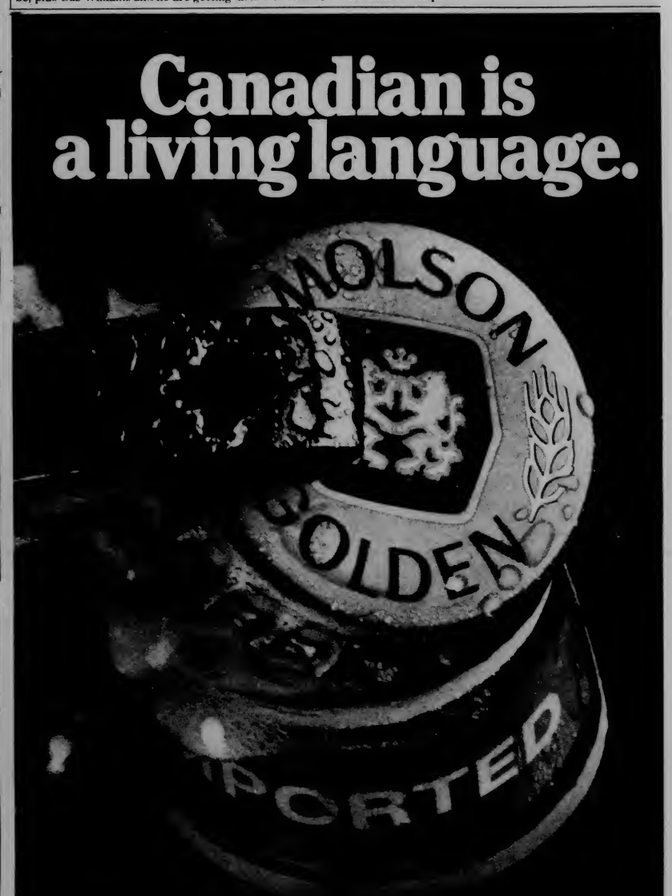
Phoenix is a good team so far, but nothing too dangerous. Maurice Lucas and Walter Davis have rebounded from off years, and Alvin Adams has benefited from moving out to the top of the key rather than being under the boards.

Portland could be an up and coming team. Jim Paxson is a super shooter and is a scoring threat. Darnell Valentine has performed admirably, which Dr. Ramsay thought when he traded Kelvin Ransey away. Calvin Natt has been impressive with his variety of abilities, pulling up for a jumper, or outquicking someone to the hoop.

Question marks so far in the season are Kansas City (are they for real?) and Detroit. Detroit was a very good team with Kelly Tripucka, but he's lost for another six weeks. Kent Benson is also out for another week or two with an injury. The Pistons need some help from rookie Cliff Livingston to stay competitive.

Washington has been having troubles getting scoring from their forwards, (which is a big surprise) and Frank Johnson hasn't been able to pick up the scoring slack. New Jersey has been very displeased with the play of Darryl Dawkins in the pivot.

Canadian is a living language.



Molson Golden. That's Canadian for great taste.

The finest ale brewed and bottled in Canada. Imported by Martlet Importing Co., Inc., Great Neck, N.Y. © 1982.

For a free education in the international language of beer, just send a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope to: Molson Golden Guide to Beer, 888 Seventh Ave., Box M, New York, NY 10106.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday - Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10 % • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?

Rackadisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

AUDIO

Jensen 30 spkrs, new Advent spkrs, $120 each pair. Kenwood amp 40w/ch $120 546-4504

AUTO FOR SALE

76 Plymouth Volare automatic slant 6. Good condition dependable! Asking $1,500 Call 665-4284

69 Firebird convertible - A classic. Needs engine work and some minor body work. Easily restorable to mint cond. BO around 2000. Call nights 256-0435

1978 Toyota Corolla SR5 liftback A/FM stereo, air condit, headers excellent gas mileage mint condit BEST OFFER 546-4366

1978 VW Scirocco excellent condition AM/FM stereo 3800. 549-2696

For sale 1974 Chevy Suburban runs OK needs tune-up great for moving or skiing call between 4 and 7 PM only 253-9049 $700.00

78 Suburu DL auto 2 dr runs good no rust $2990 tel 253-2016

79 Triumph TR7 30000 miles AM/FM cassette exce condition best offer 253-3406

BELLYGRAMS!!

Delivered by professional bellydancer for most unusual gift. Thereza 253-7822

BROWNIEGRAMS

Three flavors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

BUNKY

Happy Birthday, Love, Rooster

CONGRATULATIONS

To all the new brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha. I guess 13 is not such an unlucky number after all! George Torpe, Gene Dailey, Tim Anderson, Dave Caso, John Burke, Bob Kostro, Glenn Shane, Ted Silva, Billy Downs, John Rand, Tim Forbes, Brad Christenson, Mike Rawson

DRYCLEANING

Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Way. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ENTERTAINMENT

For the best professional DJ with a superior sound system at the cheapest rate call Peter 546-7504

Having a Party? Call Tempest live R & R John 546-5211 Scot 1 562-0343

Great Parties/Dances/Formals need great Dance Music. Call POLODROID DJ's and ask about our awesome light show. Pat or John 253-2957

FOR RENT

Nice two bedroom townhouse apartment available immediately. On bus route, three miles from center, wall to wall carpeting and large storage space. Call Mike 253-2741 or 256-6496 at work

1 bdr. apt. for rent call 549-4709 $275/mo

One room available Jan 1st in Puffton apartment, $118/m includes heat, non-smoking. Hazel, Pamela; 549-5184

2 bedroom apt in Squire Village Sunderland. Available Dec. 15 or Jan. 1 380+ 665-7195

FOR SALE

GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972

"Rick" 4001 Bass, black $400 Acoustic 360 Bass Amp 200W $200 Alex 6-7135

Bicycle - 1981 Univega-Gran Turismo, 15 speed, 27" frame, $155. 546-1011

100% Alpaca wool sweaters handmade in Peru. Selling for much less than store cost! Great Christmas gifts! 546-5512

Pair Realistic Mach 1 speakers $250 Jodi 6-9555

10 speed bike, practicaly brand new with kriptonite lock $190 549-3956

WHO Ticket! Best offer call: 546-6037

Twin bed box spring and mattress 35.00 recliner chair 40.00 call 256-8261 after 6 PM

Music man 112RP amp w/12 in. easy spkr. blt. in phaser $500 and Peavey T60 guitar $250 both $600 call Susan 256-8261

FOUND

Found set of keys in front of Johnson Dorm and Datsun keys call 546-5606.

Woman's watch outside GRC on 11/22. 665-7721.

License plate 400-GVR if you have registration call 549-3956

FRYE BOOTS

New mens size 10½ D style 2350, raisin color regularly $120.00, $90.00 call 546-7475 after 5 PM

HELP WANTED

Business Manager Union Records bookkeeping experience helpful. Preferably junior status or below. 10 hrs/week $4.00/hr. W.S. or Non. Pick up applications at U.R.U start training Dec 6.

Assistant Business Manager at the Collegian. Business major preferred but not a requirement. Low pay, great experience. Apply at the Collegian by Dec. 8. An equal opportunity employer.

Fortran Wiz needed immediately! Industrial Engineer prefered. Will pay. Rick 256-8382.

WFCR needs spring interns. Up to 9 credits possible working in membership. Call 545-0100

Telephone sales day & night hrs. no experience needed good pay call 467-3105

LESBIAN AND GAY

Are you Gay? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2545 or drop in CC 106

LOST

Uxbridge class ring 46 Reward call Tim 256-6750

NEED CASH?

Christmas raffle. $100-$50-$25 prizes. 3 for $1 table in C.C. Concourse Monday and Tuesday.

PERSONALS

HEIDI: Met you at Freshman Orientation. Lunch. Theatre/Psychology. Blond from Providence. 40's movies. Michael 6-6696

Support UMass Basketball w/40 minute gang Sat. vs Harvard

Call anytime to wish Marching Band Drum Major Jeff Poulton a Heppy 19th Birthday!! 546-8851.

Quentin Now Dad won't bother you about hangovers! Have fun on Sun Love Maria.

WSYL: Hello to our fellow dj's! We're listening to you - Bob the knob, Mark Gross, Mike Melone, Art Failure! But who is Mark MacKenzie? Love & kisses - Laura and Joanne P.S. 545-0191 for requests.

Kristen. For no special reason but for one, to say I love you! With smiles John.

Eileen-Do it up! Love, Janice.

Happy Birthday Marni Have a wonderful 18th Love Audray

Anyone who knows Tara from Hampden Snack Bar please wish her a Happy 21st Birthday.

Donna you finally made it! How about green M & M's next time?

Karen Bananas! Happy 19! Have a great day! We love you! Lori & John.

Gourmet Jelly Beans six exotic flavors great gift, delivery call 546-6299

Mike Look in your Mailbox.

Happy B-Day Suze Enjoy! Love & Hugs - The Rambler.

Contra Dance - Easy, Fun! Singles welcome. Every first Saturday: Dec 4, Jan 1 etc. Traditional fiddle music. Instruction 8:00 PM, Dance 8;30 Munson Library, South Amherst Center

Final exams, memory, concentration, -success - group rates University Hypnosis Center 549-4645

Su-ey Party at Melvin have a wonderful 19th! Dance love ya Moo

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Dissertations, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

To Milwaukee/Chicago Area around 20 Dec. will share gas/driving. call Pam 253-7405.

Need a ride to VA or Wash D.C. for Xmass after Dec 21 call Susie 546-8989

ROOM WANTED

Female needs furnished room int. sess. only call 546-8378 evenings Susan.

Females looking for a bedroom. in Brittany Manor for spring semester. Please call 549-5586. Keep trying.

Single room and/or willing to share a room for Jan & Spring semester. Must be close to campus & on bus route. Preferably Townehouse or Brandywine. Call 549-5990 Mike keep trying

Apt needed 2 females to share or take over apt. Jan. Lynn 546-6287, Kathy 546-7494.

Single room wanted for spring semester call Mark 549-2838 keep trying.

Female seeks own room in Amherst for spring semester Jocelyn 549-6850

ROOMMATE WANTED

Females wanted to share Southwood apt. $137 + elec. possible Feb take over call after 5 256-6053

Bedroom available in Northwood apartment. $115 plus utilities, 665-4947

2 Bedrooms in 4 bedroom apt available Jan 1 $165/month. call 253-5218

Kosher female for one bedroom in two bedroom Southwood townhouse 253-7031

Roommate needed to share room in 2 room apt. Brit Manor $112 a month excludes elec. call ray 253-7918

1 or 2 females for a large bedroom in a 3 bedroom Gilreath Manor apt 549-1377

Housemate wanted beautiful log cabin in Leverett wood heat available now Cindy 256-6434

Two people wanted for one bedroom Puffton apartment starting January call 549-1643

Two women needed for Puffton apt one for single room and one needed to share large double call 549-5487

Female for apt. on bus rte 100 + /mon call 256-0786

Male to share bedroom in Southwood townhouse, $93/month, evenings 253-5963

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom in apt available Jan 1 $170/month utilities included call 665-8168 evenings.

RSO GROUPS REQUESTING FUNDING

Pick up your Budget Packet in the Senate Office 420 of the Student Union Building Due Dec 10, 1982

SERVICES

Writing assistance. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729

Moving? Our 12 foot enclosed cube truck will help you safely move your stuff 256-0480

THE VALENTINES ARE COMING

To Worcester D.C. on Saturday December 4 from 9:00-1:00 $1.00 in advance $1.50 at door sponsored by Northeast Area Government.

TO SUBLET

Spring semester, one bedroom in 6 bedroom house, living room, dining room, laundry and kitchen facilities; close to campus, on bus route. 150+, Call Paul after 6 pm 549-5586

Woman wanted to share room in apt Feb great deal for info please call 665-7109

2 br. Townshouse apt Jan-Aug, fall option busline Sunderland Squire Village utilities not included $410 665-7930.

Woman wanted to sublet bedroom in four bedroom apartment on Lincoln Ave. Available Jan 1 for the spring semester and the summer. Rent includes heat. Easy going household. For more information call Diane at 549-6925.

Amherst Center apt 115 mo + utilities car available too negotiable big comfortable convenient January only 549-5382 Kathy.

January Break-Room in house, 3 blocks from campus $200/mth utilities incl call Joan 549-5519

Whole apt. 2 bedroom Squire Village call 665-3032

4 bedroom apt on bus route Swiss Village $165 ech including utilities 253-9519

1 Bedroom in 2 bedrom apartment on bus route available Jan 1 Laurel 665-3519

When the Dorms close-- Jan 1 - Feb 1 Sublet. Spacious room in Northampton Center Apartment. $150 includes utilities call Karen 586-3471

WANTED TO BUY

Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for an apartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093

Apt needed for int. & spr. sem call anytime 549-1309 or 546-5072

Looking for one or two bedroom apartment for January sublet. call Tom 546-6080

Does every MBA work on Wall Street?

Many of ours do. But many others go on to manage programs for NASA, start their own businesses, or run hospitals in NYC. You can find them in Singapore and London, in Los Angeles and Houston, in Montreal and Montevideo. If you want to take your MBA to Wall Street or somewhere else, talk to us.

Call us on our toll-free number to find out more about where you can go with an MBA.

800/847-2082 800/252-0126

CORNELL UNIVERSITY GRADUATE SCHOOL OF BUSINESS & PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION

Doonesbury
Brought to you everyday by Garry Trudeau and the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

Webs
1225 Sumner Ave. Springfield, Ma. (413)782-0745
109 Main Street Amherst, Ma. (413)253-2580

Practical gifts for the weaver, spinner and knitter...from luxurious yarns to hand-crafted looms to instructive classes.

Webs...the most complete source for yarns, supplies and books!

WANTED...
Musicians and performers interested in gaining exposure. SOLOS, DUOS, SMALL COMBOS, JAZZ, FOLK, COUNTRY, BLUEGRASS, MIME, JUGGLING, ETC. Needed to play in the HATCH. We can't pay you but we can put your name in advertisements and feed you. This may be the break you were looking for. Contact John Furbish, 545-0198 for more information

the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

Sports

MORE SPORTS ON PAGES 21 and 22

Hoopmen hope to humble Harvard

Time to rebound from the New Hampshire game

By JIM FLOYD
Collegian Staff

It was a long ride back from Durham, NH this past Tuesday night.

The Minutemen had just lost a tough 63-60 game to the University of New Hampshire.

Silent heads were shaking back and forth in disbelief as the UMass entourage reflected back on how the team had blown a nine point lead midway through the second period to hand the Wildcats a win that they did not really deserve.

After all, this was UNH, a lightly regarded team to start with and supposedly a pushover with leading scorer Al McLain on the bench with an ankle injury.

But, as the bus headed all too slowly back to Amherst, all of this thinking was an afterthought. No sense in dwelling on the game now, it was too late for that. The best thing to do was try to get ready for the next one.

And here it is, the next one, the Harvard game. A game matching Ivy League versus state school and brother versus brother.

The brother versus brother aspect pits the two head coaches, UMass coach Tom McLaughlin against his big brother Frank. In last year's clash McLaughlin, Tom was the victor in a close 75-73 game in Cambridge.

This is however, not a time to be thinking about who will have the bragging rights at the Christmas dinner table in the McLaughlin household though, according to the second year UMass mentor.

"I feel that this is the most important game at the University of Massachusetts this year," said Tom. "We have our backs to the wall. We have to win because I wouldn't want to go 0-2."

All too true, since UMass fans are expecting more of this year's team than last year's, an 0-2 start would be pretty disheartening. It's not that the team is expected to win all its games, but UNH and Harvard should both be on the Minuteman hit list. With UNH already safely across the border it's time to turn on Harvard and get revenge. Revenge and respect will both be on the line Saturday when the Crimson enter the Curry Hicks Cage.

"We've done a lot of soul searching since UNH," said Tom McLaughlin, the younger brother. "The biggest thing (problem) against UNH was mental not physical."

But, the Minutemen have been working extra hard to prepare for the Harvard game, and not just for themselves but for their fans, according to their coach.

"I felt we let a lot of people down by losing to New Hampshire," said McLaughlin. "That was the hardest thing for me to accept."

And so the Minutemen will enter the Harvard game with a twofold purpose in mind. They must get on the winning track and even their record at 1-1, and they need to prove to their fans that they can and will win games that they should win.

A newcomer, who may prove to be pivotal in deciding the outcome of this and other games in the season, will be freshman center Tom Emerson, a non-starter thus far who stands at 6'9" and possesses both inside and outside prowess.

"We need Tommy Emerson to come around and help us because he is 6'9 and one half". He can be a good player," said McLaughlin.

Emerson may be called on early to help in covering Harvard's big man 6'10" Monroe Trout.

But it will be a total team effort that will be needed to secure a victory and let's hope they get it. Even a walk from the Cage to the dorms can be very very long.

Game time is at 7:30 p.m.

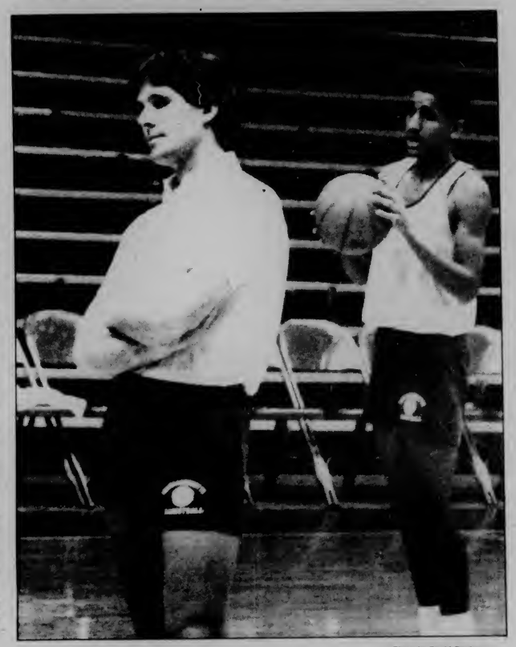


Photo by David Deuber

UMass head coach Tom McLaughlin gives instructions yesterday while A.J. Wynder waits to put the ball in play.

Women swimmers still on the unbeaten track

By BOB BROCK
Collegian Staff

SPRINGFIELD — The University of Massachusetts women's swimming team improved their record to 4-0, as they churned out an exciting 80-69 victory over Springfield College Wednesday night at the Linkletter Natatorium.

"It was a wonderful meet, a good team effort all the way through," said UMass caoch Valerie Turtle.

The outcome of the meet was in question all the way up to the final event, the 400 yard free relay. UMass not only won the event to seal the win, but they also set a school record in the process. The relay team of Connie Anderson, Martha Samsel, Jenn Nicolai and Elizabeth Feinberg recorded a time of 3:42.98, eclipsing the former record of 3:43.37 set last February at the New England Championships.

The UM swimmers were paced to the win with one tripie winner, Connie Anderson, and four double winners: Jenn Nicolai, Maura Sweeney, Jennifer Black and Laurie Keen.

Besides swimming a leg on the record-setting relay, Anderson swam a leg on the victorious 200 medley relay and won the 50 free with a time of 25.35, her best of the season.

Nicolai also swam on the record-setting free relay and won the 100 Individual Medley in 1:05.39.

Co-captain Black grabbed firsts in both the 100 and 200 yard backstrokes.

The other double winners, Maura Sweeney and Laurie Keen played a big role in bringing UMass the win. Sweeney had firsts in the 200 medley relay and the 100 butterfly which she won in 1:03.84.

"Maura had a super meet," said Turtle. "Our top butterflyer, Rosalie Nautaupski has been sick and Maura came through for us, she really helped out a lot."

Keen, a freshman, was not 100 percent healthy according to Turtle, but still managed to share victory in the medley relay and won the 100 breaststroke in 1:13.66. She also took an important 2nd place in the 200 breaststroke.

The UMass divers also fared well in the meet with Jean Bushee winning the 3-meter diving event, scoring 211.20 points. Gina Perrone came in second with 204.45.

Besides picking up the win, Turtle had other reasons to be pleased. During the course of the meet, three UMass swimmers qualified for the New England Championships to be held this coming February. Sweeney qualified in the 100 yard butterfly, Black in the 400 IM and Caroline Freitas qualified in two events, the 100 IM and the 400 IM.

The Minutewomen will be looking to remain undefeated when they take on Clark University next Saturday in Worcester.

Mermen hope to drown Lowell

By SCOTT SOLOMON
Collegian Correspondent

Coming off an 84-29 loss at the hands of Tufts on Tuesday, the UMass men's swimming team will look to capture their first victory of the 82-83 campaign when they face the University of Lowell Chiefs Saturday at 2:00 p.m. in Lowell.

Coach Russ Yarworth, in his third season as UMass skipper, opted to go with a makeshift lineup on Tuesday, but will come out with his starting squad against the Chiefs. Lowell is 1-1 thus far, after banging out a 72-41 win over Keene State and dropping an 88-25 decision to Boston University on Tuesday.

Lowell boasts four Division II All-Americans, including co-captain Don Jensen, last year's national champion in the 200 yard breaststroke, co-captain Bob Lange, 100-yard breaststroke champ in 1980, flyman Joe Vicedomine, 100-yard butterfly champion the past two years, and senior Bob Blacker, the 50 and 100-yard freestyle winner at the New England Swimming and Diving Championships two years ago.

Chiefs coach Dick Kenney believes that his group has the potential to go 9-2 this year, but feels the major weakness for the team early in the season will be in the freestyle competition. Lowell's top sprinter is just recovering from a broken arm, and has only recently returned to daily workouts.

"UMass will be one of the toughest meets we have," said Kenney. "Everyone at our school is psyched up for the meet."

Three seniors are returning to the Minuteman team this season, including Howie Abramson, co-captain John Mulvaney and Brian Spellman. It was a freshman, however, who was the brightest spot in Tuesday's meet, as North Quincy native Scott Andrews captured the only first place slot for UMass on the afternoon, racking up 215 points in the one-meter diving event.

Stockbridge hoop unbeaten

By JIM SAMIA
Collegian Staff

The Stockbridge basketball team won its home opener Tuesday night by defeating Southern Vermont College 78-63. The Aggies placed four men in double figures led by John Paquette's 23 points and Chris Storie's 20 points.

"Paquette played a sensational game," said coach Jack Leaman. Along with being the games high scorer Pacquette also had 20 rebounds and 6 steals, both game highs.

"Our backcourt did a good job," stated Leaman as he emphasized the play of Mike O'Connor's 14 points and a team high 4 assists, and Peter McDonough who chipped in with 11 points. Dennis Houle came off the bench and grabbed 9 rebounds for the Aggies.

Stockbridge jumped out to an early lead and never trailed. Paquette had 12 of the Aggies first 19 points as they raced out to a 19-10 lead. Storie had 11 first half points as Stoekbridge led 42-30 at halftime.

Stockbridge opened the second half with a 12-4 spurt and they never looked back as the game was safely tucked away. The Aggies were in charge the whole game shooting a blistering 52 percent from the floor and controlling the boards.

The victory raises the Aggies record to 2-0 and their win streak continuing from last year has now reached 12 games.

Stockbridge will be away for two games this weekend, travelling to Williston Academy today and to Deerfield Academy for a Saturday afternoon game.

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian
Volume CXII, Issue 61 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Monday, December 6, 1982

Paid leave of absence denied unless Reid returns to campus

By JIM FINKLE
Collegian Staff

Assistant Chancellor Marie R. Reid will be denied a paid leave of absence unless she confirms her promise to return to the University of Massachusetts, Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey said Friday.

Duffey, who said he was responding to mounting concern on campus, said Reid — who receives an annual salary of $52,500 — must submit a written confirmation of her intention to return to the university administration, or "there will be no professional leave."

"Ms. Reid's statements to the Collegian and other media are contrary to her written representation to me that after a professional leave for studies she would return to the duties for which she was offered a (five-year) contract prior to my arrival," Duffey said.

"There is now some reason to believe she was not sincere in that representation," he said.

"I have asked (Reid) for clarification, and without firm commitment on her part to return, there will be no professional leave."

Duffey said he made the request in writing and has not spoken directly with Reid about it. Reid was attending an educational conference in Arizona and unavailable for comment on whether she would comply with Duffey's request.

Duffey, acknowledging what he termed "the extensive reaction of the campus," to the situation said he had been reluctant "to discuss in a public forum a situation involving a particular personnel decision and individual despite provocation from the press and the individual (Reid)."

Because of negative reaction on the campus as well as "Ms. Reid's statements," Duffey said he felt obligated to clarify the situation.

"There were — in my opinion — significant procedural errors made by the university in affecting her (Reid's) reassignment," Duffey said.

"Because those procedural errors were not insignificant, because certain commitments were made to her prior to my arrival on campus, and because my organizational reassignment did effect a perceived demotion — I stress the word perceived because I do not regard the assignment as a demotion — for all those reasons I have sought to resolve the matter out of court — that is outside of a legal setting — and in a way that would bring Ms. Reid back in an appropriate position after an opportunity to improve her professional knowledge and skills," Duffey said.

Duffey, who has described Reid as "a troubled woman," denied Reid's accusations of racial and sexual discrimination, stating he made concessions to Reid because of the errors made by the university in personnel procedures.

"Prior to and upon my arrival — as I have said — some major procedural errors occured," Duffey said. "There is in my mind no question of racial bias as Ms. Reid has claimed — only procedural error."

Duffey declined to comment further on the procedural errors, saying, "I will not comment further upon them (the errors) because they may become the point of litigation."

Duffey said he does not know if the situation will end up in court.

"No one knows (if the situation between Reid and the university will end up in court) at this moment," Duffey said.

The controversy began in October, when Duffey changed Reid's title to associate vice-chancellor under Administration and Finance, removing her final authority over the budget.

Last month, Duffey returned Reid to her original title, but chose to keep Acting Vice-Chancellor for Administration and Finance John L. DeNyse as the administrator with final control over the budget.

Reid had told the Collegian that she considers the reassignment to be a "demotion." She accused the University of racial and sexual discrimination.

"The administration, or somebody, has systematically removed all top black administrators," Reid said.

She has said she plans to seek employment elsewhere while on leave and does not plan to return to UMass.

Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

Umass Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey listens with interest at last Wednesday's Undergraduate Student Senate meeting.

Trustee appointed after resignation

By KEVIN BOWE
Collegian Staff

[illegible] University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees Robert H. Quinn has been appointed to a new five-year term after resigning from his present term which had more than three years remaining on it.

The move, which was reportedly done at Quinn's request will allow Quinn to remain on the Board until March of 1987, it was reported in yesterday's Boston Globe.

I'm not surprised by it. Quinn's got a lot of his life wrapped up in this university," said Jim Murphy, the student trustee.

The move was made possible when the UMass Board of Trustees was increased by two additional members this fall. Quinn resigned his trustee position, which expired in early 1986, and was appointed by Gov. Edward J. King to one of the newly created positions.

Some observers have suggested that Quinn made this move to insure he will remain a major force on the board despite the election of his political rival, Michael Dukakis, as governor.

Quinn, a former state attorney general and speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, was defeated by Dukakis in the 1974 Democratic nomination for governor.

Because Quinn's new term expires in 1987, Dukakis will not be able to replace Quinn during his first term.

Neither Quinn nor a Dukakis spokesperson could be reached for comment yesterday. It was reported, however, that some UMass administrators are concerned about an antagonistic relationship developing between the two men. Similar to the battles Dukakis fought with former UMass President Robert Wood — which could hurt the university.

Aside from his close relationship with King, Quinn has had excellent relationships with the leadership of the state legislature. This has helped the university considerably, many observers feel, in gaining adequate funding.

Dukakis will be appointing his first round of state college and university trustees in late February. He will also be appointing three new members to the Board of Regents in August.

Dukakis has pledged to appoint more women and minorities to the boards.

Vacancy report called wrong by Off-Campus Housing Office

By ANN CARRNS
Collegian Staff

Recent claims by two Amherst real estate agencies that the economy has driven their rental vacancy rates up to 10 percent were challenged last week by the University of Massachusetts director of the Off-Campus Housing Office.

"The only indicator that the town has ever accepted for official vacancy rates are those (figures determined by) the Federal census," Director Joanne R. Levenson said Friday. "In 1980, the rate was determined to be 3 percent."

The Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development guidelines state that a 3 percent vacancy rate in any community signifies an "emergency housing situation", Levenson said, meaning there is not enough rental housing available to meet community needs.

According to figures kept by the office, rent increases this year ran between 10 and 34 percent, with rooms now costing between $160 and $220 per month.

Representatives of the D. H. Jones Real Estate Agency and the Grandonice Management Company estimated their vacancy rates to be ten percent in a recent article in the Daily Hampshire Gazette, and they said they are viewing the change as a permenant one.

They suggested the economy may be forcing more students to commute to school instead of living in Amherst, rather than high rental fees driving them away.

But a spokesman for the UMass Commuter Collective said on Friday there was no substantial increase in the number of students commuting this year.

Levenson said she believed landlords are trying to convince people that the Amherst housing market is in bad shape. This could be used as an argument against rent control, on the premise that any controls would further damage an already troubled market, she explained.

"They say they are losing money," Levenson said. "Well let's see public disclosure of it. Otherwise, we should have the opportunity to take stock of the community, since we're in a federally defined emergency housing situation."

Amherst has traditionally had a very low vacancy rate, with the 1970 census indicating a rate of less than 1 percent.

Levenson said she believed the rise to 3 percent in 1980 indicated more students "doubling up" in apartments to save money, due to increased rental fees.

Keith Jenkins of D. H. Jones Real Estate said landlords may respond to the apparent vacancy increase by not allowing more than four tenants in their apartments. The town of Amherst has a by law which prohibits more than four unrelated people from living in the same dwelling, but most landlords have until now overlooked five or six people living in a house, Jenkins said.

"For them to say they will have to start tightening up that by law is a total sham," Levenson asserted. "What they really want is for those restrictions to be lifted so they can raise rents, to collect money from those extra tenants."

"If people in the town are using that by law as a check on landlords raising rent, its about time they realized that only effective rent control guidelines can do that," Levenson said.

"I personally support the town setting those guidelines because there is no other way to document profit and loss amounts for real estate properties," she added.

Levenson said she believed the town recognized the need to protect existing rental stock for tenants when it voted to restrict condominium conversions in 1981.

"The town said no conversions could take place under a 5 percent vacancy rate, recognizing that the current rate of 3 percent is too low," Levenson said. "By claiming a 10 percent rate, they (the landlords) are suggesting conversions could occur."

"We are in the market with the same clientele, yet we continue to draw different conclusions and data," Levenson said. "There should be some mechanism to resolve what the real situation is. That mechanism can only be established if the town votes in some guidelines."

World and national news

Shultz in Europe to 'forge strategy'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz leaves today on a wide-ranging European trip — his first such excursion since taking office — aimed at forging a western strategy to deal with the new Soviet leadership and at settling some nagging differences with America's European allies.

Shultz and others in the Reagan administration have made clear they are looking for opportunies to improve relations with Moscow under the new leadership of Yuri Andropov, but will remain alert to any threat of Soviet aggression.

A major chore expected during Shultz' two weeks in Europe will be consulting on how the allies should respond if the Polish government lifts martial law. Dec. 13 will mark the first anniversary of the crackdown in Poland, and there are indications a decision to lift restrictions could come at any time.

It will be Shultz first extended trip abroad since replacing Alexander M. Haig Jr. as secretary of state in July.

He will travel to Bonn first, arriving tomorrow, then attend the NATO foreign ministers meeting in Brussels Dec. 8-11. After that, he will go on to The Hague in the Netherlands, Rome, Paris, Madrid and London.

Although a senior State Department official told reporters Friday that "real progress" has been made in resolving U.S.-European differences since Shultz took office, many problems remain.

Among them:

—France's refusal to go along with a U.S.-arranged accord on a new western strategy for economic relations with the Soivet Union. Reagan gave that accord as his reason for lifting U.S. sanctions on Soviet pipeline development.

—Suspicion in Europe that the Reagan administration is not yet serious about trying to negotiate an arms control agreement with Moscow that would eliminate the need to deploy new U.S. nuclear missiles in Europe.

—The decision of Spain's new socialist prime minister, Felipe Gonzalez, to rethink Spain's entry into NATO.

—A whole array of trade and economic issues, including U.S. demands that Europeans end subsidies of agricultural goods that serve to keep out U.S. farm exports. Many Europeans believe Reagan's economic policies have made the world-wide recession worse.

AP Laserphoto

An unidentified homeowner wades through his rain-flooded backyard in Slidell, La. Massive rains brought flooding to sections of Louisiana and Arkansas over the weekend.

U.S. quiets Tiger practice in Oman

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An estimated 2,500 U.S. troops are on maneuvers in Oman, testing defense capabilities in the event of a Soviet or other foreign attack on the oil-rich Persian Gulf region, Arab diplomat sources said yesterday.

Omani government officials who were not identified were quoted by several newspapers in Kuwait and Bahrain as saying that the maneuvers — codenamed Jade Tiger — began Friday and will end tomorrow.

U.S. diplomats in Muscat, the Omani capital, refused to answer reporters' questions about the exercise.

In Washington, Pentagon officials have privately confirmed the exercises, but said that no formal announcement was made because Oman wants to play down its links with the United States to avoid criticism from Arab countries critical of U.S. policies in the Middle East.

The maneuvers reportedly include a simulated attack by two U.S. B-52 bombers and six F-15 jetfighters on an Omani airfield defended by the Sultanate's small air force.

Muscat-based Arab diplomats, who asked not to be identified, said about 1,000 U.S. Marines are to land on the Omani coast from amphibious vehicles, with the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise providing cover.

Saudi Arabian-based Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS) planes are also taking part in the military games, the diplomats said.

Under an agreement with the sultanate of Oman, the United States has access to military facilities in Oman which U.S. forces could use in the event of an attack on the strategic gulf region.

Young Kennedys end well-planned campaign

BOSTON (AP) — Edward M. Kennedy Jr. says he, his brother and sister "came on strong" during Thanksgiving weekend to persuade their father not to seek the Democratic nomination for president in 1984.

"I just saw my father as a guy who's really spent since 1979 flying around the country — first running, then after he lost, trying to retire the debt, and then stroking people and getting ready to do it all over again," the 21-year-old Kennedy told the Boston Sunday Globe.

"This man, I felt, is missing out on some important things he'd like to do. So was the family."

On Wednesday, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy announced he would not campaign for his party's nomination in 1984. The senator cited the wishes of his three children, Edward, 21, Kara, 22, and Patrick, 15, and the pending divorce from his wife, Joan.

"Patrick really is the one most affected by the divorce," young Kennedy told the Globe. "My own mind was open and I was willing to listen, and of course Kara and I are in a different boat being older. But Patrick just really was the most sensitive, and it meant so very much to him, having more time with my father and everything.

"I'd like to see my father run," he said. "The country one day is going to come around to him, and probably some day he will run."

U.S. nukes used as threats according to Daniel Ellsberg

CAMBRIDGE — The United States has threatened to use nuclear weapons several times since the A-bomb was dropped on Nagasaki at the end of World War II, says Daniel Ellsberg, an activist for disarmament.

"Again and again, generally in secret from the American public, U.S. nuclear weapons have been used in the precise way that a gun is used when you point it at someone's head in a direct confrontation — whether or not the trigger is pulled," Ellsberg told a weekend peace movement conference.

The buildup of nuclear weapons "on the U.S. side essentially was a mindless one. There were no specific reasons why it was happening," he told more than 300 people at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"The model seems to be that a president in the past subscribed to the 'Missile-of-the-Month Club' and succeeding presidential secretaries have been keeping up with the dues," according to Ellsberg, best known for releasing the Pentagon Papers in 1971.

In an interview later, he listed several instances in which U.S. presidents "pointed the gun but didn't pull the trigger." They included: Eisenhower's threats against China to force a settlement in Korea in 1953.

Digest

by the Associated Press

Sludge by any other name...

MILWAUKEE — Officials here who want farmers to use more sludge have decided that they could spread the word better if they had a better word to spread.

The Milwaukee Metropolitan Sewerage District told its Public Policy Committees on Friday that it will give $250 to the person who can think of a more marketable name for sewage sludge.

The agency said it will hold a contest early next year among its employees and farmers who apply for the sludge.

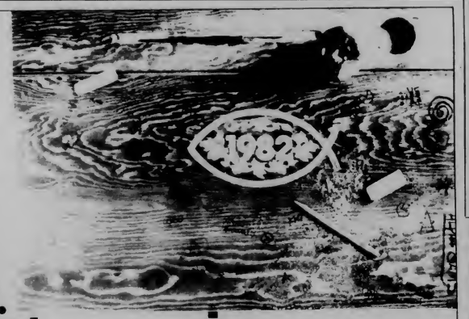
It noted in a staff memorandum that other sewerage sellers have found sweeter words for the foul-smelling stuff. The Madison Metropolitan Sewerage District calls its fertilizer Metrogro.

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Scott Hersey
Copy Editor	Hannah Hosom
Layout Technician	Stephen Anderson
Photo Technician	Bradford Hammer
Composition	Lauri Neely, Andrea Repass
	Janet Buch, Gail Tanzer, Adrienne Dufour
	James Shanahan, Donna Maurice, Will Hopkins

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $18 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.



MAKE YOUR MARK. Make it hard to erase.

Your college years can be more significant than an endless stream of late nights, term papers and fee receipts. As a Christian, you can make an indelible impact on your world.

Discover more about God's exciting plan for your life at the 1982 Christmas Conference. You'll learn how you can have an impact on the lives of others. That's a mark that's hard to erase.

Send in this coupon for a brochure and registration form.

Sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ International.

Yes! Send me a brochure.

Name

Address

City

State ZIP

Mail to Glenn S. Carter
167 E. Hadley Rd., Amherst, Mass 01002

or call 413 256-0660

Contraception Information

What method should I use. . .
Where can I obtain accurate information.
How does a student obtain information.

• • • •

For answers to your questions about contraception, check out the Contraception Education Clinic at the University Health Services,
Sessions: Dates: Mon & Thurs 3 pm
Tues. 7 pm
Weds. (couples only) 7 pm
Place: Health Center, Room 362
All Students Welcome!

Photo by Peter Marks

The 40-minute Gang seems to be a bit preoccupied during the introduction of the Harvard Crimson basketball team at the Curry Hicks Cage Saturday night. The Crimson beat the UMass Minutemen 45-44.

Faculty, librarians bargain for changes in '83 contracts

By MARY BALDWIN
Collegian Staff

The first bargaining session between the Massachusetts Society of Professors, which represents all faculty and librarians, and the University of Massachusetts administration is scheduled to begin this January.

"A few issues need to be changed," said Bruce Laurie, MSP president. These issues include salary and benefits, personnel procedures, affirmative action and changes in language from the present contract.

"It's an open question on whether the contract will be for three years again," Laurie said.

On November 1, the MSP met with Edward Kelly, associate vice president for human resources and head of the bargaining team for the administration, to exchange their proposals.

"Now we have a rough idea of what they are looking for and they have an idea of what we are looking for," said Laurie. "It's like a chess game. You always have to think three steps ahead."

The present contract expires June 30, 1983 at which time a new contract must take effect or — except for salaries and benefits — the old contract will prevail.

Beginning in January the MSP will meet with the administration almost everyday until classes begin. Once classes begin, the bargaining teams will probably meet three or four times a week until an agreement on a new contract is made.

The present three year contracts for University of Massachusetts classified employees, AFSCME, local 1776, MTA/USA and IBPO local 432, A and B will expire in June, 1983 with the new contracts becoming effective by July 1, 1983.

The administration has not been contacted by any of these unions yet to begin negotiations.

The present contract says that negotiations for a new contract must begin by April 1, 1983.

"When we agree to come to table, the first step is to set ground rules such as when and how long we will meet. Then proposals will be presented by both sides," said Scott Overing, director of the office of administration of labor contracts.

"I don't know what the administrations proposals will be," he said.

Graduate Teaching Assistant program vital to UMass

By SEAN CASEY
Collegian Correspondent

Due to budget cuts and a larger enrollment, graduate teaching assistants (TA's) at the University of Massachusetts are now teaching a larger number of classes.

"The university couldn't function without the TA system," said Jack Delmond, president of the Graduate Student Senate. "There is no way the university could educate the number of students that it does without the TA's," he said.

"The TA system is vital because, if the university had to hire more faculty, its budget would go out of sight," said Greg Graham, executive officer of the graduate senate.

One of the grievances of the TA's is that pay is low and pay and workloads are not proportionate.

"There seems to be no correlation between workload and pay. Workloads vary TA to TA, department to department and year to year," said Delmond.

"There is a problem of equity between departments and within departments," he added.

"Paywise, we are generally on the low end of the scale," Delmond said. "In some parts of the country, TA's are making a lot more than we are."

One of the biggest problems facing TA's is a lack of clarity as to how they are selected. We don't know the criteria for TA selection, and we should know because it is public money that is being spent," Graham said.

"One of the first changes that should be instigated is the standardization of the TA selection processes," Delmond added. "Some departments have done this, but in many departments there seems to be no equity in the selection process and the criteria of this process sometimes seems arbitrary," he said.

"There should be a specific date for TA's to find out if they have been reinstated," Graham said. "Many times, we don't know whether we have a TA until 1 or 2 months before the start of the semester, and a TA often determines whether many students can afford to go to school or not," he added.

"There is no question that TA's are able to teach even above the levels they are currently teaching, but the original idea of the TA's was to give students individual attention in large lectures, and the amount of attention has been reduced," Delmond said.

"TA's can often relate to undergraduates better because of the smaller difference in ages," Graham said. "Also, TA's are often more aware of current developments in their fields because of their active engagement in them," he said.

Students use power for financial aid

By RICHARD NANGLE
Collegian Staff

The recent trip to Washington D.C. by the University of Massachusetts chapter of Students Advocating Financial Aid (SAFA) was an example of the power held by students when used in a positive manner, a leader of the group said last week.

"Despite the transportation problem, the trip was extremely successful," said James Quinn, group co-president.

"We definitely let the legislature know that students are concerned and aren't just ranting and raving back on the campuses," Quinn said. "We showed them that we're going to stand up and we're going to register to vote."

The group believes it made an impact in the recent passing of the continuing resolution in Congress which included level funding for financial aid programs. The Reagan Administration had proposed cuts in some programs and the elimination of others.

Quinn said students should feel satisfied to an extent because considering the current political climate, level funding is a success. But in the future, he said, increases must be sought to offset inflation and higher tuition rates.

"It's shortsighted for the Reagan Administration to cut education now. Four to five years from now we're going to feel the effects," Quinn said.

"The less people are educated the less earning power they have and the less they can get taxed by the government," he added.

Quinn said one of the highlights of the trip was the meeting with an aide to Senator John Glenn, D-Ohio, who listed some alternative methods for attaining financial aid.

One of the proposed methods is a revolving fund for those interested in financing their educations through loans. The loans would be paid back with interest into the fund allowing it to be self-sufficient.

The other idea, which the aide labeled as "sketchy" is a program where high school seniors who can't get financial aid enter a volunteer work program with the number of hours worked going toward financial aid credit from the government.

"I was surprised that she came up with those two great things," Quinn said.

The group also met with legislators "who weren't in concurrence with us" in order to spread its message and hopefully enlighten some people, he said.

SAFA will be returning to the nation's capital in March to join an effort sponsored by the United States Student Association (USSA). At that time, about 4,000 students will be in Washington to lobby legislators for financial aid. The students will represent all 50 states and many of the nation's colleges and universities, Quinn said.

"A senator's aide or legislator will listen to SAFA...but if (the lobbyist) is a constituent they're more likely to meet with them personally and it's a little more effective," Quinn said.

Some future plans for the group include lobbying in Boston on a statewide level, Quinn said.

Refering to the total of 15 hours of travel time lost due to bus problems, Quinn had praise for the 40 students who made the trip.

"The group weathered the storm admirably," he said.

End of semester only the beginning

By DAN MACNEIL
Collegian Correspondent

Well it's that time of the year again. Finals are up and coming, and to most, this means the end of the semester. But to some, not only is it the end of the semester, but also the beginning of the University of Massachusetts Wintersession.

Wintersession occupies the month-long time span between the fall and spring semesters and it gives students a chance to live on campus and take courses for credits.

This opportunity is open not only to UMass students, but to anyone who has graduated from high school.

Courses offered range from business administration and core courses to bartending.

Since the program began in 1979, it has steadily become larger due to the fact that more and more students are taking advantage of this opportunity.

In 1980, 701 students enrolled; in 1981, 960 attended and in 1982, 1621 students took part in the winter session, according to the records of the UMass Division of Continuing Education.

There are many reasons why people stay, ranging from academics to social reasons.

The Wintersession gives students a chance to make up for lost credits and take courses that they can't get into during the spring and fall semesters.

"I changed majors, and the wintersession will give me a chance to catch up so that I can graduate this year," said Frank Doherty, a senior engineering major.

Another student said that she wanted to take a core requirement during the winter so that she could concentrate on her major during the spring and fall semesters.

Besides academics, there are many more reasons why people remain on campus during the winter. People from overseas might not be able to go home. People involved in university sports have to stay, because the winter seasons for sports continue right through the break.

There are still more people who engage in winter activities, have jobs that they want to keep, and then there are those who just do not want to go home.

Collegian photo by Jim Powers

Freshman Sarah Bush pauses for a moment of relaxation at Tobin Hall on Thursday.

Smurfs
Stuffed Animals
Cards
Pencils
Pencil Sharpeners
Shot Glasses
Garfield Soap
Ziggy Soap
Pads
Posters
Many other items throughout the store
Located in the Campus Center
Open M-F 9-5 Sat 11-4
UNIVERSITY STORE

Keep the real trees outside, please

By CRIS SCHUSTER
Collegian Staff

Natural Christmas trees will not be allowed at the University of Massachusetts this year.

Although it may seem the spirit of Dickens' Ebeneezer Scrooge is alive and well at UMass, there are some good reasons behind this policy.

In 1977, a fire in a dormitory at Providence College began in one room and spread down the corridor feeding on the combustible holiday decorations and killing 10 women.

In order to prevent a similar disaster from occuring at UMass, the Environmental, Health and Safety Department will again be enforcing university fire safety policies which limit the types of holiday decorations in state buildings.

Fire Prevention Officer Keith E. Hoyle from the Environmental Health and Safety Division (EH&S), said he knows students will say, "Hey you're dampening the spirit of Christmas," but it is necessary for students to "exercise a little fire safety along with the holidays."

"There's always a few incidences of fire," he said. But without the safety policies, it would be "setting oneself up for a situation similar to Providence College."

UMass fires during the holiday season in the past have not been as bad as the Providence College fire, but several instances of fires started from holiday decorations occur every year, Hoyle said. For example, two years ago, someone put a Christmas tree in an elevator in one of the Orchard Hill dormitories and lit it on fire, he said.

The safety guidelines are designed to limit the amount of combustible material in the buildings which are prominent during the holiday season, he said.

No natural trees are allowed in the public buildings. Only trees which have labels "fire proof," "fire treated," "fire resistive," or "slow burning" are acceptable.

Metal trees are not allowed because of a possible electrocution hazard.

Lighting sets approved by Factory Mutual, Underwriter's Laboratory, or other recognized testing labs are permitted. All sockets must be tight and cords should be checked for frayed connections.

No natural Christmas tree wreaths are allowed. Paper and combustible plastics are not permitted. Decorations which are packaged and labelled as "fire resistive," "fire proof" or "fire treated" are acceptable.

Candles are allowed, but they must have a glass covering over them and they must be anchored in a sturdy base. Candles must be kept away from all combustible material and extinguished before the room becomes unoccupied.

Weatherproofing saves on heat bills

By PAUL BLAKE
Collegian Correspondent

Students living in off-campus apartments can save money on their heating bills this winter by doing some simple weatherproofing to their home.

Matt Gaines, a salesperson at Aubuchon Hardware store in Amherst, named some of the problems associated with high heating bills, and suggested some easy ways to fix them.

One problem is cold air drafts, which come in through the cracks of doors and windows and cool off a room.

He said a good way to prevent this would be to cover the window with plastic, either on the inside or the outside.

On the inside of the window, the plastic can be adhered with strong clear tape, he said, but there might be a problem if there is wallpaper on the walls.

"Wallpaper tends to get ripped off (by the tape), but paint usually won't," he said.

If avoiding damage to walls is a consideration, the plastic can be put on the outside of the window. Gaines said the best thing for this is a strong tape such as duct tape, which he said holds up to the wind.

Instead of covering up the whole window, weather stripping can be put right in the cracks where the draft comes in.

Mortite brand is made from clay, so it can be easily molded to fit where it is needed. Two windows can be done for less than $2.

"It's probably the best around," Gaines said.

There is also adhesive foam that can be used the same way as Mortite, but it can't be as easily molded.

Gaines said much of the cold air comes in at the spaces in the wall where light switches and sockets are located. Foam rubber plate sealers can be put behind the metal plate of the light switch or socket, and socket sealer plugs can be put in when the sockets aren't in use. Both of these things prevent the cold air from coming in. Gaines said a rug could also help.

"If there's a rug, you won't have to keep the heat up because it keeps the floor warm," Gaines said.

Gaines said the superintendants of apartments probably wouldn't mind these minor improvements, but warned it is better to check first.

"Other than that, wear lots of warm clothes," Gaines said.

NEED HELP WITH YOUR STUDENT LOAN?

If you've attended college on a Guaranteed Student Loan or a National Direct Student Loan made after October 1, 1975, consider spending a couple of years in the Army.

If you train for certain specialties, the government will release you from 1/3 of your indebtedness (or $1,500, whichever is greater) for each year of active duty.

Obviously, a three-year enlistment cancels 100% of your debt. But if you sign up for the Army's exclusive two-year enlistment option, we'll still cancel 2/3 of your debt.

Plus, you may be eligible for generous educational incentives.

To find out how to serve your country and get out of debt, call the number below.

In Northampton call 584-2157

In other areas consult the Yellow Pages under "Recruiting"

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

AN IMPORTANT ADDITION TO YOUR UNIFORM

The insignia of an Air Force nurse can mean a lot to you and your future. It shows that you're part of the Air Force Nurse Corps. A member of one of the most efficient health care teams in the world. It signifies you are an Air Force officer with the responsibility and prestige of a leadership position. It indicates you're on the track toward good pay and almost unlimited educational opportunities. If you're a nursing professional or about to complete your nursing education, why not consider Air Force nursing as part of YOUR future? From the day you're commissioned, you'll receive the pay and advantages of an Air Force officer. Consider your uniform and our future. Then make it yours.

AIR FORCE NURSING. A GREAT WAY OF LIFE

For More Details Call Sandy Price
(203) 229-8650:
Freshmen & Sophmores Call Capt. Pinkell
(413) 545-2637

AIR FORCE
A great way of life

Women's Week

MONDAY

A Wine and Cheese reception/discussion for the Women's Caucus of the Student Senate will be held at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center room 803. All women senators, especially new senators, are encouraged to attend. The reception is sponsored by the Women's Leadership Project and the Undergraduate Student Senate Speaker's Office.

TUESDAY

A Health and Safety in the Workplace Workshop will be held at noon in the Campus Center room 917. The film Working for your Life will be shown. The workshop is part of the Women and Work series sponsored by the Everywoman's Center Working Women's Task Force.

University Women's Professional Network (UWPN) will hold its next luncheon meeting from 12 to 2 p.m. in the Campus Center room 1001. Following the luncheon, a panel of University staff women will discuss "Our Erratic Patterns of Mobility: We've Been Everywhere, Done Everything — So Where Are We Now?" For luncheon reservations, contact Arlene Rodovich at 545-0700.

The Committee for Equal Rights and Reproductive Freedom will meet at 6:30 in the Campus Center. Check the Campus Center schedule for the room number.

The Naked Truth, Nature of Women in Advertising, an illustrated lecture by Jean Kilbourne, will be held at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. The lecture is sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program.

WEDNESDAY

"Sexism: Sexual Harassment and its Effects in Public Higher Education" will be discussed by Representative Barbara Gray of Framingham at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center room 163. A reception will be held at 6 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

Women's Spirituality Group will meet at 7 p.m. in the Student Union 428. The discussion tonight will be on discipline as an aid to being spiritual.

THURSDAY

A Resume Writing Workshop will be held from 12 to 1:30 p.m. in the Campus Center room 811-815. The workshop will be given by Alice Smith, the assistant director of the UMass Placement Service and is sponsored by the Everywoman's Center Working Women's Task Force.

Jewish Feminists Organization will meet at 4 p.m. in the Campus Center room 904-8. A video of Letty Cotten Pogrebin, a contributing editor to Ms. magazine, speaking on "Anti-semitism in the Women's Movement and Sexism in Judaism" will be shown.

The Women's Issues Team will meet at 6:30 p.m. in the Campus Center room 911.

The International Women's Event planning session will meet at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center room 911. All women interested in planning the event centered around International Woman's Day on March 8 are invited to attend.

A Workshop on Male Sexual Health and Contraception will be held at 9 p.m. in the Webster Main Lounge in Orchard Hill. All men and women are invited to attend the workshop focusing on the changing views of masculitity and to learn more about male sexuality. A film on the male's role on contraception will also be shown.

FRIDAY

The film Anna Mae: Brave Hearted Woman will be shown at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center 163. The film, which focuses on a woman killed by U.S. government agents and the Native American movement in the U.S., is part of the Progressive Film Series.

The Southwest Women's Center will be holding study hours from 7 to 11 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday and Sunday at the Center. Coffee and doughnuts will be served.

Computer Computers to help with language and science

By ANNE MCCRORY
Collegian Staff

Computer-assisted instruction has come to the University of Massachusetts.

PLATO, a computer-assisted instruction system, is "not meant to replace faculty or textbooks but to supplement them," said Carol B. MacKnight, director of computer-assisted instruction at UMass.

Use of the PLATO system at UMass is still in the experimental stage although it has thus far been proven successful for "the purpose of studying its (potential) use," said Conrad A. Wogrin, director of the UMass computer science department.

Citing PLATO as an attractive system because of its completeness, accomplishment and reasonable price, Wogrin said he obtained the system through a grant from Control Data Corporation.

The possible expansion of the system would be covered under the grant as well, Wogrin said.

A pilot project to "sense out student and faculty reactions to this type of technology" will hopefully begin next semester, said MacKnight.

The pilot, which would require additional terminals — the university now has only 3 — would permit classes in various departments to use PLATO for homework and study purposes. This had been done previously only by the French department.

Professor Agnes Raymond, instructor of an intensive elementary French course, has been using the PLATO system as a grammar and vocabulary aide for four years.

"The system is unique in that it is based on program learning," she said. "The students proceed by minimal steps and receive immediate confirmation (of their answers)."

PLATO, in contrast to some other popular computer systems, provides a complete program in language instruction for the beginner, Raymond said. "If they (the students) do the work, they will have something more than a theoretical approach," she said.

"(The computer) is a good way to do homework assignments because it corrects (your work) strictly," said Richard Greene, a freshman political science major. "It doesn't encourage diversity of expression," he added, citing translations for which more than one answer is possible as very frustrating.

Experimentation in the chemistry and health science fields, where an element of danger is often involved, is especially appropriate for computerized study, MacKnight said.

A simulated chemistry experiment performed on PLATO, for example, allows the student to construct equipment, mix elements, and control temperature.

Collegian photo by David May

COINS 121 student Jim Scanlon uses the new PLATO computer in the Graduate Research Center late last week.

RSO Workshops:

Mon. Dec. 6
at 5:30 in rm 803 CC

Pick up information packets in Senate Office,
Rm 420 Student Union
All RSOs requesting funding must attend!

the hatch CAFETERIA
GROUND FLOOR/STUDENT UNION

Dastardly Dans
Mon - Thurs
$3.00 Cover
FREE DRAFT
9 - closing
50¢ Highballs
50¢ Domestic Beers
Pool Table - Pinball - Video Games
POOL TOURNAMENT TONIGHT

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
Entertainment at its Best
Lotte Goslar's
PANTOMIME CIRCUS
Thursday, December 9 8:00 pm
BIG SIX of JAZZ II
with Billy Taylor, Max Roach, Slide Hampton, Richard Davis, Jimmy Heath and John Hendricks
Saturday, December 11
8:00 p.m.
MC, VISA-CHARGE YOUR TICKETS TODAY
Telephone reservations Noon-4:00 p.m. M-F
545-2511
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall

creswell gallery
15 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst
upstairs over N'Hamp Coop Bank
next to Lodestone & Gladbags
Tues. thru Fri.
11 to 2 & 4 to 6
Sat. 11 to 3
or by appointment
256-8000
black art, posters
cards & prints
african & third world artifacts

Christmas Cards
at
A.J. HASTINGS
Newsdealer and Stationer
45 S. Pleasant St., Amherst

Ski Now - Pay Later

UMASS SKI CLUB
Aspen, Colorado
SKI WEEK Jan 8-15
This Deluxe Vacation Includes:
- ☐ Round Trip Air, Scheduled Non-Stop Service from Boston, NYC, Phila. or Wash. to Denver
- ☐ Round Trip Bus Transfers to Aspen
- ☐ Deluxe Slope-Side Accommodations for 7 Nights, Tax Included
- ☐ Six-Day Lift Ticket Good at Aspen Mountain, Snowmass, and Buttermilk

Deluxe Slopeside Shadow Mountain Condominiums
Featuring fully equipped kitchen, maid service, fireplace, color TV, heated pool, sauna, and skiing out your door.
$659 per person
or
Woodstone Hotel Package
Located right on the mountain next to the lift, featuring: heated pool, jacuzzi, sauna, maid service, apres ski atmosphere.
$599 per person
Sign-Up Now
Ski Club Office
430A Student Union
5-3437

GIFTS

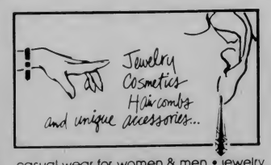
elegant gift boxed housewares

HATS, GLOVES, SOCKS & SCARVES

The SOAP CART

bubblebaths • moisturizers
soaps • soaps for kids
loofahs • brushes • sponges
sachets

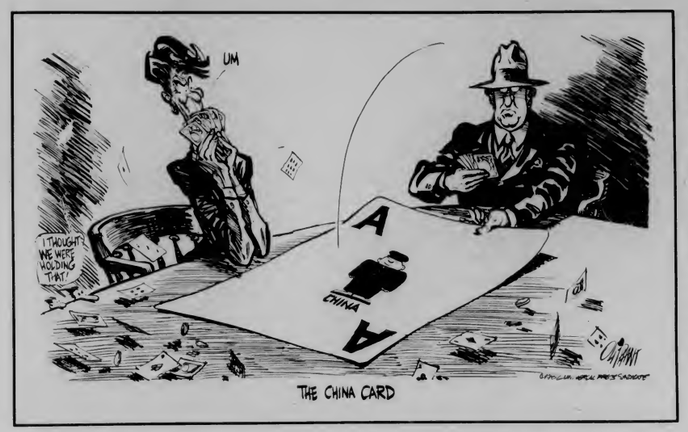
gift boxed wine & beverage glasses



casual wear for women & men • jewelry
cosmetics • soap cart • accessories • gifts
home furnishings • kitchen • housewares
glass & china • prints • cards • totes & soft luggage

SUNDAY 12-5
EVERY NIGHT TIL 9
VISA
FACES
Downtown Amherst
A Store-full of Stocking Stuffers

EDITORIAL/OPINION



THE CHINA CARD

A violent reaction to white racism

In his editorial concerning the Ku Klux Klan rally and counter-demonstration held last weekend in Washington, John F. Hudson aligned himself with the rest of mainstream white media by focusing exclusively on the acts of violence which were graphically flashed across the nation on the evening news. Rather than address the issue of the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, which was a major reason so many of the demonstrators were in D.C. in the first place, Hudson, like the rest of the white-controlled media, chose to agonize over the rebelliousness of the anti-Klan demonstrators. Hudson reflects a common attitude which holds that Third World people really have no reason to be angry, and that if we have any complaints, we must follow the "proper channels" and express our rage in a toned-down way white society considers "acceptable."

John Raible

Hudson also suffers from historical amnesia which afflicts far too many students in the country. For instance, in talking about the Civil Rights protests of the 1960s, he states, "It was the nonviolent aspect of these protests which moved the politicians." My first question is, how does he even know this? Did he talk to those "moved" politicians? Secondly, I have to remind Hudson that many, many Civil Rights demonstrators of all races were attacked by the police and white on-lookers, with tear-gas, dogs, fire hoses, billy-clubs, and even bullets. Students at Jackson State, Kent State, marchers in the streets, and leaders of the people like Martin Luther King and Malcolm X all lost their lives because of the violence of white racists, in uniforms and without. It was indeed the atrocities committed in reaction to the just struggle of Third World people which aroused the entire nation to action, or at least to a heightened consciousness.

Husdon later says in his sadly inaccurate editorial that "in the end it was the ballot box and voting booth which moves [sic] the politicians, not mindless violence and destruction." Several points of contention must be made here. One, that the violence "side" is usually not "mindless"; people resort to violence when something they value is being threatened from a perceived adversary. In the struggles of Third World people who have no other recourse for action, violence can hardly be dismissed as "mindless." Secondly, as part of that class who has always enjoyed the "right" to vote as guaranteed to white males under their Constitution (and, "incidentally" denied to all women and Third World people living in the U.S. at the time it was drawn up), it is unrealistic and presumptuous of men like Hudson to tell the traditionally disenfranchised how to win our freedom, particularly when the facts of history show that electoral politics is only a small part of the overall process through which social changes are made. Indian people did not survive the onslaught of the European settler-invaders by registering to vote. Enslaved Africans did not emancipate themselves by "choosing" between a democrat or a republican. The Cuban people did not keep the U.S. marines out of the Bay of Pigs, nor did the people of Viet Nam kick the U.S. military out from their country (repeat THEIR country) by pulling a lever in a voting booth in some town hall somewhere.

The point is, when white men act aggressively and violently toward people of color (as well as white women), they shouldn't be surprised when we defend ourselves, to quote Malcolm X, "by any means necessary." And it is the utmost in arrogance for white men to tell those they oppress to practice non-violence, when it's their barbaric economic and social system that deals death on a daily basis to people of color throughout the world. Proponents of non-violence must seek to understand the causes of violence — political repression, sexism, abuse of the Earth, racial supremacy, and the never-ending drive for more and more profits. If you truly want peace, organize for justice. And the next time you truly want to write about the Klan, talk to some people who have been the victims of racist violence, and ask them who needs to learn to be non-violent.

John Raible is a UMass student

Letters

Expensive solution should solve costlier problems

To the Editor:

This letter concerns the recent conflict between Marie Reid formally of the office of Planning and Budget and Chancellor Jodeph Duffey. I freely admit my ignorance of the politics of the situation in which Ms. Reid claimed the administration was inhibiting minorities from attaining high positions in various high positions in the administration at UMass. Whether this is true, I do not know. This letter is not about politics.

The problem we have is clear. It seems that Chancellor Duffey, in order to avoid the label of racist-sexist, has simply paid $52,000 to have the problem removed. By this I mean Ms. Reid is on a one year leave of absence with full pay, presumeably to nurse her bruised ego and professional esteem. One cannot fault the new Chancellor with trying to avoid a sticky administrative unpleasantness so early in his term, but this is no reason why the students of this university should accept a $52,000 solution to this problem. Ms. Reid should either stay at UMass and fight for what she feels is right or she should resign. Chancellor Duffey should be ashamed of sanctioning the payment of hush money to a person who is clearly using the buzz words of racism and sexism to rock the administration. This administration has no backbone for succumbing to this type of blackmail.

$52,000 could help many students meet their financial obligations here at the university; it could go towards more materials and supplies; it could go for fifty-two $1,000 scholarships; it could even go for repairs on the Chancellors residence, but it should not go to financing paid vacations for non-deserving administrators.

It is no secret that minorities at UMass are some of the people most hurt by financial aid cuts. It is ironic that Ms. Reid, a minority and a woman, a person in a position to make positive changes for the above mentioned, is hurting those same people. Ms. Reid could best serve those who are discriminated against by coming back to work. Otherwise, she should forfeit her salary, minus the severance pay, because the students cannot afford to pay for it.

As students, we are told that if we don't do the work we either flunk or we don't receive a grade. Myself having been raised with the old Puritan work ethic, I feel I can speak for many when I say, "Ms. Reid, if you don't do your job you should not get paid." Ms. Reid, as you drink your late morning coffee, try to remember, some of the students here can't even afford a cup of coffee.

Chris Ryan
Amherst

SGA bylaws ignore safety

The low point of the recent trip to Washington D.C. by the Students Advocating Financial Aid (SAFA) was undoubtedly the bus troubles encountered by the group. In all, 15 hours were lost due to bus delays. Thanks to a rotten bylaw in the Student Government Association constitution and University neglect.

We had hoped for a decent night's sleep. Although the bus broke down on the way down, the real problems began on the return trip. On the New Jersey turnpike it became increasingly obvious that the bus was leaning dangerously to the left side. After all of the 42 people got off the bus it was discovered that the frame was three inches from the ground on the left side. The right side was about 16 inches above the ground. Obviously, we had a major problem.

Rich Nangle

As it turned out, there were no mechanics at the truck stop in Bradenton, who were equipped to fix the problem. Therefore, we had to spend a night in a nearby motel. This was done despite the fact that Ron Hamlin, Field Trip Manager of UMass Transit, told SAFA co-president Jim Quinn that in his opinion the bus was fit to be driven back to Amherst. This comment was made after Quinn informed Hamlin that one of the shock absorbers in the bus was destroyed causing the bus to lean dangerously to one side. The bus driver, Jeff Coombs, attempted to drive the bus home that night and it broke down for good ten miles later.

The next day at 11:30 a.m. we left on a New Jersey busline coach, a vast improvement over the 1959 special we had made most of the trip on. After a thirteen hour layoff we made the rest of the trip to Amherst by 5:00 p.m. Combining the time factor and the comfort factor, it was by far the best part of the travelling.

The wounded bus, known as the "silver sow" to UMass transit employees, has been subject to problems before. The week before the D.C. trip, the bus had broken down while going to Montreal. The week before that, the bus had broken down while going to Hartford. Why was it chartered to go to Washington? Well, SAFA really had no say in the matter.

The SGA appropriated $500 to the group, accounting for about 25 percent of its entire budget for the trip. The SGA has a rule when appropriating money for such ventures that says the group in question "shall employ the most efficient and economical carrier possible, and bids shall be required where possible. The "silver sow" was by far the cheapest mode of transportation costing $700 to rent from the University.

UMass Coordinator for Community Relations Gerry Grady (who works with the SAFA and went on the trip) was somewhat hesitant about using the bus. But he did not want to use a Peter Pan or Trailways coach costing more money since that might have spurred action by the SGA.

SAFA is an organization which has an excellent reputation with lobbying for financial aid in the nation's capital. Grady did not want to take the chance of tarnishing that reputation by messing with the SGA. Keep in mind the fact that the SGA is also prosecuting SAFA co-president Jim Shaw for alleged misuse of funds and not employing the cheapest mode of transportation on a Washington trip last spring. But that's another story.

If you take the SGA rule to an extreme, one could imagine it demanding that students rent Mo-Peds since they are a cheaper mode of transportation than busses. But the rule also calls for efficiency and it should have been clear to all concerned that this bus was unsafe for an extended trip. It would have made much more sense to send SAFA on a better bus for a few hundred dollars extra. But the SGA ignores the efficiency part of the bylaw and goes mainly for the cheapest mode of transportation. Subsequently, the "silver sow" is in almost constant use.

The "silver sow" should be put into retirement immediately and a new bus should be purchased by the University. If the University does not buy a new bus and elects to make the umpteenth repair to the "silver sow", the SGA should never take it into consideration when looking for the cheapest mode of transportation.

On top of the fact that students lives were put in danger by riding this bus, Wednesday classes were also forfeited because of the delay. Also, the bus from New Jersey to Amherst cost $678. Someone has to pay for that.

The SGA must begin to weigh convenience and safety on a higher level than finances. It must also follow its bylaws more carefully, or write better ones.

Rich Nangle is a Collegian Columnist

THIS WEEKS SPECIAL

NyQuil 6 oz $2.01 Reg. $3.59
Contac 10's $1.93 Reg. $2.46
$2.63 Reg. $3.97 One A Day Reg or Plus Iron 60 ct
$1.79 Secret 6 oz Reg. $2.35
Gillette Foamy $1.59 Reg. $2.63
Lady Shaver 3's 46¢
Faberge Shampoo or Conditioner 15 oz
99¢ Super Value
Pert 15 oz norm or dry $2.01 Special Value
Apri 4 oz $3.29 Reg $5.01
Colgate Reg or Gel 7 oz $1.33
64¢ Pepsodent Brush Hard, Med or Soft Reg $1.25

All sale items also available the Mini Store located in the Student Union

UNIVERSITY STORE
Located in the Campus Center Open M-F 9-5 Sat. 11-4

Great Gifts
Stocking Stuffers
Posters Cards
BLOUSES
Dresses, Skirts, Scarves
Earrings Crystals
Mugs Calendars
Ornaments
Vases, Boxes, Tins, Mobiles, Toys
Weeknights 9 pm Dec 10 - 23
Sundays 12 - 5 pm
Daily 10 am - 6 pm
Open 10 am - 6 pm - 9 pm Fri.
Open Sundays 12-5 p.m.
Great Gifts - Great Prices
THE MERCANTILE
AMHERST CARRIAGE SHOPS

BARGAIN BASEMENT SALE

Selected Groups of Mugs
Cards
Cubes
Games
Frames
Candles
Buttons
Posters
Puzzles
Tin Boxes
Plant Pots
Stationary
Rubber Stamps
Plastic Boxes
many other items. . .

ALL ITEMS SUBJECT TO PRIOR SALE
ALL SALES FINAL!

on the concourse
THIS WEEK ONLY
MONDAY thru FRIDAY
Monday 25% off original price
Tuesday 33% off original price
Wednesday 50% off original price
Thursday 75% off original price
Friday 90% of original price
cashier will take the mark-down at the register
UNIVERSITY STORE

Arts

The Motels check into the Calvin Theater

THE MOTELS
Thursday, December 2
Calvin Theater, Northampton

By DOUGLAS MUISE
Collegian Staff

What an odd place to take in a rock band! One week at the Calvin I'm seeing Bergman double-features, and the next — furious, pile-driving rock courtesy of the Motels. I was rather surprised the theater could withstand such an onslaught of mega-decibals; after all, it's a pretty ancient structure. All I can say is the Motels cracked their share of plaster Thursday night, pushing themselves to the absolute limit for a small, but highly receptive crowd of five-college kids.

The Motels opened their 90-minute set with "Mercy" as Martha Davis — focal point for the LA-based sextet — flung herself on stage and into "I dunno where he went but he left, in such a HURRRAAAY...!" in what was to become one of the explosive moments of the evening.

Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

Fitted into a loose velvet cloak and a floppy dark hat, Davis prowled about the stage like a mangy black cat, teetering on spiked pumps. This woman was literally all over the place, thanks to the virtues of a wireless mike. Every rocker should have one of these gizmos. Davis raced from corner to corner of the stage, actually coming right out in front of the booming amplifiers to shake hands and snuggle with the audience.

Davis prowled about the stage like a mangy black cat, teetering on spiked pumps.

The level of audience-performer interaction was probably the highest I can remember experiencing in a concert hall. You usually only get this sort of contact only in the smallest of clubs.

As Davis relates in a recent Boston Rock interview:

"I guess I'm just old fashioned when it comes to entertainment. I mean, we're not androids yet. You can still go out and sweat and cry and scream and kick, to me, well I do that every night. I see so many bands that go out and pose — they're so cool because they're there."

Poseurs the Mptels are not. Except for their newest lead guitarist Guy Perry, maybe. It's probably just me, but I tend to feel better about guitarists that are a little self-effacing. But whenever Perry took the teeniest of solos, foom! There he was jumping into the spotlight to exploit every Chuck Berry step he could remember. It was disgusting!

The Motels have gone through three guitarists in the last two years, so perhaps I should shut up. As a unit, the Motels have not been immune to various shake-ups either. After the spotty success of their first two LPs, the band was on the rocks. Compounded with Davis' break-up with the band's music director Tim McGovern, the group threatened to dissolve completely. Amazingly, Davis held them together long enough to cut their latest effort, All For One. And the rest, of course, is history.

All of the band members played with relative competence Thursday night — Marty Jourard's saxaphone shrieks were fairly amazing — but again, Davis was the show's centerpiece. Along with Deborah Harry, Pat Benetar, and even Crissy Hynde, Davis is fast becoming one of rock's foremost temptresses. Furthermore, don't be surprised if you find the next Motels album marketed as Martha Davis and the Motels or something like that. Seeing Davis' pretty mug on an album cover would undoubtably help move the product.

The Motels at the Calvin Theater — jeesh! Next somebody will be booking Public Image Limited to play the Unitarian Church!

Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

Play drives message home

By JERRY LAWLER
Collegian Correspondent

Homeland is billed as a domestic comedy about South Africa and the United States, but you might not leave the theatre clutching your side from prolonged laughter. You'll more likely leave wondering what American big business is really all about and questioning the American way of life.

The first act is set in Africa and reveals black oppression in that country due to the Apartheid policy set by whites. The main character is Keentseng Monaheg (Maria Virginia Garcia), a black maid in Africa working for a white General Motors business executive. Keentseng has the chance to go to America, where supposably all blacks have the chance to make it big. The true feelings of the black Africans are best portrayed by Bheki Langa, who appears as Mahlomola Monaheg, Keentseng's brother. Langa refuses to humiliate himself by working for whites.

Although his part was small in this play, his performance was excellent nonetheless. The blocking was well-done when he corners Madeline Kenilworth (Cheryl Webster) out of disgust after overhearing Madeline telling Keentseng that the Kenilworths treat her well. The character of Madeline was not appealing. After all, she bases her happiness on the number of maids she has.

In Act Two, Bob Kenilworth (Scott Flaherty) takes his family and devoted maid to the United States for a business conference. Keentseng learns about American life from Frances Green and is then forced to make a difficult decision whether to return to South Africa or remain in the States.

The play's lack of comic was mainly due to the inexperienced cast: almost half in this Third World Theatre production were making their acting debuts. The laughter finally did come, however, in Act Two with the appearance of Leslie "Mahogony" Harrison. Harrison was outstanding as a dry witted black maid, working in an upperclass American businessman's household.

Each act sets a picture which is not a pretty one. All the scenes deal with upperclass families living in supposedly nice houses. The backdrop of a broker's stock sheet seemed to be a constant reminder that big business is not pretty — that underneath all the glamour, there's a lot of dirt.

Not much was done in the production to make the actors look like the characters they portrayed. Like the scenery of the white families' homes, the actors were only suggested. It was the ideas that held this play together.

Aside from the technical drawbacks, Homeland very successfully portrays life among the upper classes in America. The blacks in Africa suffering under the Apartheid policy can quite easily be paralleled with the blacks in America who are forced to live in city ghettos.

The UMass Faculty Brass Quintet will perform at 7 p.m. on Monday, December 13 at Bezanson Recital Hall in the FAC.

Holiday Savings

DON'T MISS
OUR 12 PAGE HOLIDAY FLYER OF SPECTACTULAR SAVINGS. BE SURE TO PICK ONE UP THIS WEEK

Louis

WE GIVE S & H GREEN STAMPS

FINE FOODS
76 N. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST, MASS.

BEEF ROUND
Bottom Round Roast
$1.59 LB

BEEF LOIN SHELL
Sirloin Steaks
$1.89 LB

USDA CHOICE

BEEF ROUND
Eye Round Roast
$2.49 LB

BEEF ROUND
Back Rump Roast
$1.79 LB

SALE
DEC 6-11

FROZEN
Sweet Life Orange Juice
99¢ 16 OZ CAN

ASSORTED FLAVOR
Sweet Life Sherbets
$1.19 ½ GALLON

BROWN & CONFECT.
Domino Sugars
59¢ 1 LB PKG

WE RESERVE THE RIGHT TO LIMIT QUANTITIES. NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS.

BIG CITRUS BUY

PINK OR WHITE
Florida Grapefruit
5 LB BAG
$1.39

JUICY
Florida Oranges 5 LB BAG $1.59

CALIF
Navel Oranges 8 FOR 99¢

CLIP THIS VALUABLE COUPON

With this coupon & $10.00 purchase excluding coupon item & cigarettes - limit one
CHOCK FULL O'NUTS
Coffee
$1.79 1 LB CAN
VALID DEC. 6-11
GOOD AT LOUIS FOODS

LAGNAF 83

Start every day refreshed!
The Collegian

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
Rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays, Saturdays 1-4

BUYING High School Class Rings
HIGHEST PRICES PAID! Also: Gold & Silver Coins and jewelry
Daniel Smith
256-0710
25 North Pleasant Street
Amherst

AMHERST CINEMA
Mon - Tues
Das Boot [R] 7:00
Wed - sat
The Paper Chase 7:00
The Graduate 9:00
Downtown Amherst
253-5426

Hypercurricula...

COMMUTER COLLECTIVE HEALTH SYMPOSIUM — The health aide program will be giving a nutrition workshop with film "Diet for a Small Planet." All are welcome to attend. 11:30 a.m., Dukes Room.

UMASS PEACEMAKERS MEETING — Last minute planning for "In Case of Nuclear Accident" event, 6 to 8:00 p.m., 805-809 Campus Center.

WOMEN'S CAUCUS OF STUDENT SENATE RECEPTION — The Women's Leadership Project in conjunction with the Student Senate Speaker's Office will sponsor a reception/discussion for the Women's Caucus. The discussion will center on the history of and the need for a Women's Caucus. Wine & Cheese will be served. 7 p.m., 803 Campus Center.

C.E.Q. BUDGET MEETING — The Coalition for Environmental Quality will have a budget and general issues meeting. 6:30 p.m., 306 Student Union.

CAREERS IN PERFORMING ARTS MANAGEMENT — Topics include performance facilities and companies, theatre management, and service agencies. Workshop is sponsored by the Arts Extension Service of the Division of Continuing Education with the support of the University Arts Council. To register, call AES at 545-2360. 7 p.m., 903 Campus Center.

ANTI-RACISM TEAM MEETING — There will be a study group about the feminization of poverty. Readings are available in the Team office; 422 Student Union. All are welcome. 7 p.m., 162 Campus Center.

DSO MEETING — The Dyslexic Student Organization will be holding their last meeting of the semester. Interested volunteers or new members for next semester welcome. 7:30 p.m., 68 Bartlett.

OUTING CLUB MEETING — Trip announcements; business meeting. Slide show on Mexico by Mark Skolnick. 7 p.m., 917 Campus Center.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS STUDENTS . . .
You're Needed All Over the World.
Ask Peace Corps volunteers why their ingenuity and flexibility are as vital as their degrees. They'll tell you they are helping the world's poorest peoples attain self sufficiency in the areas of food production energy conservation education economic development and health services. And they'll tell you about the rewards of hands on career experience overseas. They'll tell you it's the toughest job you'll ever love.
PEACE CORPS
See Mary-Jo Langston, 12 Draper Hall, UMASS 545-2105

Are you a Secret Santa?

toys, games, unusual gifts & unique accessories for under $3.00
many under $1.00!
FACES
A Store-full of Stocking Stuffers
Sundays 12-5 Downtown Amherst

ONLY 22 DAYS LEFT TO SEND A CHRISTMASCARD

Limited Selection also available in the Mini Store in the Student Union

Open M-F 9-5 Sat 11-4

Located in the Campus Center

Cards by. . .
Blue Mountain
Recycled
Pawprints
American Greeting
Renaissance
Hallmark
and many others to choose from

UNIVERSITY STORE

All W. Mass Stores open Sun. 9-5 til Christmas

Tender, lean and tasty!

Sirloin Steak USDA CHOICE 1.79 lb
Beef Loin without Tenderloin

USDA Choice Up to 5 lbs
Round Tip Beef Roast ... Beef Round ... 1.89 lb

Boneless Top Sirloin Steak (Beef Loin) lb 2.89
Rump Roast Beef Round lb 1.99
Beef Eye Round Roast lb 2.39
Top Round Roast (Beef Round up to 5 lbs.) lb 1.89
Boneless Chuck Roast (Beef Chuck) lb 1.69
Fresh Beef Brisket (Point Cut Flat Cut 1.99 lb) lb 1.69

USDA Choice Great Beef
Beef Top Round Steak USDA CHOICE 2.39 lb

Shoulder London Broil Beef Chuck USDA Choice lb 1.99
Bottom Round Steak Beef Round USDA Choice lb 2.19
Round Tip Steak Beef Round USDA Choice lb 2.49
Cube Steak Beef Round USDA Choice lb 2.49
Chuck Stewing Beef USDA Choice lb 1.89

It's time to Stop & Shop...for savings!

It's time to STOP & SHOP

Shop our big weekly circular. Copies in store.

corner deli Available in stores featuring a service deli.

Stop & Shop Roast Beef Sliced to your order 3.29 lb
Genoa or Hard Salami Carando Brand 3.59 lb
Wilson Bacon Sliced lb pkg 1.69
Kahn's Jumbo Franks Meat or Beef lb package 1.79
Countryfine Italian Sausage Hot or Sweet 2½ to 3 lb pkg 1.49 lb
Breakfast Sausage Countryfine 2½ to 3 lb pkg 1.39 lb
Weaver Chicken Rondelets All varieties 12 oz package frozen 1.99
Fresh Pollock Fillets 1.79 lb
Raisin Bread Stop & Shop 16 ounce loaf 99¢
Vo-5 Conditioner or Shampoo 15 oz bottle 99¢

Shoulder Lamb Chops Fresh American Grown 1.89 lb
Lamb Legs Whole Oven Ready New Zealand Frozen lb 1.79
Chicken Breast Split 'White Gem' 5-6 lb pkg. with Back lb 99¢
Chicken Leg Quarters with Back 'White Gem' 5 to 6 lb pkg lb 49¢
Extra Mild Franks Stop & Shop 1 lb package 99¢
Meat Bologna Sliced Stop & Shop 1 lb package 99¢
Fresh Lean Ground Beef Any size package lb 1.59
Extra Lean Ground Beef Any size lb 1.89

produce Freshness for your table!

Bananas "Chiquita" & other Brands 4 lbs for $1
Tangerines Tangelos or Florida Oranges 3 lbs $1
Yellow Onions 5 lb bag 89¢
Zucchini Squash Yellow or Green 2 lbs $1
Collards or Kale Large Bunch 2 for 1
Emperor Grapes lb 69¢
Granny Smith Apples Imported From France lb 69¢

Cream of Mushroom Soup 10½ oz can Stop & Shop 3 for 85¢
Stop & Shop Pasta Thin or Regular Spaghetti, Elbow or Ditalini Macaroni 16 oz pkg. 3 for $1
Stop & Shop Tuna Chunk Light in water or oil 6½ oz can 69¢
Stewed Tomatoes 16 oz can Our best quality! 16 oz pkg. 2 for $1
Stop & Shop Cake Mixes Asst'd Varieties 18½ ounce package 2 for $1
Apple Juice Half Gal. Stop & Shop Half Gallon Bottle 99¢
Orange Juice Half Gallon from concentrate Stop & Shop carton 1.19
Stop & Shop Bagels Plain, Egg or Onion 12 oz package frozen 2 for $1
Half Gallon Ice Cream Assorted Flavors Stop & Shop carton 1.59

B12 Stop & Shop Dairy Coupon — Homestyle or Buttermilk Stop & Shop Biscuits 8 ounce package C FREE
B11 Stop & Shop Grocery Coupon — Stop & Shop Swiss Style Yogurt Asst'd Flavors 8 ounce cup C FREE
B10 Stop & Shop Grocery Coupon — C White or Assorted Stop & Shop Paper Towels 2 ply sheet 125 sheet roll FREE
B9 Stop & Shop Grocery Coupon — Stop & Shop Hard Candies Asst'd Flavors 7 ounce bag C FREE
B8 Stop & Shop Grocery Coupon — C Stop & Shop 1 Liter Soda Asst'd Mixers Ginger Ale, Club Soda or Tonic Water plus Conn. deposit FREE

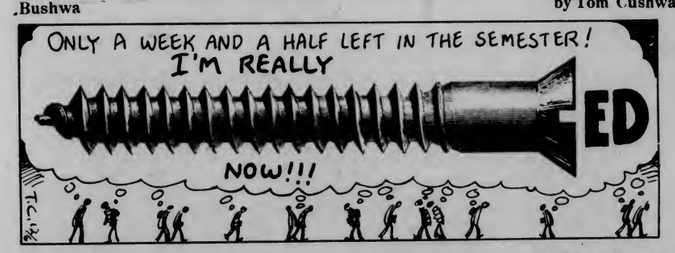
With this coupon & a $7.50 purchase. Good Sun. Dec. 5 Sat. Dec. 11. Limit one per customer. Prices effective Sun. Dec. 5 Sat. Dec. 11 1982. We reserve the right to limit sales to three packages of any items offered on sale. Not available in cake mix or other advertised promotions. Not responsible for typographical errors.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

The UMass Zone By Mark Rollins

Under The Influence By M. Joyce

Bushwa by Tom Cushwa



Bloom County By Berke Breathed

D.C. MENU

LUNCH
Hamburg on Roll
Tuna Oriental

BASICS LUNCH
Oatburgers
Tuna Oriental

DINNER
Roast Turkey/Dressing
Gravy, Cranberry Sauce
Knockwurst
Seasoned Sauerkraut

BASICS DINNER
Roast Trukey/Dressing
Gravy, Cranberry Sauce
Egg and Cheddar
Florentine

Collegian Staff Meeting

Important Collegian staff meeting at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the newsroom. Attendance is mandatory. Important business, including the election of a new editor will be discussed. Anyone who cannot attend should contact their department editor or manager.

Attention Artists

The Collegian is looking for comic strips for next semester. All students are invited to submit samples for possible consideration. Samples should be of production quality, drawn in black ink, in similar proportions to those appearing on this page. Samples should be submitted to Ed Levine, Managing Editor, Collegian, 113 Campus Center by Monday, Dec. 13.

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1 Classical Chinese poet
5 Hacienda
9 Privet border
14 Look — (visit)
15 Thor's stepson
16 City on the Allegheny
17 Examine casually
19 Painter of "Olympia"
20 Be beholden to 21 Pot-au-feu
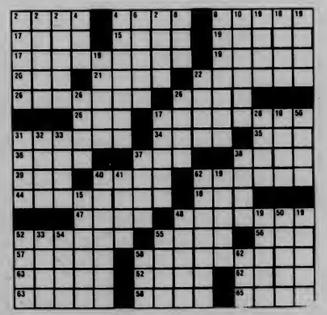
22 Vex
23 Highstrung
25 Lose patience
26 Commit a faux pas
27 Disrespectful
31 Slender and graceful
34 Frijole
35 Kind of neckpiece
36 Advance
37 Quill
38 Variety of pear
39 Caliph's name
40 Genus of Old World trees
42 Jupiter or Venus
44 Nightmare
46 Prefix in aviation terms
47 Section of film
48 Support
52 Come ——
55 Country festival
56 Caviar
57 Skilled
58 Region of the pampas
60 Battle royal
61 Faculty member
62 Outlet
63 Members of the fourth estate
64 Relish
65 Olympian god

DOWN
1 Descended upon
2 Intimidated
3 Fire iron
4 Any person
5 Refinement
6 Cosmetic plant
7 Leisurely
8 Sacred chest
9 World Series feature
10 Exuberant
11 Bucky of baseball
12 Scot
13 Heraldic bearing
18 Of ——
22 Palm having feathery leaves
24 Plains of South Africa
25 DC agents
27 Steel girder
28 Inky
29 Plane's prow
30 Savoir-faire
31 Piece of marble
32 Southern constellation
33 Arthurian lady
37 Chime
38 Place for a rustic dance
40 Mythical Greek matricide
41 Certain Virginians
42 Forbearing
43 Ascertain
45 Window decor
48 Scandinavian literature
49 Laundry appliance
50 French nanny
51 Irish poet and dramatist
52 Pack down
53 Breslau's river
54 Polynesian volcano goddess
55 At liberty
58 Tool for dressing wood
59 Southern power project: Abbr



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

B	A	I	N	G		A	I	S	C	I	O	I	T
A	V	I	C	S		B	E	A	M	I	S	G	R	O
R	O	S	I	S		B	A	I	L	E	S	R	I	O
A	I	N	T	E	P	I	E	N	U	I	T	M	A	T	E
			N	A	Y		M	E	A	N	A
C	A	B	B	Y		M	I	S	T		A	N	T	I	S
O	L	L	A		M	A	N		U	T	M	O	S	T
P	L	A	Y	P	E	N		C	R	I	E	P	E	R
T	E	M	P	E	R		C	A	N		A	E	R	O
S	N	E	A	K		S	H	Y		S	T	E	E	P
			C	H	A	I	T	E		S	L	O
J	A	C	K	O	F	A	L	L	T	R	A	D	E	S
O	G	R	E		U	N	T	I	E		L	I	D	O
S	I	E	E	R	A		S	C	E	N	E		L	E	N	A
H	E	W	S		S	H	R	I	E	D		S	T	A	R

Weather

Today—breezy and continued warm. Morning fog and drizzle giving way to partly sunny skies but still a chance of a few showers. Highs 55 to 65. Tonight, cloudy with a chance of showers. Lows in the 30s to lower 40s by morning.

CABLE/VIDEO

10:30 - 11:30 Bill Russell at the SUB
11:30 - 12:30 Nickii Giovanni speaks at Black Homecoming
12:30 - 2:00 Michael Manley, the ex-Priminister of Jamacia

WMUA 91.1 FM

Monday

6-9	Ken Johnston — Jazz
9-12	Mystery DJ
12-3	Mahogony Free as the Wind
3-5:30	Merritt Anthony
5:30-6	Newswatch
6-7	Peoples' Perspectives
7-10	Concepto Latino
10-2	Reggae
2-6	More music but unfortunately not with the irreplaceable Evan

EAST FOODS MENU

Tofu Lasagne
Cream of Spinach Soup
Banana Bread
Green Salad

11th ANNUAL BUSH BASH

UMASS SKI CLUB

SUGARBUSH VALLEY VERMONT

SKI & PARTY WEEK
JAN 23-28

THIS TRIP INCLUDES:

- Lift Ticket (5½ days)
- Lodging (Hotel or Condo)
- Meals (with Hotel)
- Free Beer & Wine Parties
- Hot Tub & Sauna Party
- Etc. Etc. Etc.

only $189.00

tax and gratuities included

beware of other ski trips that set a base price and THEN ADD 5% tax & 15% gratuities

Non-Members Welcome

Deposit & Final Payment Deadlines have been extended.

So get your deposits in now to reserve your vacation for WINTER BREAK

sign-up table

M-F Ski Club Office 9-3
430A Student Union
for more info call 5-3437

LAGNAF 83

TIME OUT

Two TV's

Free Popcorn

Monday Night Football
Pitchers $3.00
Bud, Miller, Lite
Amherst's Biggest Little Bar
37 N. Pleasant Street

This Summer Spend
Six Weeks in England

July 15 - August 26, 1983

Learn and Tour Live in Norwich, England and study English History and Literature while earning 6 undergraduate credits (non-credit by special arrangement). Explore England and Scotland with many side trips. The price of $2640 includes round trip Boston-London air fare, single room accommodations with full English Breakfast, all tour/admission charges, tips and gratuities. Space is limited. Deadline: April 15, 1983

For details contact: Prof. Jordan Miller,
Dept. of English University of Rhode Island
Kingston, R.I. 02881 (401) 792-5931

URI in England Summer 1983

College of Continuing Education
University of Rhode Island

BLUE WALL

CAMPUS CENTER AT UMASS

TONIGHT

FREE

Rock 102 WAQY Presents Budweiser LIGHT NIGHT

MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL

T-SHIRTS ★ RECORDS GIVEAWAYS!!!

Come Early... Giveaways start at 7:30

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday - Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10 % • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?

Rockadisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

AUDIO

Jensen 30 spkrs, new Advent spkrs, $120 each pair. Kenwood amp 40w/ch $120 546-4504

AUTO FOR SALE

69 Firebird convertible - A classic. Needs engine work and some minor body work. Easily restorable to mint cond. BO around 2000. Call nights 256-0435

1978 Toyota Corolla SR5 liftback A/FM stereo, air condit, headers excellent gas mileage mint condit BEST OFFER 546-4366

78 Suburu DL auto 2 dr runs good no rust $2990 tel 253-2016

79 Triumph TR7 30000 miles AM/FM cassette exce condition best offer 253-3406

75 Olds Starfire 6 cly hat-back good cond. stereo $1675 tel 253-2016

VW Superbeetle beautiful runner 1971 $1050 549-5377

BELLYGRAMSII

Delivered by professional bellydancer for most unusual gift. Thereza 253-7822

BROWNIEGRAMS

Three flavors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

DRYCLEANING

Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Way. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ENTERTAINMENT

POLODROID DJ's - Best Everything Call Pat or John 253-2957

FOR IMMEDIATE RENTAL

10 min from camous

one room apt with plenty of

FREE HEAT!

948 N. Pleasant St.
Dec. rent negotiable $150/mth thereafter call Steve 586-5827

FOR RENT

1 bdr. apt. for rent call 549-4709 $275/mo

2 bedroom apt in Squire Village Sunderland. Available Dec. 15 or Jan. 1 380 + 665-7195

BKO is renting rooms for intersession. Full use of kitchen facilities. Most modern house on campus, best location between town and campus. Call Paul at 549-5382 or Marty at 549-0206

Female for private room in apartment Jan 1 $148. + 253-3941

Three bedroom apartment, Northwood 665-2577 9 PM - 9 AM

FOR SALE

GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972

"Rick" 4001 Bass, black $400 Acoustic 360 Bass Amp 200W $200 Alex 6-7135

Bicycle - 1981 Univega-Gran Turismo, 15 speed, 27" frame, $155. 546-1011

100% Alpaca wool sweaters handmade in Peru. Selling for much less than store cost! Great Christmas gifts! 546-5512

10 speed bike, practicaly brand new with kriptonite lock $190 549-3956

WHO Ticket! Best offer call: 546-6037

Twin bed box spring and mattress 35.00 recliner chair 40.00 call 256-8261 after 6 PM

Music man 112RP amp w/12 in. easy spkr. blt. in phaser $500 and Peavey T80 guitar $250 both $600 call Susan 256-8261

Guitar by MJHARDY 1977 No. 2, 6 string, jumbo size w/hard case 1-413-967-5850 $550

Airline ticket from Boston to Denver 1 way must be male $120.00 good through Aug 12 '83 call Joe 253-5941 after 5:00

Color TV 19" Seville bought new in August 225 Bill 253-5362

Raichle Ski Boots mens 7½ excellent cond. $60 or BO Joel 6-1080

FOUND

Found set of keys in front of Johnson Dorm and Datsun keys call 546-5606.

Woman's watch outside GRC on 11/22. 665-7721.

Brown indoor-outdoor rug found on North Pleasant Street. Please call 549-0498

FROM EDDIE WITH LOVE

Beth - Never knew you were so much fun, BKO memories sustain me until I see you again. Ask me to your prom. Love Eddie

FRYE BOOTS

New mens size 10½ D style 2350, raisin color regularly $120.00, $90.00 call 546-7475 after 5 PM

HELP WANTED

Assistant Business Manager at the Collegian. Business major preferred but not a requirement. Low pay, great experience. Apply at the Collegian by Dec. 8. An equal opportunity employer.

WFCR needs spring interns. Up to 9 credits possible working in membership. Call 545-0100

Telephone sales day & night hrs. no experience needed good pay call 467-3105

Computer Programmer/Grad Student wanted to teach 2 or 3 11 yr olds basic programming Mondays after school call 1-617-522-5981 or 549-1525 evenings

Living Editor - The Index is looking for one. Non-work study. Stop by 103 CC. Or call 5-0848 and ask for Mike or Sheila. The Index is an equal opportunity employer

Winter Vacation jobs in Boston to promote ecology, consumer issues, and safe energy. The Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG) is hiring staff for winter session and full-time positions. Will train. $135-$225/wk. Elise 256-6934

INTERSESSION RENTALS

Furnished double and single rooms available in Kappa Sigma fraternity for the month of Jan Close to campus, parking available 545-3197/ Todd Chuma or Steve Gordon

LESBIAN AND GAY

Are you Gay? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2645 or drop in CC 106

LOST

Uxbridge class ring 46 Reward call Tim 256-6750

Lost ladie's gold watch with black band on 11/29 between Public Health Building and GRC reward 6-6438

NEED CASH?

Christmas raffle. $100-$50-$25 prizes. 3 for $1 table in C.C. Concourse Monday and Tuesday.

PERSONALS

Gourmet Jelly Beans six exotic flavors great gift, delivery call 546-6299

Happy 24th Yosef. Black is beautiful (I). . .so are we, together. Much love, your adoring pupil

Debby - about time! Best wishes on your 20th B-day! Love, all of us

Ivey Joe Clam says you're the best! Love the Nudnick

Jay in PoliSci 382. You looked right at us! Next time say hello!!!

Donna, Ann and "Hatch". Happy Holidays to the nicest voices. Signed, "Physicist Poet"

Holiday Open House Kappa Kappa Gamma all UMass women invited for an afternoon of holiday cheer! December 10th 3-5. RSVP 545-0320 545-0321

BETH Have a TOTALLY FABULOUS birthday, totally - love ya Randi

Final exams, memory, concentration, -success - group rates University Hypnosis Center 549-4645

Gary Merjian you're such a tool your listed in the yellow pages under utilities love Suzanne

Jen: Happy B-Day! Don't let it go to your head, now that your 21, you are still one behind me. Love ya kid, Heidi

House-mother needed for U-Mass sorority if interested please call 545-0527

Bill - your cute dimples have made these past two years the happiest times of my life. You are the sunshine in mylife, especially during the cloudiest days. Israel had plenty of rain but no one to watch the ducks with I'll always remember the laughter and the smiles I love you Debbie

MIDNIGHT EXPRESS: all invited to SUB on 12/8 at 7 and 9:30 pm to see this award winning movie admission $1.50 sponsored by Panhellenic Council

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Dissertations, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

To Milwaukee/Chicago Area around 20 Dec. will share gas/driving. call Pam 253-7405.

Need a ride to VA or Wash D.C. for Xmass after Dec 21 call Susie 546-8969

Need ride Pat Benatar Centrum Dec 7 Diane 549-6047

ROOM WANTED

Female needs furnished room int. sess. only call 546-8378 evenings Susan.

Females looking for a bedroom. in Brittany Manor for spring semester. Please call 549-5586. Keep trying.

Single room and/or willing to share a room for Jan & Spring semester. Must be close to campus & on bus route. Preferably Townehouse or Brandywine. Call 549-5990 Mike keep trying

Apt needed 2 females to share or take over apt. Jan. Lynn 546-6287, Kathy 546-7494.

Single room wanted for spring semester call Mark 549-2838 keep trying.

Female seeks own room in Amherst for spring semester Jocelyn 549-6860

ROOMMATE WANTED

Females wanted to share Southwood apt. $137 + elec. possible Feb take over call after 5 256-6053

Bedroom available in Northwood apartment. $115 plus utilities, 665-4947

Kosher female for one bedroom in two bedroom Southwood townhouse 253-7031

Roommate needed to share room in 2 room apt. Brit Manor $112 a month excludes elec. call ray 253-7918

Housemate wanted beautiful log cabin in Leverett wood heat available now Cindy 256-6434

Two women needed for Puffton apt one for single room and one needed to share large double call 549-5487

Female for apt. on bus rte 100 + /mon call 256-0786

Male to share bedroom in Southwood townhouse, $93/month, evenings 253-5963

Starting Jan 1 2 males remaining in 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt 2 openings call 253-5920

Female roommate wanted for Southwood apartment from Jan 1 on. Call 256-0630

RSO GROUPS REQUESTING FUNDING

Pick up your Budget Packet in the Senate Office 420 of the Student Union Building Due Dec 10, 1982

SERVICES

Writing assistance. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729

Moving? Our 12 foot enclosed cube truck will help you safely move your stuff 256-0480

SPEEDY TYPING SERVICE
24 hour typing at reasonable rates
For professional service call Jim 546-7042

TO SUBLET

Woman wanted to share room in apt Feb great deal for info please call 665-7109

2 br. Townshouse apt Jan-Aug, fall option busline Sunderland Squire Village utilities not included $410 665-7930.

Amherst Center apt 115 mo + utilities car available too negotiable big comfortable convenient January only 549-5382 Kathy.

Whole apt. 2 bedroom Squire Village call 665-3032

4 bedroom apt on bus route Swiss Village $165 ech including utilities 253-9519

1 Bedroom in 2 bedrrom apartment on bus route available Jan 1 Laurel 665-3519

When the Dorms close-- Jan 1 - Feb 1 Sublet. Spacious room in Northampton Center Apartment. $150 includes utilities call Karen 586-3471

2 bedroom apartment heat and electricity included 665-3982

WANTED

Stratomatic Baseball Cards wanted 1971 through 1979 call 549-4141 Mark

Wanted, House to rent for gathering of ten to twelve mature people. Any Friday or Saturday night eight PM to six AM house w/fireplace prefered contact Christine 6-1419

WANTED TO BUY

Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for an apartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093

Apt needed for int. & spr. sem call anytime 549-1309 or 546-5072

The Bird of Paradise

THE FINEST SELECTION OF VINTAGE CLOTHES, LINENS, ANTIQUE JEWELRY AND OBJECTS OF ART

WE ALSO BUY AND SELL

150 MAIN STREET
(THORNE'S 2nd FLOOR)
NORTHAMPTON, MA 01060

(413) 586-0216
(413) 567-8306

MENS & WOMENS
WOOL CREWNECK SWEATERS
(solid colors)

SALE $16.95 Turtlenecks
100% cotton
2 for $17.00

Saturday Clothes
10-6 Mon - Sat Sun 12-5
Fri til 9
(behind Silverscape)

Sports

Army gunned down in Boyden battle

By ELLEN RICHARD
Collegian Staff

It was an exciting rivalry match on Saturday as the UMass men's gymnastics team fought Army to the last event and as a result won the battle 254.60-252.40.

Army led the meet in the beginning with close wins in the floor exercise and pommel horse events, but the hard working Minutemen came up with a strong finish in the high bars event to take the match.

"(Tony) Sbarra really came through in the end, everybody did," caoch Roy Johnson said about the high bar team, "(Lou) Wingert started it off and (John) Macurdy had a great performance. Willy (Stevens) and Bert (Mathieson) had a few problems. They missed some skills but knew how to cover up."

Army took the floor exercises, the opening event of the meet, with Mike Smith placing first with a 9.1. A springy Macurdy took second place with a 9.0.

UMass trailed by 1.35 after the pommel horse event. Army's John Cho won the event with an 8.7, and UMass took second and third with Macurdy scoring an 8.45 and Mathieson getting an 8.35 in a smooth performance.

An interesting lineup change took place in the ring team that worked in the favor of Johnson and his squad. Johnson inserted co-captain John McGonagle, who replaced freshman Joe DeMarco. The switch worked nicely as McGonagle exhibited great strength and had a beautiful performance in the rings scoring a 9.45.

Mathieson performed three beautiful lock arm giant swings (swing into a handstand) to capture third place with an 8.95 score.

Army came back and won the long horse vaulting event to regain a slim lead. UMass' Macurdy, who got an individual high in the total score of his five events, placed third with a 9.25.

Although UMass won the parallel bars, with Mathieson placing first with an 8.65, Army still kept the edge by a half a point. Mathieson displayed some different moves including a very nice beginning in which he started at the side of the bar, went underneath it and twirled over to get himself inside and up. Macurdy and co-captain Bob Goulart both placed fourth with identical 8.45's.

"We scored okay on the parallel bars," Goulart said, "but they (Army) were getting higher scores than they should have."

Going into the last event, the high bars, the Minutemen had to work hard to win the game, which is what they did. After Wingert got the team going with some pretty moves, a confident Macurdy impressed the judges with his straight and quick swinging and scored a 9.1 which gave him second place.

Mathieson scored an 8.95 and performed a smooth routine which included a seat circle (swinging around the bar in a sitting position) to a "jam" to a handstand. Stevens performed next and scored an 8.4 in a pretty routine which set the stage for Sbarra.

Strong and impressive, Sbarra deserved the 9.35 he got. After Sbarra's routine, Johnson smiled at the judges and said "you know it", and so did the partisan crowd of over 400 spectators.

With one win under its belt, the team will host Lowell University Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m.

Hoopsters do it again in the final ten

A lead blowing 45-44 loss

By BILLY SHEA
Collegian Staff

His team had just committed the cardinal sin of college basketball, blowing a 13 point lead at home, but UMass head coach Tom McLaughlin still expressed a positive viewpoint after the University of Massachusetts dropped a 45-44 decision to Harvard University.

"We beat ourselves," said the second year coach. "If we would have played the last 10 minutes of these last two games we'd be 2-0."

But for the second straight game, the 30 Minute Gang failed to hold a second half lead, turning the ball over 10 times in the second half, seemingly at the most inopportune times. The Crimson scored 24 points off turnovers.

"We gave up the ball too easily," said McLaughlin. "Not against heavy pressure, either."

"How did we play down the stretch?" asked McLaughlin. "Scared?"

Tenative might be the word to describe the play of the Minutemen in the last 10 minutes when a 38-25 lead turned into a shocking on point loss.

Senior guard Calvin Dixon took over defensively in the second half, and turned the defense into offense with several twisting drives, including a three point play off a steal from Darryl Carter to bring Harvard to within six, 38-32.

An indication of the restraint the Minutemen played under in the second half is the fould shooting totals. Harvard hit 15 of 27 foul shots while UMass was 0 for four from the line. The Minutemen did not have a single free throw attempt in the second half.

UMass was victimized by Dixon and junior forward Joe Carrabine, who combined for 25 of Harvard's 32 second half points. The word experience is thrown around a lot, but it was no coincidence that Dixon was the main force behind Harvard's comeback.

"I think Dixon showed the value of having a senior guard," said McLaughlin. "I think Donald Russell will reach that point too."

Dixon was tightening up the defense and Carrabine was taking care of the offense. The 6'8" junior hit 5 for 8 from the field, including several outside jumpers in Harvard's comeback surge.

Ken Plutnicki tied the game for the first time in the second half, with a corner jump shot with 4.54 remaining. Then Dixon gave Harvard their first lead since scoring the first hoop of the game with a short jumper in the lane.

After Dixon blew a breakaway layup and the teams exchanged timeouts UMass found themselves down 42-40 with 39 seconds left. Hempel, who finished with 14 points, missed a corner jumper and Russell fouled Dixon in the scramble for the rebound. Dixon hit one free throw to boost the Crimson lead to three.

Edwin Green hit a bank shot with 27 seconds left and Harvard called a timeout. When Harvard inbounded the ball the Minutemen waited until eight seconds were left before Russell finally fouled Bob Ferry. Ferry hit both free throws and Harvard escaped with a road win.

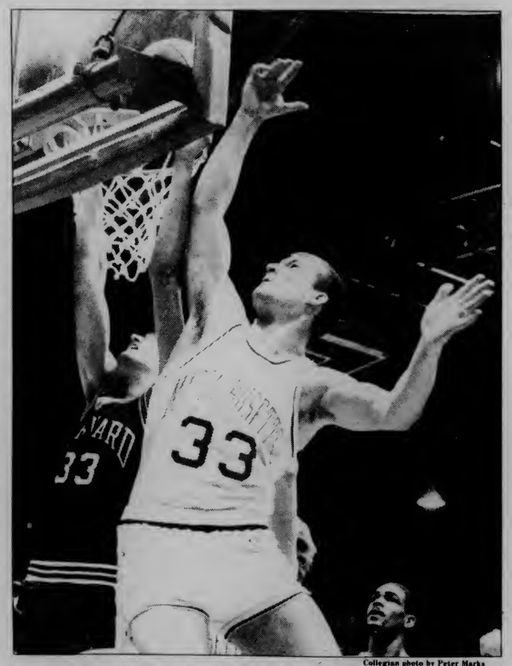
"We wanted to foul immediately after we got the ball over halfcourt," explained McLaughlin. "They kept the ball in the air and made it difficult to foul."

After laboring through a first half of Harvard stalling tactics, UMass held a 14-13 halftime advantage in a half the crowd collectively agreed was "BORING".

There were times in the second half when it looked like UMass was going to break the game wide open. Edwin Green's two hands slam sandwiched around John Hempel jumpers had the capacity crowd of 4200 rockin' at times.

"For a stretch there, I thought we played the way you want any team to play," sighed McLaughlin.

The trick is to do it for 40 minutes.



Collegian photo by Peter Marks

John Hempel lost the battle for the rebound to Harvard's Ken Plutnicki and the Minutemen lost the war bowing 45-44 to the Crimson.

Women hoopsters bow to New England's best

By ADAM NAZIMOWITZ
Collegian Staff

Senior forward Theresa Redmond scored 29 points and pulled down 10 rebounds to lead the University of New Hampshire women's basketball team over the University of Massachusetts by a score of 82-68 Saturday at the Curry Hicks Cage.

"UNH had to work. We had intensity unlike in other games but they didn't give us too much. The key was we only played 35 minutes, but those first five minutes of the second half were all theirs," said UM coach Mary Ann Ozdarski.

UMass jumped out quickly as they were able to get around the UNH zone and pull ahead 11-2. But the Wildcats were able to settle down into their own game and the UMass man-to-man defense couldn't contain the inside game of UNH.

UMass was led in scoring by guards Wendy Ward and Barbara Hebel who both scored 16 points. Unfortunately, both Ward and Hebel also fouled out of the game.

Freshman forward Karen Damminger came off the bench to score 11 points and grab nine rebounds before she too fouled out. Another freshman forward, starter Rebecca Kucks scored 13 points and added 13 rebounds and six assists.

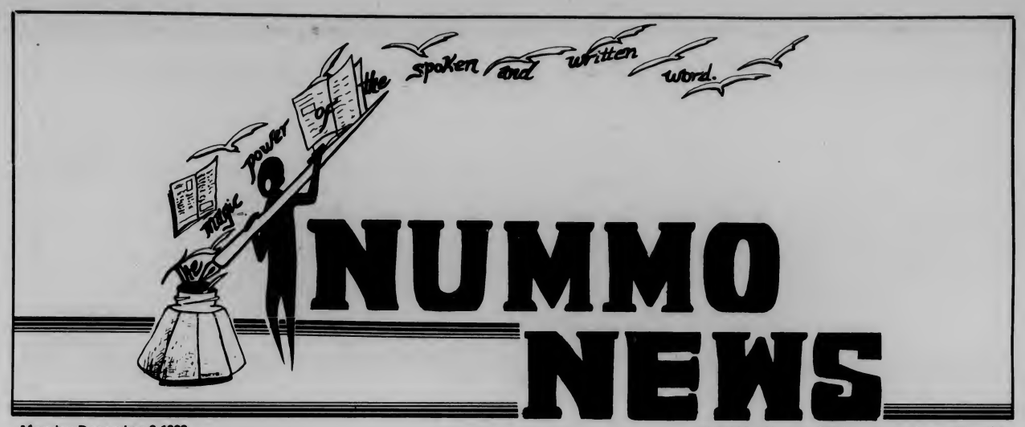
Both teams battled hard throughout the first half as the lead changed hands several times. But UNH was too quick and physical as they outmuscled the Minutewomen under the boards and scored a few fast break baskets to take a 41-36 halftime lead.

UMass put on the full court press early in the second half, but UNH was able to get around it pretty easily while UMass committed more fouls. UNH took control of the offensive boards and either scored inside or got fouled. When UNH began to hit from the outside as well, UMass knew it was in trouble as they fell behind by as much as 14 points late in the second half.

"It was a very encouraging game in that we played this way against the best team in New England. UNH played well, but they missed a lot of shots because of their cockiness. Their experience showed coming down the stretch," said Ozdarski.

"We got more all around scoring, our inside game was much better, and it was one of our better rebounding games. Ward and Damminger both played very well and Hebel is a great team player. But, we gave them too many chances inside and committed stupid fouls and their experience helped them," said Ozdarski.

The Minutewomen, whose record now drops to 2-4, will host Harvard University in the Cage Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. before travelling to Fairfield, Connecticut to take on Fairfield University Thursday.



Monday December 6,1982 VOLUME 11 ISSUE 69
NUMMO News' ONLY connection with the Massachusetts Daily Collegian is for distribution.

The Thorn in the Lion's Paw

Commentary

U.S. covert involvement in Nicaragua began long before the ruthless dictator, Anastasio Somoza, fled that country. President Carter in 1978 supported the dictator as well as financed that same regime which left approximately fifty thousand dead when it was over thrown by the Sandinistas in July of 1979.

Now under president Reagan the covert involvement has become the most ambitious paramilitary and political action in Central America. The Central Intelligence Agency has "more than 150 agents based in Honduras and dozens more in neighboring countries", as stated in the New York Times Saturday December 4th issue.

The C.I.A. has indirectly provided military training and money to the paramilitary groups, which are known to be Somosistas (followers of the late dictator), who are discontent with the Sandinista government. The counter-revolutionaries strategies have been publized in the media as being just 'hit and run forays on bridges and construction sites', but it has been more than hit and run actions. There has been intensive border fighting in the past weeks which have resulted in the death of not only Nicaraguan border officials but, innocent civilians as well. These tactics have been" designed to harass the Sandinistas while CIA operatives cast around for a moderate new Nicaraguan leadership," according to NEWSWEEK. The State Department hopes that by pursuing this continual harrassment it will cause the fall of the Sandinista government. This sort of strategies have been a pattern of operation of the U.S. when it does not allow for self determination of a nation that decides that it needs a drastic change of government. For example in 1954, when the U.S. toppled the reformist government of Jacobo Arbenz in Guatemala with the help of Honduras. Also, in 1973 the CIA aided the Pinochet coup that overthrew president Allende in Chile.

The thorns in the lions paw will be dug in deeper, no matter what he does, there will always be more thorns.

Progress In El Salvador ?

by Tracey Bryant

The murder of two American A.F.L.-C.I.O workers and the even earlier murders of four American churchwomen (three nuns and one lay person) has had a grave impact on the U.S-El Salvador relationship. The U.S. government's attitude has now changed from one of defender to accuser. The question now being asked is whether or not the U.S.'s 238.5 million in economic aid and 81 million in military aid will be withdrawn; in lieu of the fact that neither of the two cases have brought convictions.

Though two former corporals confessed to the AF.L-C.I.O murders, they insisted they had been ordered to do so by two military officers and a Salvadoran businessman. One of the accused officers, Lieutenant Isidro Lopez Sibrian is still being held in military custody although two judges on separate occasions have ruled insufficient evidence in the case against him. (Some believe the military fear the possibility of U.S. military aid being withdrawn and are only doing so to pacify the U.S.)

The other officer implicated in the case , Eduardo Avila, was connected to the Salvadoran Embassy in Costa Rica and has disappeared in Guatemala.The businessman Hans Christ had reportedly gone to Miami but efforts to locate him there were unsuccessful.

The two officers and the businessman all have rightist political connections. The uncle of Captain Avila is a high ranking official in the Salvadoran Supreme Court. All three have the support of Roberto d'Aubisson. Roberto d'Aubisson is the president of the right-wing Nationalist Republic Alliance and was quoted on national t.v. before the first dismissal of the case against Lieutenant Lopez saying that the two accused officers "are my colleagues and my friends, just like all those who through twenty years of military service I knew and lived with".

After the dismissal of the A.F.L.-C.I.O murder case without conviction on October 1, the U.S. Embassy had said that it was "dismayed and incredulous." But since a second judge reaffirmed the decision in late October, officials have grown more blatant in their statements about the Salvadoran judicial system.

One official was quoted as saying, "We have told the Salvadorans time and time again how crucial this case is for the Americans. What you're seeing now is another example of why that judicial system has collapsed. There's a widely held suspicion that judges involved have had their families threatened with death." Another offical was said to feel that the rulings were representative of the old-style Salvadoran justice in which political influence and threats of bodily harm have more to do with the outcome of a trial than the evidence presented.

Although the government is now more critical of the Salvadoran regime and keeps referring to the murder case as a crucial symbolic issue, the government has also made it clear to the Salvadoran Junta that statements made by envoy Deane Hinton to Salvadoran businessmen did not represent the official government position. Hinton strongly implied to the businessmen that unless the accused officers were convicted 'unless justice was served', the U.S. would withdraw financial and military aid.

While the government insists that it does not support

Continued on page 3

Harrasment of Native American University

by Keith Johnson

Deganawedahg-Quetzalcoatl University, the only Native American university in California is under constant harrasment by the federal government and is in the process of being evicted from its property.

Many people know of the various Black universities and colleges in the country. But there are also 16 Native-American junior colleges across the country.

In 1970, 75 American Indians and Chicanos occupied a closed Army communications center outside of Davis, California. They demanded that a Native-American run university be created on the site and forced the government into a 30 year lease . This was the start of Deganwedah-Quetzatcoatl University. The two names represent an Iroquois leader and an Aztec deity.

Since then the federal government has constantly harassed the school. It has been audited 35 times with no irregularities found. The government has also held up federal money that helps run the school.

Despite this constant harassment, classes have continued at the school which has become one of only two accredited Native-American schools in the country and has sent many of its graduates back to their communities and reservations.

Government opposition seems to stem from the fact that the school has been a center for Indian political activity since its inception. It has been very active with the American Indian Movement (AIM) and brought in Dennis Banks as its Chancellor. Banks is known for his involvement in the Wounded Knee, South Dakota incident in 1973 when a number of armed American Indians held off police and federal officals for a number of days. Banks had been convicted of rioting and assault but left South Dakota to go to California which refused to honor extradition papers for Banks from South Dakota

This past September the school was the site of the first American Indian Tribunal which was attended by hundreds of Indians from more than 10 countries the Tribunal was used as a forum for discussing attacks against Indians by the U.S. government in various parts of the world.

During the Tribunal the government served an eviction notice on the school stating that it had to vacate the property by October 25th. The government had earlier said that it would give the land to the school if it dropped Banks as its Chancellor and cancelled the Tribunal. The school refused . At last word an appeals cout had turned down the school's attempt to stop the eviction.

Race and Class in the Caribbean; Lecture by Michael Witter

by Curtis Haynes

"No Woman no Cry"
Bob Marley

The late Bob Marley used "song" as a tool to tell the world that the people of the Caribbean suffer racial and cultural oppression. Recently, Professor Michael Witter Chairman of the Department of Economics at the University of the West Indies also used a tool, political economy, to enlighten an audience of about fifty people on the role of race and class in the Caribbean.

Condensing as much information as he could in an hour and ahalf Professor Michael Witter began his lecture by explaining that much of the past information and theories used to describe the economic history of the Caribbean have lost their validity. One which used the development of the plantation economy as a basis for its theory of Caribbean growth was incomplete and incongruent, according to Witter, who said "there is no catagory of class and it ignores the issue of race."

The theory of industrialization by invitation also fell short because it did not explain the class contridictions which manifested themselves in the confrontation between the Black Power-Rastafari movement against Northern Capitalism particularly that of the U.S.A.. Witter also rejected the orthodox marxist interpretation because it did not properly diagnose the role of race and culture.

None of these theories were able to explain the rapid growth of the Rastafari movement in the 60's which, insisted Witter, "is a living manifestation of Racial and Cultural oppression."

Witter told his audience that the new thought of the Caribbean Marxist included not only accumulation and institutionalization as a basic fundamental process but also used race relations as an expression of class, with race and class providing the basic structure of the Caribbean.

Developing his ideas, Professor Witter briefly described the economic history of the Caribbean as a relatively new history, considering that 90 percent of the indigenous people were wiped out since the time they discovered Christopher Columbus off the cost of their lands. Witter interated, that Columbus was a lost sailor who was searching for the Indies.

Thus, the new economic history of the area began in the 1650's with a Colonial economy which included petty production i.e. small farms, a slave economy with Haciendas i.e. a Spanish style ranch as the central institution.

Slavery was the dominant form of labor and race was used to justify the brutal exploitation of these Africans in the production of sugar.

Professor Witter asserted that resistance and open rebellion was far and wide, yet, it was not until the downfall of the merchant class to the new industrialists that slaves were able to escape this form of oppression.

In 1838 the British abolished slavery and slaves were pushed off the plantations and Haciendas onto the worst land areas and into the towns where they became peasents and wage laborers.

Another period of major unrest in the form of labor rebellion came in the late 1930's prompted by the great depression in the U.S.A..

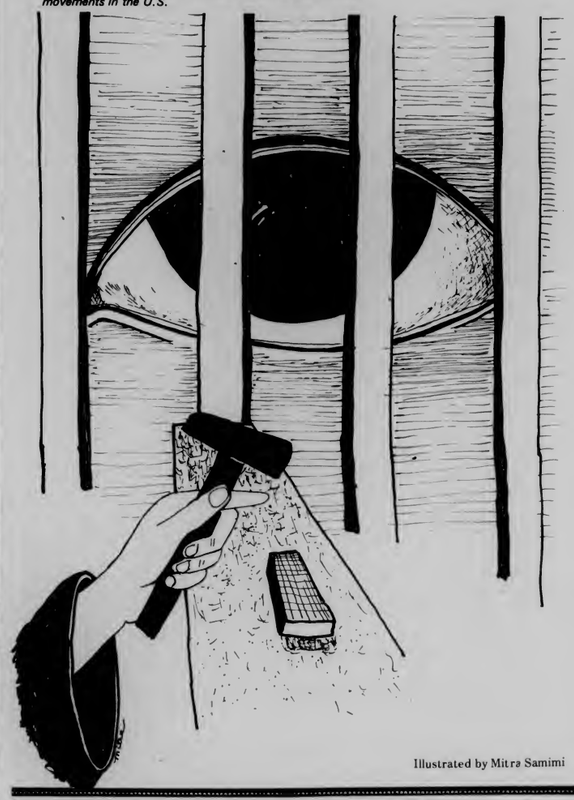
Speaking of Jamaica, the lecturer explained that until 1950 an Agrarian monocrop system dominated the economy. After 1950 there was a great influx of capital. This tremendous growth was at the cost of the peasant who was displaced, often being forced to leave the country. One sixth of the land was taken by the Bauxite aluminum industry with much of the rest of the displacement being forced by the tourist and manufacturing industries.

Professor Witter finished his lecture by explaining that the U.S.A. is a central, self accomidating economy with many peripheral economies including those of the Caribbean linking into it. Witter explained how the expansion of one periphery did not lead to the expansion of another peripheral economy. Making light of the fact that much of what is produced in Jamaica is designed to leave the country. Witter jested "An independent economy doesn't mean making swizzel sticks for coctails." He compared this type of relationship to that of Cuba and the U.S.S.R. where there is much more independence for the periphery, with an example being Cuba's production of sugar cane harvesters for use on their own crops. In concluding his lecture Professor Witter emphisized the importance of a more in depth political and economic study of the Caribbean citing its necessity as a tool for any future change

The Use of the Grand Jury —— PART II

Editors Note: This is part 2 of a three part series on the use of the Grand Jury as an instrument of political repression towards the many social, political, religious and cultural movements in the U.S.

A collective effort of,
Loti Reyes-Ocasio
Roxana Bell



Illustrated by Mitra Samimi

For more than 30 years the persecution of the F.B.I. and Grand Jury has extended itself to Puerto Rican political activists who reside within the U.S.. There were many Puerto Rican Nationalists, who were persecuted, strong-armed and encarcerated within the U.S.. Now they have focused in on members of the Movimiento de Liberacion Nacional Puertorriqueno (M.L.N.) which is a U.S. based organization comprised of Chicano-Mexicano and Puerto Rican activists who struggle for independence and socialism of Puerto Rico and the socialist reunification of Mexico.

On September 24, 1982, four members of the M.L.N. were charged with criminal contempt of the Grand Jury in the Easter District of New York as part of an indictment issued by the President Reagan appointee U.S. Attorney Raymond J. Dearie. Teams of agents of the F.B.I. affected the detention of Steven Guerra, Maria Cueto, and Julio Rosado. Ricardo Romero, the fourth MLN member was declared a fugitive based on his non-availability at the time of the arrests eslewhere.

Arrested also was a community health worker, Andres Rosado, who has no links whatsoever with the MLN, but who was previously incarcerated as a Grand Jury resister along with Rosado, Cueto, and Romero.

The following Monday, in what was obviously a well planned campaign, the FBI provided the media with a press release charging that they had captured the remaining leadership of the Fuerzas Armadas de Liberacion Nacional (FALN), thereby seeking to establish a climate of judicial prejudice and public hysteria that would serve as a justification for the inprisonment of the five without having to raise the question of government misconduct.

Behind the arrests, themselves a violation of due process in Grand Jury cases, are obvious FBI objectives:

1. To further seek to intimidate the Puerto Rican and Mexicano movements by holding before their members the spectre of long prison terms.

2. To force people underground and into fugitive status by creating paranoia and the impression that they have a major case against them.

3. To cover up their inability to come up with solutions to the armed actions against the state and thus deflect the possibility of a shake-up in the intelligence agencies, thus saving their jobs and priviliges.

4. The U.S. interpretation that they handed the Puerto Rican independence movement a defeat at the United Nations on September 23, and to play on what they preceive would be a general demoralization.

For all five persons concerned in this indictment, none of the above reasons will produce the desired effect. On December 10th, 1982, all five are scheduled to go before the Grand Jury in Brooklyn, New York.

Show your support by demanding the indictments against them be dismissed and express your opposition by writting to :

William French Smith
U.S. Attorney General
Department of Justice
Washington, D.C.

For more information please call
Loti Reyes at 253-2286

You are all invited to attend the showing of Mary Lampon's Film "Until She Talks" the cramatic story of a woman who is jailed for refusing to cooperate with the Grand Jury.

Date: Tuesday Dec 7th
Place: Bangs Community Center (the large activity room)
Time: 7pm til 9pm

Guest Speaker: Attorney Richard Rubin from Mass. Defenders of Springfield.

Date: Wednesday Dec 8th
Place: Pleasent St. Theater Northampton
Time: Noon til 1:30pm

Place: Thorns Market third floor Northampton
Time:7pm til 9pm
Guest Speaker: Martha Rodriguez Puerto Rico Independence Activist

Date: Thursday Dec 9th
Place: UMass Campus Center
Time: 12:30pm til 2:00pm
Speaker: Loti Reyes and a Guest Speaker

Place:Crabtree Dorm North East.
Speaker: Loti Reyes and a Guest Speaker

This film showing has been sponsered by the Western Mass Venceremos Brigade, Third World Womans Program, E.W.C., ISIS, GALA, Western Mass Chapter of the National Lawyers Guild,and NUMMO

Progress In El Salvador ?

Continued from page 1

Hinton's statements, officials do say that the government considers the outcome of the A.F.L.-C.I.O. trials to be a major problem in the renewal of the certification of progress contract; which is the stipulation upon which U.S. aid to El Salvador primarily rests. The government has stated that unless more satisfactory results come from the murder cases, it will be difficult for them to assert that progress is being made, when the certification comes up for renewal in January.

Some say that the question of progress in El Salvador is just a mask to cover the real question which is whether it is worthwhile to U.S. interests to keep supporting the Salvadoran regime. It now comes into question because U.S. influence on the regime has been tested. They say the question is whether or not the U.S. will continue to support another military state.

A Tropical Military Bombing Station

Arturo Melendez Lopez spoke on the struggle of Vieques.

Photo by Ed Cohen

By Joel Saxe, Special to Nummo News

As an early morning sun rises over the warm Caribbean waters of Vieques, a reverberating sonic bomb blast echoes across the island. A red, island Hibiscus blows in the balmy air as a US Navy destroyer releases a flaming round of deadly, sophisticated cannon shot.

"The Vieques people are a species in danger," warned Puerto Rican historian, Arturo Melendez Lopez, who stopped in the Valley as part of a national tour introducing his newly published book, "La Batalla de Vieques" (The Battle of Vieques).

Vieques , a small island seven miles off the southeastern coast of Puerto Rico, was once covered with sugar fields, coconut and pineapple groves, and cattle ranges. However, today, bomb craters are the only holes made on the land, as 75 percent of the island is occupied by the US Navy, which uses the eastern half of the island for daily bombing practice.

US and NATO military forces rehearse battle plans off the island's beautiful, but deeply scarred coastlines. The CIA-staffed School of the Americas, which trains military leaders of right-wing, US supported Latin American dictatorships, also uses the island for its "War games". The western half of the island is made up of a Naval base and a massive weapons arsenal containing over 117 ammunition shelters.

Lopez, a professor at the University of Puerto Rico, explained the specific historical factors that brought the US to virtually complete domination over this small island.

During World War II, the US became aware of the need for greater military control over Latin America and a "strategic outpost" in the area. In 1939, said Lopez, Hitler sent troops to Brazil to consolidate a facist coup. On their return, they met and defeated the US Navy, which prompted then US Secretary of the Navy, Leahy, who was soon to be appointed Governor of Puerto Rico, to propose the establishment of a military base on the small island.

In 1941, the US Congress authorized the first major expropriation of land, where 66 percent of the island was taken. Thousands of Viequenses were given 24 hours to leave their homes and farmland, with the US military burning what remained.

Although some people "were happy at first" with the military encampment because the base construction created many new jobs. But, according to Lopez, "after one year, many of those people were unemployed. After that, the migration of the Vieques people away from their native land started en masse." Without land or jobs, they went to St. Croix, the Virgin Islands, and Puerto Rico in record numbers. "Vieques lost 35 percent of its people from 1944 to 1950," said Lopez. Today, over 50 percent of the people have left.

Unfortunately for the island's people, said Lopez, a deal was struck from the very beginning with the Puerto Rican political establishment, trading US economic and political support for domination of the island. As an example, in 1961, said Lopez the Governor of Puerto Rico wrote a letter to President Kennedy who was then considering plans to eliminate the whole island population, cautioning that "it would be a problem, raising hell with the Independence movement, but if you do it, I'll go along."

Today in Vieques, because of the military occupation, agricultural production has been eliminated, forcing the island to import all its agricultural and industrial products. The US Navy controls the shortest naval route to Puerto Rico, sending importers along a path three times longer than the Navy's direct route, thereby, driving up the cost of living 25 to 50 percent higher than its larger island neighbor. And most recently, the local trade association announced an even greater hike in import prices, which Lopez predicts will cause a new round of protests on the island.

Because of the military occupation says Lopez, "Unemployment on the island is 60 percent and 80 percent of the people receive food stamps. There are a lot of problems for youth because there is no vocational training. After high school, they must leave the island for education or a job.

Lopez's appearance, which was sponsored by the New York Committee in Support of Vieques, and the Western Mass. Venceremos Brigade, was planned to commemorate the second anniversary of the hanging murder in a federal prison in Tallahasse, Florida, of Angel Rodriguez Cristobal, a leader of protests by Vieques fishermen, and citizens to stop the Navy's domination of the island.

Illustrated by Mitra Samimi

Culture AND Arts

Third World Theater Series Celebrates Fourth Year

By Keith Johnson

Cherie Jimenez/CPF

The Third World Theater Series is a program provided by the University that exhibits and promotes the theatrical works of people of color. The series was founded as a showcase for the theatrical works of non-European peoples, a forum to spark discussion of current issues, and a means to broaden the cultral experience of the entire University community.

The series is one of the most unique programs in the entire country. The series is noted by most Third World theater companies because many of them have been produced by the series. Since its inception four year ago, the series has produced about 30 plays. Of those, two-thirds were professional touring companies. The rest were original area productions featuring students and residents of the five-college community.

Spotlight

The series is coordinated by Roberta Uno Thelwell who is Coordinator of Third World Programing for the Fine Arts Center. Ms. Thelwell graduated from Hampshire College in 1978 and until recently was an advisor in the Student Acitivities Office. She is also known for her work with other projects such as the Duke Ellington Music Series, Solos and Duos Music Series, Black Musicians Conference, and the Bright Moments Music Series, held each Summer.

Many people equate Third World Theater with many of the commercially successful Broadway plays such as "Dreamgirls", "Eubie", "The Wiz", and "Ain't MisBehavin' ". But as Ms. Thelwell stated many of these plays take Black music out of context and create productions that are similar to the old Black minstrel shows. These productions many times exibited many of the old stereotypes of Black people such as fat women and scheming Black men. Many of these plays are also written by white people.

"Maestro", Emmett Sanders of the Blues Machine Photo by Chris Hardin

POETS OF THE STRUGGLE

I Walk in the History of My People

by Chrystos.....

(reprinted from the book "This Bridge Called My Back")

There are women locked in my joints for refusing to speak to the police
My red blood full of those arrested, in flight, shot
My tendons stretched brittle with anger do not look like white roots of peace
In my marrow are hungry faces who live on land the whites don't want
In my marrow women who walk 5 miles every day for water
In my marrow the swollen faces of my people who are not allowed to hunt
to move to be

On the scars on my knee you can see children torn from their families bludgeoned into government schools
You can see through the pins in my bones that we are prisoners of a long war

My knee is so badly wounded no one will look at it
The pus of the past oozes from every pore
The infection has gone on for at least 300 years
My sacred beliefs have been made pencils, names of cities, gas stations
My knee is wounded so badly that I limp constantly
Anger is my crutch
I hold myself upright with it
My knee is wouned
see
How I Am Still Walking

In Cadences and Steel

by Andrew Salkey.....

(For Nicolas Guillen's Eightieth Birthday)

Like the caresses of the sea at our doorstep,
you've seeped richly through the twin slabs,
of our frequently repated doubt and defeat,
never blinking away the squalor of presidencies,
constantly out-staring the approaching muzzle and singing at a pitch deeper than drought.

There, far underground, we hear your early songs,
rising and joining in the rescue of our ranges,
making them sparkle with action and accomplishment and securing their peaks in cadences and steel.

Sing us your songs for as long as mountains last!
Look straight ahead and make the darkness blink!

Reprinted in honor of the 80 yr. old "National Poet" of Cuba, Nicolas Guillen.

Statement from

The Antonio Maceo Brigade

This December 7th marks the anniversary of the death of Antonio Maceo "The Bronze Titan", General and leader of the wars of Cuban Independence against Spain in the 19th century.

During December the Antonio Maceo Brigade will send its 5th Contingent to Cuba in solidarity with the National Liberation Movements in Central America and the Caribbean. This Contingent will send representatives from Amherst, Boston, New York and others cities throught the U.S., as well as Spain, Mexico, Venezuela and Puerto Rico.

The Brigada Antonio Maceo maintains its position on the right to dialogue with Cuba, supports normalizations of diplomatic relations between U.S. and Cuba and demand the end to the U.S. economic Blocade against Cuba and condemns terrorists acts against the Cuban community within the U.S..

Palante with the 5th Contingent of the Brigada Antonio Maceo.

The Black Studies Department, the Black Student Union and Straight Ahead present a panel on:

PERSPECTIVES ON BLACK STUDIES

Monday, December 6
4:00 p.m.
The Gerald S. Penny Center
Amherst College

Sonia Sanchez, poet, author, educator, who will speak on her experience as former chair of the Black Studies Department, Amherst College.

John Bracey, author of numerous works with topics ranging from free Blacks in the American slave system, Blacks in the Abolitionist Movement, Black workers and organized labor, Black sociologists among others, who will speak on "The Politics of the Curriculum: Black Studies and Other Disciplines."

Leslie Cohen, Class of '76, MBA, Columbia, who will speak on "Black Studies and the Business World."

Duke Ellington's Cultural Legacy

An American Musical Tradition Treasured at UMass

by Keith Johnson

The Duke Ellington Music Series is a series of concerts that come to the Fine Arts Center here at UMass. The series brings to the Valley some of the finest Jazz, also called Black Classical music, in the country.

The series was begun in 1979 by the Student Activities Office through the efforts of then student advisor Roberta Uno-Thelwell. In that year a number of Third World arts series were created such as the Third World Theater Series, Solos and Duos Series, and the Bright Moments Series, which takes place during the summer.

At that time funding for the series was sought through numerous student and administrative funding sources. Yet this was a difficult process in trying to fund a series of as high quality as the first which included Jacke MacElean, Mongo Santamaria, Sun Ra, World Saxaphone Quartet and the Beaver Harris-Don Pullen group featuring Ricky Ford.

But with the help of Professor Fred Tillis, of the Music Department and also Director of the Fine Arts Center,the series found a home in the Fine Arts Center. The FAC now sponsors the series which usually consists of about three or four concerts a year. The series has produced the wonderful talents of performers such as Betty Carter, Sonny Rollins, and Carmen McCrae.

Recently, Max Roach has initiated all-star concerts entitled "The Big Six of Jazz." These concerts have brought together such greats as Dizzy Gillespy, Billy Taylor, and Max Roach himself to perform on the same stage. These concerts are benefits for the Fletcher Henderson Memorial Scholarship Fund which has been created to help up and coming Black Classical students.

With the help of FAC programmer Judy Allen, the series hosts one of its concerts every year in conjuction with the Black Musicians Conference, taking place each spring. This year Dexter Gordon will appear on April 14th as a highlight of the conference.

The move of the Duke Ellington music series to the Fine Arts Center is very important for two reasons. One reason is that it raises in the public eye the integrity of Black Classical music, America's truly original musical form, to the same level as European Classical music which regularly appears at the FAC. Another reason is that the series keeps alive the name of one of the greatest Black Classical artists in history inside the very building that many hope will someday immortalize his name, Duke Edward Kennedy Ellington.

The next Duke Ellington Music Series concert will be "The Big Six of Jazz II" featuring Max Roach, Billy Taylor, Slide Hampton, Richard Davis, Jimmy Heath and John Hendricks. The concert will take place this Saturday, December 11 at 8:00 in the Fine Arts Center. For more information contact Roberta Uno-Thelwell at 203 Hasbrook Laboratory or call 545-0190.

Max Roach part of The Big Six of Jazz.

Koko Taylor Shakes The Hangar

by Chris Hardin

The Blues audience in the Valley should definitely not overlook the Hangar One in Hadley as a showcase of some of the finest talent available. Recently, they featured Johnny Copeland, and last Thursday, Koko Taylor and her Blues Machine continued our education in this Black American musical tradition. Koko Taylor is one of the top blues singers today and her Blues Machine is a tight ensemble featuring Maestro (Emmett Sanders) on lead guitar, Bay Williams on bass, Vince Chappelle on drums and newcomer Teddy Royal on rhythm guitar.

Koko began with "Let the Good Times Roll" and they did right through the first set with tunes such as "Tryin' to Make a Living", "Hey Bartender", "Walking the Back Streets", "You Can Have My Husband", and "Sure Had a Wonderful Time Last Night". The second set included "Somethin' Strange Goin' On", "I Got What It Takes", "Sweet Home Chicago", "I'd Rather Go Blind", and "Wang Dang Doodle" which has been her theme song since the mid-sixties.

Koko Taylor and her Blues Machine are in fine form these days and no one in her audience can sit still after she takes the stage. Her music is somethimes called Chicago-style blues, but she says it is as much Koko-style and Memphis-style, from her birthplace. "When I first came to Chicago, I sang then the way I do now", she has said. She also has said, "I just go ahead and do what I'm doing--straightforward Blues".

Koko will be appearing at Jonathan Swift's in Cambridge on December 9th.

Photo: by Chris Hardin

Koko Taylor shakin' the Hangar

KWANZA CELEBRATION

Date: Dec. 17 at: Yvonne's, New Africa House UMass. Dinner: 6pm. Entertainment 7pm.
Cost :$3.50

Music: Eshu; Holly

Indian Dance: Sujatha Sastry

Songs: Martha Rodrigues

Story-telling: Bheki Langa

Kwanza Ceremony; Piñata

For more info. contact: 545-0883

Sponsors: Third World Women's Program of Everywoman's Center; Third World Women's Task Force; Che-Lumumba School.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

THE BIG SIX OF JAZZ II

MAX ROACH
BILLY TAYLOR SLIDE HAMPTON
RICHARD DAVIS
JIMMY HEATH
JOHN HENDRICKS

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 11
8:00 P.M. FINE ARTS CENTER CONCERT HALL

FIVE COLLEGE BLACK STUDIES SEMINAR SERIES

Presents A Panel Discussion

STUDENTS LOOK AT BLACK STUDIES

Panelists:
Rodney Williams, Amherst College
Greg Anderson, Hampshire College
Laverne Morris, Mt. Holyoke College
Mary Jo Newborn, Smith College
Philip Pasley, University of Mass.

Commentators:
Leslie Cohen, Amherst College
Paul Barrows, University of Mass.

Thursday, December 9, 1982

Gerald C. Penny Memorial Center, Amherst College

7:30 PM

Liberation Film Series

The Northampton Committee on Central America is pleased to announce the debut of it's new film series, "Liberation Film Series" which opened at the Pleasant Street Theater in Northampton. The film will cost $1.50 and proceeds will go to the continuation of the series. For the time being limited seating is available as we are using the downstairs theatre.Following is the proposed schedule of films. All films begin at 2 pm.

12- "The Westfield Strike"- a videomade by a local film maker on the Sterling Radiator strike. The film gained national attention for the strikers.

19- "Decision to Win - The First Fruits"- this film presents an engrossing portrait of life in the province of Morazan, El Salvador a stronghold of the Ferabund Martí para la Liberación Nacional (F.M.L.N.)

Lecture by Mr. Dennis Regier

On December 9, the Western Mass. section of the Young Workers Liberation League (YWLL) is sponsoring a lecture by Mr. Dennis Regier, who will speak on the topic of "Peace and Intervention : Special Focus on the Invasion of Lebanon".

Until recently, Denis Regier was the YWLL's representative to, and Executive Committee member of, the multi-million strong World Federation of Democratic Youth, based in Budapest, Hungray.

Last month, Dennis Regier took part in an all-Eroupean Youth Conference, which was specifically focused on the special crisis in Lebanon. There he was able to meet at length with Lebanese and Palestinian youth. In addition, Regier has within the past two years traveled to Lebanon and Israel on four different occaisions, to meet with leaders from various political and progressive youth organizations.

This activity will take place on,

Thursday December 9th
Campus Center room 163
At 8:00 PM

With a cultural event to precede speech!

BLACK MASS COMMUNICATIONS

Student Union, Room 662, University of Massachusetts
Amherst MA 01003, (413) 545-2426

FALL SCHEDULE

DAY		NAME	SHOW NAME	TIME
Sunday		Les Correia	Soft n Easy	2:00-6:00am
		Rev. Pearson	Glory Road To Gospel	6:00-10:00am
Monday		More Music	BMCP	7:00-6:00pm
		Ken Johnston	On Air Live-Jazz	6:00-9:00pm
		Gus Martins	"	"
		Nahoghany	Free As The Wind	12:15-9:00pm
		Merritt Anthony	BMCP	3:00-5:30pm
	*	People's Perspective	BMCP	6:00-7:00pm
		Concepto Latino	BMCP	7:00-10:00pm
Tuesday		The General	BMCP	12:15-3:00pm
		Elfott-Andrew	Urban Contemporary	10:00-2:00am
Wednesday		Theresa M	BMCP	6:00-9:00pm
Thursday		Rev. Pearson	Glory Road To Gospel	2:00-6:00am
		Concepto Latino	BMCP	6:00-7:00pm
		D.R.	BMCP	3:00-5:30pm
		Kari Mjiiri	Pan Afrique	10:00-2:00am
Friday		Mark Elliot	BMCP	2:00-6:00pm
		Mark Semedo	New Jazz Experience	6:00-9:00pm
		Concepto Latino	BMCP	9:00-12:00mid
		Carl Lowman	Rhythm Section	12:15-3:00pm
Saturday		Reports In Color	w/Bettina Henry	6:00-7:00pm
		Daddy Neil	Funk n Thangs	7:00-10:00pm
		Frank Oglesby	Frankie D's Odyssey	10:00-2:00am

KEY: * Public Affairs
 Rev. Pearson included; not a part of BMCP
 News

TOTAL HOURS OF PROGRAMMING: 68½

Keep on listening to BMCP on WMUA, 91.1 FM and help us keep Black Music alive!

Sonia Sanchez: December 6th, 4 p.m.

Sonia Sanchez is the author of ten books, including "Homecoming", "It's A New Day", "Love Poems" and most recently, "I've Been A Woman: New And Selected Poems". One of the first widely recognized Black women playwrights, Ms. Sanchez's play "Sister Son/ji" gained international recognition and was performed by Joseph Papp's Public Theatre in New York. She is also a contributing editor of "Black Scholar", and edited "We Be Word Sorcerers: 25 Stories By Black Americans", and the anthology "360° Of Blackness Comin' At You". Recipient of a National Endowment of the Arts Award for 1978-79, Ms. Sanchez is an Associate Professor at Temple University and presently a member of the Literature Panel of the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts.

Sponsored b y the Department of Black Studies, Black Student Union and Straight Ahead.

ATENCIÓN ESTUDIANTES HISPANOS

Te gustaría saber cómo la política de Reagan afecta a los hispanos en los Estados Unidos?

El martes 7 de diciembre se estará ofreciendo una intersante charla con el Sr. Felix Arroyo

Sitio: Campus Center Room 174-176
Hora : 6:00 PM

Esta actividad sera auspiciada por la organización AHORA

All unsigned editorials represent the views and opinions of NUMMO Staff

Announcements policy: All announcements must be submitted in writing by the Friday before date of issue.

NUMMO Staff

Roxana Bell	Co-Editor
Angela Brown	Co-Editor
Brynne Clarke	Lay-Out Editor
Mitra Samini	Graphics Editor
John Wright	Photo Editor
Jennifer Bayne	Researcher
Dunna Davis	Business Manager
Angela Siscamanis	Typesetter
Deanna McRae	Administrative Assistant
Keith Johnson	Reporter
Tracey Bayant	Reporter
Max Senior	Photographer
Ed Cohen	Photographer
Sheila Smith	Photographer
Chris Hardin	Photographer

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian

Volume CXII, Issue 62 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Tuesday, December 7, 1982

Freshman basketball player stabbed

By BRIAN C. MURPHY and DIANE KADZIS
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts basketball player was lying in serious condition last night in the intensive care unit of Cooley Dickinson Hospital after being stabbed Sunday night, while the alledged suspect is in police custody at the Hampshire County House of Correction.

Arthur J. (A.J.) Wynder, 18, a freshman guard on the basketball team and a resident of Mackimmie Dormitory, was stabbed in the lower abdomen about 10:00 p.m. Sunday in the area of Kennedy Dormitory on Massachusetts Avenue, according to police reports.

Wynder's father, Arthur Wynder Sr., said due to a heavy loss of blood, Wynder underwent surgery at Cooley Dickinson around midnight Sunday to determine whether internal damage had been done. With no indications of severed arteries, Wynder's father said his son emerged from surgery in less than an hour.

On the basis of a description provided by two eyewitnesses, Amherst police apprehended Micoyan N. Von Dyke, 19, a resident of new Bedford visiting UMass, Sunday near Fairfield Avenue and held him in custody until UMass police arrived to make the arrest at 11:08 p.m.

At his arraignment yesterday in Hampshire County District Court, Von Dyke entered a plea of innocent to criminal charges of assault and battery, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and assault and battery with intent to commit murder. A $10,000 cash assurity bail was set for the suspect until Monday when a pre-trial conference is scheduled.

David Angier, the assigned prosecuting attorney from Hampshire County's District Attorney's Office, said the stabbing resulted from a disagreement on the part of Von Dyke concerning a relationship with a mutual female friend of both Wynder and Von Dyke. Angier said Von Dye allegedly voiced a plan to stab Wynder that same night and contacted Wynder to meet with him.

The two went for a walk during which Angier said Von Dyke allegedly stabbed Wynder in the abdomen.

"As far as officials know, the attack was unprovoked (by Wynder)," said Art Clifford, director of the University's News Bureau.

When reached for comment last night, Wynder's father said, "A.J.'s condition is very good and his vital signs are good. He was in good spirits today (yesterday)."

Wynder said a lot of things went through his son's mind during the course of the incident. "But," he said, "A.J. is a very calm person. He knows that it's one of those things that happen in life."

Although Wynder has played only 14 minutes and scored no points in this season's first two games, Tom McLaughlin, coach of the basketball team, said his ball club is not onsidering the incident in terms of basketball alone.

"I think the world of A.J.," said McLaughlin. "The thing that shook me was when I saw him before the operation and I saw the hole in his stomach and it felt as if the guy had stabbed me....We (the team and it's coaches) are all family and it hurts."

Wynder, a six-foot-two freshman guard, was recruited from St. Agnes High School in Rockville Center, New York, where he was named All-Long Island and All-State. In addition to his basketball achievements, Wynder has also won the New York state high jump championship.

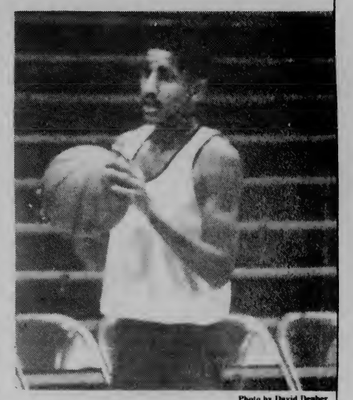

Photo by David Dreher

University of Massachusetts basketball player A.J. Wynder practicing before the UMass-Harvard game last weekend.

House vote may come up this week on financial aid bill passed by Senate

By HANNAH HOSOM
Collegian Staff

An additional $25 million in state financial aid could become a reality if passed by the Massachusetts House of Representatives over the next few days. Students are being encouraged by University of Massachusetts campus organizers to let legislators know they support the proposals.

A rally at 12:30 this afternoon outside the Student Union Building and a drive to get students to call their legislators is being organized by Students Advocating Financial Aid (SAFA) and the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) Public Policy Team. The efforts are in response to an announcement by State House sources of an attempt to push the bill through before the legislative session ends in three weeks.

"It's an example of student input into the political process," said SAFA co-president James Quinn. "We're trying to get students organized to call friends — a network, in effect."

The legislation was passed by the state Senate on Nov. 8 and is undergoing consideration now by the House. If passed, $14 million would be added to the General Scholarship Fund, which has not seen an increase in 10 years. The remaining money would be distributed to programs for work-study funding, graduate scholarships, matching grant scholarships and aid to low-income single parents who are students. The proposed legislation was made by Sen. John Olver, D-Amherst and is being supported in the House by Rep. Jim Collins, D-Amherst.

"Both Collins and Olver said the bill stands a fairly good chance of passing," said Director of Financial Aid Arthur Jackson.

"Our office and the Chancellor's office have also been lobbying with the new governor, Dukakis, and Governor King," Jackson said.

If passed, the money would help make up some of the deficits in higher education funding left by reductions on the federal level, Jackson said. The University of Massachusetts at Amherst is the largest recipient in the state scholarship program, and would be receiving a substantial increase in funds, Jackson said.

Members of SAFA are also expanding the group's efforts state-wide today and tomorrow, in an example of "instant mobilization," Quinn said.

"We really want to show that students can be effective in this, and let representatives know students are concerned with this issue," Quinn said.

"We urge students who can't attend the rally to come to the senate offices (in room 420 of the Student Union). The phones will be there to call representatives all day Tuesday and Wednesday (today and tomorrow)," Quinn said.

"This is an issue of paramount concern," he said.

Collegian photo by Tom Kudis

Joseph Montgomery checks out a grader being used in construction near the Graduate Research Complex as his father and brother look on.

Gnomon walk out settled but store's building lease cut

By JOHN BROBST
Collegian Staff

Employees and management of the Gnomon Copy Center signed a one-year contract on Friday, ending a three-month-old strike, but Gnomon may be forced to close its doors next month anyway.

Gnomon lost its lease with landlord Leverett Roberts of Amherst. Roberts is not expected to allow Gnomon to stay in the Boltwood Walk store, according to Gnomon owner Roland Wetherbee.

"I think he wants to use the space for storage," Wetherbee said.

The Gnomon workers, part of Electrical Workers Local 264, voted eight-to-one to accept an agreement that offers employees an average pay increase of 35 cents an hour. Both sides will also drop the charges they have filed with the National Labor Relations Board.

Striking workers will be rehired according to seniority beginning today, Wetherbee said. The rehiring schedule will depend on how quickly business recovers. None of the replacement workers will be let go.

"The strike has been settled but Roberts decided he didn't want to renew the lease," Wethebee said. "We came up with a contract but now we don't have a business."

"It was a good thing, it needed to be done," said former striking employee Stephen Roy. "It took a year and a half to negotiate this contract. I'm sorry if it comes to this, but we had to do it."

"I don't think we'll accept any blame," Roy said.

"Roberts didn't like the adverse publicity the strike was giving him," said former striking employee Tobi Saisa. "I think this was an unnecessary move."

Both Saisa and Roy said they would go on public assistance if the shop folded.

The entire Gnomon staff walked off the job Sept. 8 to protest what they saw as a delay in opening contract talks with Gnomon owners Wetherbee and Catherine Iannacchino, who bought the shop in August.

For about one year previously, the union had negotiated unsuccessfully with John Sytek, vice-president of the Cambridge-based Gnomon Corporation.

Wetherbee and Iannacchino estimated that the strike cut business by 90 percent. In addition, the strike left them with as much as $20,000 in unpaid bills.

When asked if he felt the strikers wanted to work, Wetherbee said "Sometimes I wonder. I think the cold drove them away."

World and national news

Government to pursue student loan defaulters starting with own workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government will garnish the pay or pensions of 46,860 current or former employees if they do not meet demands to repay $68 million in defaulted student loans, Education Secretary T.H. Bell said yesterday.

Bell said it "is the beginning, the kickoff of a new game in collecting on our loans." The deadbeats on the federal payroll are among 800,000 ex-students who owe the government $1.1 billion in loans.

Bell found the defaulters by using a computer to check the Social Security numbers and last names of 10.3 million past or present civil servants and military employees against a list of student loan defaulters.

The crackdown follows enactment two months ago of legislation authored by Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., that for the first time gives the government the authority to garnish up to 15 percent of the pay of student loan defaulters on its payroll.

Percy, joining Bell at a news conference, said the large number of defaulters in the government's employ "is really a slap in the face to every taxpayer in the country."

Bell also noted the defaulters were cutting into the amount of money available for loans to current students.

The computer match showed 46,860 present or former federal employees defaulted on 50,393 loans, some skipping out on more than one loan.

The loans, some dating back to the early 1960's, were made under four heavily subsidized programs: Federally Insured Student Loans, Guaranteed Student Loans, and National Defense Student Loans.

The crackdown comes almost five years after a computer match by President Jimmy Carter's administration uncovered 17,657 defaulters on the government payroll, most in the military. Education Department officials say about half the military workers and two-thirds of the civilians were convinced then to pay off the debts.

Bell said his department mailed letters yesterday warning defaulters to work out a payment schedule in 60 days or, in 60 more days, face deductions of 15 percent of their biweekly paychecks. With a court order, federal prosecutors can garnish up to 25 percent of a federal worker's pay.

Bell said he also will dock pensioners' checks.

"The federal government means to collect money that its employees borrowed in good faith from citizens of this country," he said.

Percy said people who feel the action is "too tough" should recall the case of a defaulter uncovered in a Senate hearing last July. He said the man, making $36,000 yearly in a federal job, claimed "financial hardships" in refusing to repay a $4,000 loan but was later found to have bought an $18,000 sports car.

AP Laserphoto

All is quiet at the railyard of Bueno Aires Constitution Station due to a 24-hour general strike yesterday protesting the military government's economic and social policies. The strike halted nearly all transportation.

House votes to drop Sunday closing laws amid protests

BOSTON — Despite church opposition, including the Massachusetts Catholic Conference, the House enacted legislation yesterday allowing retail stores to operate from noon Sundays year-round.

The vote, following spirited debate, was 85-53. It heads now for a final test in the Senate — where it was approved Friday 20-8 — before it can go to Gov. Edward J. King.

The legislation essentially extends for the full year the present "Blue Laws" exemption allowing retail activity on Sundays between Thanksgiving and Christmas. Package stores are not included.

The proposal requires time-and-a-half pay for many workers in establishments with more than seven employees and no one can be forced to accept work on Sundays.

Leaders of the four Roman Catholic dioceses in Massachusetts opposed the bill, as had spokesmen for other denominations.

Kennedys appear in court, divorce to be final in a year

BARNSTABLE — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and his estranged wife, Joan, filed for divorce yesterday, agreeing to share custody of their youngest child and settling on an undisclosed alimony and child support payments, a spokesman said.

The two appeared in Barnstable Probate Court yesterday afternoon before Judge Shirley Lewis and the divorce will become final in a year, ending a 24 year marriage that they said suffered an "irretrievable breakdown."

"Under the agreement we will share legal custody of Patrick, who is 15 years old and who attends school near Boston, where I will maintain my primary residence," Mrs. Kennedy said in a statement released yesterday by her New York attorneys.

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Michelle Murray
Copy Editor — Michael Mahoney
Layout Technician — Kelley Riley
Photo Technician — Michael Margolis
Night Graphics Technician — Sam Levitt
Composition — Adrianne Dufour, Laurie Frank
Terri Cooper, Sheryl Silver, Maria Cahillane
Marianne Walsh, Kathie Wells, Alyssa Rusiecki
Becky Robins, Julie Marcinek, Lynn Eisenberg
Joy McCarthy

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $18 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

Digest

by the Associated Press

Arab troops caught smuggling weaponry by U.S. Customs

NEW YORK — Customs agents confiscated more than 60 weapons, including two submachine guns, from 14 members of the United Arab Emirates armed services leaving Kennedy International Airport for Switzerland, authorities said yesterday.

Port Authority police stopped the 14 Arabs for questioning Sunday night after the barrel of a semiautomatic rifle protruded from a suitcase that had popped open, according to Sgt. Edward Garrett of the central police desk.

A government permit is required to take a gun out of the United States. The Arabs did not have the proper permits, but were not arrested because they carried "A-2" visas, giving them special status as members of a foreign government's military, Garrett said.

Customs agents, searching 48 pieces of luggage, found more than 60 weapons and 10,000 rounds of ammunition, including two Uzi submachine guns, an M-1 carbine, several rifles and more than 50 handguns.

The Arabs had bills of sale for the weapons. They allegedly were bought for personal use, "But I don't think there's a deer season in the Arab Republic," Garrett said.

The Arabs had arrived at Kennedy on a flight from Los Angeles. They were booked on a Swiss Air flight to Zurich, but missed it when they were detained by police about 8 p.m.

They said they had been attending a private helicopter training school in Long Beach, Calif.

State board favors purchase of Boston garage, auditorium

BOSTON — The Massachusetts Convention Center Authority endorsed legislation yesterday that would allow the state to pay Boston $40 million for the Hynes Auditorium and the Boston Common parking garage.

The bill was endorsed even though appraisals of the Hynes have not yet been received. But Robert P. Moncreiff, counsel to the authority, said the appraised price is expected to be about $32 million, leaving about $8 million as compensation for the garage.

Legislation approved earlier to ease Boston's financial problems, the so-called Tregor bill, provided that the state buy the auditorium from Boston and turn it into a major convention center. It also provides for a state takeover of the garage.

Francis X. Joyce, executive director of the authority, said he expects Gov. Edward J. King to file the payment legislation this week.

According to Moncreiff, $32 million would be dedicated to a special city fund to pay off bonds Boston sold to pay for court-ordered tax abatements.

Heavyweight salaries drawn by Senate workers revealed

WASHINGTON — Some 165 Senate employees earn more than $50,000 a year, according to the most recent report on salaries issued by the office of the Senate Secretary — and that doesn't include the 100 senators who earn $60,662 annually.

Among the higher paid of the Senate's 6,700 employees are the seven "reporters of debate" who make stenographic notes of everything that is said on the Senate floor for inclusion in the daily Congressional Record. They each earn $57,000 annually.

The "keeper of stationery," by contrast, makes a mere $50,304.

Most senators have at least one aide earning over $50,000. Some have two or three. Two of the 39 Senate employees assigned to Vice President George Bush earn $55,186 each.

The chief Senate barber makes far less, drawing a salary of $28,993. But that doesn't include trips.

A private, first class, on the Capitol Hill Police Force can expect to earn $23,160 — about half the salary of the director of Senate parking, who makes $45,744.

The "Senate upholsterer" draws a $27,030 salary.

Amy Carter, daughter of former President Jimmy Carter, earned $1,251.38 for the two months last summer she was a Senate page. And Ann Haldeman, daughter of former Nixon chief-of-staff H.R. Haldeman, is paid $28,993 a year as a Senate door attendant.

Strike settlement reached, R.I. housewives back on job

SMITHFIELD, R.I. — Twelve of 15 housewives who went on strike because their husband weren't giving them enough respect or affection said yesterday they reached agreement with their spouses after the men made concessions.

"He's giving me so much attention now I don't know what to do," said Terry Waterman, 20, after coming to terms with her husband Jim, 24. "He's complimenting me right and left."

"They're going to help out around the house more," Brenda Larkin said yesterday. "They promised to pay more attention to us and communicate more."

As a child cried in the background, Mrs. Larkin said the change in her husband since the strike began Friday has been startling.

"It was really strange seeing him doing things around the house," she said. "I just sat around and watched.

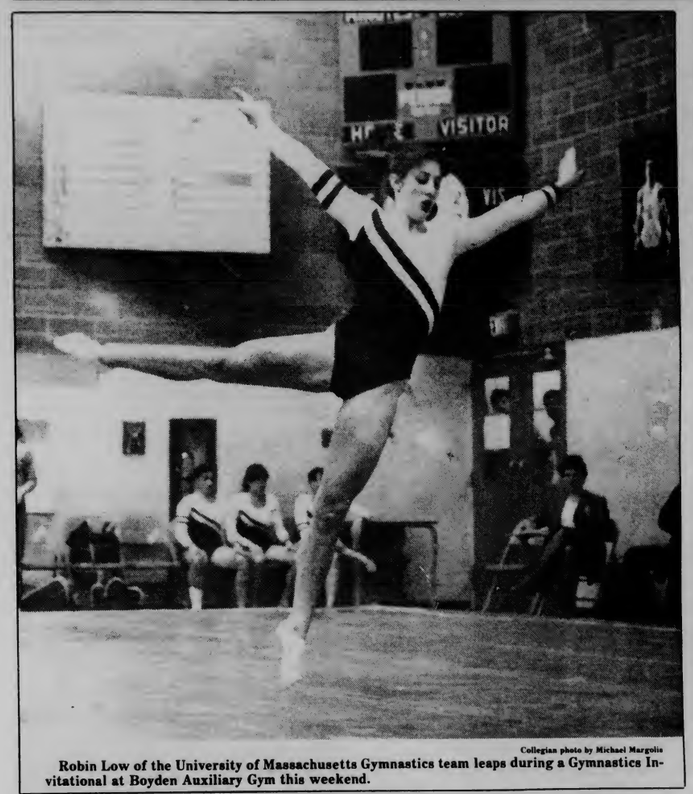
Among the concessions some of the husbands agreed to, Mrs. Larkin said, were to pay more attention to their wives when they were home and to clean up after themselves.

"Things like dirty socks and shoes left around the house — no more of that," Mrs. Larkin said.

The husbands were not immediately available for comment on the concessions.

But the three-day strike did not bring peace to the all the households involved.

"It's a stalemate," said Gloria Gangi, the group's spokeswoman. "We haven't had five minutes to talk about it since this whole thing began."



Collegian photo by Michael Margolis

Robin Low of the University of Massachusetts Gymnastics team leaps during a Gymnastics Invitational at Boyden Auxiliary Gym this weekend.

Budget trimming may provide UMass students with reduced fee increases

By MARK J. WELCH
Collegian Staff

Fee increases next year may be smaller than last year's increases as a result of budget guidelines released yesterday by the University of Massachusetts Office of Planning and Budget.

Two important budget items added last year — fringe benefits and full costing — will not be required in this year's budget, according to the guidelines.

Fringe benefits refer to an assessment of about 14 percent of each state employee's wages to pay for benefits provided. Full-costing was a two percent reserve established last year to pay future increases resulting from expenses expected to be charged to various trust funds, such as Housing Services, Food Services and the Campus Center, and to pay for services provided by other trust funds, like Physical Plant.

"We're certainly pleased by the guidelines," said Ann Koski, financial manager of Housing Services. "It looks good, but I wasn't pleased with the deadline."

Some trust funds received the guidelines late last week or yesterday, but because printing will take a week, most campus fee-based trust funds will not receive the guidelines until next week.

All trust fund managers must submit their requests by Jan. 7, one month from today.

Elimination of the full-costing reserve set aside last year will mean a savings of about $100,000 for Housing Services. The elimination of the fringe benefit requirement could mean a savings of $500,000 more. These items were budgeted last year for the current year's fees, but will not be set aside next year.

Full costing and fringe benefits may be reinstated later, however, and might result in large increases in future years.

The budgeting guidelines require that trust fund financial managers figure inflation at seven percent and pay increases at 6.5 percent. Contracts for pay increases have not yet been negotiated, however, so that the 6.5 percent figure may change.

After budgets are submitted on Jan. 7th, they will be reviewed by the vice-chancellors dealing with each department, the staff of the Office of Planning and Budget, the Undergraduate Student Senate Rents and Fees Committee, the Faculty Senate Program and Budget Council, the University Executive Staff, UMass President David Knapp, and the UMass Board of Trustees.

The budgets will determine fees to be charged during the 1983-84 academic year.

Student financial assistance proposal may be funded by Bottle Bill revenue

By KEVIN BOWE
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts Senate passed a bill that will increase the amount of student aid by between $10 and 25 million late yesterday.

The money will come from the unclaimed five cent deposit consumers will be placing on bottles and cans under the recently passed Bottle Bill. The legislation also calls for the delay in the implementation of the Bottle Bill until March 31. The Bottle Bill was originally scheduled to take effect Jan. 1983.

This represents the second attempt by the senate in as many months to create a new pool of additional student aid," said Stan Rosenburg, an aid to Sen. John Olver, D-Amherst, who has been a leading proponent of increased student aid and the Bottle Bill.

"It's important for students to let their legislators know if they support this concept," he said.

Approximately 20 percent of the bottles and cans with a five and ten cent deposit are not returned by the consumer. If no action is taken by the Legislature this money will go to the store owners.

Under the proposed legislation, which now goes to the House Ways and Means Committee for approval, all unclaimed deposits will be earmarked for student assistance.

The extension of the Bottle Bill has long been pushed by the opponents of the law. They advocate extending the implementation well into next year.

"About 90 percent of the beverage industry is ready to go (with the implementation of the Bottle Bill). The other 10 percent claim they need more time," Rosenburg said.

"It would be a shame to start off on the wrong foot," he said in explaining why some of the proponents favor the extension of the Bottle Bill.

Popular study spot may be location for new computers

By DAVID SUMMERSBY
Collegian Staff

The harsh clatter of computer printouts could be drowning out the sounds of silence and the passive listening of tunes in the Music Listening Room if the Campus Center administration decides to go through with plans of converting the Music Room in the building to a new Computer Center.

Up until last week, members of the Campus Center Board of Governors (BOG) were very keen on the idea of using room 178 Campus Center as a home for the new Computer Center but Nov. 30 the administration came up with a decision that room 178 would not be used and instead recommended the Music Room for a location.

This word caused immediate outrage within the BOG because as Ron Keefe, BOG Chair, said "the Music Room is a very popular place for students to study and the loss of it would hurt many students since studying space on campus is already scarce.

In an attempt to combat the administration's decision, members of the BOG today will be petitioning students in the Campus Center to make people aware of exactly what the administration is proposing and try and get support from the student body that can be presented to the administration, to choose a room for the Computer Center that is not currently used often.

"We want to make people aware that the administration is trying to take the Music Room away from students. Why take it away from students when it is used so well? Why not give us a room that is underutilized?" Keefe said.

The BOG today will be putting up signs in the Music Room that will explain what is going on and petitions will be available in the BOG Office, the Music Room and from BOG members, who will be circulating around the building throughout the day.

"Regardless of whether room 178 is used or not we think that the Music Room should not be used," Gerry Quill, BOG building operations coordinator said.

"We want what the students want and thats what the petition is for. We think that because the room is so popular students will be against it," he said.

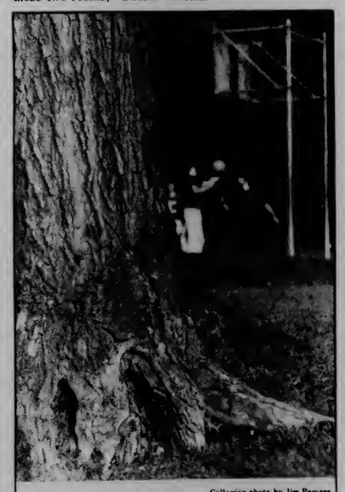
"The enormous size of the sign-in log at the desk of the Music Room is proof in itself," said another BOG member.

Keefe said that the board is all in favor of having computers in the building and in favor of placing it in some space that is not heavily utilized. The BOG's primary choice is room 178 because it is underutilized and has computer outlets already installed that would save money. Now that the suggestion has been rejected they are willing to look for another location that is not used often.

"We want computers in the building and we want student input in the room choosing decision. "I don't think the decision should be made by the administration," Keefe said.

In another response to the issue, administrative Assistant Thad Dabrowski, who made the recommendation to Director of the Campus Center Bill Harris that room 178 not be used, said that the Campus Center cannot afford to give up valuable meeting space which is important space for student and client use.

"The decision not to use room 178 as a Computer Center was made for management reasons. Rooms 178 and 177 are the only two small meeting rooms left and they are used heavily. There are four scheduling units per day in those two rooms," Dabrowski said.



Collegian photo by Jim Powers

Spreading tree roots frame a game of basketball near University Apartments.

LAGNAF 83

CRAFT FAIR
PHOTOS
JEWELRY
CERAMICS
PAINTINGS
LEATHER GOODS
GLASS · SHEEPSKIN
AND LOTS MORE
WED. DEC. 8
ALL DAY
ON THE
CAMPUS CENTER
CONCOURSE

Results of childcare survey released by Town Manager

By ANN CARRNS
Collegian Staff

The Amherst Town Manager's Office released last night to the town Selectmen the first figures on the response rate for the childcare needs and attitude survey mailed on Nov. 16.

The overall rate of response was 48.9 percent as of Dec. 1. That figure reflects 412 surveys returned out of a total of 941 mailed and is viewed by the office as showing "a great deal of interest in the subject" by the respondents.

Approximately 600 residents received the survey, with some people receiving two questionnaires. This was because all residents were asked to respond to questions concerning attitudes toward childcare, but only people with children were asked about their childcare needs.

The survey divided needs questions into five categories, including elementary, infant, toddler, pre-school and kindergarten.

The greatest response was received from parents of kindergarten and elementary aged children, with a rate of 49 percent each.

The lowest response was from parents of infants and pre-school aged children, with rates of 33 and 38 percent, respectively.

The survey was designed to evaluate childcare needs in Amherst and the data from it will be used to determine what role, if any, the town will play in that area.

A second survey will be mailed to those who did not respond next week, according to Assistant Town Manager Chris Hart. Hart coordinated the survey along with the Amherst Committee in Childcare and childcare consultant Deborah Kearney.

The selectmen also approved an amendment of the town's traffic rules which increases the maximum amount tow operators can charge for storing cars that they tow.

The amendment increases the maximum charge for any 24 hour period to $10.00 from $2.00 and to $5.00 from $1.50 for any period less than 24 hours.

Attention Collegian Staff

There will be an important Collegian staff meeting at 7 p.m. tomorrow in the Collegian newsroom. This meeting is mandatory for all Collegian staff members — personnel who are paid and writers and photographers who have attained staff status. This is an important meeting. Several topics, including the selection of a new Editor-in-Chief, will be discussed. Anyone who cannot attend should contact their editor or manager immediately.

MARJORIE ALBRECHT, CLASS OF 1983 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

DeMugshot of the Month from DeKuyper.

DeKuyper toasts you for winning this month's DeMugshot contest. It wouldn't have happened without that beautiful face of yours. Or without the discovery of the delicious taste of DeMugshot. That shot of DeKuyper's smooth Peppermint Schnapps chased by your favorite beer.

So go ahead, celebrate your DeMugshot victory. And start looking around campus for other zany people. Chances are they've also discovered something very new and exciting. DeMugshot from DeKuyper.

DeKuyper® Peppermint Schnapps.

Peppermint Schnapps. 60 Proof. John DeKuyper & Son. Elmwood Place, Ohio.

Ski Now - Pay Later

UMASS SKI CLUB

Aspen, Colorado
SKI WEEK Jan 8-15

This Deluxe Vacation Includes:

- ☐ Round Trip Air, Scheduled Non-Stop Service from Boston, NYC, Phila. or Wash. to Denver
- ☐ Round Trip Bus Transfers to Aspen
- ☐ Deluxe Slope-Side Accommodations for 7 Nights, Tax Included
- ☐ Six-Day Lift Ticket Good at Aspen Mountain, Snowmass, and Buttermilk

Deluxe Slopeside Shadow Mountain Condominiums
Featuring fully equipped kitchen, maid service, fireplace, color TV, heated pool, sauna, and skiing out your door.

$659 per person

or

Woodstone Hotel Package
Located right on the mountain next to the lift, featuring: heated pool, jacuzzi, sauna, maid service, apres ski atmosphere.

$599 per person

Sign-Up Now
Ski Club Office
430A Student Union
5-3437

SAME DAY COLOR PHOTO PROCESSING

FILM IN BY 10:00 AM
BEAUTIFUL COLOR PRINTS OUT BY 4:00 PM

The Foto Factory
A division of HALLMARK COLOR LABS processors to the professionals

Hours: Mon.–Fri., 8–6 / Sat., 8–Noon
257 TRIANGLE STREET IN AMHERST

NEED HELP WITH YOUR STUDENT LOAN?

If you've attended college on a Guaranteed Student Loan or a National Direct Student Loan made after October 1, 1975, consider spending a couple of years in the Army.

If you train for certain specialties, the government will release you from 1/3 of your indebtedness (or $1,500, whichever is greater) for each year of active duty.

Obviously, a three-year enlistment cancels 100% of your debt. But if you sign up for the Army's exclusive two-year enlistment option, we'll still cancel 2/3 of your debt.

Plus, you may be eligible for generous educational incentives.

To find out how to serve your country and get out of debt, call the number below.

In Northampton call 584-2157

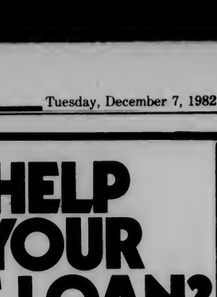
In other areas consult the Yellow Pages under "Recruiting"

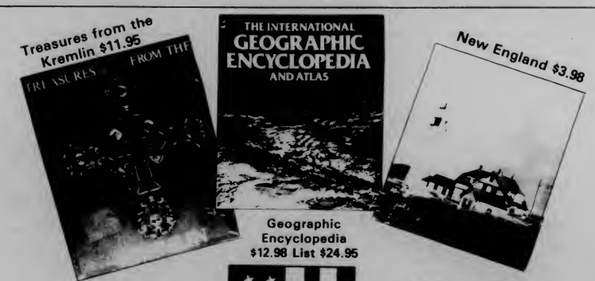
ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

A Christmas Checklist

Plan ahead now so you won't forget anyone

Some of our best ideas for Christmas have just been shelved.





Geographic Encyclopedia $12.98 List $24.95

The Harder They Come $2.98 List $12.50

The Blue and The Grey $9.98

Insects $7.98 List $22.50

There are hundreds of subjects to choose from. We have everything from the most timeless classics to the most recent best sellers.

And wait 'til you see our prices. We have bargains that are just as impressive as the selection.

So bring your Xmas list to the University Store. Some of our best ideas are just waiting to be picked up.

Open M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4
Open
Wed 9-9

Located in the Campus Center

UNIVERSITY STORE

Family Resale Clothing
ONCE MORE WITH FEELING
Quality clothing and gift ideas at low prices for the holidays
Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant
Amherst, MA.
549-3772

Can we build one for you?
ONION BAGEL
LOX
CREAM CHEESE
ONION BAGEL
Design your favorite bagel sandwich and bring us the blueprint - we'll build it to exact specs. We're the bagel engineers at
THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN
Amherst Carriage Shops 549-6314

BLUE WALL
CAMPUS CENTER AT UMASS
Presenting
FIRST ANNUAL United Way
BENEFIT CONCERT
THURS. DEC. 9
Andy May
AND FRIENDS
ARMSTRONG BROTHERS
THE BIZ
THE VALENTINES
FANTINIS
RACK-A-DISC
Sound By Klondike
ALL AGES WELCOME!
*No Alcohol will be served
Juice Bar & Pizza Available
SPONSORED BY:
CAMPUS CENTER FOOD SERVICES
CAMPUS CENTER PRINT SHOP
UPC • GPC • BOG
$2.00 COVER CHARGE

BARGAIN BASEMENT SALE
Selected Groups of
Mugs
Cards
Cubes
Games
Frames
Candles
Buttons
Posters
Puzzles
Tin Boxes
Plant Pots
Stationary
Rubber Stamps
Plastic Boxes
many other items. . .
ALL ITEMS SUBJECT TO PRIOR SALE
ALL SALES FINAL!
on the concourse
THIS WEEK ONLY
MONDAY thru FRIDAY
Tuesday 33% off original price
Wednesday 50% off original price
Thursday 75% off original price
Friday 90% of original price
cashier will take the mark-down at the register
UNIVERSITY STORE

EDITORIAL/OPINION

A crucial time for financial aid

The future of many University of Massachusetts students may hinge on two important votes to be taken in the State House in the next three weeks.

Two financial aid bills are pending before the Massachusetts Legislature which would increase current levels of funding at the state level. One of the bills would increase the tax on cigarettes. This added revenue would be directly applied to financial aid to public and private higher education students in Massachusetts. The second bill would increase appropriations for the state financial aid fund by $25 million.

The next three weeks are admittedly the roughest time of year for most students at UMass. Finals and all those headaches which come along at the end of the semester are enough for anyone to deal with. Yet each and every student should take just a short time out to call or write their state Representative. Without this type of action on the part of students here at the University, many of us may not even be returning next semester. This alternative is unacceptable.

If you are unsure of who your state Rep. is or what his or her address or phone number is, information is available. A posted list of all state Reps. is available in the Undergraduate Student Senate Office in Room 420 of the Student Union or calling 545-0341.

Call or write your state Reps. on these very important bills. The very quality of public higher education and access to our University's resources is at stake.

All unsigned editorials represent the opinion of the majority of the Collegian Board of Editors.

'HEY, LOOK WHO'S BACK! HOW WAS SOUTH AMERICA, MAN? YOU FIND ANY COUNTRY WOULD GIVE US A LOAN?'

US hypocrisy sad charade

The trip of President Reagan to Central and South America is a good indicator of the administration's plans for the area. After the public uproar at the policy towards El Salvador, the administration appears bent on continuing along the same approach. Continued support of the repressive government of El Salvador, the arming and training of Honduras to wage a proxy war against Nicaragua, and the move to normalize relations with the military dictatorship in Guatemala are signs that American policy in Central America is not concerned with human rights.

John Gilman

The policy towards Guatemala particularly illustrates this lack of concern. Reagan's meeting with General Rios Montt should not have taken place. Montt's army has been accused by several international human rights organizations of massacring Indian peasants. The administration claims that human rights have improved around the capital of the country recently, but this claim rings of presumptiousness. How can the United States condemn the Soviet Union for its human rights record while at the same time condoning these brutal massacres by meeting with Montt? A move to normalize relations at this time virtually makes the U.S. an accessory to these crimes. The Reagan administration's concern with human rights is purely rhetorical; "Talk is Cheap."

As an American I do not wish to be associated with this type of policy. Human rights should be a major concern of American foreign policy, and this lack of concern on the part of the Reagan administration does nothing to bolster the sinking world view of the United States. If a man is judged by his actions, then so to is a nation. The Declaration of Independence states that all men are created equal and have unalienable rights, and this applies to Indian peasants in Guatemala as much as it does to corporate directors in downtown Manhattan. It is time the United States did something to improve the wretched existence of the poor in Central and South America. I am not advocating we pour billions of dollars into these countries to feed these people, but rather we stop buying the guns for the dictators murdering them.

If human rights are also a concern of yours, I strongly urge you to sit down and write your congressman. Let them know you abhor this lack of concern in administration policies. When there is not enough money in the federal budget to pay for social programs here, there certainly should not be enough to arm these brutal, inhuman military regimes. Supporting right-wing military dictatorships is a lousy way to fight the spread of communism. After all, lack of freedom is lack of freedom. To the people of these countries it does not matter under what banner they are enslaved.

John Gilman is a UMass student

Letters

Differing opinions don't deserve insulting stereotypes

To the Editor:

On Dec. 3, an article by Jackson Katz entitled "UM used to be Progressive" appeared on the Collegian Editorial page. This letter aims at pointing out the ignorance of that article, which deals with a so-called "conservative element" on campus.

I am dismayed that a person of Mr. Katz's education would deem it intelligent to stereotype people simply because they don't share his particular viewpoint. His method of categorizing individuals is not only senseless but is indicative of the very people he seeks to insult. I feel I must remind Mr. Katz that these are the very tactics used by the New Right in promoting ideas.

Furthermore, I question Mr. Katz's logic in calling himself a progressive. A person who stoops to mud-slinging and intolerance of the ideas of others is no more a progressive than is Jesse Helms. A true progressive uses his intelligence and powers of persuasion to promote his ideas. Jackson Katz displayed neither in his column.

Jack Merrill
Amherst

Shoplifting is a serious problem, not a funny joke

To the Editor:

It is my impression that the function of a student newspaper is to inform and educate its readers. I don't think that educating people on the "art of shoplifting" is funny or constructive. I am referring to Rich Nangle's article: 'Beat Inflation: Steal the Gifts' (December 2).

As a merchant, I see shoplifting as a very serious and costly problem. As an advertiser, I question the rationale of a publication that would print an article so unfavorable to the merchants whose advertising dollars are its life blood. As a consumer, I know that contrary to Mr. Nangle's philosophy, shoplifting costs us all.

If Mr. Nangle was trying to be humorous or satirical, he was way off target. His article was in poor taste. At best, it trivialized the problem of shoplifting. At worst, it instructed and encouraged this costly and criminal behavior.

The Collegian has a responsibility to its advertisers and its readers. By publishing Mr. Nangle's article, it has abdicated that responsibility.

Cheryl A. DeCristofaro
Valley Bicycles, Ltd.
Amherst

Student Attorney General's Office remains apolitical

To the Editor:

This letter is in reference to SAFA co-president Jim Shaw and his unsubstantiated accusations of persecution. Mr. Shaw has apparently decided that by attacking and attempting to discredit the SGA by aligning himself with recent critics of Senate policies he can divert attention from his wrongdoings. This practice is commonly called 'muddying the waters' and is often used in desperate situations. Mr. Shaw has admitted to blatant Constitutional violations, yet he asserts he is being politically persecuted. Nothing could be further from the truth. The Student Attorney General's Office is apolitical and has gone to great measures to ensure this independence.

Although it may come as a great shock to Mr. Shaw, who apparently pictures himself a dangerous adversary of the SGA, no one involved in this case knew, or cared, who he was prior to the incident in question. Also, if he feels prosecuting him is the best thing we have to do with our time, he is greatly mistaken.

It is the policy of this office to pursue judicial avenues only as a last resort. Numerous attempts to resolve this matter in a confidential, amiable setting have been met with hostility and an unprecedented lack of cooperation by Mr. Shaw. These attempts have spanned over five months and have forced us to refer this matter to the University Judiciary. It is within this forum that the case will be decided based on the facts and not on the misconceptions and distortions expounded by Jim Shaw.

Randy S. Chapman
Assistant Attorney General

Board of Editors

John Brobst Editor-in-Chief
Ed Levine Managing Editor
Stuart Sajdak Production Manager
Joel Myerson Business Manager
Lise Zeiger Executive Editor
Johanna Hosom News Editor
Cris Schuster Women's Editor
Andrew Gordon Arts Editor
Phillip Jennings Black Affairs Editor
Jim Floyd Sports Editor
Kevin Fachetti Photo Editor

Associate Editors

Paul A. Basken, Ray Beauchemin, Scott Hersey, Diane Kadzis, Michelle Murray, Associate Managing Editors; Laura Shanahan, Associate Production Manager; John F. Hudson, Associate Executive Editor; Paul Belval, Kevin Bowe, Associate News Editors; Amy Jenness, Associate Women's Editor; Gus Martins, Associate Black Affairs Editor; Douglas Muise, Associate Arts Editor; Jim Powers, Associate Photo Editor.

Business Staff

Craig Robbins, Advertising Manager; Jeff Taylor, Jeff Hershberg, Associate Advertising Managers; Steve Savard, Associate Business Manager; Maria Karassik, Finance Manager; Paul Krause, Associate Finance Manager; Brad Hammer, Circulation Manager.

SAME DAY
COLOR PHOTO PROCESSING

FILM IN BY 10:00 AM
BEAUTIFUL COLOR PRINTS
OUT BY 4:00 PM

The Foto Factory
A division of HALLMARK COLOR LABS. processors to the professionals

Hours: Mon.–Fri., 8–6 / Sat., 8–Noon
257 TRIANGLE STREET IN AMHERST

NEED HELP WITH YOUR STUDENT LOAN?

If you've attended college on a Guaranteed Student Loan or a National Direct Student Loan made after October 1, 1975, consider spending a couple of years in the Army.

If you train for certain specialties, the government will release you from 1/3 of your indebtedness (or $1,500, whichever is greater) for each year of active duty.

Obviously, a three-year enlistment cancels 100% of your debt. But if you sign up for the Army's exclusive two-year enlistment option, we'll still cancel 2/3 of your debt.

Plus, you may be eligible for generous educational incentives.

To find out how to serve your country and get out of debt, call the number below.

In Northampton call 584-2157

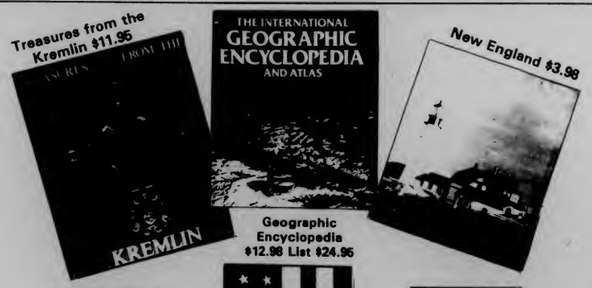
In other areas consult the Yellow Pages under "Recruiting"

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

A Christmas Checklist

Plan ahead now so you won't forget anyone

Some of our best ideas for Christmas have just been shelved.



There are hundreds of subjects to choose from. We have everything from the most timeless classics to the most recent best sellers.

And wait 'til you see our prices. We have bargains that are just as impressive as the selection.

So bring your Xmas list to the University Store. Some of our best ideas are just waiting to be picked up.

Open M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4
Open
Wed 9-9

Located in the Campus Center

UNIVERSITY STORE

Black Affairs

AP Laserphoto

REUNITED — South African poet Breyten Breytenbach bursts in joy and hugs his wife Yolande as they arrive at Charles De-Gaulle airport, Sunday evening. The writer was released last Thursday from a South-African prison after several months of diplomatic effort by the French government. Breytenbach was sentenced to nine years of prison after having slipped into his country in disguise to recruit Africaner dissidents for an obscure wing of the banned African National Congress.

Media power promotes stereotypes abroad

By NORMAN MORGAN
Collegian Correspondent

The Mainland China, and free China, Taiwan, produce many products used here in the United States. Any American knows that from even a simple encounter, one is apt to notice Chinese and Taiwanewe made items; whether they are knives and forks at the place setting in a restaurant, or upon recalling the various pieces of office equipment used in daily routine. We are all aware that Chinese, Japanese and Taiwanese products are America's leading competitors. But how would you define the attitudes and preceptions Chinese people, whether from Taiwan or China, have and feel toward Americans?

Last year Rochelle O'Neal, a University of Massachusetts student, was in the Chinese Department exchange program to Taiwan. Her arrival in Taiwan went smoothly. The people in Taiwan seemed receptive and warm to O'Neal. The fact is that O'Neal's presence there symbolized the worlds growing interest in the chinese language and people.

Ms. O'Neal studied in Taipei during the summer of 1981, at Taiwan Normal University's Mandarin Training Center. Where approximately two thousand, American, European, and Oversea's Chinese, students composed the sessions. The summer sessions further acquaints some students with fluency and completes the second year language requirements for others. O'Neal lived with the Chan family for 5,000NT$ per month. Her assumed responsibility was to tutor the family, especially Mrs. Chan, in English.

O'Neal marked many things while she lived in the Chan household. The family feels that America is the place to come and that they will be accepted in American society with no problems, reports O'Neal. This is based on the experience of Mrs. Chan's older brother who came to the states and married an European American. O'Neal noted from her employer and Chinese acquaintances that they make no differentiation between white Americans and Europeans. People in Taipei define people by their national origin, O'Neal stated. "The process of association would start with color, followed by place of origin, then race," i.e., White equals American equals White American vs. Black equals African equals Negro Race." An interesting note is that Chinese feel to be American means to be White.

O'Neal said that some Chinese think black Americans live in an isolated area from white Americans. They also believe all Americans are rich' all except Blacks.

O'Neal's notion was contrary to the Chan family's conceptions of what a black American is. It was sad to find out that a lot of old stereotypes she had gotten comfortable not seeing or hearing were manifested in the minds of Chinese. The Chinese feel in fact that there is no need to deal with Black Americans, they would rather deal with whites. Through the 1960's riots, what chinese people know about it, and what they think about the incidents formulates a lot about Black people to them. Chinese think blacks are loud and aggressive. They don't think black people are as intelligent as whites, based on the archaic I.Q. Test taken in the United States. Chinese also believe blacks mainly play basketball, dance and entertain. Believe it or not Taiwan's number one tooth paste is "Darkie Tooth Paste"; printed on the tube is a Black minstrel, with "Big White Teeth."

It was not a surprise to find at the root of Chinese misconceptions of Americans, our old friend "Mr. Media". It is interesting that some of the stereotypes T.V. fosters are being dispelled in the United States, while another group of people are internalizing these bad ideas and concepts about us, that we know to be incorrect. Chinese have a low view of white American women. They are thought to be sexually easy, no doubt from shows similar to Three's Company and the like. (Television up to its old tricks.).

The idea behind it, O'Neal says, is to make it look as if these products are being used by foreigners, (Americans), thus giving them credibility.

Ms. O'Neal wanted to teach English, however black Americans aren't thought to speak good English or know enough about the language. This is where Rochelle encountered trouble. Although Ms. O'Neal did find employment, her employer received recommendations from a white classmate of O'Neal's and she was hired two days before the school's opening. The first week of classes not only was the administration on hand in the class, so were some of the students' parents, to monitor O'Neal's performance.

Two weeks later upon entering her classroom, O'Neal heard someone utter, "Hei ren lai le!"; here comes the black. O'Neal protested this to her boss, who informed the students that a person's color is not important, and that the students were acting dishonorably. These same students later grew to like O'Neal and were saddened when she had to leave.

It is important to note that Chinese racism did exist before the advent of Western influence. Chinese women carried umbrellas to shield their ivory skin from getting dark. White skin meant one came from a high echelon. Dark skin marked the working peasants. Some women in Taiwan and Japan believe in this today.

O'Neal's final comment was one filled with irony, "If we do discover extraterrestrial beings, I hope they aren't prejudice against human beings, because we are all a part of this race."

Despite Reagan's hope recovery yet to arrive

NEW YORK (AP) — Maybe the old economy just can't get around any more.

Recovery? There's a lot of talk about it. But when you read between the lines you begin to recognize that the word is used a bit loosely. Maybe "improvement" better describes what the future holds. But improvement, even a little, is slow to develop. Without confirmation it's hard to remain a believer.

The president's political opponents can be expected to stress the point. Promises don't but groceries, jobs do. There are more people without jobs or working shorter hours than there are AFL-CIO members.

Unemployment is pervasive and concentrated. Michigan's latest rate is 17.2 percent, Ohio's 14.2. Recalling the dust bowls of the farm belt in the Depression, much of the Midwest is called the rust bowl.

Blue collar jobs are in the minority. White collar workers, says the American Productivity Center in Houston, account for 53 percent of the adult workforce and are paid 70 percent of the annual payroll.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates that the white-collar workforce will grow 65 percent by 1985, and climb to 90 percent of the total wage-earner group by the turn of the century.

The newer jobs are in information, communications, services.

Of the 10 largest industrial states, only Massachusetts and Texas had lower jobless rates in November, with figures of 7.2 percent and 7.7 percent, respectively. Both have concentrations of the newer jobs, mainly in electronic computing.

Walter D. Fackler, a University of Chicago economist, began his forecast for 1983 with the words "The United States economy is probably in a recovery of sorts."

Calling his outlook a "bit more optimistic than the standard forecast," with the economy improving at a 3.8 percent rate in the first quarter and 6 percent by the fourth.

ATLANTIC SUN ACTIONWEAR
67 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002

Long Sleeve T-Shirts
Corduroy Pants & Jackets
Sweaters

ocean pacific sunwear.

the Hungry U Restaurant
55 University Drive
Amherst
549-5713

Fine food and drink at affordable prices

Monday and Tuesday evening
5:30 - 9:00
Buy a large pizza, get 2 free ingredients
with this coupon

Souper Salads $2.49
A Bowl of Beth's soup du jour with our large salad of the day
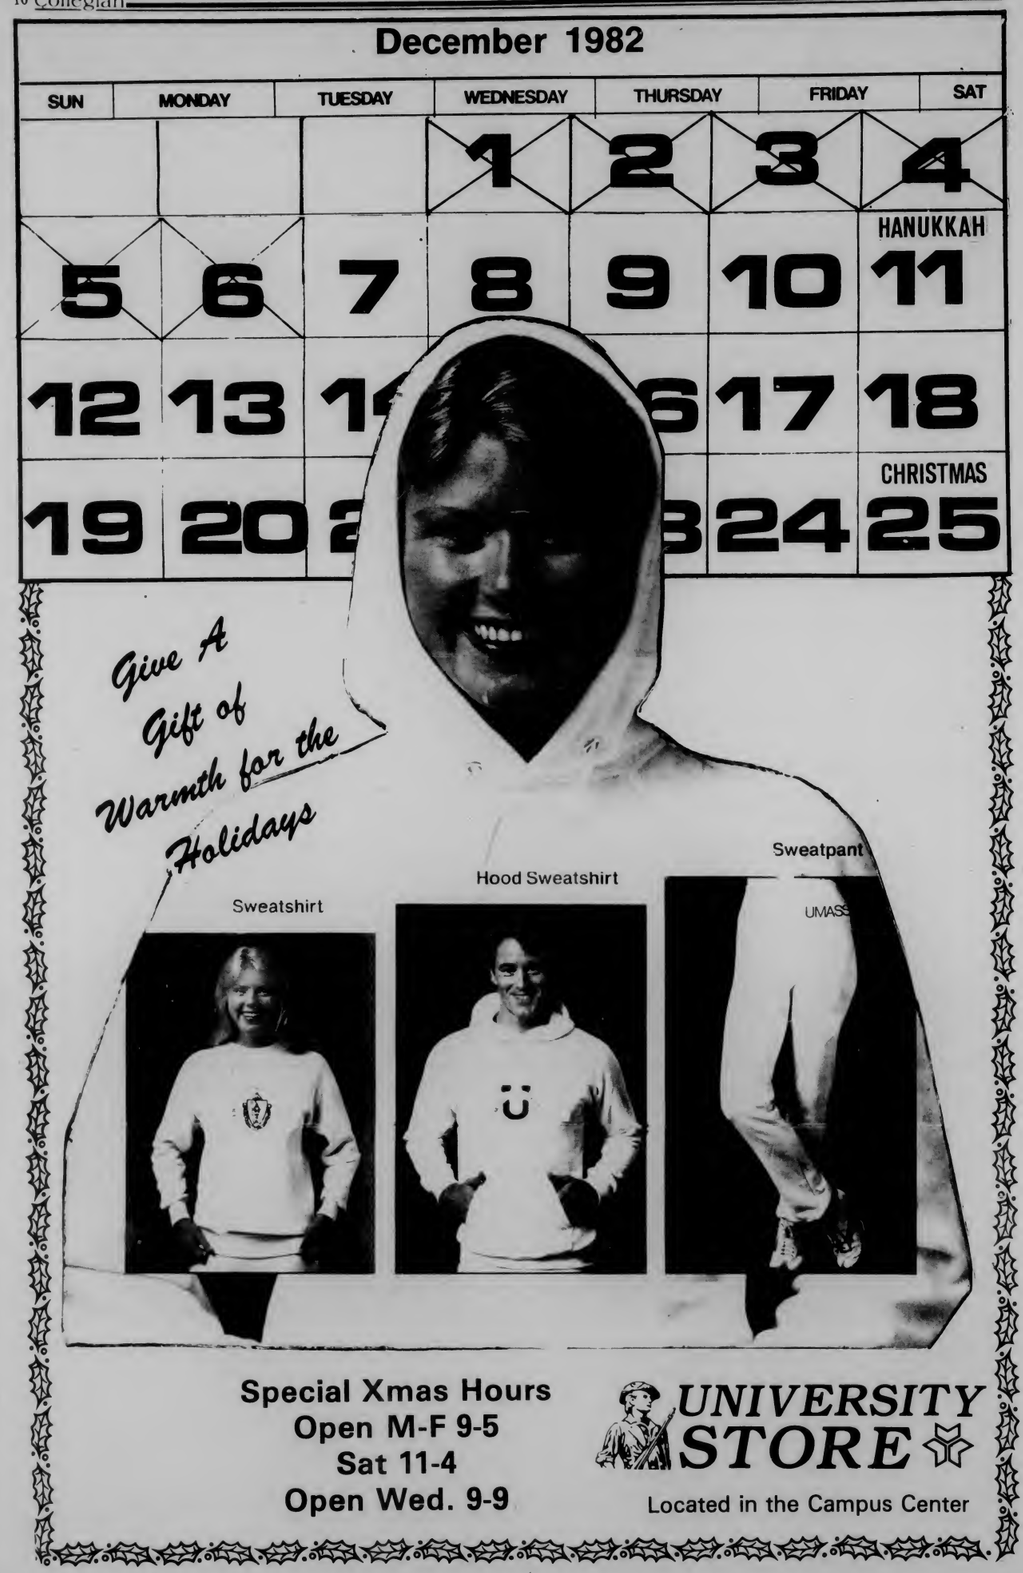
Quick and Fresh
Mon - Fri 11:30 - 3:00



Special Xmas Hours
Open M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4
Open Wed. 9-9

UNIVERSITY STORE
Located in the Campus Center

Arts

Taylor-made Blues

By PETER WISSOKER
Collegian Staff

Thank goodness for Koko Taylor. With older blues musicians such as Albert King talking about how sick they are of music (MUSICIAN, Feb, 1982) it's refreshing to find performers who are still very much interested in carrying on the tradition. With her first rate back up band, The Blues Machine, Taylor had the Hangar hopping to the blues beat as only a few singers can.

Taylor has an edge that separates her from other female blues singers such as Bonnie Raitt. "I've been living the blues since I was old enough to look in the mirror," Taylor said backstage before the show. "That's why black kids don't listen to the blues as much. They live it every day. It's the music of the south and of their parents and grandparents and great-grandparents. They're looking for something different. If you grew up eating chicken every day for your whole life," she said, "and then you were offered steak, it would be a long time before you'd turn for more chicken."

Taylor said that her audiences have been getting larger in the last year or so. This blues revival of sorts is made up mostly of white, college-age kids. Without this revival "the blues would die. I wouldn't be able to work. I want to spread the blues. I'm thankful that I'm one of the people who are keeping the blues alive."

Taylor is an extremely articulate person and her songs reflect this. Her songs' themes are clear, concise and very much to the point. Also quite topical, for example: You can have my husband but keep your hands off my man. Yeah. Serious business. Or how about this one: I sure had a wonderful time last night or at least they told me I did. This stuff is so real. It's so alive. This is the blues.

While Taylor's two sets were not the hottest she's done they were still really tight. It being the beginning of her tour, her voice wasn't destroyed enough for her to really scream but she still had the power when she needed it. The Blues Machine was also hot when they wanted to be. Unfortunately that was usually at the end of each set after Koko had already left the stage. All in all it was a pretty hot show and fortunately the audience was large enough so that the Hangar will continue booking blues bands into the valley.

Collegian photo by Bene Naudin

Koko Taylor in performance Thursday night.

I'm Getting My Act Together dramatizes struggle for independence

By PAM MADNICK
Collegian Staff

Being alone and doing things on your own can be a healthy experience. That was a message successfully expressed by the cast of I'm Getting My Act Together and Taking It on the Road Wednesday night at the Fine Arts Center.

Getting My Act Together is about Heather/(Connie Stevens) and her attempt to make it on her own. As a 39 year old nightclub singer, she is tired of hearing her manager/(Mark Hutter) tell her what sells and what doesn't, and what she can sing and what she can't. Both singer and manager have lovelife problems, but Heather handles it better, accepts it. Joe on the other hand, is always trying to understand what he has to do to make women happy.

Heather tells Joe why she doesn't like being censored, and Joe explains that her first obligation is to her audience. Throughout the show, we learn about both characters; their personal and professional lives. Eventually, Heather fires Joe as the first step in gaining independence.

Connie Stevens was believable as Heather, but her breathy voice becomes irritating as time goes on. It is obvious Stevens has had extensive performance on stage. This play was appropriate for her because it was more of a concert than a play. One of the better songs that Stevens sang was "Put In A Package and Sold," about being exploited; being glossed up and marketed.

Mark Buchan played Jake, a young acoustic guitar player, who loves Heather for who she is and what she wants to do. Buchan sings a beautiful ballad, "In a Simple Way I Love You," proclaiming his love. In 'Smile," Buchan plays Heather's hicktown farmer dad and later joins the cast in that song, who in puppet-like fashion. dance and sing from their five seats.

The issues behind this musical are important and are subtlely raised, often in a comic way. For instance, three women (Stevens, Betty Aberlin, Zelda Pulliam) sit around a table discussing their lovelife problems, joking about not being hurt when their men are away with other women or looking for their own "space." But when they really talk, you hear them ask why they always want to be with men, who don't want to be with them. In another scene, Heather's manager talks about his relationships with women. "You think you know what you're getting and suddenly, they change the ground rules on you."

If you contrast Heather and Joe, you get to see two people who lead similar lives, but have learned different things. Heather wants to be independent, and knows that she can be strong alone. Joe, however, falls apart in times of crisis because he needs other people to be dependent on him.

One problem with this show was the lack of intimacy between the actors and the audience. The Fine Arts Center is too big for a show like this. The script calls for a small nightclub setting.

Nevertheless, I'm Getting My Act Together and Taking It on The Road is an important story about women and independence. If you ever get the chance to see it, go.

Christmas Gift Trims

A beautiful package makes a gift even more special!

AMERICAN GREETINGS Americard
The right card for that special person

Open M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4

UNIVERSITY STORE

Located in the Campus Center

The Other Voice
COMING DECEMBER 14
News, Blues & Interviews

STAR TREK LIVES!
Club Meeting
Dec. 8
Time 7-11 p.m.
Room 805
Campus Center
Films, Info
for ST & SF Fans
All Welcome!

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
Rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays, Saturdays 1-4

Birthright of Amherst Area
for Pregnancy Help
Free, Confidential Services
Same-Day Test Results
Amherst Carriage Shops - upper level
549-1906

11th ANNUAL BUSH BASH

UMASS SKI CLUB

SUGARBUSH VALLEY VERMONT

SKI & PARTY WEEK
JAN 23-28

THIS TRIP INCLUDES:

- Lift Ticket (5½ days)
- Lodging (Hotel or Condo)
- Meals (with Hotel)
- Free Beer & Wine Parties
- Hot Tub & Sauna Party
- Etc. Etc. Etc.

only $189.00

tax and gratuities included

beware of other ski trips that set a base price and THEN ADD 5% tax & 15% gratuities

Non-Members Welcome

Deposit & Final Payment Deadlines have been extended.

So get your deposits in now to reserve your vacation for WINTER BREAK

sign-up table

M-F Ski Club Office 9-3
430A Student Union
for more info call 5-3437

LAGNAF 83

Belfast bomb kills several As ceiling crashes dance floor

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A bomb blast brought the roof down on the crowded dance floor of a bar frequented by British soldiers last night. Police said at least five people were killed the count was expected to rise.

An unknown number of people were trapped beneath the collapsed roof.

"Casualties are being ferried to hospitals in a fleet of ambulances and so far five have been confirmed dead," a press officer at Belfast police headquarters said.

Mrs. Mairad Peoples, owner of a nearby hotel, said, "I saw people being carried out but they were so badly mutilated I couldn't look. The whole place in the function room where the disco was held appears to have collapsed. There is so much confusion with people running around looking for their sons and daughters. They are using their hands to scrape away the rubble."

No group immediately claimed responsibility. But suspicion inevitably fell on guerrillas of the mainly Roman Catholic Irish Republican Army, who are fighting to drive the British from Northern Ireland and unite the predominantly Protestant province with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic.

The police press officer said the bomb went off without warning at about 11:15 p.m. 6:15 p.m. EST during a regular Monday night disco dance at the Droppin Well Bar — regularly used by British troops stationed at a Royal Air Force base at Ballykelly, 50 miles northwest of here.

"The explosion brought the roof down on top of the dancers," he said, and it was "almost inevitable" that British troops were among the casualties.

Press Association quoted a witness as saying, "It is sheer bedlam. The place has caved in and the police and army are trying to keep everybody back from the scene. It is so dark that it is very difficult to see anything, but there are fatalities."

Ambulances were sent to take casualties to hospitals — most of them to Londonderry, 10 miles away.

Press Association said there had been several bomb hoaxes at the bar, most recently on Thursday night.

Deinstitutionalization in Mass the future appears to be uncertain

NORTHAMPTON — It was an emotional scene, so strong that Robert Okin had to turn from reporters to regain his composure. The state's mental health commissioner had just signed a court agreement calling for the release and community treatment of hundreds of Northampton State Hospital patients.

"This means people who have seen nothing but the inside of an institution can achieve a life of dignity and equality," Okin said at the Dec. 8, 1978, ceremony.

But today, four years after the watershed moment in Massachusetts mental health care, even the attorney who sued on behalf of patients says people expected too much too soon from the fledgling community system.

"It was considered the cure-all of mental health," says attorney Steven Schwartz, who filed the suit leading to the 1978 consent decree. "Everyone would be treated and everyone would get well. Obviously that's a false expectation."

Many questions persist about the future of deinstitutionalization — the tongue-twisting bureaucratic buzzword for the process of moving the mentally ill out of aging, prison-like state hospitals and back into society.

While advances have been made in community-based treatment of the emotionally disturbed, Northampton and the state's six other mental hospitals still hold 1,900 patients.

AN IMPORTANT ADDITION TO YOUR UNIFORM

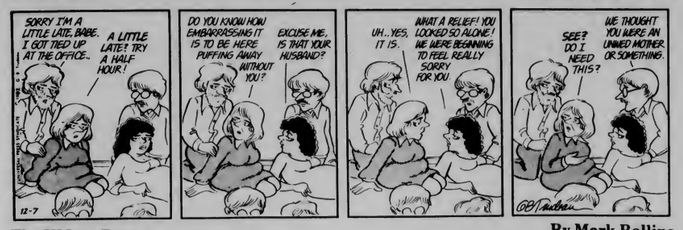
The insignia of an Air Force nurse can mean a lot to you and your future. It shows that you're part of the Air Force Nurse Corps. A member of one of the most efficient health care teams in the world. It signifies you are an Air Force officer with the responsibility and prestige of a leadership position. It indicates you're on the track toward good pay and almost unlimited educational opportunities. If you're a nursing professional or about to complete your nursing education, why not consider Air Force nursing as part of YOUR future? From the day you're commissioned, you'll receive the pay and advantages of an Air Force officer. Consider your uniform and our future. Then make it yours.

AIR FORCE NURSING. A GREAT WAY OF LIFE

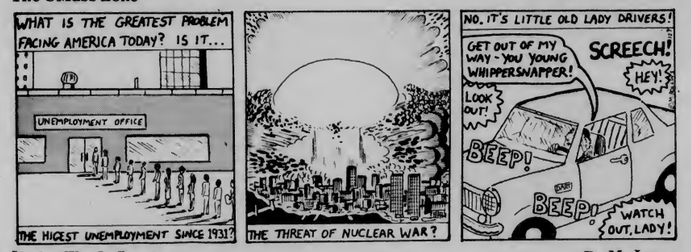
For More Details Call Sandy Price
(203) 229-8650:
Freshmen & Sophmores Call Capt. Pinkell
(413) 545-2637

AIR FORCE
A great way of life

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

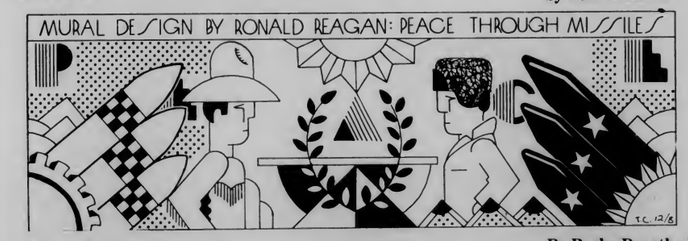


The UMass Zone By Mark Rollins



Under The Influence By M. Joyce

Bushwa by Tom Cushwa



Bloom County By Berke Breathed

D.C. MENU

LUNCH
Tacos
Spinach and Mushroom Quiche

DINNER
Italian Sweet Sausage
Spaghetti, Tomato Sauce
Fish Fry Plate
Tartar Sauce
Fruit Plate with Banana Bread

BASICS LUNCH
The Salad Sandwich
Spinach and Mushroom Quiche

BASICS DINNER
Fish Fry Plate
Tartar Sauce
Hi-Pro Spaghetti with Pesto Sauce

Collegian Staff Meeting

Important Collegian staff meeting at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the newsroom. Attendance is mandatory. Important business, including the election of a new editor will be discussed. Anyone who cannot attend should contact their department editor or manager.

Attention Artists

The Collegian is looking for comic strips for next semester. All students are invited to submit samples for possible consideration. Samples should be of production quality, drawn in black ink, in similar proportions to those appearing on this page. Samples should be submitted to Ed Levine, Managing Editor, Collegian, 113 Campus Center by Monday, Dec. 13.

CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1 Containers
5 Ibsen character
8 Lord of the ——
13 Buddhist sacred mountain
14 Military division
15 Sports site
16 Explorer Tasman
17 Police equipment
19 Take away from 21 Makes haste
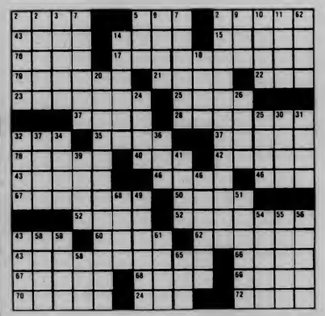
22 Shelter
23 Loud-voiced one
25 Summer resort
27 Ankle bones
28 Silk filaments of yore
32 Suffix forming nouns
35 In a futile manner
37 Eaten away
38 Literary river
40 Poetic contraction
42 Member of the Golden Horde
43 Size in clothing
44 Watercourse channel
46 Tennis call
47 "That's ——!"
50 Engage in the sale of
52 He, in Italia
53 Glut
57 Pronoun
60 Alight
62 Levantine country
63 Very hard
66 Innuit transport
67 Opposite of fortis
68 American composer
69 Or ——!
70 Certain tastes
71 Negative of a sort
72 Child's pinafore: Var.

DOWN
1 Steinbeck family
2 Boundary
3 Town official, of old
4 Kind of partner
5 Blackbird
6 Sound of sorrow
7 Moral standards
8 Form of protest
9 College study
10 One of the Simons
11 Infrequently
12 Garden tool
14 Incalculable
18 Fresh-water duck
20 Church decoration
24 Irritate
26 Rubber
29 Bernard De ——
30 Brother in a Bible story
31 Spanish painter
32 Part of Spain
33 Bridge
34 Corrida performer
36 Evergreen tree
39 Folklore figure
41 Neighbor of the transept
45 Contradicts
48 Verve
49 —— Tin, dog star
51 County of S. England
54 Athletic thrill
55 Foolish ones
56 Church official
57 Military command
58 Intention
59 Nobelist novelist
61 Prima donna
64 Marble
65 Word in many place names



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

L	I	P	O		C	A	S	A		H	E	D	G	E
I	N	O	N		U	L	L	R		O	L	E	A	N
T	A	K	E	A	L	O	O	K		M	A	N	E	T
O	W	E	R	S	T	E	W		N	E	T	T	L	E
N	E	R	V	O	U	S		T	I	R	E
		E	A	R		I	M	P	U	D	E	N	T
S	I	V	E	L	T	E		O	E	A	N		R	O	A
L	E	N	D		P	E	N		B	O	S	C
A	L	T		O	L	E	A		P	L	A	N	E	T
B	A	D	D	R	E	A	M		A	I	R
		R	E	E	L		S	T	A	N	D	B	Y
T	O	P	A	S	S		P	A	I	R		R	O	E
A	D	E	P	T		A	R	G	E	N	T	I	N	A
M	E	L	E	E		D	E	A	N		V	E	N	T
P	R	E	S	S		Z	E	S	T		A	R	I	E	S

Weather

Today, mostly sunny with highs 50 to 55 except in the western hills partly sunny with highs in the upper 40s. Tonight, clear with low temperatures in the upper 20s to mid 30s. Tomorrow, sunny and cool. High temperatures in the upper 30s to mid 40s.

CABLE/VIDEO

Tuesday

Dancin' in the Streets Video

10:30 - 11:30 Jimmi Plays Berkeley
11:30 - 12:15 Blondie, Eat To the Beat
12:15 - 1:15 Beau Bolero plays Steely Dan at the Wall
1:15 - 2:00 The Fools, all in all just another band in the Wall

WMUA 91.1 FM

Tuesday

6-9 Ovlivion Express with Fern Spierer
9-12 Hell Comes to Your House with Pauline
12-3 Wilhemina
3-5:30 Scotty Dread
5:30-6 Newswatch with Mark McPhail & Greg Wells
6-7 UMass Hotline
2-6 Classical Reveille with Mike Cevasco

Give A Friend A Gram

High Notes

Singing Telegrams and Balloons

Delivered by Tuxedoed Messenger for any and All Occasions

Lowest Prices

Call 665-7664 VISA/MC

Intramural round up: volleyball, hockey and some hoop wind down

By TONY BETROS
Collegian Staff

With the end of the semester approaching, many of the intramural sports are concluding their seasons. In fact, all sports that started earlier this semester will end on the last day of classes. So, here's a quick rundown of what's going on in the intramural circuit.

Volleyball playoffs have already started, with each league (men's, women's, and co-rec) concluding their season on Thursday. Sixteen co-rec matches were played on Friday, and all three leagues begin quarterfinal action tonight at Boyden. The big match to watch in the men's bracket is the Patriotas vs. Nylon 4-2. The Patriotas are defending champs but face a tough task going up against Nylon 4-2, which posted a fine regular season.

The women's league begins their first round (8 teams) tonight also, while the co-rec league will be looking for a new champion, as the titlists from last year are not competing this year. The influence of the Patriotas has rubbed off on the co-rec league, as they now have a team of their own in the co-rec league.

The semis are on Wednesday and the finals on Thursday for all three leagues.

Basketball will be seeing a lot of action within the next week. The one-on-one league began last night, and finals will be held on December 14, at halftime of the UMass-Bentley game in the Curry Hicks Cage. The men's three-on-three competed last night, with Unity facing Never Too Late and the winner going up against three-time defending champ Force-4. With the playoffs being double elimination, Force-4 would have to lose two games to the Unity-Never Too Late winner to be dethroned. Results of the games will be taken up in the next column.

In other basketball news, entries are still being taken for five-on-five teams. Space is limited, so if you haven't yet signed up, it would be wise to do so soon.

• • •

Hockey playoffs also began last night, with two quarterfinal matches — What the Puck (10-0) vs. the Bumpers (1-8-1), and the Nads (8-2) vs. Stick (4-4-2). Two more quarterfinal games are tonight as Yukon Jack (8-2) goes against the Leafs (5-4-1), and the Blades (5-3-2) take on the Rebels (6-4). The semis are tomorrow night and the finals are Sunday. What the Puck seems to be the prohibitive favorite, with Les Hellman tending the nets and forward Joe Gerace leading the team in scoring.

Hockey re-applications and entries for next semester are due by the end of the week. There is a $25 fee for the renting of the rink.

In other news, racquetball playoffs have also started, with the finals scheduled for December 15. This round is also double elimination, so the title is up for grabs.

There will be a five-on-five basketball managers meeting on the 8th and 9th of this month at 6 p.m. in room 215 Boyden. The same night at 7 p.m., the five-on-five officials meeting will take place. All are asked to attend.

• • •

In case anyone hasn't noticed, enrollment in the intramural program has gone down. Football and volleyball are the biggest sports to experience a drop in numbers, not only in the men, but in the women as well.

However, not every sport is on the decrease.

"Adding frsibee and co-rec soccer proved to be good turnouts," said intramural sports director Frank Wright. "But, on the whole, numbers are generally down."

Mount Snow Vermont Tours "Presents"

SKI SEMESTER

Collegiate Ski Weeks
6 Days 5 Nights
Jan. 2-7, 1983 Jan. 16-21, 1983
Jan. 9-14, 1983 Jan. 23-28, 1983
at Mount Snow Vermont

$179.00 per person Quad occupancy

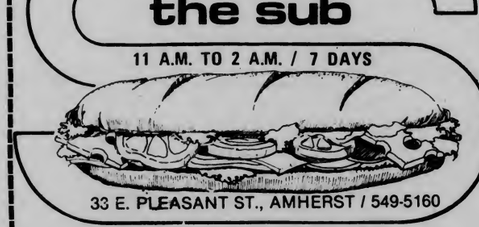
$50.00 deposit required

Package includes:
* 5 nights lodging
* A gala welcome party
* Five day lift tickets at Mt Snow ski area
* Five full skiers' breakfasts
* Four full course dinners
* Ski tour guide & host
* And so much more!
* Welcome Get-Together Party * Beer Bash
Wine & Cheese Party * Fondue Party * Horse-Drawn Sleigh Ride * Movies * And so much more
"The Mountain of Fun, MT Snow Vermont"
All Rates Subject to 5% State Tax and 15% Hotel Gratuity Service Charge
Mount Snow Vermont Tours
PO Box 571, Route 100
West Dover, Vermont 05356
802-464-2076

SALADS SUBMARINES SYRIANS

the sub

11 A.M. TO 2 A.M. / 7 DAYS



33 E. PLEASANT ST., AMHERST / 549-5160

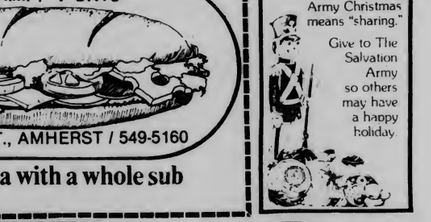
FREE 16 oz. soda with a whole sub

The Salvation Army

Christmas is love, hope and caring

At The Salvation Army Christmas means "sharing."

Give to The Salvation Army so others may have a happy holiday.



Firestone

Go thru ice, mud and snow!

Town & Country

34.95 Plus F.E.T. $1.64

155/80-D13 or A/78-13

All Prices Blackwall

Size	Price	F.E.T.
B/78-13	39.95	1.81
C/78-14	41.95	2.16
D/78-14	43.95	2.09
E/78-14	45.95	2.21
F/78-14	48.95	2.34
G/78-14	50.95	2.50
600-15L	42.95	1.71
G/78-15	52.95	2.57
H/78-15	53.95	2.82
L/78-15	57.95	3.11

(ALL PRICES INCLUDE INSTALLATION)

Whitewalls, add 3.00 Per Tire Additional

North Amherst Tire & Auto Center

78 Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst, MA

Across from Watroba's Store 549-4701

Christmas Boxed Cards

Remembering, caring, and sharing are the very special joys of Christmas!

AMERICAN GREETINGS Americard

The right card for that special person

UNIVERSITY STORE

Located in the Campus Center

Open M-F 9-5 Sat 11-4

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday - Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10 % • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?

Reckedisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

AUDIO

Jensen 30 spkrs. new Advent spkrs, $120 each pair. Kenwood amp 40w/ch $120 546-4504

AUTO FOR SALE

69 Firebird convertible - A classic. Needs engine work and some minor body work. Easily restorable to mint cond. BO around 2000. Call nights 256-0435

1978 Toyote Corolle SR5 liftbeck A/FM stereo, air condit, headers excellent gas mileage mint condit BEST OFFER 546-4366

79 Triumph TR7 30000 miles AM/FM cassette exce condition best offer 253-3406

75 Olds Sterfire 6 cly hat-back good cond. stereo $1675 tel 253-2016

VW Superbeetle beautiful runner 1971 $1050 549-5377

71 Delte 88 very dependable winter car $300 or BO 665-3471

BELLYGRAMS!!

Delivered by professionel bellydancer for most unusual gift. Thereza 253-7822

BROWNIEGRAMS

Three flevors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

DRYCLEANING

Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Way. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ENTERTAINMENT

POLODROID DJ's - Best Everything Call Pat or John 253-2957

FOR A GOOD LAUGH

For a good laugh, come the performance of the newly formed group Ladies Against Women in the SUB Tuesday Dec 7 11 am and 1 pm

FOR IMMEDIATE RENTAL

10 min from campus

one room apt with plenty of

FREE HEAT!

948 N. Pleasant St.
Dec. rent negotiable $150/mth thereafter call Steve 586-5827

FOR RENT

1 bdr. apt. for rent call 549-4709 $275/mo

BKO is renting rooms for intersession. Full use of kitchen facilities. Most modern house on campus, best location between town and campus. Call Paul at 549-5382 or Marty at 549-0206

Three bedroom epartment, Northwood 665-2577 9 PM - 9 AM

Northwood Apts 315 + 2 bedrooms bus outside door 665-4561

FOR SALE

GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972

100% Alpece wool sweaters handmade in Peru. Selling for much less than store cost! Great Christmas gifts! 546-5512

Guiter by MJHARDY 1977 No. 2, 6 string, jumbo size w/hard case 1-413-967-5850 $550

Airline ticket from Boston to Denver 1 way must be male $120.00 good through Aug 12 '83 call Joe 253-5941 after 5:00

Color TV 19" Seville bought new in August 225 Bill 253-5362

Reichle Ski Boots mens 7½ excellent cond. $60 or BO Joel 6-1080

Twin Bed - excellent condition $75 also desk & bookcase 253-5713

Ceber ski boots used 3 times $35 549-6194

Who Dec 11 front sec floor seats 546-6977

Twin bed box spring and mattress new must sell call 256-6086 evenings ask for Fran

FOUND

Brown indoor-outdoor rug found on North Pleasant Street. Please call 549-0498

Found silver eerring outside Campus Center. Teardrop shape with turquoise and black. Call 6-4378

FRYE BOOTS

New mens size 10½D style 2350, raisin color regularly $120.00, $90.00 call 546-7475 after 5 PM

HELP WANTED

Assistent Business Meneger at the Collegian. Business major preferred but not a requirement. Low pay, great experience. Apply at the Collegian by Dec. 8. An equal opportunity employer.

WFCR needs spring interns. Up to 9 credits possible working in membership. Call 545-0100

Telephone sales day & night hrs. no experience needed good pay call 467-3105

Living Editor - The Index is looking for one. Non-work study. Stop by 103 CC. Or call 5-0848 and ask for Mike or Sheila. The Index is an equal opportunity employer

Winter Vecetion jobs in Boston to promote ecology, consumer issues, and safe energy. The Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG) is hiring staff for winter session and full-time positions. Will train. $135-$225/wk. Elise 256-6934

Nationwide Inventory Service needs part time people Dec 26 to Jan 30. Must live in greater Lowell-Lawrence, Woburn-Watertown, North Shore areas, have phone, transportation and available nights and weekends. Contact Student Emp. Office.

INTERSESSION RENTALS

Furnished double and single rooms available in Kappa Sigma fraternity for the month of Jan Close to campus, parking available 545-3197/ Todd Chuma or Steve Gordon

LESBIAN AND GAY

Are you Gey? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2645 or drop in CC 106

LOST

Lost ledie's gold wetch with black band on 11/29 between Public Health Building and GRC reward 6-6438

NEED CASH?

Christmas reffle. $100-$50-$25 prizes. 3 for $1 table in C.C. Concourse Monday and Tuesday.

PERSONALS

Gourmet Jelly Beens six exotic flavors great gift, delivery call 546-6299

Heppy 24th Yosef. Black is beautiful (!). . . .so are we, together. Much love, your adoring pupil

Jey in PoliSci 362. You looked right at us! Next time say hello!!!

Holiday Open House Kappa Kappa Gamma all UMass women invited for an afternoon of holiday cheer! December 10th 3-5. RSVP 545-0320 545-0321

Heppy Birthday Pet end John born to run together Love, JB SC SM

Bev, Happy Birthday, at least now you can call me sometime, Love "D"

CONGRATULATIONS
To all the New Brothers of Alphe Epsilon Pi

Robert Albert, Mike Borkum, Mike Gould
Ira Rappaport, Robert Kennedy
Alan Rastellini, Randy Hanna
John Tessel

Photography: Pictures for all occasions. Think about Valentines Day; Discounts for appointments arranged before break call: Manie 256-0865 or Mike 6-1477

Finel exems, memory, concentration, -success - group rates University Hypnosis Center 549-4645

House-mother needed for U-Mass sorority if interested please call 545-0527

MIDNIGHT EXPRESS: all invited to SUB on 12/8 at 7 and 9:30 pm to see this award winning movie admission $1.50 sponsored by Panhellenic Council

NSE Students Happy hour at the Pub is on Dec 7 6-9 bring $6 for shirt 6-8776

Ger, Congratulations! Satin sheets and a waterbed to celebrate?? Love ya! Marlo

SEXISM: Pub Pol of SGA welcomes Rep. Barbara Gray of Fram. Speaking on Sexual Harassment and its effects in Public Higher Ed. on Dec. 8th Recp. Memorial Hall 5:30-7:30; Lecture CC 163 7:30-8:20 all are urged to attend info 545-0341

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Dissertetions, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED

To Milweukee/Chicago Aree around 20 Dec. will share gas/driving. call Pam 253-7405.

To Evergledes or anywhere in Florida after X-mas Day call Brenda 617-544-2624

To Syrecuse NY Dec 10 for WHO concert expenses shared call Saul 546-6021

ROOM WANTED

Females looking for a bedroom. in Britteny Menor for spring semester. Please call 549-5586. Keep trying.

Apt needed 2 females to share or take over apt. Jan. Lynn 546-6287, Kathy 546-7494.

Single room wented for spring semester call Mark 549-2838 keep trying.

Female seeks own room in Amherst for spring semester Jocelyn 549-6850

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommete needed to share room in 2 room apt. Brit Manor $112 a month excludes elec. call ray 253-7918

Housemete wanted beautiful log cabin in Leverett wood heat available now Cindy 256-6434

Male to shere bedroom in Southwood townhouse, $93/month, evenings 253-5963

Sterting Jan 1 2 males remaining in 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt 2 openings call 253-5920

Female roommate wented for Southwood apartment from Jan 1 on. Call 256-0630

Female to shere bedroom in two bedroom apt Col Village spring semester $91/mth on bus route excellent location call Chris or Tammy after 4:00 at 253-3082

One room eveilable in Puffton prefer one male 549-6322

3 roommetes wanted for Jan 1 and spr semester Brittany Manor call Tim 256-0606

One or two femeles for large bedroom in Southwood apt starting Feb 1st 253-5215

Female wented to shere Puffton apt during int session $125/month includes heat. Preferably non-smoker. on bus route please call Debbie evenings 546-9660 or 546-9662

Responsible person for own room in Hadley apt $130 + electric 584-5045

Spring sem male non smoker to share br in RG townhouse apt Dave 253-9431

Brittany Menor two people for one bedroom $115 month heat included Craig 253-7985

1 or 2 femeles wented to rent Brittany Manor apt over break for details 253-7650

Easygoing female seeks same for spring cheap rent bus route Amherst call evenings 253-2653

RSO GROUPS REQUESTING FUNDING

Pick up your Budget Pecket in the Senate Office 420 of the Student Union Building Due Dec 10, 1982

SERVICES

Writing essistance. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729

Moving? Our 12 foot enclosed cube truck will help you safely move your stuff 256-0480

SPEEDY TYPING SERVICE
24 hour typing at reasonable rates
For professional service call Jim 546-7042

Sey Something Speciel Made-to-order verses cards or gifts for more info 536-8683

SKI TRIPS

Smuggler's Notch Vermont Intersession trips, only $149!! For more info call: Roberta or Steph 549-6235

TO SUBLET

Women wented to shere room in apt Feb great deal for info please call 665-7109

Whole apt. 2 bedroom Squire Village call 665-3032

4 bedroom apt on bus route Swiss Village $165 ech including utilities 253-9519

1 Bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment on bus route available Jan 1 Laurel 665-3519

2 bedroom apertment heat and electricity included 665-3982

Intersession rentel Southeast St $180 utilities included call Bob 256-6017 after 8

2-3 bedroom townhouse in Echo Hill Jan-Aug $510 call 253-2589

1 bedroom apt 2 min from Center avail intersession 175.00 256-6948

WANTED

Stretometic Beseball Cards wanted 1971 through 1979 call 549-4141 Mark

Needed Rush tickets for any date besides Dec 15 call 665-7918 ask for Tom or Anne

WANTED TO BUY

Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for an epartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093

Apt needed for int. & spr. sem call anytime or 546-5072

Need a Job?...

Collegian Collegian

The Collegian is now hiring associate editors, copy editors, photo editors and other news positions for the spring semester. Positions available include Associate Managing Editors, Copy Editors, Layout Technicians, drivers, librarian, associate news editors, associate women's editor, associate arts editor, associate black affairs editor, associate sports editor, associate photo editor, night photo technicians, associate executive editor and training officer. All current employees must reapply. Applications are available from and should be returned to the front counter of the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center. The Collegian is an equal opportunity employer.

Sports

MORE SPORTS ON PAGE 14

Clapp for the Crimson in game tonight

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team will attempt to get back on the winning track once again, and improve their game as they host Harvard University tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Cage.

Starting for the Crimson will be former Minutewomen ace Cindy Clapp, who transfered to Harvard this year. It will be Clapp's first appearance against her former teammates and in Amherst sporting a Crimson uniform.

The young Minutewomen, who retained only three players from last year's team, seek to pick up a win after an encouraging loss against New Hampshire last Saturday.

UMass played tough and was in most of the game with the more experienced Wildcats, who are one of the top teams in New England.

"We had one of our better rebounding games with the freshman (UM outrebounded UNH 41-38) and we played with intensity," said head coach Mary Ann Ozdarski of the New Hampshire loss.

Ozdarski added that UMass didn't get the crucial rebounds in the game and thus could not over take UNH.

UMass spread out the scoring for the first time this season with four players in double figures. UMass sharpshooter Barbara Hebel and point guard Wendy Ward led the Minutewomen with 16 points each. Karen Damminger had 11 points and Rebecca Kucks scored 10.

"We have to do that every game," said Ozdarski.

Ozdarski feels that the Minutewomen have to accomplish three things to win. UMass will have to have balanced scoring, execute the offense well, and rebound well.

They will be facing a Harvard team that is 2-3 on the year and that was 4-21 last season. They will be no pushover, though. The Crimson start four seniors and one junior, Clapp.

Elaine Holpuch has added a good inside game to Harvard's attack and Pat Horne is a key for the Crimson.

It will be a homecoming for the 5'11" junior Clapp, who was a vital cog in the 9-16 Minutewoman machine last season. Clapp has been rebounding well this season for Harvard.

"Harvard is an experienced ballclub," said Ozdarski. "If we do what we set out to do, we can win the ball game."

Gymnasts take second in UMass Invitational

By ELLEN RICHARD
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's gymnastics team held its annual invitational meet last Friday finishing in second place. Karen Knapp was the star of the match as she broke a school record in the balance beam with a 9-5. The old record, set by Stephanie Jones, was 9.45.

The University of New Hampshire won the meet by a score of 169.45. UMass scored a 167.40 to take second and was followed by the University of Connecticut and the University of Rhode Island who finished third and fourth respectively.

The meet consisted mainly of UMass and UNH trading first and second places, with UConn placing second once in the balance beam event.

"We had one major setback this week that could have made a difference," coach Ken Anderson said. "Our top all-around was removed by the doctors because of a chronic back problem."

In the vaulting event, UNH came out on top with a 44.95 over UMass' 42.60. Robin Low of the Minutewomen scored the team high with an 8.9 and took second place behind Laura Cavanaugh of UNH.

The Wildcats won the second event, the uneven parallel bars, with a 42.20 over the Minutewomen's 40.95. Cavanaugh took her second event with an 8.85 over UConn's Christine Morrissey (8.45) and UMass' Low and Sue Allen (both 8.3).

UMass was victorious in the balance beam event with Knapp being the obvious winner individually with a 9.5 score.

"She hit a good solid routine that she knew how to do," Anderson said of Knapps strong performance. The women took the event 41.05-40.70 over UConn.

"Barbara Lord hit an excellent set which I felt was a little low," Anderson said. Lord had a score of 8.65 in the beam event.

In the floor exercises, UMass again came out on top with a score of 42.75. UNH placed second with 42.05 points. Allen won individually over the Wildcats' Cavanaugh 8.9-8.55.

"We'll be better next time," Anderson said. "A lot of very good freshmen came through."

Because of last minute changes in the lineup and the loss of one of their top players, the Minutewomen didn't perform as well as they could but plan on being in top shape next time around.

The Minutewomen will play their final game until January this Saturday when they travel to Boston to take on Northeastern University.

Photo courtesy of UMass Sports Studies Dept.

Don Canham, Director of Athletics at the University of Michigan, will speak on "The Impact of Television on College Sport" tonight at 8 p.m. in room 180 of the Campus Center.

No serious earthmoving for baseball this winter

By GREG WELLS
Collegian Correspondent

Remember the days when baseball's off season was almost as much fun as the regular season, the days of blockbuster trades destined to turn franchises around? Back then superstars and potential superstars swapped uniforms all the time.

Well, sports fans, those days are gone.

Free agency and longterm contracts have all but done away with the "super" trade. So, as the winter meetings convene in Hawaii don't plan on anything earth shaking.

Not many real big names appear to be on the trading block. Thirdbasemen can be had, with Atlanta's Bob Horner, Texas' Buddy Bell and Larry Parrish, and Boston's Carney Lansford all available. The only problem is everyone wants a lefthanded pitcher and there aren't too many.

The Dodgers appear to be ready to harvest some of their vast youth crop, as cries of "break up the Dukes" spread through the Pacific Coast League. The Dodgers top farm club put together its second straight dominating year, and the top prospects appear ready. To make room for them, the Dodgers have to unload Ron Cey and move Pedro Guerrero to third. Shortstop Billy Russell may also go as the Dodgers shop for a catcher.

"Mr. Dodger" is already gone, a victim of the free agent market. Even though he was one of their most popular players, the Dodgers decided to let Steve Garvey go. It appears that San Diego and the Cubs will fight it out and of course the Yankees will make their pitch. Look for the Padres to win the battle for the Penguin.

It now appears the Mets and the Reds have cooled the Tom Seaver trade talks. Seaver may be better off to retire unless he can go back to New York. However, Reds G.M. Dick Wagner thinks Seaver is worth a Ron Darling type prospect and the Mets only want to give up Mike Scott.

Meanwhile across town, George Steinbrenner has opened up his checkbook and already signed Don Baylor. Look for George to make outrageous offers to Floyd Bannister, Steve Kemp, and Omar Moreno. That would free up Ken Griffey, Dave Collins, and maybe Jerry Mumphrey. Craig Nettles also appears to be on the outs, probably to San Diego.

The Red Sox are looking for a starter (What else is new?). Mike Torrez is definitely gone, and Lansford also appears to be on the way out. The Sox have talked to the Yankees about Dave Righetti and maybe Griffey for Lansford. Also the Dodgers and the A's are interested. With Tom Burgmeier already gone, the Sox are going to have to rely on their young talent.

Mark Brown, Dennis Boyd and Dennis Burht will be fighting for a job on the staff. The Sox would be smart to try and land Lansford and trade either Hoffman or Stapleton along with Torrez for a starter. Dennis Eckersly, Bobby Ojedy, Brian Denman, John Tuder, and Steve Crawford is not such a bad staff. Look for Luis Aponte to get an upgraded role in the bullpen.

Mermen swamp Lowell even their record at 1-1

By SCOTT SOLOMON
Collegian Correspondent

LOWELL — Co-captain Chris Porter collected victories in the 100 and 200-yard freestyle and freshman Marc Surette recorded his best time ever in the 200-yard backstroke as the University of Massachusetts men's swimming team defeated the University of Lowell, 65-48 Saturday.

Porter gave UMass its third consecutive first place when he finished two seconds ahead of the Chief's Don Muller in the 200-yard freestyle event with a time of 1:49.4.

UMass opened the meet with a victory in the 400-yard medley relay when Lowell's Don Jensen jumped before teammate Bob Lange completed the first leg of the race. Lowell was disqualified and the Minutemen led 7-0.

Porter scored another win in the 100-yard freestyle, hitting the pad at 49:9, a second in front of teammate Brian Spellman and two ahead of Lowell's Mike Fogaren.

Surette finished behind Jensen and Lowell's Jim Vicedomine in the 200-yard individual medley at 2:07. But it was in the 200-yard backstroke where the Saugus native coasted to his biggest accomplishment of the afternoon. His time of 2:05.29 (two-tenths of a second behind Vicedomine) was Surette's career best.

In the final event, with UMass having already put the meet away (58-48), Surette led off the 400-yard freestyle relay with his best time, 50:5. Rich Plunkett, Porter and Spellman followed their mate's act, and the foursome nudged out the Chiefs Guy Kinnon, Bob Blacker, Jim Lange and Fogaren by three-tenths of a second with a time of 3:20.41.

In all, the Minutemen grabbed six first place slots on the day, including a big victory from Brian Semle in the 1000-yard freestyle.

UMass divers Scott Andrews, who won the one-meter dive against Tufts on Tuesday, and freshman Pat Mullen were handcuffed by Jensen, who swept both the one and three-meter diving events.

The Minutemen scorched to an 18-point lead (26-8) on four consecutive victories, the latter coming on Spellman's win in the 50-yard freestyle. The Chiefs narrowed the margin to seven (34-27) on the strength of Joe Geary's 2:08.34 in the 200-yard butterfly before UMass cracked it open with a one-two (Porter-Spellman) thrashing in the 100-yard free.

The Minutemen's next meet will be this weekend when they travel to Springfield College.

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian
Volume CXII, Issue 63 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Wednesday, December 8, 1982

Student aid increase expected

By KEVIN BOWE
Collegian Staff

As pressure mounts from students and higher education officials, the long effort to drastically increase state assistance to students may be passed by the state legislature within the next couple of days.

Hundreds of University of Massachusetts students, along with hundreds of students, financial aid administrators and college presidents from both public and private institutions, statewide have been involved in applying political lobbying pressure on members of the House of Representatives in an effort to increase student aid by up to $25 million.

Long distance phone lines are being made available in Room 420 of the Student Union for UMass students interested in calling their representatives. It is part of a mobilization effort by a coalition of students groups built around increasing state student assistance. After contacting hundreds of UMass students asking them to contact their representatives, the coalition has placed at least 100 phone calls into the State House and expects to do the same today, said Jim Quinn, co-president of Students Advocating Financial Assistance (SAFA) and a member of the Student Center for Educational Research (SCERA) Public Policy Team.

SCERA has also contacted most of the Student Government Associations of the public colleges and universities asking them to contact state representatives. The Massachusetts Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators (MASFA) is organizing its membership and some students at the 200 higher educational institutions they are affiliated with, said Barbara Turnow, president of MASFA.

Two major pieces of legislation which have been passed by the state Senate are before the House Ways and Means Committee. The first piece mandates that the state spend an additional $25 million in state scholarships, work study grants, low income student grants and a graduate student scholarship program. This legislation does not specify where money would come from to pay for the proposal. A second piece of legislation, passed by the senate late Monday, would have all the unclaimed five or ten cent bottle deposits required by the Bottle Bill to be used for student assistance. This bill would also extend the implementation of the Bottle Bill until March 31 for the distributors of soft drinks.

A great deal of speculation has arisen from several sources concerning the events in the next forty-eight hours. Some have suggested that the two proposals would be merged together providing a revenue source and a plan to disburse the money to certain programs.

Most agree however that very little action will be taken concerning the Bottle Bill until House Speaker Thomas McGee, D-Lynn, returns from an out-of-town trip. He is expected to return today.

Joseph Trainor, budget director for the House Ways and Means Committee refused to comment on the reports. "The Ways and Means Committee is actively working on these issues. The bills are very much on everyones minds," Trainor said.

Collegian photo by Katie Walters

"Oh, Christmas tree! Oh, Christmas tree! Thou stand in verdant beauty." Lights shining brightly from this symbol of Christmas remind Northampton residents that the season of giving is at hand.

Photo courtesy of Sports Information File

A.J. Wynder, a freshman on the UMass hoop team, stabbed Sunday night by the JFK Tower, remains in stable condition at Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

Weapon found in stabbing case

By JIM FLOYD
and DIANE KADZIS
Collegian Staff

A weapon has been discovered in connection with Sunday night's stabbing of a University of Massachusetts basketball player that resulted from what police reports termed a "discussion about a woman."

Gerald T. O'Neil, director of the UMass Department of Public Safety, yesterday confirmed reports of a knife being in the possession of the police with the assumption it could be the same blade that allegedly entered the lower abdomen of Arthur J. (A.J.) Wynder, a freshman guard for the UMass basketall team, at about 10 p.m. Sunday. O'Neil declined to elaborate on details of where and when the weapon was found by police.

A shift from critical to stable in the condition of Wynder, an 18-year-old business major now hospitalized in Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton, has left his teammates and family optimistic about his recovery and a possible return to the court this season.

"I know he's going to be back to play. I don't know when, but I know he'll be back," said UMass basketball coach Tom McLaughlin after reporting Wynder sat up in bed and attempted to position himself in a chair during a visit with the coach yesterday.

Micoyan N. Von Dyke, 19, a resident of New Bedford visiting UMass Sunday now confined to the Hampshire County House of Correction on $10,000 cash or surety bail as a suspect in the incident, pleaded innocent to charges of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and assault and battery with intent to commit murder during his arraignment in Hampshire District Court on Monday.

According to police reports, the stabbing allegedly evolved from a disagreement on the part of Von Dyke concerning a mutual female friend of Wynder and his, whom Von Dyke was visiting Sunday. After arranging to meet with Wynder for a walk, "one word led to another and the (alleged) stabbing resulted," O'Neil said.

Wynder's father, Arthur Wynder Sr., said doctors expect Wynder to be released from Cooley Dickinson by the end of the week and are looking for a full recovery within five to six weeks. Doctors are confident, he said, that Wynder will be able to resume practice with the team by mid-January.

McLaughlin said during yesterday's visit to Wynder, he told Wynder to plan on travelling to Florida with the basketball team, "and he smiled. His father told me that was the first time he had smiled in the past two days."

Female exploitation seen in ads

By CRIS SCHUSTER
Collegian Staff

The sexualization of products and the objectification of women has become increasingly promoted by advertising, a well-known media consultant said during a slide show presentation last night at the University of Massachusetts.

Dr. Jean Kilbourne, speaking to more than 350 people on "The Naked Truth: Advertising's Image of Women," said although most people feel they are personally exempt from the influences of advertising, those effects are inescapable.

"Advertising is the foundation of mass media. Ads sell values, images, concepts of love and popularity. Ads tell us who we are and who we should be," she said.

"Advertising is the most powerful force that keeps us trapped in our roles," she said.

"Beauty depends on how well we (women) disguise ourselves. I... our natural state we are ugly," she said. "Women are judged against a standard of beauty whether they want it or ..."

"Our body becomes a package, a thing. Men learn to look at our bodies as objects. Women are grouped together as things, as objects," she said.

Every part of a women's body has to be changed, according to the messages in advertising, Kilbourne said.

"The underlying mesage is you're ugly, disgusting, buy something. No part of the body is not in need of improvement," she said.

One of the primary motivating factors of advertising is anxiety, Kilbourne said. Women feel anxious about their bodies, their faces and their age. Advertising makes women feel guilty if they fail to achieve the flawlessness of the models used in the advertising, she said.

"That look is artificial," she said. "One million dollars is spent every hour in this country on beauty products," she said.

Advertising also promotes the "awful myth that it is manly to be brutal, particularly brutal to women," she said, "Men do get sexually exploited and increasingly so, but not the extent women are."

"Men are told they must concentrate only on work and women only on love. Men are rarely shown with children," she said.

The use of children, particularly little girls, is becoming more and more frequent as women are attempting to achieve fuller, more well-rounded lives, she said.

"The use of little girls and violence in advertising is the backlash on women's attempts to win equality in this society," she said.

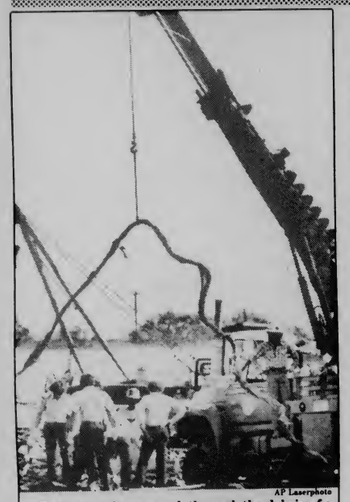
Images of violence are especially prevalent on record covers, Kilbourne said "Images of rape, sadism and violence are becoming more and more acceptable, making the reality more acceptable."

However, making laws against certain advertising is not the way to stop the exploitation, she said. Being aware of the impact of advertising images on themselves is the best way to fight their danger, she said.

Photo by David Deuber

Jeanne Kilbourne, a noted media consultant, spoke last night in the Student Union Ballroom on "The Naked Truth: Advertising's Image of Women."

World and national news



AP Laserphoto

Rescue workers search through the debris of a fallen tower in Missouri City, Texas, for the corpses of five men killed when the radio tower fell yesterday morning.

House deletes MX Missile funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — By 245-176, the House voted yesterday to delete from a $231.6 billion defense spending bill all $988 million earmarked to buy the first five of a planned 100 of the nuclear-tipped, intercontinental missiles.

The vote marked a personal defeat for Reagan, who had led an intensive administration lobbying campaign to keep the production money intact.

Arrayed against him in the battle for votes were advocates of a U.S.-Soviet nuclear freeze and members who contended that the MX was a good place to make budget economies and that its proposed basing system has not received congressional approval.

Shortly before the afternoonlong debate began, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., predicted the MX would be defeated.

"I've talked to knowledgeable people and I don't think he (Reagan) has 170 votes," said O'Neill, who had aligned himself with the MX opponents but did not seek to make it a party position for his fellow Democrats. It would have taken 218 votes to defeat a motion to cut the MX money.

Amid predictions by some of his allies that they had the votes to deny the money, Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., the chief MX opponent, criticized the weapons program as an example of wasteful military spending.

"I don't think we have to fund every expensive toy that the admirals, generals and contractors want," said Addabbo, who planned later in the day to introduce an amendment to delete the MX procurement funds.

But Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and other administration supporters maintained that the nation could not afford to delay modernizing its strategic arsenal in the face of a huge Soviet arms buildup.

Bionic Barney' suffers seizures

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Artificial-heart recipient Barney Clark suffered a series of seizures yesterday "which could have ominous significance," prompting doctors to put him back on a respirator and downgrade his condition to critical.

Doctors said they hoped the seizures stemmed from a correctable chemical imbalance, and not from either of two other possibilities — a hemorrhage or blood clot in the brain. The artificial heart was functioning normally and the pump itself probably was unrelated to the seizures, doctors said.

The seizures early on the sixth day of Clark's life with the permanent plastic device lasted from one to two hours before they were controlled by sedatives, said Dr. Chase Peterson, vice president for health services at the University of Utah.

"We are concerned that Dr. Clark has had a complication, the significance of which could be ominous, but is not yet clear," Peterson told a news conference five hours after the early-morning seizures.

Peterson said the complications could range in seriousness "from serious brain damage to a totally reversible chemical imbalance."

Peterson said Clark, a 61- year-old retired Seattle-area dentist, had spent a restful night following his second day Monday performing brief and mild exercises. He had been listed in serious condition since Saturday.

Dr. William C. DeVries, the surgeon who implanted Clark's Jarvik-7 heart last Thursday, had been pleased with Clark's recovery and was talking with his patient early Tuesday.

Digest

By the Associated Press

Investigation of state corruption leads to grand jury indictments

BOSTON — Secret indictments charging corruption and tax fraud in the state Revenue Department have been handed down by Suffolk and Middlesex county grand juries, Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti said yesterday.

Bellotti said the arraignments of the unspecified number of individuals will take place before the end of the week.

Details will be available at the arraignments, he said. He also said the investigation was continuing.

Bellotti said presentations to the grand juries were made Monday and yesterday, "and indictments were voted."

The indictments follow a nine-month probe that became an issue in this year's governor's race.

The Associated Press reported Sunday that six past and present workers at the Revenue Department are targets of the corruption probe that rocked out-going Gov. Edward J. King's unsuccessful re-election campaign this summer.

The investigation was disclosed following the arrest in May of Stanley J. Barczak, a tax examiner who was collared "in the act of bribery," Assistant Attorney General Stephen Delinsky said in court this summer. Delinsky said Barczak was cooperating with the probe.

In late July, Deputy Revenue Commissioner John F. Coady hanged himself at his home. The indictments are expected to clarify Coady's role in the investigation.

Bellotti declined to give further details on the indictments.

His remarks came at a conference at which Gov.-Elect Michael Dukakis announced re-establishment of the State Office of Investigations.

Warm weather chills fuel sales; oil dealers lament: It's killing us

BOSTON — New England's fuel oil suppliers say unusually warm weather has cut deliveries by 27 percent this year, but they aren't despairing. At least not yet.

"There's a whole winter to go," said Richard Caroll, vice president of Grimes Oil Co. in Boston. "We're not going to panic."

Charles Burkhardt, president of the New England Fuel Institute, a retail dealer's association, said deliveries are 15 percent behind average and 27 percent below last year's.

"It's killing us," he said. "We have some dealers who have only sold half the oil they had sold at this time last year."

State plan may affect retarded

BOSTON — Federal officials said yesterday they are studying a state plan to increase by 43 percent the number of retarded people moved out of state schools into community homes.

In August, the federal Health and Human Services Department threatened to withdraw Medicaid funding for patients housed in 46 of the 146 buildings at the state's six schools for the retarded unless the state repaired the buildings or remove the people. The federal government contends the buildings don't meet health and safety standards.

Dr. Lawrence Osborne, a spokesman for the federal agency, said it could be two months before the agency completes its review of the state's plan of Nov. 22. But he also told the Springfield Daily News that the agency would be reluctant to approve any proposal without guaranteed funding.

According to Mary Cliett, acting state commissioner for the retarded, the plan calls for moving 717 retarded people into community homes to reduce the number of buildings the state would have to repair.

AP Laserphoto

One of five men killed in the collapse of a Missouri City, Texas, tower is carried from the wreckage by volunteers.

Execution drug saves lives

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The drug chosen by Texas to carry out its executions, including yesterday's death of convicted murderer Charlie Brooks Jr., is commonly used to help save lives by putting patients to sleep quickly for life-saving surgery.

Sodium thiopental, better known as sodium Pentothal or truth serum, can quickly stop breathing and heart beat. Many experts believe it is the most humane way yet found for society to execute its criminals.

"It is about as painless and easy and sure and rapid a way to go as there is," according to Houston anesthesiologist Dr. Denis Bourke.

Two other chemicals are added to the injection after the sodium thiopental to assure death. They are a muscle relaxant called pavulon, and potassium chloride, which can cause muscular paralysis.

Oklahoma, Idaho and New Mexico also have passed legislation to use lethal injection for executions, some with a combination of a barbiturate and potassium, which can also stop the heart. Washington state offers prisoners a choice between hanging or lethal injection.

The use of lethal injection was first proposed in the 1950s, but did not become a political issue until the mid-1970s. The method was strongly opposed by doctors who saw it as a corruption of medical technology developed to heal.

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Ray Beauchemin
Copy Editor — Jim Finkle
Layout Technician — Susan Bankert
Photo Technician — Katie Watters
Graphics Technician — Sam Levitt
Composition — Laura Shanahan, Kathy Wells, Jackie Femino, Kyle Cooper, Greg Gonye, Janet Buch, Terri Cooper, Marge Hochman, Scott Stockwell, Sheryl Silver, Adrianne Dufour, Lynn Eisenberg, Gail Tanzer

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $18 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

Collegian photo by Katie Watters

Joshua Jay, the Waffle clown, performs his guerilla theatre act as part of a program in the Student Union Building by the UMass Peacemakers.

Profs swaying away from relocation program

By PAUL BASKEN
Collegian Staff

The "reality and the effectiveness" of the nation's nuclear civil defense relocation program, which was rejected this year by the town of Amherst, was questioned yesterday by University of Massachusetts faculty and staff members during a conference held to explore the multi-billion dollar plan.

Although the University has not yet either accepted or rejected the plan by which 162,000 residents of the Springfield area would, in the event of an eminent nuclear attack, be relocated to Amherst locales which include UMass dormitories, several professors and staff members expressed their professional opinions of opposition to it.

Dr. Robert Gage of the University Department of Public Health, who was scheduled to speak but did not because of time constraints, said he advocated rejection of the plan and at a recent Faculty Senate meeting asked Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey for his position regarding it.

Gage said Duffey, a former Democratic Senatorial candidate active in liberal causes in Washington, told him the plan continued to be studied by the University, but conceded that, "Personally, I think this whole thing (the relocation plan) is absurd."

The Amherst Board of Selectmen joined 65 towns, 25 of which are from Massachusetts, when on Feb. 22 it unanimously rejected the nuclear civil defense plan, and instead voted to publish a pamphlet informing citizens "why there is no protection from a nuclear war."

"If you start looking at it, the whole thing unravels," Selectmen and professor of history Richard Minear in addressing the conference.

Gage claimed to receive no pressure from the University regarding his planned speech, saying, "I don't think they care," but program coordinator Scott Hunter of the Peacemakers said he could only secure speakers such as Gage with "enough tenure so they wouldn't be threatened by the University."

Included in the program, which was held in a year in which civil defense funding targeted solely for nuclear accident or attack has risen from $141 million to $252 million, was a slide show detailing results of the spending, several speeches, poetry readings and a documentary film.

Following opening introductions for the conference, guest speaker "Waffles the Clown" displayed his "E.T.," or Edward Teller (the "father of the hydrogen bomb") Survival Kit, which contained "atomic sneakers" for running away from the bomb and "Preparation H-Bomb" to be used to treat radiation exposure, from which "people get hemmorages two to three times their body size."

Cooperation sought twixt CC and SUB stores

By SEAN CASEY
Collegian Correspondent

After a frequently heated discussion, the University of Massachusetts Graduate Student Senate approved last night a motion which in effect called for the cooperation of the Campus Center University Store with the various student run businesses or co-ops inside the Campus Center/Student Union Complex.

The motion was presented by Mike Reilly and Todd Zeigelbaum of the Board of Governors Office, who had already asked for and received the support of the Student Government Association.

The Graduate Senate's approval cleared the path for the allocation of $2,000 to Union Records Unlimited (URU) in the Student Union Building.

The money would be given so that URU could compete with the approximately $360 per week spent by the University Store on record advertising which Zeigelbaum believes is in direct competition with URU.

"Union Records cannot compete head-on with the University Store and in my opinion the University Store knows this," Zeigelbaum said. "If they (the University Store) wanted to put URU out of business tomorrow, they could probably do it," he added.

Zeigelbaum pointed out that the $90,000 per year that the University Store makes on records is 1.4 percent of the store's gross income, while the $60,000 yearly gross of URU is its sole source of revenue.

"They (Union Records) have been a thorn in the University Store's side for years, at least that is the impression I got from Mr. Cummings (W.L. Cummings, Jr., University Store Manager)," Zeigelbaum added.

Pete Saunders, a grad senator from the Fisheries department who abstained from the vote, said the Board of Governors (BOG) representatives had not proved their allegations.

"I was unconvinced by the arguments of the BOG and I felt uncomfortable with the scope of the motion," Saunders said. "The apparent attempt by the BOG to control the products and advertising of the University Store seemed to me to be more of an attempt to enhance the co-ops rather than provide a true business experience," Saunders said.

Regents increase waivers

By BECKY THATCHER
Collegian Correspondent

The Massachusetts Board of Regents of Higher Education recently released an additional $300,000 worth of tuition waivers for University of Massachusetts at Amherst students.

Jan Robertson, the staff member for the regents who is in charge of student affairs, said these additional waivers were approved due to increased student need.

Art Jackson, UMass director of financial aid, said while federal support of higher education is declining due to Reaganomics, state support for higher education is increasing.

Jackson said the UMass financial aid program could still use additional funding.

"When students applied for financial aid this semester, there was a need for $54 million. The school received $18 million," he said.

Robinson said there is always the threat further financial aid cuts proposed by President Reagan may be passed. She said the Regents have guarded against decreases in support from the federal government by setting aside an additional $1 million dollars for student aid.

"If the financial aid picture for the students changes, we are prepared to provide access to more students for higher education," she said.

Tuition waivers are part of the financial aid program at UMass that includes work-study, low interest loans and scholarships.

Of the total tuition revenue collected, certain percentages are returned to the students in the form of tuition waivers. In August, the Amherst campus was allocated 4 percent of total revenue.

On October 29th the Regents passed an additional 2 percent for all state colleges and universities, Robinson said.

"There were not enough waivers initially granted based on information submitted by public colleges and universities," Robinson said.

"These allotments were based on the comparative analysis of student aid needs at state colleges and universities."

Jackson said students should be aware of how the state funds both public and private education.

"More tax dollars for financial aid go to private institutions than public colleges and universities," he said.

"The financial aid needs at the state's public universities and colleges should be met first, but the private institutions have highly paid lobbyists in Boston and Washington," he said.

Troupe mocks female status, raises birth right awareness

By BROOKE STATES
Collegian Staff

To dramatize the seriousness of the attacks on women's reproductive rights, members of the Coalition for Equal Rights and Reproductive Freedom staged a satirical play on the new right in the Student Union Lobby yesterday.

Bridgett Andrews of CERRF said, "the play is part of a campaign CERRF has been working on to raise people's awareness about the current status of women in regards to their reproductive rights, and Supreme Court cases that will be coming up this spring."

"Several of the cases that will be dealt with in the Supreme Court, involve deciding the role of the state in regulating abortion. Individual states could gain the right to pass restrictive legislation like the 'Akron Ordinance.' This would require doctors to tell women seeking an abortion, that life begins at conception." Andrews said.

The play, entitled "If I Only Had a Man," was performed by CERRF members, in the troupe "Ladies Against Women."

The list of characters in LAW's play included Mrs. Anita Tyrant, Mrs. Im A. Breeder, and the Reverend Jackoff Feelwell. Against a backdrop of signs reading "Suffering not Sufferage" and "Father Knows Best," the eight women and two men sang the title song "If I Only Had a Man."

Against a chanted background of "repeal the vote" and "What do we want?, nothing, When do we want it? Now," Mrs. Phyllis Shifty asked the 75 students that gathered to watch, "All you women libbers, what's all this talk about equal rights? Do you really want to go to war where you'll take all the soldiers attention away from killing the enemy? Do you actually want your husbands and brothers sharing the same foxhole with girl soldiers?"

The chants continued with "Warfare, not welfare," as Fanny Reagan asked the audience, "What's all this fuss about ladies not making as much money as men? Why should they be paid at all? Real ladies do it for free."

Collegian photo by Katie Watters

CEERF members, players in the Ladies Against Women troupe, performed a skit in the SUB yesterday. Players included, Tildy Turchinetz, center, as Phyliss Schifty, and left to right: Teresa Kolisa (Im A. Breed), Melanie Fish (Fanci Ray-gun), Becky Lautman (Anita Tyrant) and David Greif (Rev. Jackoff Feelwell).

AN IMPORTANT ADDITION TO YOUR UNIFORM

The insignia of an Air Force nurse can mean a lot to you and your future. It shows that you're part of the Air Force Nurse Corps. A member of one of the most efficient health care teams in the world. It signifies you are an Air Force officer with the responsibility and prestige of a leadership position. It indicates you're on the track toward good pay and almost unlimited educational opportunities. If you're a nursing professional or about to complete your nursing education, why not consider Air Force nursing as part of YOUR future? From the day you're commissioned, you'll receive the pay and advantages of an Air Force officer. Consider your uniform and our future. Then make it yours.

AIR FORCE NURSING. A GREAT WAY OF LIFE

For More Details Call Sandy Price
(203) 229-8650:
Freshmen & Sophmores Call Capt. Pinkell
(413) 545-2637

AIR FORCE
A great way of life

NEED HELP WITH YOUR STUDENT LOAN?

If you've attended college on a Guaranteed Student Loan or a National Direct Student Loan made after October 1, 1975, consider spending a couple of years in the Army.

If you train for certain specialties, the government will release you from 1/3 of your indebtedness (or $1,500, whichever is greater) for each year of active duty.

Obviously, a three-year enlistment cancels 100% of your debt. But if you sign up for the Army's exclusive two-year enlistment option, we'll still cancel 2/3 of your debt.

Plus, you may be eligible for generous educational incentives.

To find out how to serve your country and get out of debt, call the number below.

In Northampton call 584-2157

In other areas consult the Yellow Pages under "Recruiting"

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

High People In High Places

UMASS SKI CLUB
Mandatory Meetings:
Thursday Dec. 9
ALL MEMBERS
Public Health Aud 7:00 PM
Tuesday Dec. 14
All Sugarbush & Aspen People
Hasbrouck Room 20
Mandatory Meetings for more info
5-3437

STYLES BY DEBORAH • STYLES BY DEBORAH • STYLES BY DEBORAH •

DESIGN HAIRCUTS

$8.00 with this coupon
10.50 with shampoo & Blow Dry
11.50 long hair shampoo & Blow Dry
Free Consultations
please call for an appointment
STYLES BY DEBORAH
65 University Drive, Amherst
549-5610
expires 12/31/82 C

TONIGHT DYNASTY DRINK SPECIALS 9-11

Try the "Carrington Cooler," "Alexis' Revenge", or the "Frosty Fallon" ...each 1.50

TOP of the CAMPUS
RESTAURANT & LOUNGE
11th Floor • Campus Center • UMass

Collegian photo by Katie Watters

Tina Mill and her infant daughter Tabatha brave yesterday's winds as they wait for their bus.

Booze nixed; benefit is on

By DAVID SUMMERSBY
Collegian Staff

For one night, beer will not be served in the Blue Wall as a non-alcoholic benefit concert for the United Way takes over.

The Andy May Band, headlining the event, as well as The Fantini Brothers, The Armstrong Brothers, The Valentines and the Biz will donate their time to play music this Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Blue Wall. Proceeds will benefit the University of Massachusetts campaign for the United Way.

Ron Sinacore of the Affirmitive Action Office said the campus campaign for the United Way is hoping to raise at least $2,000 from the concert to add to the $30,000 already raised since the beginning of the year. He said the overall goal of $50,000 is much higher than fundraising hopes of previous years.

"Last year we only had four hundred people give to the United Way, most of them faculty members," he said. "This year we are expanding our campaign drive to include students, professional non-academics and other departments."

Along with generous donations from a wide variety of people this semester, Sinacore said the campaign raised $1,000 in November from a rope pull sponsored by the Beta Kappa Phi fraternity and he hopes the concert will be as equally successful.

In place of beer at the concert Sinacore said there will be a full-service juice bar. "The Blue Wall has a full menu of non-alcoholic drinks. This will be the first event in the Blue Wall that is non-alcoholic so that all ages can enjoy the concert," he said.

Mark Abend, a UMass student and a representative of the Campus Center Board of Governors, said he is working on the idea of having a non-alcoholic night once a week in the Blue Wall to make it a place for everyone. Abend said he is working on the issue with Director of Food Services Dick Ellis. "The Blue Wall is contemplating offering a non-alcoholic program next semester," Ellis said.

"I think it is a great opportunity to let in 18 and 19-year-olds who have been saying 'give me an opportunity to go to the Blue Wall,'" Sinacore said.

There will be a $2 cover charge for the concert and the event is being co-sponsored by Food Services, The Governors Program Council, Union Program Council, the Board of Governors and the Campus Center Print Shop.

State representative to talk on sexual harassment, education

By GAYLE McGILL
Collegian Staff

Rep. Barbara Gray, R-Framingham, will speak to the Undergraduate Student Senate at 7:30 tonight in Campus Center Room 163 on "Sexual Harassment and its Effects on Public Higher Education."

In order to give students an opportunity to meet with their state representatives, various campus organizations are sponsoring the three part lecture series.

"Since she is a woman who has been involved with politics for ten years, her discussion will revolve around women in the decision making process," said Jim Bodreau, a member of the Public Policy Committee of the Student Government Association.

"She has presented an amalgamation of bills to the legislature concerning sexual harassment in employment and education," Bodreau said.

The first speaker of the series was Rep. Mel King, D-Boston, who spoke last week on "Racism and its Effects in Public Higher Education."

Sen. Gerard D'Amico, D-Worcester, co-chairman of the Education Committee, will speak Dec. 15 on "Reagonomics: Financial Aid Cuts and its Effect on Public Higher Education."

"This is an attempt to not only demonstrate students are involved and do care, but to also build a repor between the Legislature and the University through the students," Bodreau said.

A reception will be held at 5:30 today for Gray in Memorial Hall.

The lecture series is sponsored by the Committee in Public Policy, the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) Women's Issues Team, Students Advocating Financial Aid, SCERA's Anti-Racism Team and the Office of Alumni Affairs.

Public relations consultant talks on Frank-Heckler duel

By KEVIN BOWE
Collegian Staff

A campaign advisor for Rep. Barney Frank, D-Newton, told a University group Monday the campaign conducted by Rep. Margaret Heckler, R-Wellesley, provided her opponent with a large edge in what should otherwise have been a close race.

"We were expecting a much more sophisticated campaign (from Heckler)," said Daniel Payne, a political media consultant.

Speaking in the Campus Center at the University of Massachusetts, Payne outlined the mistakes made by the Heckler campaign that benefited Frank's efforts.

"In order for Barney to win, everything had to go right," he said.

Heckler started her media campaigning shorty after the primary election in September while Frank had put commercials on in the early spring and throughout the summer, Payne said.

"Barney had 10 months of free time. We used that time to build an image" of being a respected legislator who holds basic American values, Payne said.

This approach counteracted the expected negative advertising that was coming from Heckler.

"The best defense against the attack that you're out of step — a flaming liberal — is that you project the same traditional background that everyone experienced," Payne said.

After Heckler had aired negative ads against Frank and they proved ineffective "she had nowhere to go," he said.

Heckler failed to defend herself against the attack that she supported President Ronald Reagan's economic program.

"She just had no answers," he said.

Another major mistake Heckler made was she did not think Frank would be able to raise sufficient funds to wage a full-scale campaign, Payne said.

art • architecture • children's • computers
The Reading Remedy
ENTIRE STOCK
50%-90% OFF
PUBLISHER'S LIST PRICE
The Reading Remedy
NEW BOOKS AT HALF PRICE
Come see us you'll be surprised at the beautiful affordable gifts at the Reading Remedy... a very different kind of bookstore - where every book is displayed below regular wholesale price!
open Thurs & Fri evenings 'til 9, Sunday 12-5
down the ramp at - 71 N. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST (Across from Lewis Foods)
• lit • audio • cat. sci • pol. sci • soc. sci • technical • travel • etc. •
• cookbooks • crafts • drama • economics • english • etc. •
film • foreign languages • gardening • history

The Sale's On!
Boots
Shoes
Sox
Bags
Mittens
Hats
the SHOE BIN
187 n. pleasant st., amherst

VALLEY BICYCLES
89 Main St.
Amherst
256-0880
Behind the Cheese Shop
& Valley Farms Dairy Store
and also....
For the Holidays at Hampshire Mall
Try a new approach to gift-giving (or requesting?) Help stamp out polka-dotted ties, pencil sets, plaid socks, shirts that don't fit!
Use Valley Bicycle's
Gift Registry
Drop in to either Valley Bicycles location to register your bicycle needs and wants, complete with sizes and colors. Then tell your friends and relatives that you have registered with Valley Bicycles and they can stop in to select the perfect bicycling gift for you.
Gifts for Bicyclists 75¢ to $500.00
Wrenches, mirrors, fenders, gloves, tires, helmets, water bottles, odometers, trainers, tights, handlebar bags, lights, shorts, books, ponchos, grease, backpacks, pumps, shirts, toe-clips, carriers, shoes, jackets....the list could go on forever.
Also see....
The FUJI BMX $159.95
assembled by experienced bicycle mechanics
Check our Factory Outlet prices on Dawes Hand built English Bicycles.

CHIROPRACTIC FOR BETTER HEALTH

Dr. Virginia Harper DC
Dr. Howard Ewert DC
CHIROPRACTORS

The Spinal Exam

If you have a back problem or some other problem caused by a misalignment of your spine, a thorough exam can disclose where the problem is located.

The usual position for a spinal examination is lying on the examination table. But this is only one phase of a thorough spinal exam. For one thing, it won't give a full picture of your spinal condition when you're in a relaxed position.

The examination should include a study of how your spine aligns itself when you are carrying heavy objects, when you're standing, and also while walking or running in place. The doctor will also want to know how your spine reacts to stress. He will test various muscles to look for any weakness.

The spine is closely integrated with many parts of your body and the nervous system through which it flows. Areas out of alignment may not only affect the spine but other parts of your body as well. Only a thorough exam will tell if it's in good working order.

In the interest of better health from the office of:
Amherst Chiropractic Center
190 University Drive at Route 9, 256-6700

Doonesbury
Brought to you everyday by Garry Trudeau and the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

IMPROVE STUDY HABITS
● STOP SMOKING ●
HYPNOSIS CAN HELP YOU MAKE IT PERMANENT
Many of our clients are doctor referrals.
Overcome Anxieties, Fears & Phobias
Lose Weight • Insomnia • Nail Biting
Self Confidence • Sexual Problems • Bed Wetting
HAMPSHIRE ETHICAL HYPNOSIS CENTER
Milton H. Askinos, Member A.A.E.H.
Available: Lecture Demonstrations
Call or Write for Free Brochure
The Farrick Building, Rte. 9, Hadley, Ma.
2/10 mile Hampshire Mall (next to Busk's Hardware)
584-1919 by Appt. Only

Hey - Secret Santas

High Notes

For $1.50
a colorful helium balloon
with card
can be delivered
and left secretly.
Additional Balloons Just 50¢

Call 1 day ahead 665-7664

DAYTONA BEACH SPRING BREAK
$299.00 pp
+ 15% quad occupancy
Includes. . .round trip non-stop jet
Boston - Daytona
. . .7 nights deluxe
RAMADA INN on the beach
. . .FREE CAR rental
. . .tour escort
Departs March 5, 12, 19, 26; Apr 2
SAUGUS TRAVEL
314 Central St. Saugus, MA
617-233-8192 617-289-6227

11th ANNUAL BUSH DASH

UMASS SKI CLUB SUGARBUSH VALLEY VERMONT
SKI & PARTY WEEK
JAN 23-28
THIS TRIP INCLUDES:
- Lift Ticket (5½ days)
- Lodging (Hotel or Condo)
- Meals (with Hotel)
- Free Beer & Wine Parties
- Hot Tub & Sauna Party
- Etc. Etc. Etc.

only $189.00
tax and gratuities included
beware of other ski trips that set a base price and THEN ADD 5% tax & 15% gratuities

Non-Members Welcome

Deposit & Final Payment Deadlines have been extended.

So get your deposits in now to reserve your vacation for WINTER BREAK

sign-up table
M-F Ski Club Office 9-3
430A Student Union
for more info call 5-0437

LAGNAF 83

GOING TO BE ON CAMPUS IN JANUARY?
WHERE ARE YOU GOING TO EAT?

- Worcester Dining Commons will be open Lunch and Dinner - Monday - Friday
- Choose any of the five meal plans and SAVE! 20-25-30-35-40 From $70.00 To $130.00
- SIGN UP: DEC. 1-20.
MEAL TICKET OFFICE - FRANKLIN COMMONS

Offering soup, sandwich, casserole, self-service salad bar, and homemade desserts for lunch. Dinner two entrees, self-service salad bar, some vegetarian selections homemade breads and desserts. All this and more for less than you would pay anywhere in the campus area.

WHY NOT TRY IT OUT!

Alternative to an Intersession Board Plan
Pay Cash or Buy Strip Tickets

Mount Snow Vermont Tours "Presents"

SKI SEMESTER
Collegiate Ski Weeks
6 Days 5 Nights
Jan. 2-7, 1983 Jan. 16-21, 1983
Jan. 9-14, 1983 Jan. 23-28, 1983
at Mount Snow Vermont
$179.00 per person Quad occupancy
$50.00 deposit required

Package Includes:
- 5 nights lodging
- A gala welcome party
- Five day lift tickets at Mt Snow ski area
- Five full skiers' breakfasts
- Four full course dinners
- Ski tour guide & host
- And so much more!

* Welcome Get-Together Party * Beer Bash * Wine & Cheese Party * Fondue Party * Horse-Drawn Sleigh Ride * Movies * And so much more
"The Mountain of Fun, MT Snow Vermont"
All Rates Subject to 5% State Tax and 15% Hotel Gratuity Service Charge
Mount Snow Vermont Tours
PO Box 571, Route 100
West Dover, Vermont 05356
802-464-2076

SONY. THE ONE AND ONLY

TC-FX44 STEREO CASSETTE DECK WITH DOLBY "C" $189

STR-VX22 AM/FM STEREO RECEIVER WITH NEW "DIRECT ACCESS" TUNING $215

PS-LX2 SEMI-AUTOMATIC DIRECT-DRIVE TURNTABLE $119

TX-FX66 STEREO CASSETTE DECK TWO-MOTOR, DOLBY "C", WITH REAL TIME COUNTER $285

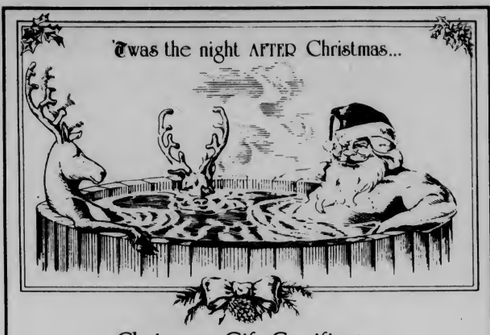
Sound & Music Good Advice Honest Price
90-92 King Street (Rte. 5), Northampton, 584-9547
Mon.-Wed. 10-6, Thurs., Fri. 10-9, Sat. 10-5



Christmas Gift Certificates
One Size Fits All!

EAST HEAVEN TUB Co
Private Hot Tub Rooms
33 West St. Northampton
586-6843

WEDNESDAY NIGHT SPECIAL
Store Open Wed Nite until 9:00 PM
One Hour Special sale
Wednesday Dec 8
FROM 6 TO 7 o'clock

Plan ahead now so you won't forget anyone

SWISS ARMY KNIVES

SAVE 20% OFF Regular Retail Price w/coupon

Great Gift Ideas

20% OFF any Swiss Army Knife in stock

20% OFF coupon valid Wed Dec 8 FROM 6 TO 7 o'clock

Reg price 20% off Price

UNIVERSITY STORE

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
Rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays, Saturdays 1-4

Stay on course with the long gown with sailor collar. Available in an exclusive Lanz of Salzburg signature print in royal blue and pink. sizes XS, S, M, and L. $28.

CIMA

CONTEMPORARY SPORTSWEAR
211 Main St.
Northampton
584-0550

THE SALVATION ARMY

Christmas is love, hope and caring.

At The Salvation Army Christmas means "sharing."

Give to The Salvation Army so others may have a happy holiday.

Hypercurricula

CRAFT FAIR — Craft fair for UMass craft shop. Photos, jewelry, ceramics, paintings, leather, glass, sheepskin and lots more. 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Campus Center Concourse.

BROWN BAG THEOLOGY — "Peace on earth, good will..." is the topic of this theological discussion facilitated by Rev. Phil Ward, 12:15 to 1:15 p.m., 428 Student Union.

FRENCH CLUB MEETING — Last French Club Meeting of the semester. New officers to be elected for next semester. New members welcome. 4 p.m., third floor lobby, Herter Hall.

OLDER STUDENTS 25 PLUS CLUB MEETING AND SOCIAL — Help plan social activities for Spring. Budget, election of officers. Open to all UMass undergraduate, graduate, part-time, UWW and IWW students who will be 25 when they graduate. Friends in fun. 4 p.m., Faculty Club.

CUSP GUEST LECTURE SERIES — Ken Collins will return for a discussion of his unified theory of brain function. Discussion will be question and answer format. Faculty and students urged to attend. 7 p.m., 204 Tobin.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS LECTURE SERIES — Rep. Barbara Gray of Framingham will speak on "Sexism: Sexual Harassment and its Effect on Public Higher Education." 5:30 reception at Memorial Hall. 7:30 p.m. speech at Undergraduate Student Senate meeting, 163 Campus Center.

CAMPUS CRUSADE FOR CHRIST — You're invited to share in fun, friendship, and good Christian fellowship. Newcomers welcome. There's singing, praying, sharing. A leadership training class to teach you more about the Christian life. 6:30 p.m., 109 School of Business Administration.

JOURNALISM CLUB MEETING — Last meeting of the semester will be held to discuss and plan future events. All interested students are urged to attend. We need your input. 7 p.m., Top of the Campus Lounge.

WOMEN'S SPRIRITUALITY GROUP — A supportive community where women challenge tradition ways of experiencing spirituality. Tonight's discussion focuses on discipline as an aid to being spiritual. 7 to 9 p.m., 428 Student Union.

WORKSHOP: "FINALS WEEK SURVIVAL KIT" — Workshop focusing in time management and coping with performance anxiety by Nydia Santiago, ph.D. 7 p.m., Bilingual Collegiate Program, Wilder Hall.

STAR TREK LIVES — Films and info. for S.T. & S.F. fans. All welcome. 7 p.m. 805 Campus Center.

ISRAELI FOLK DANCING — Come dance to these beautiful rhythms. Learn new steps, everyone welcome. Beginners, 7:30; 8:30, all others. Commonwealth Room, Student Union Building.

REPRESENTATIVE FROM KIBBUTZ ALIYA — Interviews and information on Israel programs with a representative from the Kibbutz and Habonim movements. Drop by Hillel to sign up for a free time. 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., Suffolk Room, Student Union Building.

Wednesday
Pub Mug Night
35¢ Beers
- Pub Mugs -
Music by Rack-A-Disc 9-1
No cover

THE PUB
15 East Pleasant St.
AMHERST

EDITORIAL/OPINION

What is a conservative?

Over the years the Collegian has printed numerous editorials by people who complain about conservatives and their beliefs yet who never truly seem to understand the conservative philosophy that they so adamantly oppose. Recently however, an editorial appeared which attempted to describe for the student population just what conservatives are and why they are not worthy of breathing the same air as the most humblest of progressives. Yet let us cast aside that exercise in intellectual futility which merely serves to confirm the old saying that education by no means guarantees intelligence. Instead I shall attempt in my own humble way to explain some of the basic tenets which make up the conservative philosophy.

Katherine Curda

To start off, conservatism is neither a political system nor an ideology, rather it is a particular way of looking at the civil and social order. Thus unlike socialism, communism and oftentimes liberalism, conservatism offers no universal blueprint for society capable of being adopted everywhere. Instead it reasons that social institutions must inevitably differ from nation to nation, since any land's politics will be the product of that country's dominant religion, ancient customs and historical experiences. Every culture, be it East or West, North or South, has acquired habits, customs and conventions similar to others, or peculiar to themselves, which make up the fabric of their social being.

Recognizing that human society is not a machine which can easily be rebuilt to any specification or ideology, conservatives believe that continuity is the lifeblood of a society and that any drastic attempts at destroying this continuity can often lead to situations worse than before. The murder of close to three million Cambodians by the Khmer Rouge in their attempt to build the perfect communist society is the most recent example of blood spilled in the name of progressivism. To conservatives, ideological revolutions such as the Cambodian one slice through the vital fabric of society and in most cases end up killing the patient it wished to save.

However, just because conservatives are wary of radical change, does not mean they are against change totally. Rather they fell that man is suffering from extreme egotism if he tries to cast aside the wisdom of his ancestors and create some brand new world-explaining doctrine out of his own private stock of reason. Conservatives put their faith in prudence and moderation, rather than utopian dreaming and experimentation. Thus they feel that any public measure, regardless of its wonderful promises, ought to be judged by its probable long-range consequences, not merely by its temporary advantages or chic popularity. Most conservatives, though not all, oppose discrimination, yet feel that forced busing and racial quotas are not the right way to solve the problem. Yet because we disagree with the method we are branded racists by those progressives who have staked out the moral highground and make pious judgements on their fellow mortals. Progressives wishing to remake society according to their ideals and who feel a smug superiority towards the past, should remember that the only reason modern men and women are able to see farther than their ancestors is because of the greatness of the minds that have proceeded us.

However, just because conservatives are wary of radical change, does not mean they are against change totally.

Conservatives are also accused of assuming mankind to be evil and therefore "resigning themselves to the inevitability of the situation." It is true that conservatives believe in the idea of human imperfectability, but this is not a surrender to evil, rather it is a belief in the restlessness of human nature which would revolt against any permanent utopia if for no other reason than boredom with enforced perfection. Conservatives prefer diversity and, yes, inequality, to the enforced equality of "progressive societies" because any destruction of talent and initiative would kill that part of man that seeks to rise as high as his spirit will let him and in turn keeps his society alive, vibrant and ever changing. There will never be perfect equality until we are all cloned out of the same mold and then what we would have is enforced mediocrity, not equality.

In closing I will admit that their exists loud mouthed, closeminded and other nasty types of conservatives, but types such as these are found in all corners of the political and social spectrum. The conservative who wishes no good to minorities is just as bad as the radical who feels justified in the need to spill other peoples blood in the name of revolution. Stupidity and ignorance are human failings, not specific to one particular group, but rather to the human race in general. Having laid out these basic principles, I must add that there is vastly more to it than can be written in one editorial. Yet I hope I have succeeded in at least capturing the basic essence of what it means to be conservative.

Katherine Curda is a Collegian columnist

Unpublicized crimes actually occur each day at UMass

To the Editor:

On Sunday night December 5, a UMass student was stabbed in the Southwest Residential Area. The stabbing was, to the best of my knowledge, the result of a personal conflict between two men. The assailant was known to the victim and thus the incident was not a random act of violence but a result of their dispute. Stabbing, however, is a crime of serious implications and therefore merits attention by the press no matter what its cause.

Violence on campus this semester has not received the emphasis in this newspaper it did last year. Those of us here last spring can recall the numerous articles, columns and editorials concerning on-campus crime, most notably rape. The lack of coverage of such incidents recently, however, does not mean we have evolved into a crime-free community, as many would believe.

According to UMass Department of Public Safety figures, one rape and 21 assaults, three of which involved a dangerous weapon, have occurred on campus this semester up to Nov. 31; over 85 percent of these incidents occurred during the evening and late night hours. While overall crime is down 11 percent this year, these figures clearly demonstrate violence has not disappeared from campus.

Police reports were published weekly by this newspaper last year and identified all guilty parties involved in such misconduct. These reports served to continually alert people of the violence on campus and as a result people in general did not take safety for granted. An air of caution, for example, was observed by students if and when they had to walk alone at night. Recently, however, the fear of assault has dissipated and current attitudes reveal a level of nonchalance concerning campus violence. No society is crime-free, and the UMass community will never be immune to such forces. The recent stabbing described above is only an extreme example of the usually unpublicized crimes occurring daily at UMass.

Anne McCrory
Southwest

Editor's note: Due to a lack of staffing, the Collegian has chosen not to cover the area police on a regular basis, since we are unable to cover the courts and clear the names of anyone found not guilty of a crime charged.

Old battles aren't over

Ten years ago this January the Supreme Court issued their opinion in Roe vs. Wade. The case was a landmark in establishing the right of women to have abortions during the first trimester of pregnancy. In 1976 the court further ruled that a woman could have an abortion without the consent of her husband.

This movement by the court came as a result of the women's liberation movement, which was then at its height. The economy was still functionable, and the energy of the previous twelve years of struggle against the Vietnma war, and racial discrimination, was still combusting. While this case was only a partial victory, it was a giant step in the struggle for freedom of choice, and women's control over their future.

Brooke States

Ten years later, the situation is different. The "Right to Life" movement has been on the offensive, with money and good organizing. The economy is dysfunctional. The women's movement, after altering the terms upon which women function in our society, has lost much of it's original power and cohesiveness. A clear example of this is the failure of the ERA to win ratification. This failure was possibly as significant as its success would have been, in determining the political moonscape of the 80s.

The Hyde amendment was one of the first victories of the "Right to Lifers," over the freedom of choice. It prohibits the use of medicaid funding for abortions, except if medically necessary to the health of the mother. In 1980 the Supreme Court upheld this in Harris vs. McRae. The court stated that abortion was different because it involved "the purposeful termination of human life."

At the same time Medicaid funds up to 90 percent of the cost of sterilization, the purposeful prevention of human life, permanently. It is ironic to say the least that those who choose to have an abortion, and are denied state funds if they need it, can rest assured that the state will pay to terminate their possibility of ever having children again.

Ten years after Roe vs. Wade Reverend Jerry Falwell writes on the fight against choice. "We are in a great war for the hearts and minds of our people, the moral future of our country, and for the integrity of a nation. When we win, that victory will not be for ourselves but for God, for America and for all mankind."

To further this crusade the "right to life" movement allied itself with other conservative forces to push through it's agenda. On the national level they have two pieces of legislation. The Hatch Amendment, calling for a constitutional amendment to overturn Roe vs. Wade, and the Human Life Amendment. If the Hatch Amendment were to pass it would for the first time establish the constitutional principal that a state law would prevail over a federal law, when there is a conflict. Thus rights guaranteed by the federal government could be nullified by state governments within their boundaries. The Human Life Amendment would give the fetus human standing as a person. This means that the one million plus women who had abortions last year could legally be prosecuted for murder.

The struggle for and against the right to choose must be seen in a broader social context. Despite it's claim, the Moral Majority has proved itself to be neither. Between 60 and 70 percent of the public support a woman's right to choose. Right to Life leadership and congressional heavies consistently oppose such things as Occupational Health and Safety regulations. This despite the fact that thousands of Americans a year lose their lives as a result of industrial and occupational hazards, and many more are injured. Sex education in the schools is also attacked by this leadership. Apparently it is better to keep kids ignorant and have minors have children. The ultimate goal of the "Right to life" leadership, and their conservative allies is to put women back in "their place," the kitchen, the bedroom, and under control of a man.

But only one out of 15 Americans live this way. Women work because they have to, or they want to. As Louise De Voto of Birthright, and a "Right to Life" spokeswoman said: "In every woman there is a force that wants to reproduce, to fulfill womanhood, it makes it easier if you don't have a choice." Choice is the issue.

Ten years after Roe vs. Wade the women's movement has started reorganizing. Following the advice of Mother Jones to "raise less corn and more hell" grassroots organizing has tried to draw the links to show others that is not just a women's issue. The position of women in a society reflets that society as a whole, and it's values. To keep the gains of the past it will not be enough to rely on the courts. As the Reverend Falwell said from the other side, "It is a battle for hearts and minds."

Brooke States is a Collegian columnist

Reid's racial and sexual discrimination suit absurd

To the Editor:

As a teacher with over twelve years experience now working for the University in a position for which I am demonstrably overqualified, I resent both the complaint and stance of Marie M. Reid. Frankly, I am happy not to be a part of the 10.4 percent unemployed in this country. And as one whose pay is about one fifth of Reid's, and whose day is fraught with both faculty and student problems demanding immediate solution, I find her threat of a "racial and sexual discrimination" suit absurd and tantamount to extortion. It is especially so in light of the fact that in her aggrieved state she is being paid over $1,000 per week. That doesn't sound discriminatory to me, except perhaps in reverse, considering her lack of a Ph.D. — a degree she brazenly announces intending to earn at UMass/Amherst (entitled tuition waiver included, no doubt). Let us not forget the "kicker" of $5,000 atop that salary to cover her "bonus" and legal fees — an annual gross of $57,000!

In short, Reid's grouse is clearly opportunistic and unconscionable. Not even a dog bites the hand that feeds it.

John Laskevich, Secretary
Department of Chemistry

Name calling is unnecessary

In Jackson Katz's column in Friday's Collegian, he stereotyped some of his fellow citizens into several categories. I feel that these blatant categorizations were in poor taste. Let's examine some of Jackson Katz's latent racism: it's too bad he had to "expose" himself.

I used to think that I was a progressive until I discovered that as an "Anti-Student-Government-

David B. Stanley

Association" type (i.e. I dare to second guess their holy decisions), I also subscribe to "putting people down." Oh, I am such an autocrat!

What does a "super patriotic redneck" look like. Do they all have red necks? Should I, as a good Katzian Progressive, advocate separate lavatories for them, or just murder them in the streets?

What malicious form of ignorance do "Conservative-Due-To-Ignorance" types suffer from that Katzian Progressives do not suffer from? I think I will label them "Progressive-Due-To-Ignorance" types just to make their image easier to deal with.

"Cynical-Conservatives" have made the sin of recognizing competition. Why can they not learn from such hallowed non-competitive institutions as our state legislature and UMass' own Physical Plant? Frankly, I wouldn't know, I am "ignorant."

This sort of name calling serves little purpose. So now a "Conservative" is anti-semitic and racist. I have heard this too often. It is [illegible] over again: "YOU'RE AGAINST US YOU'RE A COMMUNIST" only now it is "YOU'RE AGAINST US YOU'RE A RACIST." Just as the former lent little credibility to the ideology of Democracy, the latter does little to combat the problem of racism in our society. But then the "anti-communists" cared little for democracy and were overwhelmed by it, just as Katzian "Progressives," so seemingly concerned with racism, will be overwhlemed by those truly willing to DO something about it, not just give it lip service and use it as just another fascist ploy to grab and hold on to power.

So, because I am in opposition to many of the SGA's policies and modi operandi, I am labeled a

Am I progressive enough for Katzian progressives?

"Conservative." Maybe I am, maybe I am not, that is not the point. I am first of all a human being, a citizen of the world. What I say, I say becasue I have the right; and when there are fascists like Katzian Progressives lurking, the duty to speak out and be heard.

UMass should not concern itself with whether its population swings to the left or swings to the right. It should concern itself with educating as many students as well as it can so that they might go out in to this world and be creative in some way and not end up unemployed or under employed at some Burger Palace.

So, am I "progressive" enough for the "Katzian Progressives"? Probably not, fascists never like real progressives.

David B. Stanley is a UMass student.

Random Notes

We never seriously think about the state of things. Sure, sometimes we catch a glimpse of President Reagan on the tube and we toss around insulting remarks about his age and his makeup, but we never really sit down and discuss economic affairs unless we: a) are polisci or economics majors; b) depend on financial aid to get an education; or c) are suddenly drawn into an economic plight and everything we do revolves around Reaganomics.

Well, I'm majoring in Journalism/English, so that throws out the first option. I am not receiving any University aid although I depend on aid from my parents, so that almost trashes the second option. Ah. The third option. The economics plight. Yes. This must be it.

Dad. (Remember him?) The one you respect and admire, if not love, even though you've been taller than him since age 14...The one who first taught you how to use a hammer rather than coach your Little League team because working with his hands is all he knows...The one who worked at the same metal fabrication shop for seventeen years and busted his balls so you could receive a decent Catholic education, then continued work on the side — late at night alone with his welder in the garage — so you could go to the University...The one who was laid off this week.

Well, it's time to seriously think about the financial situation now, isn't it? My goals...The things that I want to do but don't know if I should because somehow that money could be used elsewhere. Economics and the recession have hit home. In fact, you could say they're 'home for the holidays.'

Now don't get me wrong. This isn't an eulogy for Dad. I'm not looking for charity or even sympathy. My family will get by. I could even go as far as to say we'll do well for ourselves. But, hey! Listen up! This nation's laborers — the men and women who built this country — the backbone of this country — are out of work!

I don't think it's just me. I am not the only one who has had to sit down and reassess the situation. I won't be the last. But we had all better do it soon. Something must be done. Our fathers are out of work.

Ray Beauchemin
Amherst

The University won't bargain for classified employees

To the Editor:

The article on Faculty Contract Bargaining (Collegian December 6) does not reflect the true situation for the Classified Staff at this University. Nor does it reflect our dilemma relative to upcoming contract talks, which were mandated by our present contract to begin no later than April 1, 1983.

AFSCME Council 93, AFL-CIO, the bargaining agent for 1200 Service Maintenance Employees at UMass, Amherst (Local 1776), formally requested "Early Bird" Negotiations by letter to the Board of Regents in October. Our Employer since "reorg" (July 1980), the Board of Regents rejected our request and in a meeting with AFSCME leadership proposed establishing new units with an open-ended delay in negotiations. The matter is currently being litigated at the Labor Relations Commission.

In the same article, the comments by Director of Labor Relations Overings are an act of Lese Majeste. The University, whose labor relations policies are out of date, but in vogue, (they are represented in negotiations by the noted union-busting firm of Skoler, Abbott and Hayes) is indulging in wishful thinking. Unless the Regents change their minds or lose their case, the University will not bargain with its classified employees as it has done previousy The University will be subordinate to the Board of Regents.

AFSCME has requested to bargain a successor agreement. The Board of Regents, not UMass is the Employer. They have denied our request and seek to delay indefinitely.

The Employees are ready, the Union is ready — it is the boss who is foot-dragging.

Jonathan G. Tuttle
Local 1776
AFSCME AFL-CIO

79 Main Street
Amherst

across from Plumbley's off the common

Secret Santa Gift Box:
includes:
- Bremner wafers
- Trappist preserve
- Twinings teapack
- Toblerone chocolat
- ½ lb New Zealand cheddar
$3.95

Dastardly Dans
Mon - Thurs
$3.00 Cover
FREE DRAFT
9 - closing
50¢ Highballs
50¢ Domestic Beers
Pool Table - Pinball - Video Games
POOL TOURNAMENT TONIGHT

Recycle this Collegian

LAGNAF 83

WE NEED CERTAIN COLLEGE MAJORS TO BECOME AIR FORCE LIEUTENANTS

Mechanical and civil engineering majors aerospace and aeronautical engineering majors chemistry computer science mathematics majors

The Air Force is looking for young men and women preparing themselves in academic areas like these. If you're one of these people, you may be eligible for the two or four-year AFROTC program. And to help you with the college bills, a two, three or four-year scholarship could be available to you.

The AFROTC program leads to an Air Force commission. That means excellent starting salary, promotions, medical and dental care, 30 days of paid vacation each year. But more than all that, it means responsibility for people and high-value equipment. It means challenging work, and a chance to serve your country with pride.

Find out today about an Air Force ROTC scholarship. It's a great way to help pay for your college, and it could be that your present major will help you become an Air Force Major someday.

College Freshmen - enroll in AS112
Sophmores - Call Capt Pickell, 545-2451
Juniors & Seniors - Call TSgt Courtemanche at 737-1302 for officer Training School Positions now available: Pilot, Navigator, Missle, Science- Enginner, Non-Technical

AIR FORCE ROTC
Gateway to a great way of life.

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Wednesday Night FREE
Hot & Cold Hors d'oevres 10 pm
Sombreros 95¢
Rolling Rock Pitchers $2.95
Rolling Rock Drafts 50¢

OPEN HOUSE
for Students Interested
in a Professional Career in
PUBLIC HEALTH
Graduate programs in
Biostatistics Epidemiology
Community Health Education Health Administration
Environmental Health Public Health Nutrition
Come to Meet Students and Faculty
Friday, December 10 10:00 a.m.
917 Campus Center
Division of Public Health
University of Massachusetts/Amherst

CARNIVAL VERACRUZ

Wednesday, the Bluewall goes south of the border to celebrate CARNIVAL VERACRUZ. This flamboyant festival dates to the 16th century, when recipes of both the Spanish explorers and the native Indians merged to create, what has become, contemporary Mexican food.

Mexican Soup
Chicken Tacos
Burrito Dogs
Chili • Rice
Mexican Corn
Green Beans
Flan &
Assorted
Desserts

Come Break Our Piñata at 12:45

Wed. Dec. 8
Bluewall Cafeteria
11:30 am-1:30 pm

Arts

Mass lacks any appeal

MASS APPEAL
Stage West, West Springfield
December 6-11

By PAM MADNICK
Collegian Staff

The message behind Bill C. Davis' play Mass Appeal is to be honest and to say what you feel, not something to please an audience. If, as a critic, I am to take Davis' own advice seriously I should say Mass Appeal is about as appealing as a television sitcom.

The quality of acting by Larry Keith as Father Tim Farley and Steve Culp as Mark Dolson was clearly that of professionals. But technically the production was poor.

Nonetheless, the play is different and funny. It is a story about Father Tim Farley, a priest who caters to his congregation to win their love. He sips burgundy during the morning office hours, rides his exercise bike in his office and uses a young seminary student as a pawn in a game with the Monsignor.

The seminary student, Mark Dolson, who once challenged Farley's sermon has not been assigned to work as his assistant. Dolson is not exactly what you'd expect. He is a very progressive, down-to-earth character, who jogs everywhere and embarasses his senior consistently. You almost want to sympathize with him, because he does everything Father Farley tells him to do and never wins.

Neither of the characters are realistic however. There are bits of realism in both, but neither can stand alone.

The play is very light, except for one scene where Farley tells Dolson about his mother's death.

One of the funnier moments of the play was when Father Farley went up to the pulpit and every time he tried to speak, the organ would begin to play.

The script's major fault is that it calls for the audience to be used as the congregation. This means the houselights (the lights normally on when you come into or leave the theatre) are turned on at least four times during the performance. I always thought lighting was used to create illusions, to carry the audience into another dimension — the realm of the imagination. This show jumps in lighting — from reality to make-believe. Again, this is a problem built into the script not the production. I think it could have been resolved by not bringing the lights up to the full brightness.

Furthermore, anyone sitting on the right side of this theatre was not getting their money's worth. One would literally see the back of one character for at least half the show. This problem is partially due to blocking, but more due to the particular stage's thrust. If the play had been performed on a stage where there was a clear distinction between the audience and stage (a proscenium stage), perhaps the problem might have been avoided. It doesn't seem fair to charge half the audience the full price when they can only see half the action.

Another strange thing about the performance I attended was that there was a standing ovation. For what, I wondered? Television is equally as exciting as Mass appeal and at least there no one will be fiddling with the lighting or standing in front of the set.

Play by Play

by Pam Madnick

The UMass Music Theatre Guild will present a musical comedy revue called UMassed for it! on Thursday and Friday evenings at 7:30 and 10 p.m. in the Hampden Theatre. The revue is a series of skits and songs paradying the perils of college life. Tickets are $2 at the door.

Calamity Jane continues at Present Stage in Northampton. Showtimes are at 8:30 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Present Stage, 19 Hawley St., Northampton. The play stars Suzanne Baxtresser and is directed by Steve Wangh.

Owners by Caryl Churchill tells a story about characters from all walks of life and their differing philosophies. Owners will be performed at Smith College in the Hallie Flanagan Studio Theatre at 8 p.m. tomorrow, Friday and Saturday night; and December 17 and 18.

The Easthampton Theatre Association performs Equus by Peter Shaffer at the Williston Theatre, Payson Avenue, Easthampton. Showtimes are Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m.

Political theatre comes to UMass this weekend as the Little Flags Theatre of Roxbury presents To The People. The production combines original sketches with songs of American labor and liberation movements and will be performed at 5:30 p.m. tomorrow in Worcester D.C. and at 5:30 p.m. Friday in Franklin D.C. Admission is free.

Little Flags Theatre will also perform the hit musical New Rise of the Master Race in Hampden Theatre at 8 p.m. on Saturday night. Tickets are $1 for students and senior citizens and $2 for the general public.

The Little Flags Theatre will offer two workshops. Frida Oestereich will give a workshop on „Instruments for People's Music" Friday at 2 p.m. in the Chadbourne Dorm lounge on Saturday, Maxine Klein will offer another workshop on "Beginning Acting" at noon in Brooks Dorm lounge. Both workshops are free.

Do you ever wonder what it would be like to have a twin? Stuart Browne, guest playwright at Hampshire College, has written a play about the original Siamese twins. The Two will be performed in the Performing Arts Center, Emily Dickenson Hall, Hampshire College on Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. Tickets are $2.50.

Getting Out by Marsha Norma is a drama about an ex-convict who tries to vanquish the violence within her. Performances run tonight through Sunday at 8 p.m. in the Mount Holyoke College Laboratory Theatre. Tickets are $4 for the general public and $2 for students and senior citizens.

The University Ensemble Theatre closes out its 1982 season with a Curtain production of A Day in the Life of Joe Egg by Peter Nichol. Joe Egg is the story of a married couple and their totally helpless daughter. Her mother cannot stand cripples and thinks it's the State's responsibility to eliminate such from society. Her father is determined to give advice, even against their will. The production opened last night and continues tonight, tomorrow, and Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theatre, FAC. Tickets are $2.50 for the general public and $1.50 for students.

The Boston Theatre of the Deaf comes to Jones Library in Amherst next Wednesday to give a dramatic presentation on sign language. This particular program is recommended for elementary school children and is open to the public. The group will perform in the Burnett Gallery at 2:30 p.m. next Wednesday.

The Little Flags Theatre will perform New Rise of the Master Race at 8 p.m., Saturday night in Hampden Theatre.

The rusty nail Inn presents
Wed. Dec. 8 — 2 for 1
Thurs. Dec. 9 — Cryer
Fri. Dec. 10 — Shaboo Allstars (blues)
Sat. Dec. 11 — NRBQ
Rt. 47, Sunderland, MA 665-4937
You must be 18 to enter.

"The Best Chinese Food"

家滿園南湖

Hunan Garden Restaurant

MANDARIN SZECHUEN CUISINE

Every Mon.-Thurs. from 5-8

& Sunday from 11:30 - 3

For only $5.25 per person

Chicken Fried Noodles	Hot & Sour Soup
Sweet & Sour Chicken	Chicken Fingers
Pan Fried Rice	Pan Fried Ravioli
Chinese Barbecued Pork	Beef with Green Pepper

Sun.-Thurs. 11:30 a.m.-10:00 p.m.
Fri. & Sat. 11:30 a.m.-11:00 p.m.

10 Belchertown Rd., at Route 9, Amherst
256-0251 256-0252

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

Entertainment at its Best

Lotte Goslar's
PANTOMIME CIRCUS
Thursday, December 9 8:00 pm

BIG SIX of JAZZ II

with Billy Taylor, Max Roach, Slide Hampton, Richard Davis, Jimmy Heath and John Hendricks

Saturday, December 11
8:00 p.m.

MC, VISA-CHARGE YOUR TICKETS TODAY
Telephone reservations Noon-4:00 p.m. M-F
545-2511

Fine Arts Center Concert Hall

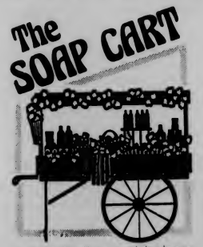
GIFTS

elegant gift boxed housewares

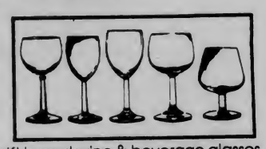
HATS, GLOVES, SOCKS & SCARVES

CANDLES
Big selection of colors, shapes, and scents.

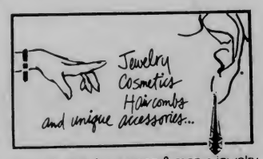
The SOAP CART



bubblebaths • moisturizers
soaps • soaps for kids
loofahs • brushes • sponges
sachets



gift boxed wine & beverage glasses



toys & games

casual wear for women & men • jewelry
cosmetics • soap cart • accessories • gifts
home furnishings • kitchen • housewares
glass & china • prints • cards • totes & soft luggage

SUNDAY 12-5
EVERY NIGHT TIL 9
VISA

FACES
Downtown | Amherst

A Store-full of Stocking Stuffers

Ski Now - Pay Later

UMASS SKI CLUB

Aspen, Colorado
SKI WEEK Jan 8-15

This Deluxe Vacation Includes:

- ☐ Round Trip Air, Scheduled Non-Stop Service from Boston, NYC, Phila. or Wash. to Denver
- ☐ Round Trip Bus Transfers to Aspen
- ☐ Deluxe Slope-Side Accommodations for 7 Nights, Tax Included
- ☐ Six-Day Lift Ticket Good at Aspen Mountain, Snowmass, and Buttermilk

Deluxe Slopeside Shadow Mountain Condominiums

Featuring fully equipped kitchen, maid service, fireplace, color TV, heated pool, sauna, and skiing out your door

$659 per person

or

Woodstone Hotel Package

Located right on the mountain next to the lift, featuring: heated pool, jacuzzi, sauna, maid service, apres ski atmosphere

$599 per person

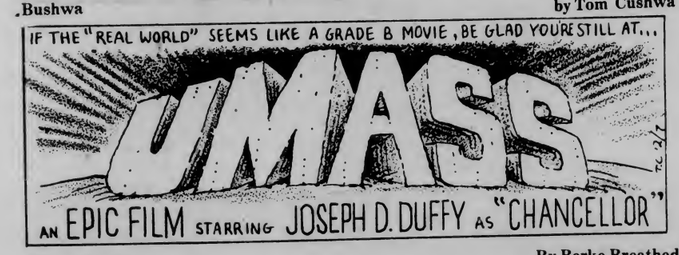
Sign-Up Now
Ski Club Office
430A Student Union
5-3437

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

The UMass Zone By Mark Rollins

Under The Influence By M. Joyce

Bushwa by Tom Cushwa



Bloom County By Berke Breathed

D.C. MENU

LUNCH	DINNER
Stuffed Pepper with Tomato Sauce	HOLIDAY DINNER Rib Roast of Beef/Au Jus
Grilled Cheese Sandwich	Breaded Chicken Breast Steak Whole Cranberrry Sauce
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Pineapple Yogurt	Deep Dish Vegetable Pie
Stuffed Pepper	Puff Pastry Topping
Grilled Cheese on Sprouted Wheat	Breaded Chicken Breast Steak Whole Cranberry Sauce

Attention Artists

The Collegian is looking for comic strips for next semester. All students are invited to submit samples for possible consideration. Samples should be of production quality, drawn in black ink, in similar proportions to those appearing on this page. Samples should be submitted to Ed Levine, Managing Editor, Collegian, 113 Campus Center by Monday, Dec. 13.

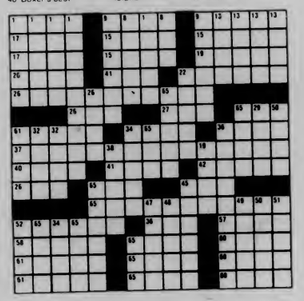
CROSSWORD

Edited by Margaret Farrar and Trude Jaffe
1982 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

ACROSS
1 Hoover town
5 Siberian city
9 Calendar entry
14 Scent
15 Learn by ——
16 Stir up
17 Ceremony
18 Fishing boat
19 Soft drinks
20 Evening, in Roma
21 Former Spanish queen
22 Dad: e.g.
23 Leading actress in many movies
26 Conger
27 Scottish negative
28 Sometime musical instrument
31 Tropical tree
34 Young adult
36 Arm bone
37 Come —— hit song
40 Traffic sign
41 —— duke
42 Kelauver
43 Wallet item
44 Soul: Fr.
45 Posed
46 Boxer's best
52 Torment
56 Newspaper features
57 Challenge
58 Know
59 Fit of pique
60 Decorates a cake
61 She —— me
62 Girl in a Salinger story
63 Periods
64 Siphonaptera
65 Swarm
66 Greek district

DOWN
1 Block of the earth's crust
2 Farewell
3 —— Dame
4 Lubricating device
5 Trial
6 Day dreaming
7 Man or vote
8 Famed composer
9 Penny ——
10 —— Richard
11 Regulation
12 "No man —— island
13 In case
22 Flat: in combinations
24 Letter opener
25 Foe
28 Dress feature
29 Bancroft
30 Jokesters
31 Aide: Abbr.
32 Evaluate
33 Short jacket
34 A Road Not
35 Spot
36 Spontaneous
38 House, in old Rome
39 Harvest
44 Evaluate
45 Method
47 Piece of music: French style
48 Turn on ——
49 Mother of pearl
50 Finest part
51 German novelist
52 Word with empty or full
53 Mil. offense
54 Very favorable review
55 Location
59 Tennis unit



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

L	I	P	I	D		C	A	S	A		H	E	D	G	E
I	N	O	N		U	L	L	R		O	L	E	A	N
T	A	K	E	A	L	O	O	K		M	A	N	E	T
O	W	E		S	T	E	W		N	E	T	T	L	E
N	E	R	V	O	U	S		F	I	R		I	M	P	U	D	E	N	T
S	I	V	E	L		E		B	E	A	N		B	O	A
L	E	N	O			P	E	N		B	O	S	C
A	L	I		M	O	L	E		P	L	A	N	E	T
S	A	D		D	R	E	A	M		A	E	R
			R	E	E	L		S	T	A	N	D	B	Y
T	O	P	A	S	S		C	A	I	N		R	O	E
A	D	E	P	T		A	R	G	E	N	T	I	N	A
M	E	L	E	E		D	E	A	N		V	E	I	N	T
P	R	E	S	S		Z	E	I	S	T		A	I	R	E	S

Weather

Today mostly sunny. Highs in the mid 40s. Cloudy tonight with a chance of light snow, or rain mixed with snow. Lows in the upper 20s to mid 30s. Tomorrow, a chance of light snow, or mixed snow and rain in the morning, clearing in the afternoon. Highs in the 30s, falling into the 20s.

CABLE/VIDEO

Monday

PoliSci Video

10:30 - 12:00	Senate Watch — The Weekly Student Senate Meeting
12:00 - 1:00	The No Nukes Rally at UMass
1:00 - 2:00	The March for a Non-Nuclear World in Washington

WMUA 91.1 FM

6-9	Good Morning Amherst with Teresa
9-12	Just noise with Mike Malone
12-3	M
3-5:30	Mary Kelly — The Beat Escape
5:30-6	Newswatch with Greg Wells
6-7	Sportscafe
7-10	Paula T
10-2	Therpsichorean Cacophony with James Neill
2-6	Glory Gospel Road with Rev.Pearson

Aggies now 4-0

By JIM SAMIA
Collegian Staff

The Stockbridge basketball team raised their record to 4-0 on the young season by winning two games this past weekend.

On Friday night, the Aggies traveled to Williston Academy and came away with a 58-44 victory. Forward John Paquette led the way with 19 points and 11 rebounds. Center Craig Manning had 17 points to go along with 13 rebounds.

Stockbridge maintained the lead the entire game. The Aggies played well in spots to secure victory.

On Saturday, Stockbridge went to Deerfield Academy. The Aggies ran away with the game to the tune of 87-63. Stockbridge played exceptionally well in the beginning of the game, picked up a big lead and never looked back.

The Aggies placed four men in double figures. The rout was led by Chris Storie who had 16 points.

It was a successful weekend for the Aggies who have now won 14 straight games dating back to last year. They face a stiff test when they take on Mount Herman and their 6'8 star Scott Wilson from Amherst this week.

Gymnasts to take on Lowell

By ELLEN RICHARD
Collegian Staff

As the University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics team prepares for its meet against Lowell tonight at 7:30 p.m., at Boyden Gym coach Roy Johnson will be resting a couple of key players who will be training for an important meet on Saturday against Syracuse.

All around Willie Stevens, one of the top competitors on the team, will not perform in tonights meet because he will be working on perfecting his skills for Syracuse. Stevens, who scored a 49.40 in last Saturday's meet against Army, was averaging 52 points a meet last year.

Co-captain John McGonagle will also be sitting out of the competition tonight but will serve as a back-up in the still rings event.

Co-captain John McGonagle will also be sitting out of the competition tonight but will serve as a back-up in the still rings event.

Replacing Stevens and McGonagle will be Joe DeMarco and Glen Schaff. Demarco, who is a very consistent performer according to Johnson, will be performing in all of the events except the pummel horse. Schaff will compete in the pummel horse and still rings event. Phil Gorgone will also be competing in the meet performing in floor vaulting events.

John Macurdy will be the anchorman on the floor exercises and long horse vaulting. In his floor routine Macurdy will be performing a one and three fourths back somersault with a half twist.

All around Bert Mathieson, who will be anchoring the pummel horse, rings, and parallel bars event, will be performing his first double front somersault on the vault. Mathieson has the ability to go 9.2 on the parallel bar and 9.6 on the high bar and will be looked upon to hit high scores on the horse and parallel bar.

Key players for Lowell will be Tim Bowes, who will be performing a fly away (somersault with a half twist and recatching the bar) on the high bar.

Photo courtesy of UMass Sports Information

Bert Matheison will be on the rings tonight as the Minutemen host Lowell in Boyden gym.

Christmas Tree
Lights & Decorations
Toys & Games
at
A.J. HASTINGS
Newsdealer and Stationer
45 S. Pleasant St., Amherst

Wednesday Night Special
Wed. Dec. 8, 1982
1-Hour Special Sale 7-8 o'clock only

NUVOX
AM·FM STEREO RECEIVER
Frequency Range: FM 88MHz–108MHz
AM 530KHz–1600KHz
Sensitivity: FM 15 db
AM 55 db
I.F. Rejection: FM 45 db
AM 30 db
S/N Ratio: FM 50db 1mV/input
AM 40db 5mV/input
Separation: 30db (1KHz)
T.H.D. of Amplifier: <1%
Power Out: 30mw+30mw
Power Requirement: DC 3V UM-3×2
Dimension: 107(H)×67(W)×21(D) m/m
Weight/Unit: 90 g

Nuvox WX777

Special Holiday Hours Wed 9-9

Reg $29.95
Sale $24.95
w/coupon

coupon valid
Dec. 8 from 7 to 8 o'clock
Limited Quantity

$5.00 OFF Nuvox WX77

UNIVERSITY STORE

This Summer Spend
Six Weeks in England
July 15 - August 26, 1983

Learn and Tour Live in Norwich, England and study English History and Literature while earning 6 undergraduate credits (non-credit by special arrangement). Explore England and Scotland with many side trips. The price of $2640 includes round trip Boston-London air fare, single room accommodations with full English Breakfast, all tour/admission charges, tips and gratuities. Space is limited. Deadline: April 15, 1983

For details contact: Prof. Jordan Miller, Dept. of English University of Rhode Island Kingston, R.I. 02881 (401) 792-5931

URI in England Summer 1983

College of Continuing Education
University of Rhode Island

LACROSSE TEAM
FINAL EXAM JAM
AT Joey D's
WEDNESDAY NIGHT

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday - Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10 % • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?
Reckedisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

AUTO FOR SALE
69 Firebird convertible - A classic. Needs engine work and some minor body work. Easily restorable to mint cond. BO around 2000. Call nights 256-0435
79 Triumph TR7 30000 miles AM/FM cassette exce condition best offer 253-3406
75 Olds Starfire 6 cly hat-back good cond. stereo $1675 tel 253-2016
VW Superbeetle beautiful runner 1971 $1050 549-5377
71 Delta 88 very dependable winter car $300 or BO 665-3471

BELLYGRAMS!!
Delivered by professionel bellydancer for most unusual gift. Thereze 253-7822

BROWNIEGRAMS
Three flavors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

DRYCLEANING
Kevin's Kwik-N-Eesy Wey. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ENTERTAINMENT
POLODROID DJ's - Best Everything Call Pat or John 253-2957

FOR IMMEDIATE RENTAL
10 min from campus
one room apt with plenty of
FREE HEAT!
948 N. Pleasant St.
Dec. rent negotiable $150/mth thereafter call Steve 586-5827

FOR RENT
BKO is renting rooms for intersession. Full use of kitchen facilities. Most modern house on campus, best location between town and campus. Call Paul at 549-3582 or Marty at 549-0206
Three bedroom epartment, Northwood 665-2577 9 PM - 9 AM
Single room evelieble in 4 bdrm apt. on bus line. All utils included opening available for winterses/spring sem. call 253-2605
Two bedrooms on bus route available January first call Lew or Ed 256-6712
2 rooms in large house on bus route Hadley $125 call Barbara 586-3936
Two rooms Sunderland 95 or 140 incl. Jan 1 call 665-2241 till midnite on bus route

FOR SALE
GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972
100% Alpace wool sweaters handmade in Peru. Selling for much less than store cost! Great Christmas gifts! 546-5612
Color TV 19" Seville bought new in August 225 Bill 253-5362
Reichie Ski Boots mens 7½ excellent cond. $60 or BO Joel 6-1080
Twin Bed - excellent condition $75 also desk & bookcase 253-5713
Who Dec 11 front sec floor seats 546-6977
Twin bed box spring and mattress new must sell call 256-6086 evenings ask for Fran
Sterling Silver Rings and Earrings great Xmas gift call Chip 546-9534
WHO Tickets for Worcester BO 546-5149
One set of golf clubs. Good condition. 256-6303
WHO TICKETS 12/11, Centrum. J. Geils New Years Eve, Centrum BO 256-6303
Korg 770 solo synthesizer $325 Cromar synthesizer bass peddles $250 Bundy clarinet $100 all excellent condition Jim 546-5976
8-trecks wide selection call Bob 6-5293
Snow tires H78-14 general tubeless GTN bia/belt white walls in excellent condition $40.00 for the pair 546-9411
FLUTES - OSSI DRUMS Craft Show Wed on Concourse. Dollar off flute with ad
GREAT HOLIDAY GIFTS Mexican imported wool sweaters and Jergas. Pullover and wrap-around sweaters only $35; Jergas only $10. Assorted sizes. 253-7216
For Sale Ski Rack fits all cars with rain gutters call 253-9678
J. Geils 12/27 1st show U.S. tour New Haven excellent floor seats 549-4032
1970 VW for sale good condition see it to believe it call 546-6139 or 789-2144
Ski Bindings. Tyrolia 150. In good condition. $30.00 or best offer. Call Marc -9695

FOUND
Cross pen identify and its yours call Kathy 546-1435
White Kitten, female. Found behind Thompson Hall, 12/5 can't keep. Call 256-8638 soon or she will go to animal shelter

HELP WANTED
Assistent Business Mensger at the Collegian. Business major preferred but not a requirement. Low pay, great experience. Apply at the Collegian by Dec. 8. An equal opportunity employer.
WFCR needs spring interns. Up to 9 credits possible working in membership. Call 545-0100
Nationwide Inventory Service needs part time people Dec 26 to Jan 30. Must live in greater Lowell-Lawrence, Woburn-Watertown, North Shore areas, have phone, transportation and available nights and weekends. Contact Student Emp. Office.

LESBIAN AND GAY
Are you Gay? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2645 or drop in CC 106

LOST
"Lost" 12/2/82 womens sweater, red, black & white, cardigan. Extreme sentimental value. Please call Kathy 549-5518 or leave at Info Desk. Reward. No questions asked.
REWARD lost wallet black somewhere in Campus center call Gary 6-4770

PARTY
!! Important!! Party! Party! Party! Party! Party! The final fling before exams start! Wednesday December 8th 2 for 1 drinks (8 to 10:30) at the place with the airplane on the roof - Route 9 Be there!!!!!

PERSONALS
Holiday Open House Kappa Kappa Gamma all UMass women invited for an afternoon of holiday cheer! December 10th 3-5. RSVP 545-0320 545-0321
Happy Birthday Pat and John born to run together Love, JB SC SM
CONGRATULATIONS
To all the New Brothers of Alpha Epsilon Pi
Robert Albert, Mike Borkum, Mike Gould
Ira Rappaport, Robert Kennedy
Alan Rastellini, Randy Hanna
John Tessel
Photography: Pictures for all occasions. Think about Valentines Day; Discounts for appointments arranged before break call: Manie 256-0865 or Mike 6-1477
MMM Have a good 24th best wishes not so secret admirer
To the Poor Richard's Pig - 3rd floor Thoreau: You know who you are and so does everyone else! You bring out the child in us! You also lie as well as you play football! We're still playing games!. . .Midnight Writers
Moore Houte vote Rick Byer$ for Tre$urer

Attention!
Collegian Classified and Display Advertisers: Final Deadline for Semester
Monday, Dec. 13th, 3:45 PM
no exceptions
Collegian's last day of publication
Wed. Dec. 15th

Phil - You're one day closer to death Happy Birthday - Live it up!
Scott Stockwell - Holly berries are red, Christmas trees are green, Your secret Santa says not to be so mean He sees you when you're sleeping! He knows when you're awake! So you better be good for goodness sake. To receive your first clue you must sing this song for the entire Collegian staff Wed. Love SS
Thenks for the Perty Twinny Poo. Happy Birthday, Love Baby A
Rob K Happy Birthday love you Ann
Finel exems, memory, concentration, -success - group rates University Hypnosis Center 549-4645
House-mother needed for U-Mass sorority if interested please call 545-0527
MIDNIGHT EXPRESS: all invited to SUB on 12/8 at 7 and 9:30 pm to see this award winning movie admission $1.50 sponsored by Panhellenic Council
SEXISM: Pub Pol of SGA welcomes Rep. Barbara Gray of Fram. Speaking on Sexual Harassment and its effects in Public Higher Ed. on Dec. 8th Recp. Memorial Hall 5:30-7:30; Lecture CC 163 7:30-8:20 all are urged to attend info 545-0341
Lauren Kieciek Good luck in finals and your decision love Sis
Kim of wesh 22 - That unmarked clue was for you. Signed S.S.
Toots, Skippy end Wee-wee, Yes I love you all and especially you Toots. . .Happy Birthday Blondie!! Love from your favorite soon to be sailor
Moore House - Vote Steve for President tonight.
Who tickets eveilebie 11th row this weekends concert call Stuart 256-0271 best offer! call today
Capt. Osmo: Your one quarter of a century old and going strong. Happy Birthday (sorry its late), from the crew of E-3, waiting for the big one.
UPC members end friends Everyone Who's Anyone! Come party with UPC's end of the semester bash further info stop by office and see Donna or IrmaAlice 406 Student Union
Rob — Met you at the Pub outside last Thurs. nite. Hope we'll meet up again soon. Nancy

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE
Dissertations, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED
To Milwaukee/Chicago Aree around 20 Dec. will share gas/driving. call Pam 253-7405.
To Everglades or anywhere in Florida after X-mas Day call Brenda 617-544-2624
To Syracuse NY Dec 10 for WHO concert expenses shared call Saul 546-6021
To Colorado for Christmas Break call Shaun 549-6138.
Help! I want to go home 12/23 - MD - DC Area will share driving and dollars Bonnie 546-6074.

ROOM WANTED
Females looking for a bedroom. in Brittany Manor for spring semester. Please call 549-5586. Keep trying.
Single room wanted for spring semester call Mark 549-2838 keep trying.
Female seeks own room in Amherst for spring semester Jocelyn 549-6860
Female seeks own room in house or apt 253-2294 Sheryl.

ROOMMATE WANTED
Housemate wanted beautiful log cabin in Leverett wood heat available now Cindy 256-6434
Male to share bedroom in Southwood townhouse, $93/month, evenings 253-5963
Starting Jen 1 2 males remaining in 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt 2 openings call 253-5920
Female roommate wanted for Southwood apartment from Jan 1 on. Call 256-0630
One room available in Puffton prefer one male 549-6322
3 roommates wanted for Jan 1 and spr semester Brittany Manor call Tim 256-0606
One or two females for large bedroom in Southwood apt starting Feb 1st 253-5215
Female wanted to shere Puffton apt during int session $125/month includes heat. Preferably non-smoker. on bus route please call Debbie evenings 546-9660 or 546-9662
Responsible person for own room in Hadley apt $130 + electric 584-5045
Spring sem male non smoker to share br in RG townhouse apt Dave 253-9431
Britteny Menor two people for one bedroom $115 month heat included Craig 253-7985
1 or 2 femeles wanted to rent Brittany Manor apt over break for details 253-7650
Femele - share single bedroom Puffton starting February - lease until June 549-6741
Puffton Villege - 3 bdrm sublet avail. for Jan with spring option avail for 1 bdrm, M/F, call 549-0621.
Female Roommate wanted Jan spring sem. Southwood townhouse $93 + 253-3273
Own room available in house near Southwest. Starting January $110/month 549-6495
Femele wented to share Brittany Manor Apt. Call 253-7360
Own Bedroom in two bedroom apt in Brittany Manor Apts Jan 1 256-8388

SERVICES
Writing essistence. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729
Moving? Our 12 foot enclosed cube truck will help you safely move your stuff 256-0480
Pest Accurete Typing $1/page please call Leslee at 584-4880.
SPEEDY TYPING SERVICE
24 hour typing at reasonable rates
For professional service call Jim 546-7042
Say Something Speciel Made-to-order verses cards or gifts for more info 536-8683

SKI TRIPS
Smuggler's Notch Vermont Intersession trips, only $149!! For more info call: Roberta or Steph 549-6235

TO SUBLET
Women wented to shere room in apt Feb great deal for info please call 665-7109
Whole apt. 2 bedroom Squire Village call 665-3032
4 bedroom apt on bus route Swiss Village $165 ech including utilities 253-9519
1 Bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment on bus route available Jen 1 Laurel 665-3519
2 bedroom apartment heat and electricity included 665-3982
Intersession rentel Southeast St $180 utilities included call Bob 256-6017 after 8
2-3 bedroom townhouse in Echo Hill Jan-Aug $510 call 253-2589
1 bedroom apt 2 min from Center avail intersession 175.00 256-6948
One bedroom on bus route intersession $90 + contact David at Bluewall Bar 12-3 or call 665-4048

WANTED
Stratomatic Baseball Cards wanted 1971 through 1979 call 549-4141 Mark
Needed Rush tickets for any date besides Dec 15 call 665-7918 ask for Tom or Anne

WANTED TO BUY
Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT
Looking for an apartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jen Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093
Looking for heated garage within 10 mi. radius of Amherst call Jordan 542-3158
LAURIE:SECRET SANTA SAYS: It has a broken lock, the sign says please knock, only a few, know it was you, who wrote that sign. I have a hunch, that after Wednesday lunch, that if you want to know more, you'll find it behind that door.

Collegian* staff: Meeting at 7 tonight in the office

Sports

More Sports on Page 14

UMass damages Harvard, 72-64

Damminger leads with 27 pts.

By ADAM NAZIMOWITZ
Collegian Staff

Freshman forward Karen Damminger scored 27 points and pulled down six rebounds to lead the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team to a 72-64 victory over Harvard University at the Curry Hicks Cage, last night.

Damminger came out of the game with about nine minutes left in the first half with a charley horse, but came back in the second half to hit 12 out of 17 from the field while adding a few steals and blocked shots along the way.

"She played an outstanding game. She is a fine athlete and a tough person to keep down," said Coach Marry Ann Ozdarski.

"It took awhile to get used to playing and to get it all together. My concentration was better, because I was not thinking about every shot. The whole team hustled tonight," said Damminger.

UMass utilized a full court press consistently during the game, and it resulted in many Harvard turnovers and UMass points.

Harvard jumped ahead early, but then Damminger took control inside to put UMass ahead for good, midway through the first half. Both Damminger and Jerrie Bernier, who had 12 points and nine rebounds, drove to the basket and stopped Harvard under their basket.

It was an all-around team effort as Wendy Ward, who played an outstanding game according to Ozdarski, took control of the ball in the backcourt and kept the team under control against the pressing Harvard defense. She scored eight points and had seven steals, four rebounds and three assists.

Barbara Hebel had an off night shooting, but still managed to collect 11 points, six rebounds, five assists and two steals. Rebecca Kucks had eight points and eight rebounds, while Kelly Collins pulled down eight rebounds. Ozdarski called it Collins' best rebounding game.

UMass played better defense as the man to man coverage pushed Harvard outside and prevented second shots inside.

"All we do is team defense, and to get the kids to do it in the game is what's right," said Ozdarski.

UMass, who took a 37-29 halftime lead was pretty much in control throughout the game, but every once in a while would let Harvard creep back into the game.

But UMass got the clutch basket when they needed it and held off a last minute charge by a suddenly rejuvenated team that had been pretty lackadaisical through much of the game.

"Harvard never game up. I think their coach, Kathleen Delaney Smith, did an outstanding job. They are a hustling team, and I wouldn't want to meet them later in the year," said Ozdarski.

"For us, it is another step forward. We take things one at a time. Tonight, we got the crucial rebounding and played more consistently. The team is playing well together and getting more experienced. They played well on Saturday and tonight. They shot better, played better defense and the kids deserve to win," said Ozdarski.

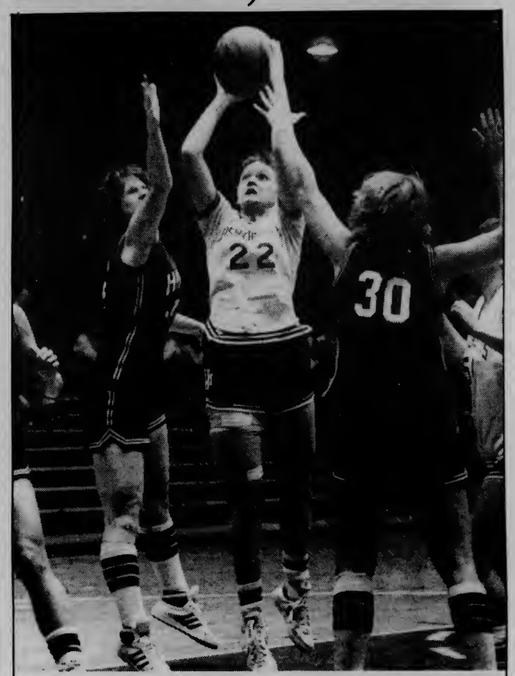

Photo by Dave Deuber

Karen Damminger goes up for two of her 16 second half points despite a bandage on her leg for a charley horse, last night. Cindy Clapp (30) defends for Harvard.

NHL stable and entering Golden Age among the pros

By GREG BOURIS
Collegian Correspondent

What do the NFL, NBA, and the NHL have in common? All three had the unenviable task of renegotiating collective bargaining agreements this past summer.

What resulted was a 56 day player strike in the NFL and the NBA is currently operating without a collective bargaining agreement.

In the NBA case, the only reason there is no player strike is the fact that the average salary is $215,000.

Only the NHL was successful in its attempt to reach an agreement on time. Successfully renegotiating a collective bargaining agreement demonstrates the willingness and ability of the NHL owners and players to work together at the bargaining table to solve problems rather than create them.

The NHL has quietly become the most progressive sport organization in North America. After suffering through a period of instability when the league expanded from six to 21 teams, in a span of 12 years, the NHL has now entered its "golden era."

In this new era, the NHL is doing more for its fans than any other professional sport. Last year, the league geographicaly realigned its divisions. This provided for a schedule where teams played division members eight times annually and non division members three times. What resulted was an element that seems to have been lost in professional sports, the rivalry.

By operating with the fan in mind the NHL is now sitting pretty. Last season, the NHL set an all-time attendance record for the third consecutive season with a total of nearly 12 million fans attending games.

The NHL has also become the first major sport to have exclusive national cable television rights. The USA Network will have extensive coverage of the NHL with a 33 game regular season and a slate of 20-25 playoff games, including all games in the Stanley Cup finals.

What's more important to the NHL is the type of fan that is attracted to its games. The NHL has managed to attract fans that will establish long-term loyalty. This type of fan is extremely important to any sport enterprise.

According to an NHL marketing survey, its fans are well educated Americans, 73 percent of whom earn $35,000 or more. People who hold professional or management positions make up 65 percent of the fans.

With progress like this the NHL is beginning to make an upward move on the sports totem pole. With the future of the NBA cloudy, thanks to absurd salaries and empty arenas, the NHL is about to knock professional basketball out of the number three position.

So sport fans, if it's respect you're looking for, climb aboard the hockey bandwagon. And as a result, both you and the NHL can rid each other of the "Dangerfield Plight." Lack of respect.

It was a Clapp Homecoming but it didn't help Harvard

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

It was awkward. Amherst's Cindy Clapp returned to the Cage last night, not in the familiar uniform of the Massachusetts Minutewomen - which she wore for two years - but in the Crimson red of Harvard in last night's women's basketball battle between UMass and Harvard

Clapp played like the old Clapp, one more year wiser, even though she was limited to nine points on the evening. She led the Crimson attack early in the first period as they stalked out to an early lead.

"It was awkward playing against someone who I used to play with," said UMass point guard Wendy Ward. "Cindy played pretty well."

Although it was awkward to Clapp too, she was more excited than nervous about playing here in the Cage and seeing familiar friends and faces. She was also excited about the ball game.

"I was very excited about coming here," said the 5'11" junior. "It was so nice to be back here. I've been looking forward to this game for a long time."

UMass didn't have reason to like the Clapp homecoming early in the game as she played a big role in the early 8-4 Crimson lead. Clapp put the first points on the board with a outside jumper to give Harvard, 2-4 on the year, a 2-0 lead.

Clapp played some aggressive ball as she pulled in some rebounds, drew a fouls upon her and scored again with a top of the key jump shot to give Harvard a 8-4 advantage.

The Amherst native remained a effective force for the remainder of the first half, until she had to leave the game with a wrist injury.

Clapp returned in the second half and was later taken out. She returned with little under five minutes to go and she drew the task to guard Karen Damminger, who was outstanding as she hit for 27 points on the evening.

The Harvard defense pressured the Minutewomen and Clapp narrowed the UMass lead to six, 66-60, with another top of the key jump shot.

Clapp also proceeded to tap away the ball from Ward and that led to Harvard recovering a UM turnover. Clapp scored Harvard's final point with a foul shot and ended up with nine points and three rebounds to her credit.

"I wanted to win," said Clapp, "But I came knowing I would enjoy the visit, win or lose." Clapp has been playing consistently for the Crimson this season, but she feels that she can do better.

"It is different for me because I'm working with a new team and learning new offenses and defenses. It takes time to get used to," commented Clapp.

UMass coach Mary Ann Ozdarski called Clapp an outstanding lady and great ball handler.

"It was kind of strange to play against her," said Ozdarski.

All in all, it was homecoming for Cindy Clapp in the Cage. She played just as she did in the UMass maroon and white: as a dominant force on the court.

"UMass is still a great school," said Clapp, "and there is a lot of great people that whom I still miss here."

Banda wins soccer honor

Kalekeni Banda, who led the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team to the NCAA quarter-finals this year, was named the New England Region coach of the year by the National Soccer Coaches Association.

UMass lost to eventual NCAA runner-up Central Florida, 2-1, in the quarter-finals. UMass did, however, finish first in the NCAA New England region rankings, going undefeated in the New England region, which includes Mass, NH, VT, and Maine.

Banda led the team to a second place ranking in New England, overall, behind UConn, who finished third in the country. Massachusetts finished fifth ranked in the country with a 15-4 record. In 1981, UMass finished seventh in the nation.

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian

Volume CXI, Issue 64 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Thursday, December 9, 1982

Students want to sue university over excessive summer noise

By DAVID SUMMERSBY
Collegian Staff

Eighty students living in Prince House have filed a class action suit against the University of Massachusetts for "hardships and suffering" received during summer session 1982 while renovations to bathrooms were under construction.

Due to "unbearable" conditions and inadequate notification of what was to occur, the students of Prince House are seeking what they consider to be proper redress from the University in compensation that could amount to $24,000.

The suit has been sent to the Residential Appeals Committee which has the power to decide the case.

Speaking on behalf of Prince House, Betty Fleishel-Lewis, a resident of the dorm, told the six person committee during the formal hearing of Nov. 30 exactly how the students felt about the situation and what they wanted as a result.

"We charge that we have been wrongfully deceived about the magnitude of the renovations on the bathrooms in Prince and the amount and degree of noise we could expect as a result of the work," she said. "We also have been subjected to excessive amounts of dirt throughout Prince because of the said renovations Our rights as tenants were grossly violated by Housing Services."

Lewis said the students of Prince were particularly upset that Housing Services did not adequately notify the students last spring, before they agreed to live in Prince, of what was planned for the dorm. In a letter to Prince House residents last May, Gerald Quarles, housing assignment Coordinator, said, "It is anticipated that there will be little or no inconvenience to summer residents, however, a certain amount of noise from time to time should be expected if you are in the building during work hours.'

"There was terrible miscommunication between everyone involved including Housing Services, Physical Plant and the contractor," Lewis added. "They took advantage of us completely. Housing Services just assumed we would pay our housing fees, continue with our studies and never open our mouths."

Lewis said she told the committee that as compensation for all the hardships and violations received, the students wanted "a full return of all housing fees and rents for the first summer session from June 1 to July 15, to each student." Also, "because of the disruptions that occured to students trying to study and prepare for classes and comps during the worst of the renovations," the students want 25 percent of their tuition returned.

Television network on UMass campus will link Mass colleges and businesses

By JOHN DiPALAZZO
Collegian Staff

A television network that would be based at the University of Massachusetts and link colleges and businesses throughout the state may soon be a reality following passage of a bill by the state House on Tuesday.

The bill, which would create the Massachusetts Corporation for Educational Television, now faces final enactment by both the Senate and the House before going to the governor for his signature.

The present bill, however, does not set aside money for the network itself, but only creates the commission, which in turn will submit a detailed proposal on the network to the state legislature, said Greg Dillard, legislative aide to Representative James Collins, (D-Amherst).

"The Corporation has been established to do a study to determine what kind of a system will be installed," said Stan Rosenberg, administrative assistant to Sen. John Olver, (D-Amherst).

The system will allow for "two-way interactive" communication, both audio and visual, Rosenberg said.

He said the system would eliminate the main problem that had plagued previous educational television systems with which students could not ask questions or otherwise communicate with instructors.

The major advantage of the system, Rosenberg said, is it will allow "degree programs to be offered on site at businesses, plants and libraries."

"Employees will no longer have to travel 150 miles to get that special course," Rosenberg said.

The system will benefit UMass by allowing it to offer more courses to more people. Also it will allow for easier exchange of resources among colleges and universities hooked up to the system, according to Rosenberg.

For example, he said, if Harvard wishes to offer a particular course UMass offers already, it would not have to recruit another faculty member to teach that particular course, since it would be able to receive transmissions of the UMass class.

The initial cost for planning the system is $350,000. The system itself will eventually cost between $10 million and $11 million, Rosenberg said.

The Corporation must now decide whether to build a system of its own, lease a system from a private company, or use a system already in place after making improvements upon it.

The system will be operated on a "user fee basis," according to Rosenberg, and will be self-supporting within 5 years.

Although the system will be based at UMass, no new buildings will be constructed, said Rosenberg, who added "it's my impression that the largest structure would be a tower" for the microwave relay.

Collegian photo by Drew Ogier

Russel Johnson (right), a 12-year-old Boy Scout from Amherst, makes a shrewd business deal by selling Lisa Danforth, a junior Botany major, a healthy pine to decorate her apartment for the holiday season. The tree sale is being sponsored by Amherst Boy Scouts in downtown Amherst.

Collegian photo by Drew Ogier

Barbara Gray, (R-Framingham), at last night's Undergraduate Student Senate meeting.

Sexual harassment topic of Senate address by state rep

By HANNAH HOSOM
Collegian Staff

With a mixture of humor and seriousness, Rep. Barbara Gray, (R-Framingham), discussed her experiences in the Massachusetts State Legislature last night at the Undergraduate Student Senate meeting.

"I wasn't sure I could go in there and hack it in the system," she said of her political beginnings 10 years ago, when she ran against a Democratic incumbent in a Democratic district. "But I remembered what someone once told me — you can do anything you want to."

On the issue of sexual harrassment, Gray said although it is serious subject, she has encountered little of it in her job.

"I've tried to establish my place on committees as one of equality and mutual respect, and it has worked very well," she said. She noted that when she went to the Speaker of the House during her first days, to talk to him about which committees to join, he told her the major thing he was going "to get you ladies is a ladies room." Once she made it clear she was there for work though, serious work, she encountered few other remarks.

On sexual harrassment in the state, she announced: "Governor Edward J. King will issue an executive order next week that states there shall be no more sexual harrassment in state government."

"We should never give up on anyone," she added.

When asked about the women's caucus in the House, she said the members did not touch issues they disagree upon strongly, like Medicaid-funded abortions.

"Last year we extended our efforts in budget. It's where the dollars go that's the important thing — things like money for displaced homemakers, funding education on diethyl stilbestrol (DES), ...and for foster care. We work to see the issues we care about are put forward," she said. "Women seem to care more than their male colleagues."

She discussed her opposition to repealing the Blue Laws: "There's something different about Sundays...more to life than materialism and commercialism."

Addressing the Bottle Bill controversies, she mentioned the defeat of the proposal to delay the enactment of returnable bottles until October, and the following proposal to institute it in April.

She also explained the change in scholarship for higher education proposals. The money which formerly would have come from a cigarette tax may now be supplied by money from returned bottles.

"Stay tuned. They (the bottlers) are going to try and block passage of that one," she said.

During the question and answer session following Gray's talk, one student senator asked her what a Republican was doing "with such good ideas." After the laughter died down, Gray smiled and explained she had originally run on a Republican ticket to get elected, because she couldn't beat the Democratic candidate in the primary.

"I think it's a good idea for both parties to have liberals, conservatives and in-betweens," she said.

World and National News

D.C. Monument terrorist killed in barrage of gunfire

WASHINGTON (AP) — A man threatened to blow up the Washington Monument with a truckload of dynamite yesterday, demanding "a national dialogue on the nuclear weapons question." After 10 hours, police opened fire as the vehicle was driven in the direction of the White House and the occupant was killed.

Police said they suspected an accomplice, meanwhile, had made it to the top of the monument and was hiding in one of the rooms.

"We are still operating under the information ... that there is a potential for an explosion," said D.C. police inspector James Shugart after the body was removed from the truck.

There was no indication that the truck had "1,000 pounds of TNT," or dynamite as the man had claimed.

Shugart had said earlier that bomb-sniffing dogs had a positive response when they were led to the truck, tipped over on its side in a barrage of police gunfire.

The inspector added that police decided to open fire once the truck started moving and the danger existed of endangering hundreds of people somewhere else in the city.

"We weren't about to let the van leave the monument grounds," said Mayor Marion Barry. The truck careened down the grassy slope toward Constitution Avenue, and was brought to a stop at a point still several blocks from the South Lawn of the White House.

The truck was registered to 66-year-old Norman Mayer of Miami Beach, Fla., who had a history of protesting against nuclear war — the last few weeks outside the White House gates.

"As an act of sanity, ban nuclear weapons or have a nice doomsday," said a printed leaflet that served as a list of demands. It warned that the truck contained "1,000 pounds of TNT that can be detonated four different ways on automatic."

AP Laserphoto

Connecticut State Police troopers carry the casket of Lt. Thomas Carney from St. Rose Church in Newtown Ct., yesterday following funeral services for Carney who was killed Monday when he was hit by a truck as he was issuing a motorist.

Walesa and Andropov on the minds of the Polish people

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — The people of this Baltic seaport, birthplace of Poland's independent Solidarity trade union, are looking toward two men to decide their future, Solidarity chief Lech Walesa and the new Kremlin leader, Yuri Andropov.

But despite their anticipation, the mood in this city of 500,000 seems to be one of sadness rather than hope as Dec. 13, Poland's first anniversary under martial law, approaches.

Walesa, released last month from an 11-month internment, is scheduled to break a vow of silence Monday during a ceremony marking the 12th anniversary of a labor demonstration in which scores of people died.

Father Henryk Jankowski, Walesa's priest, advisor and spokesman, said the 39-year-old labor leader would deliver a speech at the base of a soaring steel monument erected to the dead workers outside the V.I. Lenin Shipyards.

"Walesa has asked me to shield him from the press until the speech," said Jankowski, who first gained attention after he entered the shipyard to say Mass and hear confessions during the August 1980 strike that led to the founding of Solidarity.

However, some citizens were eager to talk about the future—but not to be identified by name. Gathering at the apartment of a local writer, they were full of questions about Andropov, who last month replaced the late Leonid I. Brezhnev as general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party.

Andropov headed the Soviet KGB security police for 15 years and spent the previous decade running the department of the Communist Party Central Committee dealing with eastern Europe. He is thought to have personally approved Hungary's successful experiments allowing some capitalist enterprises in a predominantly socialist economy. Many Poles hope the new Soviet leader will show similar leniency in letting Poland solve its economic problems.

AP Laserphoto

Yesterday marked the two-year anniversary of John Lennon's death. In front of the New York apartment building where Lennon was gunned down and where his wife Yoko Ono and their son Sean still reside, Lennon fans gathered last night in a commemorating candlelight vigil.

Clash between Israel and Lebanon once again

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli and Lebanese troops clashed yesterday in their first firefight since the June invasion. Two Lebanese soldiers were killed and one Israeli was wounded in the 15-minute gun battle near the Lebanese Defense Ministry in the Beirut suburb of Yarze.

Police, meanwhile, reported nine people killed and 24 wounded in the continuing fighting in Tripoli between militias of the Sunni and Alawite Moslem sects.

The Arab Bank and several other buildings were reported set on fire as the pro-Syrian Alawites battled Palestinian-backed Sunnis for dominance of Lebanon's second largest city, 50 miles north of Beirut.

The Lebanese government radio also reported that Israeli troops ringed the southern port city of Sidon and made a house-to-house search after an Israeli patrol was reported ambushed before dawn near the city.

But the Israeli military press center near Beirut said it had no reports of any searches or unusual activity in the Israeli-occupied city 25 miles south of Beirut.

The Israeli military command suggested that the Lebanese-Israeli clash was accidental. The Lebanese command said it resulted from a heated argument.

An Israeli communique said a Lebanese soldier apparently fired his weapon by mistake as two Israeli jeeps and an ambulance were passing the Defense Ministry in convoy.

The Israeli soldiers, thinking they were being ambushed, "fired back at the sources of the shooting," the communique said.

However, a Lebanese communique said the shooting occurred during a heated argument between guards at the Defense Ministry compound and an Israeli army patrol that "pulled to a stop near the statue of Emir Fakhr-Eddin at the road intersection of the Defense Ministry compound." It did not say what the argument was about.

Lt. Col. Arieh Brosh, an Israeli army spokesman who said he witnessed the clash, denied Lebanese radio reports that the Israeli patrol tried to enter the compound.

MX in trouble in Senate amidst twisted logic

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, stung by House rejection of production plans for the MX missile, ran into stiff criticism in the Senate yesterday on its proposal to bunch the deadly nuclear missiles together in Wyoming.

"The public is getting the idea the whole thing is a boondoggle," Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., one of the Pentagon's staunchest allies in Congress, told Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

"I don't think you realize the degree of trouble the MX basing mode is in now," Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a strong supporter of military spending, said as the Senate Armed Services Committee began hearings.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, told Weinberger that a "political decision" had apparently been made to cancel the basing plan favored by former President Carter in favor of "a basing mode that is more environmentally acceptable but may not be technically feasible."

Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., winding up his service in the lame-duck session following his defeat in the November election, said he strongly supported the MX but not necessarily the so-called "dense pack" plan for deployment near Warren Air Force Base, Wyo.

The flood waters are rising on the Mississippi

MISSISSIPPI (AP) — Floods that have chased more than 35,000 people from their homes in the Mississippi Valley gushed into new territory yesterday while receding waters in some areas left entire towns a muddy mess with cars and debris piled against houses and trees.

Torrential rains late last week caused flooding that has left at least 20 dead and four missing in Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas, with preliminary damage estimates topping half a billion dollars.

Winds gusting to hurricane force yesterday knocked out the power to 143,000 households in Southern California and blew cars off icy Interstate 80 in Utah, where up to 15 inches of snow fell in places.

A blast of Arctic air plunged temperatures below zero across much of Montana, North Dakota and northern Minnesota and below freezing across the most of the other northern states from New England to the Pacific Northwest.

Freezing drizzle glazed broad areas from eastern New Mexico to northwest Illinois. Roads "like a sheet of ice" in the Oklahoma Panhandle caused many accidents.

The Mississippi River yesterday lapped within inches of the top of a levee ringed with 3 feet of sandbags near St. Louis and the Illinois River was expected to crest Thursday at 10.5 feet above flood stage in Peoria, Ill., just inches short of the level in record flooding in 1943.

"If we get any more rain, we can just forget it," said Roger Pritchett, inspecting the Mississippi levee in a light drizzle just above the confluence of the Missouri River near St. Louis.

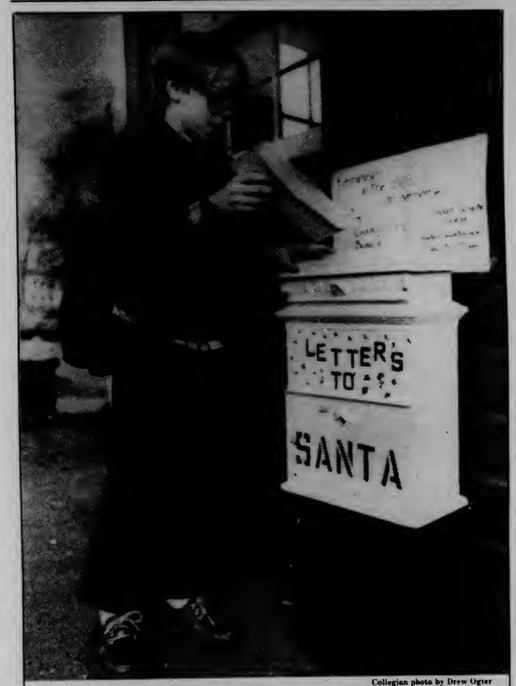
The nation's mightiest river is expected to crest about 14 feet over flood stage below St. Louis on Friday.

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Diane Kadzis
Copy Editor — Richard Nangle
Layout Technician — Brad Eden
Photo Technician — Drew Ogier
Composition — Lauri Neely, Scott Stockwell, Gail Tanzer, Jenny Winslow, Terri Cooper, Joy McCarthy, Laurie Frank, Ken Kalinowski, Adrianne Dufour, Sheryl Silver, Lynn Eisenberg, Sue Ellen Koczela, Marge Hochman, Jamie Katz, Liz Ward, Becky Robins

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $18 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.



Collegian photo by Drew Ogier

Matthew Williams, an Amherst youngster, is making the North Pole connection as he drops his Christmas list to Santa Claus in a holiday mailbox in front of Amherst's information booth.

Different core requirements may be introduced next fall

By MARK J. WELCH
Collegian Staff

The Undergraduate Student Senate last night endorsed in principle the final report of the Student Subcommittee on General Education and endorsed the "spirit and direction" of the Faculty Senate's efforts to redesign the "core" curriculum at UMass.

The endorsement, which was unanimous, will have an impact on the Faculty Senate, which will consider the General Education proposals next Thursday, according to Rob Thayer, coordinator of the student subcommittee.

"Implementation could begin almost immediately, as soon as next fall," said Thayer, who noted that the new requirements would not affect students already enrolled in the University. Thayer noted implementation will occur over the course of several semesters.

The General Education proposal was submitted to the Faculty Senate last May, and has since been revised. Further revisions will probably be made before the proposal is presented to the Faculty Senate next Thursday, Thayer said.

A brochure explaining the General Education proposal was mailed to every undergraduate last, week, Thayer said, because of the importance of the issue. That brochure included both the faculty and student reports on the proposal as of that time.

An important factor in the change to the General Education or "core" system will be student involvement, Thayer stressed.

"Real learning involves students as active learners, not passive consumers of an educational package," the student subcommittee's final report stressed.

Other flaws the student report said the new General Education proposal sought to address were problems in the advising program, a "lack of a coherent sense of purpose," a concern for "an understanding of the world as a diverse and multi-cultural population," and a need for more rewards for faculty who spend time on undergraduate teaching and advising.

Included in the General Education proposal are the Writing Program already implemented this semester, a Freshman Tutorial and Senior Seminar, a course in quantitative reasoning and six "breadth of knowledge" courses which correspond to the current C, D, and E cores.

In other Senate business, three amendments to the Student Government Association By-laws were proposed, one by each of the SGA officers.

SGA President Jim Murphy proposed an amendment which would restrict the positions of SGA president, treasurer and speaker to a single person. In the past, it has been general practice for two persons to serve as "co-presidents" of the SGA. Other than Murphy, the office of president has not been held by a single individual since the early 1970's.

Lisa Potter, SGA Treasurer, submitted revisions to Chapter 8 of the SGA By-Laws, developed over the summer. Potter said the changes were made necessary because of a change in the accounting system made in 1979. That motion will also be considered at next week's meeting.

Speaker Sharon Davies proposed a By-Law amendment which would change the makeup of the Senate Coordinating Committee.

Affirmative Action programs adopted by town of Amherst

By GREG BROWN
Collegian Staff

The town of Amherst has recently adopted four Affirmative Action programs in compliance with guidelines set by the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination, which will supplement the town's commitment to protecting the rights of underrepresented groups.

"Along with the town's already strong Affirmative Action program, there is now a Minority Business Enterprise Program, a Contract Compliance Program, a fair housing plan, and a Municipal Employment Activities Program," said Chris Hart, assistant town manager, Tuesday.

Hart said the programs were adopted so the town could get a self-help grant of $32,000 from the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs for a conservation program.

"We can go to the state with virtually any program and we won't get any money unless the Commission Against Discrimination signs the grant application. So they have regulatory authority over state appropriations," Hart said.

"It's the state's intention that we implement these programs and they leverage that intention with the municipalities' need for funds," Hart added.

Amherst's original Affirmative Action program has primarily focused on municipal employment policies.

The new Municipal Employment Activities Program is an extension of the towns already existing municipal employment policies. "We just make sure that the hiring and firing of people from public positions has nothing to do with race or sex," Hart said.

"Three of the programs are actually just statements of policy that we pracuced already," Hart said. She added that the only program which set any significant rules was the Contract Compliance Program.

The primary goal of the Contract Compliance Program is to account for the hours of contractors work for the town, Hart said. Along with the town's quarterly report, the Commission will now receive a weekly report from the contractors.

The Minority Business Enterprise Program is an effort by the town to make a commitment to give five persent of its business to minority-run establishments.

"We're going to try to do this by advertising and procuring these goods and services," Hart said. "There's nothing hard and fast about this policy. It just means that we're going to make a greater effort to patronize minority businesses."

James Cope, the Town Planner, gave an outline of the plans for the Fair Housing Program. A Fair Housing Committee was formed by the Amherst Board of Selectmen, with Cope as its director, and a policy of non-discrimination in housing choices was adopted by the town.

Basketball team trying harder now as stabbed freshman guard is healing

By DIANE KADZIS
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts basketball player who was stabbed Sunday night is out of the intensive care unit of Cooley Dickinson Hospital. Now Arthur J. (A.J.) Wynder's teammates say they will play unyielding basketball in the interim of his absence from the court.

"There has been an effort to try harder for A.J. (since he was stabbed Sunday night)," said Darryl Carter, a freshman guard for The Minutemen, as he emerged from an especially rigorous practice yesterday. "A.J. has a great sense of humor and when he's not here like this you miss that. It makes you try harder."

The incident, which left Wynder with a wounded abdomen, was allegedly the result of a "discussion" about a woman who is a friend of both Wynder and Micoyan Van Dyke, a suspect apprehended by police Sunday night who is now being held on $10,000 bail in the Hampshire County House of Correction.

Police reports say Von Dyke, 19, was here visiting the woman from New Bedford and met with Wynder to "discuss a relationship." The stabbing allegedly took place in the course of their meeting on Massachusetts Avenue near Kennedy dormitory.

"My reaction was one of disbelief," said Carter, Wynder's roomate who said he was with Wynder Sunday night after he was wounded. "It's common for something like this to happen in New York City, but not in Amherst."

"At first it didn't hit me. I've never had a friend who had been hurt like that. The day after, when I read about it in the newspapers, it hit me," said Tom Emerson, a freshman center on the basketball team.

Wynder is expected to be released from Cooley Dickinson by the end of this week and will probably return home to Newington, Ct., Carter said.

Meanwhile, the team is awaiting his return to Curry Hicks Cage when the team will be complete. "I can't wait to have him back here," Emerson said. "There's definitely an absence on the team...We all need him."

When the Minutemen travel to Connecticut today to challenge The University of Connecticut, Carter said the team's special effort will be showing. "The game is televised and A.J. will be watching," Carter said.

Kenneth Collins returns to UMass to speak on brain theory

By AMY JENNESS
Collegian Staff

Kenneth Collins returned to the University of Massachusetts upon request last night saying humans are savages until they understand the theory of the brain function.

Collins said he believes he has the answer to how the brain works.

"Until we understand how the brain causes us to think we are savages," said Collins. "Five hundred years from now people are going to look back and laugh at us. We are ignorant savages and I for one do not want to remain in that state."

On October 26th Collins gave a three hour lecture at the University explaining his theory. The president of the Council of Undergraduate Students in Psychology (CUSP), Thomas Grinsley said students at the lecture were interested in Collins' theory and wanted a chance to discuss it with him.

Collins told the gathering of six people his theory of human understanding (understanding how the brain works) explains why people feel hate, prejudice, love and all other types of emotion. He contends once a person understands the theory they can understand the source of prejudice and erase it from their minds.

"Millions of people are affected every day by prejudice," said Collins. "All we want to see happening is human understanding. So get angry at your professors, get them down here to talk to me, they are not doing their jobs."

"Human understanding will happen within the next five years, come hell or high water," Collins said.

Collins theory states neural impulses of the brain become random when confronted with a new situation. Collins said the brain wants to seek out new information and learn, but at the same time it involuntarily steers people away from unknown situations to protect them from danger.

Collins, 33, from Chicopee, said he has been working on his theory of the brain for 11 years. He started on it when he was an undergraduate at Springfield College.

Collins tried to show his work to professors at UMass but no one would listen or take his theory seriously.

"I came to the professors at UMass as an undergraduate student. I came to them as a graduate student. I came to them as an independent researcher. They still don't listen. It'll happen, that's all I can guarantee," he said.

"This discussion tonight was for people who were at the first meeting," said Grinsley. "A lot of people wanted to ask questions. Also a lot of people got burned out listening to him speak before. He spoke for three hours and only covered 40 percent of his theory."

"I think a lot of students believe in him. It's the faculty who doesn't believe him. However, a lot of people who were at the meeting before mostly knew about behavioral psychology. They didn't have much background in the biological theory of how the brain functions and I think they were lost," Grinsley said.

UMass Judiciary Board makes critical campus decisions

By ELLEN M. RYDER
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Judiciary Board, unlike the Supreme Court, cannot put anyone in jail. Like the Supreme Court, however, it makes crucial decisions that affect the public. The 18 member board acts as judge and jury in cases ranging from shoplifting to student elections.

UMass senior Christopher Cook, Clerk of Courts for the Judiciary Board, serves as administrative head of judges.

"There is some overlap between dorm judicial boards and the SGA judicial board," Cook said. "We have jurisdiction over all shoplifting cases (involving the University Store), RSO groups and questions regarding the SGA constitution and bylaws."

The dormitory judicial boards, on the other hand, make decisions on cases within the dormitory such as vandalism or "endangering behavior."

A tribunal (three judges) hears each case, Cook said. The tribunal acts as a jury but also as a judge, maintaining courtroom order and passing sentences.

The punishment for shoplifting, for example, is frequently a fine of a determined multiple of the cost of the item stolen. Cook added that one can certainly be suspended for shoplifting. A form of school probation, called "Jeapordy", is sometimes recommended in such cases.

"Every decision made is technically a recommendation to the Dean of Students," Cook said. "To my knowledge, no tribunal of the University Judiciary has recommended expulsion."

The hearings are open to the public and cases involving the Student Government Association attract crowds of interested students, Cook said. Although shoplifting cases are the most frequent, Cook said, they do not interest many people.

"The most interesting cases are questions within the SGA itself, like the Jim Murphy case (last year)," Cook said.

The board presided on the hearings that examined the validity of the election of Jim Murphy, now SGA president. Cook presided in the case.

"I handle such things as the logistical aspects of a trial," Cook said. "I reserve rooms for the trials, send notifications and deliver court notices."

In addition to these duties, Cook draws up and is authorized to sign the budget for the board. He also coordinates training for new judges.

Due to his numerous responsibilities this year, Cook does not preside in the trials. He is an inactive judge, except in impeachment cases. In such a case, Cook would be allowed to preside in the hearing.

Students who seek legal representation are encouraged to ask for a student advocate who acts as a public defender.

"It's good to have a student advocate argue your case," Cook said. "They are assigned through the Attorney General's office. The Attorney General can also prosecute, if you want it to."

If there have been any complaints about the way in which the hearings are run, Cook said he has not heard of them.

"I would say there haven't been complaints," Cook said. "Although every case results in one party being dissatisfied, nothing is directed toward the conduction of a hearing."

"We (the Judiciary Board) are the only branch of the SGA recognized by the Board of Regents in the Student Code of Conduct," said Cook.

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
Rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays
Saturdays 1-4

Need Cash?
Buying Class Rings
Highest Prices Paid
Also: Gold & Silver—Coins & Jewelry
Member Amherst Chamber of Commerce
DANIEL S. SMITH
25 North Pleasant Street
Amherst Mon - Sat 10 - 5:30 tel. 256-0710

High People In High Places
UMASS SKI CLUB
Mandatory Meetings:
Thursday Dec. 9
ALL MEMBERS
Public Health Aud 7:00 PM
Tuesday Dec. 14
All Sugarbush & Aspen People
Hasbrouck Room 20
Mandatory Meetings for more info 5-3437

SAVE $1.00
w/coupon
on Ziggy or Garfield Soap
5 oz size
Located at the registers
A Christmas Checklist
Be prepared now so you won't forget anyone

$1.00 Off
Ziggy Soap
5 oz Reg. Price $3.50
Quantity
$1.00 OFF valid thru 12/24

$1.00 Off
Garfield SOAP • SAVON
Garfield Soap
5 oz Reg. $3.50
Quantity
$1.00 OFF valid thru 12/24

O'Keefe Ale
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
O'Keefe Ale
The Only Place To Be On Thursday Night In Amherst
O'KEEFE NIGHT
12 oz Bottles .95
plus
Two For One Bar Liquor Drinks
Three 7 oz Rolling Rocks $1.25

SHOE SALE!
UP TO 50% OFF
On Fall Shoes and Boots
Choose from an impressive array of famous names including: Bandolino, Jazz, Hippopatmus, Unisa, Hana Mackler, Joan & David, Mootsies Tootsies, Caressa, Nina and Sporto.
DEC. 9, 10 & 11
sizes limited, so hurry!
STRUT
197 Main St., Northampton

Collegian photo by Katie Watters

Liane Brandon, associate professor in the School of Education, makes alternative films to address women's issues that never make it to the screen.

Feminist filmmaker and UMass prof is one of few in industry to make non-Hollywood experience films

By LEE ANN BARTOW
Collegian Correspondent

While many people criticize the film industry saying it promotes sexism, a feminist filmmaker and University of Massachusetts professor uses her trade to fight it.

Liane Brandon, associate professor in the School of Education, is an independent feminist filmmaker who has produced multi-award winning films such as "Once Upon A Choice," "Anything You Want To Be," and "Betty Tells Her Story."

A recent report from the Director's Guild states that in the last 30 years only two-tenths of one percent of Hollywood films made have been directed by women, Brandon said.

"Since there are so few films made by women and minorities, we're missing a great deal of our heritage. Instead, films are being made that reflect the Hollywood experience. That's a lifestyle very few of us know," she said. "I can't imagine that I'm the only one who perceives sexism as a problem."

Brandon said she examines social issues, the "human condition," or "what makes people tick," along with the mechanics of filmmaking.

"I almost wish that there wasn't such a need for films that deal with sexism. Perhaps if sexism wasn't so pervasive the need would be less," Brandon said.

Brandon started teaching at the UMass School of Education in 1973. She teaches film production, the use of films in educational settings and workshops for teacher certification classes.

"I like my students. I'm very fortunate in that no one is required to take a film course so my students come desperately eager to learn," she said. "I often try out my ideas on them as they do with me and we learn together."

"Anything You Want To Be" chronicles a high school woman's funny but frightening conflict with sex role stereotyping. The heroine wants to become a doctor and is then steered towards nursing.

"Anything You Want To Be" won a blue ribbon at the American Film Festival, had screenings at the Museum of Modern Art in New York and the National Film Theater of London, and was shown at the First International Festival of Women's Films and the Paris International Film Festival.

Brandon is currently working on a film chronicling the disarmament movement, which she said she plans to finish sometime next year.

"The movitivation for making my films is not a monetary one. Fortunately my films frequently make a profit which I use to start my next project with," she said.

Brandon's films have been used nationally and internationally by schools, colleges, churches, community groups and civic groups, she said.

"Once Upon A Choice" was purchased by Home Box Office, Cinemax, and U.S.A. Cable, as well as the Television Corporation of New Zealand. In addition, the film won a silver award at the Houston International Film Fesival, was a finalist at the American Film Festival and won a Golden Eye Award from the Association of Media Educators.

Brandon said producing a film is a more complicated process than it first appears to be.

Fundraising before a project begins is a long and difficult procedure, especially in these trying economic times. Brainstorming and planning also take much time before actual filming begins, she said.

In 1972 at the First International Festival of Women's Films, Brandon met three other feminist filmmakers. Together they formed New Day Films, a distribution cooperative for films whose makers are dedicated to bringing about positive social change.

ATTENTION
Collegian
Classified and Display Advertisers
Final Deadline for Semester
MONDAY, DEC. 13th, 3:45 pm no exceptions
Collegian
last day of publication Wed. Dec. 15

the Hungry U Restaurant
55 University Drive
Amherst, MA
Fine Food and Drink at affordable prices
Relax at the 'U'
Friday Afternoon Happy Hour
99¢ Bar Drinks
50¢ Drafts
Orgasms $1.50
all the free pizza you can eat
2:00 - 5:30 Thurs - Sat
Watch for
Miller night - next Thursday
Christmas Party - 12/16

OPEN HOUSE
for Students Interested
in a Professional Career in
PUBLIC HEALTH
Graduate programs in
Biostatistics Epidemiology
Community Health Education Health Administration
Environmental Health Public Health Nutrition
Come to Meet Students and Faculty
Friday, December 10 10:00 a.m.
917 Campus Center
Division of Public Health
University of Massachusetts/Amherst

AN IMPORTANT ADDITION TO YOUR UNIFORM
The insignia of an Air Force nurse can mean a lot to you and your future. It shows that you're part of the Air Force Nurse Corps. A member of one of the most efficient health care teams in the world. It signifies you are an Air Force officer with the responsibility and prestige of a leadership position. It indicates you're on the track toward good pay and almost unlimited educational opportunities. If you're a nursing professional or about to complete your nursing education, why not consider Air Force nursing as part of YOUR future? From the day you're commissioned, you'll receive the pay and advantages of an Air Force officer. Consider your uniform and our future. Then make it yours.
AIR FORCE NURSING. A GREAT WAY OF LIFE.
For More Details Call Sandy Price
(203) 229-8650:
Freshmen & Sophmores Call Capt. Pinkell
(413) 545-2637
AIR FORCE
A great way of life

THURSDAY
Tonight's Special
JACK DANIEL'S
TENNESSEE SIPPIN' WHISKEY

T-SHIRTS PRIZES
FEATURING
Al Stoner
9 til 1 ROCK & ROLL no Cover
THE PUB
15 E. Pleasant St.
AMHERST

Webs
1225 Sumner Ave.
Springfield, Ma.
(413)782-0748
109 Main Street
Amherst, Ma.
(413)253-2500

Practical gifts for the weaver, spinner and knitter...from luxurious yarns to hand-crafted looms to instructive classes...
Webs...the most complete source for yarns, supplies and books!

1982
MAKE YOUR MARK. Make it hard to erase.
Come to the 1982 Christmas Conference. For more information write or call:
Glenn S. Carter
167 E. Hadley Rd.
Amherst, Mass 01002
phone 256-0660
Sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ International

Daisy's
For BREAKFAST & LUNCH
With
HOMEMADE DESSERTS
BUCKWHEAT PANCAKES
WAFFLES
FRESH FRUITS & SALADS
LUNCH SPECIALS &
MUCH MORE!
STOP IN - YOU'LL LOVE OUR COOKING
OPEN EVERY DAY
Gift Certificates Available
MON.-FRI. 5:00 a.m.-2:00 p.m.
WEEKENDS & HOLIDAYS 5:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m.
AT THE LIGHTS IN N. AMHERST
549-6643

DYNAMITE RECORDS
BUY SELL TRADE
RENT
NOW OPEN IN AMHERST
in Paul's Old Time Furniture
57 E. Pleasant

Thornes Marketplace Northampton 584-1580
JAZZ - BLUES - ROCK
CLASSICAL - FOLK

CHINESE KITCHEN
興旺樓

FAST FOOD RESTAURANT
Luncheon Specials $1.19 Every Day
Pu Pu Platter $10.00
Take Out Orders
150 King St.
Northampton, Mass.
Please call (413) 586-8220 586-8221
OPEN HOURS:
SUNDAY, 12 NOON to 10:00 P.M.
MON. thru THURS., 11:30 A.M. to 10:00 P.M.
FRI. & SAT., 11:30 A.M. to 12:00 MIDNITE
HOLIDAYS 12 NOON to 10:00 P.M.

Firestone
Go thru ice, mud and snow!

Town & Country®
34.95
Plus F.E.T. $1.64
155/80-D13 or A/78-13
All Prices Blackwall

Size	Price	F.E.T.
B/78-13	39.95	1.81
C/78-14	41.95	2.16
D/78-14	43.95	2.09
E/78-14	45.95	2.21
F/78-14	48.95	2.34
G/78-14	50.95	2.50
600-15L	42.95	1.71
G/78-15	52.95	2.57
H/78-15	53.95	2.82
L/78-15	57.95	3.11

(ALL PRICES INCLUDE INSTALLATION)
Whitewalls, add 3.00 Per Tire Additional
North Amherst Tire & Auto Center
78 Sunderland Rd. No. Amherst MA
Across from Watrous Store 549-1701

Thinking Graduate School?
THINK BENTLEY COLLEGE!
Dedicated to the development of liberally-educated professionals, the Graduate School at Bentley College offers men and women who know where they're going a choice of five distinctive master's programs designed to prepare them for successful careers as employable and promotable business professionals.
• The Master of Science in Accountancy
• The Master of Science in Computer Information Systems
• The Master of Science in Finance
• The Master of Science in Taxation
• The Master in Business Administration
A FOUNDATION FOR THE FUTURE
Graduate study at Bentley can be the perfect complement to your undergraduate degree in providing you the kind of solid preparation you want for a successful career in business.
OPEN TO ALL UNDERGRADUATE MAJORS
Men and women enter Bentley's graduate programs from a wide variety of backgrounds, including liberal arts and sciences, engineering, and humanities as well as business-related fields.
The majority of individuals who come to further their studies in Bentley's MBA and MSA programs bring undergraduate majors in the fields other than business.
PRIME LOCATION
Bentley College is situated at the heart of Route 128, Massachusetts' high technology belt, and just nine miles from Boston, with its many cultural attractions.
APPLICATIONS
Processing of applications for fall 1983 admissions begins March 15.
Register now for the January 29 Graduate Management Admission Test (GMAT) to ensure that your file is complete. Get a GMAT registration form from your career planning and placement office or by writing: GMAT—Educational Testing Services, Box 966, Princeton, NJ 08541.
To obtain more information about graduate study at Bentley College, call (617) 891-2108 or send this coupon to Bentley College Graduate School, Waltham, MA 02254.
BENTLEY COLLEGE
Waltham, MA 02254
PLEASE SEND ME MORE INFORMATION ON THE FOLLOWING PROGRAMS:
MS in Accountancy
MS in Computer Information Systems
MS in Taxation
Master in Business Administration
MS in Finance
I AM INTERESTED IN: Part-time study Full-time study
Name
Street
City State Zip
College presently attending

The Christmas pen set.
Give America's finest writing instruments, the Cross ball pen and Selectip® Pen. In gold filled, sterling, Classic Black® and lustrous chrome. Priced from $26.50.
Fred J. Houck Jeweler
CROSS® SINCE 1846
26 Main Street, Amherst, MA

Conservative Student Committee forms at UMass to provide a forum for right-wing viewpoints

By TRICIA YACOVONE
Collegian Staff

For those looking for a conservative equivalent to the Radical Student Union, the Conservative Student Committee (CSC), a new Recognized Student Organization proposes in its constitution "to promote politically conservative ideals and to provide a forum for conservative views."

"The organization is basically the conservative answer to liberal groups on campus," Jeff Kelley, chairman of the CSC, said.

The organization provides a bipartisan forum for conservatives who were previously denied admission into the now defunct UMass College Republicans which required its members to belong to that party.

"The organization was created out of interest for other students...to create unity among fellow conservatives," Athena K. Gianalopoles, vice-chairperson of the CSC said.

One of the purposes of the organization is to endorse groups that follow similar political lines. However, Kelley said that CSC will not always endorse every conservative group merely because it is conservative.

"The Committee gives students a chance to be exposed to conservative viewpoints, without necessarily endorsing every aspect of them," Kelley said.

For example, when the CIA visited UMass, the CSC aided the "Ad Hoc Committee Supporting the CIA" in handing out pamphlets and a welcoming paper to the CIA representatives without officially endorsing that committee.

The CSC, when it was called the Conservative Campaign Committee during its temporary RSO status, was successful in organizing pre-election speech venues at UMass for the defeated Republican candidates John Sears and Jim Tripp.

Two members of the CSC, Jeff Kelley and Jim Rudolph, discussed the possible election outcomes with two area Democrats on an hour-long show on WMUA in the last week of October.

Presently the CSC is working on functions for the next semester at their regular Monday night meetings in the Campus Center, Kelley said.

Newslines...

No financial aid goodies today kiddies, staff is out to lunch

The Financial Aid Office will be closed today because of a staff development retreat. A drop-off bow will be made available for any neccessary correspondence.

Peace and Intervention: The Invasion of Lebanon in CC

"Peace and Intervention: The Invasion of Lebanon" will be the topic of a discussion by Denis Regier, a former Young Workers Liberation league representative of the World Federation of Democratic Youth. The lecture is tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Rm. 163 Campus Center.

Ski Now - Pay Later
UMASS SKI CLUB
Aspen, Colorado
SKI WEEK Jan 8-15
This Deluxe Vacation Includes:
☐ Round Trip Air, Scheduled Non-Stop Service from Boston, NYC, Phila. or Wash. to Denver
☐ Round Trip Bus Transfers to Aspen
☐ Deluxe Slope-Side Accommodations for 7 Nights, Tax Included
☐ Six-Day Lift Ticket Good at Aspen Mountain, Snowmass, and Buttermilk
Deluxe Slopeside Shadow Mountain Condominiums
Featuring fully equipped kitchen, maid service, fireplace, color TV, heated pool, sauna, and skiing out your door.
$659 per person
or
Woodstone Hotel Package
Located right on the mountain next to the lift, featuring: heated pool, jacuzzi, sauna, maid service, apres ski atmosphere
$599 per person
Sign-Up Now
Ski Club Office
430A Student Union
5-3437

1983 PENTASTAR CHALLENGE

O.K. SMARTY PANTS. YOU GOT ONE.
THERE ARE STILL FOUR UNSOLVED RIDDLES IN THE 1983 PENTASTAR CHALLENGE CALENDAR.
A chance for you to win a scholarship, Plymouth Turismo and more.
If you thought The New Chrysler Corporation was something different from other car makers, you're right. We've developed the "Pentastar Challenge" as a small, but deserving tribute to American ingenuity and intelligence.
The Riddles. The challenges in the calendar are intellectual ones. Within the story and illustrations, we've woven an intricate pattern of clues in different areas of academics; Math, Computer Science, Chemistry, Literature and recently a pair of smarty pants solved our fifth category, Music.
The Right Response. Darryl Koch of the University of Michigan and Kevin Williams from Notre Dame correctly deciphered the clues in the calendar and sent the Diatonic (C Major) music scale on a piece of white paper with the entry postmarked on a full moon. They will share the cash rewards, and each get the use of a new Chrysler product because their answers were simultaneously received.
The Reward. If you are the first to have solved any one of the four remaining riddles, you'll be awarded a $5,000 scholarship, a $5,000 cash grant to your school, your choice of a 1983 Turismo or Charger to drive for a year and a gold Pentastar Medallion. There are also 100 second place prizes of silver medallions. The official rules are on the back of the calendar.
The Reason. We think you'll enjoy the Pentastar Challenge Calendar because it's functional, attractive and entertaining. You might ask "Is Chrysler getting out of the car business and into the calendar business?" No. But at $4.98 maybe you'll be impressed with Chrysler enough to someday look at our cars. For us, that's the challenge.
The 1983 Pentastar Challenge Calendar is on sale now at your college book store. Or send $4.98 plus $1.52 postage and handling ($6.50 per copy) in check or money order to: Pentastar Challenge, 322 S. Main St., Royal Oak, MI 48067. Allow 3-5 weeks for delivery.
THE NEW CHRYSLER CORPORATION

SALADS SUBMARINES SYRIANS
the sub
11 A.M. TO 2 A.M. / 7 DAYS
33 E. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST / 549-5160

Friends and neighbors lend us your ears (and your stomach)!

The SUB would like to offer you a coupon special. Buy any two subs and get a third* absolutely FREE! This coupon is good from now thru Dec. 24, 1982, on Sunday - Wednesday between the hours of 3 p.m. and 6 p.m.
We hope to see you soon and don't forget to bring a friend.

FREE 1 FREE sub with a purchase of any two whole subs when purchased along with this coupon. coupon good til any Sun. - Wed. December 24, 1982 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. FREE

*Free sub is of equal or less value than most expensive sub purchased.

Mount Snow Vermont Tours
"Presents"
SKI SEMESTER
Collegiate Ski Weeks
6 Days 5 Nights
Jan. 2-7, 1983 Jan. 16-21, 1983
Jan. 9-14, 1983 Jan. 23-28, 1983
at Mount Snow Vermont
$179.00 per person Quad occupancy
$50.00 deposit required

Package Includes:
* 5 nights lodging
* A gala welcome party
* Five day lift tickets at Mt Snow ski area
* Five full skiers' breakfasts
* Four full course dinners
* Ski tour guide & host
* And so much more!

* Welcome Get-Together Party * Beer Bash Wine & Cheese Party * Fondue Party * Horse-Drawn Sleigh Ride * Movies * And so much more
"The Mountain of Fun, MT Snow Vermont"
All Rates Subject to 5% State Tax and 15% Hotel Gratuity Service Charge
Mount Snow Vermont Tours
PO Box 571, Route 100
West Dover, Vermont 05356
802-464-2076

81.2%
In a recent survey of UMass undergrads, 81.2 percent said they read the Collegian regularly, and half of those said they read it every day. That's more than three times the UMass readers of any other area paper! New England's largest college daily is number one at home, too.
The Collegian #1 at UMass

11th ANNUAL BUSH BASH
UMASS SKI CLUB
SUGARBUSH VALLEY
VERMONT
SKI & PARTY WEEK
JAN 23-28
THIS TRIP INCLUDES:
* Lift Ticket (5½ days) *
* Lodging (Hotel or Condo) *
* Meals (with Hotel) *
* Free Beer & Wine Parties *
* Hot Tub & Sauna Party *
* Etc. Etc. Etc. *
only $189.00
tax and gratuities included
beware of other ski trips that set a base price and THEN ADD 5% tax & 15% gratuities
Non-Members Welcome
Deposit & Final Payment Deadlines have been extended.
So get your deposits in now to reserve your vacation for WINTER BREAK
sign-up table
M-F Ski Club Office 9-3
430A Student Union
for more info call 5-3437
LAGNAF 83

Enjoy the warmth and charm of Amherst this holiday season
Unique Shops
Special Gifts &
Great Dining

Sponsored by the Amherst Downtown Council

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Having reached and now touching

Jan (not her real name) sits in her wheelchair watching the personel and occasionally chatting in excited anticipation with aids as they pass busily by. Tonight is Monday night and she knows the volunteers will soon be here. I sit on the bus talking with Sandy, the driver and coordinator of the project for which I have volunteered. I am thinking of the work I have to do when I get back, of what Sandy is saying, and of Jan. As the bus pulls into the driveway of the Belchertown State School, thoughts of papers to be written, pages to be read, and tests to be taken fill my mind. I think to myself, "I shouldn't be here, I've got a million things to do." As the door to the infirmary opens I can see the light grey clay colored institutional tiles staring back unmoved. The tiles haven't been moved by anything since the institution was built. I can smell the scents of people, and the breaths of all the people who have been here since 1960 tainted with the smell of institutional antiseptic. As I turn the corner I can see Jan. She starts to smile a big intensly excited smile that radiates off the tiles and fills all my senses with the same excitement. This is why I'm here. We are glad to see each other. As we walk to the dayroom we talk of our weeks since we last saw each other. To Jan I'm not just another person who works here. I'm a friend.

Having previously written of the problem of alienation and desensitization it is important to not only write about it, but to show altenatives to it. Lack of alternatives is part of the problem of alienation and desensitization. Many times we can see the problem, but not so frequently the alternatives. Without the alternatives we often resign ourselves to the problem and try not to let it get to us. This is often not easy and we desensitize, or at least try to.

The alternative presented here is volunteer work at the Belchertown State School through the Boltwood project.

The Boltwood project started in 1969 to add to the potential of the staff in providing care, therapy, and social skills to the developmentally disabled. For the community the project offers a valuable opportunity for the clients of the state school, and community members to exchange, share and learn from, for and of each other, in hopes of overcoming the stigma found when one mentions or sees the retarded. Students have the opportunity to put theory into practice, as they learn to integrate, and utilize the skills of their chosen paths of study. For anyone it offers the opportunity to give of themselves while receiving from others. It is apparent very quickly that the clients of the state school rally want to give to others when given the chance to do so. For all concerned the project offers a chance to be someone special to someone who is special.

It isn't all chocolate and roses, however, for while Jan and I talk, play, dance and laugh the fact remains that this is a state institution and our talking, playing, dancing and laughing has to be officially sanctioned by a seemingly endless list of committees, departments, administrators, and miscellaneous personel. This is where the chocolate melts and the roses wilt. In order for this project to exist it needs money, people, and work. The money comes from us in the form of taxes and fees through the seemingly endless list. The people come in response to what Boltwood offers and from the work. The brunt of the work is up to Sandy. Sandy works for the project. Affectionately she calls it her baby. She has to work with what the state and its administrators give her and what she works for them to give her. This means many meetings, debates, and conflicts. One of the most important points Sandy can use in all of these is the number of volunteers.

As Jan and I reach out to each other the numbers are discussed and debated, but to Jan I am more than numbers can account for.

Christopher Frick is a UMass student

Christopher Frick

Letters

Angry energy can be redirected to be more productive

To the Editor:

Today, I removed the sign "Israel, Land of the Jews" from the exterior of the campus center garage. I would like to explain my reasons for doing so, as well as avoid having blame misdirected towards Arab students.

It is with great reservation that I infringe on anybody's right of free speech. However, as a Jew and supporter of Israel I feel that the sign was intended to speak for me. It doesn't, but serves instead to perpetuate an exchange of invective and recrimination between extremists on both sides.

The sign hurt the cause of Israel and the Jewish people by expressing chauvinism and spite. It was even factually incorrect. While Israel was created as a Jewish homeland, it contains other groups of people who have rights of citizenship. Not all Israelis are Jews and neither are all Jews Israelis.

I hope those who put up the sign will understand my action. I also hope they will redirect their energies more productively, either by stating their case in a more rational manner or by attempting to open up a real dialogue that can contribute to a peaceful and lasting solution to the problem.

Everett Harman
Southwest

LETTERS POLICY

All letters must be signed and include the writer's address and telephone number, which will not be published. Please type double spaced at 67 characters per line. Due to space limitations and the volume of mail, we regret we are unable to acknowledge unpublished letters. All letters are subject to editing for clarity and length.

We need columnists!

Drop by with a piece,
Room 113
Campus Center

British cause Irish violence

(Editor's note — though this editorial addresses an article published over a month ago, the subject is current considering the past few days events in Ulster, Northern Ireland.)

In David Knower's November 4th editorial entitled, "Irish History Doesn't Support the I.R.A.," Knower uses his version of Irish history to back his opposition to the I.R.A. I write neither to condemn, nor support the I.R.A., but rather to question the validity of Knower's "history."

Ulster was not always, "a distinct identity separate from the rest of Ireland". Protestants and Catholics alike, who live in Northern Ireland consider themselves Irish first, not English. Most of our greatest Irish Nationalists, (meaning those who supported Irish independence in the days England ruled all of Ireland) were in fact Ulster born and raised, or middle to upper class Protestants from Dublin. William Butler Yeats, Jonathan Swift, Charles Stewart Parnell, and Wolfe Tone, are just a few non-Catholics who recognized English oppression in Ireland, and worked for a free Ireland.

Ulster did not "stay loyal" to the United Kingdom in 1921. To suggest the annexation of Northern Ireland was somehow a democratic process is absurd. Residents in Ulster had no choice, the making of Ulster was one of the many schemes devised by English prime minister Lloyd George. In the first place, the nine original counties of Ulster as named in 1608 had been changed. George carved out three Catholic counties. Today we frequently hear the majority of Northern Ireland is Protestant, but this was not always so. Nor was there any type of vote in Northern Ireland asking whether the people wished to remain with Britain, although such a vote was promised by Lloyd George. As history shows, decision making rested soley in the hands of the British government and not with the people of Ireland.

As the 1921 war between England and Ireland reached its height, international opinion of England was on the decline. Reports of atrocities on both sides were horrifying, yet England was receiving much unfavorable press on its involvement in Ireland. The I.R.A. too, was weary of the war. They were fighting with primitive arms, and had already lost a number of their good men. Lloyd George presented the I.R.A. with a "treaty" at this time, in which he agreed to recognize twenty-six counties in Ireland as "free", but Ulster was to remain under British rule. George threatened to drastically increase military force in Ireland if the I.R.A. leaders did not consent. And so these Irish leaders, without seeking further advice from their allies elsewhere in Ireland, signed the George treaty. Some call this Northern Ireland democracy? I can only call it English blackmail. Historians tell us in light of global opinion, England would not have increased their army, and if Ireland had kept fighting she would be united today. In any event, this began a new chapter in Anglo-Irish affairs.

Reference was made to a referendum taken in 1973, in which 98.92% of those voting said they wished to remain with the United Kingdom. This is an interesting statistic, for according to Michael McLoughlin, (Boston Globe, Tuesday, Nov. 23, 1982) there are 850,000 U.K. sympathizers, and over half a million Catholics and others with loyalties to the Irish Republic, living in Northern Ireland. So what happened to the Catholic vote in this referendum? I was reminded that many Catholics, and surely the I.R.A. do not vote. You see, we are taught in America that the vote is our voice in government, the greatest of priveleges that we are expected to exercise. The Irish on the other hand, learned long before the creation of the U.S. that their vote counts for nothing. In fact, in 1973, the year of this referendum, Catholics in Northern Ireland were not allowed to be out of their homes after 8:00 p.m. This is the British way of dealing with recent shootings by the I.R.A. Those who disobeyed this curfew were shot on sight. You believe the I.R.A are barbarians? The Ulster Defense Association, the police of Northern Ireland, is not known for being sympathetic either. They are no different from the I.R.A., except they are a legal terrorist group.

Why do people see the need to twist Irish history to justify their opposition to the I.R.A.? Is it not enough to oppose their guerilla tactics and decide morally, you simply cannot accept their actions? I write this not in Gaelic, but in English, a language my ancestors were forced to learn. I was not born in Donegal, but in Boston, because my grandparents were forced to leave their economically distraught homeland after centuries of English ruling class domination. If you want to protest the I.R.A., fine. But do not taint my history with words such as, "loyalty", "peacefully", and "terrorist crime". Because eight hundred years ago we were peaceful, loyal, and without terrorism. And then came the British.

Suzanne Corcoran is a UMass student

Suzanne Corcoran

UMASS
THE ARK
WELCOMES YOU BACK TO BOSTON
 TUESDAYS **
over the Christmas holidays free admission
with U.Mass. I.D
IT'S ALSO
COLLEGE NIGHT !
DOMESTIC BEER 75¢
BAR LIQUOR $1.00
8:00-2:00

the ARK
835 BEACON STREET - BOSTON, MASS. 02215 - 247-9548
Food Served Daily
12:00 - 11:00 p.m.

BLUE WALL
CAMPUS CENTER AT UMASS
Presenting
FIRST ANNUAL United Way
BENEFIT CONCERT
THURS. DEC. 9
Andy May
AND FRIENDS
ARMSTRONG BROTHERS
THE BIZ
THE VALENTINES
FANTINIS
RACK-A-DISC
Sound By Klondike
ALL AGES WELCOME!
*No Alcohol will be served
Juice Bar & Pizza Available
SPONSORED BY:
CAMPUS CENTER FOOD SERVICES
CAMPUS CENTER PRINT SHOP
UPC • GPC • BOG
$2.00 COVER CHARGE

BARGAIN BASEMENT SALE
Selected Groups of
Mugs
Cards
Cubes
Games
Frames
Candles
Buttons
Posters
Puzzles
Tin Boxes
Plant Pots
Stationary
Rubber Stamps
Plastic Boxes
many other items. . .
ALL ITEMS SUBJECT TO PRIOR SALE
ALL SALES FINAL!
on the concourse
THIS WEEK ONLY
MONDAY thru FRIDAY
Thursday 75% off original price
Friday 90% off original price
cashier will take the mark-down at the register
UNIVERSITY STORE

New drug attacks deadly cell before birth

BOSTON (AP) — An experimental drug will reverse the major cause of sickle cell anemia, an important killer of black Americans, by turning on genes that have been dormant since birth, a study shows.

The treatment is believed to be science's first successful attempt to control the output of specific genes in humans. One expert said it opens a promising new approach to treating disease.

"It significantly reduced the tendency of sickled cells to form," said Dr. Arthur W. Nienhuis, one of the researchers. "There was an increase in the number of normal cells."

The drug, called 5-azacytidine, has also been extensively tested as a possible cancer medicine, but it is not yet on the market. And the researchers said much more study of its long-term effects is needed before it could be routinely prescribed for sickle cell anemia or other blood diseases.

The scientists used the drug in adults to activate the genes that ordinarily oversee the production of hemoglobin before birth.

The treatment was tested by doctors from the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute in Bethesda, Md., and a report on the work was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors used the drug on two people with sickle cell disease and three with thalassemia, a blood disorder common among Mediterranean and Southeast Asian people.

Both deadly diseases result from defects in the genes that make beta-globin, which combines with another protein to form hemoglobin, the substance that carries oxygen and makes the blood red.

While developing in the womb, human fetuses produce a similar substance called gamma-globin which has a different set of genes. Normally, the fetal genes shut off at birth and the adult genes take over.

But the adult genes fail to work in victims of the two blood diseases. Those with sickle cell produce an abnormal form of hemoglobin that makes red blood cells with a sickle shape and causes the blood oxygen level to fall. Thalassemia results when the body produces too little hemoglobin.

The 5-azacytidine, in a way not completely understood, turns on the fetal genes and makes them set in motion the production of normal hemoglobin.

The treatment was described as "a major new step" by Dr. Edward J. Benz Jr. of Yale Medical School, who wrote an accompanying editorial in the journal.

But he wrote that its importance "does not rest solely on the fate of this particular drug as a possible 'magic bullet' for these disorders." Instead, the work "proves that detailed knowledge about the molecular physiology of individual genes allows the development of promising new ways to treat disease."

Sickle cell anemia occurs almost entirely among black people. Its victims in the United States number about 25,000.

Black Affairs

New policy aimed by Regents unfair to future students

By PHIL JENNINGS
Collegian Staff

If the decision were left entirely up to the Board of Regents, high school students would need a score of 800 or above to enter the state's university school system.

Chairman of the Minority Employees Coalition Rick Townes said, "The new policy disturbed us because the university wants to set up a tiered system. They want to use a student's class rank and SAT scores in order to determine what level on this tier a student will enter this system."

The tiered system would mean that if a student had a problem with writing or mathematics, that student would be advised to attend a community or junior college before entering the state university system.

The reason for the revised admissions policy is an effort to address the retention of students at the university level.

Under the present admissions policy Townes said each student is evaluated for admissions on SAT scores, class rank, letters of recommendation and/or an interview.

"For those students who may be questionable during interviews, all four factors will go into a decision whether to admit or reject a student," Townes said.

"However, under the new policy,"said Townes, "only SAT scores and class rank will be taken into account, and nothing has been mentioned about an interview or letters of recommendation from high school teachers who have an idea who these students are and whether or not they will be able to achieve."

There are those who argue that the SAT tests are racially and sexually biased, Townes explained, and for a long time minority students have not done as well on the test as non-monorities.

Townes said the Board of Regents is an all male non-minority board, and any time something like that occurs there is concern about what they come up with.

"As a group, blacks and Hispanics do not do as well on those standard tests, so why use them as the sole criteria or the main criteria for admissions," Townes said. "If they do that it will mean fewer and fewer minority students coming to the university because they won't have the scores."

"Chancellor Duffey supports a policy that will continue the diversity at the university level. He and others are in favor of a cross section of students both low income and high income, both black and white, some in state and some out of state. The chancellor is genuinely concerned and interested in seeing that there is diversity within the student body," Townes said.

Townes said Duffey is also advocating that no policy should be implemented that will have such a drastic effect on minority students coming to the university.

"I am encouraged because Chancellor Duffey, Director of admissions David Taggert and Larry Benedict from the Division of Student Affairs are all in support of a policy that will continue to bring minority students to the UMass campus in sufficient numbers," said Townes.

Announcements

Budget proposals for fiscal year 1984 are due on Friday, December 10th 1982. If there are any problems or questions, contact the Student Senate Budget Committee at 545-0341.

There will be a meeting to plan events for Black Hisory Month; February 1983 Meeting will take place on Thursday; December 9th at 3:30 p.m. in Campus Center Room 165-69. Please attend and bring ideas and suggestions. Your input is necessary. Ca'l 545-2517.

The Office of Third World Affairs is looking to hire work-study students for Intersession and Spring Semester. For more information call 545-2517.

Photo by Jay Obee

Lavono Parker, (above middle) of the National Institute of Health speaks to CCEBMS students At left looking on is CCEBMS director Paul Barrows.

Bio-medical official recruits interns

By GUS MARTINS
Collegian Staff

Lavon O. Parker, Equal Opportunity Manager for the National Institute of Health and Neurological Communicative Disorders and Stroke, (NIHNCDS) addressed aproximately 10 students from the CCEBMS department earlier this semester.

Speaking in behalf of the collegiate Committee of Education for Black and other Minority students, (CCEBMS), and Director Paul Barrows, Parker was here to recruit possible candidates for paid internships in the field of bio-medical research at the Bethesda, Maryland facility.

"We've been very successful placing minority students in the research laboratory field," Parker said. "However we still have more to do, but we are increasing our numbers each year."

The institute has representatives that recruit all over the country and they look for qualified recipients.

"We recruit minority and non-minority students at the science departments of the schools we visit," Parker said. "We also hold discussion with students and faculty at those schools and provide them with research and information on career training in bio-chemistry."

The equal opportunity agency that Parker heads manages to link with other organizations to insure that all groups are represented.

"We try very extensively to get together with the various agencies involved in the same line of work as us," Parker said.

"It's key that we do this, last year we had a conference and invited over 60 institutions, among them were leaders of various schools and private organizations in the same line of work."

"There must be a close relationship between us (NIH), the minority affairs offices at academic and non-academic institutions," Parker said.

The NIH has not suffered any cutbacks due to the present administrative policies and after the military, is the next largest governmental recipient of funds.

The University of Massachusetts receives approximately $2 million for research in health sciences. CCEBMS director Paul Barrows has any pertinent information for anyone interested in more information about the program.

Hispanic speaker raps policy cuts

By YADIRA BETANCES
Collegian Staff

"No other president, including President Nixon has been so drastically direct in destroying anything that implies the concept of government that we (citizens) understand as necessary in a society like Reagan has," said Felix Arroyo a candidate for the Boston School Committee.

Speaking on "How Reaganomics affect the Hispanic population in the United States" to a group of Hispanic students in the Campus Center last Tuesday night December 7, Arroyo considered Reagan as a member of the fundamentalist, christian and capitalist group of the United States.

The philosophy that Reagan has imposed is that of minimal government involvement in societal functions for a social balance. Reagan's financial philosophy, according to Arroyo is that if American society wants to make more money, it must contribute to those who have wealth in order to make this possible.

The only possible solution Arroyo saw for minorities was that of solidarity. If Blacks and Hispanics would consolidate and run for political offices the problems would be less acute. The community would have representation and would present the needs of its people.

Many Americans think that the small number of Hispanic voters is due to lack of interest in politics, but according to Arroyo, the small number of Hispanic voters is due to the lack of knowledge and confusion of the political leader who could improve social and economic conditions for minorities.

Cash for Books

CLOTH OR PAPER — WHETHER USED ON THIS CAMPUS OR NOT.
WE BUY ALL TITLES HAVING RESALE MARKET VALUE!

SELL THEM AT:

TEXTBOOK ANNEX

WEDNESDAY THRU SATURDAY

DECEMBER 15 THRU 18

MONDAY THRU THURSDAY

DECEMBER 20 THRU 23

9:00 AM - 4:00 PM

I D REQUIRED

Arts

Shepp takes a giant step

By PHILLIP PLANTE
Collegian Staff

As I sat and listened to the Archie Shepp Quartet's rendition of John Coltrane's "Giant Steps" rumble, shake, then roar off into wild improvisation (carring my nervous system with it) it seemed a joke, and a cynical one at that, to call jazz dead.

Such has been the duality of Professor Shepp's nature here in the Pioneer Valley. Always controversial and critical, yet as a live performer, incredibly dynamic and original.

Shepp's Quartet, which included Avery Sharpe on bass, Art Mathews on piano, and the incredible "Marvelous Marvin" Smith on drums, fairly amazed a packed Iron Horse Crowd, playing a variety of styles including some high energy improvisation on Coltrane's "Giant Steps." Literally overflowing from the small stage, the Shepp Quartet shifted moods gradually, progressing from standards like "In a Sentimental Mood" to the hard bopping "Stomping at the Savoy." Shepp switched to soprano saxophone on a few tunes (a practice made popular by Coltrane) which helped cut through the stuffy acoustics of the Iron Horse.

"Giant Steps," a conceptual Coltrane piece, was the most impressive set of the night, instrumentally or otherwise. Taking off like an SST, "Giant Steps" seemed almost solely dominated by Marvin Smith as he mangled musical space in smashing crashing runs that dropped more than a few jaws in the unsuspecting crowd. Shepp at intervals played what seemed to be a million notes that crowded together, maintaining the buzzing energy of the piece.

The personnel comprising the Shepp Quartet were fairly amazing in themselves. Avery Sharpe, a former student of Shepp, was a recent winner of a Down Beat magazine critics poll for best new talent on bass. Art Mathews, between various stints with Marion Brown and Valley drummer Claire Arenius, has established himself as a top jazz pianist with a certain coolness and dexterity that contrasted well with the manic energy of the ensemble's drummer. Next to Mr. Shepp himself, Marvin Smith was the highlight of the Quartet. Inexhaustable, Smith played like a madman, going both ways on the top-hat cymbal, and playing with his hands while changing drum sticks - a demonstration of style and control.

Shepp, who teaches "Revolutionary Concepts in Afro-American Music" (offered in the Afro-Am Department) here at UMass, plays more extensively overseas to a more jazz-appreciative European audience. In an effort to sustain his image as an educator here in the Valley, Shepp rarely gives local performances. Sunday and Monday night at the Iron Horse were exceptional opportunities to catch one of jazz music's most dynamic performers live.

Lovich's love for extravagance

NO-MAN'S-LAND (EPIC)
Lene Lovich

By DEAN RANZO
Collegian Staff

I'll admit the recent comparisons of Dale Bozio of Missing Persons with Lene Lovich are justified; but only as far as mannerisms go and that's it. Lovich's music is so much more articulate, imaginative and extravagant than that of Missing Persons, as well as many other new bands contributing to the stultification of the synthesizer.

Lovich's new album, No-Man's-Land, is the epitome of structured sound manipulation. The mixing and unpredictableness of synthesizers and Lovich's limitless voice are superb. Lovich and her electric music extraoridinaire, Les Chappel, have re-recruited synthesizer wizard Thomas Dolby (the man who catapulted Lovich back atop the dance floor with "New Toy") to add more of his artful insight to her own gimmickry.

Lovich unselfishly takes the back seat as Chappel and Dolby take full control. They dub and dub and dub again flawlessly and felitously. Every inch of creativity embedded within the synthesizers, and all the other instruments for that matter, is extracted and employed for leads, rhythms and most impressively and noticeably for accentuation.

The concept of a No-Man's-Land is omnipresent. At various points on the album a vision of Clint Eastwood eyeing three Italian cowboys, or one of a chanting caravan of Arabian nomads emanates. Heavy thought was put into each song to convey sentiment at different points on this journey through No-Man's-Land: a place where there are no laws or boundaries, only desire and imagination.

No-Man's-Land should bring Lene Lovich the national recognition she so well deserves. She is consistent, innovative, and extremely imaginative. She sings about love, romance, and fantasy in an avant-garde sort of way. If you are unfamiliar with Lene Lovich or just do not appreciate the sound of synthesizers, No-Man's-Land will give you quite a jolt. If you are familiar with Lene Lovich or do appreciate synthesizers, make this your next purchase.

Correction:

There are some inaccuracies in yesterday's edition of Play by Play by Pam Madnick. "A Day in the Life of Joe Egg" by Peter Nichol, should read A Day in the Death of Joe Egg by Peter Nichols.

live wire
by Phil Plante

Tonight is the First Annual United Way Benefit Concert, featuring Andy May and friends at the Blue Wall. Special guests include the Armstrong Brothers, the Biz, the Valentines, and the Santinis. There will be no alcohol sold during the show so tank up before you go in. Cover is $2.

Also tonight: Valley favorite Claire Arenius will perform with Ken Hall and Richard Downs at Common Ground in Brattleboro. The show starts at 9:30. Cryer fills the Thursday night slot at the Rusty Nail. Tom Juravich will perform at the Iron Horse, and Southern rock originals, The Dregs, will perform with Fountainhead at the Angora Ballroom in Hartford.

Friday night, Kaspar Hausar, who've just released a EP under the "Techno-tunes" label, will appear at the Blue Wall with special guests. Folkies Elizabeth Cotton and Mike Seeger will play in Buckley Recital Hall at Amherst College. The Shaboo All-Stars, minus Matt "Guitar" Murphy, will play at the Rusty Nail. And yes, rumors are true, the Stompers and the Fantini Brothers will perform at Hangar One. Cover is $3.

Saturday is the night to blow away the books, as the second edition of the Big Six of Jazz makes it's way to the Fine Arts Center. This year's performers include: the one and only Max Roach, Jimmy Heath, Billy Taylor, trombone artist Slide Hampton, Jon Hendricks, and Richard Davis.

The second edition of the Big Six was improvised to replace the cancelled Sarah Vaughn concert, and though Dizzy Gillespie couldn't make it this year, it promises to be a fine show. Tickets are $11, $9, and $7 and are half price for all "4 College students" (Amherst refused to pay it's performing arts fee). Call the Fine Arts Center Box office for more information at 545-2511.

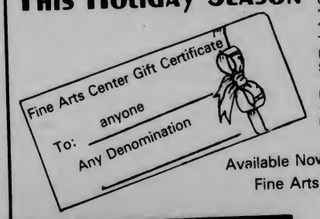
Also Saturday night: the "New Rhythm and Blues Band," NRBQ, returns triumphantly to the valley having played for some stadium sized crowds on a recent Bonnie Raitt tour. A less than glorious highlight in an otherwise lame club weekend. Also, the Motels, who did a fine job at the Calvin last Thursday, will appear once again in the Angora Ballroom with special guest Robert Hazard and the Heros. "Sumitra" featuring Molly Scott, Sarah Benson, and Janet Fuchs, will perform in the Grace Church, off the Common in Amherst (for more information call 256-5754). And finally, the New England Chamber Orchestra will perform in Buckley Recital Hall.

Sunday night: it's Stormin' Normin' and Suzy at A Separate Entrance in South Deerfield, Kay Gardner at the Iron Horse ($5), and The Race at the Nail.

In the not too distant future: rock-a-billy revivalists The Stray Cats will perform Monday, December 20 at the Angora Ballroom in West Hartford. Tickets for Angora Ballroom shows are available at Platterpuss Records in Northhampton, all Strawberries Record Stores, and Belmont Records in Springfield. Also coming to the Angora, John Valby—January 14, Bow Wow Wow—January 10 and Missing Persons—January 25.

Take Note: is the high prices of being a culturally hip person has got you in a rut, you should know: A free jazz ensemble performs every Tuesday and Thursday at Evone's Restaurant in the basement of the New Africa House, and The Drake will play host to a blues band every Tuesday night downstairs.

Give The Arts This Holiday Season

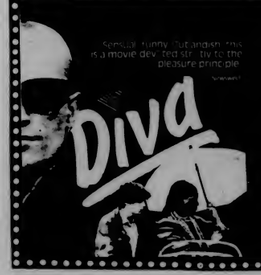


Philip Glass Ensemble
The Washington Ballet
Jeffrey Kahane, piano
Marcel Marceau
Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra
"Twelfth Night"
"Tartuffe"
Tokyo String Quartet
Bella Lewitsky Dance Co.
Springfield Sym. w/Billy Taylor Trio
Dexter Gordon Quartet
Dong-Suk Kang, violin
New York Chamber Soloists

Available Now
Fine Arts Center Box Office
Open M-F,
noon to 4 p.m.
For information
call 545-2511

Fine Arts Center Concert Hall

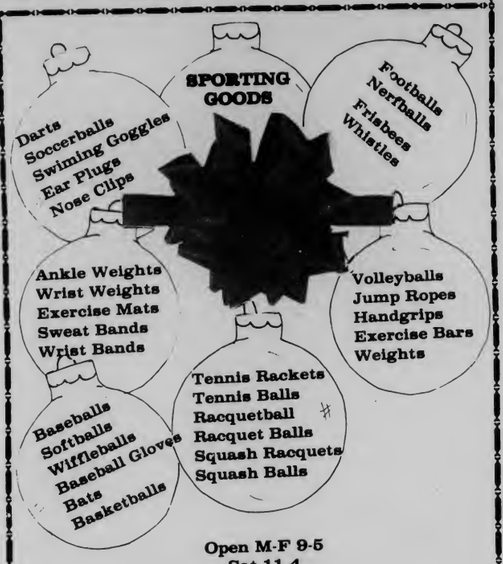
ACADEMY of MUSIC
ON THE PARK · NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
Only Area Showing, Starts Fri. to Thurs. Dec. 10-16
On Screen Evenings 7:00 and 9:05



"Genuinely sparkling...a mixture of style and chic hanky-panky. Every shot seems to be designed to delight the audience. It's a glittering toy of a movie."
—Pauline Kael, The New Yorker

"Brilliant...one of the most persistently entertaining, absorbing and scary thrillers I've seen in a long time...it's terrific."
Roger Ebert, Chicago Sun-Times

"Sensual, funny,
—N.Y. Newsweek



Open M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4

Located in the Campus Center

UNIVERSITY STORE

this summer come to clark university

- Late afternoon and evening courses allowing for summer employment
- Traditional college courses
- Intensive language study
- Study abroad programs in Mexico, Germany and Italy
- Innovative job related courses for liberal arts students

Dates:
Summer Session I—May 17-24
Summer Session II—June 27-Aug. 5
Italy summer program—June 5-25
Mexico summer program—June 27-Aug. 5

For further information, write:
Summer Programs
College of Professional and Continuing Education
Clark University
Worcester, MA 01610
or call Elizabeth Coates
at Clark University in Worcester. 793-7217.

Full House Productions Inc.

presents

Dec. 17

8 pm

Tickets $8.50 & $9.50
For info call 584-2310
Available at Main St. Records, Platterpus, Faces of Earth, The Music Store, and the Calvin Theater box office

Calvin Theater Northampton

ARLO GUTHRIE

WITH SHENANDOAH

Student loans granted.

Introducing two smart loan programs from the BayBanks.

The BayBanks are offering HELP and PLUS loans designed to assist students and their families in meeting the rising cost of higher education.

Higher Educational Loan Program (HELP)

If you're an undergraduate student enrolled in an acceptable degree program, you may qualify for up to $2,500 per year with our HELP loan. Or up to $3,000 per year if you're a graduate student. And repayment doesn't begin until after graduation.

Parental loans to undergraduate students (PLUS)

Plus, with the BayBanks PLUS loan, students' parents can apply for an additional $1,000 to $3,000 per year per child. And a statement of financial condition is not required to determine eligibility; however, a standard credit check will be performed. Furthermore, total financial aid must not exceed the cost of education.

For more information regarding the BayBanks HELP and PLUS loans, simply mail in the attached coupon. With scholarships at a premium, it might be one of the smartest moves you could make.

Member FDIC

I'd like additional information regarding the BayBanks loans: check one or both. HELP PLUS

Name

Address

City State Zip

Student

Parent's name

BayBank | First

Mail to: BayBank First
32 Main Street, Easthampton, MA 01027

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

Entertainment at its Best

Lotte Goslar's
PANTOMIME CIRCUS
Thursday, December 9 8:00 pm

BIG SIX of JAZZ II

with Billy Taylor, Max Roach, Slide Hampton, Richard Davis, Jimmy Heath and John Hendricks

Saturday, December 11
8:00 p.m.

MC, VISA-CHARGE YOUR TICKETS TODAY
Telephone reservations Noon-4:00 p.m. M-F
545-2511

Fine Arts Center Concert Hall

Hypercurricula...

"Hypercurricula," a listing of events held at the University of Massachusetts and surrounding area, is published daily in the Collegian. Events are listed only on the day they are taking place. Announcements must be submitted on "Hypercurricula" forms available in the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center, and returned to the office by 3 p.m. the Friday before the event. All submissions should be written in a similar style as they appear in the paper.

"Hypercurricula" notices not submitted on the standard form and not submitted by the Friday before the week the event will take place will not be run. Due to space limitations, the Collegian cannot guarantee printing of all "Hypercurricula" notices. Priority will be given to UMass organizations.

A CONCERT OF NEW ELECTRONIC MUSIC — Featuring works by students in the Electronic Composition Class. Free admission. 8 p.m., Bezanson Recital Hall.

MALE SEXUAL HEALTH AND CONTRACEPTION — Men and women are invited to explore changing views of masculinity and learn about male sexuality. Film on the male role in contraception. 9 p.m., Webster Main lounge.

LOTTE GOSLAR'S PANTOMIME CIRCUS — Known as "the greatest dance clown of our time, Lotte Goslar and her Pantomime Circus will perform in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. The Pantomime Circus is a unique blend of dance, theatre and pantomime with theme about the human condition of our time. 8 p.m.

SPORT STUDIES LECTURE SERIES — Gordon 'Scotty' Stirling, Vice President for Operation at the National Basketball Association (NBA) will discuss, "Front Office Operations." 8 p.m., 917 Campus Center.

JEWISH FEMINIST ORGANIZATION PROGRAM — A video tape of Letty Cottin Pogrebin, contributing editor to Ms. Magazine, speaking on anti-Semitism in the women's movement and sexism in Judaism. A short meeting will follow. 4 p.m., 904 Campus Center.

INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S EVENT — Meeting to continue planning for the two day event centered around International Women's Day March 8. Please join us in organizing this very important event. 7 p.m., Campus Center.

Are you a Secret Santa?

Toys, games, unusual gifts & unique accessories for under $3.00

many under $1.00!

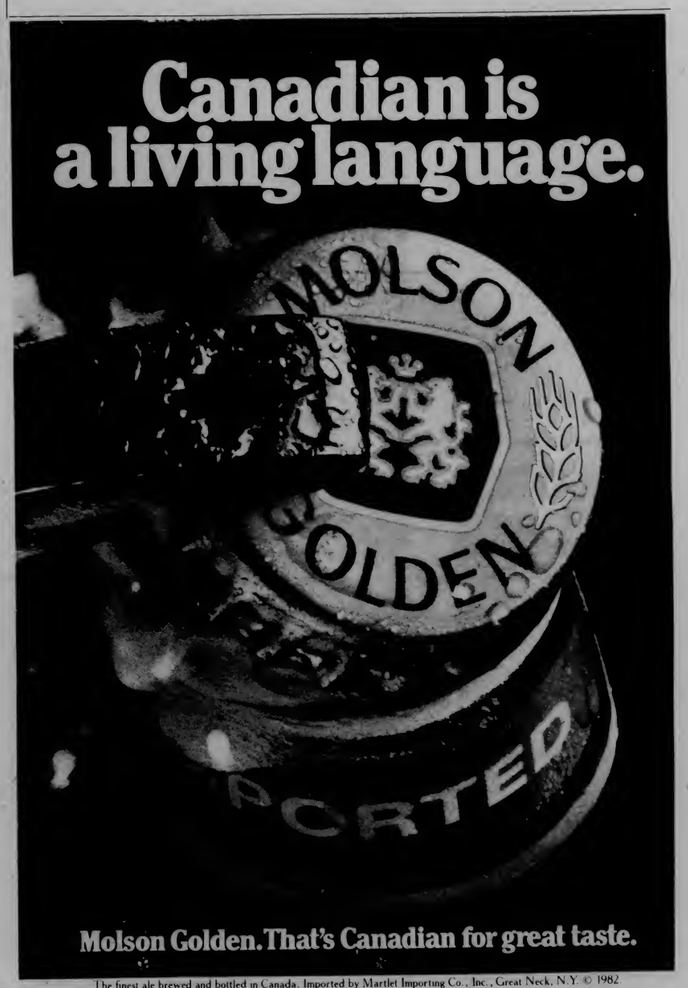
FACES

A Store-full of Stocking Stuffers

EVERY SOCIAL SUNDAY

Sundays 12 - 5 Downtown Amherst

Canadian is a living language.



Molson Golden. That's Canadian for great taste.

The finest ale brewed and bottled in Canada. Imported by Martlet Importing Co., Inc., Great Neck, N.Y. © 1982

For a free education in the international language of beer, just send a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope to: Molson Golden Guide to Beer, 888 Seventh Ave., Box M, New York, NY 10106.

UNE
Medical School
Tampico, Mexico

Q. What Makes A Quality Medical School?

A. 1. Fine Faculty
2. Good Facilities
3. Quality Student Body
4. Supervised Clerkship Programs for Qualified 3rd and 4th Year Students

Noreste offers a 4-year program, has small classes, is W.H.O. listed

University of the North East Admissions

120 East 41 St. NY, NY 10017
(212) 594-6589
683-6566

"Look what's cooking"

Roberto's

"HOME OF ITALIAN FOODS"

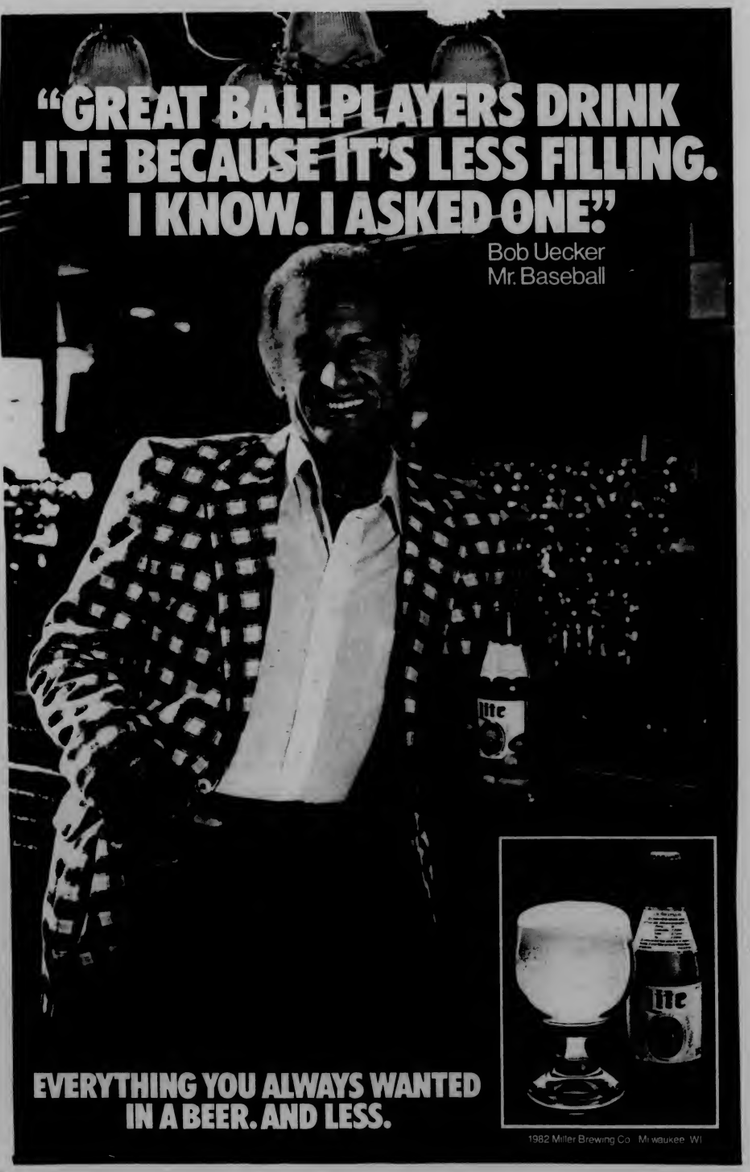
PIZZA OUR SPECIALTY
CHICKEN - SPAGHETTI
ORDERS PUT UP TO TAKE OUT
584-0204
Kitchen Hours 11:30 A.M.-11:30 P.M.
223 Pleasant St., Northampton

PRE-MED CLUB
Wine & Cheese Party
Thursday, December 9
6-8:00 pm CC 805
All interested in medicine welcome to attend

THE COPY CENTER
FINE OFFSET PRINTING & COPYING
You'll like what we can do for your image
32 Pleasant Street
(across from Pleasant St. Theater)
Northampton 584-0117
Open 9 a.m.-5 p.m. daily

LAGNAF 83

"GREAT BALLPLAYERS DRINK LITE BECAUSE IT'S LESS FILLING. I KNOW. I ASKED ONE."
Bob Uecker
Mr. Baseball



EVERYTHING YOU ALWAYS WANTED IN A BEER. AND LESS.
1982 Miller Brewing Co. Milwaukee, WI

Doonesbury — By Garry Trudeau

The UMass Zone — By Mark Rollins

Under The Influence — By M. Joyce

Bushwa — by Tom Cushwa

Bloom County — By Berke Breathed

D.C. MENU

LUNCH
Ham Grinder
Broccoli and Cauliflower Casserole

DINNER
Cheese Lasagna with Tomato Sauce
Chopped Beefsteak Special

BASICS LUNCH
Falafel Pocket Sandwich
Broccoli and Cauliflower Casserole

BASICS DINNER
Vegetable Squares
Cheese Lasagna with Tomato Sauce

Attention Artists

The Collegian is looking for comic strips for next semester. All students are invited to submit samples for possible consideration. Samples should be of production quality, drawn in black ink, in similar proportions to those appearing on this page. Samples should be submitted to Ed Levine, Managing Editor, Collegian, 113 Campus Center by Monday, Dec. 13.

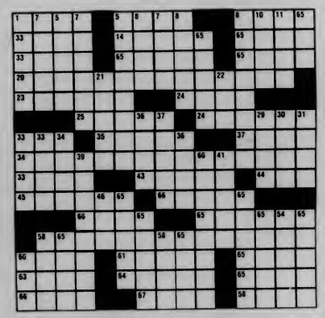
CROSSWORD

ACROSS
1 Chinese incense stick
5 Collections of recollections
9 VIP in a Moslem mosque
13 Pre
14 Aquiline features
16 Star of a kind
17 Martin
18 Farmer's milieu
19 Black, in Quebec
20 Have one's ——
23 Oarsman in a racing shell
24 Ireland, 1937 to 1949
25 —— Parbat, 26,600 ft. Himalayan peak
28 Hero of an epic
32 Doctrine
35 East Indian woods used in ships
37 Freshwater fish
38 Put one's ——
42 Danube feeder
43 —— side of life
44 Dry, in combinations
45 Final scores
48 Rise up
50 Goldfinch State
52 Certain dress goods
56 Have one's —— (be a party to)
60 Lay cobbles
61 Jockey Arcaro
62 Region: Abbr.
63 Tent manufacturer?
64 Surveys
65 —— the finish
66 Female swans
67 Part of R and R
68 Baby, in Espana

DOWN
1 Costly stones
2 —— a time
3 Ringo
4 Forwarded
5 Mortise ——
6 Webster
7 Continent on a French map
8 Blue —— suit
9 Insinuation
10 Partner of June and tune
11 Greedy
12 Calendar abbr.
15 Nation in the news
21 Giraffe's relative
22 Galena, for one
26 Sticky stuffs
27 Queen —— lace
29 —— de-vie (brandies)
30 Entre ——
31 Very: Ger.
32 "What —— rains?"
33 Neither here nor there
34 Castle asset
36 Stock exchange asset
39 Instructors
40 Like Phi Beta Kappas maybe?
41 Talking bird
46 Ship's record book
47 Do housework
49 —— the wool
51 Zeal
53 Deem
54 Jewish month
55 Seven, in Italia
56 Fortune's partner
57 First of the Russian czars
58 Like some rumors
59 Name, in Stockholm
60 Beverage



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

H	A	N	G		O	M	S	K		A	P	R	I	L
O	D	O	R		R	O	T	E		R	O	U	S	E
R	I	T	E		D	I	R	T		C	O	A	S	T
S	E	N	A		F	I	N	A		P	A	R	E	N	T
T	U	E	S	D	A	Y	W	E	L	D
			E	E	I		N	A	E		S	A	W
A	E	R	I	C	A		T	E	E	N		M	U	N	A
S	A	T	U	R	D	A	Y	M	O	R	N	I	N	G
S	T	O	P		O	K	E	Y		E	S	T	E	S
T	E	E	N		A	M	E			S	A	T
			S	U	N	D	A	Y	P	U	N	C	H
H	A	R	A	S	S		A	D	S		D	A	R	E
A	W	A	R	E		S	N	I	T		I	C	E	S
L	O	V	E	S		T	E	S	M	O		E	A	S
F	L	E	A	S		T	E	E	M		O	E	M	E

Weather

Clearing, windy and cold today with highs dropping into the 30's. Tonight, clear and cold with lows in the teens.

CABLE/VIDEO

All talk Video

10:30 - 11:30 Abbi Hoffman speaks at UMass

11:30 - 1:00 G. Gorden Liddy spouts his wisdom

1:00 - 2;00 Bobby Muller speaks on the problems of Viet Nam Vets

WMUA 91.1 FM

6-9	Concepto Latino
9-12	The Steve Diamond Show
12-3	Trip to What Next with Ed Berk
3-5:30	DR
5:30-6	Newswatch with Nick De Raiter & Brian Murphy
6-7	Focus with Ken Mosacowski
7-10	Women's Media Project
10-2	Kari Njiiri Pan Afrique
2-6	More Music

UM wrestlers compete

By STEVE FITZ
Collegian Staff

Senior Doug Johnson and junior Brian O'Boyle highlighted the University of Massachusetts wrestling teams performance in the Coast Guard Tournament, held in New London, Connecticut, this past weekend.

Johnson, the defending champion in the 134 pound weight class, lost to Bill Reese, a Division II All-American from Springfield College to finish third.

Johnson beat Reese earlier in the competition, but faced him again, since the tournament was double elimination.

O'Boyle beat the number one wrestler in New England, Louie Perullo, from the University of New Hampshire, 15-8 and finished fourth.

Scott McQuaide at 158 lbs. lost on what was supposedly a bad call.

"The referee's call against McQuaide was a disgrace," said Freitas.

Dana Richards, the 167-pounder, was wrestling well, but he was injured and had to default.

According to coach Freitas, 177-pounder Dave McEntee wrestled the best he ever did, even though he lost.

McEntee had been wrestling at 190 pounds for the dual meets, because of injuries in the teams heavyweights.

Freshman Mike Bossi, lost in the last four seconds of his match, when his opponent reversed him in the 150-pound class.

This weekend the grapplers will compete in the First Annual Springfield Invitational.

The tournament will feature several New England conference teams.

There will be a few changes in the lineup this weekend.

Greg Porrello will wrestle at 134 pounds, while Doug Johnson will move up to the 142-pound class. Dana Richards will wrestle at 150. Dave McEntee will wrestle at 167, Mike Rodgers at 177, and Mark Bavelock (coming off an injury) will wrestle at 190.

"We are going to see how we progressed from last week, and hopefully get some wins under our belts," said Freitas.

Sports pot-pourri

By KEVIN DELUCA
Collegian Staff

This column is going to be a potpourri of sports events of the past few weeks and this writer's thoughts on them.

First things first. Herschel Walker won the Heisman Trophy Saturday, and deservedly so. Herschel is only the best college football player in history. What separates him from other talented players is his dedication. Anyone who does 300 push-ups, 300 sit-ups, and countless sprints every night for eight years deserves everything they get. Congratulations, Herschel!

As for college bowl games: the only one that matters is Georgia vs. Penn State in the Sugar Bowl. It is hard to bet against Herschel, but Joe Paterno is too good a coach to keep losing the big one. Like Dean Smith in basketball last year, Paterno will break his personal jinx this January 1, and the diversity of Penn State's offense will be the main reason.

In the world of professional football, this past Thanksgiving Day the rest of the country discovered what New York area football fans already knew: Lawrence Taylor is the best defensive player in the league. He was the reason that the offesnively inept Giants squeaked by the Detroit Lions. It is truly amazing that a defensive player could so dominate and actually win a football game.

More New York news. (If you have not guessed by now, yes, I am from New Jersey.) It is true. The city is missing a basketball team. The Knicks no longer deserve that designation. The story of their demise is a sad one.

Two years ago, the Knicks won 50 games and were one of the better teams in the National Basketball Association. The strength of that team was its backcourt (the finest in the league), consisting of Michael (Sugar) Ray Richardson and Ray Williams. Though the Knicks made the playoffs, some critics said they could never win the championship with a guard-oriented team.

The Knick management, in their infinite wisdom, agreed. Last year they traded away Williams and succeeded in missing the playoffs. This year management dumped Richardson and the team had their worst start in its history. To compound their errors, management traded last year's best player, Maurice Lucas, for Len "Truck" Robinson. The Truck has stalled.

Maybe the Knicks have a secret plan. Maybe they are trying to beat out the Cleveland Cavaliers for last place (almost as hard as beating out the Boston Celtics for first), thereby having a shot at the first round pick and Ralph Sampson or, even better, Pat Ewing.

Just a few more thoughts:
We, as a race, will not be civilized until we no longer feel the need to have boxing matches and, more importantly, wars.

Let us hope that Kevin McHale and Larry Bird see fit to continue the winnng Celtic Tradition.

Remember...
When patronizing our advertisers, make sure to tell them that you saw their ads in the Collegian.

VALUABLE COUPONS

BREAKFAST SPECIAL — Reg. $2.55 With This Coupon C
2 EGGS, 2 PANCAKES, 2 STRIPS BACON, 2 LINKS SAUSAGE
2 For $3.25 Please present coupon when ordering
SERVED ALL DAY ANYTIME

DELI MELT — Reg. $2.85 With this coupon C
Oversized 6 oz. Chopped Beef With Sauteed Onions, Melted Zesty Cheddar Cheese On Grilled Pumpernickel. Served with French Fries
2 For $4.49 Please present coupon when ordering
SERVED 11 A.M.-10 P.M.

FISH DINNER — Reg. $3.25 With This Coupon C
Our Famous Batter-Dipped Fillets English Style — Served with French Fries, or Baked Potato, Cole Slaw, Roll & Butter
2 For $4.95 Please present coupon when ordering
SERVED 11 A.M.-10 P.M.

Senior Citizen Discounts 25% on 20% All other times 10% Does not apply to specials

James H. McManus eating place
CAMPUS SHOPPING PLAZA
RTE. 9, HADLEY, 256-6668
STOP & SHOP

HOURS: OPEN 24 HOURS Fri. & Sat. Sun. thru Thurs. 7 a.m.-3 p.m.

NEW POLITICS
MASS FAIR SHARE
a statewide citizen's action organization

Has full and part time positions available to do fundraising, outreach, and to develop a citizen's lobby that can shape and influence the political and economic decisions in this state.
Hours are 2-10 pm; pay $175-225/week
call 586-8713
will train, college credits available
11 am - 1 pm Mon-Fri

BOSTON'S LITTLE FLAGS THEATRE
NEW RISE OF THE MASTER RACE
A HIT MUSICAL!
8 P.M.
HAMPDEN THEATRE
UMASS SOUTHWEST
DEC 11
Student/Senior Citizens $1.00 General Admission $2.00 Reservations 545-2803
SCANN SWA CH/Central Arts Council NE Sylvan Hampden Program

Crabtree & Evelyn®
LONDON
A Wide Range of Gift Ideas
for Everyone on your Christmas List
Soaps, Toiletries
Potpourri & Comestibles
Made from natural herbs, fruits and flowers in the countryside of England and Europe.
71 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 253-9561

the rusty nail presents
Thurs. Dec. 9 Cryer
Fri. Dec. 10 Shaboo Allstars (blues)
Sat. Dec. 11 NRBQ
Rt. 47, Sunderland, MA 665-4937
You must be 18 to enter.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday - Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10% • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?
Rockadisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

AUTO FOR SALE
69 Firebird convertible - A classic. Needs engine work and some minor body work. Easily restorable to mint cond. BO around 2000. Call nights 256-0435
79 Triumph TR7 30000 miles AM/FM cassette exce condition best offer 253-3406
VW Superbeetle beautiful runner 1971 $1050 549-5377
71 Delta 88 very dependable winter car $300 or BO 665-3471

BELLYGRAMS!!
Delivered by professional bellydancer for most unusual gift. Thereza 253-7822

BROWNIEGRAMS
Three flavors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

CAR STEREO FOR SALE
Blaupunkt call for info 546-6450

CONCERT TAPES
Asia, Dead, Floyd, Genesis, Police, Who & more 90 min $8 PO Box 625 Amherst MA 01002

DRYCLEANING
Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Way. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ERIKA'S BIRTHDAY
Southwest Engineering wishes Erika a happy 21

FOR RENT
BKO is renting rooms for intersession. Full use of kitchen facilities. Most modern house on campus, best location between town and campus. Call Paul at 549-3582 or Marty at 549-0206
Two bedrooms on bus route available January first call Lew or Ed 256-6712
2 rooms in large house on bus route Hadley $125 call Barbara 586-3936
Two rooms Sunderland 95 or 140 incl. Jan 1 call 665-2241 till midnite on bus route
Room in downtown Amherst in house to share w/3 people $150+ 38 Kellogg Av. call Sandra 256-8558
Large sunny room in house, Amherst Center pref female 160+ 253-9555 for spring/summer option

FOR SALE
GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972
100% Alpaca wool sweaters handmade in Peru. Selling for much less than store cost! Great Christmas gifts! 546-5512
Twin bed box spring and mattress new must sell call 256-6086 evenings ask for Fran
Sterling Silver Rings and Earrings great Xmas gift call Chip 546-9534
WHO Tickets for Worcester BO 546-5149
WHO TICKETS 12/11, Centrum. J. Geils New Years Eve, Centrum BO 256-6303
Korg 770 solo synthesizer $325 Cromar synthesizer bass peddles $250 Bundy clarinet $100 all excellent condition Jim 546-5976
8-tracks wide selection call Bob 6-5293
Snow tires H78-14 general tubeless GTN bia/belt white walls in excellent condition $40.00 for the pair 546-9411
For Sale Ski Rack fits all cars with rain gutters call 253-9678
J. Geils 12/27 1st show U.S. tour New Haven excellent floor seats 549-4032
1970 VW for sale good condition see it to believe it call 546-6139 or 789-2144
Ski Bindings. Tyrolia 150. In good condition. $30.00 or best offer. Call Marc 546-9695
Fuji bike, Grand Tourer SE, 81 model top cond., $200 or BO, incl. extras! phone Raf at 6-1113, anytime
One-way airline ticket Boston to Denver $109 for FEMALE good anytime after Dec 15 call Robin 549-4152
Synthesizer for sale Minimoog like new best offer 546-5579

FOUND
Cross pen identify and its yours call Kathy 546-1435
White Kitten, female. Found behind Thompson Hall, 12/5 can't keep. Call 256-8838 soon or she will go to animal shelter
Money tell me amt, where lost, around what time 546-5622

GREAT GIFTS
T-SHIRTS: Jagger, Costello, Stallone, and Springsteen. Plus many prints - plain and matted. $1.95 - $5.95 CC Concourse

HELP WANTED
WFCR needs spring interns. Up to 9 credits possible working in membership. Call 545-0100
Nationwide Inventory Service needs part time people Dec 26 to Jan 20. Must live in greater Lowell-Lawrence, Woburn-Watertown, North Shore areas, have phone, transportation and available nights and weekends. Contact Student Emp. Office.

LESBIAN AND GAY
Are you Gay? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2845 or drop in CC 106

LOST
"Lost" 12/2/82 womens sweater, red, black & white, cardigan. Extreme sentimental value. Please call Kathy 549-5518 or leave at Info Desk. Reward. No questions asked.
REWARD lost wallet black somewhere in Campus center call Gary 6-4770
Levi Denim Jacket in Hatch on 12-5, name P. Morton on label 256-6017

MERRY CHRISTMAS
Wishing everyone at 16 Tracy Circle a very Merry Christmas, a Happy New Year and a relaxing intersession! It's been a totally awesome semester (I'm sure!) - thanks to all of you - let's do it again sometime soon! Love, Jennifer

MEXICAN CRUISE
Spring Break; Cancun, Cozumel, Key West, 7 days; $440 from Tampa. Optional 3 credit course. Call 549-5613 or 549-5543 or 549-4736

MOVING
Man with pick-up for hire Experienced low rates call David 253-5185

PERSONALS
Holiday Open House Kappa Kappa Gamma all UMass women invited for an afternoon of holiday cheer! December 10th 3-5. RSVP 545-0320 545-0321
Happy Birthday Pat and John born to run together Love, JB SC SM

CONGRATULATIONS
To all the New Brothers of Alpha Epsilon Pi
Robert Albert, Mike Borkum, Mike Gould
Ira Rappaport, Robert Kennedy
Alan Rastellini, Randy Hanna
John Tessel

Rob K Happy Birthday love you Ann
To the friends and brother of Robin L. in Israel. Where are your letters? I've been here two months! Write!
Boarders wanted spring semester females only call Sheila or Julie at 545-0939 or 253-9971
Congreduaitions to the Sox, 1982 Strato champs. Defeating Plankton 4-1, thanks for the dinner, JC, GG, LC, DG
Louise - What a semester! You've been a super roomie. Smile kiddo, only one more to go! Harriet
Jay in PoliSci 362 we will sit in theback of the class Fri. I have brown hair and my friend has curly hair
Typing done quickly and professionally call Dave at 6-5766 for extraordinary work done at ordinary prices
Attention!! Sharon Pigeon - yes you! Have a great day! Love YSS
Naomi B. Sorry about Friday night. How about dinner Dec 23? Your special Happy Hanukkah Christmas Party
Final exams, memory, concentration, -success - group rates University Hypnosis Center 549-4645
Toots, Skippy and Wee-wee. Yes I love you all and especially you Toots. . .Happy Birthday Blondie!! Love from your favorite soon to be sailor
Who tickets available 11th row this weekends concert call Stuart 256-0271 best offer! call today
UPC members and friends Everyone Who's Anyone! Come party with UPC's end of the semester bash further info stop by office and see Donna or IrmaAlice 406 Student Union
John Kenney - Ted's been asking for you. . .we need you!
Happy Birthday Judy! Welcome to the 21 club. Love, Erin, Nance & Wendy Happy Birthday Sue, "21" and ober the hill. Love always, Scott
Janice - 12-10-82 1:30 am - 2:00 am Santa
JOY - Thanks for being a great friend. . .for being able to accept the good as well as the not so good!! Happy 21st Birthday!! Love, Kellee and Jeanne Newman Club X-mas Party Sat., Dec. 11 from 9-1 in the Newman Center front lounge. Cost is $1.50 and all are invited!
Lorette, Congrats - you're finally out of here!! Good luck! Lotsa love, your Chi Omega buddies!

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE
Dissertations, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED
To Milwaukee/Chicago Area around 20 Dec. will share gas/driving. call Pam 253-7405.
To Everglades or anywhere in Florida after X-mas Day call Brenda 617-544-2624
To Syracuse NY Dec 10 for WHO concert expenses shared call Saul 546-6021
To Colorado for Christmas Break call Shaun 549-6138.

RIDERS WANTED
To Ft Lauderdale Florida leaving ec 25 returning Jan 4 round trip 110.00 call Caroline at 549-1114 for info

ROOM WANTED
Females looking for a bedroom. In Brittany Manor for spring semester. Please call 549-5586. Keep trying.
Single room wanted for spring semester call Mark 549-2838 keep trying.
Female seeks own room in Amherst for spring semester Jocelyn 549-8650
Female seeks own room in house or apt 253-2294 Sheryl.
Room wanted for Wintersession two guys looking in North Amherst or near campus call Bob at 546-1131

ROOMMATE WANTED
Starting Jan 1 2 males remaining in 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt 2 openings call 253-5920
Female roommate wanted for Southwood apartment from Jan 1 on. Call 256-0630
One room available in Puffton prefer one male 549-6322
3 roommates wanted for Jan 1 and spr semester Brittany Manor call Tim 256-0606
Female wanted to share Puffton apt during int session $125/month includes heat. Preferably non-smoker. on bus route please call Debbie evenings 546-9660 or 546-9662
Responsible person for own room in Hadley apt $130 + electric 584-5045
Brittany Manor two people for one bedroom $115 month heat included Craig 253-7985
1 or 2 females wanted to rent Brittany Manor apt over break for details 253-7650
Female - share single bedroom Puffton starting February - lease until June 549-6741
Puffton Village - 3 bdrm sublet avail. for Jan with spring option avail for 1 bdrm, M/F, call 549-0621.
Female Roommate wanted Jan spring sem. Southwood townhouse $93+ 253-3273
Own room available in house near Southwest. Starting January $110/month 549-6495
Female wanted to share Brittany Manor Apt. Call 253-7360
Own Bedroom in two bedroom apt in Brittany Manor Apts Jan 1 256-8388
Kosher female for one bedroom in two bedroom Southwood townhouse 253-7031
1 or 2 people for 1 bdrm in furnished 2 bedrm Colonial Vill Apt 256-0763 Brad Chase
Female roommate(s) wanted for Jan 1 townhouse apt call Pat 549-4196 eves
2 people share 1 bedroom in So Amherst apt available immediately bus route only $80! each 586-3682
2-4 roommates in Echo Hill townhouse Jan-Aug call 253-2589
Female wanted for own room in Puffton start Jan 1 549-0137
Female roommated wanted Brittany manor $115/month. Heat included. Non-smoker 256-0298
Nice large room in furnished apartment 20 min from Amherst prefer over 25 must be neat, responsible and like 2 cats 175+ 774-4650
A clean non-smoking male to sre bedroom in Brittany Mnr 256-6041
One bedroom available in house minutes from Main St Northampton starting Jan $100 plus heat call 584-9480

SERVICES
Writing assistance. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729
Moving? Our 12 foot enclosed cube truck will help you safely move your stuff 256-0480
Fast Accurate Typing $1/page please call Leslea at 584-4880.
Say Something Special Made-to-order verses cards or gifts for more info 536-9683

SKI TRIPS
Smuggler's Notch Vermont Intersession trips, only $149!! For more info call: Roberta or Steph 549-6235

STOWE
Jan Ski Trip 5 days and 5 nights, 10 meals hot tubs and kegs $210.00 call Bob at 549-2775 and Steve 253-5560 and Dan at 546-7974

SHERYL SILVER
Here is clue number two - you know me, I know you! S.S.

TO SUBLET
Woman wanted to share room in apt Feb great deal for info please call 665-7109
Whole apt. 2 bedroom Squire Village call 665-3032
4 bedroom apt on bus route Swiss Village $165 ech including utilities 253-9519
1 Bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment on bus route available Jan 1 Laurel 665-3519
Intersession rental Southeast St $180 utilities included call Bob 256-6017 after 8
One bedroom on bus route intersession $90+ contact David at Bluewall Bar 12-3 or call 665-4048
Two bedroom apt available Jan 1 bus route Tarianne 665-4371
2 Rms in Apt Intersession. Bus Rte. Main St 125+ 256-0696
2 Bedroom furnished apt on Bus Route Mark 256-0763
One Bedroom Cliffside $300. Includes utilities Feb 1 665-8101.
Room Available in house near Southwest $100 549-6495
January only Two bedroom apt call John 546-5488 or Mike 546-4722 Evenings.
2 bedroom apartment heat and electricity included $250 665-3982

WANTED
Stratomatic Baseball Cards wanted 1971 through 1979 call 549-4141 Mark

WANTED TO BUY
Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT
Looking for an apartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093
Looking for heated garage within 10 mi. radius of Amherst call Jordan 542-3158
2-3 Bed apt for intersession call 546-6066.
Wanted for intersession 2 bedrm apt in Northampton 546-9666
Female looking for room in Swiss Village, Colonial or Rolling Green for intersession. Please call 546-6644.

FAYE WHITNEY-LUSSIER
Your secret sante is not who you think it is try again. Read into your clues better.

Sports

MORE SPORTS ON PAGE 18

UMass gymnasts pummel Lowell

Win 4 of 6 events

By ELLEN RICHARD
Collegian Staff

Roy Johnson, coach of the University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics team allowed some team members to rest instead of compete against the University of Lowell last night, but the men who did participate came through with some good scores to wipe Lowell out, 247.35-234.22.

Lowell had quite a few problems in the meet, last night, especially on the pummel horse on which they had trouble keeping smooth routines. UMass, on the other hand, had scores of nine in all but the parallel bars event, with Peter Lucchini, John Macurdy and Bert Mathieson getting the high scores.

UMass took four of the six events, including the floor exercises. Jim MacVarish of Lowell won the event with a 9.4 and included in his performance an arabian one and a half twisting to a one and one fourth front flip (a roundoff to the twist to the flip). Peter Lucchini came in second in the event with a good score of 9.2 and John Macurdy hit a nice routine and scored a 9.0.

In the pummel horse event, the Minutemen had a couple problems, with the exception of Mathieson who took first place with a score of 9.1. Mark Quevillion took second with and 8.05. Mathieson hit a smooth routine kicking his legs high and unbent.

"It was my first nine on the horse," Mathieson said. "I was really trying hard. I was a little nervous and felt like I was off but somehow I muscled it out."

UMass lost the rings event by a few tenths of a point. Sutter won the event for Lowell with a 9.45 score in a nice performance. Mathieson was right behind Sutter with a 9.1, and co-captian Bob Goulart came in third with a 8.8.

In long horse vaulting, Lowell came through again, but Macurdy got the high score with a 9.5 with a great-looking vault. John Knowles came in second for Lowell with a 9.4.

The Minutemen took the parallel bars event with Mathieson again coming up with the top score. In a good routine on the bar, Mathieson performed a jump to a half kip (pulling up to bar by kicking feet up) to a handstand for the beginning of his performance and started at the side of the bar. Goulart also came up with a nice performance scoring an 8.7 and Macurdy hit a sharp performance getting an 8.6.

Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

A determined Bob Goulart performs on the parallel bars during last night's win over Lowell. Goulart scored a 8.7.

Macurdy took first in the high bars, the final event, with another strong performance. Macurday had good form and moves scoring a 9.05. Tony Sbarra came in second with a good routine and scoring an 8.95. A confident Mathieson performed a pretty jam to a handstand from a giant swing scoring an 8.9.

"I was really psyched," Mathieson said about his performances. "I wished I could have gotten a nine on the parallel bar."

The team is now 2-0 and have one big and important meet coming up against Syracuse on Saturday.

"I'm really anxious about the meet on Saturday," Johnson said. "If the university community wants to see a really top meet they should come on Saturday."

Minutemen take on arch-rival UConn Huskies

By JIM FLOYD
Collegian Staff

Things got so bad for the UMass Minutemen on Tuesday afternoon that head coach Tom McLaughlin was forced to play in the various full court scrimmages that were taking place on the Curry Hicks Cage floor.

And the second year head coach played pretty well at that. Though his first two shots from deep in the corner were of the masonary version, McLaughlin showed the young whippersnappers the moves that made him a star in the old days of UMass basketball as he threw a couple of fancy passes and then caught fire to hit several outside shots.

But, Tom McLaughlin, the player, has already used up his academic eligibility to play college basketball so it's a pretty good thing that most of Tuesday's missing Minutemen will be available for action tonight when UMass goes on the road to take on the University of Connecticut.

Missing from the lineup will be A. J. Wynder and Hal Shaw. Wynder is still in the Cooley Dickinson Hospital, the victim of a much-publicized bizarre stabbing. Shaw will sit out due to a recurring knee injury.

Skip Connors and George Ramming, both of whom were treated to the aforementioned McLaughlin performance while they iced down swollen ankles, should be at 100 percent against the Huskies. They both practiced at full speed yesterday.

The Huskies are, according to McLaughlin, "a very good team."

In order to try to get the Minuteman machine in gear, there will probably be a slight change in the starting lineup for the game. McLaughlin said that he is thinking of starting Donald Russell and 6'5" All-Rookie team forward Horace Neysmith at the guard spots along with Bobby Braun, Edwin Green and freshman John Hempel in the frontcourt.

"We're going to try and start a bigger, stronger lineup," said McLaughlin.

What should be the key to success for this young 0-2 team is keeping up full intensity for 40 minutes instead of 30 or 35. Had the team played a complete game against UNH and Harvard they could very easily have an unbeaten record instead of a winless one.

"Donald (Russell) and Horace (Neysmith) have to play better," said McLaughlin. "And I'm sure they will. They're both good ballplayers.

The game will be broadcast over Channel 3 on television and WMUA on the radio beginning at 8 p.m.

One added note: Should anyone want to do something for A. J. Wynder, he put a severe drain on the blood supply at Cooley Dickinson Hospital. Coach McLaughlin urges people to donate blood to the hospital in Wynder's name if possible.

1982: Overall, a great year for sports

By ELLIOT KALB
Collegian Staff

1982 proved to be a great year for a degenerate sports fan like myself, Ed Garvey and his chums notwithstanding.

In January, we saw one of the best Super Bowls in history, with the 49ers coming out on top. In the next few months, hockey star Wayne Gretzky scored 212 points, including an unheard of 50 goals in 39 games, for the Edmonton Oilers. Even a non-hockey fan like myself had to appreciate both Gretzky and the closest thing to a dynasty in sports today, the New York Islanders.

The Islanders had to survive a final-game scare from the Pittsburgh Penguins in the first round of the playoffs, and they needed two goals from John Tonelli to come back from a 3-1 defecit with five and a half minutes remaining. They won their 3rd consecutive Stanley Cup in April.

The Philadelphia 76ers and the Boston Celtics played their annual grueling seven game series in late May for the right to lose to Los Angeles in the NBA finals. The Celtics fell behind 3 games to 1 and rallied to take the next two games. The 76ers were tighter than a pair of jeans on Kate Smith, but held together and won the series in Boston Garden on a Sunday afternoon in Game 7.

Way to go, Sixers!

The best basketball of the year, however, was played in the collegiate ranks. In March, the NCAA basketball tournament produced some exciting matchups, some upsets, and a monster. North Carolina finally won the national championship for Dean Smith; Depaul lost in their first tournament game for the 3rd consecutive; and the monster became the Big East Conference, producing three of the final eight teams.

The Final Four teams in that tournament were nothing to write home about, but the final two were. Georgetown and North Carolina showed you everything you could ever want in a basketball game and more. It was a privilege to watch that ballgame. Pat Ewing will be back, I guarantee it.

After a disappointing 1981 baseball season, 1982 was a pleasure. The Milwaukee Brewers needed to go to the final game of the year before putting away Earl Weaver and the Baltimore Orioles, but they hung on. In the National League, Ted Turner's Atlanta Braves won their first 13 games of the season, and held on to their lead against an aging champion in the Los Angeles Dodgers.

In the end, the World Series was more frosty than the beer St. Louis and Milwaukee manufacture. St. Louis came out victorious (does anyone realize that this is the first time in history that the National League has won 4 World Series in a row) and did so behind their ace reliever, Bruce Sutter.

Jimmy Connors came back at an ancient 30 years old to beat John McEnree for his second Wimbledon tournament, and although tarnished by the absence of rival Bjorn Borg, deserves a special mention. Connors followed by winning his fourth U.S. Open in September. You can take your Borgs and Ivan Lendl's and chuck them — I'd rather watch Connors any time.

Sugar Ray Leonard retired on top, a champion.

Howard Cosell made the same mistake that his good friend Ali made, and stuck around too long.

It wasn't a good year for Bowie Kuhn, the Baseball commissioner, who was a victim of greed and given the old heave-ho.

College football had a stellar year in 1982. Eastern football, in particular, has never been stronger. Boston College and Western Virginia have joined Penn State and Pittsburgh as legitimate Top 20 contenders from the East.

Sports is an escape from the real world, its problems, and its solutions. I'm not interested in cocaine problems, strike talks, and economics.

Some problems and realities we have to face. My prayers and sympathies to Red Smith and Ray Fitzgerald, sportswriters for the New York Times and Boston Globe, who died in 1982. Reading these men several times a week, sports fans have come to know them. They are missed.

Tony Conigliare, Doug Kotar, and Normand Levaille — the hope is that one day soon, all will be able to live and lead a somewhat normal life.

1982 was a great year for sports fans. As for me, it was a lot of fun writing these columns this past semester. Since you may remember it was my columns that predicted that there would be no NFL strike, that the Milwaukee Brewers would be World Series champs, and that Tampa Bay would win the Super Bowl (still slightly possible). Perhaps it is best to label me a sports enthusiast — not expert.

Happy Holidays

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian
113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500

Give the gifts of words and music

Music, music a great gift for the holidays

By DAVID CHEVAN
and DOUGLAS MUISE
Collegian Staff

This year was not exactly a trend-setting year for synthetic modern dance bands continue to breech the charts with occasional hits, but it's mostly the tried-and-true acts that dominate the Billboard lists. The music industry has also felt the crunch of the recession with reduced sales and a declining interest in more experimental, less commercial bands.

The companies have placed the brunt of the blame on home taping, as well as the increased popularity of video games, but it's more likely the $8.98 list price of their products is the culprit. As a result, the Extended-Play record format has been pushed as a means of easing the strain on the wallets of the consumers, but it is uncertain how long this will last.

WILD THINGS RUN FAST (Geffen)
Joni Mitchell

If you liked Court and Spark, you'll love Wild Things. One has to praise Joni for exploring new musical forms as she did during her Mingus period, but when you get right down to it, confessional songwriting is her true "forte". Jonie has actually combined the best of two worlds, jazz fusion and pop ballads to create what is easily her best work in ten years. A must for incurable romantics! — D.M.

IMPERIAL BEDROOM (EMI)
Elvis Costello

Costello is the song crafter of the decade, sort of the Woody Allen of pop music. Trust was spotty, Almost Blue — his bow to Hank Williams — was an embarassment, but with Imperial Bedroom Elvis changes the sheets. Here is an impressive, superbly crafted collection of poignant pop selections that bring us back to the superlative ambiance of My Aim Is True and This Year's Model. Essential stuff. — D.M.

1999 (Warner Bros.)
Prince

In a recent review, 1999 was called "the album of the year," I can't help but agree. Prince plays all of the instruments and writes all the songs on 1999 and at the rate he's going, he'll become the Black Todd Rungren in no time. Hope he doesn't get a vision. — D.C.

OFF RAMP (ECM)
Pat Metheny

Metheny seems to get better with every album. His music represents the new jazz sound — an intelligent combustion of synthesizers and acoustic instruments. A must for old fusion freaks and Dead Heads. — D.C.

MIRAGE (Warner Bros.)
Fleetwood Mac

The Lindsay Buckingham band comes up with another winner. With three big hits already in the can, the Mac prove they can match odds with any band around today. How can you hate a group that has dogs barking in the background and sings such silliness as "Put your hand inside my glove?" A must for air-head pop fans everywhere. — D.C.

Collegian photo by David May

Berries, bows and pine cones ornament this twig wreath which hung last Friday in French Hall during the Floral Design Show.

We've also decided, in our infinite generosity, to divulge our pix for "Best LP of all Time." Just in case you want to dig a little deeper for something special.

BLONDE ON BLONDE (Columbia)
Bob Dylan

Dylan's masterwork. Rock at the farthest reaches of imagination. The Sixties absorbed, contemplated, and reflected. — D.M.

EXILE ON MAIN STREET (Rolling Stone)
Rolling Stones

If you buy only one Stone's album in your lifetime, this is the one to buy. Gritty, impassioned R&B clatter, preached with effective rebelliousness by a Jagger possessed. The essential introduction to rock as an expression of agnst unbound. — D.M.

GIANT STEPS (Atlantic)
John Coltrane

No album collection is complete without this classic jazz milestone. Coltrane changed the force and direction of jazz with this album and it has not been the same since. Coltrane was a man with a lot to say and with compositions such as "Spiral" and "Naimba," he showed the world he knew how to say it. — D.C.

INNER VISIONS (Motown)
Stevie Wonder

Inner Visions is the superlative Wonder work. Almost entirely written and performed by Wonder, every song is a masterpiece. "All In Love Is Fair," "Living For The City," and "Too High" are songs that all of us grew up with. — D.C.

Political books are dominating holiday scene

By ROGER ATWOOD
Collegian Staff

The most striking feature of the book scene this holiday season is the great quantity and quality of political books. Topics vary widely, from nuclear weapons to McCarthyism to Central America. But seldom do so many important and high-quality political books appear at once.

George Kennan, former ambassador to the Soviet Union and the most sensible advocate of arms control since the '50s, has just published The Nuclear Delusion (Pantheon, $13.95 hardcover). Our nuclear arms build-up has never been based on a fully realistic assessment of the Soviet Union, argues Kennan, while we may discover perils of the "deterrence" policy only too late. The Soviet expert presents a clear and authoritative analysis of our impasse, as well as an eloquent plea to pull back from the nuclear precipice.

In the same vein, Thomas Powers's Thinking About the Next War (Knopf, $10.95 hardcover) offers the chilling if somewhat less informed conclusion that American foreign policy since World War II has all pointed toward inevitable nuclear war. A Washington think-tank, the Institute for Foreign Policy Analysis, gives the other side of the coin in the vital but overpriced Warsaw Pact: Aims, Doctrine and Strategy (McGraw-Hill, 29.95 hardcover).

The last year has seen several excellent new books on the Central American situation. The most recent is Penny Lernoux's Cry of the People (Penguin, $6.95 paperback), on how the Catholic Church in the troubled region has transformed from an instrument of reaction to a strongly progressive force. Grove Press has issued an enormously useful collection of essays, documents and opinion called El Salvador: Central America in the New Cold War ($7.95 paperback). The CIA's exploits in Guatemala in the early 1950s are superbly recounted in Bitter Fruit, by Stephen Schlesinger and Boston Globe reporter Stephen Kinzer (Doubleday, $16.95 hardcover).

Meanwhile, writers are busy writing about themselves and other writers, as shown by Norman Mailer — A Biography by Hilary Mills (Empire, $14.95 hardcover). Massachusetts's own William Styron has come out with a collection of semi-autobiographical sketches entitled This Quiet Dust (Random House, $17.50 hardcover), while columnist Russell Baker embarks on a sentimental journey in Growing Up (Congdon and Weed, $15 hardcover).

Of a more political nature, Jimmy Carter's hastily-prepared memoirs have appeared as Keeping Faith (Bantam, $22.50 hardcover).

Dozens of books on the new Computer Age have appeared, each of them outdoing the last in describing all the fantastic capabilities of these machines. One of the most notable books on the subjects is To Inform or Control? The New Communications Networks (McGraw-Hill, $15.95 hardcover), a survey of the incredible growth and potential of the electronic media. While the cost of oil "went through the ceiling in the seventies," write authors Oswald and Gladys Ganley, the cost of buying and running a computer fell by 95 percent.

The splashy, expensive art books that sell well only around the holiday are well-represented this season. One of them is Photographs, by Linda McCartney, Paul's wife and a photographer who has spent 20 years photographing rock stars ranging from the Beatles to Jim Morrison to Mick Jagger. At a mere $12.95 for 98 photos, this volume flies in the face of the trend in books this holiday — expensive.

Sweeties
FINE CHOCOLATES AND CONFECTIONS
Over 100 kinds of candy
Secret Santa's
Christmas gifts and gift certificates
Quality Chocolate
Gourmet Jelly Beans
Tins, Glassware, and more
Downtown Amherst 253-5589 & 68 Main St Northampton 586-4180

Walk-Over
FINALLY A SHOE THAT WALKS AS GOOD AS IT LOOKS
Walking shoe comfort with leather-covered cushioned insoles at an affordable price by Walk-Over.
Mathews SHOE STORE
The Village Common, Amherst

'Rededication' older than Christmas

By JIM FINKLE
Collegian Staff

The Jewish holiday of Hanukkah, which begins tonight and will last eight days, commemorates Judah Macabee's successful revolt against the Hellenistic Syrians who occupied the land of Canaan where Israel is now located around the year 165 B.C.

The Hebrew word "Hanukkah" means "rededication." The miracle that Hanukkah celebrates occured during the rededication of the Macabee's temple.

While the temple was being rededicated, only one flask of sacramental oil could be found by the Macabees. Although this amount of oil would only burn for one day, the flame lasted for eight days.

Today Jews in the United States celebrate this miracle by lighting candles on a "menorah." A menorah is a special candle holder with spaces for eight candles as well as a head candle, the "shamus."

The shamus, which literally means "head" in Hebrew, is used to light the eight other candles on each day of Hanukkah. On the first evening of Hanukkah, only the shamus and one candle are lit. On each successive night, one additional candle is lit until the shamus and all eight other candles are lit.

In addition to lighting candles, Jews celebrate the holiday by exchanging gifts. The practice of exchanging gifts is based on the tradition of giving money, called "golt' to children on the holiday.

Food is also an important part of the Hanukkah celebration. Jews prepare special pancakes called "latkes." These latkes are potato pancakes and are eaten with sour cream and, more recently, yogurt.

The holiday is also characterized by the singing of songs both in Hebrew and in English. One favorite English song is called "little dreidel." It is sung by children and repeats the chorus: "dreidel, dreidel, dreidel, I made it out of clay, and when it is dry and ready, Oh dreidel I will play."

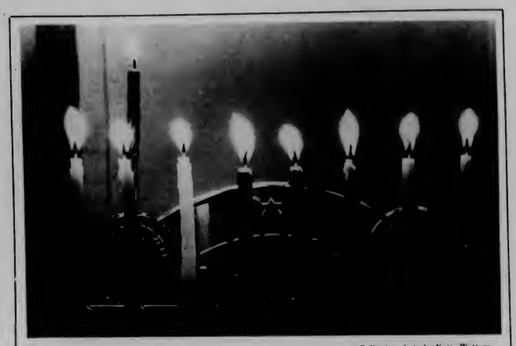
Around the world, Hanukkah is celebrated in many different ways.

In Kurdistan, a section of Turkey, children carry dolls or effigies resembling the Syrian leader Antiochus while going door-to-door to homes in their neighborhood requesting money from their neighbors. After this version of "trick-or-treat," the children build a bonfire and burn the effigies, shouting, "Antiochus, Antiochus."

In Israel today, Hanukkah is celebrated with an enthusiasm similar to that of Christmas in the United States. On top of water towers in every settlement, as well as in many public buildings, large, electric menorahs light up to celebrate what is called "the festival of lights."

Another custom practiced in Israel involves a torch relay. In the town where Judah of Macabee was born, Modin, a torch is lit and carried during a relay race all the way to the Great Synagogue in Tel Aviv.

The light plays an important part in the celebration.



Collegian photo by Katie Watters

The gleam of nine glowing candles represents a warm symbol of the Hannukah season.

GIFTS

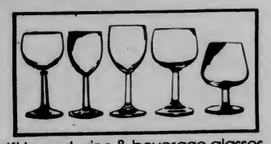
elegant gift boxed housewares

HATS, GLOVES, SOCKS & SCARVES

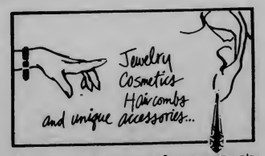
CANDLES
Big selection of colors, shapes, and scents

The SOAP CART

bubblebaths • moisturizers
soaps • soaps for kids
loofahs • brushes • sponges
sachets



gift boxed wine & beverage glasses



toys & games

casual wear for women & men • jewelry
cosmetics • soap cart • accessories • gifts
home furnishings • kitchen • housewares
glass & china • prints • cards • totes & soft luggage

SUNDAY 12-5
EVERY NIGHT TIL 9
VISA

FACES
Downtown | Amherst

A Store-full of Stocking Stuffers

CARROLL TRAVEL
Personal Service for all your Travel Needs
• Airline travel
• Cruises
• Amtrak tickets
• Car rentals
• Hotel reservations
• Packages to anywhere in the world
Free, Expert Advice
Located on Cowles Lane off No. Pleasant St.
256-8931

Golden Opportunity
FINE JEWELRY AT AN AFFORDABLE PRICE
Gold & Diamonds 40 - 60% off an additional 10% OFF
Special Order Engagement Rings WITH THIS AD with Glad Bags
13 No. Pleasant St., Amherst, MA.
All diamonds & gems evaluated by G.I.A. Grading System
Thur 1:00 - 5:30 pm Fri 1:00 - 5:30 pm
Sat 9:30 - 5:30 pm

Christmas Cards
Decorations
Christmas Gifts
Toys & Games
& Gift Wrap
at
A.J. HASTINGS
Newsdealer and Stationer
45 S. Pleasant St., Amherst

• cookbooks • crafts • drama • economics • english • etc •
art • architecture • children's • computers
film • foreign languages • gardening • history
The Reading Remedy
come see us - you'll be surprised at the beautiful affordable gifts at the Reading Remedy... a very different kind of bookstore - where every book is always below regular wholesale price!
ENTIRE STOCK
50%-90% OFF
PUBLISHER'S LIST PRICE
The Reading Remedy
NEW BOOKS AT HALF PRICE
open Thurs 'til 9, Fri evenings 'til 9, Sunday 12-5
down the ramp at - 71 N. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST (Across from Lewis Foods)
• lit. • math • nat. sci. • poli. sci • soc. sci • technical • travel • etc •

ATLANTIC SUN ACTIONWEAR
67 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002
Long Sleeve T-Shirts
Corduroy Pants & Jackets
Sweaters
ocean pacific sunwear.

Serious gift ideas — really

Editor's note: This article was compiled by some crazy Collegianites who shall remain nameless.

Don Juan Suggests...

The time is fastly approaching when I will have to decide what to give my women friends for Christmas. I promised myself that this year I would grow up and not give out any of those childish things that I gave last year so I've got some serious thinking to do.

Why not give her flowers? Flowers are the end all of gifts to females. They can admire their beauty and fragrance and think of you as they slowly wilt into decrepit ugly dying twigs. No, I don't think flowers will cut it.

Candy? Candy is dandy. Sweet chocolates will make her giggle as she tastes how delicious they are. But, she'll get fat and have pimples from candy. Negative on the bon bons.

A stuffed animal? Stuffed animals are a focal point of many dorm rooms. They are cute and cuddly and soft and can be loved almost as if they were real. Unfortunately, with all the security that they provide, they can sometimes take your place with her. Don't need to give her your competition. Cut the animal idea.

Jewelery? Perfect, it doesn't wilt, cause obesity or acne, and it doesn't take up bed space. And all it costs is...whoops. Never mind. A date with me should be enough to satisfy them.

Gifts for me...

Christmas is great for the Me Generation, so as a typical member, here is my Christmas list:

A humorous book for those boring lectures would be great — Garfield, Kathy, Doonesbury are all definitely high on that list. A gift certificate to the Coffee Shop or Hatch or People's Market for some in-class or between-class munchies (no pun intended) would be greatly appreciated, too.

Magazine subscriptions are always welcome. Shelling out $40 at once get's a little difficult sometimes, so it's always nice if someone else does it for you. Cosmo, Elle, Ms., and the Writer's Digest are preferable. That last one, by the way, comes out of my sudden realization that I'm going to have to make a living behind a typewriter, and I'd better start figuring out who's got the money to pay me for it.

Posters are always a good idea. They're easy to afford to give friends, also, but interests vary in this department. From ballet, to Einstein to Tom Selleck, there's always a poster out there for that hard-to-figure-out person on the list. I personally have been eyeing the Bogart poster taken from the bar scene in Casablanca. Hint, hint, hint.

Food is acceptable. Always. I'm off the meal plan (any sympathy out there? No?!), but if it's a gift, something like a bottle of Moet champagne or pastries from that bakery in town are a starting point for gift-givers. If someone is willing to buy the groceries, I'll trade ya for my turning it into one helluva meal...

My brother usually takes care of albums for me. I think he's buying me Flock of Seagulls. I also like Quincy Jones' song Just Once — the kind of song I love to hate, or hate to love — so if anyone can afford a 45, I'd be into it.

Poetry, whether written by a master or for me, would be nice. That latter should be accompanied by a flower or something. Sorry, Don Juan, I dry flowers, so mine last forever.

Last but not least, someone under the mistletoe would be nice. Looks aren't everything, but personality sure is. Anyone sweet, warm, understanding, and who doesn't mind putting up with a schize writer would actually be in great demand down here at the Collegian. On the other hand, what does a workaholic need romance for? It takes time out of writing off-beat articles like this one!

Gifts for the Culturally Enriched

Arts-minded people are far too tuned to the hypocrisy of Christmas to concern themselves with the perverse triviality of blind slovenly greed.

However, should you know an arts-minded person who, in fact, is strong enough to overlook all this, there is a good variety of gifts which would appeal to the culturally-fortified individual.

Nutcracker tickets are dynamite. The classic ballet is a staple of the holiday season and the Boston Ballet's version is up there with the best of them (New York's American Ballet Theatre being the pinnacle). The production will play December 15-29 at the Hynes Auditorium in Boston. Tickets range from $10.00 to $30.00.

Cheaper, monetarily, are movie tickets. Most theatres offer gift certificates which can be used whenever the bearer likes. It should be a good Christmas for films. Among the upcoming releases are Tootsie, with Dustin Hoffman as an aspiring actor; Richard Pryor as the title character in The Toy; Paul Newman as a down-on-his-luck Boston lawyer in The Verdict; Ben Kingesly as Gandhi; Frederic Forrest as Hammett; and Nick Nolte and Eddie Murphy in 48 Hours.

Books and music are covered elsewhere in this shopper, so I'll close with a brief mention of theatre. Evita will have a limited tour of Boston throughout the holiday. See it, and take someone you love.

Shopping Card.
When you come across that once-in-a-lifetime bargain, but find yourself short of cash, there's only one card that lets you get it quickly at more than 300 X-Press 24s around Massachusetts. The Bay Banks X-Press 24 ™ Card.
Try Something Better

New Banking Hours
AMHERST OFFICE
Effective November 1, 1982

	Lobby	Drive-Up
Mon - Thurs	10-4	10-4
Friday	10-6	10-6
Saturday	10-1	10-1

X-Press 24 service available 24 hrs a day, 7 days a week

SALADS SUBMARINES SYRIANS
the sub
11 A.M. TO 2 A.M. / 7 DAYS

33 E. PLEASANT ST., AMHERST / 549-5160
FREE 16 oz. soda with a whole sub

CYCLE JACKET, TAILORED PANTS, "D"-RI
PANTS, DRAWSTRING PANTS, JOGGING
JACKETS, SHAWLS, SO WOOL HA GRANDFATHER SH OUCH SHIRT, WILD GR THE BICYCLE JACKE D"- OCKET-FLARE NIE
ORDUROY JUM OV
DRESS, CORDU ON SWEATERS, LEG ITS,
PURSES COTTON- NECK
ULLOVER, UNDERPA TIGHTS
COTTON TIGHTS, HAMMOCKS, BRUSHES
OWN COMFORTER, NIGHTSHIRTS, COTT
LANNEL ORDUROY JUMPER, C
RTAIN JACKETS, SHAW
CAR ITTENS, COTTC
AFG LE JACKET, CC
A -FLARED SKIR
DR GING PANTS
O GRANDFATHE
YAR CH SHIRT, WIL
GRA HE COWL TUNIC
HREE- KET-FLARED SKIR
COTTON B , CORDUROY JUMPER
ORDUROY PULLOVER DRES URC
UMPSUIT, COTTON BEA
ARMERS, YARN KITS, P
T'S, TURTLENECK, SO
Special Shipment !!!
All-Silk Blouses
Good things collective inc
A WORKER'S COOPERATIVE • 52 Main St., Northampton • 586-5403

Joey D's
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Happy Holidays
from Joey D's and Mikes Westview

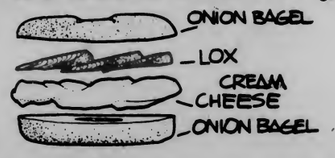
SHOE SALE!
UP TO 50% OFF
On Fall Shoes and Boots
Choose from an impressive array of famous names including: Bandolino, Jazz, Hippopotamus, Unisa, Hana Mackler, Joan & David, Mootsies Tootsies, Caressa, Nina and Sporto.
DEC. 9, 10 & 11
sizes limited, so hurry!
STRUT
197 Main St., Northampton

Can we build one for you?



Design your favorite bagel sandwich and bring us the blueprint - we'll build it to exact specs. We're the bagel engineers at
THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN
Amherst Carriage Shops 549-6314

Hair Styles A LA CARTE
a cut above ... a price below
241 MAIN ST. - 2nd FLOOR
ACROSS FROM PULASKI PARK
NORTHAMPTON, MASS
584-7798

Same entrance as Tree House
Door on right
584-7798
MENU

Bangs Trim		$3.00
Haircut		$8.00
Shampoo/Cut		$9.00
Shampoo/Cut/Blow Dry.	Short	$11.00
	Long	$12.00
Perms	Short	$25.00
	Long	$30.00
Braids		$5.00

241 MAIN ST. - 2nd FLOOR NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
ACROSS FROM PULASKI PARK
Fashionable styles a cut above. . .a price below

Great Gifts
Stocking Stuffers
Posters Cards
BLOUSES
Dresses, Skirts, Scarves
Earrings Crystals
Mugs Calendars
Ornaments
Vases, Boxes, Tins, Mobiles, Toys
Weeknights 9 pm Dec 10 - 23
Sundays 12 - 5 pm
Daily 10 am - 6 pm
Open 10 am - 6 pm - 9 pm Fri.
Open Sundays 12-5 p.m.
Great Gifts - Great Prices
THE MERCANTILE
AMHERST CARRIAGE SHOPS

feast & folly restaurant
SPECIALIZING IN CHICKEN, FISH, & VEGETARIAN ENTREES: $3.25 - $6.95
DINNER IS SERVED FROM 5-10
111 PLEASANT ST.
NORTHAMPTON 586-8387
BYOB CLOSED TUES.

They're dears
Ask for them for Christmas!
In luscious, velvety colors.
CHONA
CONTEMPORARY FASHION
THORNES MARKET NORTHAMPTON

Prepare For: Our 44th Year
MCAT LSAT • GRE GRE PSYCH GRE BIO DAT • VAT GMAT PCAT DCAT MAT SSAT PSAT SAT
ACT TOEFL MSKP NMB ECFMG FLEX • VQE NDB • NPB RN BDS CPA SPEED-READING
TEST PREPARATION SPECIALISTS SINCE 1938
Stanley H. KAPLAN Educational Center
Call Days Evenings & Weekends
253-5108
264 N. Pleasant St
Amherst
Intersession classes
MCAT 1/4/83
GMAT 1/3/83
GRE 1/3/83
LSAT 1/8/83
other sections available
Centers in More than 105 Major U.S. Cities, Puerto Rico and Toronto, Canada
Outside NY State CALL TOLL FREE 800 223-1782

SHINY GOLD CHONA CASH/
Redeemable for absolutely everything at Chona— in denominations of $5, so that $25 looks like a bundle.
Thornes Market Northampton
CHONA
CONTEMPORARY FASHION

We Invite You to join the exclusive
Plumbley's Dinner Club
Membership $29.

Membership entitles you to:
1) 10 FREE DINNERS* 10 visits accompanied by another, also Brunch.
2) Preferred seating with member reservations
3) Enjoy Dinner and Entertainment in the recently redecorated Webster's Lounge.
4) Enjoy dining in one of 5 different dining rooms including our famous Greenhouse room, at membership rates.
5) Mailed notice in advance of all special events (wine tastings, etc.)
Membership Price: $29 (Value $125.00 plus)
You may get your membership card now simply by mailing this completed coupon or come directly to Plumbley's off the Common and pick up your card, or phone 253-9586.
*NOT VALID SATURDAY NIGHTS
Name
Address
City State Zip Phone
Please charge to my (check one) American Express Visa Master Charge
Account # Expiration date
Signature Check enclosed
MAIL TO: Plumbley's off the Common, 30 Boltwood Walk, Amherst, MA 01002 C
*Exclusions: New Year's Eve, Valentine's Day, Easter and Saturdays. Expires March 1, 1983
What a Great Holiday Gift Idea!
Dine in the casual elegance of... Plumbley's off the common ...where there's a little bit of everything for everyone.
30 Boltwood Walk • Amherst • 253-9586

THE SALVATION ARMY
Christmas is love, hope and caring.
At The Salvation Army Christmas means "sharing."
Give to The Salvation Army so others may have a happy holiday.

Only in Hadley: Christmas begins six months early

The Christmas season traditionally begins the day after Thanksgiving, when shops and malls are besieged with customers out to do their Yuletide shopping.

But Christmas starts in June at the Hadley Village Christmas Shop on Route 9 in Hadley.

"We begin decorating in mid-June, about a month before we open the store," said general manager Paul Meehan. "And we never, in effect, stop."

The shop is bursting with Christmas goodies: decorated wreaths, sleighbells, Christmas stockings, nativity sets, XMass wrapping paper and ribbons, nutcracker dolls, stocking stuffers, bulbs, tree ornaments, and more.

What sets the shop apart from the rest is the carefully constructed atmosphere. From the back walkway that leads past trees dotted with lights to the Christmas tree room overflowing with ornaments and displays, the shop is reminiscent of a children's television Christmas special.

"We put a lot of work into our atmosphere," Meehan said. "This is what sets us apart from the malls. They have their niche, and we have ours."

The piece de resistance is the Christmas tree room in back of the shop, which displays a myriad of options for decorating a Christmas tree at home.

"We try to give the room a home-like effect, to give people ideas as to what would look good in their home," Meehan said.

The walls of the tree room are lined with imitation crystal ornaments, small nativity scenes, candy canes, bulbs, lights, and many more accesories for decorating a Christmas tree.

There are no live trees in the Christmas tree room, Meehan said. But all ornaments in the room are suitable for living trees.

"We don't decorate people's trees for them, but the displays can give our customers some good ideas on how to decorate their own tree," Meehan said.

The shop was founded in 1967 by owner Everett McDonald. "Mr. McDonald originally had a greenhouse in Springfield, and would sell Christmas decorations during the Christmas season," Meehan said.

"He did a good business and decided to expand to Hadley. The business kept expanding, and here we are," Meehan said.

"It's a good business," Meehan said. "It's a very clean business, and everyone here loves their work."

Collegian photo by Tom Kodis

In the fine tradition of Christmas commercialization, this little felt specimen rides a styrophone candycane bearing an empty box as if there were something in it.

Boxed Christmas Cards FROM $3 — 100 STYLES
Ribbon, Wrapping Paper & Single Cards, too!
Sundays 12-5 / Downtown Amherst
FACES

I'll be home sometime but don't hold dinner

By JIM FLOYD
Collegian Staff

Greg White drives and so does Kevin Shire, but when it's time for Dennis Holland to go home for the holidays, he reaches into his closet and pulls out his bright "Boston, Please!" sign and heads towards Amherst Center to begin hitchhiking.

"I don't own a car and the price for the bus is a bit too steep for me," Holland said, "so I print my own ticket home."

When the holidays come around, there is always a scuffling of students trying to somehow manage to head towards family, real food, old friends and maybe even a little extra spending money.

For the students who own a car, they have simply to gas it up and go. The only thing close to an adventure for them is to try to get a couple of extra people to cramp themselves into the back of their tiny Honda Civic to save on money for petro.

Those who are not so fortunate make up the group known as the people who have Thumbed-Home-Under-Many-Bad-Situations (THUMBS). These people are always the more interesting ones to talk to when you finally arrive home yourself.

"How did you get home?"you can ask your good friend who goes to Brown.

"Well, the first ride I got was from a truck driver who was delivering beer. He said that he didn't have any room for me up front so I would have to ride in the back of the truck. By the time he dropped me off 20 miles later, I had gotten quite a buzz on," he'll tell you.

"After only about three or four minutes," he'll continue, "a car pulled over and the most beautiful woman I have ever laid eyes on reached over and opened the door. She told me that she wasn't going all the way to Boston because she was just moving into a new house. I told her I thought she was very nice and we ended up making a date. Then she dropped me off," he'll say with a wide smile.

And the two of you can walk down the street, talking of your exploits, which are, if not ficticious, at least a little bit expanded.

But, it sure beats driving stories. They're all accidents. Drive safely or thumb.

Guess what, Virginia, got a surprise for you

By KEVIN BOWE
Collegian Staff

Editor's note: Because of potentially unhappy material found in this article, all those under the age of 12 are advised not to read it.

With life becoming increasingly complex, there is very little in today's world that everyone can say they have experienced. One of the more traumatic experiences that many of us have encountered is that frightful moment when we found out there was no such thing as Santa Claus.

Even a person burdened with so much responsiblity as Governor-elect Michael Dukakis can vividly remember that moment.

"I was either six or seven. My folks gave me a bright, what I thought was a new red sled. I was tickled to get it. But I noticed some writing underneath it and I didn't think Santa Claus would paint that on," Dukakis said, in an exclusive interview because this reporter didn't want any one else to be there.

Dukakis was quickly pulled away from the interview by some people who wanted to talk to the governor about "important things." (What's more important than Santa Claus?!) But at least Dukakis was good-natured enough to answer the question, unlike certain University of Massachusetts officials.

Either UMass Chancellor Joseph Duffey has had too much coal put in his stockings as a little boy living in the mining country of West Virginia or the "Marie Reid affair" has turned him into the Christmas Scrooge of 1982.

When asked to coment on when he first realized there was no Santa, Duffey said, "Last Sunday night," referring to the beginning of his public troubles with Reid.

"It was a typical question asked by the Collegian," he cried Well bah hum bug, Joe, if you can't take the heat...

And how did this muckraking journalist find out there is no Santa? Well after exhausting all my sources, the Tooth Fairy told me in my sleep.

HOLIDAY HAIR WITH THAT GREAT "X" FLAIR
Holiday hair excitement begins with a Great Expectations precision haircut or perfect holiday perm. Natural. Distinctive and Totally You!
For a special holiday gift, give someone you care for a Great "X" gift certificate
Hampshire Mall
Hadley, MA
Mon - Sat
10:00 - 9:30
586-6182
NO APPOINTMENT NECESSARY
GREAT EXPECTATIONS PRECISION HAIRCUTTERS

Fine Locally Handcrafted Gifts
CELEBRATIONS
AN ARTISANS' COLLECTIVE
70 Main St. Northampton
Mon-Sat 10-6
Thurs 10-9 Sun 10-5

The Sale's On!
Boots
Shoes
Sox
Bags
Mittens
Hats
the SHOE BIN
187 n. pleasant st., amherst

HOLIDAY GREETINGS FROM SUBWAY
Famous Foot-Long Sandwiches
FEATURING
ALASKAN KING CRAB
ITALIAN EXPRESS (Salami & Meatballs)
METRO (Pepperoni & Genoa)
ROAST BEEF
PASTRAMI
TURKEY
HAM
SAUSAGE
B.M.T. (Ham, Pepperoni, Genoa Bologna)
SUBWAY SPECIAL (Ham, Genoa, Bologna)
MEATBALL
PEPPERONI
TUNA
GENOA
BOLOGNA
CHEESE
TRIMLINE (Salad on a roll)
Served with your choice of • American Cheese • Onions • Lettuce • Dill Pickles • Tomatoes • Green Peppers • Black Olives • Salt • Pepper and Oil
Hampshire Mall Hadley
90 King St. Northampton
214 Exchange St. Chicopee
OPEN LATE 7 DAYS A WEEK

NORTHAMPTON ZOO
Great Gifts for Knitters
• 100 % Cotton Knitting Bags
• Knitting Folding Strands
• Accessory Cases
• Wooden Needles & Needle Rolls
• Beautiful Handknit Sweaters & Woven Shawls
Special 40% off Icelandic Sweaters, Hats & Mittens
Knitting Classes Tues. 7-9pm
Free Knitting Workshop Thurs. until 9pm
5 Armory St. Northampton 586-4331

SALE!
J. G. DURAND International
FINE GLASSWARE
GIFT BOXED SETS OF 6
REG. 12.50
NOW 8.95
FACES
Downtown Amherst
SUNDAY 12-5
EVERY NIGHT TIL 9
VISA
A Store-full of Stocking Stuffers

Holiday Spirit? Does it tutor chem?

By LISA PEDULLA
Collegian Staff

For most college students the holiday season can be a trying time, when they face finals, disappointments and the prospect of life at home after four months of independence.

Most of us grew accustomed to spending the month of December buying gifts, wrapping presents, decorating and baking cookies. Suddenly we are faced with the overbearing workload that accompanies the end of the semester, the prospect of final exams (which can make or brea our cumulative averages), and the fear Christmas shopping will have to be put off until the 24th this year.

The final exam at the University of Massachusetts, this year will run until 6 p.m. on December 23. For some, this means a lot of last minute shopping and a feeling of missing out on the holiday cheer.

"I have to do everyone's shopping," said Linda Lavoie, a junior fashion marketing major. Lavoie expressed concern for the late final schedule will interfere with her gift-buying for her family.

"It takes the joy out of Christmas," said Annmarie Godin, a junior psychology major. "You get out of school and then the next day is Christmas," she said.

"No one hires workers after Christmas. If we could get home earlier, students might have a better chance of getting and keeping a job," Lavoie said.

Ed Lizotte, a senior exercise science major said, "It's hard to get into the Christmas spirit. You rush to get out of school and get home."

A major concern of students is the lack of time they have to buy gifts for family and friends. Many students find they have little time to shop during finals period.

"I don't know what I'm going to get anyone, I can't get anywhere, I can't even think about it until the 24th," said Mary Ellen Ingham, a computer science major.

Matthew D. Freedman, a freshman pre-med major said he doesn't like the idea of taking finals so close to the end off the year. Freedman added Hanukkah falls during the last week of classes, running from December 11-18.

"For the first time I won't be home with my parents for Hanukkah," he said.

Freedman said he thinks the semester should end before the holidays so everyone can go home for them.

Hot holiday 'down under' nothing new

By TRICIA YACOVONE
Collegian Correspondent

If someone says "Christmas," the images entering a native New Englander's mind would probably be of snow, warm fireplaces shared with warm people, warm coats and hats, professional football games and frosty mornings. But mention Christmas to an Australian, and the picture is painted very differently. More likely, an Aussie would describe Christmas as sweltering hot, and a struggle to find an unused piece of shade, shorts and thongs, and muggy mornings.

Christmas falls in the middle of the Australian summer. Consequently, that holiday is celebrated very differently compared to the New Englander's celebration. On Christmas morning, an Australian wakes up (usually from a warm night's sleep), takes a shower to cool off a bit, dresses in casual but cool clothes and greets the family who is anxiously awaiting the opening of presents left by Father Christmas under the Christmas tree. Since it's summer, the gift-laden sleigh is pulled by six snow-white boomers (kangaroos) across the "blazing sun."

There are still some die-hard traditionalists in the country who celebrate Christmas in the "Old World" way, but most Australians are very practical and celebrate the holiday in true Aussie fashion. Traditionalists will cook the Christmas feast, complete with roast meat, plum pudding and vegetables, and heating up the already hot house even further. But most Aussies will feast on salads of many varieties and eat cold chicken or ham cooked during the relatively cool night before. The beverages will be soft drinks or the infamous Australian brew, and everyone will have some tea, of course.

This feast, which most fortunate families will have, will sometimes be eaten outside if the heat in the house is too much. But then the numerous flies can feast too, so it's up to personal discretion.

Stay on course with the long gown with sailor collar. Available in an exclusive Lanz of Salzburg signature print in royal blue and pink. sizes XS, S, M, and L. $28.

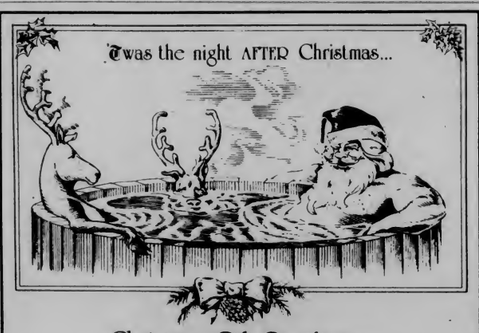
CIMA

CONTEMPORARY SPORTSWEAR
211 Main St.
Northampton
584-0550

CHINESE KITCHEN
興旺樓
FAST FOOD RESTAURANT
Luncheon Specials $1.19 Every Day
Pu Pu Platter $10.00
Take Out Orders
150 King St.
Northampton, Mass.
Please call (413) 586-8220 586-8221
OPEN HOURS
SUNDAY, 12 NOON to 10:00 P.M.
MON thru THURS., 11:30 A.M. to 10:00 P.M.
FRI. & SAT., 11:30 A.M. to 12:00 MIDNITE
HOLIDAYS 12 NOON to 10:00 P.M.

Collegian

Edited by Cris Schuster
Layout by Ed Levine
Cover art by Steve Anderson
Written by Roger Atwood, Kevin Bowe, John Brobst, Dave Chevan, Jim Finkle, Jim Floyd, Andy Gordon, Hannah Hosom, Doug Muise, Lisa Pedulla, Cris Schuster, Tricia Yaccavone
Graphics by Brian Sullivan
Photography by David May, Tom Kudla and Katie Watters
Production by Laura Shanahan and Marianne Walsh, typesetting; Stuart Sadjak, paste-up and production camera
Advertising staff: Craig Robbins, manager; Jeff Hirschberg and Jeff Taylor, associate managers; Joleen Benedict, Jay Brightman, Joel Cantor, Gary Cohen, Chris Lonergan, Caren Orlick, Steve Roberge, Stacy Schott, Sandra Stambovsky
Advertising Production: Faye Whitney-Lussier, Terri Cooper, Adrianne Dufour, Lynn Eisenberg, Lauri Frank, Marge Hochman, Joy McCarthy, Sheryl Silver, Scott Stockwell, Gail Tanzer



Christmas Gift Certificates
One Size Fits All!

EAST HEAVEN TUB Co
Private Hot Tub Rooms
33 West St. Northampton
586-6843

Christmas Special INSIDE

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian

Volume CXII, Issue 65 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Friday, December 10, 1982

Collegian photo by Jim Powers

University of Massachusetts students Bridget Beikes and Mark Connelly read the fine print before feeding change to a parking meter yesterday afternoon across the street from Haigis Mall.

Strict collection set for unpaid parking tickets

By MARK J. WELCH
Collegian Staff

Motorists with unpaid parking tickets face stiffer penalties following approval Wednesday of new parking regulations by the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees.

Cars with five or more tickets may be towed and impounded until all tickets are paid, according to the new regulations. Scofflaws will also face a $5 surcharge on tickets paid late and additional penalties by the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

One proposed penalty, the "Denver Boot," was rejected by the Trustees. No other changes were made to the proposal, which will take effect immediately.

Another change in the regulations will permit an outside company, Computer Emporium of Newburyport, to collect fines for the University, according to Lawrence Holmes of the Department of Public Safety.

Gerald O'Neil, director of the department, said the changes will offer an additional appeals process whereby students may request a hearing before a parking clerk. Appeals may also be directed to a University appeals board.

Cars with more than five tickets may be towed under the new regulations and impounded until all tickets are paid, O'Neil said. Before this action is taken, however, O'Neil said "ample notice" would be provided, including warning letters to violators.

"We're not going to be out there doing that (towing) right away," O'Neil said, promising an effort would be made to educate people about the new regulations and to warn those with unpaid tickets by mail.

Holmes noted the changes in the regulations are a result of a change in state law, by which parking tickets are now handled by towns and cities, rather than by the court system, which Homes said was "over-burdened." Municipalities will be permitted to keep all ticket revenue.

Financial aid hike proposals stalled in Legislature

By KEVIN BOWE
Collegian Staff

Proposals to substantially increase state assistance to students is being stalled in the House of Representatives, however a vote is expected next week on the matter.

One plan, which calls for the use of unclaimed five and 10 cent deposits on bottles and cans required under the soon to be instituted Bottle Law for student aid, has drawn mixed feelings from Bottle Law proponents.

Under the plan, all the unclaimed deposits, an estimated $10 to $25 million, will be used for the state scholarship assistance. The proposal will also delay the implementation of the Bottle Law for soft drink distributors until March 31, 1983. The orginal implementation date of January 17, 1983 will still be in effect for beer distributors.

Douglas Phelps, executive director of the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group, the main lobbying group responsible for the passage of the Bottle Law, said the group supports the new bill designed to partially delay the Bottle Law and then use unclaimed deposits resulting from it for student assistance.

"We opposed the delay until June (as proposed by the beverage industry)....but some of the distributors waited until the results of the voter referendum (which was held in November in an attempt to repeal the bill), and in a sense they were victimized," he said. "To get the consumers' money back to be used for the public interest (student aid), we're in favor of that."

Massachusetts Secretary of Environmental Affairs John Bewick, a strong supporter of the Bottle Bill in the King administration, was reportedly opposed to the use of the unclaimed deposits for public purposes.

"This is a hidden tax on the bottling industry that will be an extra cost on the consumer," he said in an interview with the Boston Globe yesterday.

"It has nothing to do with cleaning up the environment. Instead of being used to reduce costs in the bottling industry, it is being grabbed by the state," Bewick said.

Phelps said there was no reason for the beverage industry to get a "windfall" from unclaimed consumer deposits on the bottles and cans that are not returned.

Board of Trustees approves fee waiver for elderly students

By MARK J. WELCH
Collegian Staff

Students over 60 years old were given an added bonus Wednesday by the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees, which agreed to waive all mandatory fees for those students.

A tuition waiver is already granted to students over 60, and the new fee waiver will "bring it in line with the tuition policy," according to Student Government Association President and student Trustee Jim Murphy.

The change will not affect many students; in the fall of 1981, only seven undergraduates at UMass were over 60. Eighteen graduate students and one Stockbridge student were also over 60.

Associate Director of Admissions Juan Caban said he was unsure what effect the change would have on students over 60 enrolling at UMass.

"I wouldn't think it would mean very much," Caban said, referring to the small number of students affected. "I would hope more would come."

"I would assume maybe there are some more (people over 60) out there who would like to attend UMass," Caban said.

The fee waiver will cancel the cost of all mandatory student fees except the Health Services Fee, which will be made optional for students over 60. The waiver will cover such fees as the Athletic, Fine Arts, Campus Center and Student Activities Fees.

Continuing Education students will not be affected by the waiver, however, and will still have to pay all fees related to their courses.

Murphy said he favored the waiver since older students have made a contribution to the state and deserve a lower-cost education.

Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

University of Massachusetts gymnast Joe DeMarco is framed by a set of rings and heads of spectators as he performs Wednesday on the parallel bars.

World and national news

FBI sees limited Soviet role in nuclear freeze movement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI testified last summer that Soviet-front groups were "actively involved" in planning the June 12 nuclear freeze march in New York, but did not find evidence of significant Soviet influence.

The classified FBI testimony released yesterday by the House Intelligence Committee, appeared to lend some support to President Reagan's claim last month of Soviet involvement "in the organization of some of the big demonstrations."

But in a statement accompanying release of the testimony, Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Springfield, intelligence committee chairman, said the FBI provided "no evidence that the Soviets direct, manage or manipulate the nuclear freeze movement."

Boland added: "On the basis of my own review of the material submitted by the FBI, it is my personal assessment that Soviet agents have had no significant influence on the nuclear freeze movement."

The FBI testimony, given to the committee July 14, has been cited by the White House as support for the president's contention that "foreign agents...were sent to help instigate and help create and keep such a movement going."

In testimony to the committee, Edward O'Malley, FBI assistant director for intelligence, did not say Soviet agents were dispatched, but said the U.S. Communist Party, the U.S. Peace Council and the World Peace Council, which he called Soviet front groups, "were actively involved in the planning and implementation of the June 12 demonstration.

"There were some 500,000 people who participated in that demonstration. I would not attribute the large turnout at this demonstration to efforts of those groups. However, there was significant involvement by all these people concerned."

The committee also released testimony given July 13 by CIA deputy director John McMahon, who said "the Soviets are trying to capitalize on the peace movement that is both here in the United States as well as overseas in Europe."

McMahon estimated the cost of such a campaign if conducted by the United States at $100 million.

And in a report attached to the hearing record, the FBI asserted that "some KGB officers are also directly involved in efforts to influence the U.S. peace movement."

Neither the FBI nor the CIA, however, concluded that the Soviets had attained any significant influence in the peace movement.

AP Laserphoto

Two grief stricken teenage girls attend the funeral of 17-year-old Alan Callaghan yesterday in Belfast, Northern Ireland. Callaghan was one of 16 persons killed when a terrorist bomb exploded in the Droppinwell Bar in Ballykelly Monday night.

Senate Republicans hear Reagan on need for MX

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan took his fight for the MX missiles directly to the Senate Republicans yesterday night and told them that its defeat would send "the wrong message at the wrong time to the new Soviet leadership."

"If we expect the Soviets to take our arms control proposals seriously, we must act seriously with the choices we make," Reagan said.

He made his remarks in a speech prepared for delivery at a dinner for Republican senators at the Library of Congress in what appeared to be the opening gun in a campaign for public support in the fight to get production funds for the missile restored by the Senate.

Earlier, Reagan said the Joint Chiefs of Staff agreed to support his decision for basing the new nuclear-tipped MX missile in a "dense pack," even though three of the five chiefs opposed the plan.

Both White House spokesman Larry Speakes and Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto, said they did not think the disclosure that a majority of joint chiefs had counseled against "dense pack" would serve to thwart eventual approval in Congress.

Speakes, saying the administration would work to block any amendment to the MX plans in the Senate, said the Joint Chiefs "were unanimous in their recognition of the need and in their support for the missile." And he pointed out that the Senate vote, expected soon, would deal with whether to build the missile, and was not on the basing plan.

He indicated that the president was likely to make a public appeal for the MX in his weekly radio address to the nation tomorrow.

In the afternoon, Reagan called a reporter to volunteer that he would consider other basing proposals. Some 30 proposals have been examined and discarded over the years.

Earlier in the week, the House rejected nearly $1 billion sought by Reagan for production of the first five of an eventual 100 MX missiles.

Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski dies

WIMBERLY, Texas — Leon Jaworski, the Texas lawyer who as Watergate special prosecutor helped force the resignation of former President Richard M. Nixon, died yesterday at his ranch.

Jaworski, 77, had a heart attack while cutting wood at his Circle J Ranch, according to Ellen Henderson, dispatcher at Hays County Sheriff's Department in San Marcos.

Jaworski's body was taken to the Pennington Funeral Home in San Marcos after he was pronounced dead by the Justice of the Peace Sonny Gold, she said. The body later was transferred to Geo. H. Lewis and Sons funeral home in Houston, Ms. Henderson said.

Gold said Jaworski was working with ranch foreman John Clayton about two miles from Jaworski's ranch house when he collapsed.

Jaworski had not returned to the courtroom since 1974, when he successfully argued before the U.S. Supreme Court that the White House had to release tape recordings, which linked Nixon to the Watergate scandal.

"You just don't argue another case after you've argued 'the United States versus Nixon' before the Supreme Court," he said.

Jaworski considered his successful battle for the Nixon tapes the apex of his legal career.

Compromise bill set forth for state death penalty

BOSTON — A proposed compromise bill that a critic says would give Massachusetts "the most extensive death penalty in the country" was put before a legislative committee yesterday.

Rep. Michael Flaherty, DBoston, presented the draft to the six-member conference committee that is charged with ironing out differences between death penalty bills approved by the House and Senate. The committee adjourned to meet Monday morning to discuss the draft.

"This would give Massachusetts the most extensive death penalty in the country," said Max Stern, an attorney and leading opponent, after the brief meeting.

Stern charged that the draft "makes just about every murder committed in the course of a felony punishable by death. That would make 85 percent of all homicide prosecutions eligible for the death sentence."

Digest

By the Associated Press

Coalition files petition to revoke pay raises

BOSTON — Making good on threats, Citizens for Limited Taxation and three maverick legislators petitioned yesterday for a ballot referendum that would repeal pay raises for legislators, judges and constitutional officers.

Reps. Bruce Wetherbee, D-Pepperrell, Andy Card, R-Holbrook, and Royall Switzler, R-Wellesley, joined the tax group in filing the petition with the secretary of state.

During debate on the pay package, critics charged that the legislative raises were tied to judicial raises in a tactic intended to exempt the raises from referendum review. Under the state constitution, judicial compensation cannot be the subject of an initiative petition.

The last pay raises for legislators were repealed by voters.

The legislative salaries, effective in January, range from $30,000 for rank-and-file legislators up to $65,000 for top leaders.

Victim may have taken cyanide tainted Anacin

SAN JOSE, Calif. — A woman hospitalized for what appeared to be a stroke may have been poisoned by a capsule of Anacin-3 that had been laced with cyanide, state officials said yesterday.

Sue Bowen, 30, stopped breathing Nov. 26 and foamed at the mouth after taking a capsule from an Anacin-3 bottle her husband had purchased a day or two before.

Doctors diagnosed a stroke, according to a police report, but Richard Bowen, 29, took the capsules to his doctor, who passed them on to the state Department Of Health for analysis.

On Wednesday, the state reported that at least one of the capsules remaining in the bottle, and possibly two others, had been laced with cyanide.

The San Jose News said the woman had been poisoned by cyanide, but authorities said they were not certain of this.

The capsules came from lot No. F229.

Artificial heart recipient faring well in struggle

SALT LAKE CITY — Mechanical heart recipient Barney Clark received a telegram from President Reagan yesterday, and gave his doctors further evidence of recovery by complaining about the way nurses brushed his teeth.

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, said in the telegram that the 61-year-old retired dentist had given everyone "a great lesson in faith" in the week since he became the first person to receive a permanent plastic heart.

And doctors continued to praise the Jarvik-7 heart as a valuable tool in Clark's recovery from the surgery and from post-operative complications.

"Dr. Clark's recovery from major surgery appears to have been helped by the presence of an artificial heart, which could be adjusted to facilitate his recovery in ways not available to a regular patient," said Dr. Chase Peterson, University of Utah vice president for health sciences.

Peterson said Clark had shown steady improvement since Wednesday while slowly recovering consciousness from seizures which wracked him Tuesday morning, sending him back on the critical list.

Both the seizures and sedatives used to suppress them have kept Clark in, an unconscious and semi-conscious state, he said.

Clark was responding well yesterday to changes in his diet and other efforts to correct the chemical imbalance doctors believe brought on the seizures, Peterson said.

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Paul A. Basken
Copy Editor — Bill Wall
Layout Technician — Brad Eden
Photo Technician — Jim Powers
Composition — Laura Shanahan, Sue Hawkins
Andrea Repass, Donna Maurice, Donna Estabrooks
Alice Klingener, Marge Hochman, Scott Stockwell
Sheryl Silver, Adrianne Dufour, Lynn Eisenberg
Terri Cooper, Gail Tanzer, Laurie Frank

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $18 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

Collegian photo by Drew Ogier.

A beagle left in downtown Amherst squeezes his head out of the car window to play watchdog in his owner's absence.

Local arts groups feel pinch from national budgetary cuts

By PAM MADNICK
Collegian Staff

In his recent budget recommendations to Congress, President Ronald Reagan has sacrificed drama for defense, and local theater groups have felt the pinch.

In the recommendations, Reagan proposed a 30 percent cut for the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA), a 26 percent cut for the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the elimination of the Institute of Museum Services. Congress adopted the recommendations in its first budget resolution.

"Advocates from all sectors of the arts community share the view that further reductions...transmit the message that the arts and humanities are no longer national priorities; that (cuts) will surely be replicated at the state and local levels, that this will discourage rather than stimulate private sector support," said Fraser Barron, author of the Government and the Arts bulletin.

Local theaters, such as Present Stage of Northampton, are angry about the cuts. Present Stage had been receiving $70,000 annually from the Expansion Arts Program of the NEA to perform plays during the summer. The Expansion Arts Program was eliminated before time came to apply for the 1981 year.

Today, Present Stage performs three shows annually, has five full-time members, several part-timers, and operates on a budget of $20,000 from an NEA grant.

"What it does is make us spend more time looking for funding and less time doing theater. It restricts the kind of shows we can do. We must do shows that sell. It makes us suffer morally and makes us angry," said Steve Wangh, director of Present Stage.

"I guess I'm not as angry about losing the money as I am about the way they (the federal government) are using it to plan death," he said.

Another area theatre is also facing serious problems. The Abia Theatre of Amherst lost its $5,000 NEA grant when the Expansion Arts Program was eliminated.

Director Marilyn Tobin said the theatre had counted on the NEA to match or raise the annual $5,000. When the Expansion Arts Program was cut, there were no new guarantees to other federally funded programs.

"We do massive kinds of productions on a shoe-string budget. This cutback eliminated our work completely," Tobin said. Last summer the Abia Theatre was planning to present Brave New World, but the production was never held.

"Everyone's doing old popular theatre instead of new experimental work — what this area used to be known for. We've all turned into museums," Tobin said.

Although the Chrysalis Theater of Northampton was not affected by the federal cuts, Director James Emery said the cutbacks in general have made a difference in the number of people appealing for aid to the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, the artist foundations, and grants from private corporations.

Interviews being held for new vice-chancellorship

By JIM FINKLE
Collegian Staff

The fourth candidate for the position of vice chancellor for University Relations and Development visited the University of Massachusetts this week for screening interviews.

David S. Liederman, director of government relations of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York was on campus two days, during which he toured the campus and was interviewed by individuals in areas to be directed by the newly created vice chancellor position.

Three other candidates visited the campus for similar screening: Jose Barron, executive director of El Congreso Nacional de Asuntos Colegiates (an organization that serves Spanish speaking students and faculty at colleges and universities); Harold Jackson, vice president for public relations at Tennessee State University; and James M. Shea, vice president for University Relations at Temple University.

Liederman and the other candidates participated in interviews with several different groups, said Harry T. Allen, chairman of the search committee and dean of the School of Business Administration.

The candidates met with UMass Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey; department heads from public relations, community relations, development and alumni relations; vice chancellors and deans; members of the UMass research community; and representatives from the Student Government Association, the Faculty Senate, and employee unions.

According to Allen, each person who participates in one of the group interviews is asked to fill out an evaluation form on the candidate.

One member of the nine member search committee was present at all of the group meetings. In addition, the search committee meets with the candidate for a dinner meeting.

The final candidate will visit campus next Thursday and Friday. Allan declined to release the name of that candidate until he or she visits campus next week.

After the final candidate visits the campus, the members of the search committee will review all the candidates and present the Chancellor with their final recommendations, from which he will select the vice chancellor.

Allan said the committee will complete its review by the end of this month.

"We hope to be out of business by Christmas," Allen said.

Board of Governors say no to Blue Wall, Administration over satellite dish equipment

By DAVID SUMMERSBY
Collegian Staff

The Campus Center Board of Governors (BOG) last night voted to recommend to the Campus Center Administration that Satellite Dish reception equipment for the building not be purchased.

The administration this semester has been considering the idea of buying satellite equipment for $6,000 in order to receive cable stations airing movies and sports events. The equipment would be used to save money on entertainment in the Blue Wall and act as a further attraction for customers staying in the Campus Center Hotel.

Gerry Quill, building operations coordinator on the BOG, said he has extensively reviewed the systems and found the disadvantages of the system outweighed the advantages. He said the biggest problem is the fact that the Blue Wall would not be able to advertise any of the programs to be shown.

"If there is no advertising for the showing of an event on a Tuesday or Wednesday evening, then it is likely that even fewer customers will patronize the bar than already do on these nights," he said.

He also said the Blue Wall would not be able to receive Boston Celtics and Red Sox games on Channel 38, which was one of the main reasons why the Blue Wall initially wanted to purchase the system.

"I recommend that we hold off on this proposal because technology is getting better and better, and in a few years, we could probably buy the same system for only two or three hundred dollars," Quill said. "I don't think this is the answer for some of the problems of the Blue Wall."

The BOG also voted to approve the revised Vendor Table Policy and Procedures to go into effect Feb. 1, 1983.

Ron Keefe, BOG chairman, said there are only two major changes in the revised policy to be in effect for the spring semester. He said the first change is designed to give the vendor review committee some leeway in making decisions regarding recertification of people who have lost their licenses due to past infraction.

Keefe said the board had problems with regards to recertification in the past and this will give the BOG more "flexibility" in that area.

Collegian photo by Tom Kudla

Bus stops such as the one at the Morrill Science Center begin to see use again as students huddle in them to protect themselves from yesterday's bitter cold.

BLUE WALL
CAMPUS CENTER AT UMASS
FRI. 10th "KASPAR HAUSER" ROCK WITH
with special guests
"DANGEROUS BIRDS"
(All Women Band from Boston)
"MOVING TARGETS"
(formerly THE CRANK)
HAPPY HOUR 3-6 p.m. w/ Cliff Myers
SAT. OPEN 12 NOON
Double Header FOOTBALL
Drink Specials HAPPY HOUR
MONTY PYTHON'S LIFE OF BRIAN FREE
Shown at 8 & 10 pm

Join the 1983 Summer Staff
CAMP RAMAH
in New England
OUTSTANDING CAMPING IN A TRADITIONAL JEWISH ENVIRONMENT
COUNSELORS AND JUNIOR COUNSELORS
JUDAIC AND HEBREW TEACHERS
CAMPING ACTIVITY SPECIALISTS
WATERFRONT STAFF
MAINTENANCE STAFF
SUPERVISORS AND OFFICE STAFF
CONTACT: DEBRA HIRSHMAN GREEN, DIRECTOR
CAMP RAMAH IN NEW ENGLAND
1330 BEACON STREET, ROOM 314
BROOKLINE, MASS. 02146
617-232-7400

TIME OUT
Two TV's
COME AND JOIN THE CROWD
Free Popcorn
Amherst's Biggest Little Bar
37 N. Pleasant Street

IS THE IDEA OF WEARING A UNIFORM KEEPING YOU OUT OF ARMY ROTC?

Whether you realize it or not, you're probably wearing a type of "uniform" right now.
There's nothing wrong with it. But an Army ROTC uniform could make you stand out from the crowd.
And ROTC will help you become more outstanding. Because you'll develop into a leader of people and a manager of money and equipment.
So how about switching "uniforms" for a few hours each week?
For more information, contact your Professor of Military Science.
Contact James C. Mahoney 545-2321/2322
ARMY ROTC. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

1982
MAKE YOUR MARK. Make it hard to erase.
Come to the 1982 Christmas Conference. For more information write or call
Glenn S. Carter
167 E. Hadley Rd.
Amherst, Mass 01002
phone 256-0680
Sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ International

PIZZARAMA
call 253-3808 or 256-0115
- Pizzas -
Small, Medium, Large
Grinders - Small, Large
Stuffed Sgells, Manicotti
Eggplant Cutlets
Now we have STEAK!
356 College St.
Amherst, MA 01002

The rusty nail pub presents
Fri. Dec. 10 Shaboo Allstars (blues)
Sat. Dec. 11 N R B Q
Rt. 47, Sunderland, MA 665-4937
You must be 18 to enter.

Photo by Malcolm Laws
Memorial Hall and the Tower Library are each reflected in windows on separate stories of Herter Hall.

Holiday season is a period of shoplifting along with revelry

By RITA MURPHY
Collegian Staff

The holiday season is by tradition a time of giving and receiving. It is also a time of shoplifting, the taking away of property belonging to someone else.

Shoplifting is a criminal offense, larceny, in the eyes of the law, said Donald N. Maia, Amherst chief of police.

A new law passed last year now enables stores to prosecute alleged shoplifters, Maia said.

Because of the new law, he said courts are now able to fine first offenders up to $250, second offenders up to $500, and third offenders can now be sent to jail for not more than two years.

It has become the policy of many stores recently to prosecute shoplifters in an attempt to deter others who might be contemplating shoplifting, said Winthrop L. Cummings, manager of the University Store in the Campus Center.

Student shoplifters are "playing Russian Roulette with education. It is a very serious crime which students must become aware of," he said.

The University Store loses approximately $90,000 a year on "shrinkage," Cummings said. Not all of that money is lost because of shoplifting but a good percentage is, he said.

The store employes 12 security officers to monitor the premises. In an average week, the officers catch about ten shoplifters, he said.

"It makes very little sense. Students spend all that money of their own or their parents to go to college to get a good job when they graduate and then they blow it all because of one childish mistake," he said.

"We see it (shoplifting) as a problem. We are constantly on guard for. It demands ever constant vigilance," said John Coull, manager of the Valley Bike Shop in Amherst.

Because his store is so small, Coull said he does not lose as much as larger stores. But, he said, because it is such a small store, they cannot afford any losses.

Coull said merchants are starting to be very aggressive in their handling of shoplifters.

"Merchants don't want to be burnt. Shoplifters are taking a great risk — they should be willing to pay the consequences," he said.

Dick Vincent, store manager of Louis Foods in Amherst, said shoplifting does not only affect store's profits, but it also affects consumers who have to pay higher prices because of the loss incurred by stores.

"In the end," he said, "regardless of whether it is in a food store or a clothing store, people do pay for shoplifting.

Retailers see new law facilitating the arrest of suspected shoplifters

BOSTON (AP) — Bay State retailers say they're having better success during this year's holiday season in combatting the fastest growing felony crime in Massachusetts — shoplifting.

The Retailers Association of Massachusetts traditionally launches an anti-shoplifting campaign during early December in hopes of preventing the annual loss of an estimated $500 million in goods during the holiday season.

This year, a new state law that makes it easier to arrest suspected shoplifters has worked better than the usual television and radio pleas, said association Vice President William Phipps.

"This is the first year with the new law in effect, and it seems to be working reasonably well," he said.

Phipps and Ned Merrick, spokesman for the Massachusetts Police Association, said the number of arrests for shoplifting has "gone up remarkably," although they had no specific numbers of the people arrested.

The statute, which became effective last March, changes a Massachusetts law that lumped the crime of shoplifting into a statute that dealt with all forms of property theft. Under the old law, police generally treated the crime as a misdemeanor, which is not arrestible unless the police officer witnesses it.

The new law defines shoplifting to include the taking or concealing of merchandise, ticket switching or under-ringing by a crony at a cash register. First offenders may be punished by a fine up to $250, second offenders $500 and third offenders $500 and a possible two years in jail.

It also enables a police officer to arrest a shoplifter on the spot without a warrant, with the statement of the merchant establishing probable cause.

Shoplifting has shown the greatest increase in the last several years when compared to all other types of larceny, according to the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Center.

ATTENTION
Collegian
Classified and Display Advertisers
Final Deadline for Semester
MONDAY, DEC. 13th, 3:45 pm no exceptions
Collegian
last day of publication Wed. Dec. 15

BLUE WALL
TODAY 3-6pm.
PRE-FINALS BLOWOUT!
with THE FABULOUS CLIFF MYERS
FINAL 1982 PERFORMANCE

FREE
OFF CAMPUS DELIVERY
$15.00 Minimum
TELEPHONE 253-3091
Budweiser ..... $4.99/12 pk
Hof-Brau $5.99/case
Cartier Blanc de Blancs
..... $2.49/750 ml $21.95/case
Vodka ..... $8.99/1.75 l
Canadian Mist ..... $7.85/1 L
Becks ..... $3.89/6 pk
Happy Holidays from
C & C
PACKAGE STORE
61 MAIN STREET
"Across the street from Plumbleys"
special in store cash only

AFTER DECEMBER 17,
THIS MAY BE THE ONLY WAY YOU CAN SEE THE WHO.

CAMPUS ENTERTAINMENT NETWORK PRESENTS THE WHO: THE FINAL CONCERT.
BROUGHT TO YOU BY SCHLITZ–"THE TASTE THAT ROCKS AMERICA."

Schlitz Beer brought The WHO to 32 cities this year. And now, Campus Entertainment Network, with the support of Schlitz, brings you The WHO, live, December 17 for what may be the last time.

Schlitz

CEN Colleges enjoy many unique entertainment events like The WHO presented live via satellite. You can share in this historic event with millions of WHO fans at CEN campuses and large screen concert video centers everywhere.

A LIVE CEN SATELLITE PRESENTATION

FOR MORE INFORMATION CONTACT YOUR STUDENT ACTIVITIES BOARD OR YOUR LOCAL ROCK RADIO STATION.

Collegian photo by Drew Ogier

Santa Claus waves at passersby from the frost-framed window of the Jones-Neylon Insurance Co. in downtown Amherst.

Magazine strives to promote the UMass image

By SUSAN MAIORCA
Collegian Correspondent

Contact magazine at the University of Massachusetts is based on the premise that students' parents should receive more than just a bill from the school.

Contact is a public relations magazine published six times a year and sent to the homes of undergraduates, to high school guidance counselors, and to legislators and trustees throughout the state, said Terry Allen, the magazine's editor.

Allen said the magazine was founded by former Chancellor Randolph Bromery in 1975 as a public information vehicle to improve the University's image.

"We needed to communicate more about the University's positive spirit," Allen said.

Allen said she works with one or two writers in putting together a "very successful publication" made up of "all the news that fits."

"We receive positive feedback from parents and faculty," Allen said, "and Contact has won a number of awards from professional associations."

The staff includes full-time writer Ken Gerwertz, who recently won the O. Henry Award for a short story published in 1981 in the Massachusetts Review, and part-time writer Mary Young, a columnist for the Valley Advocate.

Allen said she has "been very fortunate with all her writers."

The staff works to cover all the departments, schools and divisions at UMass, Allen said. Stories include subjects concerning student and staff activities and academic areas, she said.

Allen said stories are thought up by the staff rather than assigned by her for the most part.

"It's a joint effort enhanced by all staff members' individual ideas," she said.

The magazine's layout and typesetting are both done on campus, utilizing University Photo Center photographers and design areas.

"Writers work very closely with photographers," Gerwertz said. "They try to get away from the typical office shots."

Originally, Contact was a 16 page issue published 10 times a year. However, Gerwertz said because of federal cutbacks in funds, the magazine is now 20 pages published six times a year.

"It would be nice if we went back to 10 issues a year," he said.

Student approaches a marriage proposal in a different way

By PAUL BELVAL
Collegian Staff

Tom Burke proved there are still knights on white stallions out in the world.

When Burke, a senior math major at the University of Massachusetts, decided to propose to his girlfriend, he wanted it to be unusual. He rented a horse and a white tuxedo and swept his girlfriend off her feet.

On Nov. 20, Burke was visiting his girlfriend, Lynn Stasiowski, a junior University of Connecticut physical therapy major, at her parents' home in Glastonbury, Conn. At about 10:30 a.m., Burke put on his sweatsuit and told Stasiowski he was going running.

However, he had different intentions.

"I went over to a neighbor's house who I was in cahoots with," he said. "I had a white tuxedo and two long stem roses, and I had a white horse trucked upom Coventry."

"I rode up to the front of the house and hitched the horse up to the front railing. I almost tore the whole thing down," he continued. "I tried to get in the house, but the front door was locked."

So Burke rang the door bell, and when Stasiowski's father answered, he bolted past the shocked man into the kitchen where Mrs. Stasiowski was.

"I screamed for his wife, Jean. She popped into the kitchen where I was," he said. "I kissed her on the cheek and gave her a red rose while she was screaming. Lynn was right behind her; she looked white as a ghost.

"I gave her the other rose, picked her up, strode out of the house, and put her on the horse."

Burke took his girlfriend and the horse to a nearby mountain where he planned to propose marriage to her.

"We went flying by a neighbor who was mowing his lawn," he said. "When he saw us, he mowed into a bush."

When they got to the mountain, Burke had some problems keeping up the fairy tale appearance of the adventure, but the important part went according to plans.

"I tried to have a firm voice," Burke said, " but it was a little shaky, and I said, 'Lynn, will you marry me?' She jumped off the horse into my arms and said, 'Yes.' "

Burke said his future wife deserved the unusual proposal.

"I just wanted to do it with some style and be sure I would remember it," he said. "I wanted to do it in a special way because she's a special person."

The wedding is planned for the spring of 1985, because Burke said he hopes to start medical school in the fall of 1984, and Stasiowski will be graduating in the spring of 1984.

Christmas Sale

$89.99
Reg. $99.99

Expanded 16K module available

PRICE BREAK!!

TIMEX sinclair 1000
HOME COMPUTOR

Software cassettes also available

Open
M-F
9-5
Sat 11-4

Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE

whole wheat
PIZZA FACTORY

"WEEK-END SPECIAL"
FRIDAY–SUNDAY:

Noon- 5:00pm
A SMALL(12") PIZZA
WITH ANY TWO TOPPINGS
FROM OUR WIDE MENU
FOR JUST $3.75

FROM 7:00pm–3:00am
GET ANY SIZE PIZZA
WITH ALL TOPPINGS
AT ONLY 35¢ EACH

OFFER ENDS DECEMBER 23rd
THE WHOLE WHEAT PIZZA FACTORY

363 MAIN ST. AMHERST

256-8587

COLLEGE BOWL
The Varsity Sport of the Mind

Tournament on Sunday
Dec. 12, 1982 in CC 917
12 noon to 6 PM
No Experience Necessary
Come to Play or to watch

COLLEGE BOWL

ACUI

Table Soccer Tournament
Games Room
Sat. Feb. 5, 1983

Video Games Tournament
Games Room
Wed. Feb. 2, 1983

SEE GAMES ROOM FOR FURTHER DETAILS

Winners of ACUI and College Bowl Tournaments represent UMass
at Regional Competition

Doonesbury
Brought to you everyday
by Garry Trudeau
and the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

HEY - SECRET
SANTAS

High Notes

For $1.50
a colorful helium balloon
with card
can be delivered
and left secretly.
Additional Balloons Just 50¢

Call 1 day ahead 665-7664

11th ANNUAL BUSH BASH

UMASS SKI CLUB
SUGARBUSH VALLEY
VERMONT
SKI & PARTY WEEK
JAN 23-28
THIS TRIP INCLUDES:
- Lift Ticket (5½ days)
- Lodging (Hotel or Condo)
- Meals (with Hotel)
- Free Beer & Wine Parties
- Hot Tub & Sauna Party
- Etc. Etc. Etc.

only $189.00

tax and gratuities included
beware of other ski trips that set a base price and THEN ADD 5% tax & 15% gratuities

Non-Members Welcome

Deposit & Final Payment
Deadlines have been extended.

So get your deposits in now to reserve your vacation for WINTER BREAK

sign-up table
M-F Ski Club Office 9-3
430A Student Union
for more info call 545-2437

LAGNAF 83

DELANO'S

DECEMBER
Happy Hour Special
Heineken Bottles
2 for 1
plus our original
twofers and hors d'oevres
7 days 7 nights
4-6 pm 10 - midnight
Proper ID a MUST
57 N. Pleasant St.
253-5141

GOING TO BE ON CAMPUS IN JANUARY?
WHERE ARE YOU GOING TO EAT?

- Worcester Dining Commons will be open Lunch and Dinner - Monday - Friday
- Choose any of the five meal plans and SAVE! 20-25-30-35-40
From $70.00 To $130.00
- SIGN UP: DEC. 1-20.
MEAL TICKET OFFICE - FRANKLIN COMMONS

Offering soup, sandwich, casserole, self-service salad bar, and homemade desserts for lunch. Dinner two entrees, self-service salad bar, some vegetarian selections homemade breads and desserts. All this and more for less than you would pay anywhere in the campus area.

WHY NOT TRY IT OUT!

Alternative to an Intersession Board Plan
Pay Cash or Buy Strip Tickets

Prospects for a career in the teaching profession are better than expected

By KATHE CONRAD
Collegian Correspondent

The profession of teaching is no longer overloaded, according to education professors and students at the University of Massachusetts, and may now possibly be facing future shortages.

"Students don't realize it, but there are teaching jobs," said Linda Cleary, student teacher supervisor for the Academic Disciplines Program. "Consequently, they are missing out on a deeply rewarding career."

Verne Thelen, director for the Academic Disciplines Program, encouraged students to explore teaching careers by talking with people involved in the field. He pointed out that educational experts are predicting that existing teacher shortage problems will grow in most subject fields as the children of the post-World War II baby boom begin to enroll in schools in the mid-1980s. Currently, there is a critical shortage of math and science teachers nationwide, and in some parts of the Southwest, there is a shortage of English teachers.

Fewer college students have been enrolling in teacher education programs and many colleges have discontinued certification programs, Thelen said. Due to layoffs in Massachusetts as part of the fallout from Proposition 2½, as well as new teacher certification standards, enrollment in the Academic Disciplines Program is down from 55 students last year to 15 students this year, he said.

Floyd Martin, University Placement Officer, agreed with Thelen's assessment of the job market, saying "There are jobs out there for secondary school teachers, if you are willing to go where the jobs are."

He suggested students interested in teaching take a look at the most recent copy of "A Job Search Handbook for Educators" in the Placement Office, which lists teaching shortage areas by field and by region.

Todd Di Geronimo, one of five Academic Disciplines students completing their teaching practicums this semester, said he suspects he may have to relocate to another area like the Southwest to find a teaching job after obtaining his Masters degree, but feels the move will be worth being able to teach.

"There's a certain amount of independence and responsibility in being a teacher which you don't find in other jobs," he said. He said he is hopeful that as a teacher he will make a difference in his students' lives.

"I really like teaching," he said.

Karen LeSiege, another student in the Academic Disciplines Program, also said she finds teaching an attractive profession despite difficult salary and classroom conditions.

"There is such a tremendous potential for growth and change in teaching," she explains. "You are doing something different every day."

She said she suspects teaching won't be a boring job and that is its attraction for her.

Students interested in finding out about secondary school teaching careers are invited to attend a reception at 3:30 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 20 in Room 21A of the School of Education.

"The Best Chinese Food"

家酒園南湖
Hunan Garden
Restaurant

MANDARIN SZECHUEN CUISINE

Every Mon - Thurs from 5-8 & Sunday from 11:30 - 3
All You Can Eat for only $5.25 per person

Chicken Fried Noodles
Sweet & Sour Chicken
Pan Fried Rice
Chinese Barbecued Pork
Hot & Sour Soup
Chicken Fingers
Pan Fried Ravioli
Beef with Green Pepper

Sun.-Thurs. 11:30 a.m.-10:00 p.m.
Fri. & Sat. 11:30 a.m.-11:00 p.m.

10 Belchertown Rd., at Route 9, Amherst
256-0251 256-0252

A Christmas Checklist

Plan ahead now so you won't forget anyone

LARGE SELECTION of UMass Imprinted
Childrenswear

Open M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4

Located in the Campus Center

UNIVERSITY STORE

FRIDAY MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE HAPPY HOUR

Mike's Smorgy is back!
"All you can eat for $1.00"
Still the best happy hour in town
three 7 oz Rolling Rocks $1.25
Bar drinks - 95¢
4:00 - 7:00

BOSTON'S LITTLE FLAGS THEATRE

A HIT MUSICAL!
...the people of Detroit confront the Pentagon and it's nuclear arsenal

NEW RISE OF THE MASTER RACE

8 P.M.
HAMPDEN THEATRE
UMASS
SOUTHWEST

DEC 11

Students and Senior Citizens $1.00 General Admission $2.00 Reservations 545-2803
Sponsored by: The UMass Arts Council; SCANN; SWA; OH/Central Arts Council; NE/Sylvan; Hampden Program

December 1982

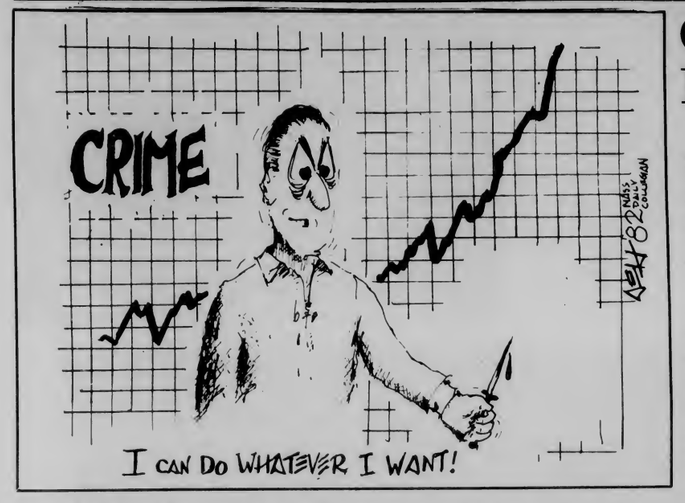
SUN	MONDAY	TUESDAY	WEDNESDAY	THURSDAY	FRIDAY	SAT
			1	2	3	4
5	6	7	8	9	10	11 HANUKKAH
12	13	14	15	16	17	18
19	20	21	22	23	24	25 CHRISTMAS

Give A Gift of Warmth for the Holidays

Special Xmas Hours
Open M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4
Open Wed. 9-9

UNIVERSITY STORE
Located in the Campus Center

EDITORIAL/OPINION



Doublethink leads to nuclear war

Brian Tobey

Concerning the launching of the Navy's latest nuclear-armed submarine, the USS Georgia, Admiral James D. Watkins was quoted as saying "I advocate peace through strength, not because I want to see the nuclear weapons used, but precisely because I do not."

This is the same sort of stuff the Reagan Administration has been dishing out. They say that the U.S. needs a nuclear build-up, since we supposedly don't have enough atomic bombs. Then we can negotiate arms reductions with the Soviets from a position of strength.

O.K., so maybe the U.S. will be able to destroy the world a few more times over after another nuclear increase, so what? So then the Soviet Union will make a drastic increase in their nuclear arsenal and will be able to destroy the world a few more times over. In fact, they've already said that they would make a corresponding increase in their arsenal. And there's no reason to doubt that they would. Ever since the U.S. dropped the bomb, whenever one side has built something bigger or better, the other has followed suit.

The Pentagon seems to ignore the fact that U.S. superiority in cruise missile technology is a temporary advantage: in a few years the Russians will have them too, and the world will have moved one more step toward nuclear holocaust. Senator Henry Jackson of Washington has just said that the MX missile would be safe for only four years.

Do people really believe that a massive increase in nuclear weapons will actually bring about a reduction in nuclear weapons? I think the answer is yes and no.

"Doublethink" means the power of holding two contradictory beliefs in one's mind simultaneously, and accepting both of them. The word doublethink was first used by George Orwell in 1984. In an afterword to 1984, Eric Fromm says it is an illusion to believe that doublethink is used by Communist governments for trying to control people, but that it is used in the West.

Fromm says that we spend a lot of our money and energy in building nuclear weapons while closing our minds to the fact that they might go off and destroy most of our population (and that of the enemy). Jonathan Schell, in The Fate of the Earth, puts it this way: "We have found it much easier to dig our own grave than to think about the fact that we are doing so."

Many believe that the threat of nuclear weapons is needed to prevent nuclear war. Reagan has dubbed the MX as the "Peacekeeper." Even worse, Reagan team members have talked, at times almost casually, of nuclear war as thinkable, limitable, survivable, and winnable. George F. Kennan, formerly with the State Department, calls the government's preoccupation with nuclear war an illness. It's an acute case of doublethink.

Orwell was concerned more with the death of humanity than with the death of human beings. As Fromm says "He (Orwell) is not interested in extinction weapons because, fundamentally, they do not frighten him as much as spiritual ones."

But Orwell surely realized that doublethink could lead to nuclear war.

Brian Tobey is a UMass student

Christmas? Bah, humbug

Mary Beth Hebert

I always find the holiday season somewhat perturbing. People going totally mindless over red and green. Everyone running around with sappy, sweet smiles on their faces. "Hope you have a Merry Christmas," they say with all the sincerity of a blathering idiot. And those are just the benefits.

Take Christmas decorations, for example. O.K., I can deal with real trees, stockings by a real fireplace, and mistletoe. But who wants to deal with that other stuff? Fake snow, a Ronco record filled with the Top Forty Christmas Hits of 1973, and those giant, illuminated figures that people put on their lawns. Who ever came up with the idea of making those pseudo-animated plastic eyesores? Some decadent New Jersey manufacturer, no doubt. God helps those who help themselves, but what does he think about the three neon wisemen?

Know who the real wisemen are this holiday season? They are those rare and hardy individuals who got all their shopping done before Thanksgiving. They sit at home, watching the soaps and basking in the reflected light of their Christmas tree while the rest of us run around like a bunch of Scrubbing Bubbles in a mudwrestler's bathtub. In this situation we are subjected to inflated prices, kicks on the shins from surly little children, and shopping bags that never retain their straps after, "Just one more small package." 'Tis the season to be jolly.

Bullshit. The weather is getting colder. The days are getting shorter. If you don't slip in the mud, you'll slide in the snow. Wow, what a great time this is. You've got eight people to buy presents for and only $1.27 in your pocket. Look at the line of people who want part of that $1.27 Salvation Army Santas. Christmas Seals. Easter Seals The Seal of Approval. Your Secret Santa. Your aunt in Kentucky who is apparently pining by the mailbox waiting for your Christmas card. One soon concludes that the holiday season holds no big breaks for the typical college student.

Think about the food. Here you've been, wasting away at school (despite those extra pounds), and what do you get for dinner? Plum pudding, pumpkin pie, relish trays. What sort of a deal is this? And why hasn't somebody invented a turkey with more than two legs? Mercifully, dinner usually comes after the football game and a lot of folks are too drunk to notice that you always seem to be walking around with a fresh drumstick in hand.

But enough of sounding dismal. There are some good things about Christmas. First of all, almost never is it better to give than to receive. Whoever said that must have been a sore loser. Secondly, it is nice to be able to sleep late in the morning without the guilt of waking up and realizing that you missed your first three classes. There are also old friends to visit, old hang-outs to frequent, and old whiskey to drink. But the best holiday treat of all is just getting away from all the hassles and pressures of Amherst for a while.

Happy holidays. May they be safe and full of wild abandon.

Mary Beth Hebert is a Collegian columnist.

Letters

SAFA co-president denies Attorney General's charges

To the Editor:

I would like to point out two statements made by Randy Chapman, in his letter to the Collegian, which are simply not true. First, he claims that I have admitted to "blatant constitutional violations." The fact is that I have admitted to nothing and have no intention of admitting to any of their alleged charges. Second, Chapman claims that I have been avoiding "numerous attempts to resolve this matter." The fact is that I have made many attempts to see Chapman during his scheduled working hours as a member of that staff can attest. I am on campus everday as well as at home very evening; I am in no way trying to avoid Randy Chapman. If Chapman really wants to contact me he should either open his eyes and look about, or call me at home as he has in the past. I consider myself very accessible.

I have been working with SAFA for three semesters, two semesters as co-president. I defy anyone to question my sincerity. The decision pertaining to the trip was made at a meeting of the group's leadership. At that time we sought the advice of the R.S.O. business agent on how to expend our funds.

I see no basis for a charge of mis-use against me or any other members of SAFA; what I do see is too many people uptight over a possible infraction of a relatively minor rule within a seriously vague constitutional clause.

James Shaw
Students Advocating Financial Assistance

The OP/ED page is now accepting applications for the position of Associate Executive Editor for the Spring '83 semester. Low-pay, long hours but great experience. Applications available at CC 113.

Collegian

Board of Editors

John Brobst Editor-in-Chief
Ed Levine Managing Editor
Stuart Sajdak Production Manager
Joel Myerson Business Manager
Lise Zeiger Executive Editor
Michael Foley News Editor
Cris Schuster Women's Editor
Andrew Gordon Arts Editor
Phillip Jennings Black Affairs Editor
Jim Floyd Sports Editor
Kevin Fachetti Photo Editor

Associate Editors

Paul A. Basken, Ray Beauchemin, Scott Hersey, Diane Kadzis, Michelle Murray, Associate Managing Editors; Laura Shanahan, Associate Production Manager; John F. Hudson, Associate Executive Editor; Paul Belval, Kevin Bowe, Associate News Editors; Amy Jenness, Associate Women's Editor; Gus Martins, Associate Black Affairs Editor; Douglas Muise, Associate Arts Editor; Jim Powers, Associate Photo Editor.

Business Staff

Craig Robbins, Advertising Manager; Jeff Taylor, Jeff Hershberg, Associate Advertising Managers; Steve Savard, Associate Business Manager; Maria Karassik, Finance Manager; Paul Krause, Associate Finance Manager; Brad Hammer, Circulation Manager.

MENS & WOMENS
WOOL CREWNECK SWEATERS
(solid colors)
SALE $16.95
Turtlenecks
100% cotton
2 for $17.00
Saturday Clothes
Hrs: Mon - Fri 9:30 - 9 PM
Sat 9:30 - 6 Sun 12- 5
Gift Certificates Available
(behind Silverscape) 266 N. Pleasant St., Amherst

High People in High Places
UMASS SKI CLUB
Sugarbush & Aspen
Mandatory Meeting
Tues. Dec. 14 Hasbrouck Rm 20
7:00 PM
For more info 5-3437

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays, Saturdays 1-4

You are the eyes and ears of the Collegian. If you see a story, tell us about it.

adventura travel
549-1256

Reserve Holiday Flights Now save up to 50%
Upper Level
233 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst Carriage Shops

BASHFUL:
Every time I see you, your head is buried in a book. Why don't you go to the bookstore and get Cliffs Notes? They'll make those tough lit asssignments easier to understand, and they'll give you a great review. Throw down those chains and come out with me!
INTERESTED

PAD'S N' THINGS
DEC. - JAN.
SPECIALS
25% OFF LIST
ALL DRAWING PADS
134 High St.
Holyoke, Mass.

THE SALVATION ARMY
Chnstmas is love.
hope
and caring
At The Salvation Army Christmas means "sharing."
Give to The Salvation Army so others may have a happy holiday.

For the ride of your life...
All you need for Christmas are your two front seats!

PARAMOUNT PICTURES PRESENTS A HOWARD W. KOCH PRODUCTION AIRPLANE II: THE SEQUEL ROBERT HAYS JULIE HAGERTY LLOYD BRIDGES CHAD EVERETT WILLIAM SHATNER DIRECTOR OF PHOTOGRAPHY JOE BIROC, A.S.C. PRODUCED BY HOWARD W. KOCH WRITTEN AND DIRECTED BY KEN FINKLEMAN A PARAMOUNT PICTURE
PG PARENTAL GUIDANCE SUGGESTED
SOME MATERIAL MAY NOT BE SUITABLE FOR CHILDREN
Opens December 10th at a theatre near you.

the Hungry U Restaurant
55 University Drive
Amherst
549-5713
Fine food and drink at affordable prices
By popular demand our weekend evening happy hours are back!
FRIDAY and SATURDAY
9:00 - close
Free Pizza 99¢ bar drinks
Free Peanuts 50¢ drafts
games area
or sample dinner for two
only $9.95 - 5:30 - 9:00

Student businesses are well-known

By ELLEN M. RYDER
Collegian Staff

Student-run businesses have been successful in attracting consumers and satisfying the need of University of Massachusetts students, according to a recent survey.

Results of the Project PULSE survey, which was conducted by the Student Affairs Research and Evaluation Office, indicate that student-controlled businesses are popular and well-known to the majority of UMass students. Of the 274 students interviewed, 90.9 percent said they had heard of Union Records Unlimited, making it the most well-known of the student controlled businesses. Second highest in familiarity was the Student Note & Printing Service, with an 86.9 percent recognition.

"If the group is well-advertised and it makes itself visible, it usually does well," Ellis Rinaldi of the Student Government Association Economic Development Office. "The sporting goods co-op (called "Get Physical") has been doing fabulous, and it should be expanding."

By survey category, food services (Earthfoods, People's Market, etc.) rated highest in the survey, with 81.8 percent reporting using them. Merchandising outlets (Union Records Unlimited, the Bicycle Co-op, etc.) were used by a reported 71.9 percent, which 68.6 percent said they used other services, such as the Student Note & Printing Service.

According to the survey, the most significant reason for frequency of use is convenience of location. Rinaldi, however, said he feels advertisement and management are more important for attracting customers.

"The businesses that are struggling are not visible, inconspicuous, and have no advertising," Rinaldi said. "Some are doing outrageously well. What is needed is more advertising, better management, and more qualified workers."

Reasons given by survey participants for using student controlled businesses varied.

When the party is BYOB (Bring Your Own Brush), you find out who your friends are.

Friends aren't hard to find when you're out to share a good time. But the crowd sure thins out when there's work to do. And the ones who stick around deserve something special.
Tonight, let it be Löwenbräu.
Löwenbräu. Here's to good friends.

Ernestine:
The Grapes of Wrath can be sour indeed! Why don't you go to the bookstore and get Cliffs Notes? They'll help you understand what you read, and they give a great review. Then you'll have more free time for me! I've got a cold bottle of Ripple. . .care to share?
JULIO

AMHERST CINEMA
Fri - Sat
The Paper Chase 7:00
The Graduate 9:00
Sun - Tues
The Great Santini 7:00
Chariots of Fire 9:00
Downtown Amherst
253-5426

THE SALVATION ARMY
Give to The Salvation Army so others may have a happy holiday.

JOBS OVERSEAS
ALL COUNTRIES
ALL CATEGORIES
INCLUDING CRUISE SHIPS
200 COMPANIES
MOST POSITIONS OPEN
ACT FAST
CALL
1-716-885-3242
EXT. 601

Cash for Books

CLOTH OR PAPER — WHETHER USED ON THIS CAMPUS OR NOT.
WE BUY ALL TITLES HAVING RESALE MARKET VALUE!

SELL THEM AT:

TEXTBOOK ANNEX

WEDNESDAY THRU SATURDAY

DECEMBER 15 THRU 18

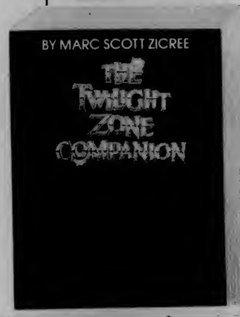
MONDAY THRU THURSDAY

DECEMBER 20 THRU 23

9:00 AM - 4:00 PM

I D REQUIRED

About the only thing that isn't in it is the theme music!



It debuted on October 2, 1959 and over the next five years and 156 episodes, it charted a territory all its own filled with magic, horror, and wonder. Now, submitted for your approval, is THE TWILIGHT ZONE COMPANION. Profusely illustrated with over 200 photos, this definitive volume combines evocative synopses of each episode with cast and credit listings, incisive commentary and colorful behind-the-scenes recollections. $9.95 wherever books are sold or order directly from the publisher by including $1.25 for postage and handling.

A BANTAM TRADE PAPERBACK.
BANTAM BOOKS, INC., Dept. DR-18,
666 Fifth Avenue, New York 10103

Newslines...

State building construction subject of seminar

A seminar on "Civil Engineering and Politics in Massachusetts: State Funded Construction" will be held at 3:45 p.m. on Monday in Rooms 132-134 of Marston Hall. John F. Welch, registered Professional Engineer and Project Manager in the Division of Capital Planning and Operations for the Commonwealth, will be the guest speaker.

Psychology magazine senior editor to speak Monday on 'How to Write for the Real World'

The senior editor of Psychology Today magazine will speak on "How to Write for the Real World," at 3:45 p.m. on Monday in Room 304 of Tobin Hall. Dr. Dan Goleman will discuss the difference between writing for an academic journal and writing for the general public. He will also speak on "What They Never Told You in Graduate School."

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS

18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Molson Golden Ale	$12.99/case
Sebastiani Mountain Wines	$4.69/1.5 liters
Minatures (whiskey, liquors, etc.)	45¢ & up/ea
Beck's light or dark	$3.99/6 pk
Miller 12 oz NR bottles	$8.99/case
Vodka or Gin 80°	$5.45/1 liter $8.99/1.75 liters
Folonari Soave	$3.99/1.5 liters

Don't forget your SECRET SANTA!

BLUE WALL

TODAY 3-6 p.m.

PRE-FINALS BLOWOUT!

with THE FABULOUS CLIFF MYERS

FINAL 1982 PERFORMANCE

BARGAIN BASEMENT SALE

Selected Groups of Mugs
Cards
Cubes
Games
Frames
Candles
Buttons
Posters
Puzzles
Tin Boxes
Plant Pots
Stationary
Rubber Stamps
Plastic Boxes
many other items. . .

ALL ITEMS SUBJECT TO PRIOR SALE

ALL SALES FINAL!

on the concourse
THIS WEEK ONLY

FINAL DAY!!!

Friday 90% off original price

cashier will take the mark-down at the register

UNIVERSITY STORE

Arts

Richard Davis (above), along with Max Roach, Billy Taylor, Jimmy Heath, Slide Hampton, and John Hendricks will perform in The Big Six of Jazz II at 8 p.m. tomorrow night in the FAC.

Gallery Prints

by Julie Schilke

Herter Gallery is presenting two shows this week, both running until December 10. The first is Cathy Smith's Attitudes (MFA thesis), and her collection of pieces is anything but pleasant. Smith uses spike and thorn-like shapes, to convey anger, fear, and strong anxiety. Black and red dominate her paintings and sketches, both on paper and wood. Her wood pieces are stronger and more ominous, yet each has a powerful message to convey.

Rhonda Cunha's Works in Textiles (BFA thesis) is the Herter's second show. What Cunha does with cloth is unique and inventive. In this exhibit, she sews, twists, and bends and prints material to create an effect one would achieve much easier with a pen or paint brush. Her work is humorous, graphic and full of colour.

The Student Union Gallery is currently presenting three BFA projects through the 10th of December. Carolyn Sampson is exhibiting several of her prints in the show. Her work is imaginative and energetic, dealing with a lot of organic shapes. Many of Sampson's prints have a woodland theme, giving a mouse-eye view of the forest world to the audience. It is an enjoyable and interesting exhibit, to be sure.

Brad Eden is the second artist in the exhibition. His work pictured above is more design-oriented, involving abstract lines which slash across the canvas. His choice of material is in itself interesting. Eden uses encaustic, a combination of wax and pigment, as well as sand in his paintings. As a result, his pieces display a three-dimensional crumbly texture that pops out of the canvas.

The third artist exhibiting work at the Union Gallery is Christine Carson. Her compositions come from nature, many resembling landscapes. Carson uses stain rather than paint, for its greater fluidity, as well as bits of string and yarn to pull her compositions out of the canvas. As a result, the observer is captured by the large expanse of deep colour.

Donato PietroDangelo's collections of photographs is still being shown at Hampden Gallery. Hurry, this exhibit is closing December 10.

Barbara Zucker, The World of Donalds Evans, and Selections from the Permanent Collection are at the University Gallery in the FAC until December 19.

Collegian photo by Drew Ogier

The artwork of Brad Eden is featured in the Carson, Eden, Sampou BFA exhibit in the Student Union Gallery through December 10.

ACADEMY of MUSIC
ON THE PARK - NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
Only Area Showing, Starts Fri. to Thurs. Dec. 10-16
On Screen Evenings 7:00 and 9:05

"Genuinely sparkling... a mixture of style and chic hanky-panky. Every shot seems to be designed to delight the audience. It's a glittering toy of a movie." —Pauline Kael, The New Yorker

"Brilliant... one of the most persistently entertaining, absorbing and scary thrillers I've seen in a long time...it's terrific." Roger Ebert, Chicago Sun-Times

"Sensual, funny, ..." —Rex Reed, New York

PG

FOUR SEASONS

Miller	bts	$8.99
Michelob	regular & light bts	$9.99
Tuborg	light or dark	$7.99
Gudanoff Vodka	1.75 L	$7.99
Skol Gin or Vodka	1.75	$8.99
McGregor Scotch	750	$5.59
Southern Comfort	Lt	$8.99
Amaretto di Saronno	750	$11.99

Save $3.00 a bottle

Jack Daniel Tin Box gift set 2 - 50 ml $3.99

Gallo Varietal Wines

Rose, Chenin Blanc, French Columbard, Sauvignon Blanc 1.5 ..... $3.99

Don't forget to pick up this year's Beaujolais Nouveau

Kegs Open 10 AM to 11 PM in front of the Malls Free Delivery

Wines/Liquors

rte.9, hadley, ma./584-8174

trailers Christmas Film Preview By Andy Gordon

Okay, I know every paper in the country is doing pieces on the upcoming holiday film season, but shown here is the definitive photo preview. These films will all open nationally in late December-early January and, surprisingly, they all look pretty good. For space limitation reasons I could not include Six Weeks, Gandhi, Sophie's Choice, Still of the Night, Airplane II or Yol. Special thanks to United Artists, Columbia Pictures, Warner Brothers, Universal, Marco Barla, Allied Advertising and 20th Century Fox for the photos.

No other info to report now so, until next semester, catch some flicks and have a good holiday.

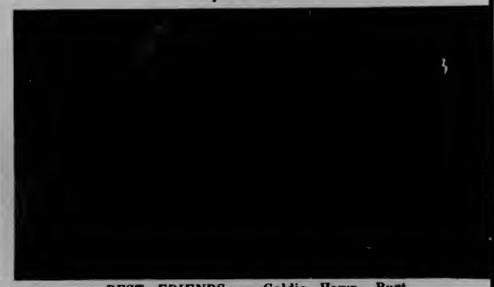
48 HOURS — Eddie Murphy, Nick Nolte

THE VERDICT — Paul Newman

BRIMSTONE AND TREACLE - Sting, Denholm Elliott

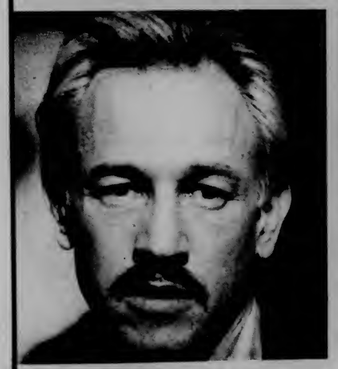
THE TOY - Richard Pryor

CHILLY SCENES OF WINTER — John Heard, Mary Beth Hurt



TOOTSIE — Dustin Hoffman, Dabney Coleman

BEST FRIENDS — Goldie Hawn, Burt Reynolds



HAMMETT — Frederic Forrest

HONKYTONK MAN — Clint Eastwood, Kyle Eastwood

THE DARK CRYSTAL — Aughra, the keeper of secrets

AN IMPORTANT ADDITION TO YOUR UNIFORM

The insignia of an Air Force nurse can mean a lot to you and your future. It shows that you're part of the Air Force Nurse Corps. A member of one of the most efficient health care teams in the world. It signifies you are an Air Force officer with the responsibility and prestige of a leadership position. It indicates you're on the track toward good pay and almost unlimited educational opportunities. If you're a nursing professional or about to complete your nursing education, why not consider Air Force nursing as part of YOUR future? From the day you're commissioned, you'll receive the pay and advantages of an Air Force officer. Consider your uniform and our future. Then make it yours.

AIR FORCE NURSING. A GREAT WAY OF LIFE.

For More Details Call Sandy Price
(203) 229-8650:
Freshmen & Sophmores Call Capt. Pinkell
(413) 545-2637

AIR FORCE
A great way of life

A Christmas Checklist

Plan ahead now so you won't forget anyone

Childrens Gift Books

Benjamin Bunny
$2.98

Muppet Show Book
$9.98

The Night Before Christmas
$2.98

Aesop's Fables
$3.98

List $17.50

A Christmas Carol
$4.98

Jack & the Beanstalk
$2.98

Many other children's sale books available

Open M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4

Located in the Campus Center

UNIVERSITY STORE

AR SPEAKER SALE!

AR 18s $144/pr
AR 28s 185/pr
AR 38s 220/pr
AR 48s 298/pr

PIONEER CAR STEREO

UKP-2200 $128
UKP-5200 158
UKP-5600 199

Plus 1 3 off on your speakers with any of these decks.

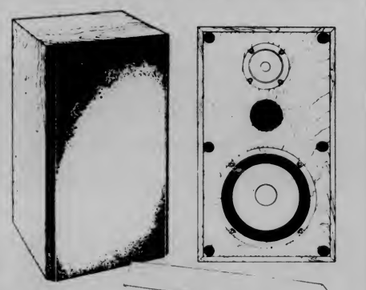
SONY Stereo cassette deck with Dolby "C"

$189

TDK SA-90 2 for $5.94
Maxell UDXL II-90 2 for $7.25
Nuvox FM walkaround $28
Telarc Digital Albums $16
Sennheiser HD 49 $28 HD 420 $64

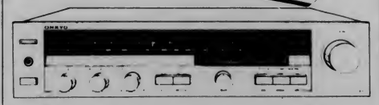
Ear Cheer

ONKYO TX-11 Receiver BSR Model 82 Speakers
SHURE M70B Cartridge JVC L-A10 Turntable



This System
$299
Complete

Was $360



Sound & Music

Good Advice Honest Price

90-92 King St. (Rte. 5), Northampton, 584-9547
Mon.-Wed. 10-6, Thur. & Fri. 10-9, Sat. 10-5, Sun. 1-5

You're Forgiven:
I told you to bring pizza, but you brought Cliffs Notes. Sorry it took me so long to discover what a great idea that was. Cliffs Notes made it easier to review and my test grade was super. Let's do it again and I'll bring pizza . .but please try and remember the Cliffs Notes.
Enlightened

LAGNAF 83

Hypercurricula

"Hypercurricula," a listing of events held at the University of Massachusetts and surrounding area, is published daily in the Collegian. Events are listed only on the day they are taking place. Announcements must be submitted on "Hypercurricula" forms available in the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center, and returned to the office by 3 p.m. the Friday before the event. All submissions should be written in a similar style as they appear in the paper.

"Hypercurricula" notices not submitted on the standard form and not submitted by the Friday before the week the event will take place will not be run. Due to space limitations, the Collegian cannot guarantee printing of all "Hypercurricula" notices. Priority will be given to UMass organizations.

Today

LITTLE FLAGS WORKSHOP: INSTRUMENTS FOR PEOPLE'S MUSIC — With John Oestereich, composer and musical director of Little Flags Theatre; multi-instrumentalist and vocal performer; college teacher; author of "Piano Improvisation." 2 p.m., Chadbourne lounge.

SHABBAT SERVICES — Tonight is the first Night of Chanukah! Join Hillel for the special occasion. Shabbat is a unique time to recall the experiences of the week and bring in the spirit of Chanukah. All welcome. 7 p.m., Dukes Room, Student Union.

FREE CONCERT: YOUTH WIND ENSEMBLE — The ensemble, conducted by Malcolm W. Rowell, Jr., of the Department of Music and Dance, is composed of 46 talented high school instrumentalists from western Massachusetts and southern Vermont. 8 p.m., Bowker Auditorium, Stockbridge Hall.

"THE ALTERNATIVE" COFFEEHOUSE — An evening of fun, food, and entertainment featuring UMass students celebrating their Christian lives through the performing arts. It's a great break from studies and it's free. 8 p.m., Chi Rho House, Frat Park.

Tomorrow

LITTLE FLAGS WORKSHOP: BEGINNING ACTING — Workshop with Maxine Klein director of Little Flags Theater, professor and author of two books: "Time, Space, and Design for Actors" and Theatre for the 98 percent and Writer of six plays. To register call 5-2882. Noon, Brooks Lounge.

CHANUKAH DINNER, CANDLELIGHTING, AND PARTY — With dinner: preparation begins at 5 p.m. in the Earthfoods kitchen for latke-making and schmoozing. 7 p.m. Dinner, candleslighting in the Cape Cod Lounge. 8:30 p.m: with D.J. from 8:30 p.m. on.

"NEW RISE OF THE MASTER RACE" — The latest Little Flags Theatre musical/comedy is "New Rise of the Master Race." The Boston-based troupe's new play brings the real and surreal of life in Detroit and in Washington D.C. into telling proximity. The play will scare you out of your wits and wit you out of your scare. For reservations call, 5-2803. 8 p.m., Hampden Theatre, Southwest.

Sunday

CHILDREN'S PERFORMANCE RECITAL — Performing Arts Division acting and singing classes, directed by Beau Flahive and Steve Coombs will feature selections from "Fiddler on the Roof," "Cabaret," "Fame" and more. 3 p.m. Bezanson Recital Hall.

NEED A RIDE TO CHURCH? — The UCF CHURCH BUS departs from Grayson parking lot at 9:30 a.m., stops at Cashin Dorm and then at NOPE at 9:35 for the Amherst churches. Coffee and donuts are served in Grayson Main Lounge from 9-9:30.

AMHERST AREA NEW TESTAMENT CHURCH — Everyone is welcome to join us for our Sunday service of worship, prayer and teaching from God's word — the Bible. 3:30 p.m. See C.C. daily schedule for room number.

HOUSE CHURCH — A student group engaged in mutual ministry, Bible study, personal sharing and encounter and a simple closing Communion which reflects the spirit of the group. 7 to 9:00 p.m., 428 Student Union.

FREE CONCERT: UNIVERSITY CHORALE AND THE CHORAL UNION — Conducted by Richard duBois, the choirs will perform Britten's "Ceremony of Carols" and Vaughan Williams' Mass in G Minor, as well as some shorter pieces. This is the first concert given by the Chorale since its tour this past summer of Romania and the Soviet Union. 8 p.m. Bowker Auditorium.

Everything For The Holidays...

d'amour's BIG

...and much more is what you'll find at Big 'Y' Come in and compare!

Not responsible for typographical errors

CLIP & SAVE COUPON
Revere Sugar
Pure Cane
5 Pound Bag
99¢
WITH THIS COUPON
and additional $10 purchase exclusive of coupon items and cigarettes, lottery tickets and any item prohibited by law. Good at Hadley Big 'Y' only. Valid thru Sat., Dec 11, 1982
LU-111

From Our Fresh Meat Department
CLIP & SAVE COUPON
Any Beef Roast
50¢ OFF
WITH THIS COUPON
and additional $10 purchase exclusive of coupon items and cigarettes, lottery tickets and any item prohibited by law. Good at Hadley Big 'Y' only. Valid thru Sat., Dec 11, 1982
LU-112

CLIP & SAVE COUPON
Locally Grown Potatoes
10 Pound Bag
59¢
WITH THIS COUPON
and additional $10 purchase exclusive of coupon items and cigarettes, lottery tickets and any item prohibited by law. Good at Hadley Big 'Y' only. Valid thru Sat., Dec 11, 1982
LU-113

amc THEATRES
$2.00 MATINEE & TWILITE SHOW
LIMITED TO REDUCED PRICES FOR STUDENTS WITH AMC CARD SEATING

amc HAMPSHIRE 4 584-7550 HAMPSHIRE MALL

THE SAGA CONTINUES
THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK
PG
Fri at (4:45 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:45
Sat at (2:00 & 4:45 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:45
Sun at (1:00 & 3:30 @ $2.00) 6:00, 8:30

Tex McCormick isn't giving in.
MATT DILLON
TEX
TOUGH TENDER TODAY
PG
Fri at (5:15 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:30
Sat at (1:00, 3:00 & 5:15 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:30
Sun at (1:00, 3:00 & 5:15 @ $2.00) 7:45

RICHARD GERE
AN OFFICER AND A GENTLEMAN
R
Fri at (5:00 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sat at (2:45 & 5:00 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sun at (2:45 & 5:15 @ $2.00) 8:00

THE LAST UNICORN
G
Fri at (6:30 @ $2.00)
Sat at (1:00, 3:00 & 6:30 @ $2.00)
Sun at (1:00, 3:00, & 6:30 @ $2.00)

SYLVESTER STALLONE
FIRST BLOOD
R

amc MOUNTAIN FARMS 4 584-9153 MOUNTAIN FARMS MALL

THE TOY
When Jackie Gleason told his son he could have any present he wanted, he picked the most outrageous gift of all... Richard Pryor.
PG
Fri at (4:30 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:45
Sat at (1:45 & 4:30 @ $2.00) 7:15, 9:45
Sun at (12:45 & 3:00 @ $2.00) 6:00, 8:30

For the ride of your life...
All you need for Christmas are your two front seats!
AIRPLANE II THE SEQUEL
PG

E.T. THE EXTRA-TERRESTRIAL
PG
Fri at (4:45 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sat at (2:00 & 4:45 @ $2.00) 7:30, 9:55
Sun at (1:00 @ 3:45 @ $2.00) 6:15, 8:30

MIDNIGHT MOVIE MADNESS
EVERY FRIDAY & SATURDAY 12:15 AM ALL SEATS $3.50

amc HAMPSHIRE 4 584-7550
THE WHO The Kids Are Alright
PG

THE ROCKY HORROR PICTURE SHOW
50¢ off to anyone in costume
R

HEAVY METAL
R

THE EXORCIST
Saturday only!
R

STADIUM LIQUORS

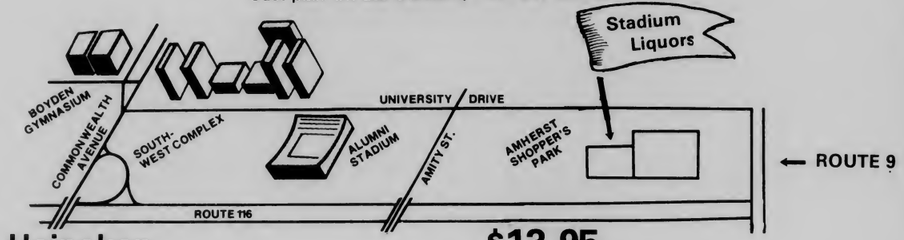
UMass Amherst

10 a.m. til 11 p.m.

Kegs • Beer • Wine • Soda • Ice

University Drive, Amherst, Mass.

Just past UMass Stadium, from SW dorms

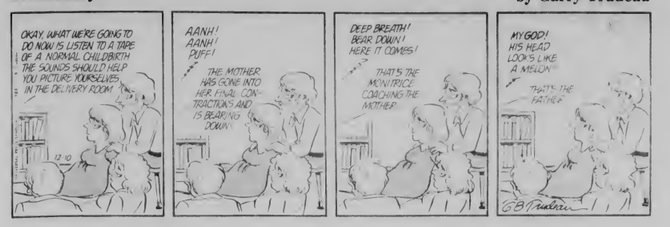


Heineken	$13.95
Moosehead	$12.50
Rolling Rock cans 12 pack	$4.00
Busch cans	$7.95
Inglenook 3 litre	$5.95
Lancers 750 ml	$3.75
California Cellars 3 litre	$5.95
Paul Mason 4 litre	$6.95
Almaden Brandy 750 ml	$6.79
Carlo Rossi 4 litre	$4.99
Sebastiani 3 litre	$5.95
Gallo 1.5	$3.99
VO litres	$10.59
Windsor Canadian 1.75	$11.95
Smirnoff 80 proof 1.75	$11.95
Ron Rico Rum 1.75	$10.95
Canadian Rare 1.75	$10.25
Skol Vodka 1.75	$8.20
Dewars Scotch litre	$12.89
Tangueray Gin 750 ml	$8.95
Southern Comfort litre	$8.59
Newport Rum 1.75	$9.95
Canadian Club 1.75 $16.95 750 ml	$8.50

253-5595

not responsible for typographical errors

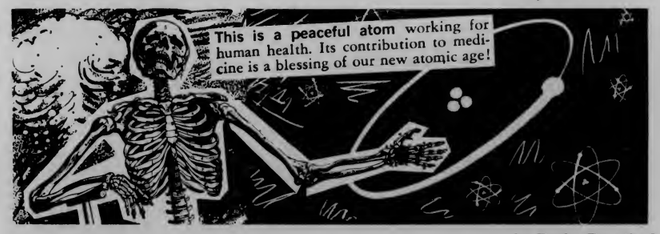
Doonesbury by Garry Trudeau



The UMass Zone by Mark Rollins

Under the Influence by M. Joyce

Bushwa by Tom Cushwa



Bloom County by Berke Breathed

D.C. MENU

	Saturday	Sunday
LUNCH Junior Club Sandwich, Spanish Shrimp and Rice Casserole	DINNER Savory Beef Strudel/-Mushroom Sauce, Baked Fish/Herb Crumb Topping, Eggs with Sharp Cheese Cold Plate	BRUNCH Scrambled Eggs, Breakfast Sausage, Hot Pastrami on Pumpernickle, Swiss Cheese Fondue	BRUNCH Omelet, Bacon Slices, Fish in Batter/Tartar Sauce, Fiesta Rice and Cheese
BASICS LUNCH Garbanzo Bean and Rice Provencal, Chicken Cutlet Sandwich/Cranberry Sauce	BASICS DINNER Stir Fry Vegetables and Tofu, Baked Fish/Herb Crumb Topping, Eggs with Sharp Cheese Cold Plate	DINNER Roast Lamb/Gravy, Mint Jelly, Ham Steak/Glazed Pineapple Slices, Hungarian Noodle Bake	DINNER Baked Chicken/Gravy, Cranberry Sauce, Breaded Veal Pattie/Tomato Sauce, Zucchini Parmesan

CROSSWORD

Edited by Margaret Farrar and Trude Jaffe

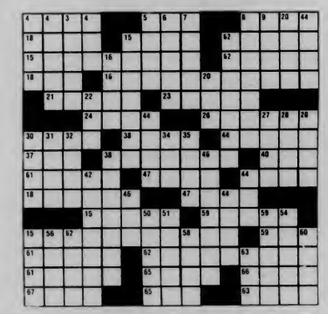
©1982 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

ACROSS

1 "Maid of the ——— Niagara Falls boat
6 Wedding words
8 Parched
12 Fine ———
13 Smile
14 Ski area
15 Be alert
17 Secretive
18 Tavern
19 Is discerning
21 Monopolized (with "up")
23 Covered with coal dust
24 Church corner
26 Blocks, in philately
30 Not close, in a child's game
33 Wants
36 City on the Ruhr
37 Orangutan
38 China shop purchase
40 Indonesian island
41 Title in India
43 Elegance
44 Detained (with "up")
45 Participant
47 Dried up
49 Storage building
52 Joyous song
55 "Beauty is in the eye of ———"
59 One of the Little Women
61 M*A*S*H character
62 Intimidate
64 Seed coverings
65 Part of Santa's burden
66 Three digit code
67 Strip
68 USNA grad
69 Soften

DOWN

1 W. African republic
2 Actor Jeremy ———
3 Rosetta, for one
4 Tut
5 Author Murdoch
6 Price and Troyanos
7 ——— trump
8 Agog
9 Place for a garden
10 ——— facto
11 Elk's kin
13 Wolf's look
14 Tools for reaping
16 Attention getter
20 Dawn goddess
22 Money roll
25 Wunderful
27 Jacob's brother
28 Shiite bird
29 Like one in a rug
30 Find fault
31 Birthstone
32 Entertainer Horne
34 Mil. maj.
35 Basks
38 Playground attractions
39 Eyes, in jargon
42 Scrutinize
44 Part of a bray
46 Stadium sound
48 Unusual
50 Job, along the Seine
51 Singer John
53 Love, in Roma
54 Type of post
55 Golf hazard
56 Race loser, in an old story
57 Adams on TV
58 Calendar items
60 Punkie
63 Elephant Butte, for one



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

J	O	S	I	S		A	N	A	S			U	M	A	M
A	N	T	E		N	O	S	E	S		N	O	V	A
D	E	A	N		D	A	I	R	Y		N	O	I	R
E	A	R	T	O	T	H	E	G	R	O	U	N	D
S	T	R	O	K	E			E	I	R	E
		N	A	N	G	A		A	E	N	E	A	S
I	S	M		P	O	O	N	S		G	A	C	E
F	O	O	T	I	N	O	N	E	S	M	O	U	T	H
I	S	A	R		S	E	A	M	Y		K	E	R
T	O	T	A	L	S		A	S	T	A	N	D
		I	O	W	A		R	A	T	I	O	N	S
F	I	N	G	E	R	I	N	T	H	E	P	I	E
P	A	V	E		E	D	D	I	E		D	I	S	T
O	M	A	R		P	O	L	I	S		N	A	I	L
P	E	N	I	S		R	E	S	T		N	E	N	E

Weather

Sunshine followed by increasing cloudiness, today, highs in the 30s. A chance of flurries tonight, lows mostly in the 20s. A chance of morning flurries tomorrow, then partly sunny, highs in the 30s.

CABLE VIDEO

Running the Music Gauntlet Day

10:30 - 11:30	Jazz with Spyro Gyra
11:30 - 12:30	Blues with John Lee Hooker
12:30 - 1:30	Hard Rock in the Blue Wall with the Neighborhoods
1:30 - 2:00	Hey, kid, video Rock and Roll

WMUA 91.1

6-9	More Music
9-12	Concepto Latino
12-3	Carl Lowman — The Rhythm Section
3-5:30	Jim McDee
5:30-6	Newswatch with Michelle Murray & Larry Mestel
6-7	Athena's Web with Don Cerow
7-10	TK Til Ten
10-2	The Radical Dub Faction with Vickie Bates
2-6	Tom Young & Peggy Dillon

Sports

Women hoopsters stopped by Fairfield 69-67

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

FAIRFIELD, Conn. — Consistency is a staple that the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team must obtain this season. Last night against Fairfield University, UMass could not control the boards in the second half and ended up losing a close one, 69-67.

Massachusetts led at the half 40-37, but could not get their defensive rebounding together and that was a major reason for the two point loss. UMass gave Fairfield, Katrina Fields in particular, too many second chances at their own shots.

Fields, the game high scorer, led the Lady Stage with 22 points and pulled down 18 rebounds. Karen Damminger pulled in six rebounds for UMass, who was outrebounded 40-31.

The game started off well for the Minutewomen, now 3-5, after Fairfield scored first. UMass proceeded to run off ten unanswered points to take a 10-2 lead. Damminger, Wendy Ward, Barbara Hebel and Rebecca Kuchs fueled the Minutewomen attack. Hebel also had 2 steals and an assist in the spurt.

UMass took a 14-4 lead before Fairfield battled back to a 16-16 tie and the two ball clubs traded buckets for most of the first half.

Fairfield held a 32-30 lead with 3:50 left in the opening half before UMass outscored the Lady Stags 10-5 to end the half.

Fairfield took control of the boards in the second half and took control of the score as well. UMass closed to within five with 8:14 to go in the game and hoops by Hebel and Ward narrowed the lead to one.

However, the Stags went up by four and coach Mary Ann Ozdarski called a timeout to regroup her lady hoopsters. Hebel came out and sandwiched two hoops around a Damminger two pointer to tie up the score at 60 with 4:03 to go.

Jerrie Bernier stole a Stag pass and passed off to Hebel in the corner, who tied it up.

At 69-67 and 0:54 to go, both teams had the ball and both teams coughed it up. It finally ended up with UMass holding the ball at center court with two seconds to go. Ward passed it out to Hebel and her 25 ft. jumper fell off the backboard.

Overall, Massachusetts played a good game, but the lack of rebounding in the second half gave Fairfield the edge. UMass got good point production from Hebel, 18 points, Damminger, 11, and Bernier with 10 points.

UMass will try to regroup and improve theri 3-5 record on Saturday afternoon at 2:00 when UM takes on Big East power Boston College in the Cage.

King George goes back to power play signing Baylor

By SCOTT HOOD
Collegian Staff

When the 1982 baseball season ended in early October, George Steinbrenner was angry. Very angry. A campaign that had commenced in April with glowing promise and optimism for his New York Yankees had turned into an A-1 disaster.

The team, which finished one game out of last place, had become polluted by overpaid veterans with multi-million dollar contracts, who performed so poorly and ineptly that they gave lemons a bad name and embarrassed Steinbrenner to the maximum.

Well, not surprisingly, Steinbrenner ordered an overhaul of the team. As December entered its second week and the baseball winter meetings continued in Hawaii, King George was making his move back to respectability.

On Dec. 1 he inked Don Baylor to a four-year, $3.675 million contract. Then, late Wednesday night, word was spreading that Steve Kemp had agreed to a million-dollar-a-year deal with the Yankees. Steinbrenner was also reported to be after Steve Garvey and Omar Moreno. He has seemingly lost the Floyd Bannister sweepstakes to either Kansas City, Philadelphia, or St. Louis. (A $9 million, 8-year offer by the Yankees was rejected.)

The signings of Baylor and Kemp signal an abrupt end to the one year experiment in tailoring the Yankees around speed and defense. Baylor is being penciled in at first base, hopefully bringing stability to a spot that saw seven men toil last season, none of whom did the job.

He will also occasionally DH, a position he grew familiar with while belonging to the Angels. But, if the Yankees do sign Garvey, then Baylor will become solely a DH. It also remains to be seen what kind of effect Death Valley in left-center field will have on Baylor's home-run hitting ability. (Yankee management is considering moving the fences in.)

Kemp will take over in right field, although he has been a left fielder his entire career with the Tigers and White Sox. Kemp, considered average defensively, will replace Ken Griffey, a huge disappointment last year. Griffey will either play first or hit the pine, thus becoming a very expensive substitute ($800,000 per year). Further plans call for Kemp (19 HR, 98 RBI in 1982) to bat fourth between Dave Winfield and Baylor.

Jerry Mumphrey is presently the centerfielder, although that could change if the Yankees sign Moreno, a fleet-footed, weak-hitting outfielder for several years with the Pirates. Recent rumor in Honolulu have the Bronx Bombers acquiring yet another outfielder, this time Jack Clark of the Giants. Clark would come to New York along with relief pitcher Al Holland in exchange for Dave Righetti, Butch Wynegar, and Roy Smalley.

If Smalley is indeed traded, that would open up the shortstop position for Andre Robinson. Third base is one big question mark as Craig Nettles is expected to be traded, probably to the Padres. Latest stories had either Buddy Bell or George Brett (who is holding out for more money from the Royals) coming to the Big Apple for either Righetti or Ron Guidry.

If I have confused you even more, remember this: it is only December. Steinbrenner, no doubt, still has tricks up his sleeve. The remainder of the winter should be extremely interesting for Yankee fans. Stay tuned.

Looks like 1982 could be the year of the Bruin

By GEORGE MARTINS
Collegian Staff

Now that the NHL season is into full swing, it is time to evaluate the performance of our home team, the Boston Bruins.

What we have is an exceptional club that has a great chance to capture Bostons first Stanley Cup in 11 years.

The major reason for the Bruins early season success is the defense. Through the first quarter of the season the team has posted the best Goals Against Average in the league.

First, accolades must go to goalie Pete Peeters. He has been sensational. Peeters edged out Wayne "The Great" Gretsky for player of the month honors in the NHL in November. To put it simply, he is the best goaltender in the league.

However a goaltender is only as good as the defense in front of him and the Bruins have an outstanding defensive corps.

Bostons best defenseman so far has been (surprise) Mike Milbury. Milbury is beginning to play with the promise that he showed five years ago. He has been making plays offensively and has been a tower of strength on the "D".

All-Star defenseman Ray Bourque has come back from an injury and is living up to his potential as the most talented defenseman in the game.

The remainder of the defense; Brad Park, Mike O'Connell, and Randy Hillier have all played admirably.

Another reason for praise is the fact that the Bruins have played so well with a severely depleted cast of characters. Veterans Terry O'Reilly and Steve Kasper have been out for long stretches, as have rookie phenoms Gord Kluzak and Luc Dufour.

The team began to come into its own in two games they played against the New York Islanders last month. In the first game in New York the Bruins thoroughly dominated New York in an easy 3-1 win. The three Bruin goals were scored by members of their talented youth group, Keith Crowder, Tom Fergus, and Brad Palmer. Only a misplayed puck by Peeters in the last minutes gave the Islanders a 1-1 tie, but Boston dominated the game.

In the last two weeks the team has really begun to click. Included in this sequence of games were a 8-0 rout of Hartford, and a weekend sweep of Montreal and Philadelphia. The win against the Canadiens was their first in the Forum since 1976.

After visiting teammate Normand Leveille in a Montreal hospital earlier in the day the Bruins were ready to "win it for Normie".

After a disappointing first period in which the Canadiens took a 2-0 lead the Bruins came out storming in the second period. Led by spirited performances by Barry Pederson, Crowder, Peter McNab, Craig MacTavish and Riek Middleton the Bruins wound up winning the game 6-4. An outstanding statistic is that the Bruins held Montreal to nine shots on net in the final two periods.

The next night Pederson scored his second hat trick in two games as the Bruins beat the Flyers 6-4.

The outlook for the future is bright. Along with return in the near future of O'Reilly, Dufeur and Kluzak, the Bruins have found two new young forwards in Dave Barr and Sean McClellan. There should be plenty of competition for third and fourth line shifts, but the first two lines finally appear to be set.

Sugar Ray Leonard visits Harvard; says he'd like to buy it

CAMBRIDGE (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard, at Harvard for a day-long visit Wednesday, said he'd never considered attending the university.

"It never crossed my mind, mainly because I felt my pockets and there wasn't any money," he said.

But after touring the grounds and meeting with University President Derek Bok, Leonard joked, "I'd like to buy it."

The 26-year-old lighter announced last month that he was retiring as world welterweight champion of both the World Boxing Association and the World Boxing Council. He vowed on Wednesday not to return to the ring.

"No, I won't return," he said. "I retired because I felt it was time to give it up...The eye injury also made it easier for me to give up the urge to get back in the ring.

"I think my career now is basically in television."

Leonard said he would like to have his own talk show and stay close to boxing. He says his son, Ray, has tried the sport but given it up and now "has intentions of attending Harvard." Ray is 9 years old.

In a talk with about 130 students, Leonard urged them to be the best at whatever they did. "But don't get me wrong. I'm not lecturing you," he said. "If anything, you should be lecturing me."

Dressed in a blue corduroy suit, Leonard kept up a running banter with the students. "I look at myself as a blessed person and you as blessed because we've all got God-given talent, mine just happens to be beating up on people," he said.

Leonard was invited to Harvard by the university's Foundation for Race Relations, which helps students get to know prominent members of minority groups.

2 Bedroom furnished apt on Bus Route Mark 256-0763

One Bedroom Cliffside $300. Includes utilities Feb 1 665-8101

Room Available in house near Southwest $100 549-6495

January only Two bedroom apt call John 546-5488 or Mike 546-4722 Evenings.

2 bedroom apartment heat and electricity included $250 665-3982

2 br Townhouse apt on busroute Squire Village Sunderland 2-4 tennants no utilities Jan Aug $410 call evenings 665-7930

January sublet Rolling Green $90 all utilities incl. 253-3704

If you have the place, we have the tenant and vice versa. Sublet your apartment, find a housemate FREE thru Off Campus Housing 115 Hasbrouck 5-0865

TRAVEL

Florida - Spring Break in the sun. Includes round trip jet, hotel 8 days 7 nights on the beach in Daytona, pool party/free beer. $269 lus tax and service. Call Bob @ 253-7695

WANTED

Automatic Baseball Cards wanted 1971 through 1979 call 549-4141 Mark

WANTED TO BUY

Buying class rings, gold and silver jewelry and coins. Daniel Smith, 25 North Pleasant St., Amherst, 256-0710

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for an apartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093

Looking for heated garage within 10 mi. radius of Amherst call Jordan 542-3158

2-3 Bed apt for intersession call 546-6066

Wantad for intersession 2 bedrm apt in Northampton 546-9666

Room available in Townhouse Apts North Amherst January & spring call 549-0038

Two female grad students looking for apartment/house to rent starting Jan 1 call Sue 253-7705

Two bedroom apartment for int and spring semester call 546-6787 or 256-8673

DaDe, The family wished you a happy 20th. Will celebrate later.

Pierre, Bonne Anniversaire mon ami Francois

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday - Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10 % • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?

Rackadisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

AUTO FOR SALE

69 Firebird convertible - A classic. Needs engine work and some minor body work. Easily restorable to mint cond. BO around 2000. Call nights 256-0435

79 Triumph TR7 30000 miles AM/FM cassette exce condition best offer 253-3406

VW Superbeetle beautiful runner 1971 $1050 549-5377

73 Ford cheap reliable winter transportation 400 or BO 546-5074

BELLYGRAMSII

Delivered by professional bellydancer for most unusual gift. Thereza 253-7822

BROWNIEGRAMS

Three flavors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

CAR STEREO FOR SALE

Blaupunkt call for info 546-6450

DRYCLEANING

Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Way. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ENTERTAINMENT

Party Set. Night at Hampden Commons S.W. featuring "Square Ideals" $2 cover no bottles sponsored by EAM

ERIKA'S BIRTHDAY

Southwest Engineering wishes Erika a happy 21

FOR RENT

BKO is renting rooms for intersession. Full use of kitchen facilities. Most modern house on campus, best location between town and campus. Call Paul at 549-3582 or Marty at 549-0206

Two bedrooms on bus route available January first call Lew or Ed 256-6712

2 rooms in large house on bus route Hadley $125 call Barbara 586-3936

Two rooms Sunderland 95 or 140 incl. Jan 1 call 665-2241 till midnite on bus route

For rant - five person house in North Amherst, contact John at 253-2819

One bedroom, five min from bus stop located in Amherst $140 January thru August 256-0796

Two openings Brittany Manor furnished ready Dec. 23 253-3688

Entire two bedroom apt in Squire Vil on bus route, available for next sem., Jan 1st 380 + 665-7195

Whole apt 2 bedroom Squire Village call 665-3032

Room available in coop house near Puffer's Pond 130 + woodstove 549-6633

FOR SALE

GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972

100% Alpaca wool sweaters handmade in Peru. Selling for much less than store cost! Great Christmas gifts! 546-5512

Twin bed box spring and mattress new must sell call 256-6086 evenings ask for Fran

Sterling Silver Rings and Earrings great Xmas gift call Chip 546-9534

WHO Tickets for Worcester BO 546-5149

Korg 770 solo synthesizer $325 Cromar synthesizer bass peddles $250 Bundy clarinet $100 all excellent condition Jim 546-5976

Snow tires H78-14 general tubeless GTN bla/belt white wells in excellent condition $40.00 for the pair 546-9411

For Sale Ski Rack fits all cars with rain gutters call 253-9678

J. Geils 12/27 1st show U.S. tour New Haven excellent floor seats 549-4032

1970 VW for sale good condition see it to believe it call 546-6139 or 789-2144

Ski Bindings. Tyrolia 150. In good condition. $30.00 or best offer. Call Marc 546-9695

Fuji bike, Grand Tourer SE, 81 model top cond., $200 or BO, incl. extras! phone Raf at 6-1113, anytime

Caber Ski Boots 10½ $35 used 3 times 549-6194

KZ skis length 150 excellent cond. $55 or BO Marge 256-6612

Couch $45 or best offer 549-1184 Tina

Computer Terminal ADDS Consul 580. Excellent condition, must sell. Asking $600 or BO Call 549-3762

Sell King Size Bed & Desk price negotiable call 549-0038

FOUND

Money tell me amt, where lost, around what time 546-5622

GREAT GIFTS

T-SHIRTS: Jagger, Costello, Stallone, and Springsteen. Plus many prints - plain and matted. $1.95 - $5.95 CC Concourse

HELP WANTED

WFCR needs spring interns. Up to 9 credits possible working in membership. Call 545-0100

LESBIAN AND GAY

Are you Gay? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2645 or drop in CC 106

Notice! The Counselling Collective has moved to CC 106 near the Collegian. Same hours, same phone 545-2645

LOST

"Lost" 12/2/82 womens sweater, red, black & white, cardigan. Extreme sentimental value. Please call Kathy 549-5518 or leave at Info Desk. Reward. No questions asked.

REWARD lost wallet black somewhere in Campus center call Gary 6-4770

Levi Denim Jacket in Hatch on 12-5, name P. Morton on label 256-6017

Pele maroon jeckat lost at TOC Fri please return to CC information desk

MEXICAN CRUISE

Spring Break; Cancun, Cozumel, Key West, 7 days; $440 from Tampa. Optional 3 credit course. Call 549-5613 or 549-5543 or 549-4736

MOVING

Man with pick-up for hire Experienced low rates call David 253-5185

PERSONALS

Holiday Open House Kappa Kappa Gamma all UMass women invited for an afternoon of holiday cheer! December 10th 3-5. RSVP 545-0320 545-0321

Rob K Happy Birthday love you Ann

Boerders wantad spring semester females only call Sheila or Julie at 545-0939 or 253-9971

Typing done quickly and professionally call Dave at 6-5766 for extraordinary work done at ordinary prices

Attention!! Sharon Pigeon - yes you! Have a great day! Love YSS

Rob K. Hope you had a Happy Birthday sorry its late. Maybe I'll see you in Florida love, guess who?

T - Remember TIUTA means friends in Greek Happy Graduation love Stan

Happy Birthday Jacky! Maintain the spirit kid! - UMass Gang

Trisha 2 roses for 2 years we made it thru some rough times last year which only made our love stronger Happy Anniversary! I couldn't be happier. PS I love you your superwoman

Stocking Stuffer for kids and other nice people coloring book Amherst Campus Bookstore

S.M. Ace those GRE's! Happy Graduation! Love L.G.

Eddie, you rat - a wonderful year--not nearly enough. Me too! Always us -- Frog

What are you doing this Chanukah? Come on down to Hillel's Chanukah party Dec, 11, 7:00 pm, Cape Cod Lounge, Student Union

Attention
Collegian Classified
and Display Advertisers
Final Deadline for Semester
MONDAY, DEC. 13th 3:45 PM
no exceptions
Collegian last day of publication
Wed. Dec. 15

74 Galaxie 500 good winter car, just tuned $400 or best offer 549-6147

Mit----z, Hey youre looking big, heve you been working out? Don't overdo it, and hour and a half could give you cramps. It's been quite the short month! I say shot, you say shock - you are right, as always just think what's happened - easthaven, exit 14, Izzy's & GW's what a panic It's a good thing that we never fight! Well it's been fun "hanging" w/you these few weeks. ILY, your secret admirer

Bya Wedgina! We'll miis you! Love Swill and Smilene

Well Mike - here's your first personal

Final exams, memory, concentration, -success - group rates University Hypnosis Center 549-4645

UPC members and friends Everyone Who's Anyone! Come party with UPC's end of the semester bash further info stop by office and see Donna or IrmaAlice 406 Student Union

Newman Club X-mas Party Sat., Dec. 11 from 9-1 in the Newman Center front lounge. Cost is $1.50 and all are invited!

Gano Liberti, Have a Merry Christmas. Luv, Santa

Lantil - Happy Holidays; water fights, tight jeans, laundry?, diets, lifting, come on Willie, non-stop late-night laughter, you've made this semester the best, I love ya - Noodle

G.P. This little gift you can be sure will raise your boyfriend's ire above the sink in the room of trash with the needed gift of fire. S.S.

Lori, Have a great 20th birthday 12/12. Now that you can go out. . .look out next semester! Patty

Gary Cohen I didn't forget about you heres your first clue: roses are red violets are blue, we are both flirts and we love it too your SS

Attention Amy Gates. Your Secret Santa waits. She'll send a gift from natures gate. Your next clue is at home with the spice of life.

Pete, Hanging around with your roommate is alright. But last weekend was a little too much. Remember, next time knock. Arpina

Mike 'Stud' How were the women this past Monday night. Did you ask any of them out? Boozer

Paar---I hope you don't think you're escaping this place without having one more "best" time - Cats don't care but I do--GSW #2

Coo coo coo I'm Tom Sullivan I'm Frank Suszynskis' pigeon coo coo coo

Happy B-day Mo! Love, ABW

To all the awesome pledges of Chi Omega: Have a "scrumptious" intersession! Love the sisters of XO

Dear Dade Happy 20th, Doll - It's legal time! Always the best for little sis. Love you, Larry

Lizzy: Happy 10th and Happy H i love you Mike

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE

Dissertations, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7324

RIDE WANTED

To Milwaukee/Chicago Area around 20 Dec. will share gas/driving. call Pam 253-7405.

To Everglades or anywhere in Florida after X-mas Day call Brenda 617-544-2624

To Colorado for Christmas Break call Shaun 549-6138.

Ride to Philadelphia or Wilmington Del. vicinity. 23rd 6-5739, Chris. will share gas

Pitts, PA Dec 23 after 2:00 PM Tony 549-0861

RIDERS WANTED

To Ft Lauderdale Florida leaving ec 25 returning Jan 4 round trip 110.00 call Caroline at 549-1114 for info

ROOM WANTED

Females looking for a bedroom. in Brittany Menor for spring semester. Please call 549-5586. Keep trying.

Female seeks own room in house or apt 253-2294 Sheryl.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Starting Jan 1 2 males remaining in 2 bedroom Brittany Manor apt 2 openings call 253-5920

Female roommate wanted for Southwood apartment from Jan 1 on. Call 256-0630

One room available in Puffton prefer one male 549-6322

3 roommates wanted for Jan 1 and spr semester Brittany Manor call Tim 256-0606

Female wanted to share Puffton apt during int session $125/month includes heat. Preferably non-smoker. on bus route please call Debbie evenings 546-9660 or 546-9662

Responsible person for own room in Hadley apt $130 + electric 584-5045

Female - share single bedroom Puffton starting February - lease until June 549-6741

Puffton Village - 3 bdrm sublet avail. for Jan with spring option avail for 1 bdrm, M/F, call 549-0621.

Female Roommate wanted Jan spring sem. Southwood townhouse $93 + 253-3273

Own room available in house near Southwest. Starting January $110/month 549-6495

Female wanted to share Brittany Manor Apt. Call 253-7360

Own Bedroom in two bedroom apt in Brittany Manor Apts Jan 1 256-8388

Kosher female for one bedroom in two bedroom Southwood townhouse 253-7031

1 or 2 people for 1 bdrm in furnished 2 bedrm Colonial Vill Apt 256-0763 Brad Chase

Female roommate(s) wanted for Jan 1 townhouse apt call Pat 549-5103 eves

2 people share 1 bedroom in So Amherst apt available immediately bus route only $801 each 586-3682

2-4 roommates in Echo Hill townhouse Jan-Aug call 253-2589

Female wanted for own room in Puffton start Jan 1 549-0137

Female roommated wantad Brittany manor $115/month. Heat included. Non-smoker 256-0298

Female roommated wantad Brittany manor $115/month. Heat included. Non-smoker 256-0298

Nice large room in furnished apartment 20 min from Amherst prefer over 25 must be neat, responsible and like 2 cats 175+ 774-4650

A clean non-smoking male to sre bedroom in Brittany Mnr 256-6041

Female to share bedroom in two bedroom apt Col Village spring semester $91/mth on bus oute excellent location call Chris or Tammy after 4:00 at 253-3082

1 Female wantad to rent Southwood apt over break very reasonable rent details 253-5109

Two people neaded to share room in Puffton Village intersession and spring sem 549-6420 heat inc

Room in house on bus route $180 month includes all utilities. Kitchen priviedges 253-2152

1 br in 2 br pond view Brandywine apt available Jan 1 & spring semester 549-6289

One bedroom for intersession and or spring great location $160 256-8447

Male to share room in house Rt 9 $127/month 256-0868

Brandywine January 1 or 2 females spring 1 female 549-4114

SERVICES

Writing assistance. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729

Moving? Our 12 foot enclosed cube truck will help you safely move your stuff 256-0480

Past Accurate Typing $1/page please call Leslee at 584-4980.

Say Something Special Made-to-order verses cards or gifts for more info 536-8683

SKI TRIPS

Smuggler's Notch Vermont Intersession trips, only $149!! For more info call: Roberta or Steph 549-6235

TO SUBLET

Woman wanted to share room in apt Feb great deal for info please call 665-7109

4 bedroom apt on bus route Swiss Village $165 ech including utilities 253-9519

1 Bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment on bus route available Jan 1 Laurel 665-3519

Intersession rental Southeast St $180 utilities included call Bob 256-6017 after 8

One bedroom on bus route intersession $90+ contact David at Bluewall Bar 12-3 or call 665-4048

Two bedroom apt available Jan 1 bus route Terianne 666-4371

2 Rms in Apt Intersession. Bus Rte. Main St 125 + 256-0896

Sports

More Sports on Page 22

Gymnast in big meet against Orange

Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

Joe DeMarco will be in action Saturday when the Minutemen take on the Syracuse Orangemen Saturday at 1:00 at Boyden.

By ELLEN RICHARD
Collegian Staff

With a 2-0 record, the University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics team will compete in what coach Roy Johnson called one of the toughest home meets of the year against Syracuse University tomorrow at 1:00 in Boyden gym.

The team has been training for the meet during the past week and have improved its weak areas, including long horse vaulting. Along with vaulting, the floor exercises and pommel horse will have to be strong events in order to beat Syracuse.

"The key will be vaulting," Johnson said. "And pommel horse will be important too. We've spent a lot of time on vaulting and I see improvement in it already."

The team looked good in practice on Thursday and has improved in all areas just since Tuesday.

Michael Cort will be one important Syracuse competitor to watch. Cort's best event is the pommel horse and he could be the difference in whether UMass wins or loses. Freshman Greg Saunders is another gymnast that Minutemen competitors will have some trouble with.

Syracuse is a young team with a lot of big tricks, according to UMass co-captain Bob Goulart. Both UMass and Syracuse are about even team wise, which will make the match close and interesting. "You'll see a lot of good tricks from Syracuse," Goulart said. "If we can hit our tricks we'll beat them."

According to Johnson, UMass should easily stay with Syracuse in the floor and still rings events. Lew Wingert, the first man up in five of the six events, is going to be counted on to start the team off in the right direction. Co-captain John McGonagle, who will be anchoring the rings, will be performing a full twist double back somersault off rings and should come up with a strong performance and a good score.

Tony Sbarra, who always comes up with good performances in vaulting and high bar, will execute a double layout (double somersault with a straight body) in his high bar performance. All around competitor Willie Stevens was rested in the Lowell meet so he could train all week for tomorrow's competition and Johnson feels Stevens is ready.

"I think he's improved at least three points," Johnson said. "I think he's going to hit his vault and be all set on parallel bar and high bar which he had trouble with last Saturday (against Army)."

Stevens will be performing a half in half out from a giant swing (backwards double somersault in a tucked position with a full twist to dismount) in his rings routine.

Bert Mathieson will be doing a roundoff with a double twist as a dismount for his floor routine. Johnson said Mathieson "didn't have enough endurance for the set (on Wednesday) but I think he will hit it on Saturday."

"Bert went 53.2 (for six events) on Saturday and I think he's ready to go even more," Johnson said of Mathieson. "He's ready to start not only averaging nine on every event, but could get a nine on every event."

For UMass, the meet will be the last one before intersession and the team is looking forward to pulling out a victory and going on to try next year for a spot in the Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastics League championships.

"The guys deserve to win," Johnson said. "They did great against Army and have been training and deserve to go out and do well. We've got a good enough team and it would be great to have a real good score."

The meet begins at 1:00 and the audience will see an excellent meet, close competition, with some good performances. Coach Johnson urges anyone who wants to see the meet to get there early because it will be crowded and UMass has a great floor team, which will be the first event.

"Everybody has been looking good in practice and warm-up," Goulart said. "And I expect a consistent performance from UMass."

A moral victory but a real loss for the Minutemen

By JIM FLOYD
Collegian Staff

STORRS, Conn. — Though statistically there was an 86-74 loss that the University of Connecticut handed the University of Massachusetts last night, morally speaking the Minutemen won some points.

Facing a 23 point deficit midway through the second period, it would have been all too easy for UMass to pack things in and head home.

They didn't.

Paced by some stellar playing by sophomore Donald Russell and freshmen John Hempel and Darryl Carter, UMass cut the deficit to only eight points at 70-62 with just over five minutes remaining in the contest.

This was not to be a night for comebacks, however, as the Huskies, led by juniors Karl Hobbs and Norman Bailey, held off the Minuteman surge and secured the final outcome.

The first half saw Connecticut slowly forge ahead behind 14 first half points by Hobbs, a product of high school basketball at Cambridge Rindge and Latin.

Connecticut's zone defense was impenetrable and their running game was equally as potent as the smaller, quicker Husky guards led numerous fast breaks against the Minutemen.

The score at the half was 49-31 in favor of the home team.

The beginning of the second half was a more-of-the same situation as Connecticut continued to run successfully while the Minuteman machine stalled.

Then came the final run.

Russell, who finished the night with 21 points (13 from the free throw line), began to penetrate the opposition's land and Hempel (20 points) was able to hit on several key jump shots to pull UMass within striking distance.

It simply was not a night for miracles, though.

Russell and Hempel were followed in the scoring column by Horace Neysmith, who finished the night with 13 points, and Edwin Green, who chipped in 10. Carter finished with 6 points and Ron Young and Bobby Braun had two points apiece.

On the Husky side of the scoring sheet, Bailey finished the night with 21 points and Hobbs followed closely with 20. Vernon Giscombe dropped in 15 points, mainly with shots from outside the Minuteman zone defense.

The Minutemen play again tomorrow when they take on Davidson College at Davidson, N.C.

Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

Craig Smith skies for a layup in Minuteman action earlier in the season.

Lady swimmers face Clark

By BOB BROCK
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's varsity swim team will be looking for their fifth straight victory tomorrow when they travel to Worcester to take on Clark University at 1:00 p.m.

The Minutewomen, who have been out of action since December 1 when they defeated Springfield 80-69, are facing a Clark team that has undergone a recent coaching change and was hurt heavily by graduation.

... a result of the coaching switch, the Clark squad was not able to recruit many swimmers this year so they do not possess the depth the Minutewomen have. On paper it looks like a certain UMass victory, but coach Valerie Turtle is cautious.

"It should be a fairly competitive meet," Turtle stressed. "We are basically going after qualifying times and people will be swimming different events," she added.

Turtle plans on juggling the UMass lineup a bit to give her swimmers an opportunity to swim alternate events. She also hopes to add to the number of UMass swimmers who have qualified for the New England Championships which are held in the Linkletter Natotarium at Springfield College in late February.

Three UMass swimmers qualified for the New Englands against Springfield. They were Marua Sweeney (100 Butterfly), Caroline Freitas (100 and 400 yard Individual Medleys) and Co-captain Jennifer Black (400 IM).

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian
Volume CXII, Issue 66 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Monday, December 13, 1982

Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

Yale Kantor, a freshman computer major from Miami, Fla., executes a difficult maneuver on the balance beam while teammates Trisha Harrity and Susan Allen look on.

General Ed. to Fac Senate this Thursday

By BECKY THATCHER
Collegian Correspondent

The Faculty Senate Ad Hoc Committee on General Education at the University of Massachusetts will present a proposal to its parent body Thursday changing the core curricula requirements.

The proposal stresses a greater sense of purpose in the general education program, better advising and an increased emphasis on undergraduate teaching, said Committee Chairman Charles Hutchinson.

"We are an ad hoc committee of the faculty senate that was charged to look at general education at the University of Massachusetts now, identify its problems, and based on that make a proposal," Hutchinson said.

The proposal has been mailed to all the students and faculty along with a set of recommendations written by the student sub-committee on general education, said committee chairman Robert Thayer. He said the committee strongly supports the proposal and communicated with the faculty committee throughout its writing.

Thayer said it is most important that everybody reads and understands the proposal in order to have an informed opinion.

"Every student has a copy in their mailbox. We have given them an opportunity to read it. It is an interesting document on an important issue," he said.

The final proposal, which would include reports made by individual working groups on each part, will go before the faculty senate sometime in February, Hutchinson said.

The only vote the faculty senate will have to make on Thursday concerning the proposal will be to vote on the motion to extend the life of the ad hoc committee on general education, he said.

The proposal is still very far from being reality though.

Hutchinson said if the faculty passes the proposal in February, it would have to be scrutinized by many other committees of the faculty and the administration before it becomes the university policy. If it is approved, implementation would be gradual.

There is still plenty of leeway for discussion and experimentalization," Hutchinson said.

The three main parts of the proposal are skills, breadth of knowledge, and integration of knowledge, he said.

The breadth of knowledge courses are similar to the present C, D, and E core requirements.

"Many of the individual courses that become part of the Breadth of Knowledge component will almost certainly be based on undergraduate courses currently offered on this campus," the document states.

"As is true with the present system, students would continue to have a diverse range of courses from which to choose," Thayer said.

Integration of knowledge component involves a freshman tutorial and a senior seminar which would offer the student an opportunity to integrate his or her education while considering a contemporary issue, the document states.

At last Wednesday's Undergraduate Student Senate meeting, the senate passed a resolution approving the ad hoc committee's goals but questioning its manner or reaching those goals.

Ellen Nylen, a member of the working group on the freshman tutorial, described it as being a cornerstone of the program, which would serve to introduce the freshman to the concept and ideals of general education.

She said that it would be a course on one issue taught by a team of teachers, approaching the issue from scientific, sociological and humanistic directions.

The idea behind the integration part of the proposal is "to try to make connections between the parts that are now presented in total isolation," Thayer said.

Nylen pointed out the uniqueness of student participation in the development of a new general education program at UMass.

"Reforms in this area are going on all over the country. Very few schools have had any student input in the whole process," she said. "The printing and mailing of the proposal is a unique outreach to get students involved and understanding what is going on."

Thayer said that students presently enrolled in the university will be indirectly affected by implementation of the proposal.

"Students that are here now will graduate under the existing set of requirements, but they will be affected to some degree by the movement to improve general education because the changes suggested include better advising and altering the faculty reward system to place more emphasis on undergraduate teaching," he said.

SBA presents development proposal for Research Institute this Thursday

By RITA MURPHY
Collegian Staff

The School of Business Administration at the University of Massachusetts will present a proposal Thursday to the Faculty Senate creating an organization devoted to researching the educational and financial aspects of the school.

According to a report issued by the Faculty Senate Program and Budget Council, the organization, which will be known as the Massachusetts Development Research Institute, "will further the teaching, research and public service missions of the university."

If the institute is created, the SBA will have the responsibility of managing its financial and research affairs according to the report.

The SBA was chosen because "The School of Business may be the most visible facet of the university with which the private sector identifies," the report states.

There are four areas of research the institute will focus on. They include: the requirements for the growth of private sector in Massachusetts; appropriate levels of public activity and the management of public policy as it relates to the business environment; factors influencing the general regional growth and development of Massachusetts; and other inter-relationships between the business environment and Massachusetts development.

UMass officials said the institute is needed to alleviate some of the overload the current research staff is experiencing.

Chancellor Joseph Duffey said the Office of Planning and Budget was so overburdened the Research Institute was deemed necessary.

"One of the things we're trying to do is create a place where data can be easily attained and is accessible to the public," Duffey said.

David C. Bischoff, acting deputy provost, said currently there is one person doing the work of three people in researching data important to the university.

"It is very important for us to get data such as student to teacher ratio figures or things like that. But, right now we just don't have the staffing," he said.

The proposed research group will have one faculty member who will serve as director of the program. This person will be released from teaching half-time during the program's first year.

World and national news

Snow finally hits and blankets most of Eastern Mass.

BOSTON (AP) — The season's first snow storm slammed into southeastern New England yesterday, dumping as much as one foot of powder, stranding Sunday travelers and cancelling both horse races and religious classes.

The snow blanketed southeastern Massachusetts and Cape Cod, with Chatham reporting 10 inches by early afternoon. In Boston, snowfall was four to six inches.

The white stuff didn't make it far enough north to improve skiing conditions in northern New England, but Rhode Island and Connecticut were braced for up to six inches.

"Road conditions anywhere from Boston south are extremely hazardous," said William Pizzano, Massachusetts public works spokesman. "In other areas north and west of the city, roadway conditions are poor."

A tractor-trailer truck jackknifed going up an icy hill on Route 18 in Weymouth about 20 miles south of Boston, and closed a section of the two-lane major artery, Pizzano reported. Police reported fender-benders and stranded motorists in southeastern Massachusetts, and motorists were advised to stay home.

Some 1,200 pieces of snowfighting equipment worked on roads in the state.

In the old whaling city of New Bedford, driving conditions plummeted during the day, but Police Captain Raymond Eugenio said few people were venturing out.

"It's a Sunday and most activities planned for the day were cancelled," he said. "So traffic is light and that's a saving grace."

The snow was good news for horses at Suffolk Downs race track, who got the day off when races were cancelled.

The storm gusted up to 35 knots on Nantucket Island, and forced the steamship authority to cancel ferries to the island, about 20 miles off Cape Cod, police dispatcher Lisa Burns said.

Small airports on Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard closed as conditions deterioriated, but Logan International Airport in Boston remained open and spokeswoman Carolyn Walden said operations there were on schedule.

Plowing delayed air traffic yesterday morning at Green State Airport in Rhode Island, but by afternoon flights were on schedule, according to controller Irvin Washington.

Al Cote, forecaster for the National Weather Service, said the storm hit southeastern New England before dawn. He predicted eight to 12 inches would fall on southeastern Massachusetts before the storm ended at midnight.

Temperatures were in the 20s during the day and were expected to drop to 5 to 10 degrees last night, and Cote said today would be sunny and cold.

New promises from Poland

AP Laserphoto

Martial law leader Gen. Wojiech Jaruzelski announces yesterday that military rule will be suspended by the end of the year.

Martial law over before year's end

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The "basic rigors" of martial law will be suspended before the end of the year, internment will end, and there will be a partial amnesty, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski announced last night.

Jaruzelski, the premier, Communist Party chief and head of the martial law council, said in a nationally televised speech that his regime hopes to end military rule "in the reasonably near future."

But he indicated that in the meantime, it would retain some of the extraordinary powers it assumed last year.

Jaruzelski spoke on the eve of the first anniversary of the day he proclaimed martial law to begin the destruction of the independent labor union Solidarity. The union was outlawed on Oct. 13, and last month, the government concluded it was no longer a threat when underground leaders were unable to rally a nationwide protest strike.

Jaruzelski said the 21-man Council of National Redemption "is of the opinion that conditions have arisen for suspending martial law. ... The suspension of martial law means that its basic rigors will cease to function before the end of this year."

The Sejm, Poland's parliament, meets Monday to take the legislative action necessary to put the military council's decision into effect.

Jaruzelski spoke only in general terms of the restrictions that would be lifted and those that would remain.

"Only regulations that directly protect the fundamental interests of the state, creating a protective shield for the economy and ensuring the greater personal safety of citizens, should remain in force wholly or in part as a temporary measure," he said. "... The national economy ... needs special protection, and the public wants the fight against crime to be stepped up."

"Anarchy will not be tolerated," he warned. "No one in Poland or abroad should labor under any illusion that the current decisions will allow a further round."

Jaruzelski made no mention of a letter from Solidarity leader Lech Walesa in which the hero of the independent labor movement listed his conditions for cooperation with the government to solve the nation's "deep and prolonged crisis."

The letter, written Dec. 4 and made public by Walesa Saturday, called for amnesty for all Solidarity members jailed or fired from their jobs for union activity. It also demanded restoration of the Gdansk agreements of August, 1980, which for the first time in the Soviet bloc recognized the right of workers to form unions independent of Communist Party control.

However, Jaruzelski said there would be a partial amnesty, and underground Solidarity activists should seize the chance to come into the open.

No aid to Poland Davies suggests

BOSTON (AP) — A former U.S. ambassador to Poland says Americans should not extend credit to that nation's military rulers, despite yesterday's announcement that authorities plan to lift martial law.

Richard Davies, who served as ambassador from 1973 to 1978, criticized Western powers Sunday for not doing more for the Polish workers' movement Solidarity.

Davies spoke at a rally at Fanueil Hall that marked a year since martial law was imposed in Poland. About 150 people gathered as snow fell through the afternoon.

"We must remain true to ourselves and our heritage in order to be true to those who are struggling to breathe free," said Davies. He called the Polish workers' movement peaceful and said Solidarity wants only more self-government at the workplace.

Lifting of martial law is a "purely cosmetic" change, Davies said.

"The West will change their tune and reevaluate their position to Poland and will espouse extension of new credits, despite the fact that nothing will have changed," he predicted.

Stanislaw Baranczak, a professor of Polish literature at Harvard University, also spoke at the rally, and said the Polish regime's principal success has been in imprisoning opposition.

Congress to extend session for issues like gas tax, MX

WASHINGTON — Despite talk of compromise on the MX missile controversy, it is becoming increasingly unlikely that Congress will wind up its lame-duck session as scheduled on Friday.

Such troublespots as the gas tax, an emergency jobs bill and the battle over the missile President Reagan dubbed the "Peacekeeper," may keep the lawmakers in session through next week or even after Christmas.

And Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., indicated yesterday the gas tax issue alone would keep Congress busy until New Year's Eve.

Early in the week, the House is expected to begin action on a stopgap spending measure that includes a $5.4 billion Democratic jobs bill which Republicans say will prompt a presidential veto.

The House Appropriations Committee affixed the jobs plan to the catch-all spending bill on Friday by a vote of 25-18, in a move by Democratic leaders to improve the chances of the jobs measure.

No one offers to help as Fall River woman drowns

FALL RIVER, Mass. — A 64-year-old woman whose car skidded on an icy bridge and plunged into a pond screamed for help as the car sank but some onlookers refused to jump into the frigid water, authorities say.

Police said divers Friday afternoon pulled Celia L. LeBlanc of Fall River unconscious from her car after she had been under water about a half hour. She was flown to the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester, where she died.

A witness said Mrs. LeBlanc screamed she couldn't swim as the car sank.

"She must have panicked," said Ovila Lizotte. "It didn't seem like she was trying to get out. I never felt so helpless in my life."

Lizotte said he couldn't swim and asked two men standing on the Water Street Bridge to jump in and save the woman.

Digest

By the Associated Press

AP Laserphoto

Actress Elizabeth Taylor listens to reporters in Los Angeles Saturday after she announced her plans to embark on a 10-day mission to the Middle East to "try and create peace between Israel and Lebanon."

Fall River cop is charged with brutal murder of wife

FALL RIVER — Fall River Patrolman Richard Murphy faces arraignment Monday on charges of murdering his wife, authorities said.

Patricia Murphy, 31, was found lying in a Fall River street Dec. 5. Her skull was fractured. Nearby was a bloody hubcap and fragments of auto glass, and authorities treated the death as a hit-and-run auto accident until an autopsy last Monday indicated otherwise, police said.

Mrs. Murphy died from "blunt force trauma" to the head causing skull fractures and internal head injuries, according to Dr. Gordon B. Robbins, who performed the autopsy.

After several days investigating, police arrested Murphy on Saturday and charged him with first-degree murder, according to Detective George Rezendes. Arraignment was scheduled in Bristol county's 2nd District Court.

In a prepared statement, Fall River police Chief Raymond E. Conroy said Murphy has been temporarily suspended from duty for five days and had his gun and other equipment confiscated.

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Scott Hersey
Copy Editor	Hannah Hosom
Layout Technician	Stephen Anderson
Photo Technician	Bradford Hammer
Composition	James Shanahan, Liz Ward, Lauri Neely, Will Hopkins, Sue Koczela, Donna Maurice

Subscription Rates

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian (USPS 333-220) is published daily Monday through Friday excluding vacations, exam periods, or holidays. Subscriptions are available for $18 at 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts. Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

Legislators not convinced students need aid

State student aid being considered

By KEVIN BOWE
Collegian Staff

The passage of student aid legislation before the state legislature could mean more than $800,000 in additional funds for students at the University of Massachusetts.

In addition, a student receiving a state scholarship will be eligible for an additional $250 grant. Under one proposal $5 million in work-study would become available, which is three times more money than the federal government cut from its work-study program.

Since last spring, a major legislative effort has attempted to increase state assistance to students in an effort to counteract the federal cutbacks and increase the state scholarship program which has not experienced any real increase in many years.

In March, six prominent legislators co-sponsored a bill to generate an estimated $29 million in student aid by using part of the cigarette tax to support a higher education assistance fund.

To compensate for the lost revenue, cigarettes would be subjected to the state sales tax.

The bill, labeled the "cigarette tax", has been stalled in the House of Representatives Ways and Means Committee for the past eight months.

Tax bills, even those funding higher education, are not popular. And it is apparent that this bill was too controversial to pass.

With little chance to pass the "cigarette tax," the Senate passed a bill shortly after the November election to provide an additional $4 million for the general scholarship program, $5 million for a new state work-study program, $3 million for graduate student assistance and an emergency $1 million fund for low-income students that are the head of households.

The major flaw of this bill; many feel, was that it did not specify were the money would come from to fund the increases.

Last Monday, the Senate acted again. They passed and sent to the House a bill that would delay the implementation of the Bottle Bill for soft drink distributors until March 31. Included in the measure is a provision that would require all unclaimed five and ten cent deposits be turned over to the state treasury. The money, an estimated $10-$25 million is to be used for student assistance.

The beverage industry will be one of the biggest opponents of this student aid proposal, said Doug Phelps, executive director of MASSPIRG.

Yesterday a full page ad, paid for by the Massachusetts Wholesalers of Malt Beverages, appeared in the Boston Globe opposing the proposal.

Student Government Association President Jim Murphy urges students to call their state representatives for increased financial aid, last week in front of the Student Union.

Aid may not pass House legislators

By KEVIN BOWE
Collegian Staff

With only three days remaining in the Massachusetts legislative session it appears that the effort to provide as much as $30 million in additional student financial aid may come up short.

Three major pieces of student aid legislation are stalled in the House of Representatives Ways and Means Committee. Ways and Means Chairperson Michael Creedon, according to a State House source, is not convinced there is strong support in the state for increasing student aid.

"It's touch and go," said one observer. "Students just haven't sent a message loud enough to gain the attention of the House members."

Given the shortness of notice and the time of year, the mobilizing efforts to pass one of the three student aid packages has met moderate success.

Last Sunday, a rumor circulated that something was going to break in the legislature concerning student aid.

Even as student orgainzers began to act, the third student aid proposal passed the State Senate and went to the House Ways and Means Committee.

News Analysis

Two major "phone trees" were set up. The Massachusetts Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators contacted its 400 members from 200 public and private colleges and universities in the Commonwealth. The members were asked to call their state Representatives and have some of the students working in their offices and student government leaders to contact their representatives.

The second major phone network was done by students at UMass. On Monday and Tuesday night of last week students from the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy and Students Advocating Financial Assistance called hundreds of UMass students asking them to call their representives.

Also a mini-rally was held on Tuesday in an effort to get students to call and the student governments at all of the public colleges were contacted.

In all at least 200 UMass students called their representatvies during the first three days of last week before House went into informal session and conducted no business.

By the end of last week sources indicated that while some representatives became responsive, the people in Ways and Means weren't persuaded by the effort.

Roxbury students favored Reid as president

By PAUL BELVAL
Collegian Staff

Student leaders at Roxbury Community College (RCC) are up in arms over the school's Board of Trustees decision not to select University of Massachusetts Director of the Office of Planning and Budget Marie Reid as the new president.

In a story published in Friday's Boston Globe, Thomas Jenkins, president of the RCC Student Government Association, said a small group of student leaders are opposed to the selection of Brunetta Wolfman, director of policy planning for the Massachusetts Department of Education, to become the college's fourth permanent president.

"We're very skeptical," Jenkins said. "We think Roxbury Community College is in a crisis situation, and because of that we feel there should be no question as to whether the president is strong enough to do the job."

Jenkins said the students favored Reid, who was one of the five finalists for the position.

"She was the students' number 1 choice," he said.

Reid withdrew her candidacy the day before the trustees voted, and Jenkins said he believes she was pressured to do this because of her dispute with Joseph Duffey, the new UMass chancellor, over his reassignment of her to new duties.

Reid said yesterday, however, she was not pressured to withdraw and did so voluntarily because Duffey had offered her a year's paid leave to complete her doctorate at UMass so her son could graduate from Amherst High School.

"I really felt that after the difficulty out here and the settlement I got, I wanted to stay here and not take my family to Boston," she said.

Reid had threatened to sue the University before the leave was granted, the Globe said.

Jenkins said if the students do not get satisfaction by the December 17 Board of Regents of Higher Education meeting, the students may ask the regents to block the appointment. Trustees' choices for presidents of state college and universities are subject to the regents' approval.

Monday, the Roxbury Community College Student Government Association voted 12-0 to draft a letter informing students that they object to Wolfman's appointment.

Wolfman said she objects to the student's disapproval.

"I happen to think that the trustees made a good choice," she said. "I have a lot of experience and contacts to bring to the position. I think I will do a first rate job."

Wolfman assumes office Jan. 1.

Literary magazine readying for spring

By PAUL BELVAL
Collegian Staff

Despite some unexpected misfortune this semester, Spectrum magazine is ready to get going again.

Spectrum, the student-run literary magazine at the University of Massachusetts, is currently accepting submissions of art, photography, poetry and prose for their spring 1983 edition.

Spectrum has had a series of setbacks it has had to overcome this semester, said Managing Editor Charles Francis Carroll.

Problems for the magazine began this year when the Student Government Association level funded the magazine despite a 15 percent increase in production costs, Carroll said.

Last semester, Spectrum overspent its $15,000 budget and has to pay $1,000 of that debt back this semester, he said. That leaves Spectrum with $14,000 to put together a magazine that Carroll said will cost them $17,250 to publish.

Carroll said he hopes to make up the difference by soliciting funds from outside sources.

The magazine has applied to both the Graduate Student Senate and the Massachusetts Arts Council for money, he said.

The magazine's troubles were compounded in October when 3,000 copies of its last edition were destroyed when the Campus Center dressing room, in which they were stored, was vandalized.

This semester, the magazine has also changed its administrative policies.

"We've gone from editorial policy making and decision making to collective decision making," he said. "We did that to open rather than narrow the parameters of the magazine. We have 25 official people and 15 unofficial people."

"It works," he said. "We have some fantastic meetings. People come away feeling they have had some input."

The theme of next semester's Spectrum is "The Social Significance of Art," a theme which Carroll said should bring about a greater interest in the magazine.

"We're trying to communicate to the university at large," he said.

Carroll said there is a possibility of a poem dealing with women's issues and a Spanish poem appearing in the next Spectrum.

"There's a large Spanish population and we should deal with it," he said. "Relevance is the key word."

Collegian photo by Jim Powers

Spectrum Managing Editor Charles Francis Carroll, Art Editor Libby Hubbard, and artist Shaw Taylor look over a submission Taylor presented for publication at the Spectrum office on Thursday.

THIS WEEKS SPECIAL

$1.51
Reg. $2.72
your choice
shampoo or rinse

Sassoon Brush
$1.27

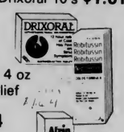
81¢
Reg $1.26
Noxzema
2.5 oz

$1.41
Reg. $1.88
1.5 oz Sure reg
$1.50 Sure unscented

Aqua Velva
4 oz regular
$1.29

Good News 2's
49¢
reg 72¢

Drixoral 10's $1.61



Robitussin 4 oz
Night Relief
$1.64

Afrin Nasal
½ oz
$1.76
Reg $3.03

also Centrum Tabs $6.91

Ultra Brite 4.3 oz $1.17

Sure & Natural 30's
$3.33

All sale items also available the Mini Store located in the Student Union

UNIVERSITY STORE

Located in the Campus Center Open M-F 9-5 Sat. 11-4

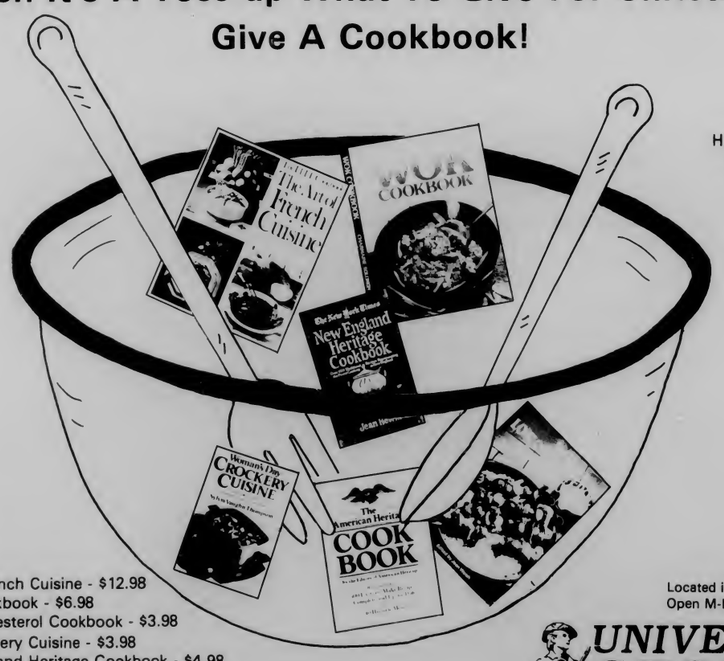
Great Gifts
Stocking Stuffers
Posters Cards
BLOUSES
Dresses, Skirts, Scarves
Earrings Crystals
Mugs Calendars
Ornaments
Vases, Boxes, Tins, Mobiles, Toys

Weeknights 9 pm Dec 10 - 23
Sundays 12 - 5 pm
Daily 10 am - 6 pm

Open 10 am - 6 pm - 9 pm Fri.
Open Sundays 12-5 p.m.
Great Gifts - Great Prices

THE MERCANTILE
AMHERST CARRIAGE SHOPS

When It's A Toss-up What To Give For Christmas
Give A Cookbook!



Hundreds of other Sale Books to choose from

The Art of French Cuisine - $12.98
The Wok Cookbook - $6.98
The Low Cholesterol Cookbook - $3.98
Crockery Cookery Cuisine - $3.98
The New England Heritage Cookbook - $4.98
The American Heritage Cookbook - $6.98

Located in the Campus Center
Open M-F 9-5 Sat 11-4

UNIVERSITY STORE

Maya Elisayoff, 18 a communications studies major.

Steven Snyder, 22, industrial engineering major from Sharon.

Free time survey released at finals

By HANNAH HOSOM
Collegian Staff

With the end of the semester nearing, and the rush to finish projects and study for exams upon us, few students remember what spare time is, never mind think how to spend it.

The Student Affairs Research and Evaluation Office(SAREO) has released a survey taken in November on what students do in their free time: where they go, and what they do Saturday nights.

The results of the survey showed — not surprisingly — that most students go to films and parties most often, followed by concerts, lectures, and theater and dance events. The survey reported the results were very similar to the results of a students activities survey last year.

Some of the answers students gave were slightly different than the standard "party" response.

"I play Donkey Kong Junior," said Steven Snyder, 22, an industrial engineering major from Sharon.

"The kid plays Donkey Kong religiously," agreed Doug Ross, 22, a senior civil engineering major. "I hang out at the Blue Wall a lot."

"And all parties, whenever possible," Snyder added. When asked about on-campus events, he said he attended the King Crimson concert.

"I went to Jesus Christ Superstar, too," he said.

Their friend, Kyle Cooper, 20, an interior design major from Swampscott who would like to do scenic design, said he goes to films, "off campus, mostly."

Does money affect what students do?

"No. I'm rich," Snyder said.

Other people disagreed. Maya Elisayoff, an 18-year-old communications studies major, said it affected her decisions, emphasizing her point by shaking her head.

"Definitely," said Valerie Meckel, a 22-year-old communications studies major who lives in Brandywine Apartments. "I usually go to parties (off campus), but if I have the money I go to local clubs, or movies at the mall."

Meckel said she also goes to the theater series at the Fine Arts Center, and that she goes to about six campus events a month.

"You can do a lot of things on campus that don't cost too much," said David Perry, a junior civil engineering major living in Brittany Manor.

"I like sports. I like going to see the UMass teams play. ROTC takes up some of my time," Perry said.

David Perry, junior, civil engineering major.

Valerie Meckel, 22, communications studies major.

SALE!

J. G. DURAND International
FINE GLASSWARE

GIFT BOXED SETS OF 6
REG. 12.50
NOW 8.95

FACES
Downtown Amherst

SUNDAY 12-5
EVERY NIGHT 'TIL 9

VISA

A Store-full of Stocking Stuffers

Student Note & Printing Service

The Note Service will be closing for the semester on Thursday 12/16 (reading day)

We will not be distributing notes during finals

*Econ 311 - Vickers
FSN 102 - Sawyer
FSN 130 - Bert
Geol 103 - Brown
HRTA 100 - Fletcher
Mgt 301 - Odiorne
Physics 100 - Kofler
Physics 162 - Chang
Psych 100B - Novak
Psych 150B - Simonson
Psych 150E - Royer
Soc 102 - Yaukey
Zoo 102 - Mange
BA - Hare
Bot 100 - Shapiro
COINS 121 - Coleson
COINS 123 - Reynolds
ComStu 150 - Davis
ComStu 150 - Cronen
Econ 103B - Resnick
Econ 103D - Duguay
Econ 103F - Norton
Econ 104 A, D - Aitken
Econ 104B - Deere
Econ 104 C - Treyz

$Nov 1 till finals

The Print Shop WILL be open during intersession.

SONY. THE ONE AND ONLY

TC-FX44 STEREO CASSETTE DECK WITH DOLBY 'C' $189

STR-VX22 AM/FM STEREO RECEIVER WITH NEW DIRECT ACCESS TUNING $215

PS-LX2 SEMI-AUTOMATIC DIRECT-DRIVE TURNTABLE $119

TX-FX66 STEREO CASSETTE DECK TWO-MOTOR DOLBY 'C' WITH REAL TIME COUNTER $285

Sound & Music Good Advice Honest Price

90-92 King Street (Rte. 5), Northampton. 584-9547
Mon.-Wed. 10-6, Thurs., Fri. 10-9, Sat. 10-5

THE SNOBS AGAINST THE SLOBS.

R Caddyshack ORION

Wednesday, Dec 15 at 7 - 9 - 11 PM
Engineering East Aud
Admission: $1.50

1982

MAKE YOUR MARK. Make it hard to erase.

Come to the 1982 Christmas Conference. For more information write or call

Glenn S. Carter
167 E. Hadley Rd.
Amherst, Mass. 01002
phone 256-0660

Sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ International

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens.
immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays, Saturdays 1-4

AMHERST CINEMA

Mon - Tues
The Great Santini	7:00
Chariots of Fire	9:00
Wed - Sat
Great Expectations	7:00
Wuthering Heights	9:00

Downtown Amherst
253-5426

PAD'S N' THINGS
DEC. - JAN. SPECIALS
25% OFF LIST
ALL DRAWING PADS
134 High St.
Holyoke, Mass.

BUYING High School Class Rings
HIGHEST PRICES PAID!
Also: Gold & Silver Coins and jewelry
Daniel Smith
256-0710
25 North Pleasant Street
Amherst

Give to The Salvation Army so others may have a happy holiday.

Women's Week

TODAY

The Women's Caucus of the Student Senate will meet at 7 p.m. in rooms 911-915 of the Campus Center. The discussion will center on short term goals, the upcoming Intersession Committee and elections for chair. All women senators are encouraged to attend.

The Southwest Women's Center will be holding study hours from 7 to 11 p.m. at the center. Coffee and doughnuts will be available.

TOMORROW

A workshop on "Video Display Terminals in the Workplace" will be held at noon in room 917 of the Campus Center. Myra Hindus and Betsey Hamilton of the Working Women's Task Force will facilitate the workshop.

The Women's Forum Against Media Violence will meet at 7:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Church, 220 Main Street in Northampton. For childcare arrangements and more information, call Karen at 584-7960 or Kathleen at 586-8575.

The Southwest Women's Center will be holding study hours from 7 to 11 p.m. at the center. Coffee and doughnuts will be available.

WEDNESDAY

A workshop on "Dealing with Holiday Stress" will be held at 7 p.m. at the Everywoman Center in Wilder Hall. The workshop, facilitated by Fern Selesnick, is sponsored by the Working Women's Task Force.

FRIDAY

A Kwanza Celebration will be held beginning at 6 p.m. at Yvonne's Place in the New Africa House. Dinner will be at 6 p.m. and entertainment will begin at 7 p.m. Entertainment will include songs, music, classical dance from India and story telling for the children. The children from Che-Lumumba school, will perform a Kwanza ceremony. The celebration is sponsored by the Everywoman Center's Third World Women's Task Force and the Third World Women's Program. All are welcome. For more information, contact Panna Putnam at the Everywoman Center at 545-0883.

Tuesday, Dec. 21

A Winter Solstice Celebration, sponsored by the Counseling Program at the Everywoman Center, will be held at 7 p.m. at the center in Wilder Hall. Winter Solstice will be celebrating the first day of winter and participants are asked to dress festively and to bring a natural giveaway, i.e. stones, feathers or herbs. Preregistration is appreciated. For more information, call the center at 545-0883.

Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

Theresa Lourde of Brookline had to stop and ask policemen Dave Morill and Joe Hebb what they were doing walking around with guns.

Newsline . . .

New students program accepting applications

The New Students Program is now accepting applications for 30 summer counselor positions. Students with positive attitudes toward university life, counseling experience, academic success and high energy levels are encouraged to apply. Applications may be obtained from the New Students Program in room 101 of Berkshire House before Feb. 11.

GIFTS

elegant gift boxed housewares

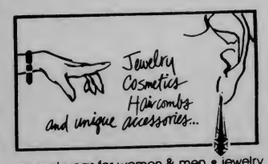
HATS, GLOVES, SOCKS & SCARVES

CANDLES
Big selection of colors, shapes, and scents

The SOAP CART

bubblebaths • moisturizers
soaps • soaps for kids
loofahs • brushes • sponges
sachets

gift boxed wine & beverage glasses



toys & games

casual wear for women & men • jewelry
cosmetics • soap cart • accessories • gifts
home furnishings • kitchen • housewares
glass & china • prints • cards • totes & soft luggage

SUNDAY 12-5
EVERY NIGHT 'TIL 9
VISA

FACES
Downtown | Amherst

A Store-full of Stocking Stuffers

Attention! Attention! Attention!
Health Watch is coming!

Do you know. . . . .

- The FACTS about herpes
- How men can prevent unintended pregnancies
- That aspirin is a drug
- How to take care of a cold or the flu
- About the hard & soft facts about contacts

This and more information can be found in the next issue of Health Watch.

Look for us because we're looking out for you!

DAYTONA BEACH
SPRING BREAK
$299.00 pp
+ 15% quad occupancy
Includes. . .round trip non-stop jet
Boston - Daytona
. . .7 nights deluxe
RAMADA INN on the beach
. . .FREE CAR rental
. . .tour escort
Departs March 5, 12, 19, 26; Apr 2
SAUGUS TRAVEL
314 Central St. Saugus, MA
617-233-8192 617-289-6227

Dastardly Dans

Mon - Thurs
$3.00 Cover
FREE DRAFT
9 - closing
50¢ Highballs
50¢ Domestic Beers
Pool Table - Pinball - Video Games
POOL TOURNAMENT TONIGHT

Cash for Books

CLOTH OR PAPER — WHETHER USED ON THIS CAMPUS OR NOT.
WE BUY ALL TITLES HAVING RESALE MARKET VALUE!

SELL THEM AT:

TEXTBOOK ANNEX

WEDNESDAY THRU SATURDAY

DECEMBER 15 THRU 18

MONDAY THRU THURSDAY

DECEMBER 20 THRU 23

9:00 AM - 4:00 PM

I D REQUIRED

EDITORIAL/OPINION

Going halfway to meet Santa

I'm not concerned with Thanksgiving any more.

Yes, I still have lots to be thankful for. I'll be even more thankful when people stop asking, "How was your Thanksgiving?" Okay. It was great. I ate a lot. Everybody was happy. The car didn't break down. The cat didn't eat turkey bones and die.

So let's dispense with the sanctimony and get down to the real business at hand: Christmas. After all, isn't Thanksgiving just an appetizer for the holiday blitz of squandering and gormandizing yet to come?

Steve Masse

Shopping centers would definitely have us think so. Has anybody noticed that the Xmas Shopping Xpress has been sneaked back to a week or two before Thanksgiving? I mean, really! I'll be weary of K-Mart Kwire Karols so long before the holidays that I'll need Frank Zappa on Christmas Eve if I want to get into a sentimental mood

Now every time I walk into a department store, I feel in a large way like Pavlov's dog — the pooch who was conditioned to slobber whenever a bell rang to herald the coming of luscious biscuits (whether the biscuits came or not). But I won't let the Pavlovian tricks fool me! I refuse to spend money simply because the music is being piped through a store's PA system.

What I have done was to re-educate my Pavlovian reflex. Instead of spending money on cue when exposed to fortieth-rate holiday music, I turn into Charles Dickens. All the windows become frosted with snow. The air becomes fragrant with gingerbread and cinnamon and a hint of candle wax. Children become greeting card angels and elves. Parents slow down in this Currier and Ives montage, smile with real patience. (The other day, I saw a six year old kid light up at the sight of Christmas tree displays. He bubbled with contagious and undiluted ecstasy, and exclaimed to his mother, "I don't believe it, Ma. I just don't believe it!")

Enough to hit the G-spot of the most recalcitrant Grinch, and it hasn't cost a dime. Yet.

But later! My middle-class mind gets me going full speed for a middle-class Christmas. I brave all manners of horrible cold and storm to find the perfect Christmas tree, forgetting all about why I want to bring something green and alive into my home. I scratch up the roof of my already abused car with the branches as I knot my fingers with the rope I intend to eventually stabilize the tree with. I drive home slowly, knowing that the hastily tied knots could fall apart at any moment. And when I get honked at, I quickly find my middle finger to stick up at somebody.

I get home to find out that all of last year's lights are tangled and burned out. When I test them, I get zapped. I swear a blue streak, race for the car and zoom out again, this time for the shopping center (where else?). Once I'm inside, the music hits me again.

This time, I go for my wallet!

I excuse the action by pleading with myself that this is totally on purpose, it isn't just a reflex to the piped-in music. I turn on my Chucky Dickens to add more credibility to my plea: Yea, though I shop in the Valley of Commerce, I will fear no vomitrocious music, for mine eyes seeith the lights that twinkleth on the tree, my gloves smelleth of pine from a hundred forests, my dog chompeth on his rawhide pork chop with the red and green ribbons.

Still, I feel something is missing. I realize that it all doesn't matter, it makes no difference whether I celebrate with or without music, whether I celebrate with or without money, whether I celebrate with or without religion (though for a lot of us that might be an improvement). What makes the difference is whether I go at Christmas this year with or without people.

It doesn't mean we have to be in love — just have a mood of human closeness. It's only going to be as magic as we make it. After childhood, you have to go halfway to meet Santa Claus, or else it's a rare visit.

Steve Masse is a UMass student

'...AND WHEN THAT LOVELY REVEREND REAGAN SAID," 'TILL DEATH DO YOU PART', I JUST WANTED TO CRY.'

Disaster for a master procrastinator

My friend Myra knows every crinkle in the wallpaper in one corner of her mother's kitchen. That's because, as a little kid, Myra spent nearly half of her waking hours standing there, facing it. Her crimes varied from fingerpainting a wall with Vaseline to lipsticking a Steinway piano keyboard fuschia. Most often, though, Myra's tendency to "dilly-dally", as her mother called it, was what landed her in the corner.

However, Myra is now a responsible UMass coed. She's always rushing from place to place, seeming windblown and pressed for time. She exudes confidence; people assume she's involved in some terribly important, top-secret project. And of course, Myra does not dilly-dally. She procrastinates, now that she's nineteen.

Elizabeth Luciano

She regards procrastinating not only as a way of life, but also as an art form. This semester is on its last leg, and so far, our master procrastinator has succeeded in delaying studying for every single one of her exams.

She begins by napping all day long, reasoning that without proper rest, her concentration won't be at its best. At around 4 p.m., she drinks coffee so that she'll be extra-alert. At 4:30, she has a few beers, so that she'll be extra-alert, but calm. Then she takes a Pop-Tart break, so the nutrients will fortify her brain cells. Finally, Myra buffs and polishes her fingernails, so the old, chipped polish won't distract her.

As they're drying, she usually drops by my room. She leans against the doorframe, ignoring the fact that I'm trying to memorize lists of obscure Latin verbs.

"Wanna watch 'M.A.S.H.'?" she asks.

"No."

"We could go to the Blue Wall."

"I'm busy."

"How about using your hair dryer to blow baby powder under someone's door?"

This is usually the time at which my blood pressure has risen by twenty points. Attempting not to burst a neck vein, I patiently suggest,

"Myra, you've got an exam soon — when do you plan to study?"

"Tomorrow morning."

"When's your test?"

"Tomorrow morning.'

"Myra-"

'I just don't want to get boring!" she snaps, "I mean, all work and no play made Jack a dull boy, right?"

Myra certainly isn't a dull woman. In fact, she was the life of the party at our dorm's semi-formal, last week. This was primarily due to her outfit: a shiny, broad-shouldered tunic in pine green. I was suprised when I saw her; she'd planned on wearing a sexy, silk dress, which had needed a quick dousing of Woolite.

She caught sight of me, waved, and veered me into the ladies' room.

"Do you like it?" she twirled around. I hesitated.

"It looks like a Heavy-Duty Glad Bag, with a hole cut in the top," I said candidly.

"It is!" she grinned, "I didn't have time to do the laundry."

"Your mother would have sent you to the corner for this," I told her.

"Yeah?" she grinned. "I'd do the same thing I did back then," she paused, "I'd spit on the wallpaper."

Elizabeth Luciano is a UMass student

Letters Policy

All letters must be signed and include the writer's address and telephone number, which will not be published. Please type double spaced at 67 characters per line. Due to space limitations and the volume of mail, we regret we are unable to acknowledge unpublished letters. All letters are subject to editing for clarity and length.

Letters

Holiday article misses point

To the Editor:

I would like to thank the Collegian for making the efforts to cover the Jewish celebration of Chanukah in their "Christmas Special" issue, Dec. 10, 1982.

Unfortunately, the article "Rededication Older than Christmas" misses the point. First of all, the title of this article implies an article about Christmas. Chanukah happens to occur around the same time of year as Christmas, but that is basically all the two holidays have in common. Chanukah translates from the Hebrew to mean rededication, however the majority of the population would not know this connection.

Chanukah is a holiday commemorating the successful rebellion of the Jews against Antiochus, the Assyrian Greek ruler of Judea. The Jews, led by the Maccabees, waged guerilla warfare to regain their independence from Antiochus who had prohibited religious freedom. When the temple, the center of Jewish religion, had been liberated and rededicated, there remained only enough pure oil to last one day. Tradition has recalled that the oil burned for eight days by a miracle, until fresh oil would again be available.

Chanukah is the festival of lights. The light symbolizes freedom and liberation from oppression.

I spent last Friday afternoon talking to the reporter. I had shared this as well as other information on Chanukah with him. In addition, I told him how many Jews at UMass plan to celebrate this holiday. I feel that that information would have been applicable to our community.

Again I compliment the Collegian on their efforts but I feel the article lacks the understanding and essence of Chanukah.

Sherri Kleinman
Amherst

Collegian

Board of Editors

John Brobst Editor-in-Chief
Ed Levine Managing Editor
Stuart Sajdak Production Manager
Joel Myerson Business Manager
Lise Zeiger Executive Editor
Michael Foley News Editor
Cris Schuster Women's Editor
Andrew Gordon Arts Editor
Phillip Jennings Black Affairs Editor
Jim Floyd Sports Editor
Kevin Fachetti Photo Editor

Associate Editors

Paul A. Basken, Ray Beauchemin, Scott Hersey, Diane Kadzis, Michelle Murray, Associate Managing Editors; Laura Shanahan, Associate Production Manager; John F. Hudson, Associate Executive Editor; Paul Belval, Kevin Bowe, Associate News Editors; Amy Jenness, Associate Women's Editor; Gus Martins, Associate Black Affairs Editor; Douglas Muise, Associate Arts Editor; Jim Powers, Associate Photo Editor; Billy Shea and Gerry deSimas, Associate Sports Editors.

Business Staff

Craig Robbins, Advertising Manager; Jeff Taylor, Jeff Hershberg, Associate Advertising Managers; Steve Savard, Associate Business Manager; Maria Karassik, Finance Manager; Paul Krause, Associate Finance Manager; Brad Hammer, Circulation Manager.

Christmas
Cards
Decorations
Christmas Gifts
Toys & Games
& Gift Wrap
at
A.J. HASTINGS
Newsdealer and Stationer
45 S. Pleasant St., Amherst

Start every day refreshed!
The Collegian

THE POWER IS WITHIN YOUR REACH.

UNIVERSITY STORE INTRODUCES THE POWER OF THE COMPUTER FOR JUST $89.99 List $99.99

Open M-F 9-5 Wed Nite until 9:00 pm
Sat 11-4 Located in the Campus Center
UNIVERSITY STORE

SCROOGE'S
Best Buys
Concourse Sale
*30% OFF Timex WATCHES

Sale Ends 12/17

*30% off Timex Sale shows you how to pinch pennies without saying 'Humbug!' to quality
Special Selection
hundreds to choose from Located on Concourse available watches may not be as depicted
* off list price
Open M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4
UNIVERSITY STORE

AN IMPORTANT ADDITION TO YOUR UNIFORM

The insignia of an Air Force nurse can mean a lot to you and your future. It shows that you're part of the Air Force Nurse Corps. A member of one of the most efficient health care teams in the world. It signifies you are an Air Force officer with the responsibility and prestige of a leadership position. It indicates you're on the track toward good pay and almost unlimited educational opportunities. If you're a nursing professional or about to complete your nursing education, why not consider Air Force nursing as part of YOUR future? From the day you're commissioned, you'll receive the pay and advantages of an Air Force officer. Consider your uniform and our future. Then make it yours.
AIR FORCE NURSING. A GREAT WAY OF LIFE

For More Details Call Sandy Price
(203) 229-8650:
Freshmen & Sophmores Call Capt. Pinkell
(413) 545-2637

AIR FORCE
A great way of life

AP Laserphoto

Norfolk State Prison inmate Mark Henderson helps to clear snowy Schaefer Stadium yesterday. Henderson cleared a patch of snow to enable kicker John Smith to boot the winning field goal as the Patriots beat the Miami Dolphins 3-0.

Inmate plows way for Patriots win

FOXBORO (AP) — The New England Patriots got some unexpected help from a 12th man — an admitted prison inmate — in their 3-0 National Football League victory over the Miami Dolphins yesterday.

Mark Henderson, 24, became an unusual hero for the Patriots when, with less than five minutes remaining, he drove a tractor equipped with a plow and power sweeper onto the field and cleared snow from a small area during a New England timeout.

Veteran John Smith then calmly booted a 33-yard field goal from the cleared spot, lifting the Patriots to their upset victory.

Henderson, who is from nearby North Attleboro, said, "I saw arms waving me out."

New England coach Ron Meyer admitted he waved Henderson onto the field, but said he would have done the same in a similar situation for the Dolphins.

Henderson was the target of post-game interviews, but said he had to make an emergency phone call because he was due back at Norfolk State Prison at 5 p.m. and probably would be a little late.

"I'm on a program from Norfolk pre-release," he said. "I have an eight-by-eight room with a roommate. They let me out for school and work-release. I have to be back by 5, but I can call them and tell them I was on TV."

Henderson said he is serving a 15-year sentence for burglary and will become eligible for parole next September. He said he was sentenced last March to the Massachusetts Correctional Institute at Concord and was transferred to the Norfolk program.

At Schaefer Stadium, he is a member of the maintenance crew.

"It's just another day in the NFL," Henderson said. "I'm not sure who told me to go out and sweep. I didn't know if it would help on the field, but I thought it would help mentally.

We Invite You to join the exclusive
Plumbley's Dinner Club
Membership $29.

Membership entitles you to:

1) 10 FREE DINNERS* 10 visits accompanied by another, also Brunch.
2) Preferred seating with member reservations
3) Enjoy Dinner and Entertainment in the recently redecorated Webster's Lounge.
4) Enjoy dining in one of 5 different dining rooms including our famous Greenhouse room, at membership rates.
5) Mailed notice in advance of all special events (wine tastings, etc.)

Membership Price: $29 (Value $125.00 plus)

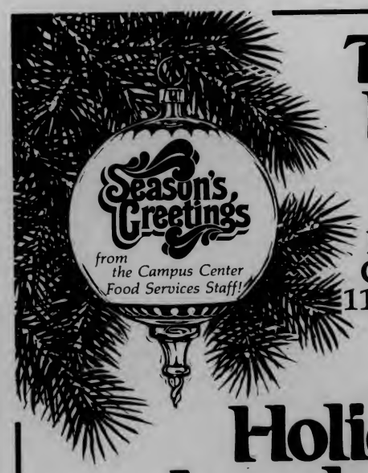
You may get your membership card now simply by mailing this completed coupon or come directly to Plumbley's off the Common and pick up your card, or phone 253-9586.
*NOT VALID SATURDAY NIGHTS.
Name
Address
City State Zip Phone
Please charge to my (check one) American Express Visa Master Charge
Account # Expiration date
Signature Check enclosed
MAIL TO: Plumbley's off the Common, 30 Boltwood Walk, Amherst, MA 01002 C
*Exclusions: New Year's Eve, Valentine's Day, Easter and Saturdays. Expires March, 1983

What a Great Holiday Gift Idea!

Dine in the casual elegance of... Plumbley's off the common ...where there's a little bit of everything for everyone.
30 Boltwood Walk • Amherst • 253-9586

Webs
1225 Sumner Ave.
Springfield, Ma.
(413)782-0748
109 Main Street
Amherst, Ma.
(413)253-2580

Practical gifts for the weaver, spinner and knitter...from luxurious yarns to hand-crafted looms to instructive classes...
Webs...the most complete source for yarns, supplies and books!



Tues. Dec. 14
Bluewall Cafeteria
11:30-1:30
Holiday Luncheon
Roast Turkey, Holiday Ham, & All the Fixings!

Arts

Pictures not so pretty

PRETTY PICTURES
Stephen Duplisea
Saturday, December 4
Fine Arts Center

By CHARLES FRANCIS CARROLL
Collegian Correspondent

Often with art reviews, we tend to find out more about the critic than we do about the artist being criticized. In my first published art review, I had to overcome the bias that I was married to the artist. Now in this my second review — this time of Stephen Duplisea's recent exhibition at the FAC last Saturday night — I must overcome another bias, a perhaps more formidable one: my own sexist hang-ups as a male. It is the quality of Duplisea's work that forces us to challenge society's exploitation of women. And quite successfully I might add.

Although Duplisea's charcoal drawings are products of his imagination, it is an imagination oppressed by the tortured images of women as depicted in the media. As such, Duplisea provides insight into the distorted view of women in male consciousness, a view anyone can easily witness themselves by picking up and glancing through a Playboy. The effort was so well done that at least a few of the many viewers misinterpreted the exhibit as pornography.

One can well understand why. Upon entering studio 445 of the FAC, I found myself surrounded by a large number of 5' by 6' sketches of larger-than-life naked women in various sexual poses. However, instead of faces, they had huge, red-lipped smiles grinning at the camera-eye of the observer, an effect created by simulated film strips on the sides of each piece. On closer examination, the seemingly simple compositions were much more complex than they first appeared, with black and blue shadows and red highlights across the knuckles which undermined their seductiveness with brutality.

Perhaps, it was the graphic sexuality of the works that caused more than one couple to leave as soon as they arrived. Perhaps it was the ambiguity over whether the sex and violence was being admonished by Duplisea or admitted by him, that elicited charges of his exploitation of women in the exhibit. This, however, was not Duplisea's intention, but an interpretation by others. And these people must accept some of the blame for this.

Duplisea explained again and again that he was attacking pornography which he said "manipulated and humiliated" women, making them objects of male abuse. He couldn't understand how people could come up to him, pat him on the shoulder, and say "good show," when it was his intention to incite them. Standing in front of a triptych of three women each respectively covering their ears, eyes, and mouth with their hands — the role usually portrayed with monkeys — Duplisea proclaimed, "Hear no evil; see no evil; speak no evil: that's the way society views women."

While Duplisea declared that he wasn't a feminist (by definition), he nevertheless called for the feminization of male consciousness-raising groups as Men Against Violence Against Women can attest.

The complicity of his show might well be tantamount to the permissiveness of pornography at large in our times. However, I think people were angry with his "not-so-pretty" pictures. But I hasten to add that we should not take our anger out on Stephen Duplisea. We should turn it instead, to constructive action against the exploitation of women in advertising and pornography in our society, our community, and unfortunately our own University.

I congratulate Stephen Duplisea for attempting so controversial and ambitious a plan, and encourage such bold displays of freedom. His show was more evidence of the resurgence of art with social significance happening at UMass.

Kaspar Hauser, who played at the Blue Wall Friday night.

Art you can dance to

KASPER HAUSER
Friday, December 10
Blue Wall

By DOUG MUISE
Collegian Staff

Let me just start by saying that as far as Amherst art bands go, Kasper Hauser is definitely tops. But then again, who are they really up against? The Scientific Americans maybe, but how often do the Sci Ams tote their brand of cheerful dissonance to the Blue Wall? Never. But that's not to say Kasper Hauser is stinko — quite the contrary. Dave Wildman and the boys are onto something here — at first I was a bit skeptical, but now I'm quite sure. The interesting part though, is going to be seeing what they do from here on in.

The new EP is a nice little start. The contents are almost as stunning as the decomposing cat on the cover, though Dave Minnehan's production work is a might hurried. Wildman's vocals are over-mixed into irrecognition, but a polished, provcative first effort nonetheless.

Hauser, if anything, is really dance band first and an art band second. All the kids really wanna do is dance and Hauser should key into this in the future. The band should spend less time trying to convince us of their seriousness with intellectualisms and more time entertaining us with their danceisms. As evinced by their Friday night performance at the Blue Wall, the danceisms are so much more fun.

This is the second time I've seen Hauser at the Blue Wall and it was quite refreshing to see Dave Wildman (keyboards and vocals) behave himself. His sickly yellow avant button-down was here again, but Wildman was not plugging the EP with the same enthusiasm (thank, God) as before. I guess with the EP having been on the rack now for a while, it was Wildman's turn to convince us not so much of its existence, but of its eloquence.

The Campus Connection be damned, I find Hauser not in the least way reminiscent of Gang of Four or the Psychedelic Furs. Hauser's sound is devoid of the discipline and politique of GOF, and Wildman's vocals don't even come near Richard Butler's stately "Fur"-osity. A cross between Ultravoxs syntho-tech keyboards and the Human League's bent for palatable dance pop would about size them up.

Wildman's maniacal synthesizer washings dominate the Hauser sound, which is then seulpted by Steve Traiger's nimble staccato guitar jabs. What is generated is a very urgent, coaxing rhythm with a biting edge that's just dandy to dance to. But definitely out of place at the Blue Wall.

I thought it was merely UPC that was to blame for the Wall's stringent booking policy of this semester. But now that I think about it, the Wall was pretty empty Friday night. Judging from the massive outpourings of students bands such as the Stompers and the Atlantics seems to inspire, maybe UMass just isn't ready for more experimental music, or maybe it's just grown tired of it. Kasper Hauser's got plenty of potential, I just hate to see them have to move to New York to be appreciated.

Fantasia fantastic

FANTASIA
Hampshire 4 Cinemas

By ADRIENNE WOLFF
Collegian Correspondent

When pressures build, tensions increase and you need to lose yourself in a land of fantasy, hop the next Northampton bus to the Hampshire Mall to see Fantasia. This animated Walt Disney production captivates its audience from the start, drawing viewers into its own enchanted world.

Fantasia is more than a fictional movie. Featured along with its fictional value is an educational aspect of the movie. The movie is composed of various animated stories which are accompanied by classical compositions, such as Beethoven's Sixth Symphony, the Nutcracker Suite, and Ave Maria.

The stories feature personified fish, mushrooms, flowers and brooms along with fairies, cupids, and centaurs.

Covered are topics such as the changing of the seasons, evolution, the extinction of dinosaurs, mythology, life and death, day and night, and the underworld.

The interplay between sounds, colors, traditional Walt Disney characters (Mickey Mouse), and familiar classical songs enthralls the sense and emotions of the audience.

The current release of Fantasia is a done-over version of the original, accompanied by an uupdated soundtrack. After seeing both the original and the remake, I can honestly say that for "the kid" in all of us, it is a movie worth seeing.

Sweeties
FINE CHOCOLATES AND CONFECTIONS
Over 100 kinds of candy
Secret Santa's
Christmas gifts and gift certificates
Quality Chocolate
Gourmet Jelly Beans
Tins, Glassware, and more
Downtown Amherst 253-5589 & 68 Main St Northampton 586-4180

ATTENTION
Collegian
Classified and Display Advertisers
Final Deadline for Semester
MONDAY, DEC. 13th,
3:45 pm no exceptions
Collegian
last day of publication Wed. Dec. 15

Arts

Too cold for Goslar

Lotte Goslar's Pantomime Circus
December 9
Fine Arts Center

By WENDY WALSH
Collegian Staff

Lotte Goslar's Pantomime Circus is a misnomer. It is neither a pantomime nor a circus.

Instead, it is a unique mixture of theatre and dance with a little pantomime thrown in for good measure. And Thursday night at the Fine Arts Center, Goslar's troop needed all the good luck it could get. The production lacked something.

It is difficult to pinpoint exactly what was missing but the signs were there — a half filled theatre audience who offered little more than indifferent applause, and the sight of dark shapes slithering toward the red exit signs during blackouts.

There was no silent intensity present as at a Marcel Marceau pantomime, and there was certainly not the excitement of Barnum and Bailey.

But the show did have plenty of talent. Kathleen Carlin is a product of the American School of Ballet and has performed with the Manhattan Festival Ballet among others. She has also toured extensively.

Eugene French's most interesting characteristic is his experience in West Africa developing an art center and dancing in a modern company.

Stephanie Godino is a veteran of many companies including the Metropolitan Opera, the Irine Fokine Ballet, and the Kansas City Ballet. She specializes in Russian, Ukrainian, and Hungarian character dancing.

Charles Haack, a third-year Goslar performer, has worked with the Downtown Ballet Company and with the Quinlan-Krichel Ensemble.

Janis Roswick, another third-year Goslar veteran, touts a long string of previous teaching, dancing, and choreographical experience.

Lance Westerguard is a graduate of the Juilliard School and has taught dance at the University of California, Connecticut College, the Milwaukee Ballet; the list continues.

Then there's Goslar herself, who at a ripe age, is still pounding the dancefloor. She was born in Germany and taught herself pantomime. She was a success on Broadway in the early forties and eventually established her own school of pantomime in Hollywood. In 1954, the first of many editions of her Pantomime Circus was created.

So the evening was definitely not short on talent (even the pianist is a product of the Juilliard School), and the company itself has a list of complimentary reviews behind it. Was it then just an off night?

True, some numbers held qualities of utter delightfulness. "Child Prodigy" had Goslar as an overstuffed, left-footed brat, studying dance under a renowned but snobby Russian dancer. "Life of a Flower" had Goslar in a tacky flower suit being rained and snowed upon, and generalized by the elements. "Splendor in the Grass" was also warming. Imagine a grasshopper, a caterpillar, a frog, and a beetle, doing a mating dance to the beats of African drums.

But there were the drags, too. I don't even remember the piece entitled "Conversation with an Ant."

For some reason, though, I tend to give this traveling troop the benefit of the doubt. The group has an excellent reputation, and who could have expected a cheerful standing ovation on the first really cold day of the year!

Lotte Goslar, the woman behind the pantomime circus.

A Nutcracker preview

New England's favorite holiday entertainment is back! The Boston Ballet will present its 19th annual production of The Nutcracker at the Hynes Auditorium in Boston December 10 through January 2.

With musical score by Peter Ilyich Tchaikovsky conducted by principal conductor David Commanday, the annual Nutcracker performances will feature the traditional "on-stage" snowfall, the breathtaking Christmas tree that grows 40 feet high, the magical characters of Dr. Drosselmeyer and the Sugar Plum Fairy, the Palace of Sweets and the celebrated Nutcracker himself.

The Boston Ballet's new principal dancer, Medhi Bashiri (pictured above) will make his debut during The Nutcracker after his December 20 arrival in Boston. Mr. Bahiri has been a guest artist with numerous companies including the National Ballet of Mexico, Ballet El Paso and Alicia Alonso's Hayanna Festival in Cuba, and was formerly a principal dancer with Ballet West.

Burma's got something to say

VS. (Ace of Hearts)
Mission of Burma

By JIM FEIN
Collegian Correspondent

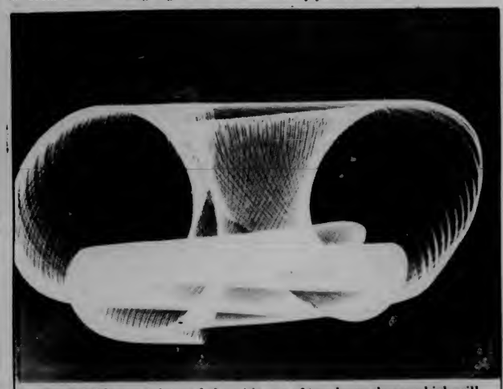
Mission of Burma is a Boston band, three and a half years in existence, who play a unique style of experimental music. Their fourth record and first full length LP, VS., is their most ambitious work to date. The combination of thought provoking lyrics, and avant-garde (perhaps a mixture of hollow pop and hardcore punk) music makes this the best local album of the year.

Mission of Burma is Roger Miller (guitar), Clint Conley (bass), and Peter Prescott (drums). The band also employs the skills of tape wizard Martin Swope. The tempo of the music varies from fast punk to slow ballad, sometimes within a song. The music sounds abrasive on the first few listens, but after repeated exposure, becomes more familiar.

VS. consists of twelve songs and the best is "Trem Two." The song begins and ends with a short, mellow guitar rhythm that is repeated throughout the song, while the bass and drums keep it interesting. "Mica," has decent harmonies and background tape loops, and leads directly into "Weatherbox," without a pause. "Einstein's Day," features several excellent transitions and a haunting bass melody (Lead melodies on bass are a common occurence with Mission of Burma). The album ends on an upbeat note with the R&B-like, "Certain Fate."

VS. only faults are a duplicity of songs and garbled lyrics. This band does have something to say, so indecipherable lyrics can be somewhat of a problem.

Mission of Burma's music is experimental and basically defies any other description. The band records on an independent label (Ace of Hearts) and is by no means commercial. Their music is played primarily on college and other "open-minded" radio stations and is, therefore, unfamiliar to most. Anybody with an open mind, or just an interest in different music, might very well enjoy this record.



Crystal Odyssey (pictured above) is one of two laser shows which will be presented over the holiday break at the Boston Museum of Science's Hayden Planetarium.

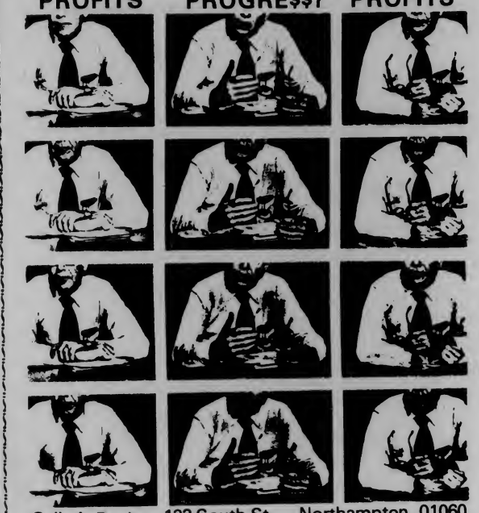
Happy Holidays

from the staff

Danny	Barbie
Bob	Dave
Keith	Walter
Jackie	Joanie
Jeff	Barbie
Steve	Debbie
Mike	Joanne
Debbie	Kim
Tim	Cliff
Gene	Freddie
Gary	Jeff
Kenny	Pepe
Matty	Bobby & Sid

POOR RICHARD$ A STEP UP

PROFITS PROGRE$$? PROFITS



Gallaria Paulo 132 South St. Northampton, 01060

Still Buying Highest Prices

Class Rings
Gold and Silver Jewelry
Coins and Stamps

See Me When You Sell

Daniel Smith

permanently located between Fotomat and Logo's

25 North Pleasant St. Amherst

Member Amherst Chamber of Commerce

256-0710

Mon - Sat 10 - 5:30

THE SALVATION ARMY

Christmas is love, hope and caring.

At The Salvation Army Christmas means "sharing."

Give to The Salvation Army so others may have a happy holiday.

ENROLL IN AMERICA'S LARGEST MANAGEMENT TRAINING PROGRAM.

Becoming an officer in today's Army—which also includes the Army Reserve and Army National Guard—requires getting the right kind of management and leadership training.

What's the best way to get it? By enrolling in America's largest management training program-Army ROTC.

In the Army ROTC 4-year program, you'll acquire discipline of mind and spirit, and the ability to perform under pressure. We call it learning what it takes to lead.

It'll pay off, too. First, during your last two years of college, when you'll start receiving up to $1,000 a year.

And, most of all, on graduation day, when you receive a commission along with a college degree.

ARMY ROTC. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Contact
James C. Mahoney
545-2321/2322

Louis FINE FOODS

76 N. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST, MASS.

Save on your grocery bills plus S&H Green Stamps!

SPECIALS VALID DEC. 13-18

TOP Round Roast $1.99 LB

SHOULDER CLOD London Broil $1.99 LB

USDA CHOICE

FREEZER SPECIALS

USDA CHOICE Whole Tenderloins $3.59 LB

USDA choice Boneless Beef WHOLE OR HALF 5-12 LB AVG $3.69 LB

WE WILL BE HAPPY TO TAKE YOUR POULTRY AND MEAT ORDERS FOR YOUR SPECIAL HOLIDAY MEALS

FRESH GLEN SHAW TURKEYS
FRESH CAPONS
GEESE, DUCKS, AND CORNISH GAME HENS

STANDING RIB ROAST
BONELESS RIB EYE ROAST
TENDERLOINS
CROWN ROAST OF PORK & LAMB

A GIFT OF FRUIT IS ALWAYS IN GOOD TASTE! ORDER EARLY!

A choice selection of fresh luscious fruits of the season is used in our fruit arrangements. Perfect as a gift or centerpiece. Choose from one of our own selections or have one custom made of unusual items to your taste!

NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS
WE RESERVE THE RIGHT TO LIMIT QUANTITIES

WITH THIS COUPON & $7.50 PURCHASE EXCLUDING COUPON ITEM & TOBACCO. LIMIT ONE
OCEAN SPRAY Cranberry Sauce WHOLE OR JELLIED 16 OZ CAN Free
GOOD DEC. 13-18 AT LOUIS FOODS LU87

WITH THIS COUPON & $7.50 PURCHASE EXCLUDING COUPON ITEM & TOBACCO. LIMIT ONE
ALL PURPOSE GRIND Sweet Life Coffee 16 OZ CAN 99¢
GOOD DEC. 13-18 AT LOUIS FFOODS LU 86

WITH THIS COUPON & $7.50 PURCHASE EXCLUDING COUPON ITEM & TOBACCO. LIMI TONE
Real Hellmans Mayonaise 32 oz Jar 99¢
GOOD DEC. 13-18 AT LOUIS FOODS LU 88

Frozen
SEALTEST Ice Cream $1.79 ½ GALLON

Dairy
HOOD GOLDEN Egg Nog $1.89 ½ GALLON

Hypercurricula

"Hypercurricula," a listing of events held at the University of Massachusetts and the surrounding area, is published daily in the Collegian. Events are listed on the day they will take place and are listed only once. Announcements MUST be submitted on "Hypercurricula" forms available in the Collegian office, 113 Campus Center, and returned by 3:45 P.M. Friday before the event is to be held. All submissions should be written in the same style as they appear in the paper.

"Hypercurricula" notices not submitted on the standard form and not submitted by the Friday before the week the event will take place will not be run. Due to space limitations, the Collegian cannot guarantee printing of all "Hypercurricula" notices. Priority will be given to UMass organizations.

UMASS HUNGER TASK FORCE MEETING — Discussion and work around the problem of world hunger and how it can be solved. Newcomers are welcome, 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., 428 Student Union

EARTH DAY — We're planning for great events on April 22, 1983. Bring your enthusiasm and help. 5:30 p.m., 423 Student Union Building.

UMASS PEACEMAKERS MEETING — Review and assessment of "In Case of Nuclear Accident." Input welcome 6 - 8:00 p.m., 811-815 Campus Center.

CEQ FILMS — Coalition for Environmental Quality Meeting. Will include two free films: "Men at Bay;" "Colorado River." 6:30 p.m., 306 Student Union Building.

WOMEN'S CAUCUS MEETING — Women's Caucus of Student Senate will meet to discuss short term goals, intersession committee and elections for chair. All women senators encouraged to attend. 7 p.m., 911 Campus Center.

FREE CONCERT: FACULTY BRASS QUINTET — Faculty members Walter Chesnut, Jeff Holmes, Laura Klock, George Parks and David Sporny will perform a program of brass music ranging from the Renaissance to the twentieth century. 7 p.m., Bezanson Recital Hall, Fine Arts Center.

OPEN AUDITIONS for ASHES and THE RUNNER STUMBLES. YOU MUST SIGN UP FOR AN AUDITION TIME. CALL 545-3490 FOR MORE INFORMATION. Productions will be presented during the Spring Semester. U.E.T. productions. 7 to 11 p.m. today and tomorrow, 204 Fine Arts Center.

UMASS OUTING CLUB MEETING — Program: "Predicting The Weather Using Clouds" with Prof. Alan McNeill of the Geography Dept. Also trip announcements and business meeting. 7 p.m., 917 Campus Center.

$5.00 off

High Notes

All balloon deliveries w/this coupon great way to say - Adios, Happy B-day, Happy New Year Good Luck on Finals call 665-7664

offer expires Jan. 31, 1983

GOING TO BE ON CAMPUS IN JANUARY? WHERE ARE YOU GOING TO EAT?

- Worcester Dining Commons will be open Lunch and Dinner - Monday - Friday
- Choose any of the five meal plans and SAVE! 20-25-30-35-40 From $70.00 To $130.00
- SIGN UP: DEC. 1-20. MEAL TICKET OFFICE - FRANKLIN COMMONS

Offering soup, sandwich, casserole, self-service salad bar, and homemade desserts for lunch. Dinner, two entrees, self-service salad bar, some vegetarian selections homemade breads and desserts. All this and more for less than you would pay anywhere in the campus area.

WHY NOT TRY IT OUT!

Alternative to an Intersession Board Plan Pay Cash or Buy Strip Tickets

Attention Collegian Staff Members!!!

All Collegian staffers are invited to an end-of-the-semester party!

 For more details,  come to the Collegian newsroom.

Christmas Gift Trims

A beautiful package makes a gift even more special!

AMERICAN GREETINGS Americard

The right card for that special person

Open M-F 9-5 Sat 11-4

UNIVERSITY STORE

Located in the Campus Center

Explore Careers in Arts Management

- Careers in Film Industry Tuesday, December 14 Herter Hall, Room 231, 7 - 9 p.m.

PRESENTERS:

Julie Levinson Film Programmer Boston Film/Video Foundation

Bruce Posner Independent Filmmaker

TOPICS: Film Exhibition Programs, Opportunities in major Motion Pictures, TV, Cable

TO REGISTER, CALL AES 545-2360.

Sponsored by the Arts Extension Service of the Division of Continuing Education with the support of the University Arts Council.

Orchard Hill Residential College Hilltop Health Club

(a holistic wellness/exercise center for Orchard Hill residents - opening early second semester)

POSTIONS AVAILABLE for second semester

-1 or 2 Graduate Departmental Assistant Positions

20-40 hours/week; $5.95/hour; no tuition waiver

- Undergraduate Internship Positions

credit by arrangement with the Office of Internships

Application packets for both positions available at Orchard Hill/Central Area Office, McIntire House, University of Massachusetts-Amherst

Completed applications due January 7, 1983

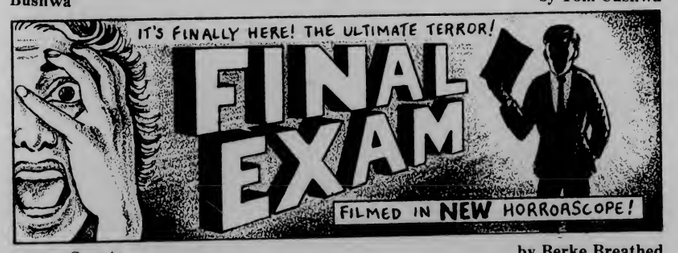
The University of Massachusetts is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

Doonesbury by Garry Trudeau

The UMass Zone by Mark Rollins

Under the Influence by M. Joyce

Bushwa by Tom Cushwa



Bloom County by Berke Breathed

CROSSWORD

Edited by Margaret Farrar and Trude Jaffe

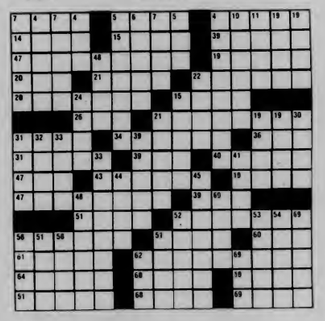
©1982 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

ACROSS

1 After Christmas event
5 Game on horseback
9 Woodcutter
14 Rugged rock
15 Beasts of burden
16 Sierra ——
17 Crooked
19 Angry
20 Diminutive suffix
21 Youths
22 Right
23 Surface characteristic
25 Ice cream holder
26 There: Lat.
27 Slow January item
31 "Let ——," Beatles song
34 Old piano
36 Exclamation of contempt
37 Polynesian
39 Enlargement: Abbr.
40 Ail
42 Outside: Prefix
43 Kind of acid
46 Colored quartz
47 Small pastry shells
49 "—— my brother's keeper?"
51 1958 Pulitzer winner for fiction
52 Hone
56 Mold
59 Wagon
60 Outside: Prefix
61 Pale
62 Free of government charge s
64 Stone marker
65 Aroma
66 Change direction
67 Threes of a kind
68 Desk appurtenances
69 Wheel shaft

DOWN

1 Observer
2 As —— (usually)
3 Milky plant liquid
4 Self
5 North Star
6 Chemical compound
7 Camera part
8 Unit
9 Estrange
10 Persian king (486-465 BC)
11 Castle feature
12 Bat
13 —— do-well
18 Make a botch of
22 Payment of a type
24 Row
25 15th cent. Venetian traveler
27 Stirs
28 British gun
29 Wide: Prefix
30 River of Hades
31 "—— a man..."
32 Cab
33 Loud noise
35 West indies volcano
38 Thinks
41 See: Fr.
44 Woolicott
45 Parliamentary reports
48 Just
50 Kind of cat
52 Englishman
53 Mexican oil gp.
54 Eject
55 —— Dame
56 Tall pole
57 Star: Prefix
58 Biblical pronoun
59 Go paddling
62 —— coat
63 Actress Le Gallienne



ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

M	I	S	T			I	D	O		A	I	D
A	N	T	S		G	R	I	N		S	L	O	P	E
L	O	O	K	A	L	I	V	E		C	L	O	S	E
I	N	N		H	A	S		A	G	E		F	O	R
		S	E	W	E	R		S	T	O	I	T
			A	M	E	N			S	H	E	E	T	S
C	O	L	D		Y	E	N	S		E	S	S	E	N
A	P	E		T	E	A	C	U	P	S		A	R	U
R	A	N	E	E		T	O	N	E		M	U	N	G
P	L	A	Y	E	R		S	E	R	E
		E	T	A	P	E		P	A	E	A	N
T	H	E		B	R	O	I	L	E	R		M	E	G
R	A	D	I	A	R		S	T	A	R	E	D	O	W	N
A	I	L	S		T	O	Y	S		A	R	E	A
P	E	E	L		E	I	N	S		M	E	L	T

Weather

Today: Mostly sunny. 20-25°. Tonight: Partly cloudy. Lows in the teens. Tomorrow: Mostly sunny. Highs near 40°.

CABLE VIDEO

10:30 - 12:00	G. Gordan Liddy speaks at the FAC
12:00 - 1:00	Jimi Plays Berkeley
1:00 - 2:00	Raw Energy (Punk Video)

WMUA 91.1

6-9	Ken Johnston — Jazz
9-12	John Marcin
12-3	Mahogony
3-5:30	MC
5:30-6	Newswatch with Lori Butterfield and Elliot Kalb
6-7	Peoples' Perspectives
7-10	Concepto Latino
10-2	Mystery DJ
2-6	Gynolyric

Collegian jobs

The Collegian is now hiring for all positions for next semester. Jobs available include Associate Managing Editors, Copy Editors, Layout Technicians, Drivers, Librarian, Training Officer, Associate News, Sports, Arts, Women's Photo and Black Affairs Editors, Darkroom Technicians, Associate Production Manager and Associate Executiver Editor.

Applications are available at the front counter of the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, and should be returned by the end of the week.

The Collegian is an equal opportunity employer.

D.C. MENU

LUNCH
Turkey Divan
Deli Ham on Water Roll

BASICS LUNCH
Garden Chili
Turkey Divan

DINNER
Roast Pork/Gravy
Spiced Apples
Beef Burgundy
Runa Salad Plate with Chips

BASICS DINNER
Tofu Nut Loaf/ Light Mushroom Sauce
Baked Cod with Lemon Slice

Sports

The men's basketball team travelled to North Carolina and took on Davidson College Saturday night. Unfortunately, the Minutemen suffered a three point loss, the third time they have lost by that margin this semester.

Dailey, a troubled man

By RUSS WHINNEM
Collegian Staff

He is a man with a troubled career. A man, that because of his own doing, has become haunted. He is Quintin Dailey, and for now he has quit the game of basketball.

Dailey requested a temporary leave from the Chicago Bulls last Wednesday, saying "extreme emotional distress" has caused him to seek psychiatric help. the fact is that the 21-year-old rookie has not been able to shed the intense pressure put upon him by people all over the country, especially in Chicago.

The pressure, though, has not the expected cries to perform like most top notch draft picks. Instead, the cries have been of vengeance and hatred. They stem from Dailey's three year probation imposed last year after his guilty plea to the assault of a student nurse in a University of San Francisco dorm room his senior year. Three charges, including attempted rape, were dropped, during the plea bargaining session.

The people of Chicago did not forget, and when the Bulls made their first pick, the seige began. Fans and non-fans made it clear they didn't feel that he should be allowed in the NBA.

The question was obviously being raised of should Quintin Dailey be threatened, shunned, and have a very promising career ended because of the assault incident. The answer is no.

Dailey has admitted, under plea bargaining, to assault. He was convicted and given a penalty to serve. The thing to do now is to let be. It's over.

The crime should not be, and was not, taken lightly. And true, Dailey is a public figure, therefore opening himself up to the spotlight. However, the incredible adversity thrown in Dailey's face has also become unjust. Anyone who saw the films of the crowd before the first Bulls' home game saw that it was no normal protest. These people wanted blood.

Is he to be chased everywhere he goes and even forced out of the NBA because of something in his past? Evidently so, according to many. A justice was passed upon Dailey and whether or not the people agree with that justice is not the point. Now he must be allowed to play on.

So now, Quintin Dailey is in limbo, not quite sure where or how to turn. Given a chance, he may show basketball fans everywhere the skills he knows best. Given more of the same treatment he has received, the loss will be unfair and tragic.

Hal Shaw, student-athlete

By GREG BOURIS
Collegian Correspondent

Throughout the past few years college athletes have been criticized as being freeloaders in the educational system. The critics of college sport feel there is no bigger hypocrisy than the term student-athlete.

The criticisms the student-athlete face are analogous to those of airplanes. It seems as though we only read about those planes that crash and not the flights that are successful.

Here at the University of Massachusetts there are several athletes who are literally student-athletes. One such person is Hal Shaw, the epitome of the student-athlete.

Shaw is a member of the men's basketball team. A feat he accomplished last season (1981-82) by being the only walk-on to make the team out of a field of about fifty candidates.

Participating in a sport that nationally has become dominated by scholarshiped athletes, Shaw is the only player on the UMass squad not receiving any scholarship funds.

Shaw is from Manalapan, New Jersey, where he captained his high school team. As a senior Shaw was voted all-district (Freehold) and second team all-country (Monmouth). He was also selected as the MVP of the Freehold Regional Christmas Tourney in 1980.

A member of the school of business, Shaw has accumulated a grade point average of 3.41. This has been accomplished in light of the fact that being a member of the basketball team requires him to practice nearly 17 hours a week, not to mention the long hours away from campus during road games.

In 1981-82, although he only appeared in six games, Shaw felt he was valuable to the team in ways beyond playing time.

"It's a team game and you need a lot of support from the players on the bench as well as from those on the court," said Shaw.

Presently, Shaw's role on the team has been limited to being more of a moral supporter. Shaw is currently suffering from torn cartilage in his left knee and will undergo surgery in January to repair the damage. This will keep him sidelined until March when he hopes to return to the squad and fulfill his role.

Shaw summed up his views of being a student-athlete faced with hard work and few rewards by stating; "I feel fortunate just to be part of the team having a chance to participate in college basketball on the division I level, not everyone has a chance to do that."

Aggies win

By JIM SAMIA
Collegian Staff

The Stockbridge basketball team continued its winning ways last week by beating Mt. Herman Academy 80-61 and Hampshire College 82-53.

In the first win, the Aggies played the best ball they have played all year. John Paquette's 29 points and Chris Storie's 22 points combined for 51 out of the 80 points. Center Craig Manning hauled in a game leading 16 rebounds and Paquette added 12 boards of his own.

The bench also contributed as Andrew Fritsche had six points and Shawn Cameron had five points.

"The key was the way the guards handled the ball," said head coach Jack Leaman referring to Peter McDonough and Michael O'Connor.

"It was the best I have seen the team play," said Leaman.

Stockbridge picked up its sixth win against no losses the following night when they beat Hampshire College 82-53. Once again it was Paquette who led the way with 28 points as the Aggies placed five men in double figures. Mike O'Connor hit eight of nine from the floor and finished with 19 points. The bench played a key role again as Dennis Houle came off the pine to get 11 points and 12 rebounds and Andrew Fritsche chipped in 10 points.

The Aggies held a 39-28 halftime lead before galloping away from Hampshire College in the second half.

Stockbridge now has a 16 winning streak and faces a big test when they travel to Greenfield Community College today.

Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

UMass gymnast Sue Allen concentrates on her technique as she competes on the balance beam during Saturdays Northeastern meet. The Minutewomen won the meet.

TIME OUT
Two TV's
Free Popcorn
Monday Night Football
Pitchers $3.00
Bud, Miller, Lite
Amherst's Biggest Little Bar
37 N. Pleasant Street

High People in High Places
UMASS SKI CLUB
Sugarbush & Aspen
Mandatory Meeting
Tues. Dec. 14 Hasbrouck Rm 20
7:00 PM
For more info 5-3437

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

Come to Collegian Office CC 113 • 8:45-3:45 Monday - Friday • Deadline is 3:45 two days prior to publication day
Cash in advance • 15 consecutive days 10 % • discount • Phone number FREE

A BAND OR DISC JOCKEY NEEDED?
Rackadisc Professional Entertainment Agency has guaranteed performances for your function 256-0739

AUTO FOR SALE
69 Firebird convertible - A classic. Needs engine work and some minor body work. Easily restorable to mint cond. BO around 2000. Call nights 256-0435

79 Triumph TR7 30000 miles AM/FM cassette exce condition best offer 253-3406

VW Superbeetle beautiful runner 1971 $1050 549-5377

73 Ford cheap reliable winter transportation 400 or BO 546-5074

1982 Saab turbo - 10,000 miles AC, sunroof, alloys wheels, PS, PB, 35 mpg highway $13,600 call 549-5686

1972 Ford Capri new exhaust and brakes 500 or best offer 253-9494

BELLYGRAMS!!
Delivered by professional bellydancer for most unusual gift. Thereza 253-7822

BROWNIEGRAMS
Three flavors send anywhere unique gift call 546-4282

COMSTU CLUB MEETING
Featuring Prof Ted Bolton followed by a Happy Hour on Tuesday Dec 14 at the Memorial Hall Lounge

DRYCLEANING
Kevin's Kwik-N-Easy Wey. Free Pick-Up and Delivery. One Day Service. Student Discount Rates. Call 584-0572

ERIKA'S BIRTHDAY
Southwest Engineering wishes Erika a happy 21

FOR RENT
Two bedrooms on bus route available January first call Lew or Ed 256-6712

2 rooms in large house on bus route Hadley $125 call Barbara 586-3936

For rent - five person house in North Amherst, contact John at 253-2819

One bedroom, five min from bus stop located in Amherst $140 January thru August 256-0796

Two openings Brittany Manor furnished ready Dec. 23 253-3588

Entire two bedroom apt in Squire Vil on bus route, available for next sem., Jan 1st 380+ 665-7195

Whole apt 2 bedroom Squire Village call 665-3032

Room available in coop house near Puffer's Pond 130+ woodstove 549-6633

House, 4 bedrooms 2½ baths, fireplace, 2 miles from campus, available Dec. 28 or Jan 28, $700. 549-6264

Amherst, Swiss Village 4 bedroom apartments $660.00 month includes all. 256-0741

Female for private room in apartment $148 Jan 1 or ASAP 253-3941

One bedroom Amherst Puffton January first $290 heated 549-4140

FOR SALE
GIFTS: Portrait Drawings/Paintings. Reasonable. Dennis, 665-2972

100% Alpaca wool sweeters handmade in Peru. Selling for much less than store cost! Great Christmas gifts! 546-5512

Sterling Silver Rings and Earrings great Xmas gift call Chip 546-9534

1970 VW for sale good condition see it to believe it call 546-6139 or 789-2144

Fuji bike, Grand Tourer SE, 81 model top cond., $200 or BO, incl. extras! phone Raf at 6-1113, anytime

KZ skis length 150 excellent cond. $55 or BO Marge 256-6612

Couch $45 or best offer 549-1184 Tina

Computer Terminal ADDS Consul 580. Excellent condition, must sell. Asking $600 or BO Call 549-3762

One-way airline ticket Boston to Dallas for male first $80 takes it Myles 6-7521

Selling Queen size Futon with bedsack matching sheets, $50, B & W TV - $15, plants, wicker - negotiable Leigh 549-5951

French Provincial Bureau 7 drawers, rock maple $160.00 549-5586 keep trying large office desk also

Ibanez hollow body electric guitar must sell, a steal at $100.00 549-5449

FOUND
Money tell me amt, where lost, around what time 546-5622

Dorm key with another key roll of film 400 Kodak call 549-5425 if yours

GREAT GIFTS
T-SHIRTS: Jagger, Costello, Stallone, and Springsteen. Plus many prints - plain and matted. $1.95 - $5.95 CC Concourse

HELP WANTED
Winter Vacation Jobs promoting Ecology, Consumer and Safe Energy. The Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG) is hiring staff for Wintersession and full-time positions. Will train. $135-225 per week. Boston area only. Elisa 256-6434

LESBIAN AND GAY
Are you Gay? Is someone you care about? Call the Lesbian and Gay Men's Counselling Collective Monday Tuesday Thursday Friday 4 pm - 8 pm 545-2645 or drop in CC 106

Notice! The Counselling Collective has moved to CC 106 near the Collegian. Same hours, same phone 545-2645

LOST
"Lost" 12/2/82 womens sweater, red, black & white, cardigan. Extreme sentimental value. Please call Kathy 549-5518 or leave at Info Desk. Reward. No questions asked.

Pale meroon jacket lost at TOC Fri please return to CC information desk

Reward for info leading to the return of my HP41CV calculator from 14th floor of GTWR on 12-3 call Kent 253-5956

MEXICAN CRUISE
Spring Break; Cancun, Cozumel, Key West, 7 days; $440 from Tampa. Optional 3 credit course. Call 549-5990 or 253-7031 or 549-4736

MOVING
Men with pick-up for hire Experienced low rates call David 253-5185

PERSONALS
Rob K Happy Birthday love you Ann

Boarders wanted spring semester females only call Sheila or Julie at 545-0939 or 253-9971

Attention
Collegian Classified
and Display Advertisers
Final Deadline for Semester
MONDAY, DEC. 13th 3:45 PM
no exceptions
Collegian last day of publication
Wed. Dec. 15

74 Galaxie 500 good winter car, just tuned $400 or best offer 549-6147

Marsha, Break out the ID - we've all been waiting for you! I hope your 20th is the best ever. Enjoy the best you can - we will have to save the "wildness" until later. The old S.B.'s of the love nest.

DeDe: Have a happy 20th. Round 2 Mt. Snow !!!!!!! Love, Ang

Dear Steve from Kansas City Kansas - Met you at lunch in Franklin, Wed. Dec. 8 over the New York Times. maybe we can do it again sometime! Give me a call. Robin 6-6505

Sherry the aroma in the hall is grounds for guessing

PIERPONT WAR Bill, Dave, Greg, Mike & Tom its a cold war now - retaliate - the feisty 4th floor females up date 546-5304

Pam Dweck - here's another Secret Santa clue for you: I am not Jewish Get it?

Final exams, memory, concentration, -success - group rates University Hypnosis Center 549-4645

UPC members and friends Everyone Who's Anyonal Come party with UPC's end of the semester bash further info stop by office and see Donna or IrmaAlice 406 Student Union

Newman Club X-mas Party Sat., Dec. 11 from 9-1 in the Newman Center front lounge. Cost is $1.50 and all are invited!

Kathie You are too nice for words but I think I can cum up with something to repay you. Your sick pal, Kalo

DISCOUNT
• Save money / pay later / pay less
• Order now (deadline is Dec. 15)
• We have all the books for the courses
• Call Scott at 6-7710 or write
Discount Books PO Box 1758 Darien CT 06820

BOOKS
Please! Call 546-6995 and wish Tom a Happy Birthday (19th) ---Thanks!

Merk B in Gorman is 19 today. Happy Birthday. Joel

Hey Goodlooking - Time is running out. Let's make good use of it! Love ya, Shorty

PROFESSIONAL TYPING SERVICE
Dissertations, thesis, papers guaranteed acceptance, reasonable Nancy, 5-0392, 584-7924

RIDE WANTED
To Milwaukee/Chicago Aree around 20 Dec. will share gas/driving. call Pam 253-7405.

Ride to Chicago around Dec 23 is desperately needed. I'll gladly share driving and gas expenses. Call Cris at 546-8150

ROOM WANTED
Females looking for a bedroom. In Brittany Manor for spring semester. Please call 549-5686. Keep trying.

Female seeks own room in house or apt 253-2294 Sheryl.

ROOMMATE WANTED
Female roommate wanted for Southwood apartment from Jan 1 on. Call 256-0630

One room available in Puffton prefer one male 549-6322

3 roommates wanted for Jan 1 and spr semester Brittany Manor call Tim 256-0606

Female wanted to share Puffton apt during int session $125/month includes heat. Preferably non-smoker. on bus route please call Debbie evenings 546-9660 or 546-9662

Responsible person for own room in Hadley apt $130 + electric 584-5045

Female - share single bedroom Puffton starting February - lease until June 549-6741

Puffton Village - 3 bdrm sublet avail. for Jan with spring option avail for 1 bdrm, M/F, call 549-0621.

Female Roommate wanted Jan spring sem. Southwood townhouse $93 + 253-3273

Own room available in house near Southwest. Starting January $110/month 549-6495

Own Bedroom in two bedroom apt in Brittany Manor Apts Jan 1 256-8388

Kosher female for one bedroom in two bedroom Southwood townhouse 253-7031

1 or 2 people for 1 bdrm in furnished 2 bedrm Colonial Vill Apt 256-0763 Brad Chase

Female roommate(s) wanted for Jan 1 townhouse apt call Pat 549-5103 eves

2 people share 1 bedroom in So Amherst apt available immediately bus route only $80! each 586-3682

Female roommated wanted Brittany manor $115/month. Heat included. Non-smoker 256-0298

1 Female wanted to rent Southwood apt over break very reasonable rent details 253-5109

Two people needed to share room in Puffton Village intersession and spring sem 549-6420 heat inc

Room in house on bus route $180 month includes all utilities. Kitchen privledges 253-2152

1 br in 2 br pond view Brandywine apt available Jan 1 & spring semester 549-6289

One bedroom for intersession and or spring great location $160 256-8447

Male to share room in house Rt 9 $127/month 256-0668

Brandywine January 1 or 2 females spring 1 female 549-4114

1 male to share large room Townehouse apts bus rte 549-4484

Moe and Larry looking for a Shemp to share Southwood Apt one bedroom open on bus route. call 256-8323 anytime $103 includes heat! We're great guys. Really

Intersession - female to share room 2 blocks from campus Mary 549-4682

SERVICES
Writing assistence. Professional. editing, references. 253-7729

Moving? Our 12 foot enclosed cube truck will help you safely move your stuff 256-0480

Past Accurate Typing $1/page please call Leslea at 584-4880.

Say Something Special Made-to-order verses cards or gifts for more info 536-8683

SKI TRIPS
Smuggler's Notch Vermont Intersession trips, only $149!! For more info call: Roberta or Steph 549-6235

TO SUBLET
Woman wanted to share room in apt Feb great deal for info please call 665-7109

4 bedroom apt on bus route Swiss Village $165 ech including utilities 253-9519

1 Bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment on bus route available Jan 1 Laurel 665-3519

Intersession rental Southeast St $180 utilities included call Bob 256-6017 after 8

Two bedroom apt available Jan 1 bus route Terianne 665-4371

2 Bedroom furnished apt on Bus Route Mark 256-0763

Room Available in house near Southwest $100 549-6495

2 br Townhouse apt on busroute Squire Village Sunderland 2-4 tennants no utilities Jan - Aug $410 call evenings 665-7930

January sublet Rolling Green $90 all utilities incl. 253-3704

If you have the place, we have the tenant and vice versa. Sublet your apartment, find a housemate FREE thru Off Campus Housing 115 Hasbrouck 5-0865

One bedroom 187 Colonial Village starting Jan 1st come by and see

4 bedroom apt has two rooms available, on bus route, $165 month including all utilities, Swiss Village 253-2251

TRAVEL
Florida - Spring Break in the sun. Includes round trip jet, hotel 8 days 7 nights on the beach in Daytona, pool party/free beer. $269 lus tax and service. Call Bob @ 253-7625

WANTED TO RENT
Looking for an apartment in Brandywine or Townhouse starting Jan Please keep trying call Lucie 546-7091 or Nancy 546-7093

Looking for heated garage within 10 mi. radius of Amherst call Jordan 542-3158

2-3 Bed apt for intersession call 546-6066.

Room available in Townhouse Apts North Amherst January & spring call 549-0038

Two bedroom apartment for int and spring semester call 546-6787 or 256-8673

Looking for a room over january only. Call Brad anytime 256-6171

Room in Colonial Village or Swiss Village Ron 549-6449

2 females seek room, rooms, or apt call anytime 546-9689

Reminder: Wednesday is the last Collegian.
Ad deadline is 3:45 p.m. today.

Sports

More Sports on page 18

Boston College bursts past UMass

By GERRY deSIMAS
Collegian Staff

It seems to be the same thing game after game. The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team needs more consistency in one area or another. Against the Boston College Eagles Saturday afternoon in the Cage, UMass fell asleep in the last six minutes of the first half and that was a major factor in the Minutewomen's 74-66 loss.

"We have to play with intensity for 40 minutes, not 34," said head coach Mary Ann Ozdarski. "In the last six minutes of the first half we scored only four points. We had tired feet (on defense)."

Massachusetts, after being down 36-24 at the half, dominated the second half and came within four points of the Lady Eagles but could not make up the 12 point difference.

Barbara Hebel, ace freshman guard, led the Minutewomen with seven points as UMass kept ahead of the speedy BC team.

A Kelly Collins shot gave UMass their biggest lead at 15-8 and Hebel scored with a three point play to give UM a 18-14 lead.

It was downhill from there for the UMass hoopsters. Offensively and defensively, the Minutewomen fell asleep as BC outscored UM 16-1 to grab a 30-19 lead. Boston College, on the strength of Marikate Kelley's 10 first half points built up a 36-24 halftime lead. UMass had been outscored 22-28 in the last six minutes.

In the second half, the Minutewomen came out with fire in their eyes and although BC led by as much as 15, UMass began to peck away at the Eagle lead.

Point guard Wendy Ward sunk a foul shot and then Karen Damminger grabbed the rebound of Ward's second shot, scored, and UM was within 10 (58-48) and BC was flustered.

"We were outstanding in the second half," said Ozdarski. "It was a entire team effort for us."

Marlene Susienka, who played very well off the bench, sank two foul shots and Rebecca Kuchs stole the ball away from BC and drove in for the score and UMass was within four, 66-62 with 2:21 to go.

However, due to some clutch foul shooting by Boston College and two crucial turnovers by the Minutewomen, BC held off the rallying maroon and white for the 74-66 win.

For UMass, it was the fourth loss in the last five games. BC has only lost to New Hampshire this year.

"BC just wanted the game more than us," said Ozdarski. "In the second half, the game was ours, but you have to play 40 minutes.

Damminger led the Minutewomen with 19 points and was followed by Ward and Collins, who each sank 10. Hebel ended up with nine.

BC was led by Sally Maderia with 13 points while three other BC players had 12 apiece.

Defensively, UMass outrebounded BC 47-38 but BC had six steals and the benefit of 23 UM turnovers.

Massachusetts, now 3-6, travels to the University of Vermont for their last game before finals.

"We will be looking for the big W. It will be a crucial game for us," said Ozdarski.

The key to the game will be to play wit. consistency and 40 minutes of intensity.

Gymwomen fly high again

By JILL LANG
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — The University of Massachusetts women's gymnastics team squeezed past Northeastern Saturday, 165.45-165.3.

Coach Ken Anderson believes there are several reasons for this narrow margin of victory. These reasons became evident as the meet wore on.

"Northeastern has somewhat antiquated equipment: they don't have a spring floor, among other things, and that hurt us in that event. Compared to a spring floor, tumbling on a floor like Northeastern's is like tumbling on pavement. That's a tough thing to adjust to."

In the vault, the first event of the meet, UMass took first and second places. Junior Robin Low scored an 8.95 with a pike sukahara: a round-off onto the horse, and a push off into a 1¼ somersault to the feet. Freshman Trish Harrity followed, with an 8.75. Northeastern gymnast Sue Mahler tied with Harrity for second place.

This meet was a topsy-turvy one: after pulling ahead with their vault scores, the women gymnasts lost precious ground in the uneven bars event.

"Our bars are different than theirs," said Anderson. "Theirs are harder to grip, and we needed to adjust."

Northeastern took the first two places in this event, with scores of 8.75 and 8.45. Freshman Sue Allen took third place for UMass, with a score of 8.4.

By this point in the meet, the scores were practically even. UMass used the next two events, the beam and floor, to inch ahead, and eventually win the meet.

The women gymnasts took first and second on the beam. Senior Karen Knapp scored an 8.7, and Low tallied an 8.55. Harrity, freshman Barbara Lord and Allen all tied for fourth place with scores of 8.25.

"We have a strong beam team," Anderson said. "And they helped pull us close. Karen (Knapp) had a one arm handstand that was pretty."

The last event, the floor exercise, brought out the two best performances of the meet, according to Anderson.

Low scored the highest mark of the meet for UMass, a 9.3 that earned her first place in the event. Knapp tallied an 8.8, and Harrity had an 8.5.

"Robin's dance was precise and flawless. Her tumbling runs were a little watered down because of the floor; but she did execute two full twisting back somis," Anderson said.

Anderson also said the vault and the beam were the high points of the meet, if only because of the adverse conditions for the floor exercise.

"We were late to the meet for a number of reasons, so the girls had to rush through warmups," Anderson said.

"We could've really blown this meet," he said, "but the girls held their heads together and just kept pushing. I am very proud of that."

The women gymnast's record now stands at 3-1.

Their next meet in January 15, at Rhode Island.

"We'll be doing some good, hard training between now and then," said Anderson.

"We are all working hard. We've lost some girls to injuries, some for the entire season, and that has set us back a bit."

Collegian photo by Bradford Hammer

Trisha Harrity gets up high off of the beam as she performs in Saturdays meet.

Northeastern tumbles past Minuteman gymnasts

By ELLEN RICHARD
Collegian Staff

Despite hours of work trying to perfect its skills, a combination of bad breaks and underscoring on the part of the judges enabled Syracuse University to hand the University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics team its first loss of the season, 256.1-249.85.

"We had some rough spots," a disappointed coach Roy Johnson said. "The scoring was really weird, really low. It seemed like the judges would throw up a high score for UMass saying 'here's your gift'."

Syracuse did have a lot of tricks — twists, turns and flips. The team impressed the judges by looking fancy with simple tricks and hitting some difficult moves. UMass had some problems with keeping itself together, however there were some strong performances put out by John Macurdy, Bert Mathieson and Peter Lucchini. The team did perform some good routines but were scored lower than was deserved.

"I thought the side horse scores were a little low," Lew Wingert, who competes in five events, said. "It seemed like they were judging an international meet instead of a college meet. They were really just being conservative."

The Minutemen lost the floor event by almost two points despite Macurdy's strong performance and consequent 9.5. Macurdy took first in the event. Lucchini came in second with a 9.1 in a strong performance. It seemed that Mathieson and Willie Stevens were a little underscored. Mathieson had a fine performance that scored an 8.45, and Stevens was confident and springy but only got an 8.25.

The hard working Stevens had been practicing all week at perfecting his moves and it was a disappointing meet for him. However, Stevens should improve for next semester through his determination and hard work.

"Willie had a real tough day," Johnson said. "He's a good gymnast and has a real professional style."

In the pommel horse event, UMass received some low scores and lost the event by one tenth of a point. Brad Sullivan got the high score for Syracuse and Mathieson came in second for UM with a good routine that earned an 8.75. The Minutemen didn't perform badly in this event considering the pressure that was on them, but again the scores were low.

The UMass gymnasts were beaten by a point in the still rings event. Mike Calcutti, who had been performing tricky moves throughout the meet, placed first in the event with a 9.1. Co-captain John McGonagle had a few problems but still came through with an 8.9 placing second.

The long horse vaulting event brought another slim loss for the men, even with Macurdy and Lucchini placing first and second respectively. Macurdy had a great vault with good elevation and confidence on his side, and scored a 9.55. Lucchini also had a good vault and landing and scored a 9.25.

At this point, UMass had a lot of work to do because it was trailing by three points in the match. The margin shouldn't have been that wide. The men were trying hard but the scores weren't coming through.

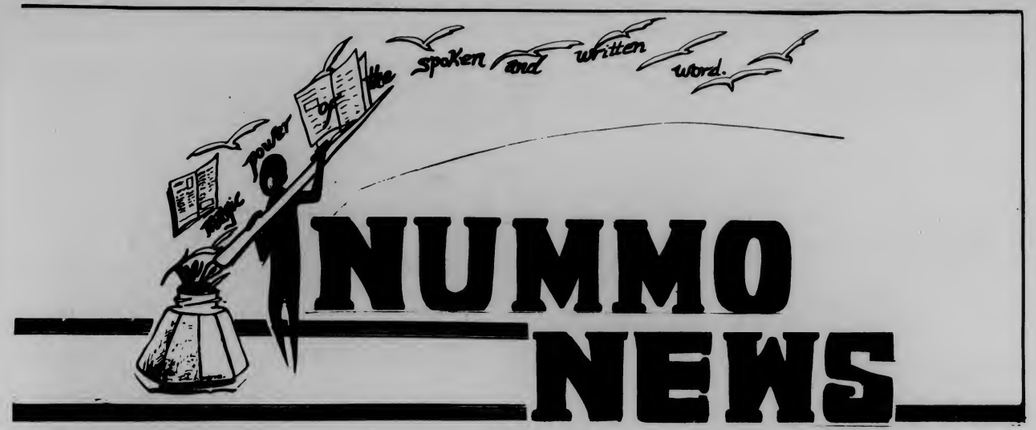
"It should have been closer," Macurdy said. "We didn't do nearly as well as we could have but we have plenty of time to train and get better."

Moving into the parallel bars, UM had some rough spots and Syracuse took the top spots. Greg Simon hit a good performance and took first with an 8.9. Macurdy and Mathieson tied with an 8.55 to get the fourth position. The effort was there, the points were not.

The Minutemen pulled through a strong high bar event but Syracuse had the meet wrapped up by then. Macurdy took second and had an individual best on the bar scoring a 9.25. Tony Sbarra placed third with a 9.15 in a good performance.

"The team had so much momentum going," a determined Mathieson said. "We fought them to the end and didn't let up at all. We'll get them. We know exactly what we have to do now and we're going to do well this year."

Johnson feels the team will improve also. The men will begin training for next semester and "try to work out the loose parts. I think we'll be all set. We have a few more areas to work out."



NUMMO NEWS

Monday December 13,1982 VOLUME 11 ISSUE 70 NUMMO News' ONLY connection with the Massachusetts Daily Collegian is for distribution.

The Meaning of King's Life In Our Lifetime

by Angela Brown

This edition of NUMMO is dedicated to the memory of Martin Luther King, Jr. in the hopes of fostering a deeper respect for King's steadfast and effective approach to the problems of his times, which have persisted into the present day. The issues of equality and integration, economic rights and justice, and the dangers now threatening world peace, being as pertinent in the 1980's as they were in previous decades, provide a strong arguement for pronouncing January 15, the date of King's birth, a national holiday.

The debate around the issue of whether to designate King's birthday a national holiday has drawn on arguements ranging from having too many national holidays at present, to the belief that King was not of sufficient significance to warrant national observation of a Martin Luther King, Jr. day.

For example, a NEW YORK TIMES editorial printed on December 10, mentions a number of questions and then goes on to state "...A Capitol (building) statue would splendidly denote his (King's) place in American history." However, a statue sitting in a Washington building would obviously have little meaning for the vast majority of Americans who would not be reached by such an action. King's place in the past assured, little would result in day to day American life in the present.

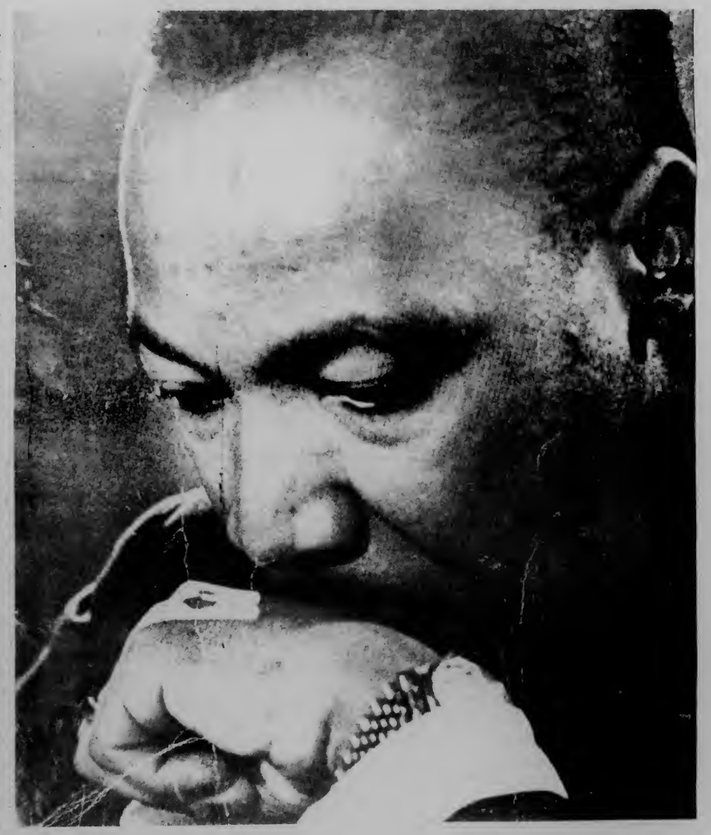
Those who focus on the narrow view of King's personal attributes, his style of leadership, or other historical obscurities, work to deny the fact that King had a larger meaning than all of this, in terms of his ability to capture the sentiments of masses of people during an era of change. This is especially true since the movement he led marked the beginning of many fundamental changes in the United States, and in the world.

Much of what King accomplished during the civil rights movement has been threatened in recent times as we can witness in the threats made by the Reagan Administration against the Voting Rights Act, in the non-enforcement of Affirmative Action legislation, and in the current military build-up which threatens the world with total destruction. For this reason the people of the United States would be making an extraordinary statement about their desire to unite the peoples of the nation, and of the world into what King noted must become a "neighborhood".

The value of King's contribution to the people of the world was recently noted in a special commemoration made by the African National Congress, the national liberation movement of South Africa.

On the home front, here at UMass, the staff of DRUM Magazine has recently announced that its next edition will be dedicated to Martin Luther King, Jr., and that DRUM will be stepping up the campaign to have King's birthday made an important officially observed holiday.

All readers of NUMMO are invited to participate in this important and growing movement. There are numerous forms of participation; Stevie Wonder's annual march on the Capitol is one (see related story). Events are held on the UMass campus every year in honor of King, and contributions from the wider community are always welcome (see annoucement as planning for MLK week '83 is already underway). The more obvious activities such as writing ones representative urging support of the legislation is always appropriate, however, more important may be the effort to remember King and his efforts in everyday life, and perhaps bring a little brotherhood and sisterhood into the center of ones attention from time to time. During this holiday season, a time of reunion with family and friends, is a good time to think on these things.



KWANZA

by Keith Johnson

Photo by John Wright

Kwanza is a celebration which is practiced by African-American people which is similar to that of Yam which is celebrated on the African continent. It's translation means "first" for "first fruits."

The celebration of Yam revolves around the harvesting of the first crops of the year. Members of the community would come together bringing what each had grown that year and contribute it to the great feast. There would be dancing and singing with plenty to eat and drink as the entire community enjoyed the coming of the new year.

Here in the United States, descendants of those African people who celebrated Yam have created a celebration that although similar, is more particular to the African-American experience. The celebration of Kwanza takes particular aspects of the African-American experience and blends it with certain African traditions to create a very spiritual and enriching celebration.

The idea of Kwanza was created by Black Studies scholar Dr. Ron Maulana Karenga. It was first practiced in the Los Angeles Black community during the late sixties. He believed that Black people should not involve themselves with the traditional holidays that come at this time of year, for today's society has made them more commercial and have taken the true meaning out of them. Also he believed that Black people should celebrate something which had more relevance to them and their history.

An example of the blending within this celebration has to do with the fact that the language associated with this celebration is Swahili which is used in many parts of Africa. Also the colors of the celebration that are used are red, black, and green. Red stands for the blood of our people that has not been shed in vain, Black is for the color of our skin and jobs we have to do, and Green is for the land of Africa, our youth and new ideas. These colors come from the flag of African-American liberation that was created by the great leader Marcus Garvey.

Kwanza is based on seven principles entitled Nguza Saba. They are Umoja(Unity), Kujichagulia(Self-Determination), Ujima(collective responsibility), Ujamaa(Cooperative Economics), Nia(purpose), Kuumba(creativity), and Imani(Faith). All represent different aspects of life which members of the community should try to live up to during the upcoming year.

Decorations should be put up a week before the 26th of December using the red, black, and green color scheme. The main table should have as its center piece, a straw basket with mixed fruits and vegetables. The floor or a small table should be used to place the Mkeke(straw mat) of which the Kinara(candleholder) is placed on. The Kinara is surrounded by ears of Muhindi(corn) and Zawadi(gifts). The Kinara has spaces for seven mshumaa(candles) which represent the Nguza Saba seven principles. Three of the candles should be red, three green, with the middle candle being black.

Each night of this week the Kinara should be brought to the dinner table. The first night one mshumaa should be discussed by children if possible because all this is really for them. The second night two mshumaa should be lit with two principles discussed and so forth.

The seventh day, January 1st, is the day of Kwanza. On this day all the candles are lit in ceremony. Zawadi is exchanged and the community enjoys a great Karamu(feast). There is music, dancing, and celebration just as is done in the homeland of Africa.

Many people make the mistake of saying that this is a Black Christmas type of celebration. Others believe that it is a traditional African ceremony. They are mistaken; it is a relatively new tradition created for the African-American experience, that should be spread across our entire community. We hope that you take this tradition back home with you and share it with your loved ones.

Nummo News wishes all people a Happy Kwanza and may you live with the spirit of Nguza Saba in the upcoming new year.

A Message To Black College Students

By Stevie Wonder

THESE TIMES we live in are not full of hope. Yet they are not hopeless. We must uncover the formula for survival that will refresh our souls and uplift our spirits. We must search for the harmony that records the rhythms of our brothers and sisters. The world is but an orchestra and we've all been blessed to be members. Life is an assignment from the Creator. We are all responsible for the production of life's symphony which will ring out harmony among us all. We are charged with the understanding that each of us has an instrument and we must play it carefully.

We can make the music of life work. We can clothe ourselves with peace toward our neighbors. We can feed ourselves vitamins of love. We can equip ourselves with an understanding and sensitivity that encourages us to take that extra minute to smile at the children, or help a victim in distress. For if we do not, we bear the responsibility for this off-key music.

Know that your responsibilities as a Black college student in the symphony of life are awesome tasks. Your assignment is to create positiveness when negativity prevails. Your assignment is to embrace your brother and sister even when distrust pervades the soul. We are all responsible for maintaining the legacy when many would prefer it to be gone, but if we tune the instruments of love we can make this symphony work.

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. knew the musical score. He had the music and many willing players. He encouraged us to seek greater tone, better clarity and higher range. We need his formula to help the musicians perform. We need his spiritual energy, which is still present in this space and time, to inspire us toward postures of peace and love.

Our conductor, Dr. King, left an unfinished symphony. We must finish it for him by adding those notes and chords that created the harmony of love and life. There is no doubt that we need a national holiday on January 15th. We need a day to celebrate our work on the unfinished symphony. We need a day where we can have a dress rehearsal of solidarity and understanding. We need a moment to come together in the spirit of a man who taught this world how to love. We need a day of unity because our symphony is music that all lost hearts will hear.

Join me in Washington, D.C. on January 15, 1983. Celebrate the day that will be the beginning of endless days of human harmony. Embellish upon the universal chord that joins in with the eternal symphony.

Let the performance of this symphony of love begin with our collective expression of respect and commitment to Dr. King, the conductor of this great symphony, and to all those we honor in the name of love.

"We'll make the dream come true, because our hearts tell us so."•

Reprinted from "The Black Collegian" December 1982/January 1983 issue.

•"HAPPY BIRTHDAY"
Hotter Than July- album
Copywright 1980
Black Bull Music, Inc.

The Big Six of Jazz II

by Keith Johnson

Photo by Ed Cohen

Saturday night some of the finest musical talents in the country teamed up with Max Roach in the Fine Arts Center for a concert entitled, "The Big Six of Jazz II".

The show featured Richard Davis on bass, Billy Taylor on piano, Slide Hampton on trombone, Jimmy Heath on saxophone, John Hendricks on vocals and Max Roach on drums. This performance was a reunion for these fantastic musicians who rarely have an opportunity to come together for a performance such as this. Yet all these men have come up together, helping to develop some of America's finest music.

The performance was a benefit for the Fletcher Henderson Memorial Scholarship Fund. All of the musicians feel good about the scholarship which helps music students here at UMASS. Jimmy Heath stated that "there should be more scholarship like this."

The audience had an extra attraction with the addition of John Hendricks' wife Judith on vocals and Ray Copeland on trumpet. Judith Hendricks occasionally performs with her husband using her voice to recreate the big band sound. Ray Copeland, who is a professor at Hampshire College, said that "out of respect I came here." Professor Copeland was encouraged to come onstage by John Hendricks whom he knew from their work with Theodeus Monk and Randy Weston.

In talking about the music Jimmy Heath said that it needs more exposure-"people don't know enough about the music." Billy Taylor, who has received his doctorate from UMASS and is coming out with a new book entitled "Jazz Piano" said that the "music business has not done it's job" in promoting Black Classical music. John Hendricks who is a living legend of vocal jazz, said that the art of "scatting" is not being pushed as well as it should be. He criticizes artists such as DeeDee Bridgewater and Al Jarreau for not following the true traditions of the art. But he added that their advisors are not guiding them along cultural lines.

In talking about the new computerization of music today, Max Roach, who has a Ph.D in music, stated that he doesn't mind computerization. "Whatever helps Black people get out of these problems is good. But if it lulls us to sleep it's bad." Ray Copeland added that "we as musicians should have some control over the people that run the computers."

The concert itself was excellent, with all of the musicians exhibiting their own particular talents in their solos. Max Roach delighted the audience with his wellknown highhat routine. This concert was another example of the fact that this area is a haven for some of the very best Black Classical music that can be found.

Billy Taylor will be back in the spring with a rare performance with his trio and the Springfield Symphony Orchestra. Dexter Gordon will be featured in the next Duke Ellington Music Series concert on Thursday, April 14,1983.

Black Studies Forum Held at Amherst College

by Keith W Johnson

This past Thursday, the Five College Black Studies Seminar Series presented a panel discussion in Amherst College's Gerald C. Penny Memorial Cultural Center, entitled "Students Look at Black Studies."

The participants consisted of Rodney Williams of Amherst College, Greg Anderson of Hampshire College, and Philp Pasley of UMass. Rudy Jones of Umass and Leslie Cohen of Amherst College both class of '74 , also participated. All were Black Studies majors with a concentration in political sicence, except for Mr. Anderson whose area was news and information. Both alumni received their masters degrees after graduating from the area schools.

The panel gave the audience their perspective on Black Studies and what they believed was its importance. All the panelists agreed that Black Studies gives one persoanl satisfaction. Philp Pasley stated that it "opened his eyes"; Rodney Williams believes it to be "inspirational", and Mary Jo Newborn said it contributes to her own intellectual development.

The students spoke highly of their respective departments. Rodney williams was thankful that the Black Studies departments provides a strong Black institutionalized structure within higher education. Greg Anderson favors the unorthodox academic structure of Hampshire College which enables him to create projects such as his African News Service which airs on various radio stations in the area. Mary Jo Newborn added that Smith College will next semester,for the first time provide five coursed on Black women. Philp Pasley stated that the UMass faculty is like a family and shows concern for all Black students.

Commentator Mark Riley of Amherst College led the general discussion and stated that these programs "were not handed to students" but were taken at a time of rage and struggle. Many people in the audience emphasized that students should take advantage of the resources of Black Studies departments and other related programs. Both Rudy Jones and Leslie Cohen admitted that their work at WMUA and WAMH helped them in securing radio positions after graduation. Mr. Jones worked at a Boston radio station adn Mr. Cohen worked at an NBC affiliate radio station in Chicago.

Many students in the audience were not Black Studies majors. Many were business, economics, and french majors. But all showed that they believed that Black Studies was important. Mary Jo Newborn told the audience that at first she thought that math and science majors were not studying areas of relevance. But she later realized that Balck people should also study to be doctors and engineers to ensure that there won't be any unsrupulous tests like the syphillis "study" at Tuskegee. But as Rudy Jones stated, "never take Afro-Am majors lightly". They are just as articulate in academic as other students.

Mr. Jones empasized that Black Studies must be encouraged in high schools and junior high schools also. Mitch Smith, a Black Studies graduate of UMass class of '81, is involved in youth development thru the A Better Chance program (ABC). And uses Black Studies in his program. He added that today's society controls the minds of today's youth but that Black Studies is the key to opening up Black minds.

In dealing with the future, Lesley Cohen stated that Black Studies prepares one to enter the business world. It allows you to know yourself, something that is important to you if you are going to sell yourself to an employer. He added that it also allows you to know the outside world that you are going to work in. But what is most important is that you understand the struggle of Black people.

Finally it was said that the mood of Black students has changed since the time of the sturggles of the 60's. Black enrollment is declining in the Five-College schools and they are looking for Blacks more in the pre-schools. The struggle is changing and students must take advantage of the resources that were fought for. As Mitch Smith stated, "Black Studies is the Key".

Excerpts from King's Speeches

"Now there are one or two other things that I want to say about this student movement...something about what it is a revolt against. On the one hand it is a revolt against the negative peace that has encompassed the South for many years. I remember when I was in Montgomery, Alabama, one of the white citizens came to me one day and said...that in Montgomery for all of these years we have been such a peaceful community, we have had so much harmony in race relations and then you people have started this movement...you have destroyed the harmony and the peace that we once had in race relations. And I said to him, in the best way I could say and I tried to say it in nonviolent terms: We have never had peace in Montgomery, Alabama, we have never had peace in the South. We have had a negative peace, which is merely the absence of tension; we've had a negative peace in which the Negro patiently accepted his situation and his plight, but we've never had true peace, we've never had positive peace, and what we're seeking now is to develop this positive peace. For we must come to see that peace is not merely the absence of some negative force, it is the presence of a positive force. True peace is not merely the absence of tension, but it is the presence of justice and brotherhood. I think this is what Jesus meant when he said, "I come not to bring peace but a sword." Now Jesus didn't mean he came to start war, to bring a physical sword, and he didn't mean, I come not to bring a positive peace. But I think what Jesus ws saying in substance was this, that I come not to bring an old negative peace, which makes for stagnant passitivity and deadening complacency, I come to bring something different, and whenever I come, a conflict is precipitated between the old and the new, whenever I come, a struggle takes place between justice and injustice, between the forces of light and the forces of darkness. I come not to bring a negative peace, but a positive peace, which is brotherhood, which is justice, which is the Kingdom of God.

"And I think this is what we are seeking to do today, and this movement is a revolt against a negative peace and struggle to bring into being a positive peace, which makes for true brotherhood, true integration, true person-to-person relationships. This movement is also revolt against what is often called tokenism. Here again, many people do not understand this; they feel that in this struggle the Negro will be satisfied wsith tokens of integration, just a few students and a few schools here and there and a few doors open here and there. But this isn't the meaning of the movement, and I think that honesty impels me to admit it everywhere I have an opportunity, that the Negro's aim is to bring about complete intergration in American life. And he has come to see that token integration is little more than token democracy, which ends up with many new evasive schemes and it ends up with new discrimination, covered up with such niceties of comlexity. It is very interesting to discover that the movement has thrived in many communities that had token integration. So this reveals that the movement is based on a principle that integration mustbecome real and complete, not just token integration.

"The students have developed a theme song for their movement, maybe you've heard it. It goes something like this: "We shall overcome, deep in my heart, I do believe, we shall overcome,"...And something within me said, now how is it that these students can sing this? They are going down to Mississippi, they are going to face hostile and jeering mobs, and yet they could sing, "We shall overcome."...Then something caused me to see at that moment the real meaning of the movement. That students had faith in the future. That the movement was based on hope, that even though the arc of the moral universe is long, it bends toward justice....But we shall overcome. That is the basis of this movement, and as I like to say, there is something in this universe that justifies Carlyle in saying no lie can live forever. We shall ovecome because there is something in this universe which justifies William Cullen Bryant in saying truth crushed to earth shall rise again....With this faith in the future, with this determined struggle, we will be able to emerge from the bleak and the desolate midnight of man's inhumanity to man, into the bright and glittering daybreak of freedom and justice.

--Excerpted from address made to the annual meeting of the Fellowship of the Concerned, November 16, 1961, entitled "Philosophy of the Student Nonviolent Movement".

"I want to say to you...as we talk about 'Where do we go from here,' that we honestly face the fact that the Movement must address itself to the question of restructuring the whole of American society. There are forty million poor people here. And one day we must ask the question, "Why are there forty million poor people in America?" And when you begin to ask that question, you are raising questions about the economic system, about a broader distribution of wealth. When you ask that question, you begin to question the capitalistic economy. And I'm simply saying that more and more, we've got to begin to ask questions about the whole society. We are called upon to help the discouraged beggars in life's market place. But one day we must come to see that an edifice which produces beggars needs restructuring. It means that questions must be raised. You see, my friends, when you deal with this, you begin to ask the question, "Who owns the oil?" You begin to ask the question, "Who owns the iron ore?" You begin to ask the question, "Why is it that people have to pay water bills in a world that is two thirds water?" These are questions that must be asked.

--Excerpted from the presidential address to the Tenth Anniversary Convention of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Atlanta, Georgia, August 16, 1967.

"...Our world is as a neighborhood. We must all learn to live together as brothers or we will all perish as fools. . .

"There are two challenges to America. The challenges are racism and poverty. In a few weeks a few of us are coming to Washington to see if the will to meet these challenges still lives among us. We are going to bring those who have known long years of hurt and neglect... We're coming to engage in dramatic, nonviolent action.

"We are coming, and we will stay as long as we have to. . .

"We will suffer and die if we have to. For I submit, nothing will be done until people put their bodies and souls into this.

--Excerpted from his last speech the night before his assassination.

OPEN LETTER TO THE COMMUNITY

As the Fall semester comes to a close, I think that it is worthwhile to make some observations about what has transpired and look ahead. The m ost obvious development concerns the 'Changing of the Guard' in the Office of Third World Affairs. Tony Crayton has moved on, hopefully to bigger and better things. And now, I, Gary Lee, have been thrust into the position of filling some very big shoes. However, I too have very big feet and in the future I plan to work with the allies in our community and step on our adversaries.

To be honest, the situation of people of color in the University community is not very good. But, realizing this, we all have a responsibility to work hard to improve our situation. Black Homecoming Week was a moderate success. However, there was extensive ignorant backlash from some of the more regressive elements among us. Make no mistake about it, Black Homecoming is here to stay.

The Third World Theatre Series once again proved to be a shining light of cultural expression and we look forward to its presentations in coming semensters.

On a down-note however, we must face the reality of institutional racism as manifested in the cases of Elizabeth Rawlins and Marie Reid. Outgoing, lame duck and lame-brained Governor Ed King has seen fit not to renew the term of Sister Rawlins on the Board of Regents. Therefore, people of color have no representation on this Board and this is an ominous development. Also, it must be noted that the Board of Regents is now entirely composed of business leaders; white males, one and all. The case of Marie Reid is a very complex one. As Budget Director of Office of Planning and Budgets, she is the top Black administrator on this campus. Without going into any specifics concerning her case, it must be said that an amazing lack of sensitivity was demonstrated by the new Chancellor Duffey in downgrading her position. Regardless of any excuses or feeble explanations which seek to trivialize the Chancellors actions, we must recognize the situtation for what it is; and that is the loss of influence by Blacks in the current administration. It disturbs me that so much has been written against Ms. Reid by people who seem to be jealous of her position as well as "just a little bit" prejudiced. However, there also has been an amazing lack of support expressed by the Black community for Marie. Any attack upon one member of our community is an attack upon the community as a whole. For those who support Ms. Reid, we say stand up and be counted. For those who disagree with her position, we can only hope that you will see the light.

Our student organizations are suffering from general apathy. They need to be strengthened both for the good of our community and also to withstand attack. The Third World Caucus of the Student Senate needs people. We need to support the activities that are sponsored by our organizations. The situation is urgent. Next semester there will be events taking place for Black History Month, Martin Luther King Week, the Black Muscians Conference and the Third World Theatre Series. These programs need you participation and support. We urge everyone to get involved. Finally, I would like to send out Kwanza greetings to everyone; particularly A.J. Wynder. I wish everyone strength in their last minute semester endeavors and a restful intersession. We look forward to seeing all of you in February.

Rember :"If you don't Know, Learn
If you Know, Teach."

Yours In The Struggle
"The General"

Third World Affairs Office

The Office of Third World Affairs (OTWA), established in 1976, provides a professionally staffed office for advice, advocacy and organization of the Third World student community, and acts as a resource center compiling and disseminating information on Third World issues to Third World organizations and students. The Office is also concerned with the maintenance, security and prosperity of Third World students' interests in the social, academic and political issues of student life.

SPOTLIGHT

The Office of Third World Affairs' principal goals are to organize and encourage Third World student participation on the Student Senate and within the various student organizations. It also advises these organizations on recruitment, and budgets, and monitors their progress or failure. The Office strives to provide a strong advocacy presence to ensure that Third World issues and problems are properly addressed. The Office is also interested in any activity, program, coalition, or alliance with non-Third World students which enhance our position, ensure diversity of perspectives, and encourage non-Third World people to understand Third World concerns.

The Office of Third World Affairs is coordinated by Acting Director, Gary Lee. Mr. Lee is a recent alumni of UMass who has been very active in numerous student organizations throughout his undergraduate years. Therefore he is very knowledgeable of Third World student interests on campus.

In talking to Gary Lee, he asks Third World students to get involved in the various student organizations. He advises students to "use your resources such as the Placement Office, New Africa House, Everywoman's Center and the Third World Caucus." He also urges all students to ensure the continued vitality of the community.

For more information contact the Office of Third World Affairs.

Excerpted from an article in the North American Congress On Latin America (NACLA)magazine.

El Salvador's War

At night, in San Salvador, firefights can be heard in the distance but they last only a few short rounds. The black-outs are more disconcerting. They happen nearly every night and seem to last longer each time. The guerrillas can blow up generators and powerlines much faster than the U.S. aid dollars arrive to replace them.

But aside from these inconveniences, the war is barely felt in the capital, where the traffic snarls and the streets are bustling with activity. Not many soldiers are in sight. It's certification time and the government is on its best behavior.

What can be felt is the general despair. We see it in the eyes of the Relatives of the Disappeared- young women in their late teens or early twenties who ring our rooms at the hotel and ask timidly if we can spare a moment to talk. One tells about her younger brother, dragged from his bed in the middle of the night by uniformed soldiers, and never seen again. Another slips me a piece of paper folded many times. Back in my room, I try to decipher what appears to be a map leading to a secret torture center in a government building- and a scribbled line saying "We know that Ramon is being held here."

Sadness, mixed with irrepressible hope, is in the eyes of a priest from a working-class barrio of the capital. Ninety percent of his parishioners have had a family member killed or disappeared in the last two years. And because his barrio is poor, and because it is assumed that all poor people are subversives, it is the scene of house-to-house searches and many more disappearances each week.

At a refugee camp run by the Catholic Church, two thousand women, children and elderly men are crammed into a schoolyard now filled with makeshift tents. With nothing left to lose, these people speak freely of the military campaigns that forced them to flee their homes in the north, in Chalatenango, Morazan and Cabanas. The children, in disturbingly calm voices, recall the vivid details of the day one young girl watched soldiers set fire to her house, or the day an 8-year old boy found his father slain in the fields.

These refugees, and those we visited in two other camps in San Salvador, are captives to the war. They have no identity papers; they cannot leave the camps for fear of being picked up by the security forces; they did not vote in the March elections. With remarkable discipline, they make the best of the time they must spend waiting for the war to end. Adults and children are learning to read and write; everyone works in the communal kitchens and talleres, where the refugees make fishing nets for sale or simple furnishings for their tents. No one in the camp is idle.

Just outside the capital, handkerchiefs pressed to our faces, we visit a clandestine cemetery that everyone knows about: El Playon. White skulls stand poised on a bed of black lava that stretches from the road to the green hills in the distance. Some of the bones still have flesh clinging to them; a fresh load of bodies had been dumped the day before.

The staff of NUMMO News have excerped this article as a reminder to students that along with leaving the Pioneer Valley , we often leave behind our social and political concerns, there are those who can not. Many people in the world have to live, on a day to day basis, with the horrors of the social and political instabilities of their countries.

Israel : The World's Problem

A Statement of the Organization of Arab Students at U Mass

On Saturday September 18, it became known that in the preceding 36 hours thousands of Palestinian and Lebanese civilians were cold-bloodedly slaughtered in the refugee camps and hospitals of West Beirut under the sponsorship of the Israeli Army. The Israeli Army occupied Shatila) then unleased upon these civilian populations the rightist-Christian Militias, which they have been arming and training for years.Both the Israeli occupation of West Beirut and the war against the Palestinian civilians in the camps are in direct violation of the agreement arranged by the U.S. envoy Philip Habib for the withdrawal of Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) forces from the city. Men, women, and children, mothers clutching their babies, were lined up against walls and machine gunned in the back. Some were mowed down as they ran, others were dragged out of their homes and stabbed many times over. The wounded and sick were butchered in their hospital beds (NBC Nightly News, September 18). The Israelis insured the success of the massacre by cutting off all communication with West Beirut and forbidding Western correspondents access to the camps (CBS Radio News, September 18).

The Israeli civilian war in Lebanon began with its invasion on June 6, 1982. After weeks of land, air, and sea saturation bombing in which Israel murdered over 17,000 people in Lebanon, mostly civilians, destroyed whole cities and razed 6 Palestinian refugee camps to the ground, Israel arranged the masssacre of at least 1,500 survivors. After denying proper shelter or access to medical aid for over 80,000 Palestinian women and children who survived their blitzkrieg in the south of Lebanon, the Israelis appear to be now arranging the slaughter of the Palestinian civilian survivors of Beirut. After rounding up 9,000 Lebanese and Palestinian civilian males in the south and detaining them in concentration camps in Israel and near Tyre, the Israeli army rounding up thousands of civilian males in Beirut and held them in the sports stadium near the Shatila and Sabra camps "interrogation " and "elimination ". the Israeli agenda in Lebanon is clearly genocidal.

WHY IS ISRAEL PERPETRAITING GENOCIDE IN LEBANON?

The primary purpose of Israel's invasion of Lebanon is to enable it to carry out its plan of annexing the West Bank and Gaza. While most nations of the world recognize the Palestinian people's right to self-determination and calls for the establishment of an independent Palestinian state, Israel has escalated its policies of repression and annexation in these territories. In recent months, this escalation has seen the killings of unarmed Palestinians by armed Israeli settles under the eyes of Israeli soldiers, and the dismissal of elected mayors and city councils because of their support for the PLO. The Israeli attempt to create an alternative leadership in the West Band and Gaza has been a complete failure. Israel has been unable to smash the resistance of the Palestinians, their insistence on an end to the occupation and their support for the PLO. Israel faces the reality of a Palestinian national movement, the reality of internationally recognized Palestinian rights, and the very real existence of a Palestinian people: A Palestinian people, moreover, capable of organizing themselves into the various political, social and cultural institutions that constitute the PLO; a people that proved themselves capable of resisting and standing up to an imperial Israel waging a complete war against civilians with the most advanced arsenal of anti-personnel weapons yet devised. Yet Israel invaded West Beirut with its ground troops only after the PLO was evacuated from Beirut and, was unable to defend its civilian population in the refugee camps.

The other long standing objective behind the Israeli operation in Lebanon is two-fold. First, the annexation of southern Lebanon and the establishment of Israeli control over the waters of the Litani River in the region. Second, the creation in Lebanon of a weak client state ruled by the extreme right-wing Phalangists, armed and trained by Israel. The election of Israel's candidate Bashir Gemayel which at first seemed to meet Israeli hopes for a speedy 'Peace Treaty' with Lebanon were dashed when Gemayel declared that there would be no peace treaty with Lebanon for the time being, and his insistence on establishing a strong central government over all of Lebanon. Ariel Sharon accused Gemayel of "betrayel" (Davar, September 10).Gemayel's elimination on September 13, left a power vacuum in Lebanon and conveniently provieded the Israelis with the pretext to storm West Beirut and execute the next phase of its strategy for the area.

In a savage war drive that has known no constraints, not recognized moral or human standard for its conduct; which indeed has exhibited only the utmost contempt for any standard of human decency, the Zionist state stands revealed. Not often since the defeat of the Nazi state in 1945 has a single state unleashed such a massive campaign of death and destruction. Israel in its relentless drive to satisfy its territorial expansionism has demonstrated its ambitions to become the dominant 'superpower' of the Middle East. Israel has ushered in a new age of aggression which treatens to engulf that entire region, and indeed the world, in global war.

Archie Shepp at the Ironhorse.

Photo by Chris Hardin

Women of the Calabash

by Chris Hardin

The recent performance in Northampton by the African percussion ensemble, Women Of The Calabash, proved to be an outstanding addition to the variety of music available here in the Pioneer Valley. We may thank Variations for bringing to our attention the percussionists, Madeleine Yayodele Nelson, Tiye Giraud, and Pam Patrick. It was a refreshing reminder that there is always some new explorations to be made in music and that sometimes, as in this case, it can be most fruitful.

Women Of The Calabash was formed in N.Y.C. in 1979 by Ms. Nelson as an ensemble to feature Shakere and other percussion instruments. Shekere are calabash, or gourds, with beads strung around them to provide additional resonance or rattle. Ms. Nelson had been playing with several dance companies and saw a need to bring Shakere forward from its usual role as an instrument of accompaniment. Percussionists would then have more opportunities to play music, and they would also be able to further develop the potential of the instrument. It was usually the case that the range of sounds possible from Shakere were largely unnoticed or unappreciated because of the overpowering sound of the drums in ensemble playing.

In their performance, the group played a variety of musical forms with a focus on various calabash instruments as well as other percussion instruments, stringed instruments, and voice. Much of the music was drawn from African sources-chants and folksongs of Nigeria, Zimbabwe and Ghana, a love song and wedding song from Ethiopia, and from the men of South Africa, a song entitled, "Let the Women Be Praised." There were also original compositions such as "Gap Tooth" and a tribute to Bob Marley, "Keep On Jamming" by Ms. Giraud. Throughout, the music acquired a distinctive New York Afro-American accent.

The featured instruments, some from African and some hand-made in the U.S., included plain calabash drums, Shakere, Calabash Water Drums, Calabash three-stringed harp, Mbira, Berimbau, Bailaphon, Songba Drums, Egyptian Shepherds Flutes, Whistles, and Guitar. The largest instrument of the evening, which was finally assembled by 8 o'clock, was the audience itelf. At one point, we were divided into three large choirs for our contribution to an example of polyrhythms.

During the performance, Ms. Nelson provided commentary on the origin of the music and instruments, and a description of playing technique. Those in attendance will agree that we shared a very special evening of musical entertainment and education. Watch and listen for Women Of The Calabash. I'm sure they will be returning soon.

Photos by Chris Hardin

Tiye Giraud and Pam Patrick perform on

ANNOUNCEMENTS

NUMMO
Wishes Everyone a Happy Kwanza
and
A Joyous New Year

NUMMO
Les Desea Felices Pascuas
y
Prospero Año Nuevo

KWANZA CELEBRATION

The Third World Women's Task Force and the Third World Women's Program of the Everywoman's Center are sponsoring a Kwanza Celebration on December 17th at Yvonne's in the New Africa House at UMass. Dinner will be provided by Yvonne at 6 PM (cost $3.50). Entertainment begins at 7 PM and is free.

Entertainment included songs, music, classical dance from India, and story-telling for the children. The children of Che-Lumumba School will also perform a Kwanza ceremony. Pinata too!!!

All are Welcome

BLACK MASS COMMUNICATIONS

Student Union, Room 602, University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-2426

FALL SCHEDULE

DAY		NAME	SHOW NAME	TIME
Sunday		Les Correia	Soft n Easy	2:00-6:00am
		Rev. Pearson	Glory Road To Gospel	6:00-10:00am
Monday		Mere Music	BMCP	7:00-6:00am
		Ken Johnston	On Air Live-Jazz	6:00-9:00am
		Gus Martin	" " "	"
		Mahoghany	Free As The Wind	12:15-9:00pm
		Merritt Anthony	BMCP	3:00-5:30pm
	*	People's Perspective	BMCP	6:00-7:00pm
		Concepto Latino	BMCP	7:00-10:00pm
Tuesday		The General	BMCP	12:15-3:00pm
		Elliott Andrew	Urban Contemporary	10:00-2:00am
Wednesday		Theresa M	BMCP	6:00-9:00am
Thursday		Rev. Pearson	Glory Road To Gospel	2:00-6:00am
		Concepto Latino	BMCP	6:00- 9:0...
		D.R.	BMCP	3:00-5: ...pm
		Kari Nziri	Pan Afrique	10:00-2:00a...
Friday		Mark Elliot	BMCP	2:00-6:00am
		Mark Semedo	New Jazz Experience	6:00-9:00am
		Concepto Latino	BMCP	9:00-12:00noon
		Carl Lowman	Rhythm Section	12:15-3:00pm
Saturday		Reports In Color	w/Bettina Henry	6:00-7:00pm
		Daddy Neil	Funk n Thangs	7:00-10:00pm
		Frank Oglesby	Frankin O's Odyssey	10:00-2:00am

KEY
* Public Affairs
 Rev. Pearson included, not a part of BMCP
 News

TOTAL HOURS OF PROGRAMMING 58½

Keep on listening to BMCP on WMUA, 91.1 FM and hel... us keep Black Music alive!

Announcements policy: All announcements must be submitted in writing by the Friday before date of issue.

All unsigned editorials represent the views and opinions of NUMMO Staff

NUMMO STAFF

ROXANA BELL	CO-EDITOR
ANGELA BROWN	CO-EDITOR
BRYNNE CLARKE	LAY-OUT EDITOR
MITRA SAMINI	GRAPHICS EDITOR
JOHN WRIGHT	PHOTO EDITOR
JENNIFER BAYNE	RESEARCHER
DONNA DAVIS	BUSINESS MANAGER
DEANNA MCRAE	ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT
KEITH JOHNSON	REPORTER
TRACEY BRYANT	REPORTER
MAX SENIOR	PHOTOGRAPHER
ED COHEN	PHOTOGRAPHER
SHEILA SMITH	PHOTOGRAPHER
CHRIS HARDIN	PHOTOGRAPHER

MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian

Volume CXII, Issue 67 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003 (413) 545-3500 Tuesday, December 14, 1982

Collegian photo by Kevin Fachetti

Brayn Aravjo, a senior art student, carries his bike home from near the Fine Arts Center because someone stole his wheels.

Prince grievance may have effect on all dorms

By TIM MACPHEE
Collegian Staff

The ultimate outcome of the grievance filed agianst the University of Massachusetts Housing Office on behalf of Prince House residents for "Unbearable conditions" during the summer may have implications in terms of protecting the rights of all dormitory residents as tenants.

The outcome of the grievance should be made public today. The grievance charges that Prince residents were unduly inconvenienced without proper notification during renovation work over the summer.

"We have been wrongfully deceived about the magnitude of the renovations of the bathrooms in Prince and the amount and degree of noise we could expect as a result of the work," said Betty Fleishel-Lewis, post-graduate Prince resident.

"We have also been subjected to excessive amounts of dirt throughout Prince because of the said renovations. Our rights as tenants were grossly violated by Housing Services," Lewis said.

The Housing Office maintains that the students were previously notified and that the inconveniences were unplanned.

"Students were told prior to paying fees and a notice appeared in the summer school catalog," said Janet Chevin, Housing Services accountant.

"Housing offered the students 20 percent of their first summer session room fees and they were also given the opportunity to move to Coolidge tower, equipped with security," Chevin added.

Lewis said that most students did not move because housing would not be responsible for damages or help them move back into Prince when the renovations were completed.

She also noted that students who did not take summer classes did not see the catalog.

Last May, most Prince residents received letters from Gerald Quarles, housing assignment coordinator, saying, "It is anticipated that there will be little or no inconvenience to summer residents, however, a certain amount of noise from time to time should be expected if you are in the building during work hours."

"We received notification, but not of the magnitude of the work to be done," Lewis said.

"No one came in and said 'prepare yourselves.' It was messy and dirty in here. When jackhammers were used, you couldn't see from one end of the corridor to the other. One student even got a masonry chip in his eye," she said.

Another grievance Lewis maintains against Housing Services concerns a waiver she alleges the office wanted the students to sign.

"In order to get money back from Housing, we were asked to sign a blanket waiver which would have waived all rights to redress anything else that may have happened in Prince," she said.

Quarles offered the students 20 percent which would come out to $43.40 of the total $217 summer session housing fee, according to Lewis.

The students felt this amount to be inadequate for the amount of hardship.

Murphy's proposal to eliminate SGA co-presidencies not expected to survive

By MARK J. WELCH
Collegian Staff

An amendment to the Student Government Association (SGA) bylaws which would prohibit two students from sharing the office of SGA President stands little chance of passing at tomorrow night's Student Senate meeting, according to a number of SGA officials.

The amendment was proposed last week by current SGA President and Student Trustee Jim Murphy, who is the first person to occupy the office alone since the early 1970's. The current bylaws permit either one or two persons to serve as SGA President, Treasurer or Speaker, but only the President's office has been divided in the past.

In justifying the proposal, Murphy said in a letter to the Senate that some past "co-presidencies" have been "marriages of convenience" and had resulted in unqualified officeholders. In past cases where both candidates were qualified, Murphy said that personality clashes often resulted.

Murphy also cited conflicts betwen the SGA President and the Speaker of the Student Senate, noting that the two jobs have similar responsibilities.

Other SGA officials agreed that there have been problems with the co-presidency in the past, but said the amendment was inappropriate to deal with the problems.

"I don't feel it is appropriate now because it encourages less participation," said Tom Ahern, chair of the Governmental Affairs Committee of the Student Senate. Ahern noted that "Its (the amendment's) initial goal is to keep numbers in the bureaucracy down."

Ahern would not comment on what recommendation his committee would make on the amendment, but SGA sources said the committee would reject the proposal. The Governmental Affairs Committee must make a recommendation on all proposed bylaws changes.

Sheila Sullivan, chair of the SGA Public Policy Committee, also opposes the proposal.

"It seems that we should be expanding, not decreasing, activities and duties," Sullivan said. "I think Jim (Murphy) was able to carry out the job as one person, but not everyone has that dedication."

A general concern within the SGA seemed to be that one person might not be able to handle all the responsibilities of the SGA Campus President and of Student Trustee. When the position is divided, those duties are separated.

If the amendment had been linked to a transfer of responsibilities, some support might have been found, according to SGA sources. The importance of the Student Trustee has often been overlooked, one official said.

All SGA officials contacted thought the proposal would be rejected by the Senate overwhelmingly.

Orchard Hill Observatory moving back to the big time

By RUSSELL TURNER
Collegian Staff

A new astronomical telescope is scheduled to be installed in the University of Massachusetts Orchard Hill Observatory Thursday. The 16-inch reflector telescope will replace an older one which has not worked for more than eight years.

"This will give students, or anyone who is interested, an opportunity to use an observatory class telescope," said Kenneth E. Cole, president of the Five College Astronomy Club.

The telescope, which will be fully operational by Feb. 2, stands seven feet high and weighs 1000 pounds. It will be lowered into place in three pieces with a crane, said Gary F. Clinch, secretary of the Astronomy Club.

Its installation marks the beginning of a new era for the Astronomy Club and for observational astronomy at UMass. It is intended for the use of the Astronomy Club and undergraduate astronomy majors and it may be used in some undergraduate astronomy courses, said Clinch. The only optical telescope comparable to it in the area is the 24 inch reflector at Mount Holyoke College.

The Astronomy Club will be using it to photograph stars, planets and galactic structures, to search for comets and asteroids and to conduct nova surveys. It will also sponsor general observing nights for the public and will teach anyone who wants to learn observatory techniques, said Clinch.

"We also want people who have interesting ideas for projects to come to the club with their ideas and there's a 90 percent chance that they'll be able to do them," said Cole, a senior physics and astronomy major.

In the 1970's, interest in astronomy at UMass shifted away from optical towards radio astronomy. After a long period of inactivity, the Astronomy Club has mounted a semester-long campaign this fall to make a working telescope available on the UMass campus again, Cole said.

"For six years there had been a 20-inch telescope which was inoperative," said Cole. The original telescope, which was installed in 1962, was an exact one tenth scale model of the 200 inch Mount Palomar telescope, built from scratch. By the 1970's it began to deteriorate and when the clock drive essential for orienting the telescope broke down, there was not enough interest in the UMass community to get it working again, he said.

"We put a lot of effort in two years ago to get the 20 inch fixed but we were over our heads, we failed," said Cole. The 20 inch mirror also had a crack in it which was not serious but limited its useful life, he said.

The Astronomy Department has had a working 16 inch telescope in storage for ten years, however, for lack of an observatory to put it in. Although it has less revolving power, "it proved to be more worthwhile to put in the 16 inch telescope," said Cole.

The old telescope was removed last month and scrapped, except for the mirror which is in storage. The installation date for the new telescope was originally scheduled for next semester but it was moved up by four months under pressure from the Astronomy Club with the help of Robert L. Gray, business manager of the physics and Astronomy Department, who helped to organize Physical Plant, and Ron Zissell, the Five College Astronomy Technician, who is in charge of the technical details, Cole said.

Once the observatory is operational next semester, it will have access to a lot of astronomical equipment as well as a machine shop and a darkroom for doing astro-photography, all belonging to the UMass Physics and Astronomy Department, said Clinch.

"I think this is a good opportunity for the undergraduate astronomy and physics majors to actually get out of the books and into the field," said Clinch. "This is going to open up a new door on the astronomy program at UMass."

World and National News

AP Laserphoto

Part of a crowd of about 20,000 women from the United States, Britain and Western Europe link hands Sunday to protest the deployment of nuclear cruise missiles at the U.S. Air Force base in Greenham Common, England. Hundreds of women were carried and dragged from the base yesterday as they tried to blockade it in the second day of protests organized by the Women's Peace Movement.

Martial law vote Saturday

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Parliament will meet Saturday to give formal approval to relaxing martial law at the turn of the year, but the government warned yesterday that the military will remain in power and can reimpose martial law if it deems necessary.

Legislation to formalize the government's decision to ease martial law was introduced to the rubber-stamp Parliament, or Sejm, yesterday, and government press spokesman Jerzy Urban said it would reconvene Saturday to give its final approval.

He added that "martial law will be suspended on Dec. 31," apparently at the stroke of the new year.

But Sejm, President Henryk Jablonski, the nominal head of state, denounced "still existing underground centers and hostile external forces," and warned that the military government could clamp down again if new protests break out. The foreign branch of the banned Solidarity union in Brussels, Belgium, dismissed the impending ease in military restrictions as "cosmetic." It charged the government was trying to placate the West and encourage its reluctant bankers to extend more credit.

Two exiled Solidarity leaders, Henrik Stodolny and Wojciech Rudnicki, said in Stockholm that the union underground would continue "slowly gnawing away at the establishment...to teach Poles how to maintain resistance."

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said in Rome that the Polish government's plans were "words, but nothing of substance." He said they were not enough to warrant lifting the U.S. sanctions imposed when martial law was declared exactly one year ago.

President Reagan had offered to lift the sanctions if the government ended martial law. But, when asked if the White House found developments in Warsaw encouraging, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said in Washington, "I wouldn't say so."

Common Market Leaders also said they did not intend to lift their sanctions against Poland immediately.

Lech Walesa, the Solidarity leader released from internment last month, had no immediate comment, but has said he will speak Thursday at a memorial service in Gdansk for scores of protesters killed in 1970.

It was not clear if he would risk violating martial law bans on public gatherings, or would choose instead to speak at an indoor religious service at St. Brygidas Church, the parish for the shipyards where Solidarity was born during strikes in the summer of 1980.

Marriages between business and higher education increasingly popular

NEW YORK (AP) — You won't find them in the gossip columns, but here are some of America's hottest new couples:

Washington University and Monsanto Corp. Harvard Medical School and DuPont. Carnegie Mellon University and Westinghouse. Cornell University and Exxon.

In the past year, business and higher education have wooed and won each other as never before — as partners in research probing into lucrative, occasionally controversial new fields such as industrial robots and genetic engineering.

Scores of universities have entered into research contracts with big business, in partnerships that both sides believe will help America regain preeminence in world markets such as automobiles and electronics.

Industry support of campus research, less than $100 million in 1975, is over $200 million this year, and is predicted to climb to $600 million a year during the 1980s, says Edward E. David, Jr., president of the Exxon Research and Engineering Co.

But the growing ties between campus and corporation have also raised ethical and legal questions — serious enough to have caught the attention of Congress.

Hoping to stave off federal regulation, several hundred industry and campus officials will confer tomorrow and Thursday in Philadelphia under the banner, "Partners in the Research Enterprise."

"We want to establish broad guidelines for campus research before Congress gets in and sets ground rules arbitrarily," says Dr. William H. Danforth, chancellor of Washington University in St. Louis.

Dissident Indians ask court to settle dispute over lands

BOSTON — A group of Indians who claim tribal leaders are about to bargain away their ancient home, now the summer resort town of Gay Head, called on a federal judge yesterday to hear their case.

"In our opinion, these alleged tribal leaders are not protecting its assets, its land, its fishing rights, its beaches and water," said Bob Hahn, attorney for the dissident Wampanoag Indians.

The faction brought suit against their Tribal Council and Interior Secretary James Watt, among others, in December 1981 when it appeared tribal leaders were about to reach a settlement on an eight-year-old land claim suit.

The group says the entire town of Gay Head — 3,400 acres — is theirs. The Tribal Council has indicated it would settle for 430 acres.

"There are so many things in the settlement package that have been left out. It doesn't even include the right of way to land," said Thelma Weissberg, a member of the dissident group.

Suspect in Tylenol extortion case captured in New York

NEW YORK — James W. Lewis, charged with attempting to extort $1 million in the seven Chicago-area Tylenol poisoning deaths, was captured here yesterday by federal agents, police said.

Lewis, 36, the subject of a nationwide manhunt, was arrested at the midtown annex of the New York Public Library at 40th Street and Fifth avenue, police said.

Authorities said a library clerk recognized him from a wanted poster, called authorities, and Lewis was arrested without incident by two federal agents about 2 p.m. as he was reading a listing of newspapers around the nation, said Kenneth Walton, deputy assistant director of the FBI.

"He offered no resistance. He admits to his identity," Walton said at a news conference, noting that Lewis was unarmed.

Asked whether Lewis made any other statement, Walton said "No comment."

"There is no evidence that directly links him to the Tylenol murders," Walton added.

He said Lewis would be charged with extortion and unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. He said he expected prosecutors to move for Lewis' extradition to Chicago.

The whereabouts of Lewis' wife, Leann, 35, was not known, although she was believed to be still in the New York area. In Chicago, Charles Kitchel, special agent with the Illinois Division of Criminal Investigation, said he understood Mrs. Lewis planned to surrender.

Digest

By the Associated Press

Governor files bill for $30M deal for auditorium, garage

BOSTON — Gov. Edward J. King filed legislation yesterday to implement the state's acquisition of Boston's Hynes Auditorium for the Massachusetts Convention Center Authority (MCCA).

Earlier, David M. Bartley, administration commissioner, released independent appraisals that valued the property at from $31.5 million to $38,765,000.

King said his bill was submitted at the request of the MCCA. He said: "This perfecting legislation transfers the Boston Common Parking Garage to the authority and clarifies the bonding powers of the authority necessary to accomplish the successful expansion of the Hynes Auditorium."

The governor said he rejected MCCA requests for special exemptions from the conflict of interest and anti-trust laws.

The creation of the MCCA and acquisition of the auditorium and garage, following independent appraisals, were authorized in the so-called Tregor law he signed June 29.

One hundred ninety-one years of Blue Laws face the end

BOSTON — A bill to repeal the colonial Puritans' blue laws against Sunday retail sales received final approval in the Massachusetts Senate yesterday and went to Gov. Edward J. King.

After a half hour of debate, the Senate voted 19-9 on a roll call to remove the last major vestige of the state's "common day of rest law," dating back to 1791. The House gave final approval last week.

It is the first time the Legislature approved a proposal allowing year-round Sunday sales by retail stores. Liquor stores would still be prohibited from opening.

King, through spokesmen, has said he hasn't made up his mind on the issue, but he said last week that "philosphically, I am opposed."

Several business groups and, for the first time, labor support the repeal; church groups are strongly opposed.

"I think he may very well decide to veto this measure," Sen. Edward P. Kirby, R-Whitman, said, arguing against the change.

Compromise death penalty bill criticized as unconstitutional

BOSTON — A compromise death penalty bill, criticized by opponents as unconstitutional, was agreed to by a House-Senate conference committee yesterday and sent to the House floor for action.

The measure was up for a 'yes' or 'no' vote in both chambers, without the possibility of amendment. Floor action late yesterday was possible but not certain.

The House and Senate had passed separate death penalty bills earlier but had to agree on a single measure before it could go to Gov. Edward J. King.

The bill reported out of the conference committee incorporated elements of both of the earlier bills but also went far beyond them, according to professors from local law schools who held a news conference to urge rejection.

The proposed capital punishment law is a "morass of uncertainty," said Harvard law Prof. Alan Dershowitz, who said appeals from convictions based on the bill would take years.

His sentiments were echoed by Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt, who said the bill could "throw the criminal justice system into disarray."

Robbers get away with $8M, largest haul in U.S. history

NEW YORK — Two masked men with a shotgun punched a hole through a tarpaper roof and staged the largest cash robbery in U.S. history by taking an estimated $8 million from an armored car company headquarters, authorities said yesterday.

The ski-masked bandits cut a two-foot hole in the roof of Sentry-Armored Car-Courier in the Bronx late Sunday night and swung into the two-story red brick building on a rope, according to city police and the FBI.

After handcuffing a guard, the robbers pried open the metal doors of a vault room with crowbars, police said. The pair then carried bags of $50 and $100 bills to the building's garage, loaded them into a vehicle they had parked there and drove away, police said.

The $8 million loss estimate was given to police by Jack Jennings, the company's director of security.

Detective Lt. Michael O'Shea of the 47th Precinct said no official figure would be set until Sentry officials could conduct a thorough inventory and count whatever money remained.

"We'll still waiting for a complete inventory," he said. "There are numbers floating all over the place, but the company's president has to count the money."

But a source close to the FBI investigation who requested anonymity said $8 million "seems to be pretty much the count."

Collegian photo by Michael Margolis

A tree frames a horse grazing in the winter sunshine at Tillson Farm.

Duffey-Reid negotiations continue, deadline extended for pay decision

By JIM FINKLE
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Chancellor Joseph D. Duffey has extended a deadline upon which he will decide whether he will grant Marie M. Reid a paid leave of absence.

"Conversations are continuing," Duffey said yesterday.

Negotiations between Duffey and Reid began in October, when Duffey changed Reid's title and job description, removing her final authority over the budget.

At that time, Reid described the change in her position as a "demotion" and accused the University of racial and sexual discrimination.

Although Duffey denied Reid's charges of discrimination, he agreed to grant her a leave of absence with full pay to pursue her doctoral studies at the UMass School of Education. Duffey said he made these concessions because of "significant procedural errors made by the University in affecting her (Reid's) reassignment."

Reid has said she plans to seek employment elsewhere while on leave. In response to Reid's statements about leaving UMass, Duffey said Friday Reid will not be granted that leave unless she confirms her promise to return to the University after the leave.

Duffey said Reid must make that confirmation by Friday, December 10, or there would be no leave.

Yesterday Duffey said he has extended the deadline for an unspecified time because he and Reid are continuing to negotiate.

"I have extended the deadline," Duffey said.

He declined to comment further on the situation between himself and Reid, who serves as assistant chancellor and director of the Office of Planning and Budget because he said he and Reid had agreed not to discuss the situation publicly while still participating in legal negotiations.

Reid, who could not be reached for comment yesterday, said last week she did not want to discuss the situation between herself and Duffey.

Duffey came under heavy criticism from the UMass community when it was learned that he was giving Reid a one-year leave with full pay and that she did not plan to return to the University.

In response to that criticism, Duffey personally met with all department heads and deans to explain his position on the situation.

RSO budget requests due Friday, committee still waiting for many

By MARK J. WELCH
Collegian Staff

Fifty to sixty University of Massachusetts student organizations are racing the clock this week in an effort to submit budget proposals before the final deadline of Dec. 17.

The groups will be competing for a total $1.7 million budget funded through the $96 annual Student Activities Fee.

Following submission of the budget requests Friday, the Undergraduate Student Senate Budgets Committee will hold hearings early next semester and make a recommendation to the full Senate in late April.

Groups which receive funding this year include the Legal Services Office, the various Senate committees and agencies, area governments, Union Program Council (U.P.C.) the UMass Transit Services and a variety of other organizations.

Groups which have not submitted budgets by the deadline Friday will not be eligible for funding, according to Undergraduate Student Senate Budgets Committee Co-Chair Jennifer Kirby. The original deadline had been last Friday, but was extended because many groups had problems filling out the budget forms.

"There are a lot of new groups this year, Kirby said, based on the groups who have taken budget packets to fill out. Only about ten budget requests had been filed with the Senate office as of Tuesday, she said.

Although the Student Government Association allocates over $1.7 million, much of the costs it faces are fixed. For example, the UMass Transit Service must be given a large grant or else it must cut back on its services.

Fixed percentages of the budget must also be set aside for capital equipment purchases and for anticipated budget alterations, according to the SGA bylaws.

The Student Activities Office receives a budget of $353,401 this year. This amount is dictated by the University, so that the Undergarduate Student Senate cannot change the allocation.

Despite the many fixed costs, however, the SGA budget process contains a great deal of flexibility. Last year, a number of groups were eliminated from budget consideration and five new organizations were granted funds.

All groups receiving SGA funding are required to be Registered Student Organizations with the Undergraduate Student Senate and have at least ten undergraduate members.

Local protest planned for first day of draft resister Hasbrouck's trial

By TRICIA YACOVONE
Collegian Staff

Five area anti-draft groups, including Student Against Militarism (SAM) from the University of Massachusetts, have organized a demonstration tomorrow in front of the Amherst Post Office to protest the trial of a draft non-registrant and to support other draft resisters.

The demonstration will begin at 11:30 a.m. and is to support Edward Hasbrouck, who goes on trial tomorrow morning for refusing to register for the draft.

We're just expressing support for Ed's actions, and we're protesting that he's being put to trial," said Warren Goldstein, of the Hampshire Anti-Draft Coalition, one of the groups sponsoring the protest.

The protest will be preceded by a press conference at the Bang's Community Center in downtown Amherst at 11 a.m., which will include speeches concerning public non-registrants, the relationship between feminism and the draft, the effects of the draft on foreign military intervention and the fact that financial aid is denied to non-registrants, Goldstein said.

The location for the protest was selected because the Post Office is where people are required to register, Goldstein said.

Ed Hasbrouck, a 22 year-old full time political activist and a founder of Mass Open Resistance, is being brought to trial because of his public resistance to the draft.

"The main reason he's being brought to trial is that he wrote a letter to the government saying he wasn't going to register," Will Doherty of Mass Open Resistance said. "This, in a sense, is turning himself in," Doherty added.

Doherty, another one of the founders of the Mass Open Resistance, a networking organization which provides information about steps toward draft resistance and coordinating demonstrations across the country, said Hasbrouck faces a maximum sentence of five years and/or $10,000. He added that it is very unlikely that Hasbrouck will receive the maximum sentence.

Doherty said his organization, which was formed in response to the first moves toward registration, will have an effect on the trial.

"The organization has a bearing on the trial because it brought together people concerned with the issue and will bring an active core of protesters to the trial on Wednesday morning. If there were no protesters, then the government would feel less inhibitive about nailing him to the wall," Doherty said.

Doherty had proof of the uneasiness within the government about the issue in citing an event which occurred at Hasbrouck's arraignment on Oct. 6.

"At his arraignment, four protesters read their statement of support for Edward Hasbrouck, in opposition to the registration program and possible reintroduction of the draft and were expelled from the courtroom," Doherty said.

Doherty said he would like to deliver a message to the people demonstrating in Amherst.

"We '(Mass Open Resistance and other supporters of Ed Hasbrouck) would like to thank you for gathering in support of Edward Hasbrouck and other draft resisters throughout the country. It is only continued resistance which will end registration progress and prevent an imminent draft."

Concourse merchants see decline in sales as holiday budgets shrink

By ANNE McCRORY
Collegian Staff

The economic crunch has affected vendors and student shoppers alike on the Campus Center Concourse this holiday season.

In a survey conducted yesterday afternoon, most concourse merchants rated business as fair, while 75 percent of those vendors returning from last year noted a decline in sales from previous years. About 45 percent of the merchants are selling goods on the concourse for the first time.

"You can tell a lot of people don't have a lot of money," said Shaw Taylor, a continuing education student and vendor of pen and ink drawings and t-shirts.

Taylor, noting an increase in sales since the onset of the holiday season, has had a table on the concourse since the spring.

A vendor of name brand sportswear said sales thus far were "not bad."

"People are concerned with what they spend money on," said Tom Sullivan, a junior accounting major and first-time concourse vendor. "You have to carry good quality (items)," he said.

Vendors of manufactured goods seemed to be faring better than those of handcrafted items.

Sales are "just as good" as last year at the table sponsored by the Commonwealth Distributing Company. The company has sold goods on the concourse once a semester for the past two years by sponsoring a campus group and giving them half the net profit, said Richard Belitch, owner of the company. This season's sponsor is WMUA.

A seven-year veteran of concourse marketing noted a decrease in his business.

"The last two (holiday seasons) were not as good as previous ones," said Jerome Weidenfeld, who sells handcrafted jewelry. While his decline in business could be attributed to local stores where students go to shop and are not just "passing through," Weidenfeld said, "I don't have the overhead (the stores do)."

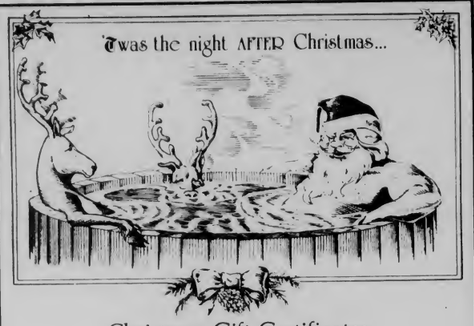
Despite the variety and uniqueness of many concourse gifts, many students surveyed would prefer to do their holiday shopping elsewhere.

"I do my shopping at the mall," said Joann Curley, a sophomore geology major who had stopped at a table on her way to the University Store.

"The gifts here are too expensive for me," said one student who wished to remain anonymous. "I don't think they're that overpriced for what you're getting, but I can't afford it," he said.

Collegian photo by Kevin Fachetti

Lisa Elsoffer, Ken Anderson and Karen Anderson (front-back) shop and sell on the Campus Center Concourse.



Christmas Gift Certificates
One Size Fits All!

EAST HEAVEN TUB Co

Private Hot Tub Rooms
33 West St. Northampton
586-6843

MENS & WOMENS
WOOL CREWNECK
SWEATERS
(solid colors)
SALE $16.95
Turtlenecks
100% cotton
2 for $17.00
Saturday Clothes
Hrs: Mon - Fri 9:30 - 9 PM
Sat 9:30 - 6 Sun 12- 5
Gift Certificates Available
(behind Silverscape) 266 N. Pleasant St., Amherst

ENTRY LEVEL POSITIONS FOR ENGINEERING & COMPUTER SCIENCE MAJORS

Make plans to attend
Hamilton Standard's

Holiday Career Mixer

Thursday, January 6th, 1983.

We've set aside this day to give you the opportunity to meet with our Technical Managers—and discuss the future we can offer at Hamilton Standard.

- You'll be able to see a presentation that gives an overview of our operations.
- Many of our high-technology products will be on display.
- You'll also have the chance to get the "inside story" from graduates who've joined us over the past year.
- Activities will run continuously from 9 am to 3 pm. And refreshments will be served.

Plan to be with us.
If you want more details, call collect: Bill Kelly, College Relations, (203) 623-1621, Ext. 5329. January 3, 4 & 5 (between 8 am and 4:30 pm).

UNITED TECHNOLOGIES
HAMILTON STANDARD

Located next to Bradley International Airport on Bradley Field Road in Windsor Locks, Connecticut—15 miles from downtown Hartford.

An Equal Opportunity Employer

art • architecture • children's • computers • etc • economics • education • english • etc • film • foreign languages • gardening • history • etc • lit • math • nat. sci • phil • phys. sci • poli. sci

Public Service Announcement:

The Reading Remedy

pays cash for current textbooks
So, why wait in line?

Open
M-W & Sat 10-6
Thurs & Fri 10-9
Sunday 12-5

The Reading Remedy
NEW BOOKS AT HALF PRICE

down the ramp at—
71 N. PLEASANT ST.
AMHERST
(across from Louis Foods)

Plan ahead now so you won't forget anyone

SWISS ARMY KNIVES

SAVE 20% OFF Regular Retail Price w/coupon

Great Gift Ideas

20% OFF any Swiss Army Knife in stock

20% OFF coupon valid 12-23-82

Reg price ——— 20% off Price ———

UNIVERSITY STORE

Collegian photo by Dave Deuber

Dan Dimento hands Jean Briggs a chocolate chip ice cream cone in Greenough Snack Bar as Nancy Danau and Juanita Giner wait to be served.

Students treated to business experience in dorm snackbars

By DIANE SINICO
Collegian Correspondent

With volumes of text books to read and mounds of papers to write, why would anyone want to add to their workload?

"Business experience," said both Mark Hausser and Paul McNeil, two co-managers of "Kennedy's Place," a student-run snackbar on the fifth floor of the J.F. Kennedy tower in Southwest. They are not in it just for the money. They really want to make their business work.

Six student-run snackbars are located on campus from McNamara in Sylvan to Greenough in Central to "Kennedy's Place" and the John Adams Snackbar in Southwest. They serve a variety of foods and beverages ranging from pizza, subs and sandwiches, to ice cream, soda and candy.

The twelfth floor John Adams snackbar and the fifth floor "Kennedy's Place" are set up in a small kitchen and serve their customers through the open door. They have signs on the wall listing items and prices and any nightly specials they may be offering. But other than a fold-up chair, or an old, tattered couch, there is no place to relax and chat over a sub or an ice cream.

Greenough's snackbar is the largest. It consists of two spacious rooms; a very large and well-equipped kitchen with frappe machines, refrigerators and a large freezer where the customer can see their choices of eight flavors of ice cream and a room with tables and chairs and even a couple of video games in the corner to provide background noise while one enjoys one of their famous brownie sundaes.

Besides providing a service to the students who frequent them, working in or managing one of these snackbars provides students with a chance to earn money and receive valuable business experience. McNeil, a hotel, restaurant and travel administration major, said, "it's a business and it's up to you to make sure it succeeds."

"It involves a lot of bookwork, ordering and accounting," Hausser said.

They both agreed on the large amount of time required to keep a "business" like that going. McNeil and Hausser said they each put in about six days and two nights per week, plus their normal duties of ordering, preparation for opening, bookwork, etc. Yet, neither of them seemed to mind at all.

"We wouldn't care as much if we were just in it for the money," Mark said.

Several other managers of student-run snackbars, expressed the same sentiment as Hausser and McNeil. Their job provides them with valuable experience, and a chance to make their business succeed.

Rich Shaughnessy, a co-manager of the twelfth floor snackbar in the John Adams tower said his work is "service to the dorm" and "good experience." He said the snackbars are not out to make money, but rather to provide a convenience to the dorm residents and experience to the workers. Because they are located within the dorms, the residents no longer have to leave the building to eat.

The snackbars are open in the evenings ranging from about 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. on weekdays and 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. on weekends, depending on the individual place.

Selectmen accept new Carriage House wing

By ANN CARRNS
Collegian Staff

The Amherst Selectmen last night accepted a newly completed, $20,000 addition to the Carriage House building at the Hitchcock Center for the Environment.

The Selectmen also decided to postpone a decision on a mutual assistance agreement proposed to the town by Westover Air force Base until they could meet with Base representatives.

The Hitchcock Center addition was funded by private donations and was built totally by volunteer labor, according to Dean A. Allen, president of the Hitchcock Center.

The Center, located at the Larch Hill Conservation Area at South Pleasant Street in Amherst, serves as a facility for environmental education programs and related activities. The new room will allow for expansion of these programs.

"The room is an attractive, good-sized structure which is designed for maximum use of solar heating," Allen said. "I think it's a pretty good deal for the Town, as it was built through donated funds and labor."

Allen said that because the Town owns the Carriage House and the land upon which it is built, it was procedurally correct for the selectmen to "accept" the new wing.

Acting Town Manager Stanley Ziomek said the only cost to the town would be $15 to $20 per year for insurance costs.

"With that in mind, I guess it is the best deal we've had all year," said Chairman Edith Wilkinson.

The proposed agreement with Westover Air Force Base calls for reciprocal aid between Westover and Amherst in the event of fire, failure of water pumping equipment or other natural disaster.

Newslines...

Rape awareness session tonight

A Rape Task Force presentation will be held at 7 tonight in the third floor lounge of John Quincy Adams dormitory in the Southwest Residential area. The Task Force, comprised of representatives from Educator/Advocates, Public Safety and Health Education will conduct the Rape Awareness workshop.

Registration for Michigan Test

The Michigan Test of English Language Proficiency will be given at 1:30 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 31 in Bartlett room 61. All students wishing to take the test must register by phone or in person with the English as a Second Language Office.

Transport for disabled grows

Stavros Inc., an independent living program for severely physically disabled people, is expanding existing transportation services for the visually and mobility-impaired residents of Hampshire County.

To make arrangements, call Stavros at 256-0473 at least 24 hours in advance. For weekend reservations, call before 3 p.m.

FINAL FLING
$1.50 cover
TIME TO SWING!
at
POOR RICHARD'S
Dec. 14th Tues. 8 p.m.
— PARTY DRINK SPECIALS —
Dancing DJ 2 for 1 drinks 3 for $1 drafts Door Prizes!
Sponsored by UMass Women's Swimming & Diving Team

You're What?

The way people react when you tell them you're pregnant isn't important. The way you feel about it is. So if you're pregnant and not so sure you want to be, talk to us. Our counselors are specially trained to help you make thedecision that's right for you. Call 738-6210. Preterm. The most experienced reproductive health care center in the Northeast.

preterm
A licensed non-profit health care facility.
1842 Beacon Street, Brookline, MA 02146

END OF THE SEMESTER UPDATE

Last Day of Classes

Wednesday, December 15.

Final Exams

Begin Friday, December 17 at 8:00am and run through Thursday, December 23 at 4:00pm. For further information regarding the times and places of specific exams, call the Information Data Bank at 545-1555.

Dining Commons

The Dining Commons will be open as usual through Wednesday, December 22. On Thursday, December 23, only Hampshire Worcester Dining Commons will be open. All meals will be served as usual that day with the exception of dinner which will be served until 6:30pm.

Telephones

Room phones will be shut off randomly during the last day of finals. It might be best to make any important phone calls the night before.

Mail

Mail will be forwarded to student's home addresses after the Residence Halls close.

Residence Halls

All students must vacate the Residence Halls by 6:00pm Thursday, December 23.

Libraries

The Tower and Goodell libraries will be open Monday through Friday from 8:00am to Midnight and weekend hours are 10:00am until midnight during the final exam week until Wednesday, December 22. On Thursday, December 23 they will be open 8:00am to 6:00pm For further information regarding the hours of other University libraries, call the Information Data Bank at 545-1555.

IDB TIPS

WHERE HILLS TURN TO MOUNTAINS.

Why conquer hills when you can challenge a mountain. Just over the border is Mount Snow with 2 gondolas, 12 chairlifts, 52 trails and 1700 feet of vertical.

Winter is back in full swing. Enjoy continuous 1½ mile summit to base skiing. Terrain is open for all abilities. Snow making is opening ½ mile of additional terrain. Open daily. This weekend 8 lifts will operate on 2 mountain faces. Experts can try the new ¾ mile north face trail. Mt. Snow has the most skiing that close to home.

Mount Snow
VERMONT

THE SHORTEST DRIVE TO BIG MOUNTAIN SKIING
LOCATED IN EASY TO REACH SOUTHERN VERMONT ON VT 100
LODGING (802) 464-8501 • SKI REPORT: (802) 464-2151

NORTHWOOD APARTMENTS
Rt. 47 Sunderland
Close to Amherst, on bus line
1, 2, and 3 bedroom gardens
Immediate occupancy available
students welcome
665-3856
office open from 10-7 weekdays
Saturdays 1-4

BUYING High School Class Rings
HIGHEST PRICES PAID!
As Gold & Silver Consigned Jewelry
Daniel Smith
256-0710
25 North Pleasant Street Amherst

SALADS SUBMARINES SYRIANS
the sub
11 A.M. TO 2 A.M. / 7 DAYS

33 E. PLEASANT ST., AMHERST / 549-5160
FREE 16 oz. soda with a whole sub

Fine Locally Handcrafted Gifts
CELEBRATIONS
AN ARTISANS' COLLECTIVE
70 Main St. Northampton
Mon-Sat 10-6
Thurs 10-9 Sun 10-5

Shopping Card.
When you come across that once-in-a-lifetime bargain, but find yourself short of cash, there's only one card that lets you get it quickly at more than 400 X-Press 24s around Massachusetts. The BayBanks X-Press 24™ Card.
Try Something Better

New Banking Hours
AMHERST OFFICE
Effective November 1, 1982

	Lobby	Drive-Up
Mon - Thurs	10-4	10-4
Friday	10-6	10-6
Saturday	10-1	10-1

X-Press 24 service available 24 hrs a day, 7 days a week

NEW SHIPMENT
100% COTTON TWILL
New Fabric, New Styles
Bicycle Jacket
Tailored Pants
"D"-ring Pants
Cotton Twill colors for fall and winter: Berry, Black, Teal, Khaki, Grey.
Good Things, Naturally
good things collective inc
52 Main St Northampton • 586-5403 • A WORKER'S COOPERATIVE

NUVOX
AM·FM
STEREO
RECEIVER
Frequency Range: FM 88MHz-108MHz
AM 530KHz-1600KHz
Sensitivity: FM 15 db
AM 55 db
I.F. Rejection: FM 45 db
AM 30 db
S/N Ratio: FM 50db 1mV/input
AM 40db 5mV/input
Separation: 30db (1 KHz)
T.H.D. of Amplifier: <1%
Power Out: 30mw+30mw
Power Requirement: DC 3V UM-3×2
Dimension: 107(H)×67(W)×21(D) m/m
Weight/Unit: 90 g
Nuvox WX777
Special Holiday Hours Wed 9-9

Sale Price
$24.95
w/coupon
$5.00 OFF Nuvox WX77
coupon valid 12-23-82
Limited Quantity
UNIVERSITY STORE

Black Affairs

Dem. race is left wide open

By NORMAN HILL
Special to Black Affairs

The announcement by Senator Edward Kennedy that he will not seek the Presidency in 1984 has thrown wide open the quest for the Democratic Party nomination.

Senator Kennedy's withdrawal from the race also has thrown wide open the battle for the support of blacks and the labor movement the two segments of the Democratic constituency which will have a decisive say in who is to be the Party's next Presidential candidate.

Black Americans long regarded Senator Kennedy as something of a standard bearer. His staunch commitment to social justice and civil rights, coupled with the appeal for blacks of the Kennedy family name had made him the one potential Presidential aspirant to whom blacks gravitated.

Kennedy's support within the labor movement, while less unanimous than among blacks, also was certainly quite substantial. And although former Vice President Walter Mondale clearly has many allies among blacks and in the unions he hardly has a lock on the support of these constituencies.

The withdrawal of the front-runner from the Democratic sweepstakes has potentially a two-fold effect: First, the race for the nomination will be opened to new faces and lesser known candidates. Second, the race and political discourse may also be much more substantially dominated by ideas rather than personalities, an enormously healthy development.

With national unemployment edging toward eleven percent and well over twenty percent for blacks, the task of the Democratic Party is to develop and adopt a wide-ranging program for economic recovery and social justice. To date the Democrats have been in something of a state of disarray. Nothing resembling a coherent strategy for coping with our economic difficulties has emerged from that party.

Any candidate who takes the Democratic nomination will have an important role in shaping and articulating the Party's socio-economic agenda. But the views of the candidates on that agenda will also be shaped by the labor movement and by blacks.

AP Laserphoto

Recently retired boxing champion Sugar Ray Leonard, right, reacts to a mock punch from 13-year-old David Ealey of Boston after a press conference during a visit to Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass., Wednesday. Ealey's mother works at Harvard.

An Hispanic look at Christmas time

By YADIRA A. BETANCES
Collegian Staff

As the grayless month of November sets in the semi-tropic island of Hispaniola, the Dominican Republic, a country occupying the eastern two thirds of the island is liven by parrandas navidenas (Christmas carols) in a beat of merengue (Dominican Republic's folk music) heard throughout the country in every radio station.

As in other Latin American countries, the early start of Christmas give Dominicans a sense of warmth to capture the festive feeling in celebrating the holiday and a community solidarity that makes the holiday more enjoyable.

Although the community involvement is seen more among low-class people than high class and even more in small towns outside the city, community involvement is still a traditional part of the celebration.

A religious aspect of Christmas is also present. During the first Sunday of December, the nativity is set up without baby Jesus. Starting from this day, a passage from the Bible retelling the story of Christmas is done continuously until the 24th of December.

Throughout Latin America, the 24th of December is called Pascuas (Christmas Eve). Before going to church at 12:00 a.m., the family sits down to dinner, and the traditional meal consists of pork roasted a la braza (on an open fire), and pasteles (meat pie).

At 12:00 a.m. on December 25 a mass called Misa de Gallo (Roster's Mass) is performed. During Misa de Gallo, all electrical lights are turned off and a fire is burned. A cycle of prayers is performed given thanks to the Lord for the good times and requesting blessings for a better new year. Misa de Gallo is also used to purify one's soul. At the end of the prayers, baby Jesus is brought into the nativity.

The celebration on the 25th becomes less traditional with a night at a disco or a neighborhood party. What is still seen on the 25th is traditional parrandas navidenas (Christmas carols) sung by groups of people who go around the neighborhood recruiting people into the group.

The celebration subsides and another resumes on the 31st of December. Pascuas de Ano Nuevo (New Year's Eve) is also a community-wide celebration. From ten in the evening and earlier, a get-together is held with neighbors where carols are sung and food is provided. Neighbors go from house to house with wishes and food to the sick and less fortunate. At twelve midnight, the start of the New Year families go around the neighborhood with wishes for the new year.

A Christmas prayer for people of color

By MANNING MARABLE
From The Grassroots, December, 1982.

I believe in Black humankind — every man, woman and child of African descent that dwells on this earth. I stand in awe of our beauty and genius, our gift of song, our sciences and culture. Neither slavery nor capitalist oppression could destroy that special heritage, that challenge of Blackness, which shall one day rise up with the oppressed of other lands and inherit this turbulent world.

I believe in Work — that collective act of creativity which moves mountains and builds cities. I believe that unemployment is a crime, and that all men and women should be provided the chance to learn productive skills, to enjoy the fruits of their labor, and to control the means of production that creates all wealth.

I believe in Equality — that all human beings of all races and cultures were made alike in the possibility of development. I believe that the Black struggle in this nation cannot accept "equal opportunity" within an inherently unequal economic and political system. The demand for equality, defined as the principle of human fairness, must mean the construction of a sensible, democratic, economic alternative for U.S. society, which socializes the accumulation of capital and places the interests of people before profits.

I believe in Justice — that every citizen should have equal access to counsel, and be treated fairly in courts of law. I believe that the American legal system has all too often favored the affluent and powerful and systematically punished the Black, Brown and poor.

I believe in the Prince of Peace. Wars of imperialism and aggression, waged by this nation and others, are nothing less than Murder. I believe that nuclear weapons must be outlawed in our generation, to permit the survival of the next generation.

I believe in certain Inalienable Rights beyond "Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." I believe in the right not to go hungry in a land of agricultural abundance; the right to decent housing; the right to free, public medical care for all; the right to an adequate income in one's old age.

I believe in Education — that the greatest force of protest against the evils of racism and economic exploitation is knowledge. Every Black parent must spend as much time teaching his or her child as that child receives at school. Education must become a tool for liberating our minds, bodies and communities.

I believe in Sacrifice. We cannot all be wealthy. In an ideally democratic society, no one should have an income or an accumulation of wealth that he or she does not personally need, nor acquire the economic power to disrupt the lives and aspirations of others. We must give a portion of our personal income back to our Black communities to build economic and social institutions.

I believe in Freedom. In this society, freedom has meant the freedom of corporations to raise prices, the freedom of the wealthy to evade taxes, the freedom of the unemployed to dwell on the precipice of starvation and desperation. I believe in the freedom to build a new society devoid of the darkness of blind bigotry; the freedom to work, play and live in neighborhoods without fear of police repression; the freedom to worship; the freedom to confront our own weaknesses with the courage of our Black elders; the freedom to resolve the political and social problems of today and set forth, in the light of our heritage, to a new land of peace and productivity, racial equality and economic democracy. Only when these tasks are accomplished shall we be free at last.

A black-Jew becomes police chief

By MARVIN GREISMAN

CHARLESTON, S.C. - Reuben Morris Greenberg, 39, is causing no little tumult in this Southern city of 70,000. Greenberg, a 15-year police veteran, is Charleston's first Black Jewish police chief, appointed earlier this year by a 12-0 vote of Charleston's City Council.

Chief Greenberg traces his ethnic identity to his Russian Jewish great-grandfather, who immigrated to Texas, established himself as a wheat farmer and lived in a common-law marriage with a Black woman. While attending San Francisco State College, Reuben Greenberg sought to discover his Jewish roots when he realized that most of his fellow civil rights activists were also Jewish. This led to formal Jewish religious instruction.

It is not easy to be a Black Jew in a Southern city, especially if you are the chief of police. Greenberg's Jewishness, and the fact that he is also Black, has become the subject of some tastelss jokes. Shortly after he won appointment to his post, the favorite question among some of Charleston's citizens was, "What is chief's favorite food?" Answer: "Fried chicken soup."

The local Ku Klux Klan was less subtle, calling Greenberg "nigger Jew." Greenberg is philosophical about it. "These people were opposed to me before I was born," he says.

BUYING
High School
Class Rings
HIGHEST PRICES PAID! Also Gold & Silver Coins and jewelry
Daniel Smith
256-0710
5 North Pleasant Street
Amherst

THE SNOBS AGAINST THE SLOBS.

R Caddyshack
Wednesday, Dec 15 at 7 - 9 - 11 PM
Engineering East Aud
Admission: $1.50

BLUE WALL
CAMPUS CENTER AT UMASS
WED./THURS.
FREE "7% SOLUTION"
(Sherlock Holmes meets Sigmund Freud!)
(Peter Sellers in Stanley Kubrick's classic!) winner of 60 international awards
Dr. Strangelove
FRI. DEC. 17th
3-6 PM
with Steve Spellman
This is Absolutely, Positively The Last Happy Hour of the year!

High People in High Places
UMASS SKI CLUB
Sugarbush & Aspen
Mandatory Meeting
Tues. Dec. 14 Hasbrouck Rm 20
7:00 PM
For more info 5-3437

Summer of "83"
Summer staff wanted for large Girl Scout resident camp in Tolland, Mass. Positions available for General Counselors; Nurses; Specialty Staff: Waterfront, Smallcraft, Riding, Gymnastics, Arts & Crafts; and Cooks. Salary with Room & Board for 9 or 10 weeks.
For applications write: Timber Trails, Star Route 158, Tolland, MA 01034 or call 1-413-258-4592
or come to
CAMP FAIR DAY

CARROLL TRAVEL
Personal Service for all your Travel Needs
• Airline travel
• Cruises
• Amtrak tickets
• Car rentals
• Hotel reservations
• Packages to anywhere in the world
Free, Expert Advice
Located on Cowles Lane off No. Pleasant St.
256-8931

$5.00 off
High Notes
All balloon deliveries w/this coupon great way to say -
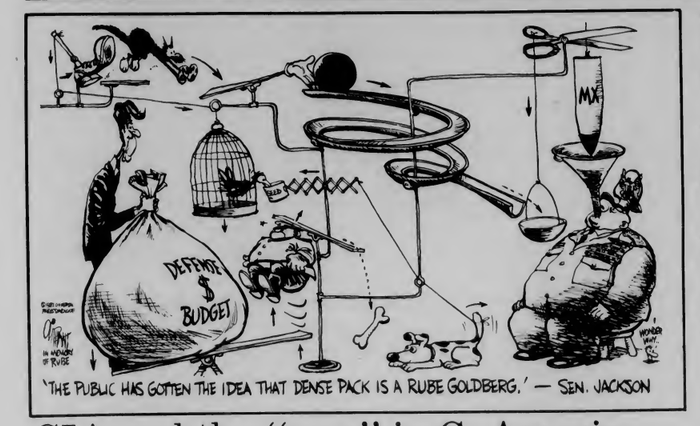
Adios, Happy B-day,
Happy New Year
Good Luck on Finals
call 665-7664
offer expires Jan. 31, 1983

IS THIS ANY TIME TO THINK ABOUT ARMY ROTC?

It's the perfect time.
You're a freshman, right? And you want to make college a real learning experience?
Well ROTC can add a valuable dimension to your college education. A dimension of leadership and management training. And that'll make your degree worth more.
ROTC offers scholarship and financial opportunities, too.
Plus, the opportunity to graduate with a commission and begin your future as an officer.
For more information, contact your Professor of Military Science.
ARMY ROTC. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.
Contact
James C. Mahoney
545-2321/2322

EDITORIAL/OPINION



'THE PUBLIC HAS GOTTEN THE IDEA THAT DENSE PACK IS A RUBE GOLDBERG.' — SEN. JACKSON

CIA and the "war" in C. America

The case can be made that the recent media "expose" of CIA involvement in Central America is actually designed to prepare the American mass audience for the coming war there. Wars are events difficult to keep secret, even for the U.S. press, therefore, disclosure was inevitable. While the fact of the undeclared war is made known, the details remain absent; a process designed to prevent meaningful opposition.

The military intervention by the United States in Nicaragua violates the Charter of the United Nations, a point deleted from the overall news discussion. Article 2(4) reads: "All members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, or in any other manner inconsistent with the principles of the United Nations." Any serious discussion of the U.S. paramilitary involvement in Nicaragua must mention the total absence of legality or legitimacy of these operations.

The CIA, as part of its covert operations, or what Newsweek refers to as "dirty tricks," has taken over La Prensa, the major newspaper in Nicaragua. The purpose of the CIA La Prensa is to print political propaganda in order to create artificial conflicts between the Nicaraguan people and the Sandinista government. Detailed analysis of the CIA takeover of La Prensa can be found in CIA La Prensa help to destabilize Nicaragua from within, but is also part of a U.S. operation to discredit the Sandinista government before the whole world. Although the CIA La Prensa is still operating, the Sandinista government has moved several times to close it down. Censorship of La Prensa is then reported in the American press, illustrating Sandinista political repression. Reagan Aministration officials, such as Jeane Kirkpatrick before the UN Security Council, then relay the message in public speeches denouncing the "totalitarian" nature of the Sandinista government.

Similar "dirty tricks" include the financing of the pro-Somocist faction of the Miskito Indians in Nicaragua, lead by Steadman Fagoth. Fagoth was recruited by the CIA to collaborate with the Honduran military to carry out plans to invade Nicaragua and overthrow the Sandinista government. Not surprisingly, the Sandinistas moved to defend their country. The relocation of the Miskito Indians by the Sandinistas has been reported in the American press purely in the context of human rights violations, with no mention of CIA involvement. Jeane Kirkpatrick, then, before the UN Security Council, denounces the Sandinista government for their "totalitarian" and "Nazi" like behavior.

Once again, this pattern is repeated. The Reagan Administration has sent hundreds of millions of dollars in military aid and equipment, half of it unreported to Congress, to the right wing head of the Honduran military, Gustavo Alvarez Martinez. As a result, de-facto political power in Honduras now belongs to Alvarez. Reagan therefore has effectively undermined the aspirations of the Honduran people, who elected President Suazo Cordova to provide social reform in Honduras, the second poorest country in the Western Hemisphere. Last March, Reagan directed the American Ambassador in Honduras to instruct Cordova to cut badly needed funding for social programs, in order to finance American military aggression toward Honduras: a U.S. imposed "Reagonomics" for Honduras.

In the face of the Honduran-U.S. threat, the Sandinistas moved to strengthen its army. The American press dutifully devoted extensive coverage to the Nicaraguan "build-up." Jeane Kirkpatrick, then, before the UN Security Council, denounced the "dramatic, extraordinary expansion of Nicaragua's army," and claimed that Nicaragua now constituted a military threat to Honduras. However, Nicaragua does not now have an air force, while Honduras has the strongest air force in Central America, supplied and trained by the U.S.

What are the American interests in this region which cause such massive military and political involvement? In Guatemala alone, there are more than 150 U.S.-based multi-nationals with investments. These include Coca-Cola, Texaco, Getty, Del Monte, Monsanto, Phillip Morris, U.S. Steel, and the Bank of America. U.S. investment in Honduras is second in Central America to that in Guatemala. The largest corporations are U.S. owned, including Castle and Cooke and United Fruit.

Clearly the dominant foreign power in Central America is the United States, not the Soviet Union. Soviet support has thus far been limited to lip service to the revolutionary cause. The Soviet Union does not have the network of multi-national corporations with which to dominate a Central American society. When the American press begins reporting Central American events in this context, it will then be reporting the truth.

Greg Levey and Howard Friel are UMass students

Greg Levey
Howard Friel

Non-violence — the only way

I found John Raible's editorial, "A Violent Reaction to White Racism," which was a response to John Hudson's editorial, "Nonviolence is the Only Answer," to be riddled with factual errors and muddled logic, which resulted in many dangerous misconceptions.

First, I want to deal with two general positions that Raible takes, both of which are indefensible.

Raible attacks Hudson because Hudson does not have first-hand knowledge of what he is writing about and has not talked to someone who does. Is Raible being serious? According to that line of logic, one cannot write in reference to anything that happened more than 100 years ago. (Do you really believe that, Mr. Raible?) I am sure Raible has heard of books and the purpose of books (and newspapers) is to provide us with knowledge we could not otherwise obtain. They serve that function very well. Sure, history may come down to us slightly slanted, but even first-hand information is slanted. Besides, is not imperfect knowledge better than ignorance?

The second general criticism I have of Raible's editorial is his attitude that because Hudson is white his viewpoint is invalid, or worse, not worthy of being heard. From what I understood of this editorial, I thought that Mr. Raible was against racism. Yet is that not what he is practicing by saying that Mr. Hudson cannot have any important or "right" ideas because of the color of his skin? Need I remind Raible of such great men like Bertrand Russell and Albert Einstein. I am sure he does or would admire them, yet both of whom are white.

Now let us proceed to some of the particulars of Raible's argument that violence is a valid and effective way of ending injustice. Hudson says that by becoming violent, the anti-Klan demonstrators lost the sympathy and influence of the American public, which non-violent protest would have assured. Hudson is right. Violence does not work. The examples Raible cites, that of violence being committed to Civil Rights demonstrators, proves the point. The public sympathized and listened to King precisely because he was non-violent. People who used violence against King, saw their tactics backfire. The same thing occurred when the anti-Klan demonstrators became violent that Sunday afternoon — they repulsed the people they most wanted to impress.

Violence is mindless. People resort to violence when their ability to reason is overwhelmed by their emotions.

As for Malcolm X and his ideas, I want to make a few comments. First of all, he was not killed by a white racist, but rather Malcolm X was assassinated by a Muslim from a rival faction. It is true that Malcolm X was not above committing violence to achieve his objectives. Let me ask you a question, Mr. Raible: Who was more effective, Malcolm X or Martin Luther King Jr., who advocated the use of non-violence and love? To further emphasize my point — how much popular support did the Black Panthers even have? Non-violence works.

Raible says that the power to vote is not the main way to affect social change in this country. He is wrong. No, the Indians did not save themselves through voting, but violence did not help them either. Enslaved Africans did not emancipate themselves by voting, but were emancipated because those who could vote finally saw that slavery was immoral and voted for a President who agreed with them.

The people of Vietnam did not vote the U.S. out of their country, but the American public voted us out of Vietnam, (The Bay of Pigs example is irrelevant. Unfortunately, countries about to be invaded are not given the right to vote on whether they want to be invaded or not).

Of course, Third World people and all oppressed people have a right to be angry. But do not let that anger be reflected in violence. Instead, let non-violence be your creed and rise above your oppressors. Violence is the easy way out; non-violence takes true courage. And do not talk as if non-violence is the solution of white men. The two greatest practitioners of non-violence in this century were King and Mahatma Gandhi, a black and an Indian, respectively. But do not call them that. Identify them with their real race, the human race.

Kevin DeLuca

Kevin DeLuca is a Collegian columnist

Letters

Katz's column good critique on conservative goals

To the Editor:

In response to the reactions which met Jackson Katz's column of Dec. 3 regarding conservatives, it is clear that his commentary hit fairly close to home among many of the conservatives he was accused of stereotyping. Sure he was merciless in his evaluation of them. However, the truth is not always the easiest to accept.

In his defense, there are a few key points which must be addressed. For one, the categorizing, or "stereotyping," if you will, of a group of people's political philosophies cannot be compared to stereotyping on the basis of race, sex, age, appearance, etc. One has no control over one's race, sex or any other inborn characteristic the way one does have control over one's set of political beliefs. And, remember, we categorize people's political philosophies all the time when we call them Democrats or Republicans, conservatives or liberals.

Another point which at least one columnist missed was that Mr. Katz did not claim that every conservative person fell into the categories he set forth. He also stated that he did not in any way wish to censor so-called conservatives or their ideas.

Some people seem to have gotten more upset over Mr. Katz's strong criticism of conservatives than with what it is these conservatives actually stand for (nuclear arms race, lowered social spending, opposition to the ERA, human rights abroad, civil rights here in America, etc.) The real issue here is not the rhetorical dialogue between a few college students. The question here is whether or not the issues are important enough for us to stand up and take a stand even if it means offending some people.

In closing I don't think the students at this University are heading in a conservative direction. At least I sincerely hope not and I'm sure I speak for countless others when I say this.

Martin V. Ferrero
Amherst, Ma.

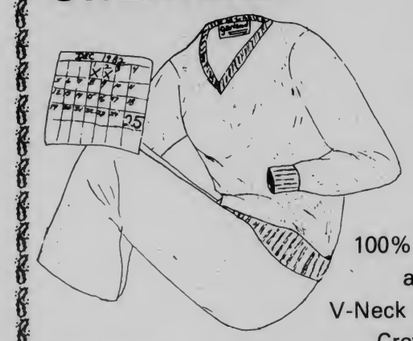
We need columnists!

Drop by with a piece,
Room 113
Campus Center

A Christmas Checklist

Plan ahead now so you won't forget anyone

Women's GARLAND SWEATERS



100% orlon acrylic V-Neck or Crewneck

Open M-F 9-5
Sat 11-4
Open Wed Nite until 9:00 PM

Located in the Campus Center

UNIVERSITY STORE

OFFICE OF THE DEAN OF STUDENTS
PAID POSITION AVAILABLE

Do you want to help provide better information for students, and others, about almost everything ongoing at the Univ. or that's University-related?

* Coordinator, Information Data Bank (IDB) and Taped Information Phone Service (TIPS)

Available - Full-Time January 1983
20-25 hours/week, Spring Semester
Full-Time, June (possibly July & Aug.)

Eligibility - Undergraduates in Class of 1984 or 1985, or Graduate students here through the Summer and next two semesters.

Qualifications - Demonstrated Managerial and Organizational skills required. Communications, Writing, and/or Promotional skills desirable.

Pay Scale - Hourly Rate, Based on Qualifications

IDB is a telephone or walk-in referral center which maintains information on Univ. Academic Policies & Procedures; Bus, Library, Athletic Schedules, etc; listing of Campus Events, etc; consumer information; and hundreds of other bits of information which are continuously compiled and updated. TIPS is a library of more than 200 recorded cassettes with information about the University, academic programs, health-related items, financial aid and related information, and many other topics. There is a student staff of 8-10 who run the service for the Dean of Students Office.

For additional information or to apply, Come to Dean of Students Office, 227 Whitmore, or Call 545-2684.

BLIZZARD BLITZ

DON'T BE SNOWED IN WITHOUT YOUR FAVORITE HITZ

EVERY ALBUM $5.99!

take advantage of our CHRISTMAS HOURS

Turtle's Records Unlimited
The Student Run Record Store

Dec. 6-17
Tues., Thurs. 6:30 - 9:30 pm
In addition to our regular hours: M F 10 5

All W. Mass Stores open Sun. 9-5 til Christmas
Open 24 Hours—7 am Mon. thru Sat. Midnite
in Hadley-Amherst and Pittsfield stores.

Lean, tender, delicious steak.

Beef Top Round Steak USDA Choice 1.99 lb

Beef Top Round London Broil	USDA Choice	2.19 lb
Boneless Beef Chuck Steak	USDA Choice	1.89 lb
Shoulder London Broil	Beef Chuck USDA Choice	1.99 lb
Boneless Beef Blade Steak	Beef Chuck USDA Choice	2.29 lb
Porterhouse or T-Bone Steak	Beef Loin	2.99 lb
Cube Steak	USDA Choice 'Great Beef'	2.29 lb
Beef Chuck
Bone In Beef Loin Strip Steak	USDA Choice	3.79 lb
Beef Round Round Tip Steak	USDA Choice	2.49 lb

Countrystyle Pork Ribs 1.49 lb

Pork Chops	Asst'd ½ Center, ½ Blade, ½ Sirloin Chops	1.59 lb
Center Cut Pork Chops		1.89 lb
Pork Loin Roast	Rib Half, Sirloin Half	1.59 lb
Sirloin Pork Roast		1.69 lb
Boneless Strips of Beef	Whole or Half Untrimmed	2.99 lb
Boneless Beef Rib Eyes	Whole or Half Untrimmed	3.99 lb
Whole Untrimmed Beef Tenderloins	5-7 lbs	3.99 lb

Our circular is packed-full of specials...

Start planning your holiday celebration!

It's time to STOP & SHOP

corner deli Available in stores featuring a service deli

Stop & Shop Turkey Breast Save Over 150 lb. Sliced to your order 3.99 lb

Imported Danish Ham Sliced to your order 3.59 lb

Perdue Chicken "Oven Stuffer" Roaster 5-7 lbs 69¢ lb

"White Gem" Roasting Chicken 5-7 lbs 69¢ lb

Fresh Swordfish Steak Special treat 4.99 lb

Fresh Pollock Fillets 1.79 lb

Oscar Mayer Bacon Sliced 1 lb package 1.99

Hillshire Farms Kielbasi Polska 1.99 lb

Thomas' English Muffins pkg of 12, 24 oz pkg 1.89

Colgate Toothpaste Regular 7 oz or Gel 6.4 oz tube 1.29

Jennie-O Turkeys & other brands 10-13 lbs, 18-22 lbs Frozen U.S. Grade A lb 49¢

Chicken Breast Split With Back White Grade A 5.69 pkg lb 99¢

Fresh U.S. Grade A Turkeys 10-13 lbs, 18-22 lbs lb 59¢

Perdue Cornish Hens Fresh Twin Pack lb 1.19

Swift Butterball Turkeys 10-13 lbs, 18-22 lbs Frozen lb 79¢

Rath Sausage Meat 1 lb roll Frozen 79¢

produce Fresh Ways To Save Money At Stop & Shop!

Oranges Calif. Navel Extra Large Size 72 6 for $1

Grapefruit Red or White Indian River Size 23 3 for $1

Grapes Red Emperor Pick Your Own 59¢ lb

Mushroom Farm "Grow in your own box" 5.99 ea

Our Holiday Fruit Tray Specials!

"Traditional" Tray	17 pcs of large fruit & grapes	8.00
"Get Crackin" Tray	3 lbs mixed nuts w/bow	5.00
"Sweet Sensation"	21-oz ready starter mints & carmel w/bow	4.00
"The Celebrator Tray"	21 pieces of fruit plus figs or cheese	12.00
"The Harvester Tray"	11 pieces of fruit, plus grapes, plus figs or cheese	10.00
"Fiesta Bowl"	23 pieces of fruit plus 1½ lbs grapes	12.00
"The Royal Assortment Tray"	18 pieces of fruit, grapes & sliced fruit	12.00
"The Super Bowl Tray"	17 pieces of fruit plus grapes plus juicy	12.00

Cranberry Juice Cocktail Stop & Shop 48 ounce bottle 1.29

Cut or French Style Green Beans Stop & Shop 15½ oz can 3 for $1

Early California Olives Small Black Pitted 6 ounce can 99¢

Sweet Mixed Pickles Vlasic 32 ounce jar 1.29

Vanity Fair Towels 2 Ply Print roll 100 sheet roll 2 for $1

Bumble Bee Tuna Solid White in oil or water 7 ounce can 1.19

Pillsbury Plus Cake Mix Assorted Varieties 18½ ounce package 69¢

Egg Nog Half Gallon Stop & Shop. Our best quality, fresh & rich-tasting. Carton 1.89

Poly Bag Vegetables Stop & Shop Frozen 20 ounce bag 79¢
Corn, Peas, Mixed Veg., French or Cut Green Beans

Stop & Shop Grocery Coupon C5 — Save 50¢ Stop & Shop or On any 3 pkgs. Durkee Spices or Extract — With this coupon. Good Sun. Dec. 12 Sat. Dec. 18. Limit three per customer. 134

Stop & Shop Grocery Coupon C11 — Save 50¢ 12 ounce can Medaglia D'Oro Coffee — With this coupon. Good Sun. Dec. 12 Sat. Dec. 18. Limit one per customer. 170

Stop & Shop Dairy Coupon C16 — Stop & Shop Dozen Large White Eggs Grade A 49¢ — With this coupon & a $7.50 purchase. Good Sun. Dec. 12 Sat. Dec. 18. Limit one per customer. 433

Stop & Shop Grocery Coupon C15 — Nabisco Ritz Crackers 12 ounce package 89¢ — With this coupon & a $7.50 purchase. Good Sun. Dec. 12 Sat. Dec. 18. Limit one per customer. 172

Stop & Shop Grocery Coupon C14 — 2 Liter bottle Coke, Diet Coke or Tab Soda Plus Conn. deposit 89¢ — With this coupon & a $7.50 purchase. Good Sun. Dec. 12 Sat. Dec. 18. Limit one per customer. 171

Prices effective Sun. Dec. 12 Sat. Dec. 18 1982. We reserve the right to limit sales to limit packages of any items offered for sale. Not available in case lots or to other dealers or wholesalers. Copyright 1982 by Stop & Shop Supermarkets. Not responsible for typographical errors.

Arts

Leslie Stainton and Mark Cohen in A Day in the Death of Joe Egg.

Egg at the Curtain

By CHRISTOPHER ANDERSON
Collegian Correspondent

Peter Nichol's play, A Day in the Death of Joe Egg, was very touching. The play deals with the bringing up of a severely handicapped child and how it affects her parents.

Mark Cohen did a superb job as Joe's father Bri, a man who feels a need for attention so he resorts to jokes and pranks. His wife Sheila, played by Leslie Stainton, is so wrapped up in her daughter and her work in a theatre that she does pay very little attention to her husband unless he is playing games, which only prove to annoy her. Grace, played by Dee Waterman, is the stereotypical mother-in-law who is tired of sitting around like "Joe Egg." Christopher Benoit plays Freddie, the suspected lover of Sheila, which turns out to be another way for Bri to grab attention. Pam, played by Becket Royce, is his loving wife who is repulsed by anything helpless and ugly, in particular Joe. Anna Magee does a fantastic job as the vegetable Joe.

I was impressed with the overall performance. The show moved smoothly and keeps the audience interested. The tension was relieved by the antics of Bri but not so much that it took away from the subject. Upon leaving the theatre you are forced to deal with your feelings about Joe and how you would react in the situaiton. It's a tough decision.

Sister is obnoxious

TWISTED SISTER
December 4
Agora Ballroom, West Hartford

By YANETT PENA
Collegian Correspondent

Twisted Sister is a band that's been around for a couple of years. Originally from Long Island, the group has extensively played the New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut club circuits. During the past year their name has become a bit more widespread; they've toured in England with Diamond Head and have recently released their first album, Under the Blade, as an English import.

I had the chance to catch their show last Saturday night, and although I knew them as a loud, snotty bunch, their vulgarly obnoxious attitude almost ruined the band's performance.

Twisted Sister thundered on stage (an hour and a half late with the opening cut on the new album, "What You Don't Know." Later followed some heavy metal renditions of such oldies as "Leader of the Pack" and "Let the Good Times Roll." The band's playing was tight and professional, proving that good hard rock'n'roll is alive and well. Dressed in wild fringed costumes and tacky women's make-up, they were quite a spectacle.

Dee Snider, the growling lead vocalist, came out in hot pink clothing and resembled a contrasting mixture between Bette Midler and David Lee Roth. He was one of the most energetic performers I've seen in a while, jumping and dancing all over the stage and shaking his long tight blonde curls.

After a couple more of their original tunes, the band went into the dreaded "rap" or "b.s." session, whichever you prefer. What began as an abusive yet humorous verbal "mingling" with the audience, became dragged-out monologues by lead guitarist Jay Jay French and Snider. The cursing and lewd language lost their shocking effect and became predictably boring.

Following a brief intermission, Twisted Sister found themselves playing to only half of their original audience; it seems they turned off quite a few people. However, the band still cranked out powerful material including "Run For Your Life," "Destroyer," and the evening's final song, "Under the Blade."

As evident with Saturday's performance, Twisted Sister is on the way to establishing themselves as a good hard rocking band. But let me offer a piece of constructive advice: although interactions between a group and its audience is crucial (whether crude or not), overindulging in obnoxious behavior tends to make one lose his or her credibility. Next time shorten the "rap session" and play more music.

Diana Ross' new album has just been released.

Diana Ross wants "Muscle"

SILK ELECTRIC
Diana Ross
1982 RCA Records

By RAY BEAUCHEMIN
Collegian Staff

It's soft at times. Soft as the silk sheets of your lover's bed. And at other times it's dynamic — shocking perhaps — like the slight almost pleasant electric tingle you might get touching metal after walking on a carpet.

It's Motown at times — reminiscent of the heyday of Marvin Gaye, the Supremes and the Four Tops. And it's the eighties — ONJ's "Let's Get Physical," but one step further — and many steps better.

It's Diana Ross and it's Silk Electric, her latest endeavor. And quite an achievement: the album's first single, "Muscle," written and produced by another Motown alumnus, Michael Jackson, is fast on its way to topping pop and black singles charts across the country, after only a few weeks out in radioland.

But successful commercially or not, this is a super collection of songs: sexy ("So Close" and "In Your Arms"), electric ("Fool For Your Love"), slow ("Still in Love"), fast ("Who" and "Muscles") and always, always, uniquely Diana Ross, as she sings in "I Am Me":

I am me
Good or bad;
I am myself
No carbon copy of someone else...
Right or wrong
I will stand up
Like a tree.
Happy or sad
Good or bad,
I am me."

Jackie Gleason and Richard Pryor star in the just released film, The Toy.

Old material brought to life on new Led Zeppelin album

CODA (SWAN SONG)
LED ZEPPELIN
By PETER BENTTINEN
Collegian Staff

The dictionary definition of coda is: a concluding musical section that is formally distinct from the main structure. This album is made up of old material, but the songs here are still better than a lot of stuff that can be bought with today's entertainment dollar. Recorded between June 1969 and November 1978, these songs include the deceased drummer, John (Bonzo) Bonham.

The songs on side one are all from the early years, between 1969 and 1972. The first is a remake of "We're Gonna Groove" by Ben E. King and James Bethea. Robert Plant's voice is a little hollow here, but the voice that mesmerized our adolescent years still sounds the same. The mix of the vocals are not outstanding though.

Another remake of "I Can't Quit You Baby" by Willie Dixon follows. Recorded during a sound rehearsal at the Royal Albert Hall in London in 1970, this tune has a bit of empty feeling, but does o.k. with the haunting blues line of the song played by Page.

"Walter's Walk", the last tune on side one pops along with Jimmy and John up front. John's drumming really makes it move. The sound is a bit empty, as if it were not suited for an album, but it sounds like they had a good time. All considered, this side has rehashes of the older stuff that have only become album material since the break up of the group.

Side two has more recent songs, three from 1978 and "Bonzo's Montreux," probably the last solo we'll ever get to hear from him.

"Ozone Baby" begins side two. It reminds me of something from the Houses of the Holy album. The heavy bass lines on this song, makes it the best on the album. The second tune, "Darlene," could have been on any of the records they have made in the [illegible] Plant is talking to a girl, and asking her what he can do. It is the vocal feeling that sets this song apart. "Bonzo's Montreux", his last solo, also has interesting embellishments by Jimmy Page. The last song here, "Wearing and Tearing," gets off to a quick pace. It has lots of guitar at the start, though the licks are repetitive. They probably got a lot of songs on the other albums from jamming on tunes like these.

Arts

Read the other voice today

Fogelberg worth the wait

DAN FOGELBERG
Wednesday, December 1
Hartford Civic Center

By TRICIA YACOVONE
Collegian Correspondent

Dan Fogelberg, in performance at the Hartford Civic Center, shared a large part of himself with the audience. I walked away feeling as though I had made a friend. The best part of the concert was the man himself. Fogelberg was not afraid to show the human qualities that repeatedly emerge in his music. He resisted putting himself on a level higher than his audience and just sat and talked to us, explaining his songs. I felt he was a close friend because of the secrets he shared with all of us through his music.

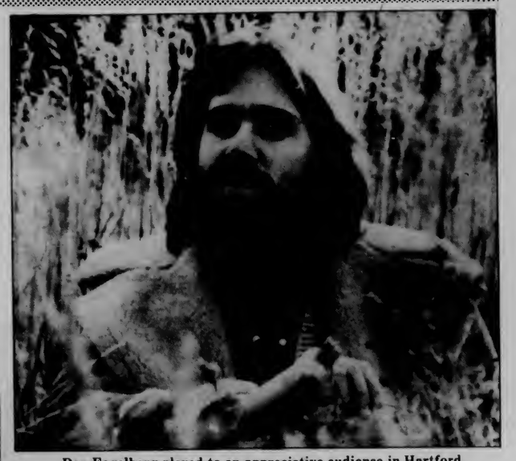
After a nervous start, he loosened up and realized that the audience really wanted to be there.

He gave a concert with just his own acoustic guitar and piano because, as he explained, he wanted us "to hear what his songs sounded like when they were originally written, before the rock 'n' roll band and twenty million vocals were added."

His soft music was accompanied by soft lighting of blues, reds and whites, and the laid back clothing of jeans, boots, suspenders and a tweed jacket, similar to those he wore on the cover of his Greatest Hits album.

He played old songs and new, treating us to two new songs, including "Windows and Walls", which he wishes to entitle his next album.

After a truly personal concert, he gave two encores, one of which, "The Gambler", he asked the audience to sing with him. It was an emotional high to sing with the man so highly respected by so large a variety of fans. A fantastic end to a fantastic evening, especially for those of us who have waited so long to see him.



Dan Fogelberg played to an appreciative audience in Hartford.

Arlo Guthrie will perform with Shenandoah Friday night at the Calvin Theatre in Northampton.

Tex an unexpected delight

TEX
Directed by Tim Hunter
Hampshire 4 Cinemas

By SAADYAH HOPKINS
Collegian Correspondent

One new film to open out at the mall is Tex. Based on the novel by S.E. Hinton, who has written such classics as "The Outsiders" and "Rumble Fish," it stars Matt Dillon and Jim Metzler as brothers.

It is not often enough that one will get to see a film of such quality as Tex, not these days anyhow. Hollywood is too busy producing such adolescent profanity as Porky's, and Fast Times at Ridgemont High. Walt Disney studios have been trying to produce "PG" rated films with more of a theme to them (Watcher in the Woods, The Black Hole), and they have often failed. So when I say that Tex is an enjoyable cinematic experience, I say it with emphasis.

One of the better things about Tex is the acting. Jim Metzler, a new talent, portrays Mason McKormic, Tex's guardian and supporter. Their mother has passed away, and the father of the boys has abandoned them to find rodeo fame. Metzler is excellent in his ability to show the frustration of his responsibility; to play the role of father at the age of nineteen.

Glory also shines for Matt Dillon. Dillon is simply outstanding as the 15 year old trying to understand reality: the selling of his horse for survival money, the experience of a first kiss, and the absence of his father at rough times. Tex is also the class prankster who uses his good-looks to act cool and big, attracting attention whenever possible. This is also better than the "R" rated garbage scripts that Dillon has had to work with previously (Little Darlings).

In addition to the excellent performances by Dillon and Metzler, the supporting cast is good as well. We get interesting performances from Emilo, Estevez and Meg Tilly, who play the brothers' friends.

The film is far from perfect, however. First-time director Tim Hunter strains the story a bit. He drags his superb screenplay with "Jet Lag" directing. In addition, some of the scenes are too short; you wish they would explain themselves more fully, but Hunter does not allow them to.

But Tex is a fresh film that took me by surprise. Its characters are superbly drawn, and for films about adolescence, not seeing sexism and exploitation is worth the $3.00 alone. But Tex will probably have a hard time finding its audience. So give it some support, you won't be disappointed.

The Roches keep on singing

By PETER BENTTINEN
Collegian Staff

I was totally unfamiliar with the Roches and their form of music before this album. I was pleasantly surprised.

The album has an airy, live feel. The production is excellent. The album was produced by Robert Fripp, of King Crimson fame, and was recorded in June of 1982 at Blue Rock Studios in New York. I find that hard to believe as the album sounds like it was recorded in a nice, homey atmosphere. Fripp also plays on the album, as does Bill Bruford, formerly of the group Yes.

"The Hallelujah Chorus" is the first song on the album, and sounds just as one would expect it to. It is all vocal, and is a three part harmony almost throughout. "Losing True" is the next installment and keeps the pace of the record true. The trio sing in perfect flow as an acoustic guitar plays accompaniment. Near the end of the song Fripp brings his influence into the spotlight with some interesting Frippertronics, his own particular style. "She goes steady with the Maestro, and she raises his baton," starts the next one. You can make your own judgements from there on what they're talking about. The song is different, I'll give them that.

The last tune is a slow one about the first love of an outlaw. If their humor is understood, it is a diverse tale of a poor outlaw. A lady changed him to live freely, but the sheriff and his deputies found him and hung him from the tree where they first made love.

The second side starts out with a tune about falling in love. The words are a little, no, a lot different from the basic top 40 tunes. She talks about an animal, but she fell in love with him when she caught him at his mother's house with his defenses down. "Want Not Want Not" is a very happy, but unorthodox song. It changes pace quite often, the sound fires between speakers often and is more than a little sarcastic. I'll bet Fripp had fun with this one. On "Sex is for Children" the words are a little hard to make out but the musical playing is fine and the music is most of the song. Last statement of The Roches is two songs strung together, "Keep on Doing What You Do/Jerks on the Loose." The pace of the recording drops on these two tunes. Fripp gets too heavy with his electronic gizmos here. But that is no reason to put down this fine album. It sure is a little flighty.

The Roches' new album has also just been released.

Cash for Books

CLOTH OR PAPER — WHETHER USED ON THIS CAMPUS OR NOT.
WE BUY ALL TITLES HAVING RESALE MARKET VALUE!

SELL THEM AT:

TEXTBOOK ANNEX

WEDNESDAY THRU SATURDAY

DECEMBER 15 THRU 18

MONDAY THRU THURSDAY

DECEMBER 20 THRU 23

9:00 AM - 4:00 PM

I D REQUIRED

Hypercurricula...

"Hypercurricula," a listing of events held at the University of Massachusetts and surrounding area, is published daily in the Collegian. Events are listed only on the day they are taking place. Announcements must be submitted on "Hypercurricula" forms available in the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center, and returned to the office by 3 p.m. the Friday before the event. All submissions should be written in a similar style as they appear in the paper.

"Hypercurricula" notices not submitted on the standard form and not submitted by the Friday before the week the event will take place will not be run. Due to space limitations, the Collegian cannot guarantee printing of all "Hypercurricula" notices. Priority will be given to UMass organizations.

AL-ANON — Having a problem with someone else's drinking? Come to a meeting, 8 to 9:30 p.m. Check Campus Center schedule for room number.

GRADUATE STUDENT SENATE — Meeting. 7:15 p.m., 917 Campus Center.

NOTEBOOK DAY — Recycle your notebook. Make a statement to your professor and show concern for the environment. Forty notebooks equals one tree. 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Student Union Lobby.

ECUM MEETING — The Ecunemical Council of UMass meets at 1:30 p.m. in the Dukes Room, Student Union.

CAREERS IN FILM — Topics include film exhibition programs and opportunities in major motion pictures, television, and cable. Workshop is sponsored by the Arts Extension Service of the Division of Continuing Education with the support of the University Arts Council. To register, call AES at 545-2360. 7 p.m., 231 Herter Hall.

FREE CONCERT: JAZZ ENSEMBLE — Directed by Horace Clarence Boyer, the 22-member ensemble will perform a lively program of jazz and blues, including such favorites as Fats Wallers' "Ain't Misbehavin'" and Hoagy Carmichael's "Stardust." 8 p.m., Bezanson Recital Hall.

COMSTU CLUB — Communications Studies Club Meeting. Prof. Ted Bolton will be featured. 7:30 p.m., Memorial Hall.

Teaching Assistantship
for Community Health Seminar
20 hrs/week - start Spring Sem.

Apply by resume or letter to:
Ann Grose, RNP, Med,
University Health Services, UMass Background in health and group dynamics preferred
549-2671 x181
Interviews end of Jan. '83

PAD'S N' THINGS
DEC. - JAN.
SPECIALS
25% OFF LIST
ALL DRAWING
PADS
134 High St.
Holyoke, Mass.

1983 PENTASTAR ✪ CHALLENGE

O.K. SMARTY PANTS. YOU GOT ONE.

A chance for you to win a scholarship, Dodge Charger and more.

If you thought The New Chrysler Corporation was something different from other car makers, you're right. We've developed the "Pentastar Challenge" as a small, but deserving tribute to American ingenuity and intelligence.

The Riddles. The challenges in the calendar are intellectual ones. Within the story and illustrations, we've woven an intricate pattern of clues in different areas of academics. Math, Computer Science, Chemistry, Literature and recently a pair of smarty pants solved our fifth category, Music.

The Right Response. Darryl Koch of the University of Michigan and Kevin Williams from Notre Dame correctly deciphered the clues in the calendar and sent the Diatonic (C Major) music scale on a piece of white paper with the entry postmarked on a full moon. They will share the cash rewards, and each get the use of a new Chrysler product because their answers were simultaneously received.

The Reward. If you are the first to have solved any one of the four remaining riddles, you'll be awarded a $5,000 scholarship, a $5,000 cash grant to your school, your choice of a 1983 Turismo or Charger to drive for a year and a gold Pentastar Medallion. There are also 100 second place prizes of silver medallions. The official rules are on the back of the calendar.

The Reason. We think you'll enjoy the Pentastar Challenge Calendar because it's functional, attractive and entertaining. You might ask "Is Chrysler getting out of the car business and into the calendar business?" No. But at $4.98 maybe you'll be impressed with Chrysler enough to someday look at our cars. For us, that's the challenge.

The 1983 Pentastar Challenge Calendar is on sale now at your college book store. Or send $4.98 plus $1.52 postage and handling ($6.50 per copy) in check or money order to: Pentastar Challenge, 322 S. Main St., Royal Oak, MI 48067. Allow 3-5 weeks for delivery.

✪THE NEW CHRYSLER CORPORATION

Birthright of Amherst Area
549-1906
for Pregnancy Help
Free, Confidential Services
Same-Day Test Results
Amherst Carriage Shops - upper level

Attention! Attention! Attention!
Health Watch is coming!
Do you know. . . . .
- The FACTS about herpes
- How men can prevent unintended pregnancies
- That aspirin is a drug
- How to take care of a cold or the flu
- About the hard & soft facts about contacts

This and more information can be found in the next issue of Health Watch.
Look for us because we're looking out for you!

DELANO'S
presents
HEINEKEN NIGHT
Distributor Representatives will be here to give away Mirrors, Plaques, Illuminated Signs, etc
2 for 1 Heinekens
DON'T MISS IT
Tonight 9 - midnight
Proper ID a MUST
57 N. Pleasant St.
253-5141

AN IMPORTANT ADDITION TO YOUR UNIFORM

